To constitute a partition, there need not be an actual partition by metes and bounds. An agreement to divide is sufficient to constitute partition. Two brothers drew up a memorandum of partition, whereby they agreed to divide the family property in equal shares, and provided that, if at any future time their sons did not agree and there were any partition, they should exercise ownership in accordance with this document; neither was to take more than was mentioned in the document. Held that this agreement constituted a partition between the brothers, and was binding on their descendants. In 1876 the plaintiffs, alleging a partition of the family estate in 1864, sued their uncle (father of the present defendants) to recover their share of the rent of a certain piece of land which had formed part of the family estate. The plaintiffs relied in that suit upon a memorandum or agreement of partition executed in 1864. The defendant in that suit, however, contended that the family was still joint, and that the plaintiff could not claim a share of any particular piece of land, but must sue for partition of the whole property. At the hearing of that suit an issue was raised as to whether partition had taken place. The Court found in the affirmative, and awarded the plaintiff's claim. In the present suit the plaintiff sued the defendants (the sons of the defendant in the former suit) to recover possession of certain property which they alleged formed part of the share awarded to them at the partition of 1864, but of which they had been dispossessed by the defendants in 1873. The defendants denied that there had been any partition of the family property. Held that the question of partition was res judicata, and could not be raised again by the defendants. The question had been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit. No doubt the dispute in that suit was as to a different piece of land, but there was no allegation that that land was held, on any different tenure to the land now in suit. The plaintiffs there, as now, alleged that there had been a partition, and that they had a separate share. The defendants there contended, as the defendants now contended, that there was no partition, and that the family estate was joint. The decree in that suit depended on that issue, and where the decree depends on an issue the finding in that issue, is binding as res judicata. The status of the family having been thus tried and determined in the former suit was binding on the parties in subsequent suits.—13 Bom. 25.

By a mortgage-deed, dated the 24th January 1873, Sakharam and Vishnu, two of three brothers constituting an undivided family, jointly mortgaged to the plaintiff Balaji a part of the family property. On the 28th July 1873, Sakharam alone further mortgaged to the plaintiff for a fresh advance a portion of the property already mortgaged. Subsequently the three brothers effected a partition among themselves of all the undivided property, and the property jointly mortgaged by Sakharam and Vishnu fell, along with other property, to the share of Vishnu and the third brother Narayan. In 1881, the plaintiff Balaji sued Sakharam on the second of the above mortgage, viz, that of the 28th July 1878. He obtained a decree, and at a sale held in execution of that decree himself purchased the property comprised in that mortgage. In the meantime, on the 27th January 1882, and on the 6th December 1883, Vishnu and Narayan respectively mortgaged with possession to the defendant Moro, portions of the land comprised in the first mortgage of the 24th January 1878. In 1883, the plaintiff filed the present suit upon his first mortgage of 24th January 1878, claiming to recover Rs. 316-14-0 from Sakharam and Vishnu personally. He also prayed that the defendant Moro, who had been in possession of the property in dispute, should be prevented from obstructing him in selling the property. Sakharam and Vishnu did not appear. The third defendant Moro alone appeared, and contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff, having sued upon his second mortgage without including the earlier one, was now barred from suing on the latter by secs. 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). He also contended that the plaintiff, having purchased part of the lands comprised in the mortgage, now sued upon in execution of the decree obtained by him upon his second mortgage, could not now seek to burden the remaining lands included in the mortgage with the whole of the mortgage-debt, but that a proportionate part of that debt must be satisfied. Held (1) that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by his previous suit on the second mortgage under the provisions of secs. 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held (2) that the plaintiff could not recover the first mortgage-debt from the remaining lands without deducting a proportionate part of that debt. A mortgagee will not be allowed without special reason deliberately to execute his decree exclusively against one of the owners of the equity of redemption for the whole debt.—13 Bom. 45.

The words in sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), “a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit,” mean a Court having concurrent jurisdiction with the Court trying the subsequent suit, whether as regards the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction or the subject matter of the suit, to try it with conclusive effect. Reading expl. vi. with the earlier part of sec. 13, the term “Court of competent jurisdiction” includes a foreign competent Court. The plaintiff sued as the adopted son of C to recover certain property in British territory. The defendants disputed plaintiff's adoption. The plaintiff relied on a decree of a Native Court which he had obtained against defendant No. 2 in a suit for possession of certain other property belonging to C and situate within the territorial jurisdiction of the Native Court. In that suit the question of plaintiff's adoption had been raised and decided in plaintiff's favour. In the present suit both the lower Courts, without attaching any weight to this decree of the Native Court, held that the plaintiff's adoption was not proved, and dismissed the suit. Held, on second appeal, that the question of plaintiff's adoption was res judicata as between him and defendant No. 2, the judgment of the Native Court being one on the merits, and conclusive between the parties within the territory of the Native State.—13 Bom. 224.

In suit by A, the inamdar, against B, the khot of a certain village, it was decided that A was the proprietor of the forest or waste lands attached to the village. Held, that this decision did not operate as res judicata between A and B so as to estop B in a subsequent suit from setting up a proprietary title, as against A, to the cultivated lands in the village.—11 Bom. 355.

A decree cannot be extended in execution beyond the real meaning of its terms. A decree obtained on a mortgage directed that the judgment debtor should pay the sum adjudged out of the property mortgaged. After executing the decree against the mortgaged property, the decree-holder made an application for execution against the person of the judgment-debtor. A notice was issued calling upon him to show cause why execution should not be further proceeded with. But the notice did not give him any intimation of the application for the arrest of his person. He did not appear, and, in his absence, an order was made for his personal arrest; but the order was not executed, as the decree-holder did not pay the process fee. Subsequently a fresh application was made for execution against the person of the judgment-debtor. Held, that as the decree merely provided for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt out of the property mortgaged, the decree could not be executed against the person of the judgment debtor. Held, also, that the question as to the personal liability of the judgment debtor to satisfy the decree was not concluded by the order made in the previous execution-proceedings for execution to issue against his person. The order would have operated as a res judicata if the judgment-debtor had been called upon to contest the right claimed by the decree-holder to hold him personally liable under the decree, and had then failed in his contention to the contrary, or allowed the judgment to go by default. The order was res judicata as to the legal possibility of further execution in terms of the decree, but not as to the special construction which the judgment-creditor sought to impose on it.—11 Bom. 537.

Upon the death of R. a Hindu, who was separate from his brother S, his widow G became life-tenant of his estate, and his daughter B became entitled to succeed after G's death. In 1832, a suit was brought by S and G against V to recover the value of a branch of a mango tree wrongfully taken by the defendant, and for maintenance of possession over the grove in which the tree was situate. The suit was dismissed, and it was decided that R was not the owner of the grove, nor was G the owner. In 1885, B brought a suit against G, S, V, and A, to whom V had sold some of the trees, claiming a declaration of her right and possession of the grove, upon the allegation that the proceedings of 1832 were carried on in collusion between S and G on the one hand and V on the other, for the purpose of improperly preventing her from asserting her rights. Held that, if the suit of 1832 was a genuine suit, and was properly contested by the then plaintiffs, though S might have been improperly joined as plaintiff, any decision then passed against G would be binding upon the present plaintiff, and estop her again litigating questions which were then decided. Held, also, that if the plaintiff's specific allegation of fraud and collusion in the proceedings of 1832 were established, and even if the decree of 1832 did dispose of the question now sought to be re-opened, the decision in that suit would not be binding on the plaintiff under the circumstances. Katama Natchiar's case (9 Moore's L. A. 539), Adi Deo Narain Singh v. Dukharan Singh (I. L. R., 5 Al. 532), and Sant Kumar v. Deo Saran (I. L. R., 8 Al. 365), referred to.—8 Al. 429.

The plaintiff sued the father and brother of defendant for trespass to a wall. His right to the wall was denied, but he obtained a decree. On executing the decree he was resisted by the defendant, who claimed the wall as his ancestral property, and alleged that he was no party to the suit in which decree has been obtained against his father and brother. His claim was registered as a suit under sec. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Plaintiff contended that defendant was concluded by the decree obtained against his father and brother. Held that a Hindu son in a joint family becomes entitled by reason of his birth and in his own right, a right which he can enforce against his father; he does not claim under his father within the meaning of sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the defendants in the former suit did not claim any right in common for themselves and others within the meaning of expl. v. of sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The case of Narayan Gop Habbu v. Pandurang Ganu (I. L. R., 5 Bom. 685) distinguished.—10 Al. 411.

Prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government, plaintiff had instituted a suit in the Subah's Court in the Gwalior State on a judgment of the British Court in Jhansi district. After the cession, the suit was made over for trial to the Court of the Assistant Commissioner of the Jhansi district. The suit was dismissed by the first Court as barred by sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but remanded by the lower Appellate Court for trial on the merits. Held that the recital in Part II of Act XXVII 1886 shows that it was intended that suit pending in the Courts of the Gwalior State prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government should be continued in the Courts of the Jhansi district after the cession thereof; therefore the present suit, which, if it had been originally instituted in a Court of British India, could not have been maintained, being an action on a judgment of a Court of British India, was a good and maintainable action in the Court where it was instituted, and is to be deemed to be a properly instituted suit, to which in other respects the law of the Courts of British India may now be applied. King v. Hoare (13 M. & W. 504; S. C. 14 L. J. Ex. 29) referred to as illustrating the distinction between an original cause of action founded upon a judgment recovered on the original cause of action.—10 Al. 517.

A suit for possession of immoveable property was wholly dismissed, on the ground that the plaintiff had not made out his title to the whole of the property claimed, though he had proved title to a one third share of such property. The decree included an order in these terms: "This order will not prevent the plaintiff from instituting a suit for possession of the one-third interest of Musammatt Lachimnia in the fields specified in the deed of sale," upon which the suit was based. No appeal was preferred from this decree. Subsequently the plaintiff brought another suit upon the same title to recover possession of the one-third share referred to in the order just quoted. Held by the Full Bench that the Court in the former suit had no power to include in its decree of dismissal any such reservation or order; that the fact that the decree was not appealed against did not give the order contained in it, which was an absolute nullity, any effect; that, as in the former suit the plaintiff could have obtained a decree for the one-third share now claimed, and the whole of the claim in that suit was dismissed, the decree in that suit was a decision within sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; and the present suit was consequently barred as res judicata. Kudrat v. Dinu (I. L. R., 9 Al. 155), Ganesh Rai v. Kalka Prasad (I. L. R., 5 Al. 595), Salig Ram Pathak v. Tribhawan Pathak (Weekly Notes, 1855, p. 171), and Muhammad Salim v. Nabian Bibi (I. L. R., 8 Al. 282), explained.—11 Al. 187.

The dismissal of a suit to have set aside an order made in one district, for the sale of the plaintiff's interest in property therein, is not a bar under secs. 13 and 43, Civil Procedure, to another suit to obtain relief against an order in another district for the sale of property therein belonging to the same plaintiff, or of other property not included in the order or sale against which the dismissed suit was directed. An operative decree, obtained after the death of a defendant, ascertaining for the first time, the extent and quality of his liability, the latter having been already declared in general terms in a prior decree, cannot bind the representatives of the deceased, unless they were made parties to the suit in which such ascertainment was pronounced.—13 Al. 53.

Where a decree declaring a right to partition has not been given effect to by the parties proceeding to partition in accordance with it, and the decree has become, by lapse of time or otherwise, unenforceable, it is competent to the parties, or any of them, if they still continue to be interested in the joint property, to bring a fresh suit for a declaration of their right for partition. Such a suit will not be barred by reason of the former decree for partition, through that decree may operate as res judicata in respect of any claim or defence which was, or might have been raised in the suit in which it was passed. If a Revenue Court in disposing of an application for partition determines a question of title, it must, in so doing, act in conformity with the provisions of sec. 113 of Act XIX of 1873. If it disposes of the application otherwise than in the manner contemplated by sec. 113, its proceedings are ultra vires and will not debar the parties from suing in a Civil Court for a declaration of their right to partition.—13 Al. 309.

For the purposes of the rule of res judicata it is not essential that the subject-matters of the present and the former litigations should be identical. Where a recurring liability is the subject of claim, a previous judgment dismissing a suit between the same parties upon findings which do not go to the root of the title on which the claim rests, but relate merely to a particular item or instalment, cannot operate as res judicata. But if such previous judgment negatives the title and main obligation itself, the plaintiff cannot re-agitate the same question of title by claiming a subsequent item or instalment. The Rajah of Pittapur v. Sri Rajah Rau Buchi Sittaya Garu, (L. R., 12 I. A. 16) referred to. A judgment liable to appeal or under appeal is only a provisional and not a definitive or final adjudication, and cannot operate as res judicata during the interval preceding the appeal or the interval preceding the decision of the appeal. Expl. IV of sec. 13 of the Civil procedure Code commented on. Sri Raja Kakarlapudi Suriyanarayanarazu v. Chellamkuri Chellamma (5 M. H. C. R., 176) and Nilvaru v. Nilvaru (I. L. R., 6 Bom. 110) referred to. The rule of res judicata contained in sec. 13 of the Code applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous proceedings as to original suits. Having regard to its main object, so far as it relates to the re-trial of an issue, it refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the date when the Judge is called upon to decide the issue. Where, after the commencement of the trial of an issue, a final judgment upon the same issue in another case is pronounced by a competent Court (the identity of parties and other conditions of sec. 13 being fulfilled), such judgment operates as res judicata upon the decision, original or appellate, of the issue in the later litigation. On the 17th August 1885, a suit was instituted for recovery of an annual malikana allowance for the years 1290, 1291, and 1292 fasli. On the 5th October 1885, the Munsif dismissed the suit. On the 10th March 1886, the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's decree and decreed the suit. On the 21st June 1886, the defendant appealed to the High Court, which, on the 4th July 1887, reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree, and restored that of the Munsif, on the ground that the plaintiff had never received and was not entitled to malikana. Meanwhile, on the 8th June 1886, the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant for recovery of malikana for the year 1293 fasli, which accrued after the institution of the former suit. By judgments dated respectively the 21st August and 27th November 1886, the lower Courts decreed this suit, holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886, in the former suit, operated as res judicata, and was conclusive in favour of the plaintiff's title to the malikana. On the 17th May 1887, the defendant appealed to the High Court, and on the 16th May 1888, (the High Court having, in the interval, dismissed the former suit by its judgment of the 4th July 1887), the appeal came on for hearing. Held that the lower Courts were wrong in holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886, in the former suit, which, at the date of the institution of the present suit on the 8th June 1886, was liable to appeal, and, at the dates of the decisions of those Courts in August and November 1886, was the subject of a second appeal pending in the High Court, could operate as res judicata in favour of the plaintiff's title to malikana (ii). That the High Court's judgment dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887, though passed after the decisions of the lower Courts in the present suit and after the institution of the second appeal in the present suit, was nevertheless binding on the High Court in deciding such second appeal, and, being final, was conclusive as res judicata against the plaintiff's title to malikana. (iii.) That the effect of the High Court's judgment, dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887, was not affected by the circumstance that the second suit was brought for recovery of malikana for a different year, inasmuch as that judgment went to the root of the plaintiff's title to malikana, and its scope was not limited to the particular item then claimed.—11 Al. 148.

It is by the decree and not by the judgment that a question of res judicata must be decided. In 1881 A sued K and others claiming a declaration of his title to certain land and an injunction against interference with his possession. K claimed part of the land by purchase from M. The Munsif decreed for A and this decree was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge, but in his judgment the District Judge recorded that K's claim was not adjudicated upon and that he should bring a fresh suit if he had any claim. In 1883 K sued A to recover the land, which he claimed by purchase from M. A pleaded that the claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. The District Munsif, and on appeal, the District Judge held that the claim was not res judicata and decreed for K:—Held, on appeal to the High Court, that as no reservation was made in the decree of K's right to bring another suit, the plea of res judicata was good, but that, under the circumstances, an opportunity should be given to K to apply to the District Court to have the decree in the former suit brought into conformity with the judgment. This having been done, the decree of the lower Courts was confirmed.—8 Madr. 77.

A competent Court having decided upon an issue directly raised in a suit brought by a person alleging himself to have been adopted, that this adoption had not taken place, it was held that the present suit was barred under Act X of 1877, sec. 13, as res judicata, having been brought by the son of the defendant in the former suit, claiming through his father, to establish the same adoption; and that the section applied, although the suits related to different properties. The establishment of the adoption alleged in the first suit would have obliged the father of the present plaintiff to share with the adopted son his ancestral estate. That adoption having been negatived, the son, in this suit, ought to be estopped from making title on the ground that the adoption had placed the person, from whom he claimed to inherit, in the relation of father's brother to him.—8 Madr. 212.

The words “in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit,” refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time when the first suit was brought. Where therefore a suit was brought and decided in 1867 in the Court of a Deputy Collector, that Court being at the time of suit the only Court competent to try suits of the nature of the one brought, and subsequently a second suit, regarding the same subject and between some of the same parties and the representatives of others, was brought in 1881 in the Court of a Munsiff, which latter suit, if it had been brought in 1867, would have been cognizable by a Deputy Collector alone:—Held, that the decision of the Deputy Collector was a bar to the second suit under sec. 13. The principal in Gopinath Chobey v. Bhaghwat Pershad, I. L. R., 10 C., 697, approved. Rughunath Panjah v. Issur Chunder Chowdhry.—11 Cal. 153.

In a suit by a landlord against his tenant for ejectment, the defences were (1) no notice to quit had been served; and (2) the tenure was a permanent one. The suit was dismissed on the first ground, the Court holding at the same time that the tenure was not a permanent one. In a subsequent suit for ejectment from the same holding, brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, the defences were: (1) the tenure was permanent; and (2) the plaintiff was estopped by the conduct of his predecessor in title from asserting as against the defendant that the tenure was not a permanent one. The lower Appellate Court found the question of estoppel in favour of the defendant, and dismissed the suit. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the decision was right, and must be affirmed. Semble, that where a former suit between the same parties in respect of the same subject matter has been dismissed on a preliminary point, a finding in that suit on the merits in the plaintiff's favour will not bar the defendant from putting forward the same defence on the merits in a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant. Semble, that the case of Niamut Khan v. Phadu Buldia, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 319, has been impliedly overruled by the case of Run Bahadoor Singh v. Lucho Koer, L. R., 12 I. A., 23; I. L. R., 11 Cal. 301, Nundo Lall Bhattacharjee v. Bidhoo Mookhy Debee.—12 Cal. 17.

Where a decree, awarding to one of the parties money deposited in a Treasury by a third party, as the compensation for land taken by the latter for railway purposes, was based upon the right to the land, the question of title having been directly and substantially in issue between the parties:—Held that the contest of title was conclusive between them under sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—12 Cal. 484.

In a suit for arrears of rent and possession of certain property, a person intervened and was made defendant on his alleging that he was entitled to an eight annas share of the property in question, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any portion thereof. Issues were fixed on the questions of title, but the plaintiffs failed to adduce evidence and their suit was dismissed. They afterwards brought a suit for possession of the same property, on the same title, against the intervenor in the former suit:—Held, that the second suit was barred as res judicata.—12 Cal. 563.

In 1875, P sued in a Munsif's Court to eject a tenant from a house, and to recover arrears of rent. S intervened and claimed the house under a deed of gift. The value of the property comprised in the deed of gift exceeded the limit of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsif's Court. The suit was dismissed. But on appeal the claim of S under the deed of gift was adjudicated upon and rejected, and P obtained a decree for the land. In 1882, S sued P to recover all the property comprised in the deed of gift:—Held, that, S was estopped by the decree in the former suit from claiming the house. It was contended by P that the deed of gift was invalid:—Held, that as to validity of the deed of gift, the decree of the Munsif's Court was not the decree of a competent Court within the meaning of sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, and, therefore, that S was not estopped from showing that the deed was valid, and claiming the rest of the property comprised therein.—8 Madr. 83.

In 1877, S, claiming to be the adopted son of M, sued A, the widow of M, to recover his estate. A denied the adoption, S failing to adduce any evidence, the suit was dismissed under sec. 158. In 1882, by an agreement made between A and S, A acknowledged the title of S as adopted son of M. A having died, a suit was brought against S by a reversioner of M to recover the estate of M:—Held that S was estopped by the decree in the former suit from setting up his claim as adopted son against the plaintiff, and that the subsequent agreement between A and S did not affect plaintiff's right.—8 Madr. 348.

Plaintiff sued to recover certain land from the defendant on a demise of 1856, which he alleged was a renewal of a prior demise of 1835. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the demise of 1856 was not proved. Plaintiff then sued to recover the same land on the demise of 1835 and on title:—Held, that the decree in the former suit was no bar to this suit.—9 Madr. 251.

In 1879 the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants to recover Rs. 119 which he alleged had been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of certain land in his occupation. He claimed to be owner of the land subject to a quit-rent payable to the defendants. The defendants denied his ownership, and asserted their right to levy the enhanced rent. The lower Court held that the defendants were entitled to the enhanced rent, and dismissed the plaintiff's claim, and the decree was confirmed, in appeal, by the District Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, which held that the plaintiff's claim being for an amount less than Rs. 500 and within the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, no second appeal lay.

In 1883 the plaintiff brought the present suit in the District Court to recover from the defendants the sum of Rs. 689 alleged to have been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of the land in question. He made the same allegations as in the former suit. The District Judge dismissed the suit, holding it to be res judicata. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court:—Held, that, although the material question in both suits was the same, viz., as to the defendant's right to enhance the plaintiff's rent, yet the decision of the District Court upon that point in the previous suit was not res judicata so as to prevent the question being again raised between the parties. From the decision in the former suit there was no appeal by reason of the suit being one for an amount less than Rs. 500. Had that suit been for a larger amount, the decision of the District Court would have been subject to an appeal to the High Court. It could not have been intended by the Legislature that a decision should acquire a conclusive importance from the fact of its being made in a suit for a small amount which it could not have had if the amount was larger. The former decision could not be appealed against to the High Court, and thus, though the District Courts, which gave that decision, was in one sense "competent to try" the second suit, and did try it, yet it was not competent to try the second suit with final effect, as it had tried the earlier one. In sec. 13 the words "competent to try such subsequent suit or issue" must mean "competent to try the suit or issue with conclusive effect." The District Court could not, in the present suit, have tried with conclusive effect, and disposed of the issue tried in the first suit, and hence the prior decision was not res judicata.—9 Bom. 75.

Two-thirds of a village were sold by T, P, and B. B was the widow of S, her name being recorded in respect of the property formerly recorded in his name, and what she sold was his one-third share in the village, the other one-third being sold by T and P. The vendors having refused to give possession of the property, the purchasers sued them for possession of it and joined as defendants to the suit C, D, and M, to whom belonged the remaining one-third share in the village. These latter persons contended, inter alia, that the family was a joint one, and that B was not competent to alienate her deceased husband's share in the village. The Court decided that the family was joint. After B's death her daughter K, whose name had been recorded in place of her mother's, made a usufructuary mortgage of another village in which her deceased father had formerly owned a share. A suit was brought by certain persons who had purchased the right in the same village of the representatives in interest of C, D, and M, against K, her mortgagee, and their vendors, to set aside the mortgage and recover the interest which they had purchased. They contended that the family was joint, and that the question whether it was joint or divided was res judicata by reason of the decision in the former litigation:—Held that the question whether the family was joint or divided had not, in the former suit, been determined among the defendants, inter se, but simply as against the plaintiff, and could only be res judicata against him or parties claiming under the same title; and the decree in that suit was therefore not binding against K in the hands of the present plaintiffs, who were not the assignees of the plaintiff in the former suit, but of persons who were arrayed in it as defendants along with B, K's mother, and on the same side.

Shadal Khan v. Amin-ullah Khan referred to by STRAIGHT J., and distinguished by TYRELL, J. Narain Kuar v. Durgan Kuar referred to by STRAIGHT, J.—8 Al. 91.

S sued K for four bonds, alleging that the same had been satisfied. K had formerly sued S on two of these bonds. S had alleged in defence of that suit that those two bonds, as also the other two, had been satisfied. It was decided in that suit that not one of the bonds had been satisfied:—Held by PETHERAM, C. J., OLDFIELD, BRODHURST and DUTHOIT, JJ., that the only issue in the former suit which had to be decided being whether the bonds on which that suit was brought had been satisfied or not, the second suit was, under sec. 13 res judicata only in respect of those bonds, and not in respect of the other two bonds.

The Court which tried the former suit had no jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit.

Per Mahmood, J.—This being so, if the word "suit" in sec. 13 were taken literally, it might, with some plausibility, be contended that there was no res judicata in respect of any of the bonds. The word "suit," however, must be understood to mean such a matter as might have formed the subject of a separate suit independently of the special provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, such as sec. 45, which enables the plaintiff to unite several causes of action in one and the same suit.

Adopting this interpretation, it was clear that the two bonds which were the subject of the former suit could not be allowed to form the subject of litigation again.

As to the other two bonds, which were not the subject-matter of the former suit, they did not, in the former suit, constitute a "matter directly and substantially in issue," within the meaning of sec. 13; and even if they were "directly and substantially in issue," the decision in the former suit would not support the plea of res judicata, because the Court which tried that suit was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit in which the plea was raised.—7 Al. 247.

The purchaser of certain immoveable property in execution of a decree sued for possession of the same. The suit was dismissed upon two grounds, firstly, that the suit was under-valued and the plaintiff had failed to pay, within the time fixed, additional court-fees required by the Court, and secondly, for misjoinder. The purchaser subsequently brought a second suit:—Held that the dismissal of the former suit was not, under the circumstance a decision within the meaning of sec. 13 such as could bar the second suit by way of res judicata.

Also per Mahmood, J.—The condition in sec. 13, that the former suit must have been "heard and finally decided," means that a former judgment proceeding wholly on a technical defect or irregularity, and not upon the merits, is not a bar to a subsequent suit for the same cause of action. It is not every decree or judgment which will operate as res judicata, and every dismissal of a suit does not necessarily bar a fresh action. It is necessary also to show that there was a decision finally granting or withholding the relief sought. Ramnath Roy Chowdhary v. Bhagbut Mohaputter; Shokhee Bewah v. Mehdee Mundul; Dullabh Jogi v. Narayana Lakhu; Rungrav Ravji v. Sidhi Mahomed Ebrahim; Fatek Singh v. Lachmi Koer; Raghoonath Mundul v. Juggut Bunhoo Bose and Sikappa Chetti v. Rani Kulandapuri Nachiyar, referred to.—8 Al. 282.

Upon the death of G, a Muhammadan, his estate was divisible into eight shares, two of which devolved upon his son A, one upon each of his five daughters, and one upon his widow B. The name of B only was recorded in the revenue registers in respect of the zemindari property left by G. In 1876, A and B gave to X a deed of simple mortgage of $2\frac{1}{2}$ biswas out of a 5 biswas share of a village included in the said property. In 1878, A and B gave to S a deed of simple mortgage of the 5 biswas, which were described in the deed as the widow's "own" property. In 1882, X obtained a decree upon his mortgage for the sale of the mortgaged property, and it was put up for sale and purchased by X himself in January 1884. In February and November 1884, the daughters of G obtained ex parte decrees against A and B in suits brought by them to recover their shares by inheritance in the 5 biswas. In 1885, S brought a suit upon his mortgage of 1878, claiming the amount due thereon and the sale of the whole 5 biswas. To this suit he made defendants A and B, G's daughters, and X, alleging that the decrees of February and November, 1884, were fraudulently and collusively obtained; and as to the auction-sale of January, 1884, that the $2\frac{1}{2}$ biswas were sold subject to his mortgage, he not having been made a party to the suit brought by X upon the deed of 1876, and, therefore, not being bound by any of the proceedings taken therein or consequent thereto. It was contended that B's position as head of the family entitled her to deal with the property so as to bind all the members of the family, though using her name only, and it was suggested that, at the time of the mortgage of 1878, some of the daughters were minors. On behalf of the daughters it was contended (inter alia) that the decrees obtained by them against A and B in February, 1884, were conclusive, by way of res judicata, against the plaintiff, who, as mortgagee from A and B, claimed under a title derived from them:—Held, that there being no evidence to show that the decrees of February and November, 1884, were fraudulently and collusively obtained, the Court of first instance was right in exempting the shares of the daughters from the lien sought to be enforced by the plaintiff; and that, inasmuch as the deed of 1876 was prior in date to the plaintiff's deed of 1878, and there was no allegation of fraud or collusion in regard to it, the decree and sale in enforcement of the former deed would defeat the rights of the plaintiff under the latter. Khub Chand v. Kalaian Das and Ali Hasan v. Dhirja referred to.

Also per Mahmood, J.—The decrees of February and November, 1884, did not operate as res judicata against the plaintiff, inasmuch as a mortgagee cannot be bound by a decision relating to the mortgaged property in a suit instituted after his mortgage, and to which he was not a party. After a mortgage has been duly created, the mortgagor, in whom the equity of redemption is vested, no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the rights and interests of the mortgagee in a subsequent litigation, so as to render the result of such litigation binding upon, and conclusive against, such mortgagee. The plaintiff in the present suit could not be treated as a party claiming under his mortgagors within the meaning of sec. 13 and that section must be interpreted as if, after the words “under whom they or any of them claim,” the words “by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit,” had been inserted. Dooma Sahoo v. Jeonarain Lall and Bonomalee Nag v. Koylash Chunder Dey referred to. Outram v. Morewood, Boykuntanath Chatterjee v. Ameeroonissa Khatoon, Katama Natchiar v. Srimut Raja Mootoo Vijaya Ragundadha and Ram Comar Sein v. Prosunno Coomar Sein, distinguished.—8 Al. 324.

The defendant's great-grandfather was uncle of one Balaji Hari, who was the great-grandfather of the plaintiffs, and they (i. e., the defendant's great-grandfather and his nephew Balaji) were entitled in equal half shares to a certain vatan property. The defendant and his brothers now represented the former, and were entitled to his half share and the plaintiffs represented the latter, and were entitled to his half share. The plaintiffs' father, Balaji Rudra, lived with the defendant and the defendant's brothers, Mahadaji and Krishnaji, as members of an undivided family up to the year 1845, in which year the plaintiff's father (Balaji) being then absent from the village, the defendant's brothers, Mahadaji and Krishnaji, executed a deed of partition whereby they divided the ancestral property into two equal shares, one-half of which the plaintiffs father was to receive—the other half going to the defendant and his brothers. The deed among other recitals, contained a clause to the effect that the plaintiff's father being then absent from the village, the defendants' brothers would manage his share during his absence, and on his return hand the same over to him on his paying the expenses incurred by them in such management.

In 1873 the plaintiffs' undivided brother brought a suit against the defendant and others on an agreement alleged to have been executed between him (plaintiffs' brother) and the defendant and his brothers by which the said brothers had bound themselves to return one-third share to him (the plaintiffs' brother). This suit was dismissed as against the defendant, as he had not been a party to that agreement, and plaintiffs' brother was referred to a separate suit for partition against the defendant.

The plaintiffs, therefore, now brought the present suit, claiming their share in the vatan estate. The defendant (inter alia) contended that the suit was barred as res judicata by the former suit, that neither the plaintiffs nor their forefathers had enjoyed the property during the previous 150 years, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiffs' claim. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the High Court :—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Court, that the former suit having been brought on an alleged agreement, it did not bar the present suit, which was based on the plaintiffs' hereditary right to sue as members of the family.—10 Bom. 24.

A brought a suit against B, claiming certain property as tenant of C, who was also made a defendant in the suit : this suit was on the merits decided in favor of B. C then brought a suit against B for possession of the same property :—Held, that such suit was not barred by sec. 13.—12 Cal. 580.

The decision in a suit in order to be final and conclusive, as res judicata upon an issue raised in another suit, must be the decision of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit, in which the prior decision is given in evidence as conclusive. This proposition stated in the judgment in Mussumat Edun v. Mussumat Bechun, 8 W. R., F. B., 175, and affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Misir Raghosbardial Sheo Baksh, Singh, I. L. R. 9 C., 439, is applicable equally to cases under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 2 (as supplemented by the general law), and to cases under the more complete enactment in Act X of 1877, sec. 13, which is not to be construed as having altered the former law. A suit was brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge by a Hindu against the widow of his deceased brother, claiming his property by right of survivorship, the issue being whether, at the death of the latter, the ownership of the brothers was joint or separate. An order under Act XXVII of 1860, granting a certificate to the widow, did not, on the above issue, operate as res judicata in the widow's favour, being a proceeding of representation, and not otherwise of title :—Held also that a decision of the same issue in a Munsiff's Court in a rent suit brought by the widow, the surviving brother on his application having been made a party defendant under sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, did not constitute res judicata in her favour. Krishna Behary Roy v. Brojeswari Chowdhurani, (L. R., 2 I. A., 283) referred to and followed :—Held also that the brother having appealed against a decree dismissing the suit as res judicata (the judgment which that decree followed having, nevertheless, found that the widow was disentitled by reason of the brothers having been, in fact, joint in estate), the widow could have supported the decree, without filing a cross appeal as to that finding, on the ground that the decree had been rightly made, (though not for the reason given) in her favour.—11 Cal. 301.

Explanation 5 :—In 1881 A sued B, C, and others for damages for the loss of his crops by the diversion of a water-channel by the defendants. A claimed a right common to himself and other raiyats of his village to use the water during the day time under an arrangement, by which B, C, and the other defendants in the suit, were entitled to use the water during the night time. In 1882 A and four other raiyats, not parties to the former suit sued B, C, and thirteen others not parties to the former suit, for a decree declaring that the plaintiffs were entitled to the exclusive use of the water in the channel by day. The Lower Courts held that the suit was barred by sec. 13 :—Held that as between the plaintiffs other than A and the defendants, and as between A and the defendants other than B and C, the suit was not barred by sec. 13.—8 Madr. 496.

In a suit to recover a sum of money due as wages, the plaintiff alleging that the defendant had engaged him to sell cloth on his account at a monthly salary, the defendant claimed a set-off as the price of cloth which, he alleged, the plaintiff had sold on his account on commission. It appeared that the defendant had previously sued the plaintiff to recover the same amount as was now claimed by way of set-off; as being due for the price of cloth sold and delivered by the defendant to him; and the plaintiff (then defendant) pleaded that there had been no sale to him, but the cloth had been delivered to him on commission-sale. The suit was dismissed on the ground that there was no proof of a sale of cloth, and the question whether any sum was due for cloth sold on commission-sale was not gone into. The cloth now alleged to have been delivered on commission sale was the same as that alleged in the former suit to have been actually sold to the plaintiff:—Held that the defendant was entitled, under sec. 111 to set-off the amount claimed as due for goods sold on commission against the plaintiff's demand, and that the claim for such set-off was not barred under the provisions of sec. 13:—Held also that the court-fee payable on the claim for set-off was the same as for a plaint in a suit.—8 Al. 396.

In a suit in which the plaintiffs claimed exclusive possession, and, in the alternative, joint possession of certain land, evidence was taken upon the issues raised; but the Court, without discussing the evidence, held that the alternative claims were "contradictory," and the plaintiffs' claim, therefore, "uncertain," and accordingly ordered "that the plaintiffs' claim, as brought, be dismissed with costs." The plaintiffs did not appeal from this decision, but subsequently brought a suit against the same defendants, claiming joint possession of the same property. Held that the suit was barred by sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court in the former suit not having reserved to the plaintiffs the right to bring a fresh action. Ganesh Rai v. Kalka Prasad, Muhammad Salim v. Nabian Bibi, and Watson v. Collector of Rajshahye referred to by TYRRELL, J.—9 Al. 155.

Upon an application made under Chapter IV of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) for partition of common land, in which the owners of six pattis were interested, into six equal parts, an objection was raised that the land should be divided into parts proportionate the size of the different pattis. The Assistant Collector before whom the objection was made, disallowed it with reference to the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz in which the custom of the village was recorded, and made the partition in the manner prayed. No appeal was preferred by the objectors to the District Judge. The Collector confirmed the partition, and after an appeal to the Commissioner, the Assistant Collector's decision was upheld. The objectors then brought a suit in the Civil Court for a declaration that the defendants were only entitled to a share of the common land proportionate to the area of their pattis. Held that the objection which was raised in the Revenue Court was one which raised a question of title or of proprietary right in respect of the common land, within the meaning of sec. 113 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act; that the decision of the Assistant Collector was a decision within the meaning of sec. 114 of the Act; and that, consequently, the suit was barred by sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the question was not affected by any mistakes in procedure that had been made in the Revenue Courts.—9 Al. 388.

A, sued in 1885 to recover certain estates from B, alleging claim under his adoption which took place in 1865. A suit to recover the same estates had been filed on behalf of A by his next friend and had been dismissed for default in 1872. In 1875 A, being still a minor, relinquished his claim to the estates for Rs. 12,000 under exhibit B; but now alleged that he thought he was relinquishing it only in favour of the defendant's predecessor in title who died in 1883, having been in possession of the estates since 1867. The plaintiff attained his majority in 1878:—Held, that the claim was res judicata, the plaintiff having failed to prove fraud on the part of his next friend: that whether the cause of action arose in 1865 or 1867, it was equally barred from 1879: that assuming the plaintiff was a minor of 15 years of age at the date of the deed of relinquishment, it is not likely he would not have understood its effect, or that he failed to ascertain it when he attained his majority in 1878. Per cur.—The plea of res judicata, ordinarily presupposes an adjudication on the merits; but sec. 148 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII) of 1859 contains a statutory direction that in case the plaintiff neglects to produce evidence and to prove his claim as he is bound to do, the Court do proceed to decide the suit on such material as is actually before it, and that the decision so pronounced shall have the force of a decree on the merits, notwithstanding the default on the part of the plaintiff.—10 Madr. 272.

A decree having been obtained against the karnavan and senior anandravan of a Malabar tarwad whereby the tarwad was dispossessed of certain land, the junior members of the tarwad who had not been impleaded in the suit sued to recover the land:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover upon proof that the decree in the former suit was not substantially correct, and that they were not bound to prove mala fides on the part of their karnavan in defending the former suit as a condition precedent to recovery.—10 Madr. 79.

An order refusing an application to execute a decree is not an adjudication within the rule of res judicata.—6 Cal. 203.

Under Act X of 1877, sec. 13, the law is now the same as it was under Act VIII of 1859, prior to the passing of Act I of 1872.—3 Bom. 3.

Sec. 13 is not exhaustive as to the effect of res judicata. It does not deal with the case of judgments in rem, nor with that of parties represented by, though not claiming under, the parties to a former suit.—6 Bom. 703.

Act X of 1877, sec. 13, expl. 5 only applies to cases where several different persons claim an easement or other right under one common title, e. g., where the inhabitants of a village claim by custom a right of pasturage over the same tract of land or to take water from the same spring or well.—6 Cal. 49.

The section does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. The maxim, Nemo bis vexari debet in eadem causa, cannot apply where the right on which the second suit is brought is not the same as that asserted in the former suit.—2 Madr. 352.

An application by petition under Act II of 1874, sec. 63, is a suit within the meaning of Act X of 1877, sec. 13, and therefore is barred by the disposal of a former application in the same matter under the same section or under Act XXIV of 1867, sec. 60, which the Act of 1874 repeals; this is so whether the order is one for payment of money or one dismissing the petition.—3 Cal. 840.

Explanation 5 to sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure would not make a judgment obtained in a suit against one co-sharer binding on another co-sharer no party to such suit in respect of the rights enjoyed in common by such co-sharers in their common property. Nor could such explanation be applied to a case instituted, or the judgment delivered in such case, during the time when the old Code of Civil Procedure was in force.—6 Cal. 31.

Not only may the plea of res judicata though not taken in the memorandum of appeal, be entertained in second appeal, under the provisions of sec. 542 of Act X of 1877, but even when such plea has not been urged in either of the lower Courts, or in the memorandum of appeal, if raised in the second appeal, it must be considered and determined either upon the record as it stands, or after a remand for finding of fact.—4 Al. 69.

Where one of several co-sharers, owners of a piece of land defined by metes and bounds forming part of a revenue-paying estate, brings a suit for partition, in which he does not seek to have his joint liability for the whole of the Government revenue annulled, such suit is cognizable by the Civil Courts, which have jurisdiction to determine the plaintiff's right to have his share divided, and to make a decree accordingly.—7 Cal. 153.

When the judgment of a Court of first instance upon a particular issue is appealed against, that judgment ceases to be res judicata, and becomes res sub-judice; and if the Appellate Court declines to decide that issue, and disposes of the case on other grounds, the judgment of the first Court upon that issue is no more a bar to a future suit than it would be if that judgment had been reversed by the Court of appeal.—6 Bom. 110.

A claim to certain pecuniary benefits and payments in kind which a plaintiff alleges himself to be entitled to receive from the defendants in respect of the performance of certain religious services, is a claim which the Courts of Justice are bound to entertain; and if, in order to determine the plaintiff's right to such benefits, it becomes necessary to determine incidentally the right to perform the services, the Courts must try and must decide that right.—2 Madr. 62.

Held by the Full Bench that the law of res judicata does not apply in proceedings in execution of a decree. Held, therefore by the referring Bench, where on an application for the execution of a decree the question was raised whether the decree awarded mesne-profits or not, and the Court executing it determined that it did not award mesne-profits, that such determination was not final, but such question was open to re-adjudication on a subsequent application for execution of the decree.—3 Al. 141 (F. B.)

In a suit by raiyats against their zemindar, praying for measurement of certain land, and for a declaration of the amount of yearly rental, it appeared that, in a previous suit for rent by the zemindar against the raiyats, the raiyats had alleged that the amount of rent and the extent of land had been over stated by the zemindar, but the Court decided that the raiyats were bound by a jamabandi signed by them, and refused to try whether the extent had been over-stated. Held, that the present suit was not barred as res judicata.—7 Cal. 214.

The plaintiff sued to recover certain lands claiming them as a portion of A, and alleging that A was portion of a mouza which had been leased to him in patni by the zemindar. The suit was dismissed, on the ground that though, A was known as a part of the plaintiff's mouza, yet it had been included in a patni-lease of an adjoining mouza, which the zemindars had granted to the defendants previously to the date of the plaintiff's lease. The plaintiff brought a second suit claiming another portion of A on the same title. Held that the claim was barred as res judicata.—6 Cal. 715.

In 1874 V sued P to recover certain lands held by him under a rental agreement dated 1873. S was made a defendant on the ground that he held one plot as under tenant to P. S claimed to hold under N. As to this plot, the issue raised was whether the land was held by S under P; the decision, that S did not hold under P, but under N, since 1828; the decree, that V's suit be dismissed as to this plot. Held, in a suit brought in 1881 by V against N and S to recover the same plot of land, that the suit was not barred by reason of the previous decision in 1874.—5 Madr. 9.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of murosi mokurari rights to certain lands and for mense-profits, alleging that he had been wrongfully ejected by the predecessors in title of the defendants. A previous suit on the same cause of action was heard and dismissed on the ground of limitation: Held that the present suit was not barred as res judicata under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 2 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, sec. 13), inasmuch as the first suit having been brought after the period allowed by law, the Court in which it was instituted was not competent to hear and determine it.—5 Cal. 246.

According to the rule of res judicata in England, in order to make an adjudication in one suit a bar to the plaintiff's proceeding in another, it must be shown, 1st, that the parties in both suits are the same; 2nd, that the thing sought to be recovered is the same; 3rd, that the grounds upon which the claim is founded are the same; and 4th, that the character in which the parties sue, or are sued, is the same.—2 Cal. 152.

Matter in issue may be defined as matter from which, either by itself or in connection with other matter, the existence, non-existence, nature, or extent, of any right, liability, or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows (sec. 3, Ev. Act); and the first and second explanations shew that matter will be considered to have been directly and substantially in issue, if it is a matter in issue which might and ought to have been put forward by either plaintiff or defendant in the previous suit. If the plaintiff might have made the same claim in the prior action, but did not, the subsequent suit will be barred.—2 Cal. 152.

The question whether the parties to a suit in a Court of Revenue for arrears of rent stand in the relation of landlord and tenant is one which it is necessary for such Court to try incidentally for the purpose of disposing of such suit, but not one which such Court has special jurisdiction to determine, and its determination of that question is not that of a competent Court. Consequently, where a Court of Revenue determines, in such a suit, that the parties do not stand in such relation, such determination does not bar the party alleging that the parties do stand in such relation from suing in the Civil Court to establish such relation.—3 Al. 51.

A Decree against a Karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, as such, is binding upon the members of that tarwad, though not parties to the suit, in the absence of fraud or collusion. A Karnavan is not a mere trustee, nor do the rules of Courts of Equity as to the necessity of making cestui que parties to suits against trustees by strangers apply to the case of a Karnavan and the members of the tarwad. Explanation 5 of sec. 13, Civil Procedure Code, is not limited to the case of a suit under sec. 30. The members of a tarwad claim under a Karnavan, suing as such, within the meaning of Explanation 5 of sec. 13. Status of Karanavan discussed.—2 Madr. 328.

Act X of 1877, sec. 13. expl. 2, was meant to apply to a case where the defendant has a defence which, if he had so pleased, he might, and ought to, have brought forward; but, as he did not bring it forward, the suit has been decreed against him. Under such circumstances the defendant is as much bound by the adverse decree as if he had set up the defence, and he is equally estopped from setting up that defence in any future suit under similar circumstances. The explanation was never intended to enable a party to treat a point of law as having been decided in his favour in a former suit, which was in fact not so decided, and which it was not necessary, for the purposes of the suit, to decide at all.—5 Cal. 923.

A sued B for rent in the Court of the Deputy Collector of Tipperah under the provisions of Act X of 1859. C intervened, claiming that the land in respect of which the rent was claimed was his property, and the suit was dismissed. On appeal, the District Judge of Tipperah reversed this decision and decreed the claim, on the ground that C had no right whatever to the land. In a subsequent suit brought by C against A and B for possession of the same land: Held that the previous decree of the District Judge did not constitute the plaintiff's claim a res judicata, and was no bar to the suit. Dinanath Bose v. Kali Kumar Roy [B. L. R., Sup. vol., 364; S. C. 5 W. R., (Act X Rul.) 23] followed.—8 Cal. 470.

I, to whom the obligee of a bond for the payment of money in which immoveable property was hypothecated had assigned by sale her right thereunder, sued, by virtue of the deed of sale on such bond, for the money due thereunder, claiming to recover by the sale of the hypothecated property. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the deed of sale, not being registered, could not be received in evidence, and consequently I's right to sue on such bond failed. I, having procured the execution of a fresh deed of sale, and caused it to be registered, brought a second suit on such bond by virtue of such deed of sale, claiming as before. Held that the second suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 334.

A Karanavan of a Malabar tarwad, having a right at any time to demand restoration of the property of the tarwad in the hands of the Anandravan, is not debarred by sec. 13 or sec. 43 from bringing a second suit to recover lands in the wrongful possession of an Anandravan, either by the fact that in a former suit between the same parties, the Karanavan only laid claim to some of the lands sued for, or by the fact that the former suit was dismissed upon the joint petition of the parties, alleging a compromise and a surrender of the lands, which, as a fact, were not surrendered, but wrongfully retained by the Anandravan. An Anandravan has no right to the value of improvements effected by him upon tarwad property surrendered to the Karanavan when such improvements are not made with private funds.—5 Madr. 1.

In a suit recover to possession of certain land, where it appeared that there had been a previous suit between the same parties with respect to the same land, in which the then plaintiff sought to have their possession confirmed, and that in that suit the lower Courts had decided the case both on the question of title and possession, but on special appeal the High Court had dealt only with the question of possession, and in dismissing the appeal, had not gone into the question of title, and, the defendant in that suit subsequently sued to recover possession of the land, held that the question of title was still open between the parties, and had not been heard and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction in a former suit within the meaning of sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—7 Cal. 381.

When a question of title has to be, and is, decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction with reference to the value of the subject-matter in dispute, such decision, or the ultimate decision upon appeal from such decision, is final, and the question of title becomes a res judicata as between the parties to the suit, although it may have the effect of determining the title to an estate or estates, the value of which exceeds the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was instituted. Per WHITE, J.—In considering, on the hearing of an appeal, the competency of a Court for the purpose of deciding upon a question of res judicata, the powers of the Court in which the suit was instituted, and not those of the Court in which the suit was decided on appeal, must be looked to.—5 Cal. 832.

In order to see whether a question is res judicata within the meaning of sec. 13, Civil Procedure Code, the former decree and the questions decided thereby must alone be considered. The words in sec. 13, "has been heard and finally decided by such Court," do not apply to an opinion expressed in the judgment on other issues not material for the purpose of the decree, though properly determined under sec. 204 by the Court of first instance. Niamut Khan v. Phadu Buldia (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 319) and Lachman Singh v. Mohun (I. L. R., 2 Al. 497) dissented from. Where a plaintiff improperly brings a defendant before a Court, and this suit is dismissed, the defendant should not be deprived of costs, merely because the Court considers the defence a fabrication to meet the plaintiff's claim.—4 Madr. 134.

Where the plaintiff in a suit prays that a person may be substituted on the record as the heir of a defendant who has died, the Judge should raise an issue as to whether the person sought to be substituted is the heir of the deceased defendant. In 1872, A brought a suit on a mortgage against the mortgagor, a Hindu widow, who died pending the suit. A then applied that the suit should be revived against B as the representative of the defendant. B denied that he was such representative, but the Judge refused to go into the question, made B a party, and gave A a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property. B subsequently brought a suit to have it declared, inter alia, that the mortgage and decree only covered the widow's life-interest. Held that the suit was not barred either as res judicata or under the provisions of sec. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Cal. 777.

That a claim has been included in a previous suit, without its having been directly and substantially put in issue and decided, does not upon the dismissal of that suit preclude a subsequent suit upon it. A consent decree of 1873 decided that alluvial land belonged to the plaintiff's village Sipah. The area was judicially determined in 1876 on a map of 1874, but actual possession was not obtained from the defendant, who owned villages on the opposite side of the river. The decree-holder in 1877 included a claim for part of the same land in a suit for an accretion to another of his riparian villages, Khasapur, and the latter suit was wholly dismissed. To get possession of the land decreed in 1873 he then brought rent-suits against two tenants upon it, the defendant intervening under sec. 111 of the Oudh Rent Act, 1868. Both the rent-suits were dismissed; and, according to the right reserved in the latter section, the plaintiff, to establish his title in a competent Court, brought the present suit, including in it the land which he had made part of his claim in the dismissed suit of 1877. Held, first as to limitation, that the twelve years' bar must be calculated from 1876, the date of the judicial ascertainment of the land decreed. Secondly, on the question whether the dismissal of the suit of 1877 precluded further suit for that part of the land which had been included in it, held, that it did not, and that section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable. The pleadings and judgment in the suit of 1877 were referred to, showing that what belonged to Sipah had not been in issue, and that nothing respecting it had been heard or decided. Thirdly, held, as to the rest of the land claimed in this suit, that there was no bar on account of its omission from the suit of 1877. As to mesne profits, it would have been open to the High Court to direct an enquiry under sec. 212 of the Civil Procedure Code.—19 Cal. 159.

The plaintiff brought in 1876 a suit against the defendant in respect of the same subject-matter, and founded on the same cause of action as the present suit. Issues of fact arising on the merits were inquired into; but a certificate of the Collector under sec. 6 of the Pensions Act (No. XXIII of 1871), which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the Court, not having been obtained, the claim was rejected on that ground. Held that the Court not having legally pronounced on the merits of the former case, the opinions expressed on the issues were not res judicata so as to bar the maintenance of the present suit. The non-production of the Collector's certificate does not necessarily constitute such a want of due diligence on the plaintiff's part as to disentitle him to the deduction of time allowed by sec. 14 of the Limitation Act XV of 1877.—3 Bom. 223.

S caused a notice of ejectment to be served upon K in respect of certain land, alleging that he held the same by virtue of a lease which had expired. K contested his liability to be ejected under sec. 39, denying that he held the land by virtue of such lease, and alleging that he held it under a right of occupancy. The Revenue Court decided that K held the land under a right of occupancy, and not under such lease. S thereupon sued K in the Civil Court, claiming possession of land, on the allegation that K was a trespasser wrongfully retaining possession thereof after the expiration of his lease. Held that the suit was cognizable in the Civil Courts, and the decision of the Revenue Court did not render the matter in issue res judicata. The provisions of sec. 13 of Act X of 1877 do not apply to applications such as those under sec. 39 of Act X VIII of 1873.—3 Al. 521.

S and B jointly sued N for the redemption of a mortgage of an eight-auna share of a village, B suing as the purchaser from the mortgagor of a moiety of such share. N did not, in defence of such suit, assert a right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, although such right had accrued to him on its sale by the mortgagor to B. S and B obtained a decree in such suit, and the mortgage was redeemed. N subsequently sued B and his vendor to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety. Held that it was incumbent upon N in the former suit to have asserted in defence his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, inasmuch as, if that right had been established, it must, so far as B was concerned, have proved fatal to his title to redeem, and that, as he had not done so, the suit to enforce his right of pre-emption was barred by the provisions of sec. 13 of Act X of 1877. Explanation II.—3 Al. 189.

A decree obtained ex parte is not final within the meaning of expl. 4, sec. 13 of Act X of 1877. Such a decree is not conclusive evidence of the amount of rent payable by the same defendant in another suit for subsequent rent of the same property. Where the plaintiff sued the defendant for a year's rent at the same rate which had been decreed to him for a previous year in a suit which he had brought against the same defendant for rent of the same property, and relied upon the former decree, which had been obtained ex parte, and which he also alleged had been duly executed, as evidence of the amount of rent due to him by the defendant, but it appeared that the lower Court had found that the alleged execution-proceedings were fraudulent, and that no steps had been taken which gave finality to the decree: Held that the decree was not conclusive evidence of the amount of rent due from the defendant, or of the questions with which it dealt.—7 Cal. 23.

In 1870 the plaintiffs sued to redeem a mortgage of certain lands from the defendants' predecessors in title. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff's equity of redemption had been sold in execution of a decree to A B. The plaintiffs, having re-purchased the equity of redemption from A B, brought a second suit to redeem the lands in the defendants' possession. Held that the question whether the equity of redemption of the lands in suit had been sold to A B was res judicata, and could not be re-opened by the defendants on the ground that the plaintiffs were litigating under a different title in the former suit. The admissions of a person whose position in relation to property in suit it is necessary for one party to prove against another are in the nature of original evidence and not hearsay, though such person is alive and has not been cited as a witness.—5 Madr. 239.

In a suit to redeem a kanom on certain land, the jenm of a devasom in Malabar, it appeared that the plaintiff held a melkanom in respect of the same land executed to him (subsequently to the date of the kanom sought to be redeemed) by defendant No. 3, the samudayam of the devasom. Defendant No. 3 represented one Chitambaram, in whose favour the Uralers had, in 1741, executed a document appointing him samudayam and stating that they had received from him a kanom of 18,000 fanams on the devasom properties and providing that he should appropriate part of the rents towards the loan. It appeared that in a suit to eject tenants, the Uralers had sued as co-plaintiffs with the samudayam: in subsequent suits, however, two of the Uralers had sued other tenants for rent and the samudayam for an account; both of these suits were dismissed on second appeal, and in the judgments of the High Court the samudayam was described as a mortgagee in possession:—Held, (1) on its appearing that no opinion was expressed in the former suits as to the construction of the document of 1741 that the former decisions had not the force of res judicata; (2) in view of the conduct of the parties and on the terms of the document of 1741 that the samudayam was not thereby constituted a mortgagee in possession and the melkanom set up by the plaintiff was invalid.—14 Madr. 301.

In a suit brought in 1886 by a zemindar to recover an estate granted by his predecessor to the predecessor of the defendant on a service tenure, a small money rent being also reserved, it appeared that in 1864 the right of the plaintiff's predecessor to rent had been established by suit, but there was no evidence that the service was then dispensed with, but in 1885, it was intimated to the defendant that the service was dispensed with, and a notice to quit was given to him; the option of holding the estate at an enhanced rent was however given to him at the same time:—Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by limitation, nor precluded by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 13 or sec. 43; (2) that the plaintiff was not precluded by any implied contract from increasing the rent; (3) that the burden of proving the plea that the plaintiff was not entitled to eject lay on the defendants and had not been discharged. In computing the time for an appeal to His Excellency the Governor in Council, under the rules made by virtue of Act XXIV of 1839 against a decree passed by the Agent to the Governor, the time necessary for procuring copies of decree and judgment appealed against may be deducted.—14 Madr. 365.

In a suit in 1882 between the members of a family following the Muhammadan law of inheritance, in which the plaintiffs sued as sharers for the recovery of their share in certain property, one of the defendants pleaded that a paramba, part of the property in dispute, was not subject to division, but this plea was unsuccessful, and a decree was passed for the plaintiffs. The present suit was brought by a mortgagee from one of the defendants in the former suit (who had been ex-parte) to recover his share of the above-mentioned paramba, the subject-matter of his mortgage; the mortgagor was joined as defendant, among others including the defendant who had raised the plea above stated. This plea was repeated by the same person :—Held (1), distinguishing Venkatarama v. Labai Meera (I. L. R., 13 Madr. 275), on the ground that the parties were governed by the Muhammadan law of inheritance, that the suit was maintainable; (2) that the claim that the paramba was not subject to division was res judicata by virtue of Civil Procedure Code, sec. 13, explanation V.—14 Madr. 324.

In a suit for the partition of a zemindari, the plaintiffs asked, inter alia, for “ten years’ past profits and for subsequent profits.” The Judge passed a decree for partition in which mesne profits for three years prior to the suit were decreed to the plaintiffs, but his judgment and decree were silent with regard to the subsequent profits claimed in the plaint. The defendant appealed against this decree, and the plaintiffs preferred a memorandum of objections against part of it, but did not object to it so far as it omitted to provide for subsequent mesne profits. The plaintiffs instituted the present suit to recover from the defendant mesne profits from the date of the above suit :—Held, that the plaintiffs’ claim so far as concerned mesne profits accrued since the decree in the former suit was not res judicata, and the suit to that extent was not precluded by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 13.—14 Madr. 328.

In a suit brought by the Uralers of a devasom in Malabar to recover certain land in the possession of the defendant, it appeared that the defendant held under an instrument, dated 1741, whereby his predecessor in title was appointed samudayam and was authorised to appropriate part of the rents of the devasom properties to the interest on a loan made by him to the Uralers. Two of these Uralers had brought a previous suit against the defendant for an account of the rents received by him and for an injunction : that suit was dismissed on second appeal when the High Court described the defendant as a mortgagee in possession, but the question whether or not he was a mortgagee with or without possession was not then directly and substantially in issue :—Held, (1) that the status of the defendant was not res judicata, by reason of the judgment in the previous suit; (2) that the Court having held, following Krishnan v. Veloo (ante p. 301), that the defendant was not a mortgagee in possession under the instrument of 1741, the suit was not barred by limitation.—14 Madr. 312.

In a suit for a declaration that the members of the Nambudri illom to which the plaintiffs belonged were the sole heirs and successors of an illom known as Kiluvapura, of which the natural line had become extinct, and for possession of certain land which had formed part of its property, the defendants were the karnavan and manager of the plaintiffs’ illom and the members of another illom. It was found on the evidence that the plaintiffs’ karnavan had been adopted unto the Kiluvapura illom, and that subsequently that illom and the plaintiffs’ had been amalgamated under a karar executed by, among others, the wife of the last male member of the Kiluvapura illom, and that she had died less than twelve years before this suit. The defendants, other than the karnavan and manager of the plaintiffs’ illom, asserted a right to a moiety of the property of the Kiluvapura illom (with which, however, it was now found on the evidence that they were less closely connected than the plaintiffs), and it appeared that that right had been similarly asserted in suits brought after the date of the karar above referred to, by a member of the defendants' illom against the karnavan and manager of the plaintiffs' illom, and that decrees had been passed therein negating the title now set up by the plaintiffs and that part of the property now claimed was held under one of those decrees. The plaintiffs did not ask that those decrees should be set aside:—Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by limitation; (2) that it was unnecessary for the plaintiffs to prove mala fides against their karnavan in respect of his conduct in the former suits or to seek that the decrees passed therein be set aside, and that those decrees did not constitute the present claim res judicata, as the karnavan was not then impleaded in his capacity as such; (3) that the adoption of the plaintiffs' karnavan was valid even assuming that no datta homan was performed, and the last male member of the Kiluvapura illom had died after merely indicating him as his heir and that the widow adopted him in the Dwayamushyayana form; (4) that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree as prayed.—15 Madr. 6.

The plaintiff, a junior member of a Malabar tarwad, alleged that her karnavan had assigned to her his kuikanom right over certain land, and that she had obtained a fresh demise from the jenmi and placed a tenant in possession. The tenant was dispossessed by the present karnavan, and in 1886, sued him and the plaintiff to recover possession of part of the land. That suit was dismissed on the ground that the above allegations of the plaintiff were unfounded. She now sued the present karnavan for possession of the entire land:—Held, that the claim of the plaintiff was res judicata as far as it related to the land in question in the former suit, but not as to the rest.—15 Madr. 264.

In a suit to recover a parcel of land, the plaintiff's case was that it had been purchased by him benami in the name of his brother, who had sued the present defendants to obtain possession in 1887, but had been negligent in the conduct of the suit which was consequently dismissed. It was found that there had been no negligence in the conduct of the suit, and that it had been instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound by the decree in the former suit, and could not recover on his secret title.—15 Madr. 267.

In a suit for money against the karnavan and two anandravans of a Malabar tarwad, the judgment directed a "decree for the plaintiffs as prayed," but the decree ordered payment by one anandravan only. Property of the tarwad was attached and sold. The decree was then amended and brought in conformity with the judgment. Other members of the tarwad sought to have the sale set aside, but it was found that the judgment debt had been contracted for proper tarwad purposes, and that suit was dismissed. Application was now made for the attachment of other property of the tarwad in further execution of the amended decree:—Held, that the members of the tarwad were not entitled to contend that the decree was not binding on them, that matter being res judicata. Quære.—Whether the rule in Sundara v. Subbanna (I. L. R., 9 Madr., 354) as to the amendment of decrees is correct.—15 Madr. 403.

In 1882, the daughter of a deceased Hindu brought a suit in the Court of a District Munsif for a declaration that the defendant was not the adopted son of her father (deceased) as he claimed to be. It was found that the alleged adoption was valid and the suit was dismissed. The then defendant now brought, in 1889, a suit in the same Court to recover possession of land from the then plaintiff, alleging that it had been wrongfully transferred to her by way of gift by his adoptive mother. The defendant denied the adoption and asserted that the transfer was valid as having taken place in accordance with an arrangement made by her father in his lifetime. It was admitted that the value of the whole property, to which the plaintiff was entitled by virtue of his adoption, if it was a valid adoption, exceeded Rs. 2,500. The Court of first appeal held that the question of the adoption was not res judicata, and observed that the transfer to the defendant was apparently made to induce her to abandon her litigation as to the adoption:—Held, (1) that the defendant was not at liberty to question the plaintiff's adoption: (2) that the Court should try whether the transfer was made bona fide by the plaintiff's mother as his guardian for his benefit.—15 Madr. 498.

A claim in execution to a house which had been attached was dismissed, and the claimant now sued the decree-holder to establish her title to it. It appeared that the house had been previously attached in execution of another decree obtained against the same judgment-debtor and his father (since deceased); that the present plaintiff had then preferred a claim, which was allowed; that the judgment-debtor had taken no steps to have the order allowing the claim set aside; and that a suit filed by the decree-holder with that object had been dismissed:—Held, that the plaintiff's claim was not res judicata, and the defendant was not estopped from contesting it.—15 Madr. 477.

A suit for a declaration of the title of the plaintiffs' tarwad to certain land was filed in a District Court against the Maharaja of Cochin and others, including the trustees of a devasom. It appeared that the same land was the subject of suit instituted in a Subordinate Court on the 6th August 1877, to which the representatives of both the plaintiff's tarwad and the devasom were parties, and that the land was then found to be the property of the devasom and a decree was passed accordingly. It was contended that the present claim was not res judicata by reason of that decree, because, under the provision of Act X of 1877, sec. 443, which came into operation during the pendency of that suit, no Sovereign Prince could be sued in any Court subordinate to a District Court, and the Court which passed that decree was not therefore "a Court of jurisdiction competent to try" the present suit within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, sec. 13:—Held, that, although these words must be taken to refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the suit was heard and determined, yet the present claim was res judicata since the title to the land was a matter in issue within the cognizance of the Subordinate Judge and was adjudicated on by him.—15 Madr. 494.

Where there has been a suit between an agriculturist mortgagor and his mortgagee for an account merely, a subsequent suit for possession on payment of the money declared to be due is barred under either sec. 13 or sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—7 Bom. 377.

In 1866 S obtained a decree authorizing him to recover certain property on payment of a certain sum to the mortgagee, but not declaring that S would be foreclosed if he did not exercise his right of redemption: Held that S was not debarred from bringing a suit to redeem the same property in 1881.—6 Madr. 119.

A Hindu widow and her son, the then presumptive heir to property claimed by the widow, obtained a decree against a more remote reversionary heir. The son predeceased his mother, and the person against whom the decree had been obtained became the next reversionary heir. Held, in a suit for possession by him, that the decree in the previous suit did not operate as res judicata.—9 Cal. 463.

K, the purchaser of certain immoveable property in execution of a decree, sued for possession of the same. The suit was dismissed “in the form in which it was brought,” because the plaintiff had not filed with the plaint the sale-certificate. K subsequently brought a fresh suit. Held that the dismissal of the former suit “in the form it was brought” did not amount to permission to sue again contemplated by sec. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, and such dismissal must be regarded as a “decision” thereof in the sense of sec. 13, expl. iii., and therefore as a bar to the fresh suit.—5 Al. 595.

Where a person on his own application was added as a party respondent to an appeal, and on the case in appeal being remanded under sec. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for re-trial on the merits practically took no steps whatever to defend the suit.—Held that he could not afterwards plead, by way of objection to execution of the decree, matters which ought to have formed part of his defence to the suit, had he chosen to defend it. Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kuari referred to.—14 Al. 64.

The plaintiff, having obtained a decree for possession of certain land, applied for execution by delivery of possession. Whereupon a third party filed an objection in the Court of the Munsif, that he held a prior decree for possession of the same land and therefore the plaintiff's decree was incapable of execution. This objection was allowed and the plaintiff then sued for establishment of his right to possession of the land jointly with the objector, making the former judgment-debtor and the objector defendants to the suit. The Subordinate Judge in first appeal held that the Munsif had acted under sec. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, applying sec. 13 of the same Code, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff then appealed:—held that circumstances did not exist to give the Munsif jurisdiction to act under sec. 331, and that his order must be taken to have been made, as it purported to have been made, under sec. 278. Buhal Singh Chowdhry v. Behari Lal referred to.—14 Al. 417.

In 1870 two plots of land, numbered 147 and 155, belonging to the same owner, were sold in execution of a decree. The purchaser of plot 155 sold it to A, who in 1877 sued the tenant of a portion of the land for rent. In this suit A prayed that it might be declared that he was the owner. The tenant alleged that B, the purchaser of plot 147, was the owner of the land in respect of which rent was sought to be recovered, and B was made a party to the suit. At the hearing A did not appear, and the suit was dismissed for default. Subsequently A sold plot 155 to the present plaintiff, who now sued for possession. Held that the suit was not barred as res judicata.—9 Cal. 426.

The plaintiff, in a suit for rent which was contested, having failed to prove that the rent was payable at the rate claimed by him, the Court, in trying the issue “what is the amount of the jama,” after considering the whole of the evidence and the circumstances of the case, held that the plaintiff had entirely failed to prove his allegation of the jama, and gave him a decree for the amount admitted by the defendant, which was less than that claimed by the plaintiff. In a later suit the plaintiff sued the defendant, in respect of the same holding, for rent for a subsequent year, and he claimed at the same rate as he had claimed in his previous suit. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that the question as to the rate at which the rent was payable was res judicata, it not being alleged that there had been any agreement subsequent to the first suit by which the rate was altered. Held, that the question as to the rent payable for the period covered by the first suit was res judicata; but that it did not follow that the decree in that suit operated as res judicata, and conclusively determined the rate of the rent payable for the year in respect of which the subsequent suit was brought. That depended on whether the previous decision was that the plaintiff should recover from the defendant the sum admitted by him to be due, or that the sum so admitted to be due was the proper amount of rent payable for the period in question. Held, that in this case the previous decision was to the latter effect, and that the question of the rate at which the rent was payable by the defendant was res judicata. Punnoo Singh v. Nirghin Singh and Jeo Lal Singh v. Surfun referred to.—19 Cal. 656.

A leased lands to B, who sued C for possession of a certain mauza, alleging it to be a portion of the lands leased. A was made a defendant, and supported the case of the plaintiff, who obtained a decree. C appealed, making A and B respondents, when the decree was reversed, and the suit dismissed, on the ground that the mauza sued for was the property of C; and that ruling was upheld on special appeal to the High Court. Subsequently A brought a suit against C for the same mauza, making B a defendant. Held that the title to the mauza was res judicata between A and C, and that the suit would not lie. Govind Chunder Koondoo v. Taruck Chunder Bose (I. L. R., 3 Cal. 149).—9 Cal. 120.

An allowance for the maintenance of a younger member of a family was charged upon the inheritance to which the eldest male member alone succeeded. In a suit for such an allowance brought by a younger brother against the elder, who had succeeded their deceased father in the possession of the estate, held that an order made dismissing a claim for maintenance preferred by such younger brother against their father in his lifetime, founded on an ekrarnama, did not afford a defence under sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held also that the brothers having made an agreement, fixing the allowance for maintenance at a certain sum, the younger brother agreeing to receive a less sum for a defined period, he could only obtain a decree for the allowance so reduced.—9 Cal. 945.

An occupancy tenant, who had been ejected under secs. 34 and 93 (b) of the North Western Provinces Rent Act, on the ground that he had committed an act mentioned in those sections which rendered him liable to ejectment, sued in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right of occupancy and to have the decree of the Revenue Court directing his ejectment declared of no effect, on the ground that his act was not one of those rendering him liable to ejectment, being authorized by local custom. Held that the question of the plaintiff's liability to ejectment on account of the act in question, being a matter the cognizance of which was limited to the Revenue Courts, and the decision of the Revenue Court against him having become final, the plaintiff's suit was barred by sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Raj Bahadur v. Birmha Singh (I. L. R., 3 Al. 85) distinguished.—5 Al. 245.

An adoption having been held to be valid by the High Court on appeal from a Subordinate Court, an appeal to the Privy Council was preferred, when the parties entered into a compromise, and the appeal was permitted to be withdrawn. Held that the decree of the High Court as to the validity of the adoption became final, and was not affected by the compromise so as to allow the matter to be again litigated between the parties or their previes. Although the decision of a Court as to the validity of an adoption in a suit between A and B may, in any subsequent proceedings between

A and those claiming under him on the one side, and B and those claiming under him on the other, estop the parties to such proceedings from again questioning the validity of the adoption, yet in a suit where both the contesting parties claim under B, such decision will not operate as an estoppel so as to prevent the validity of the adoption being again questioned by either party to such suit.—6 Madr. 43.

The obligee of a bond payable by instalments sued the obligor for four instalments, claiming with reference to the terms of such bond interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended in that suit that, on the proper construction of the bond, the interest on such instalments should be calculated from the dates of default. The obligee obtained a decree for interest as claimed. The obligee subsequently again sued the obligor for four instalments, again claiming interest of such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligee contended again in the second suit that interest should only be calculated from the dates of default. Held that the question as to the date from which interest due on the defaulting instalments was exigible under the terms of such bond was res judicata. It is the "matter in issue," not the "subject-matter" of the suit, that forms the essential test of res judicata in sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 55.

N sued W for a moiety of a brick-kiln, claiming by right of inheritance, and alleging in respect of the other moiety that it was his own property. W, in her defence to the suit, denied that N had any right in the kiln, and that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. An issue was framed on the point whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to W, which the Court of first instance decided in N's favour. N eventually obtained a decree for a moiety of the kiln which he claimed by right of inheritance. W appealed, contending, inter alia, that it was not proved that a moiety of the kiln belonged to N. The appeal was decreed, and the decree of the Court of first instance in N's favour was set aside. W subsequently sued N for the value of bricks which he had wrongfully taken from the kiln. N set up as a defence to the suit that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. Held that the issue whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to N was res judicata under sec. 13, expln. i. of the Civil Procedure Code.—5 Al. 514.

A Hindu sued for compensation for the loss of his daughter's services in consequence of her abduction by the defendant, and for the costs incurred by him in prosecuting the defendant criminally for such abduction. The defendant was convicted on such prosecution: Held that the decision of the Criminal Court did not operate under sec. 13 of Act X of 1877 to bar the determination in such suit of the question whether the defendant had or had not abducted the plaintiff's daughter. Also that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the costs of such criminal proceedings. The daughter in this case was a married woman who had been deserted by her husband, and at the time of her abduction was living with the plaintiff, her father. Held by STUART, C. J.—That the suit by the father for compensation for the loss of his daughter's services in consequence of her abduction was, under the circumstances, maintainable. Held by OLDFIELD, J.—That a suit by a Hindu father for the loss of his daughter's services in consequence of her abduction is not maintainable. 4—Al. 97.

G sold an estate nominally to the minor son of K, but in reality to K. K brought a suit in his minor son's name against N, the mortgagee of such estate, to redeem the same. N set up as a defence to such suit that such sale was invalid under Hindu law, as such estate was a share of certain undivided property of which he was a co-sharer, and had been made without his consent. It was finally decided in that suit that such estate was a share of such undivided property, and not the separate property of G, and that such sale was invalid, having been made without the consent of N, a co-sharer of such undivided property. G subsequently redeemed such estate, and, having done so, sold it a second time to K. N thereupon sued K to set aside such sale on the same ground as that on which he had defended the former suit. Held that the issue in such suit, whether such estate was a share of undivided property or the separate property of G, was res judicata, inasmuch as K, though not in name, yet in fact, was a "party" to the former suit in which such issue was raised and finally decided.—3 Al. 812.

Explanation 5 of sec. 13 of Act X of 1877 only applies to cases where several different persons claim an easement or other right under one common title, as, for instance, where the inhabitants of a village claim by custom a right of pasturage over the same tract of land or to take water from the same spring or well. Where, therefore, A, in defending a suit brought against him by B, to have it declared that he had a right to build a wall across a drain, set up a prescriptive right to use the drain, and it was decided that no such prescriptive right existed in A; and, subsequently, C brought a suit against B, claiming to use the same drain as an easement, and asking for the removal of the wall in question in the former suit, and B set up the judgment in the suit between himself and A as a bar to the suit. Held that the right claimed by C not being one which he and other inhabitants of the neighbourhood claimed under one common title, but a prospective right which he claimed individually in respect of his own house and premises, and depending upon the length of time he had used the right, was a separate claim, and that the judgment in the suit between B and A did not separate as a bar to his suit—6 Cal. 49.

Certain immoveable property was attached in execution of a money-decree held by A, dated 22nd August 1871. On 1st April, 1872, the same property was subsequently attached in execution of a decree held by B, dated 19th August 1871, which directed the sale of the property in satisfaction of a charge declared thereby. The property was sold in execution of the decree. The Munsif directed that the proceeds of the sale should be paid to B. A, who claimed them on the ground that he had first attached the property, appealed against this order. The Judge, declaring that A was entitled to the proceeds, reversed the Munsif's order. A then obtained an order from the Munsif, directing B to refund the money, which he did, and it was paid to A. B sued A to recover the money by establishment of his prior right to the same, and for the cancelment of the Judge's order, alleging that the same was made without jurisdiction: Held (by a majority of the Full Bench) that the suit was one for money received by the defendant for the plaintiff's use, and was, therefore, governed by sch. 2, art. 60. Held (by the Division Bench) that A was not entitled, as the first attaching creditor, to the sale proceeds.—Ram Kishan v. Bhawani Das, I. L. R., 1 Al. 333 (F. B). See also Bhawani Kuar v. Rikhi Ram.—2 Al. 354.

The decision of a Court, in order to be conclusive in another Court, must have been that of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit in which the decision is given in evidence as conclusive. The words, "Court of competent jurisdiction," used in sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, include the meaning that the first Court must not have been precluded by the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction from deciding the question raised in the other. The two Courts must exercise such concurrent jurisdiction in regard to the pecuniary limit of their powers that the subject-matter of the second suit would not have been beyond the powers of the Court which disposed of the prior one. The defence made to a suit on a bond for Rs. 12,000 and interest thereon, in a Court having no pecuniary limit of jurisdiction, was that in a prior suit for Rs. 1,665, balance of interest, brought in a Court with power to try suits not exceeding Rs. 5,000 in value, the principal sum due on that bond had been decided to be Rs. 4,790. Held that the issue as to the amount of principal due on the bond has not been heard and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of sec. 13.—9 Cal. 439.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that certain lands were his, and for possession of them. Defendant No. 1 claimed the ownership of the lands; defendant No. 2 claimed to be mortgagee in possession. The decree simply dismissed the suit; but the lower Court found, as a fact, that the ownership of the lands was in the plaintiff, although the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of them by reason of the mortgage to defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 now appealed on the ground that, although the decree itself was entirely in her favour, she would be prejudiced in any future proceedings if the finding of fact, as to the ownership of the lands, were left unchallenged. Held that the appeal would not lie; for the decree is what must be looked to see what was conclusively decided, and there was nothing in the decree actually passed which the plaintiff could afterwards use as res judicata in his favour; and an appeal is not admissible on any point not having the authority of res judicata. An adjudication is only conclusive evidence of the facts established therein or properly tending thereto; hence from a simple judgment against him a party cannot reduce anything in his favour as res judicata, for nothing in his favour can have been an essential element of an adverse decree.—7 Bom. 464.

N brought a suit against P for enhancement of rent. P's defence was, first, that no notice of enhancement had been given; secondly, that the rent was not enhanceable, as he and his predecessors in title had held it at a fixed rent from the date of the Permanent Settlement. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no notice had been given; but the Munsif stated in his judgment that he considered the rent enhanceable, because he did not believe in the genuineness of the documentary evidence produced by P. The decree merely ordered that the suit should be dismissed, the portion of the judgment as to the enhanceability of the rent not being embodied in the decree. P, therefore, had no right of appeal against that portion of the judgment. In a subsequent suit by N against P, for enhancement of rent of the same tenure, it was held that, on the rule laid down by the Privy Council in Soorjeemonee Dayee v. Suddanund Mohapatter, and Krishna Behari Roy v. Bunvari Lall Roy, P was precluded, by the decision in the former suit, from denying that the rent of the tenure was enhanceable, although the decision on that point was not embodied in the decree. The material findings in each case should be embodied in the decree, and if they are not, it is incumbent on the parties, to avoid their being bound by decisions against which they have no right of appeal, to apply to amend the decree in accordance with the judgment.—6 Cal. 319.

The plaintiff, a member of a Malabar Nambudri family, sued for certain land, claiming it as the property of his family, the Vadasheri illam. He had been dispossessed by the defendants, under a decree declaring their title to the land against the plaintiff's elder brother, who claimed it on behalf of the Vadasheri illam: Held that the plaintiff was not estopped by the former decree from recovering the land. Per INNES, J.—The question whether a decree obtained against the Karnavan of a Nayar tarwad or of a Nambudri illam in Malabar is binding on the family is purely one of procedure. The dictum in Varanakot Narayanan Namburi v. Varanakot Narayanan Namburi (I. L. R., 2 Madr. 328) that in the absence of fraud or collusion a decree against the Karnavan, as such, is binding on the Anandravans of the tarwad, is not warranted by any provision of the Code of Civil Procedure. Every member of the tarwad is entitled to be made a party, or to have notice under sec. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in any suit, the object of which is to affect the tarwad property. Explanation 5 of sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not refer to bona-fide defences, but to bona-fide claims, and does not make a decree binding on a person not a party to it, where the actual defendant was jointly interested with such person in the subject-matter of the suit, and defended the suit bona-fide. Hazir Ghazi v. Sonamonee Dasse (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 31) approved. —6 Madr. 121.

In December 1878, H, a Hindu widow, in possession, by way of maintenance, of a certain estate, of which R owned one-third, and P, B, and S, one-third jointly, made a gift thereof to N. H died in January, 1879. In February 1879, R & P, B and S, joined in suing N for a declaration of their proprietary right to two-thirds of the estate, and to have the deed of gift set aside. The Court trying this suit treated it as one for a mere declaration of right, and dismissed it, with reference to the provisions of sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, on the ground that the plaintiffs had omitted to sue for possession, although they were not in possession, and were able to sue for it. In Nov. 1879, R and P, B and S, again joined in suing N. In this suit they claimed possession of two-thirds of the estate, and to have the deed of gift set aside. Held by the Full Bench (reversing the judgment of PEARSON, J., and affirming that of OLDFIELD, J.,) that the decision in the first suit was no bar to the determination in the second suit of the question as to the validity of the deed of gift. Per STUART, C. J., and STRAIGHT and OLDFIELD, JJ., that the causes of action in the two suits being different, the second suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per TYRRELL, J., that the plaintiffs being entitled to only one remedy in the former suit, the provisions of sec. 43 were not applicable to the second suit. Held by the Full Bench that there was no mis-joinder of plaintiffs in the second suit, S. A. No. 1050 of 1879 (decided on the 12th May 1880, not reported) distinguished.—4 Al. 261.

The erroneous decision by a competent tribunal of a question of law directly or substantially in issue between the parties to a suit does not prevent a Court from deciding the same question, arising between the same parties in a subsequent suit, according to law. Persons of whatever sect are at liberty to erect a building, and therein conduct public worship on their own land, provided they neither invade the right of property enjoyed by their neighbours, nor cause a public nuisance; and are also entitled to conduct religious processions through public streets, so that they do not interfere with the ordinary use of such streets by the public, and subject to such directions as the Magistrate may lawfully give to prevent obstruction of the through fare or breaches of the public peace. In a suit in 1850 between the Tenkalais and Vadakalais, rival religious sects, represented by the plaintiffs and defendants respectively, the Vadakalais having endeavoured to open a temple for public worship in a certain public street, were, by the decree of the Sadr Court, prohibited from erecting a temple or instituting public worship on the spot of ground objected to by the Tenkalais, and which lay within the range of the Tenkalais' temple, i. e., within the usual range of the processions conducted in connection with the temple-worship. In 1879 the Vadakalais open a temple for public worship on another site, their private property, in the same street. Held that a decree of the Sadr Court in the former suit was no bar to the action of the Vadakalais.—5 Madr. 304.

The plaintiff, mortgagee in possession of certain property, applied for the removal of an attachment placed on it by the defendant in execution of a decree against a third party. In default of payment of court fees by the defendant the attachment was removed, but, in ignorance of this fact, the plaintiff's application was proceeded with, and ultimately rejected. The plaintiff then brought a suit for a declaration of his right, but it was dismissed, on the ground that the attachment had already been removed. Subsequently the defendant placed a second attachment on the property, which the plaintiff again applied to remove. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's application was barred by the proceedings on the first attachment. Held that the decision on the plaintiff's first application having no object existing on which to operate, the attachment having then been removed, it could not properly be regarded as res judicata at all, since no one was seriously interested in having it decided in a different way; and that, supposing submission to that decision on the part of the plaintiff for a certain time could have given it a final effect, there had, as a matter of fact, been no such submission, the plaintiff having done all that was incumbent on him to get the summary inquiry and orders replaced by a formal trial and judgment; and that there was nothing, therefore, in these proceedings disentitling the defendant to oppose the second attachment. Held also, that the second attachment, after the first has been removed, was a new and distinct act, giving rise to a new cause of action, or complaint, to the plaintiff, to which, in any case, he was entitled to a fresh enquiry and decision.—7 Bom. 408.

B, who held a decree for money against I, caused certain property to be attached in execution of such decree as the property of his judgment-debtor. M, the wife of I, objected to such attachment, claiming such property as her own. Her objection was disallowed, and she consequently brought a suit against B to establish her right to such property. She died while that suit was pending, leaving by will such property to her sons. That suit proceeded in the names of her sons, who claimed such property under such will. The lower Courts only decided in that suit that such property belonged to M, and not to I, and it was therefore not liable to be sold in execution of B's decree against the latter. They did not consider the question whether M's sons were entitled to such property under the mother's will. In second appeal in that suit B contended that I, as an heir to M, was entitled to a fourth share of such property, and such share was liable to be sold in execution of such decree. M's sons did not contend before the High Court that they were entitled to the whole of such property under their mother's will to the exclusion of I. The High Court allowed B's contention. B brought a fourth share of such property to sale in execution of his decree, and purchased it himself. Thereupon M's sons sued him for such share, claiming it under their mother's will. Held that their mother's will was a matter which should have been made a ground of defence by M's sons in the course of the trial of the second appeal in the former suit between them and B, and that, not having been so made, it was res judicata in the sense of sec. 13, explanation ii., Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 21.

The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain houses and grounds as belonging to his zemindari, setting forth that the premises in question had been occupied by his paternal grandmother, on whose death the defendants had taken wrongful possession. The defendants claimed to be legally entitled to the premises in question, and contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred under this section by reason that the plaintiff had already, during his grandmother's lifetime, brought a suit against her and the defendant's father, as a co-defendant, to establish his right to the same premises, which suit has been dismissed. The defendants also pleaded limitation. It appeared that in the former suit the relief sought by the plaintiff was substantially to restrain his grandmother from acts of waste in alienating property which had belonged to her deceased husband by assigning it to her co-defendant; but that, as regards the property now claimed, although it was mentioned in the plaint, no charge had been made that she had assigned it, or intended to assign it, to her co-defendant, nor any allegation to show that the co-defendant had any interest in it. Held, reversing the decisions of the lower Courts, that, under the circumstances, the decision in the former suit was not a decision in a suit between the same parties or parties under whom they claimed, and that the cause of action in the present suit was not determined in the former suit. Held also that the defendant's plea of limitation could not be determined without a finding as to whether the plaintiff's grandmother, who died within the period of limitation, had held the premises with the plaintiff's leave, or as a trespasser.—2 Madr. 23.

Certain immoveable property was mortgaged to R, and then sold to N. It was then brought to sale in execution of a decree against N, and was purchased by H. The balance of the sale-proceeds, after satisfaction of that decree, was paid to N. Under the terms of the mortgage to R, interest on the principal amount was payable annually, and its payment was charged on the property as well as the payment of the principal amount. The mortgagors having failed to pay the interest annually, R in 1875 sued them and N and H to recover the interest due. It was decided in that suit that N was primarily and personally liable for the interest then due on the mortgage, as he had received the sale-proceeds of the property, and that property was only liable in case he failed to satisfy the claim. N subsequently paid into Court the sale-proceeds he had received, and R was paid the same. In 1878 R again sued the same persons for interest, and again N was declared primarily and personally liable, on the ground that he had not at once made over the sale-proceeds to R. In 1880 R sued the same persons to recover the principal amount and interest due on the mortgage by the sale of the mortgaged property. Held that, whatever might have been the rights and relations of the parties, so long as any portion of the sale-proceeds remained with N, their position towards him assumed an entirely different character when once he had discharged himself of those moneys, and with this change in the situation the "ratio decidendi" of the suits of 1875 and 1878 no longer existed, and, therefore, the decisions in those suits did not preclude R from bringing a suit to recover the principal and interest due on his mortgage from the mortgaged property.—5 Al. 118.

H, the proprietor of one-third share of a certain undivided estate, made a gift of such share to P. He subsequently, in February, 1875, gave a mortgage of such share, in his capacity as P's guardian, to N and S, the two other co-sharers of such estate. In March, 1878, P, having attained his age of majority, brought a suit, as a co-sharer of such estate, under such estate, on the ground that they were using such land as if they were the sole proprietors thereof. The lower Appellate Court, observing that such land was the property of the three co-sharers, that the mortgage of P's rights to N and S did not affect those rights as such, and that N and S were not justified in using such land as if they were the exclusive proprietors thereof, gave P a decree for possession of one-third share of such land. N and S appealed to the High Court on the ground that P should not have been awarded possession, as they were in possession of such land as mortgagees. The High Court remanded the case for the determination of the issue thus raised by N and S; and the lower Appellate Court found that N and S were in possession of P's share of such estate as mortgagees under the mortgage made by H above referred to, and of such land as such. P did not take any objection to this finding; and it was adopted by the High Court, and embodied in its final decree. In October 1879, P sued N for possession of his share in such estate, claiming under the gift from H, and alleging that the mortgage of such share by H to N was invalid. Held that, inasmuch as such mortgage was matter substantially in issue in the former suit, the matter in issue in the second suit was res judicata under explanations 1 and 2, sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 65.

In 1864 the obligee of an instalment-bond, in which certain immoveable property was hypothecated as collateral security for the payment of the instalments, brought a suit upon such bond "against Z and A (the obligors) and the property hypothecated in the bond, defendants," claiming to recover instalments which were due and unpaid, and a declaration of his right to recover instalments which were not due as they fell due. He obtained a decree in such suit for "the amount claimed" against the "two defendants." It was also provided in such decree that, "until the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond, the plaintiff can realise the amount of each instalment by executing this decree." The obligee applied in execution of such decree to recover, by the sale of such property, which had passed into the hands of third parties after the passing of such decree, instalments which had become due after the passing of such decree and had not been paid. Such execution having been refused on the ground that such decree was a money decree, the obligee brought a second suit upon such bond to recover such instalments by the enforcement of the lien therein created on such property. Held that, although the enforcement of such lien was claimed in the former suit, yet, inasmuch as it was very questionable whether the Court was competent to grant the second relief claimed in that suit, vis., a declaration of right to recover instalments which were not due in execution of a decree for instalments which were due, and the claim in the second suit was not the same as that in the former suit, the plaintiff asking for instalments said to be actually due, and not for a declaratory decree for instalments not due, the second suit was not barred by sec. 13 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 297.

M sued R in the Court of the Munsif for a bond, alleging that he had satisfied the bond-debt, and for a certain sum which he alleged had been paid by him to R in excess of the bond-debt. On the 24th November 1875, the Munsif, having taken an account, and found that Rs. 188-7-4 of the bond-debt were still due, made a decree dismissing the suit. R appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who, on the 16th September 1876, finding that Rs. 520-2-2 of the bond debt were still due, affirmed the Munsif's decree. M appealed to the High Court on the ground that an appeal by R did not lie to the Subordinate Judge, as R was not aggrieved by the Munsif's decree. The Division Bench before which the appeal came, on the 10th August 1877, holding that R was not competent to appeal to the Subordinate Judge, set aside the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge. In deciding the case the Division Bench made certain observations to the effect that the account between the parties was not finally settled, but might be taken again in a fresh suit. In November, 1877, M instituted a fresh suit against R to recover the bond on payment of Rs. 188-7-4, the sum found by the Munsif in the former suit to be due by him to R. Held, on the question whether the finding of the Munsif in the former suit was final and conclusive between the parties, or the account might be again taken, that that finding being a finding on a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, which was heard and finally decided by the Munsif, was final and conclusive between the parties, and the account could not be again taken. Held also that the observations of the Division Bench in the former suit were mere "obiter dicta," which did bind the Court's disposing of the fresh suit.—2 Al. 843.

The jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court is not ousted in a suit for damages for carrying away the produce of certain land when the defendant sets up title to the land in answer to the claim. Sec. 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure precludes a second appeal in a suit for damages under Rs. 500, although the suit has been instituted in the District Munsif's Court and not in a Court of Small Causes, and although a question of title has been raised by the defendant and decided. Per TURNER, C. J.—When a suit is brought in a form in which it is cognizable by a Small Cause Court under Act XI of 1865, the Court cannot decline jurisdiction if it appears that incidentally a question of title is raised which it has not jurisdiction to determine for any other purpose than the decision of the suit before it. Under such circumstances the Court may, however, properly grant a reasonable adjournment that the question may be litigated and determined by the proper tribunal. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—The question, what is a suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes within the meaning of sec. 586 of the Civil Procedure Code, has reference to the mode of adjudication, and not to the forum; and the fact that the suit is instituted in the District Munsif's Court, and not in a Court of summary jurisdiction, makes no difference for the purposes of that section. If the matter adjudicated on in a suit is only incidentally in issue or cognizable, the adjudication is final, whether by a Court of concurrent or limited jurisdiction, only for the purpose and object of that suit. Per INNES, J.—The decree of a Small Cause Court in a case where a question of title is raised incidentally is no bar to a suit upon the title under sec. 13, expl. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code, because the Small Cause Court is not competent to pass a decree upon the title.—3 Madr. 192.

In 1856, V, a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued the defendants, and obtained a decree for the redemption of certain immoveable property, but the decree was never executed. At the date of that suit, V was the manager of the family, consisting of himself and the plaintiff N, who was then a minor. The decree did not provide for the foreclosure of the mortgage in the event of V failing to redeem. In 1878, N brought another suit to redeem the same property. The lower Court held that as the former decree did not direct foreclosure, the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee continued between the parties, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by the former decree. The defendants appealed. Held (PINHEY, J., dissentiente), reversing the decree of the lower Court, that the plaintiff's suit was barred. A decree for redemption on the default of the decree-holder to pay the money declared to be due within the time fixed by the decree, or, if none be fixed, within the time allowed by the law for the execution of the decree, operates as a judgment of foreclosure, and debars the mortgagor from afterwards bringing a second suit to redeem the same property. A Hindu family is regarded as a corporation whose interests are necessarily centred in the manager, the presumption being that the manager is acting for the family, unless the contrary is shown. Before the introduction of the Civil Procedure Code this was so equally with regard to litigation as to other transactions and it was not obligatory, or even customary, for a Hindu manager to set forth that he sued in a representative character (as now required by the Code, sec. 50), or to add the co-owners as parties to the suit (as required by English law.) V's suit, therefore, being brought in 1856, and no fraud or collusion being alleged, bound the present plaintiff, though then a minor, and he could not now bring a second suit on the same cause of action.—7 Bom. 467.

R, on the 30th December, 1870, obtained an ex parte decree against D, in execution of which he attached properties X and Y on the 4th January 1871. D applied for a re-hearing, which was granted; and on the 30th of December 1871, a decree was again passed against D, in execution of which the same properties were attached on the 9th of August 1872, and purchased at the execution-sale on the 1st August 1874, by R. On the 14th February 1871, D had executed a solehnama and mortgage in favour of G, pledging, among other properties, X and Y as security for a loan made to him by G. D having made default in payment, G obtained a decree against him in terms of the solehnama on the 28th February, 1871. Subsequently, D granted another mortgage of the same properties in favour of G. G sold his decree and mortgage to the plaintiff, who in execution of the decree attached properties X and Y. In these execution-proceedings R brought forward the fact of his purchase of the same properties in August 1874, and his claim was allowed, and the properties X and Y released from attachment on the 4th March 1876. The plaintiffs had, on the 8th March, 1872, obtained a mortgage from D, on which they had obtained a decree on the 28th September 1874, in execution of which they had attached X & Y; but on R claiming them under his purchase in August, 1874, an order was made on the 10th April 1875, releasing X and Y from attachment; and in a suit by the plaintiff to set aside that order, they failed as to properties X and Y, on the ground that those properties were not included in the mortgage of March 1872. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs against R and D, to set aside the order of the 4th March 1876, and to have X and Y declared liable to be sold under the decree of the 28th February 1871: Held that the suit was not barred under sec. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 by the decree in the previous suit, nor was it barred by sec. 7 of the same Act. Held also that the purchase by R in August 1874, was subject to the mortgage to G of the 14th February 1871.—Radhanath Kundu v. Land Mortgage Bank of India, Limited.—6 Cal. 559.

The decision by a competent Court, that an application for the execution of a decree is barred by limitation, has the effect of res judicata; and although such decision may be erroneous, yet, so long as it remains unreversed in appeal, it is valid and binding, and the question cannot be reopened. A decision, that an application for execution is not time-barred, has a similar effect. On the 15th April 1868, the plaintiff applied for the execution of a decree held by him against the defendant, and certain houses were thereupon attached. In April 1869, the attachment was raised on the intervention of a third person. The plaintiff then brought a suit to establish his right to attach the houses, and obtained a decree on the 28th

February 1871. An appeal was made, and the suit was finally decided in the plaintiff's favour in April 1873. After the plaintiff had obtained his original decree, and while the appeal was pending, he applied for the sale of the houses in execution on the 30th November 1871, and subsequently made three other applications within three years of each other, the last of which was dated the 30th October 1876. The Court rejected this application on the 28th November 1876, on the ground that the execution of the decree was barred, as more than three years had elapsed between the first and second applications (i. e., the applications of the 15th April 1868, and 30th November 1871.) The plaintiff appealed against the order; but his appeal was rejected, because he had failed to produce with it a copy of the order appealed against. The plaintiff took no further steps in that proceeding, but made a fresh application for execution on the 10th August, 1878. The Subordinate Judge rejected it, on the ground that the execution was barred, the matter being res judicata. In appeal, the District Judge reversed that order, and allowed execution. On appeal to the High Court, held, on the authority of Mangul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri Chowdry (L. R. 8 Ind. App. 123) that the rules of res judicata applied, and that the application of the 30th November 1871 was time-barred, and a fortiori, every subsequent application was barred. Semble.—A proceeding in execution is a proceeding which terminates in a decree as defined by sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877,) and is, therefore, a suit within the meaning of the Code.—6 Bom. 54.

The three defendants, G, R, and K, and their brother M, the grandfather of the plaintiff, were members of one family, possessing undivided ancestral property consisting of the villages of B, P, and S, the two former being situated in the Poona Zilla, and the latter in the Satara Zilla. In 1866, three defendants (each in a separate suit) sued M in the Poona Courts for partition of the villages of B and P. They in their plaints alluded to the village of S, stating that it was their own, and not subject to partition. M in his answer contended himself with denying the right to partition of the villages of B and P, and made no claim, in the alternative, to a share in the ownership of S. The plaintiff, the grandson of M, now sued the defendants in the Satara Courts for partition of the village of S, contending that he was not precluded from so doing by the former proceedings in the Poona Courts. Held that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata, and that his suit was concluded under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sec. 13, expl. 1 and 2. A member of an undivided family, suing his co-parceners for partition of family property, is bound to bring into hotchpot any undivided property in his own possession, in order that there may be a complete and final partition, and cannot claim to withhold any such property on the ground that it is situated within another jurisdiction. That being so, the plaintiff's grandfather, M, having neglected in the previous suit to make the execution of the village of S a ground of defence, the judgment which followed involved the decision of every claim of title upon the cause of action, and must be taken between the parties as amounting to a positive adjudication of all such claims, including the claim to the village of S. No doubt, the rule that every partition-suit shall embrace all the joint family property has been held to be subject to certain qualifications, as, for instance, where different portions of it lie in different jurisdictions, or where a portion is not available for actual partition as being in the possession of a mortgagee; but there is no authority for the proposition that a member, who sues for partition of property in the hands of the defendants, can refuse to bring into hotchpot any undivided property held by himself, on the ground that it is situated within another jurisdiction. Subba Rau v. Rama Rau (3 Madr. H. C. Rep., 376) referred to and distinguished.—7 Bom. 272.

A Hindu of the Southern Marata country, having two sons undivided from him, died in 1871, leaving a will disposing of ancestral estate substantially in favour of his second son, excluding the elder, who claimed his share in this suit. In 1861, a suit brought by this elder son against his father and brother to obtain a declaration of his right to a partition of the ancestral estate was dismissed, on the ground that he had no right in his father's lifetime to compel a partition of moveables; and that as to the immoveables the claim failed, because they were situate beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. Held, first, that this suit was not barred under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 2; the proceeding of 1861 not having amounted to an adjudication between the brothers as to their rights in the estate arising on their father's death. Secondly, that the suit was not barred under the Limitation Act, (XIV of 1859), sec. 1, clause 13. As to the immoveables setting aside the fact that the plaintiff had remained in possession of one of the houses of the family, which had been treated by the father as continuing to be part of the joint property, the decision of 1861, based as to the immoveables in the absence of jurisdiction to declare partition of them, caused this part of the claim to fall under the provisions of Act XIV of 1859, sec. 14. As to the immoveables, assuming that they could, on the question of limitation, be treated as distinct from the moveables, and that no payment had been made within twelve years before this suit by the ancestral banking firm to the plaintiff, the adjudication of 1861, whether in law correct or incorrect, had been that the elder son could not assert his rights in the moveables until his father's death. The defendant in this suit, who had taken the benefit of that judgment, could not now insist that it did not suspend the running of limitation on the ground that his brothers might have appealed from it if erroneous. So far, also, as the father's interest was concerned, the succession only opened on his death. Thirdly, it having been contended that as a father and his sons were during his life co-parceners in the family estate, one of such co-parceners being able according to the decision of the Courts, by act inter vivos, to make an alienation of his undivided shares binding on the others, it followed that the father might dispose by will of his one-third share. Held that under the Mitakshara Law, as received in Bombay, the father could not dispose of his one-third share by will. The doctrine of the alienability by a co-parcener of his undivided share, without the consent of his co-sharers, should not be extended, in the above manner, beyond the decided cases. The Bombay Court had ruled that a co-parcener could not, without his co-sharers' consent, either give or devise his share, and that the alienation must be for value. The Madras Court had ruled that although a co-parcener could alienate his share by gift, that right was itself founded on the right to partition, and died with the co-parcener, the title of other co-sharers vesting in them by survivorship at the moment of his death. Without a decision as to which of these conflicting views, in regard to alienation by gift, was correct, the principles upon which the Madras Court had decided against the power of alienation by will were held to be sound and sufficient to support that decision.—5 Bom. 48.

A landlord, having tendered a patta at a certain rate, sued his tenants in the Court of the District Munsif to recover rent for Fasli 1289 (1879-80). The tenants pleaded that they were not bound to accept the patta tendered by virtue of an implied contract, which entitled them, without exchange of patta and muchalka, to hold the land permanently at a lighter rent. The District Munsif and, on appeal, the District Court decided that no implied contract had been proved by the tenants. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the patta tendered was not one which the tenants were bound to accept under Act VIII of 1865 (Madras). The landlord then sued in the Revenue Court to compel the tenants to accept a patta for Fasli 1291 (1881-1882), and the tenants again put forward the same plea:—Held, that the question whether the tenants were entitled to hold permanently at a lighter rate without exchange of patta and muchalka was not res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit.—7 Madr. 145.

In 1876 A sued K and others to recover certain lands, alleging that he was the karnavan of their tarwad and that the lands were granted to them for maintenance under an oral agreement, which had been broken by K having mortgaged some of the lands. This suit was dismissed. In 1881 A sued the same defendants to recover the same lands, on the ground that as karnavan of the tarwad he was entitled to resume possession of the lands:—Held, reversing the decrees of the Lower Courts that the suit brought by A in 1881 was not barred by sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. Per MURTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—Explanation II to sec. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from the relief claimed. Where several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit, though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action.—7 Madr. 264.

A decision of a Revenue Court disallowing an application to eject a tenant, because he has built on his land, does not, under sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, bar a suit in the Civil Court to have the building demolished.—6 Al. 68.

The plaintiff in a suit upon a certain instrument not duly stamped was compelled to pay the amount of duty and penalty. The defendant was the person bound to bear the expense of providing the proper stamp for such instrument. The plaintiff, with reference to sec. 41 of the Stamp Act, 1879, sued the defendant to recover such amount. Held that such amount could not be regarded as part of the costs in the suit in which it was paid, and a separate suit to recover it was maintainable.—6 Al. 70.

A Subordinate Judge, to whom an appeal is transferred under the Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871), has not the power to dispose of it in the manner provided by secs. 206, 207 and 208 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881: the District Judge alone has the power to dispose of appeals in that manner. Ram Prasad v. Rai Kishen followed. The plaintiffs, who claimed to be tenants of certain land under a lease from the zemindar, alleging that the defendant was their sub-tenant, under sec. 36 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881, caused a notice of ejectment to be served upon the latter under the provisions of that Act. The defendant did not make an application under that Act contesting his liability to be ejected, and the plaintiffs applied under secs. 40 and 95 (f) of that Act for assistance to eject him. The Revenue Court trying this application rejected it on the ground that the defendant was not a sub-tenant of the plaintiffs, but a co-sharer in their tenancy. The plaintiffs thereupon sued the defendant in the Civil Court for a declaration that the latter was not a partner with them in the lease, and for possession of the land by his ejectment therefrom. Held that the relief sought in the suit by the plaintiffs was not one which a Revenue Court could give under any of the clauses of sec. 95 of the Rent Act, which presupposes an admitted relation of landholder and tenant; and therefore the determination by the Revenue Court of the plaintiffs' application for ejectment of the defendant was not the decision of a Court competent to try the suit, and was no bar to its maintenance in a Civil Court, within the principle of sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code.—6 Al. 295.

L was the owner of a four-anna share in a village. On the 1st March, 1880, his childless widow, R, and his nephew, B, who had separated from his two brothers, and lived for some years with both L and R, sold to S one-third of the four-anna share. The brothers of B sued the vendors and the vendee to enforce a right of pre-emption, alleging that they, as well as B, had acquired and entered into exclusive possession of the estate of L as his heirs. In the second appeal in this suit the High Court held that, as it was proved that the four-anna share was L's separate estate, and R had succeeded to it, and was in possession of it, and thus the plaintiff's had not established a title to, or acquired possession of, any part of the share, the plaintiffs were not in a position to assert a preferential claim to purchase the property in dispute. The plaintiffs also pleaded that the question of the right and title asserted by them as the actual heirs of L should have been tried and determined in the suit; but the High Court rejected this plea on the ground that the suit had been based merely on the allegation of de facto possession, and that their claim was to obtain by purchase one-third share only, and not for any remedy in respect of their right to possession by inheritance of the entire four-anna estate. Subsequently to this decision, the same plaintiffs, alleging equal rights with B as reversionary heirs of L, sued the same defendants for a declaration of the incompetence of R, the widow, to alienate the property, and that the sale-deed might be declared, as against them, null and of no effect. The cause of action was stated to be the execution, on the 1st March 1880, of the deed of sale. Held that the plea of res judicata failed. The matter now substantially in issue between the parties, viz., the presumptive title of the plaintiffs to possession of the property, had not been "heard and finally decided" in the sense of sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such title was not "alleged and denied" by the parties in that suit, within Explanation I, sec. 13. It was no matter which "might and ought" to have been made the ground of attack in the former suit, within Explanation 2. The law does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. A plaintiff may, with the leave of the Court (sec. 44, Civil Procedure Code), join causes of action; but he is now here compelled to do so. The cause of action in the second suit, although the date of its accrual was the same, was separate and distinct from the cause of action asserted in the previous suit.—6 Al. 358.

Certain persons, claiming by right of inheritance to C, sued B, N, A, K, and others for possession of certain immoveable property, and, on appeal to the High Court in August 1876, their claim was decreed in full. In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree, Z purchased certain immoveable property from B, N, A, and K. Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same, alleging that his vendors had inherited it from D; that the figures of the total of C's property given in the plaint in the former suit were erroneous; that the property now in suit was not affected by that decree, and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it. It appeared that there was, in fact, a mistake in the total of extent of C's property as stated in the plaint in the former suit. Held that the plaintiff, having purchased pendente lite, was bound by the decree of the High Court against the persons through whom he claimed ; that the claim in the former suit having been decreed in full, the property now in suit was then decreed to the present defendants ; and that the claim of the plaintiff to go behind that decree could not be entertained.—6 Al. 506.

So long as the benami-system is recognized in this country, it is to be presumed, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that a suit instituted by a benamidar has been instituted with the full authority of the beneficial owner, and any decision made in such suit will be as much binding upon the real owner as if the suit had been brought by the real owner himself. Meheroonissa Bibee v. Hur Churn Bose, (10 W. R., 220,) Kalee Prosunno Bose v. Dino Nath Bose Mullick, (19 W. R., 434,) and Sita Nath Shah v. Nobin Chunder Roy, (5 C. L. R., 102,) discussed. In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed, and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. In sec. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 the words "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit" refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the first suit is brought. Thus, when the first suit is within the jurisdiction of a Munsiff, and the subsequent suit, by reason of an increase in value of the property, is beyond his jurisdiction, such subsequent suit would nevertheless be barred, inasmuch as, if the subsequent suit had been brought at the time when the first suit was brought, the Munsiff would have been competent to try it.—10 Cal. 697.

In 1878 A, as the auction-purchaser of a taluq, sued 35 persons for possession of a part of this taluq. In this suit the issues raised—(1) whether A had purchased the whole taluq, or an eight-anna share of the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors therein ; (2) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the taluq as given in the plaint. The Court held that A had purchased the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors in the taluq, and as it appeared that some of the defendants were not judgment-debtors, and as it did not appear what portions of the taluq were held by the several defendants, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit within the proper time. In 1880 A brought a fresh suit against 16 of the same defendants and 19 others, for possession of a portion of the same taluq. The issues raised were—(1) whether the suit was barred under sec. 13 of the Code ; (2) whether A had purchased the whole or a portion of the taluq ; (3) whether the defendants were in possession of all the disputed lands, and, if not, what portions of the taluq were held by the several defendants ; (4) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the taluq. The Munsiff held that the suit was not barred, and on the merits gave A a decree. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was barred, and refused to go into the merits. Held, that the question, whether A had purchased the whole or only a portion of the taluq, was res judicata, but that the question, as to what lands A was entitled to by virtue of his purchase having been left undecided in the former suit, A was entitled to a decision on that point.—10 Cal. 856.

Through ignorance of the position of affairs, one only of two persons, joint owners in a property, was sued for a debt for which the property had been pledged by the person sued, and a decree was obtained and execution issued against the property ; and in such execution proceedings the other sharer put in a claim, and obtained an order releasing her share of the property from attachment. A second suit was then brought by the judgment-creditor against both sharers, for the purpose of making the share of the co-sharer, who had not been previously sued, available to satisfy the defendant, and praying that the order releasing the property from attachment might be set aside. Held, that such a suit would lie, and would not be barred as res judicata.—10 Cal. 924.

Where a Division Bench of the High Court decided, as a point of law, that a property had not passed under a certain deed of sale, and subsequently the decision on that point of law was in another case disapproved of by a Full Bench, the decision of the Division Bench, (where the same plaintiff has again sued to recover the same property relying on the same deed of sale) is no less a res judicata, because it may have been founded on an erroneous view of the law, or a view of the law which a Full Bench has subsequently disapproved.—10 Cal. 1087.

When foreign judgment no bar to suit in British India.

14. No foreign judgment shall operate as a bar to a suit in British India—

- (a) if it has not been given on the merits of the case :
- (b) if it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or of any law in force in British India :
- (c) if it is, in the opinion of the Court before which it is produced, contrary to natural justice :
- (d) if it has been obtained by fraud :
- (e) if it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in British India.

Where a suit is instituted in British India on the judgment of any foreign Court in Asia or Africa except a Court of Record established by Letters Patent of Her Majesty or any predecessor of Her Majesty or a Supreme Consular Court established by an Order of Her Majesty in Council, the Court in which the suit is instituted shall not be precluded from inquiry into the merits of the case in which the judgment was passed. *†

Where a suit is instituted against a Collector and another person, and the Collector does not appeal, held that the question of the District Court's jurisdiction to entertain the suit being a ground common to all the parties affected by the judgment, it is open to the other person to object that the plaint did not disclose a cause of action against the Collector, and that the District Court consequently had not jurisdiction.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 194.

* This paragraph has been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 5.

† This para does not extend to Provincial S. C. Courts.

Where the plaintiff alleges the defendant to be amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court, and the defendant denies its jurisdiction, held that the parties should be allowed to go into evidence to support their allegations, and the Court ought not to have rejected the plaint, without recording its reasons for the same, or taking evidence on the point, under sec. 8, Act XI of 1841.—1 Agra H. C. R., 222.

The High Court pointed out the necessity of a Court showing its jurisdiction and competency on the face of all its proceedings.—8 W. R., Cr., 45.

Courts, having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit in which a right is asserted, have also jurisdiction over a supplemental suit in which the plaintiff seeks to follow out that right.—16 W. R., 240.

A judicial investigation of allegations and facts sufficient to guide the Court should precede the admission or rejection of jurisdiction.—Nusrun Beebee v. Watson & Co., 3 W. R., 215 ; See Huree Persad Malee v. Koonjo Behary Shaha, Marsh, 99 ; 1 Hay 238 ; and Ishan Chunder Roy v. Tarruck Chunder Banerjee.—18 W. R., 238.

An ex-parte judgment of a French Court against a native of British India, not residing in French territory, upon a cause of action which arose in British India, imposes no duty on the defendant to pay the amount decreed so as to bar a suit in British India.—I. L. R., 4 Madr. 359.

A suit upon a foreign judgment is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes established under Act XI of 1865.—6 Madr. 191.

The judgment of a foreign Court, obtained on a decree of a Court in British India, is no bar to the execution of the original decree.—7 Cal. 82

An Appellate Court cannot treat a plea to jurisdiction as a technical plea which may be disregarded if the Court is satisfied with the decision on the merits.—6 Madr. 192 ; 6 W. R., 289.

K sued C, who resided in British India, upon a bond executed by C in favour of K within the territory of P, a Native State, and obtained a decree. Having obtained satisfaction in part, K sued C upon the judgment of the Court of P in a British Indian Court at T. Held, reversing the decrees of the Lower Courts, that the Court at P had jurisdiction, and that K could sue upon the judgment of that Court in the Court at T.—7 Madr. 105.

The distinction made for the purposes of limitation between suits, appeals, and applications by the Limitation Acts, has no bearing upon a question of jurisdiction.—5 Bom. 680.

In a suit upon the judgment of a Court at Bastar, it appeared that in the suit in which the judgment was pronounced, the defendant took no objection as to the jurisdiction of the Court, and that he carried on business by his agent in the Bastar territory, and that a decree was passed for the plaintiff after evidence adduced on both sides in the ordinary way :—Held, (1) that the defendant was not entitled to have the case re-heard (2) that the defendant was not entitled to take objection to the jurisdiction of the Bastar Court.—15 Madr. 82.

CHAPTER II. OF THE PLACE OF SUING.

15. Every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it.

Court in which suit to be instituted.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Act IX of 1861 does not debar a District Munsif's Court from entertaining a suit by a Hindu father to recover possession of his minor son alleged to be illegally detained by the defendant.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 31.

In a suit to declare title to four paid offices in a temple, the plaintiffs asked that the issues with regard to three of them should not be tried, but on cross-examination asserted right to them. Held that the plaintiffs were not shown to have relinquished their claim on the three offices for the purposes of the suit. On findings that the fourth office carried with it the right to the other three, and that united value of the four offices exceeded the jurisdiction of the District Munsif, held that the District Munsif had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and that the plaint should be returned for presentation in the proper Court.—10 Madr. 371.

The term "Court of lowest grade" in Civil Procedure Code, sec. 15, refers only to Courts to which the Civil Procedure Code is applicable, and consequently Small Cause Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with Courts of Village Munsifs to hear suits which are cognizable by the latter.—13 Madr. 145.

On the hearing of a suit in the Court of first instance, the Court came to the conclusion that the value of the property in dispute placed the claim beyond the jurisdiction of the Court; the suit was therefore dismissed with costs. On appeal this decision was reversed with costs, on the ground that the plaint ought to have been returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court. The defendant appealed to the High Court:—Held that the defendant ought to have been allowed his costs in both Courts, and that he was entitled to an appeal on that ground.—12 Cal. 271.

Sec. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code does not preclude a Subordinate Judge from trying a suit within the jurisdiction of the Munsiff's Court. Ledgard v. Bull, L. R., 13 I. A., 134, distinguished. The words "not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court" in sec. 578 of the same Code mean "not affecting the competency of the Court to try." The error in instituting a suit in a Subordinate Judge's Court instead of in that of the Munsiff is not an error which affects the jurisdiction of the former Court within the meaning of sec. 578.—17 Cal. 155.

The plaintiff, who was a money-lender residing within the limits of the Ahmedabad Cantonment, sued the defendants, who resided within the jurisdiction of the City Small Cause Court at the same place, upon a bond executed by them at the Cantonment. He presented his plaint to the Cantonment Magistrate, whose pecuniary jurisdiction extended to Rs. 200 only; but that officer, being of opinion that the suit was cognizable by the City Small Cause Court, returned it to the plaintiff, who subsequently presented it to the Judge of the City Small Cause Court, whose pecuniary jurisdiction extended to Rs. 500. On reference by him to the High Court, held that both the Courts had jurisdiction to try the suit, but that the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate was to be regarded as the Court of lower grade, and, therefore, under sec. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), was the proper Court to try the suit.—12 Bom. 169.

Per PETHERAM, C. J., and BRODHURST, MAHMOOD, and DUTHOIT, JJ.—The object of secs. 19 and 20 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, was to create in the District Judge, Subordinate Judge, and Munsif, concurrent jurisdiction up to Rs. 1,000. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—Sec. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a proviso to those sections. The word “shall” in that section is imperative on the suitor. The word is used for the purpose of protecting the Courts. The suitor shall be obliged to bring his suit in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. The object of the Legislature is that the Court of the higher grade shall not be over-crowded with suits. Whenever an Act confers a benefit, the donee may exercise the same or not at his pleasure. The proviso is for the benefit of the Court of the higher grade, and it is not bound to take advantage of it. If it does not wish to try the suit, it may refuse to entertain it. If it wishes to retain the suit in its Court, it may do so; it is not bound to refuse to entertain it. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The words in sec. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code “shall be” are an instruction which the Court is bound to follow; and they are, therefore, a restraint upon jurisdiction. The effect, therefore, of the concurrent jurisdiction of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs is not to allow to a Subordinate Judge discretion as to accepting or not accepting for trial by himself suits cognizable by the inferior tribunal. BRODHURST and MAHMOOD, JJ.—Sec. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a rule of Procedure, not of jurisdiction; and whilst it lays down that a suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade, it does not oust the jurisdiction of the Courts of higher grades. Russick Chunder Mohunt v. Ram Lal Shaha (22 W. R., 301), Sircar v. Begum Bibi (25 W. R., 219), followed. Per OLDFIELD, J.—Sec. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a provision entirely of procedure as distinct from jurisdiction, and its effect on sec. 19 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act is that the jurisdiction of the District Judge and Subordinate Judge extends to all original suits cognizable by the Civil Court, subject in its exercise to a certain procedure, namely, that the suits be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try them. Held, therefore, by PETHERAM, C. J., and OLDFIELD, BRODHURST and MAHMOOD, JJ., where a Subordinate Judge had tried a suit which a Munsif, a Court of a lower grade, might have tried, that the Subordinate Judge had not acted without jurisdiction. The plaint in such suit had been in the first instance presented to the Munsif who had returned it, to be presented to the Subordinate Judge. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The Decree of the Subordinate Judge would not be liable to be reversed in appeal for want of jurisdiction, for the jurisdiction was there, though it ought not to have been exercised. This view of the matter was consistent with the received canon of construction, that unless the Legislature uses negative words, or words showing an intention to treat the observance of a rule of procedure as essential, the rule will ordinarily be treated as a direction only. Under the circumstances, therefore, the District Judge had, in appeal, correctly refused to entertain the plea of defect in jurisdiction. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The institution of a suit in a Court of higher grade than the Court which is competent to try it is not a question either as to the jurisdiction or affecting the merits of the case. It is a question of the kind provided for by sec. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the irregularity is not one which affects “the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court” within the meaning of the section. The plea of want of jurisdiction can be entertained for the first time at any stage of a suit, provided there is on the record sufficient material to substantiate it.—7 Al. 230.

For the purpose of determining the question of jurisdiction the valuation of a suit should be computed according to the market-value of the subject-matter of the suit, and not according to the special rules applicable to valuation fixed in Act VII of 1870.—1 Bom. 543.

The valuation of suits, for the purpose of jurisdiction, is perfectly distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of court-fees. Therefore Court-fees Acts, which are fiscal enactments, are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction.—4 Bom. 515. (F. B.)

Where a person has preferred a claim to property attached in execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, and an order is passed against him, and he sues to establish his right to such property: Held that the value of the subject-matter in dispute in such suit, for the purposes of jurisdiction, will be the amount of such decree.—2 Al. 799.

Sec. 6 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with sec. 15 of Act X of 1877), which provides that "every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it," does not affect the jurisdiction of a subordinate Judge to try a suit wherein several causes of action are joined, the cumulative value of which is over Rs. 1,000 ; notwithstanding that, if separate suits had been brought on these several causes, such suits must have been instituted in the Court of the Munsif.—6 Cal. 6.

A suit was brought for a dissolution of partnership between plaintiff and 1st defendant, and for an account as between them. It was alleged in the plaint that plaintiff and 1st defendant entered into partnership in 1864 to work a jungle in the North Arcot district which had been leased to plaintiff for three years. That 4th defendant was subsequently admitted a partner, and that the contract was carried on under the style of R. T. and Co. That in March 1867, 4th defendant took up a contract in Madras, and another general partnership was established, of which plaintiff and 1st defendant were members ; that the funds of the 1st firm became incorporated in the 2nd firm, which was styled K. T. and K., and that this firm undertook several contracts in Madras and Chingleput. Finally, that the cause of action was the refusal of 1st defendant to account, and accrued in North Arcot district, where all the defendants resided permanently. The District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that, under sec. 265 of the Indian Contract Act, he had no jurisdiction. Held on appeal that the District Court of North Arcot had jurisdiction, as the defendants were residents within the district. That the provision in the Contract Act is permissive, and does not prohibit a suit elsewhere than at the place where the partnership was carried on if a sufficient ground of jurisdiction exists.—1 Madr. 340.

A testator bequeathed the income of his "altamgha," "zemindari," and "thikadari" lands, situate in the districts of Dehli, Hissar, and Bulandshahr, to his five sons in equal shares, and to their issue ; directing that one of the sharers should manage the estate, accounting yearly to the others, and receiving ten per cent. per annum. The lands described as "altamgha" were in the Bulandshahr district, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court of Meerut ; and on them an establishment was maintained at the expense of the estate. At Hansi, in Hissar, there was also a residence belonging to the estate, and another at Dehli. The will directed that the brothers might, if they liked, live together at Bilaspur, and build houses "with mutual consent in the "altamgha and zemin-dari," also that certain memorials of the testator were to be retained by the manager at Bilaspur. At this place the manager used to stay occasionally, though travelling, for the most part, about the estate during the cold weather. No particular place for rendering the yearly accounts was fixed, either by contract or in practice; but they were rendered by the manager to the sharers at different times and in different places, including Dehli, Bilaspur, and in Hansi; at which last place, it being the sadar station of Hissar, the older records of the estate were kept. When this suit was brought, the manager was actually residing at the hill station of Mussoorie, in the Saharanpur district, for the hot weather; and in his answer he stated that the unsettled accounts were open to inspection by the sharers at Bilaspur. Held that a person might "dwell" within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 5, at more places than one; and that, on the evidence, this manager so dwelt at Bilaspur as to make him subject to the jurisdiction of the Meerut Court in this suit. It was, accordingly, not necessary to consider whether he was or was not also subject to that Court's jurisdiction by reason of the cause of action having arisen within its local limits; nor was it necessary to consider whether he had or had not such a dwelling place at Hansi as would have rendered him subject to the jurisdiction of the Hissar (Panjab) Courts. Other questions disposed of in the Court of first instance having remained undecided by the High Court, which dealt with the question of jurisdiction alone, were considered with reference to whether there had or had not been shown any good reason for reversing or varying the order of the original Court. Among these, the question whether the manager's commission was to be calculated on the gross rental of the estate, or on the income divisible among the sharers, was held to be settled by the indication of the latter mode of calculation in the will.—3 Al. 91.

Suits to be instituted where subject-matter situate.

16. Subject to the pecuniary or other limitations prescribed by any law, suits

- (a) for the recovery of immoveable property,
- (b) for the partition of immoveable property,
- (c) for the foreclosure or redemption of a mortgage of immoveable property,
- (d) for the determination of any other right to, or interest in immoveable property,
- (e) for compensation for wrong to immoveable property,
- (f) for the recovery of moveable property actually under distraint or attachment, shall be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate:

Provided that suits to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immoveable property, held by or on behalf of the defendant, may, when the relief sought can be entirely obtained through his personal obedience, be instituted either in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate, or in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction he actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain.

Explanation.—In this section “property” means property situate in British India.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Court has no jurisdiction, in execution of a decree, to sell property over which it has no territorial jurisdiction at the time it passed the order of sale. The decree-holder at a sale under a mortgage decree purchased the mortgaged property with leave of the Court. Before the order of sale was passed, the mortgaged property had been transferred by an order of Government to the jurisdiction of another Court. Held by the Full Bench:—That the sale must be set aside as being without jurisdiction. Kamini Soondari Chowdhurani v. Kali Prosonno Ghose, L. R., 12 I. A., 215; I. L. R., 12 Cal. 225, followed.—I. L. R., 17 Cal. 699.

A mortgaged at Calcutta to B his sayer compensation, payable at the General Treasury at Calcutta in respect of a certain hât within the Diamond Harbour sub-division. In a suit to enforce the mortgage bond in the Court of the Munsiff of Diamond Harbour, held, that sayer compensation did not partake of the nature of malikhana, that it was not immoveable property or any interest in immoveable property within the meaning of section 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that therefore the Munsiff had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.—19 Cal. 8.

In 1879 R gave J a bond containing a simple mortgage of immoveable property. Subsequently R and P jointly gave D a bond containing a simple mortgage of the same property. In 1881 D obtained a decree for the sale of the property under his mortgage, and it was put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiffs. In 1882 J obtained a decree in the Court of the Munsif of G, (within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property was not situated) for enforcement of his mortgage-bond by sale of the property. The plaintiffs objected to the sale, and, their objection having been disallowed, brought a suit for cancellation of J's decree, so far as it ordered the sale:—Held that J's decree could only be regarded as a simple money-decree, because, as shown by sec. 16 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Munsif had no power under the law to direct enforcement of hypothecation against immoveable property situate beyond the local limits of his jurisdiction, and neither the proviso to sec. 16 nor sec. 20 of the Code met the circumstances:—Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs were entitled in this suit to have it declared that J's decree was a simple money decree only, on the basis of which no process in execution could issue in respect of the property in dispute to oust the plaintiff's possession from any part of it.—8 Al. 117.

In a suit for foreclosure or sale of immoveable property, it appeared that the mortgagee had conveyed the mortgaged premises to trustees. The summons to one of the trustees was personally served upon his duly constituted agent, who was at the time of service in charge of the mortgaged premises. Held that the service was sufficient, the suit being one to obtain “relief respecting immoveable property” within the meaning of sec. 16 of Act XIV of 1882.—9 Cal. 733.

Held that, though both suits were properly cognizable by the Court at Cawnpore, yet the Sadr Court's order, which it was competent to pass under sec. 6, Act VIII of 1859, gave jurisdiction to the Principal Sadr Amin of another district, whose decision was not liable to be set aside for want of jurisdiction, in reference to the provisions of sec. 5 of that enactment.—1 Agra H. C. R., 178.

16A.* (1) When it is alleged to be uncertain within local of the jurisdiction of which of two or more Courts any immoveable property is situate, any one of those Courts may, if satisfied that there is ground for the alleged uncertainty, record a statement to that effect, and thereupon proceed to entertain and dispose of any suit relating to that property, and its decree in the suit shall have the same effect as if the property were situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction :

Place for institution of suit where local limits of jurisdiction of Courts are uncertain.

Provided that the suit is one with respect to which the Court is competent as regards the nature and value of the suit to exercise jurisdiction.

(2) Where a statement has not been recorded under subsection (1), and an objection is taken before an appellate or revisional Court that a decree or order in a suit relating to such property was made by a Court not having jurisdiction where the property is situate, the appellate or revisional Court shall not allow the objection if in its opinion there was, at the time of the institution of the suit, any reasonable ground for uncertainty as to the Court having jurisdiction with respect thereto.

17. Subject to the limitations aforesaid, all other suits shall be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction

Suits to be instituted, where defendants reside or cause of action arose.

(a) the cause of action arises, or
(b) all the defendants, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain ; or

(c) any of the defendants, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain : provided that either the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution.

* This section has been inserted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 6.

Explanation I.—Where a person has a permanent dwelling at one place, and also a lodging at another place for temporary purpose only, he shall be deemed to reside at both places in respect of any cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary lodging.

Explanation II.—A Corporation or Company shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in British India, or, in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate, office, at such place.

*Explanation III.—In suits arising out of contract, the cause of action arises within the meaning of this section at any of the following place, namely :—

- (i) the place where the contract was made ;
- (ii) the place where the contract was to be performed, or performance thereof completed :
- (iii) the place where in performance of the contract any money to which the suit relates was expressly or impliedly payable.

Illustrations.

(a) A is a tradesman in Calcutta. B carries on business in Delhi, B, by his agent in Calcutta, buys goods of A, and requests A to deliver them to the East Indian Railway Company. A delivers the goods accordingly in Calcutta. A may sue B for the price of the goods either in Calcutta, where the cause of action has arisen, or in Delhi, where B carries on business.

(b) A resides at Simla, B at Calcutta, and C at Delhi. A, B, and C, being together at Benares, B and C make a joint promissory note payable on demand, and deliver it to A. A may sue B and C at Benares, where the cause of action arose. He may also sue them at Calcutta, where B resides or at Delhi, where C resides ; but in each of these cases, if the non-resident defendant objects, the suit cannot be maintained without the leave of the Court.

Notes

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In all applications under sec. 4, Act XXIII of 1861, in suits brought on a bond or other document, the place at which the document was executed must be definitely stated.—7 M. H. C. R., (App.) 34.

The actual presence of the defendant within the jurisdiction of the Court is not necessary, if he was there dwelling at the commencement of the suit, and a temporary dwelling is sufficient to give jurisdiction to a Small Cause Court.—5 M. H. C. R., 101.

Mere casual presence, or even residence for a temporary purpose, without the intention of remaining, is not dwelling within the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court within the meaning of sec. 4 of Act XLII of 1860. A person resided at Coimbatore, but had some cultivated land within the local jurisdiction of Ootacamund, to which place he came to answer another demand against him. Held that he did not dwell within the jurisdiction of the Ootacamund Small Cause Court.—2 M. H. C. R., 304.

* This explanation (iii.) has been inserted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act VII of 1888), sec. 7.

The defendant, an officer in a regiment stationed at Vellore, was sued for money due for the rent of a house occupied by him at Madras. While absent on leave on medical certificate, he rented the plaintiff's house at Madras, where he was residing at the time of the institution of the suit; but he returned to Vellore previous to the hearing of the suit. The Small Cause Court Judge of Vellore held that the defendant was dwelling at Vellore at the time of the institution of the suit within the meaning of sec. 8, Act XI of 1865. Held that there was nothing in point of law to prevent the Judge from affirming his jurisdiction.—5 M. H. C. R., 471.

An order from the High Court was necessary to enable a Court of Small Causes to entertain a suit against several obligors, one of whom, at the time of filing the plaint, was neither resident nor personally working for gain within the limits of its jurisdiction. Such order should be applied for after the reception of the plaint, upon a statement of the circumstances of the particular case. Sec. 21 of Act XLII of 1860 was to have the same operation as if Act XXIII of 1861 had formed part of Act VIII of 1859 when it became law.—1 M. H. C. R., 103.

Since the passing of the Madras Civil Courts Act (III. of 1873) the general control over all the Civil Courts is vested in the District Judge to whom the application should be made. It is only in cases where the defendant is beyond the local jurisdiction of the District Court, and the Court before whom the suit is instituted has not otherwise jurisdiction under Act XI of 1865, sec. 8, that a reference to the High Court is necessary.—8 M. H. C. R., (App.) 10.

A suit for debt against two defendants, whose liability was joint, but one of whom at the time of filing the plaint was neither resident nor personally working for gain within the limits of the jurisdiction, might be tried by a Small Cause Court within whose jurisdiction the other defendant was resident at the time of the commencement of the suit, provided an order was obtained from the High Court under sec. 4 of Act XXIII of 1861.—3 M. H. C. R., 374.

A servant residing within the jurisdiction of one Small Cause Court, who has a family-house within the limits of the jurisdiction of another Small Cause Court in which his father lives, and which he himself occasionally visits, does not dwell within the local limits of the latter Court within the meaning of sec. 8 of Act XI of 1865, and, although the cause of action may have arisen there, a suit against him will not lie in that Court.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 409.

Where a pleader resides within the limits of a cantonment, and practises as a pleader within the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court, both the Cantonment Magistrate and the Small Cause Court Judge have concurrent jurisdiction over him to the amounts respectively cognizable by them.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 187.

The provisions of sec. 4 of Act XXIII of 1861 were applicable to Courts of Small Causes in the mofussil.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 256.

Although a defendant may be temporarily absent from his dwelling-house, yet if he retains the same, he will be held to dwell there within the meaning of the Small Cause Court Act XI of 1865. To dwell in a place is to have one's permanent abode there.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 121.

In the case of a person attached to a regiment stationed at Shahjehanpore, who had been gazetted to two years' furlough in India, served with a summons issued out of the Small Cause Court at Meerut whilst attending a race meeting at the latter place in respect of a debt contracted beyond the jurisdiction of that Court, held that, if he had not availed himself of furlough, but was only present on short leave at Meerut, he was not dwelling within the jurisdiction of the Meerut Court, or, if having availed himself of furlough, he retained his permanent residence at Shahjehanpore, and merely visited Meerut for a few days, he was in that case also not dwelling at Meerut, but if, having availed himself of furlough, and having retained no permanent place of residence at Shahjehanpore, not having any permanent place of residence elsewhere, he attended the race meeting at Meerut with the intention of leaving that place after the races, and of proceeding elsewhere in the enjoyment of his furlough, in such case he must be held to have been dwelling at Meerut when the summons was served.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 25.

Where the cause of action occurs in the jurisdiction of a Court other than that in which the suit is brought, the plaintiff must, under the provision of sec. 17, Act X of 1877, show that the defendant, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resided or carried on business, or personally worked for gain, within jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was brought.—6 C. L. R., 417.

Temporary imprisonment beyond the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court was held not to bar the jurisdiction of that Court in respect of defendants who formerly resided within its jurisdiction, and whose families continued to reside within it, the inference from the latter fact being that the defendants had an intention of returning to their former place of abode on the termination of their imprisonment.—7 W. R., 349.

A suit against a woman living under the protection of her husband is not cognizable in a Small Cause Court, if at the time of the commencement of the suit, the husband does not dwell, nor personally or through a servant or agent carry on business, or work for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court.—10 W. R., 240.

A person, who carries on business at a place by a commission-agent, to whom he only consigns goods, cannot be said to carry on business or personally to work for gain within the local limits of a Court where the commission agent resides.—11 W. R., 530.

A suit against an Agent to the Governor-General, on the part of Government, is substantially a suit against Government, and ought, under sec. 9, Act XI of 1865, to be brought in a Court having jurisdiction at the seat of Government.—10 W. R., 142.

A suit by a gumashta for excess expenses incurred by him over and above the amount of rents collected by him was held to be cognizable in the Small Cause Court, notwithstanding that the nature of the defence might render it necessary to investigate the accounts of the mehal.—7 W. R., 422.

On the 29th May 1873 one T drew from the hands of a shroff a sum of money which had been deposited by him in the name and to the credit of a third person. On the death of such third person his heirs sued the shroff to recover the sum deposited, and on the 30th January 1878 obtained a decree, in satisfaction of which the shroff paid the decretal money into Court on the 15th January 1883. On the 5th February 1884, the shroff sued T, the heirs of the third party, and another person (who owned to having received some of the money from T), to recover the sum he had been compelled to pay under the decree of 1878. Held that the plaintiff's cause of action arose at the time when he actually paid down the money of the 15th January 1883, and that the suit therefore was not barred by limitation.—I. L. R., 13 Cal. 155.

Sec. 65 of 21 & 22 Vic., c. 106, does not constitute the Secretary of State a body corporate, but simply lays down that that officer and department are to be sued as a body corporate. A suit, therefore, brought against the Secretary of State is not one against any person or any real body corporate, but is one brought against a nominal defendant, such nominal defendant being put upon the record merely to enable the plaintiff to obtain the remedy secured to him by sec. 65. The words "cause of action in sec. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, mean all those things necessary to give a right of action; and in a suit for breach of contract, where leave has not been obtained to sue under that section, it must be established that the contract as well as the breach have taken place within the local limits of the Court. The work carried on by the Government of India in governing the country, in salt, opium, &c., although carried on by Government officers in charge of the several departments of Government, is not, properly speaking, business carried on by Government, but work carried on for the benefit of the Indian Exchequer. The words of sec. 12, "carry on business or personally work for gain," are, however, inapplicable to the Secretary of State for India in Council.—14 Cal. 256.

The fixed and permanent home of a man's wife and family, and to which he has always the intention of returning, will constitute his dwelling-place within the meaning of sec. 5 of Act VIII of 1859, and sec. 4 of Act XXIII of 1861.—1 Al. 51.

An application was made to the District Judge of Allahabad, under sec. 1 of Act IX of 1861, by a relative of a minor, alleging that the minor had, by the acts and with the connivance and assistance of the defendants, at Allahabad, been removed from the plaintiff's custody and guardianship at Allahabad, and praying for the minor's restoration thereto. At the time when the application was made, the minor was at Lahore. Held that, under secs. 1, 4 of Act IX of 1861, read with sec. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code, the application was cognizable by the District Judge of Allahabad, where the cause of action arose; and that, even apart from sec. 17 of the Code, the minor having been in the custody and guardianship of a person within the jurisdiction of the Judge of Allahabad, that officer had full jurisdiction to deal with the application.—12 Al. 213.

Where a promissory note is executed in one district, and it is agreed that the amount of the note shall be paid in another, the Courts of the latter district have jurisdiction to entertain a suit on the note. The illustrations to sec. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure afford no safe guide as to what is meant in the Code by the term 'cause of action.' Gopi Krishna Gossami v. Nil Komul Banerjee (13 B. L. R., 451; 22 W. R., 79), Mahomed Abdul Kadar v. E. I. Ry. Co. (I. L. R., 1 Madr. 377), and Vaughan v. Weldon (L. R., 10 C. P. 48), approved.—9 Cal. 105.

The expression "cause of action," as used in sec. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not mean whole cause of action, but includes material part of the cause of action. In a suit for compensation for breach of a contract, the making of the contract is a material part of the cause of action. Held, therefore, where a contract was made at C, and broken at A, that the Court at C had jurisdiction to try the suit for compensation for the breach of such contract. Lewhellin v. Chunni Lal (I. L. R., 4 Al. 423) and Gopikrishna Gossami v. Nilkomul Banerjee (13 B. L. R., 461) followed. DeSouza v. Coles (3 Madr. H. C. R., 384) and Jumoonah Pershad v. Zai-bunnissa (5 C. L. R., 268) dissented from.—5 Al. 277.

C and L entered into an agreement at a place in the Saran district, in which the latter resided and carried on business, whereby C promised to sell and deliver to L at a place in the Saran district certain goods, and L promised to pay for such goods on delivery “by approved draft on Calcutta or Cawnpore (where C carried on business), payable thirty days after the receipt of the goods, or by Government currency notes.” C delivered the goods according to his promise, but L did not pay for the same, and C, therefore, sued L for the price of the goods, suing him at Cawnpore. Held that the “cause of action,” within the meaning of sec. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code, was L’s breach of his promise to pay for the goods; that the parties intended that payment should be made at Cawnpore, and the cause of action, therefore, arose there; and that, therefore, the suit had been properly instituted there.—4 Al. 423.

18. In suits for compensation for wrong done to person or moveable property, if the wrong was done within the local limits of the jurisdiction of one Court, and the defendant resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another Court, the plaintiff may, at his option, sue in either of the said Courts.

Illustrations.

(a) A, residing in Delhi, beats B in Calcutta. B may sue A either in Calcutta or in Delhi.

(b) A, residing in Delhi, publishes in Calcutta statements defamatory of B. B may sue A either in Calcutta or in Delhi.

(c) A, travelling on the line of a Railway Company whose principal office is at Howrah, is upset and injured at Allahabad by negligence imputable to the Company. He may sue the Company either at Howrah or at Allahabad.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

19. If the suit be to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property situate within the limits of a single district, but within the jurisdiction of different Courts, the suit may be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate; provided that, in respect of the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the entire claim be cognizable by such Court.

Suits for immovable property situate in single district, but within jurisdiction of different Courts.

If the immovable property be situate within the limits of different districts, the suit may be instituted in any Court, otherwise competent to try it, within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A decree obtained in a suit, brought under the provisions of sec. 19 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajshahye on a mortgage of certain properties situated in the districts and jurisdictions of Rajshahye and Nyadumka, directed that the properties mentioned in the mortgage should be sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of the mortgage-debt. The properties were sold by the Court of Rajshahye. Held that the authority given by sec. 19 of the Code included an authority to make the order for the sale of the properties, and that the Rajshahye Court was within its jurisdiction in directing and carrying out the sale. Quære—Whether, where a sale takes place under a money-decree of property partly within the local limits of the Court whose decree is being executed, and partly without that Court's jurisdiction, the sale of the property without the jurisdiction would be valid and binding in consequence of the provisions of secs. 19 and 223 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Per GHOSE, J.—Sec. 223 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely provides that when it may be necessary for a Court to send a decree for execution to another Court by reason of the property being situate beyond its local jurisdiction, it ought to do so; and the words of sub-section (c), “sale of immoveable property situate without the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it,” contemplate a case where the whole of the property, and not any portion of it, is situate beyond the local limits of the Court which passes the decree.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 661.

Under Act X of 1877, sec. 19, it is not necessary to obtain the leave of the Court under cl. 12 of the Chapter to sue in respect of immoveable property situate partly within and partly without the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court.—3 Cal. 370.

A suit was instituted on a mortgage of a single revenue-paying estate in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the district of Backergunge, under the provisions of sec. 19, Act X of 1877, and a decree was obtained for the sale of the mortgaged property. On an application for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it, held that the Court was competent to order a sale of the whole of the mortgaged property, though only a portion of it was situated in the district of Backergunge. Kally Prosunno Bose v. Dinonath Mullick (11 B. L. R., 56; 19 W. R., 434) followed and cited.—8 Cal. 703.

A, the mortgagee, under a bond, of properties situated in district B and C, sued in the B Court on his bond, and obtained a decree for the mortgage-money and interest, with a declaration that the decree should be satisfied by sale of all the mortgaged property. A had not obtained the permission of the High Court under sec. 12, Act VIII of 1859, which was necessary to enable him to proceed against the property in the C district. Having attached and sold all properties comprised in his decree situate within the jurisdiction of the B Court, A, under a certificate issued by such Court, obtained an order from the C Court attaching lands included in his decree situate in that district. D intervened, on the ground that he had purchased the same property in execution of another decree of the C Court against the same judgment-debtor, and the property was released from attachment. A then sued D and the mortgagor to enforce his mortgage-line against the property in the C district. Held that the B Court had jurisdiction to give A a decree for the amount of the mortgage-money and interest, though it had not power to enforce the decree against the property in the C district ; that the only effect of the decree was to change the nature of the original debt, which was a bond-debt, into a judgment-debt for the mortgage-money and interest ; and that though A could not enforce his lien against the property in the C district under the decree of the B Court, yet, as that property had been sold to a third person, D, he was at liberty to sue D to establish his lien for the mortgage-debt and interest.—5 Cal. 928.

20. If a suit which may be instituted in more than one

Power to stay proceedings where all defendants did not reside within jurisdiction.

Court is instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant or all the defendants does not or do not actually and voluntarily reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, the defendant or any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the Court to stay proceedings, apply to the Court accordingly ;

and if the Court, after hearing such of the parties as desire to be heard, is satisfied that justice is more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court, it may stay proceedings either finally or till further order, and make such order as it thinks fit as to the costs already incurred by the parties or any of them.

In such case, if the plaintiff so requires, the Court shall return the plaint with an endorsement thereon of the order staying proceedings.

Every such application shall be made at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases before the issues as settled ; and any defendant not so applying shall be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit.*

Application when to be made.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial S. C. Courts, except para. 4.

The plaintiff brought this suit in the High Court at Bombay against the defendant for defamation alleged to be contained in a notice that appeared in the Bombay Gazette on the 9th April 1888. The defendant was the chairman of the Hinganghat Mill Company. The plaintiff had been for some years secretary and manager of that company. In April 1888, he was dismissed from his appointment, and shortly afterwards he filed a suit (No. I of 1888) in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner at Wardha, in the Central Provinces (which was the Court of the district in which Hinganghat is situated), for wrongful dismissal. The present suit was filed in July 1888. The defendant took out a summons calling on the plaintiff to show cause why the suit should not be stayed, and the plaint returned to the plaintiff, in order that, if he thought proper, it might be presented to the Court at Wardha. The defendant relied on the following points :—(1) that neither he nor the plaintiff resided or carried on business at Bombay ; (2) that all the defendant's witnesses resided at Wardha ; (3) that the other suit (No. 1 of 1883) was pending at Wardha, and that the decree of that suit would decide the present case also. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to sue in Bombay.—1. L. R., 13 Bom. 178.

A, who was employed by B and Co. as their agent at Calicut, instituted a suit for the balance of an account against his principals in the Court of the Subordinate Judge there in July 1878. In December of the same year, B and Co. instituted the present suit against A for an account and for damages caused by his alleged negligence. Held that, as in both suits practically the same issues were triable, A was entitled as having been first to institute his suit to proceed in the Court in which he had chosen to bring his suit, and to have the other suit stayed, but without prejudice to the right of the plaintiffs in the latter suit to institute a cross-claim in the Calicut Court.—4 C. L. R., 282.

21. Where the Court, under sec. 20, stays proceedings, and the plaintiff re-institutes his suit in another Court, the plaint shall not be chargeable with any court-fee; provided that the proper fee has been levied on the institution of the suit in the former Court, and that the plaint has been returned by such Court.

Remission of court-fee where suit instituted in another Court.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

22. Where a suit may be instituted in more Courts than one, and such Courts are subordinate to the same Appellate Court, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to such Court to transfer the suit to another Court, may apply accordingly ; and the Appellate Court, after hearing the other parties, if they desire to be heard, shall determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Procedure where Courts in which suit may be instituted subordinate to same Appellate Court.

23. Where such Courts are subordinate to different Appellate Courts, but are subordinate to the same High Court, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court to transfer the suit to another Court having jurisdiction, may apply accordingly. If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objections (if any) filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate. The High Court may, after considering the objections (if any) of the other parties, determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Procedure where they are not so subordinate.

Notes.

Sec. 23 of Act XIV of 1882 is only intended to provide for those cases where, on the ground of expense or convenience or some other good reason, the Court thinks that the place of trial ought to be changed. Parties desirous of obtaining the transfer of a case from one forum to another ought clearly to explain to the Court by petition and affidavit what is the nature of the claim and the defence; they should further state what are the issues and the evidence required, and then satisfy the Court that, either on the ground of expense or convenience or otherwise, the place of trial ought to be changed.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 980.

The fact that portion of the property, the whole of which is sued for in the Court of the Munsif of A, is of less value than the remaining portion, which is within the jurisdiction of the Munsif of B, is no sufficient ground for an application under the Code of Civil Procedure, sec. 23, for a transfer to the latter Court. A party applying under sec. 23, Act X of 1877, must first of all give notice to the other side. The application should then be received by the Munsif, and transmitted to the High Court through the District Court.—2 C. L. R., 352.

Where such Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court within whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate, apply accordingly.

Procedure where they are subordinate to different High Courts.

If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objection (if any) filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate;

and such High Court shall, after considering the objections (if any) of the other parties, determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Notes.

Sec. 24 of the Civil Procedure Code does not empower a High Court to transfer a suit instituted within its own jurisdiction to the jurisdiction of another High Court, but only to declare in which Court a suit shall proceed, and, if necessary, to stay all further proceedings within its own jurisdiction. The defendants, in a suit instituted at Mainpuri, who resided and carried on business at Surat, applied under sec. 24 of the Civil Procedure Code that the suit might be tried at Surat, on the ground that it would be tried with greater convenience to them at that place. Held that, there being no balance in favour of either justice or convenience on the side of the Surat Court, the suit should proceed at Mainpuri.—I. L. R., 5 Al. 60.

Where a person, being at the time a pauper, petitions, under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, for leave to sue as a pauper, but subsequently, pending an inquiry into his pauperism, obtains funds which enable him to pay the court-fees, and his petition is allowed upon such payment to be numbered and registered as a plaint, his suit shall be deemed to have been instituted from the date when he filed his pauper-petition, and limitation runs against him only up to that time. Sec. 13, Act VIII of 1859, enacts that when a suit is brought for immoveable property situated within districts subject to different Sadr Courts, the Judge in whose Court the suit is brought shall apply to the Sadr Court to which he is subject for authority to proceed, and the Sadr Court to which the application is made, with the concurrence of the other Sadr Court within whose jurisdiction the property is partly situated, may give authority to proceed. But no power is expressly given in the section cited, or elsewhere in the Act, to direct the transfer of a suit brought in a Court subordinate to one Sadr Court to a Court subordinate to another Sadr Court. Query.—Whether Sadr Courts acting in concurrence have power to make such a transfer?—2 Al. 241.

25. The High Court or District Court may, on the application of any of the parties, after giving notice to the parties, and hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion without giving such notice, withdraw any suit, whether pending in a court of First Instance or in a Court of Appeal subordinate to such High Court or District Court, as the case may be, and try the suit itself, or transfer it for trial to any other such subordinate Court competent to try the same in respect of its nature, and the amount or value of its subject-matter.

For the purposes of this section, the Courts of Additional and Assistant Judges shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court.

The Court trying any suit withdrawn under this section from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Court refused to transfer a case from the mofussil, where there were, among other alleged reasons, suggestions that the plaintiff's case might be prejudiced by being tried in the mofussil, and that difficult and intricate questions of law would arise in the case, the Court not being satisfied by the evidence that such reasons existed.—9 B. L. R., 10.

On an application under the Letters Patent, 1865, cl. 13, for the removal of a suit, held that, having regard to the whole circumstances connected with the case from the beginning, the questions to be disposed of, and the conduct of the Judge before whom the proceedings were, it was proper and necessary for the purposes of justice that the suit should be removed.—10 B. L. R., 168.

Where a suit was originally instituted in the Hooghly Court, and H S, who was a defendant, and not subject to the jurisdiction of that Court, joined in an application to have the case tried by the High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, which application was granted, held per PHEAR, J., that the suit must be treated as if the plaint had been originally filed in the High Court, the proceedings in the Hooghly Court being, without jurisdiction, and the cause of action having arisen wholly within the jurisdiction of the High Court. Held on appeal by PEACOCK, C. J., and MACPHERSON, J., that the defendant H S, by joining in the application to have the suit removed to the High Court, admitted the jurisdiction of that Court to try the suit in the exercise of its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, and could not afterwards dispute the jurisdiction. The law, therefore, to be administered by the High Court must be the same law and equity which ought to have been applied if the suit had been tried in the Court at Hooghly. Per MACPHERSON, J.—The law, which would have been applicable to the case if it had been tried at Hooghly, is practically the same as the English law, whatever may be the nationality of the parties.—4 B. L. R., (O. C.) 1; 12 W. R., (O. C.) 13.

Where, on 3rd March 1870, the Government issued a notification under secs. 4 and 5, Madr. Act IV of 1863, investing the Additional Principal Sudder Ameen of Mangalore with exclusive jurisdiction to try Small Cause suits for sums under Rs. 500 within the jurisdiction of the District Munsif, held that the Munsif had no power after the notification to transfer to the Principal Sudder Ameen an application pending before himself at the date of the notification under sec. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, the notification not being retrospective in its operation.—6 M. H. C. R., 18.

Where a plaintiff presented a plaint to the District Court, the Subordinate Judge's Court, in which he ought to have presented it, being then temporarily closed, it was held that the District Court could not be considered a Court of first instance, competent to receive the plaint. The decision in In re Ganesh Sadashiv (5 Bom. A. C. 117) overruled; and Motilal Ramdas v. Jamnadas Javerdas (2 Bom. A. C. 42) followed.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 495.

The power given by sec. 6 of Act VIII of 1859 to a Zillah Judge for the withdrawal of suits from subordinate Courts should only be exercised upon cause shown, and ordinarily not without opportunity given to the parties to the suit to be heard upon the question. The terms of sec. 6 were inapplicable to suits which the subordinate Court had received by order of remand from a Court to which the District Court was itself subordinate. A suit sent by the High Court to a subordinate Court under a remand to the High Court by Her Majesty's order in Council, and in which, under the Council's remand order, the plaint has been amended, a new statement filed, and new issues framed, is substantially a new suit.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 481.

Where it is desired to have a number of suits transferred, a separate application should be made in each case for transfer.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 147.

Held that, though both suits were properly cognizable by the Court at Cawnpore, yet the Sadr Court's order, which it was competent to pass under sec. 6, Act VIII of 1859, gave jurisdiction to the Principal Sudder Ameen of another district, whose decision was not liable to be set aside for want of jurisdiction, in reference to the provisions of sec. 5 of that enactment.—1 Agra H. C. R., 178.

A suit within the cognisance of the Small Cause Court cannot be lawfully transferred for trial to a Munsif's Court.—13 W. R., 399.

A case remanded to a District Judge for the purpose of a local inquiry cannot be transferred to a Subordinate Judge for disposal.—15 W. R., 574.

A Judge had no authority under Act XVI of 1868 to order a Subordinate Judge to try proceedings in execution of a decree which were a portion of the original civil suit tried by himself.—15 W. R., 48.

Though a Subordinate Judge may very properly, if he find the subject-matter of a suit to be of the value of less than Rs. 1,000, transfer it for trial to a Munsif, yet a Subordinate Judge is empowered under sec. 19, Act VI of 1871, to try causes of any value.—25 W. R., 219.

The Court will order a suit to be removed from the mofussil, and tried in the High Court, when difficult points of English law arise, and when generally it appears to be an unfit case to be tried in the mofussil.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 94.

The High Court at Calcutta had no jurisdiction over the Court of the Sessions Judge at Allahabad, such Court not being subject to the superintendence of the High Court under the 13th section of the Charter.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 219.

Where a case was originally tried by a Zillah Judge, and on appeal to the High Court on its appellate side, the Judges of that Court remanded it to the Court below for a fresh trial, intimating that it was a proper case to be transferred under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent constituting the High Court; and where it appeared that questions of English law were involved in the case, that the witnesses and parties were chiefly British subjects, and the plaintiff an officer of the High Court and resident in Calcutta, the Court ordered the case to be transferred for trial to the High Court, original jurisdiction.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 227.

A suit for the infringement of certain inventions, instead of being instituted in the Court having, by virtue of sec. 22 of Act XV of 1859, jurisdiction to entertain it, was instituted in a Court subordinate to such Court not having such jurisdiction. The Court, having jurisdiction to entertain such suit, at the joint request of the parties, transferred it for trial to itself under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, and tried it. Held in the High Court that, inasmuch as the parties had assented to the transfer of the suit, and its transfer brought it into the right Court, the fact that the suit, had been originally instituted in the wrong Court did not render the transfer illegal, and the Court having jurisdiction had properly tried the suit.—Petman v. Bull, I. L. R., 5 Al. 371. But held by the Privy Council (reversing this decision) that under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code the superior Court cannot make an order of transfer of a case unless the Court from which the transfer is sought to be made has jurisdiction to try it. Peary Lall Mozoomdar v. Komal Kishore Dassia (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 30) approved. A suit having been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, who was incompetent to try it, the case was transferred by consent of parties to the Court of the District Judge for convenience of trial. Held that such transference was incompetent, and that such consent did not operate as a waiver of the plea to the jurisdiction which was taken in the defendant's written statement, and subsequently insisted upon.—L. R., 13 I. A., 134.

Sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) only enables a District Court to transfer a suit pending in a Court subordinate to itself, and not to transfer a suit which is pending in its own Court. Accordingly, where a District Judge made an order to retransfer to the original Court certain suits pending in his Court which had been previously transferred to his Court from a subordinate Court, held that the order of retransfer was ultra vires, and should be discharged.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 654.

In a suit under Reg. IV of 1816, the defendant having objected to the Village Munsif trying the suit on the ground of personal hostility, the Munsif transferred the suit to another Village Munsif. Held that this transfer was illegal. *Per HUTCHINS, J.—Semble—*In such a case the Village Munsif should report the facts to the District Court, and the District Judge should transfer the case for trial to another Village Munsif.—8 Madr. 500.

Where the trial of a suit was commenced by a Subordinate Judge, and then transferred by the District Judge to his own file under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the latter did not retake the evidence, but dealt with the case as it came to him from the Subordinate Judge, and dismissed the suit, held that the District Judge had not tried the case within the meaning of sec. 25 of the Code.—7 Al. 342.

A suit for land was filed in 1883 in the Subordinate Court of Cochin. In 1884 the Government, by a notification under Act III of 1874, transferred the district where the land was situated from the jurisdiction of that Court to that of the Subordinate Court of Calicut, whereupon the plaintiff applied to the District Court to transfer the case to the file of the first-mentioned Court under sec. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge granted the application without notice to the defendants. The defendants went to trial, and also preferred an appeal against the decree, which was passed in favour of the plaintiff, without objection to the jurisdiction of the the Court. In execution of the above decree (which was affirmed on appeal), the plaintiff was obstructed. He, therefore, filed the present suit against the obstructors under the provisions of sec. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and they pleaded that the decree sought to be executed had been passed without jurisdiction :—Held, (1) that the want of notice to the defendants of the application made under sec. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure was immaterial ; (2) that the defect, if any, of the jurisdiction of the Court passing the decree had been waived by the defendants, and that the present defendants were precluded from availing themselves of it.—13 Madr. 211.

An order for the transfer of a suit from one Court to another, under sec. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, cannot be made unless the suit has been brought in a Court having jurisdiction. The judgment in Peary Lall Mozoomdar v. Komal Kishore Dassia (6 Cal. 30.) entirely approved. When a suit has been tried by a Court having no jurisdiction over the matter, the parties cannot, by their mutual consent, convert the proceedings into a judicial process : although, when the merits have been submitted to a Court, it may result that, having themselves constituted it their arbiter, the parties may be bound by its decision. On the other hand, in a suit tried by a competent Court, the parties having, without objection, joined issue, and gone to trial upon the merits, cannot subsequently dispute the jurisdiction on the ground of irregularities in the initial procedure, which, if objected to at the time, would have led to the dismissal of the suit. A suit, having been instituted in a Court not of competent jurisdiction, was transferred, with the consent of parties, to a Court which was competent ; but the defence of jurisdiction was set up before the issues were fixed, and was afterwards insisted on throughout. Held that in the single fact that the defendant had personally concurred in the transfer, there had been no waiver of the right to maintain in this defence, and that the suit must be dismissed on the ground that it was not competently brought. A Court of appeal, having set aside the whole of the proceedings including the plaint, directed that a new plaint be presented in the proper Court. Held that this order, equivalent to directing the plaintiff to institute a new suit, was wrong ; and that, with only the alternative of having leave to withdraw the suit and bring a new , his suit should have been dismissed.—9 Al. 191.

There is nothing in the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882), or the High Courts Act (24 and 25 Vic., c. 104), or the Letters Patent, which prevents the High Court from calling for the record of the proceedings in the winding up of a company under the Companies Act, and transferring those proceedings to its own file. Such a power is given to the High Court by sec. 647 read with sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code. Where, in the proceedings in the winding up of a company under Act VI of 1882, an order was passed admitting the proof of a particular creditor of the company before any liquidator had been appointed,—held, that this was an irregularity which by itself would justify the High Court in sending for the record. Where the District Judge conducting the proceedings in the winding up of a company under Act VI of 1882 had, after receiving notice of the admission by the High Court of a petition for transfer of those proceedings to its own file, drafted and placed upon the record an order which it might have been difficult for him to reconsider if the matter again came before him, and where the case appeared to be one in which serious questions of law were likely to arise which it would probably be difficult to discuss adequately in the District Court, in the absence of the authorities upon the subject and of any rules framed by the High Court for dealing with windings up under the Act, and the case was of a kind which would probably come before the High Court in a variety of appeals from orders brought by one side or the other,—held that, under these circumstances, the case was a proper one for the exercise of the High Court's jurisdiction by calling up the winding up proceedings to its own file. A person who has been appointed liquidator of a company ought not, after such appointment, to continue to act as vakil of a creditor whose right to prove against the company is in dispute in the liquidation.—9 Al. 180.

The plaintiff brought his suit in a Munsiff's Court to recover a sum of money. The District Judge transferred the suit to a Sub Court and the latter Court passed a decree. The decree-holder applied to the Subordinate Judge's Court for execution of his decree. By an order of the District Court the execution proceedings were transferred to the munsiff's file. The judgment-debtor objected to the jurisdiction of the Munsiff on the ground that the district Court had no power to transfer execution proceedings from one Court to another. Held, that the District Court has no power to transfer execution proceedings from one Court to another and that the power is limited only to transfer suits.—15 Cal. 177.

The High Court cannot make an order of transfer of a case under Act X of 1877, sec. 25, unless the Court from which the transfer is sought to be made has jurisdiction to try it.—6 Cal. 30. Also 6 Cal. 60.

A District Court transferred for trial a suit instituted in a Court subordinate to it to another Court subordinate to it. The Court in which the suit was instituted was not the one in which the suit should have been instituted, and consequently the Court to which it was transferred made an order dismissing it, and directing the return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Held that such order must be taken to have been made under sec. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was therefore appealable under sec. 588 (6); and that the defect of jurisdiction arising out of the institution of the suit in the wrong Court was not cured by the transfer of the suit.—4 Al. 478.

Secs. 25 and 647 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) are both applicable to Courts of Small Causes in the mofussal, and the former section is extended by the latter to execution-proceedings in such Courts. Under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877, the District Judge has power to withdraw an application for execution of a decree from a subordinate Court (such as a mofussal Court of Small Causes), and to dispose of it himself, or to transfer it to another subordinate Court competent to deal with it. The distinction made for the purposes of limitation between suits, appeals, and applications by the Limitation Acts, has no bearing upon a question of jurisdiction.—5 Bom. 680.

A suit of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes was instituted in the Court of a Subordinate Judge—the Judge of which, at the time of the institution of the suit, was personally invested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction. That Judge retired from office without trying the suit, and the District Judge directed his successor, who was not invested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction, to try it, and he did so. Held that it must be taken that the suit was transferred under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code to the Court of the Subordinate Judge; and that, therefore, regard being had to the provisions of that section, that the Court trying any suit withdrawn thereunder from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed a Court of Small Causes, no appeal would lie in the case to the District Judge.—5 Al. 274.

A suit for the infringement of certain inventions, instead of being instituted in the Court having, by virtue of sec. 22 of Act XV of 1859, jurisdiction to entertain it, was instituted in a Court subordinate to such Court not having such jurisdiction. The Court having jurisdiction to entertain such suit, at the joint request of the parties, transferred it for trial to itself under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, and tried it. The plaintiff did not, as required by sec. 34 of Act XV of 1859, deliver with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of in the suit. In this plaint, after describing his inventions, he alleged generally that the defendant had made and used them at a certain place without his license. Held that, inasmuch as the parties had assented to the transfer of the suit, and its transfer brought it into the right Court, the fact that the suit had been originally instituted in the wrong Court did not render the transfer illegal, and the Court having jurisdiction had properly tried the suit. Held also that, as required by sec. 24 of Act XV of 1859, the plaintiff should have delivered with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of; that the general allegation as to infringement contained in the plaint did not amount to such particulars; and that, under these circumstances, the plaintiff came in to Court with a case which could not be tried.—5 Al. 371.

An officer who exercises executive and judicial functions having himself dealt with a certain matter, and formed and expressed an opinion upon its merits in his executive capacity, and having further advised and directed litigation in support of this view, is, in consequence, disqualified from dealing as a Judge with this same question when it comes into Court and has to be dealt with judicially.—10 Cal. 915.

Held that an order under sec. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, transferring a suit in which an appeal would lie from the decree made there, was not subject to revision by the High Court under sec. 622.—6 Al. 237.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 437, noted under sec. 215.

CHAPTER III.

OF PARTIES, AND THEIR APPEARANCES, APPLICATIONS, AND ACTS.

26. All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action. And judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to, without any amendment.

Persons who may be joined as plaintiffs. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who is not found entitled to relief, unless the Court, in disposing of the costs of the suit, otherwise directs.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the joinder of plaintiffs with antagonistic claims arising out of distinct causes of action. Where one of two widows of a deceased Hindu and her adopted son sued as co-plaintiffs, claiming in the alternative either to recover the whole family-estate for the latter, if the adoption was valid, or, if the adoption was invalid, one-half of the estate for the former: Held that the suit was bad for misjoinder. Held also that when such misjoinder had been allowed, and the suit decided, and an appeal brought, the Court of Appeal should dispose of the suit in the mode in which the lower Court ought to have disposed of it by returning the plaint for amendment. Farzand Ali v. Yusuf Ali (I. L. R., 2 Al. 669) dissented from.—I. L. R., 6 Madr. 239.

Unless there is a special provision of the law, co-owners are not permitted to sue through some or one of their members, but all co-owners must join in a suit to recover their property. The defendant cannot be deprived of his right to insist on the other co-owners being joined on the record, by the fact that they approve of the suit being brought by the plaintiff alone.—10 Bom. 32.

The plaintiffs were the widow and an alleged adopted son of one Irapa, who was the uncle of the defendant Rudrapa. In execution of a decree against Rudrapa the property in dispute was attached. The plaintiffs intervened and objected to the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to Irapa and not to Rudrapa, the judgment-debtor. This objection was disallowed. Thereupon the plaintiffs filed a regular suit to set aside the attachment. The Court of first instance decided in plaintiffs' favour. The defendants appealed. The lower appellate Court was of opinion that the interests of the two plaintiffs were antagonistic, and following the decision in Lingummal v. Chinna, held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties. The case was thereupon remanded for an amendment of the plaint. On appeal to the High Court. Held, reversing the remand order, that the objection for misjoinder as co-plaintiffs not having been taken by the defendant in the Court of first instance, the appellate Court ought not, under section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to have allowed the objection. Held also that as plaintiff No. 2 admitted the adoption of plaintiff No. 1, their claims were in no way antagonistic. They were both jointly interested in disproving defendant's title. They could therefore sue jointly under section 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Lingummal v. Chiuna distinguished.—16 Bom 119.

Suit by six plaintiffs praying for a declaration that certain proceedings of a District Temple Committee removing them from office as trustees of a temple were illegal. Defendants pleaded that the suit would not lie because of misjoinder, and also because further relief might have been sought:—Held that, under sec. 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the plaintiffs could not sue jointly, and that the plaint should be returned for amendment, one of the plaintiffs to be allowed to use it as his own. Held also that, unless there had been an actual ouster from office, a declaratory suit would lie.—8 Madr. 361.

Thirteen persons, who had been committed to jail under one warrant and for the same offence, jointly sued the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail for their wrongful detention in jail after the term of imprisonment to which they had been sentenced had expired, claiming Rs. 2, 600 as damages. The defendant applied to have the plaint taken off the file on the ground that the plaintiffs had improperly joined in one suit several distinct and separate causes of action belonging to them as separate individuals. Held that the plaint must be taken off the file.—11 Cal. 524.

The rule of English law that, in trading partnerships, although the right of a deceased partner devolves on his representative, the remedy survives to his co-partner, who alone must enforce the right by action, and is liable on recovery to account to the representative for the deceased's share, should be applied in India, in the absence of statutory authority to the contrary. The effect of sec. 45 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) is to extend the English law applicable to trading partnerships to all cases of partnership. There is nothing either in that section nor in sec. 26 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with it, to show that the representatives of a deceased partner must be joined in an action for a partnership debt brought by the surviving partner, though it may be that they might be joined in such an action. A Court of Small Causes, without considering the merits, dismissed a suit brought by a sole surviving partner to recover a partnership debt on the ground that the plaintiff was not competent to maintain the suit without joining the representatives of the deceased partner as co-plaintiffs. Held that it was the Judge's duty to hear and determine the suit, which was brought by the person legally entitled to bring it alone in his Court, and in declining to entertain it on the merits, he had failed to exercise his jurisdiction, and had acted with material irregularity, within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Muhammad Suleman Khan v. Fatima, and Dhan Singh v. Basant Singh referred to. Held also that in such a suit, the plaint, if properly framed, ought to have alleged that the debt of which recovery was a partnership debt, that the deceased partner had died before the suit, and that the suit was brought by the plaintiff as surviving partner for his own benefit and that of the estate; but the suit should not be dismissed merely because the plaint did not contain these averments. Jell v. Douglas referred to. A suit should not be dismissed on merely technical grounds when the merits are proved, and no injustice by surprise or otherwise will be done.—9 Al. 486.

No member of an undivided Hindu family, except the manager of the family as such, is entitled to bring a suit to establish a right belong-the family without making the other members of the family parties to the suit.—6 Madr. 27.

Certain properties were sold to A by private contract. Subsequently the properties were attached in execution of a decree against A's vendors, and sold in execution to various purchasers. A instituted a suit against his vendors, the decree-holders, and the purchasers, to set aside the execution-sale. Held that the suit was not defective by reason of misjoinder of parties. Rajaram Tewari v. Luchman Prasad (B. L. R., Sup., Vol., 731 ; S. C., 8 W. R. 13) distinguished.—9 Cal. 763.

By the memorandum and Articles of Association of the new Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, the plaintiff's firm of M F and Co., were appointed agents of the Company for twenty-five years, and it was provided that they should have the general control and management of the Company. Clause 98 of the Articles provided that the said firm, as such agents, should have full power and authority (inter alia) to to appoint and to employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction and management of the affairs and business of the Company, such solicitors as they should think proper. An agreement, dated 26th August 1874, was also entered into between the Company and the partners in the firm of M F and Co., their executors, administrators, and assigns for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M F and Co., whereby it was agreed that the said firm should be agents to the Company for twenty-five years to buy and sell, &c., and particularly to exercise all the powers contained in clause 98 of the Articles of Association. Messrs. C and B were duly appointed solicitors to the Company, and acted as such for a considerable time. Merwanji Framji, one of the members of the said firm of M F and Co., died in the middle of March, 1876. The plaintiffs complained that G, one of the shareholders in the Company, became desirous of ousting the plaintiffs from the position of agents of the Company, and of becoming the managing director of the Company; that, in July, 1881, he procured his own election, and that of certain nominees of his, as directors of the Company; and, on the 8th August 1881, procured the passing of a resolution at a Board-meeting to the effect that as Messrs. C and B, the Company's solicitors, were also the solicitors of the agents, it was desirable, for the interests of the Company, that a change should be made, and that Messrs. H, C, and L, be appointed solicitors of the Company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G, of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the Company for himself; that Messrs. H, C, and L, had been for a long time the solicitors of G, and had been advising him in his designs upon the Company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the Company and the plaintiffs, and a violation of the Articles of Association of the Company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the Company, and the Company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874, and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs. H, C, and L as solicitors for the Company, and to restrain them from doing any thing inconsistent with the memorandum and Articles of Association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874, had been determined by the death of Merwanji Framji, and that the powers conferred on the agents by clause 98 of the Articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the Articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Held that, having regard to the memorandum and Articles of Association, the contract was that the firm of M F & Co. for the time being should be the agents of the Company for twenty-five years, and that the right to sue on the contract by its nature survived to the plaintiffs after the death of Merwanji Framji. Held also that there being no provision either in the Articles of Association or the agreement of 26th August 1874, that the power thereby conferred on the agents should be subject to the control or assent of the directors, there was no right in the directors to interfere with the agents in the exercise of their powers otherwise than as representing the Company in virtue of their general powers of management. It being admitted that the conduct of the defendants would be supported by the Company in general meeting owing to their having a preponderance of votes, held that, inasmuch as the Court would not, by a decree for specific performance or by injunction, compel the Company to retain the plaintiff's in the confidential position of agents, it would not restrain the defendants or the Company from appointing a solicitor, which was only a violation of what was ancillary or incidental to the principal part of the contract, viz., the agreement that the plaintiffs should be the agents of the Company for twenty-five years; and, further, semble that on the merits of the case the Court would not interfere on behalf of the plaintiffs. Counsel on behalf of the plaintiffs sought to obtain the injunction on the ground that the resolution of the 8th August 1881, appointing Messrs. H, C, and L solicitors of the Company, was contrary to the memorandum of Association, and, therefore, ultra vires; and, in order that this point might be pressed against the defendants, it was proposed that the plaint should be amended by alleging a cause of action in two of the plaintiffs as share-holders, as well as a cause of action in all the plaintiffs as parties contracting with the Company. Held that, under the provisions of sections 26 and 31 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the amendment could not be allowed. The plaintiffs, as shareholders and contractors, had not the same cause of action, by which words were meant not only the act complained of, but also the right violated by that act. The rights of the plaintiffs as contractors, alleged to be violated by the resolution, were rights given to them by their agreement; but the rights of the plaintiffs as shareholders were rights secured to them by the Articles of Association.—6 Bom. 266.

The plaintiffs were the hereditary gors, or priests, residing at Dakor, who ordinarily conducted their yajmans, or patrons, to the temple of Shri Ranchhod Raiji, performed worship there on their behalf, and received remuneration for their services. The defendants were the shevaks, or ministers, of the idol; it was their duty to remain in constant attendance on the idol, perform the daily services at the temple, collect the offerings, and apply the same to the purposes of the foundation. On 12th October, 1883, the shevaks issued rules prohibiting people from entering the Nij Mandir and Saja Mandir, which were particularly sacred chambers in the temple, except on payment of certain fees. Every visitor was required to purchase a ticket of admission to the interior parts of the temple. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration of their right of free access to the Nij Mandir and Saja Mandir at all times and on all occasions when the temple was open for purposes of public worship. They alleged that the new rules framed by the shevaks constituted an infringement of their immemorial rights of going into the said mandirs without any let or hindrance, of worshipping the idol there for themselves and their patrons, and of receiving whatever their patrons gave them. They, therefore, sought for a perpetual injunction restraining the shevaks from interfering with their rights. The plaintiffs were 208 in number. They filed the present suit under section 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The defendants contended (inter alia) that the plaintiffs had each a separate cause of action; that they had no right to sue jointly; that they were not entitled to a declaratory decree under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act; and that the plaintiffs never having been obstructed in the exercise of their rights, had no cause of action. Held, that the suit was rightly constituted under section 30 of the Code of Civil Pro. (Act XIV of 1882). The rules made by the shevaks in 1883 interfered with the immemorial rights of the gors, and gave a common cause of action to all the plaintiffs. They were, therefore, entitled to sue jointly. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaratory decree under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), as their title to free access with their patrons to the sacred shrines and to receive presents from their patrons unfettered by the rules of 1883 was denied by these rules. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to further relief by way of perpetual injunction under section 54 of Act I of 1877, as the defendants had threatened to invade their enjoyment of property, and the invasion was such that pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief. Held, also, that the shevaks had no authority to issue the rules of the 12th October, 1883, or to levy fees from worshippers in respect of any public religious services held in the temple.—15 Bc 1. 309.

See I. L. R., 6 Madr. 239, noted under sec. 25.

27. Where a suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or where it is doubtful whether it has been instituted in the name of the right plaintiff, the Court may, “at any stage of the suit,”* if satisfied that the suit has been so commenced through a bona fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person or persons, “with his or their consent,”* to be substituted or added as plaintiff or plaintiffs upon such terms as the Court thinks just.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The change of parties as plaintiffs, in conformity with the provisions of sec. 27 of the Code, does not give rise to such a question of limitation as arises upon the addition of a new person as a defendant under sec. 32.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 400.

28. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of the same matter.

And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment.

A leased certain lands to B for a term of seven years, commencing with the year 1288 Fasli (19th September, 1880). On the 23rd October 1883, A sold the lands to D, who, under his purchase became entitled to the rents of the lands from the commencement of the year 1291 Fasli 17th Sept. 1883). When some of the instalments of the rent for the year 1291 Fasli became due, D applied for payment thereof to B, who informed him that he had paid the whole of the rent for the year 1291 in advance to A on the 21st May 1883. D then sued A and B for the rent due, praying a decree for rent against B, and in the alternative for a decree against A if it should turn out that B's allegation of payment was correct. The lower Courts found that B had paid A in good faith, and they dismissed the suit as against him. They also dismissed the suit as against A, on the ground that the claims against A and B could not be joined in one suit. On appeal to the High Court, held that the frame of the suit was unobjectionable, and that, on the facts found by the lower Courts, D was entitled to a decree against A.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 555.

The plaintiffs having obtained a decree for the possession of certain lands, and having received formal possession thereof, brought a suit against 86 persons holding distinct and separate tenures in those lands, on the allegations that, "on the plaintiffs attempting to measure the lands, and calling on the tenants to pay rent, ten of the defendants, described as pro-dhans or headmen, formed a combination, and gained over the other defendants with a view to injure the plaintiffs; that through their help and endeavour the remaining defendants failed to recognize the plaintiffs as landlords, and declined to pay any rent, or to allow them to measure the lands, driving away an amin who went to measure the lands on behalf of the plaintiffs, and thereby preventing the plaintiffs from exercising their proprietary rights; that the plaintiffs brought suits for rent against some of the defendants, and in those suits the defendants denied the plaintiffs' title as landlords, whereupon the plaintiffs, seeing the necessity of instituting a suit for declaring the defendants tenants of the land withdrew the suits for rent." They stated their cause of action to "be the defendants' act of not recognizing us as their landlords, and thereby preventing us exercising our proprietary rights in respect of the land in suit, and not allowing us to make a measurement of that land, and also withholding the payment of rent:" and prayed for a decree establishing their proprietary right, and declaring the defendants to be their tenants. Held that there was but one and the same cause of action against all the defendants, viz., a combination to keep the plaintiffs out of the enjoyment of the property they had purchased; and that the suit was not multifarious within sec. 28 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the declaratory decree prayed for could be made notwithstanding the plaintiffs might have asked for possession of the lands.—13 Cal. 147.

The judgment of the majority of the Full Bench in Narsingh Das v. Mangal Dubey (I. L. R., 5 Al. 163), except in its general observations as to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to joinder of parties and causes of action, proceeded upon and had reference to the special circumstances of the case, and to the allegations made by the plaintiff in his plaint, and was not intended to be carried further. In a suit for possession of immoveable property, part of which had been usufructually mortgaged by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2, the plaintiff alleged that the first defendant had no title to make such a mortgage, while both defendants maintained such title. Held that, inasmuch as the title of defendant No. 2 was derived from defendant No. 1, and stood or fell with the failure or success of the plaintiff's claim against the latter, there were not two causes of action but one, namely, the infringement of the plaintiff's right by the defendant No. 36 and hence the suit was not bad for misjoinder of causes of action.—11 Al. 3.

A stranger to a contract, of which specific performance is sought, cannot be a party to the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff sued as against one defendant for specific performance of a contract to sell land, and as against another for a declaration that he was not entitled to any charge upon the said lands, held that the latter defendant was improperly made a party to the suit.—5 Bom. 177.

A suit to have a mokurari patta enforced as against one co-sharer granting it, and other co-sharers who repudiate it, and in the alternative to have the salami paid for the mokurari patta returned, is, in substance, a suit to enforce a contract to place the plaintiff in possession of the land under the patta, and to declare his rights to it as against all the defendants; and under sec. 19 of the Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff is entitled to ask for compensation as against the defendant granting the patta. Under sec. 28 of the Civil Procedure Code, such an alternative claim may be allowed against one or more of the defendants.—8 Cal. 963; 11 C. L. R., 330.

The plaintiffs brought a suit to recover certain sums of money from the defendants, due to them under certain contracts which they alleged had been entered into by themselves, and one A D, as agent of the defendants, and asked for an account. The defendants, in their written statement, contended that there was no privity of contract between themselves and the plaintiffs, and denied the alleged agency of A D. The plaintiffs, before the hearing, applied to the Court to have A D added as a party-defendant under secs. 28 and 32 of Act X of 1877, asking to be allowed to amend their plaint so as to pray for relief in the alternative against the original defendants or the said A D, or both against the original defendants and the said A D: Held that, under sec. 28, they were entitled to the order on the authority of the case of Child v. Stenning (L. R., 5 Ch. D. 695.)—8 Cal. 170.

Per FIELD, J.—Where a person, sued for rent, sets up the title of a third party, and alleges that he holds under, and pays rent to, him, such third party, ought not to be made a party to the suit so as to convert a simple suit for arrears of rent into one for the determination of the title to the property in respect of which the rent is claimed. Such a suit raises only two issues; viz.: (1) does the relation of landlord and tenant exist between the plaintiff and defendant? (2) are the alleged arrears of rent due and unpaid? and these are questions in which the plaintiff and defendant are alone concerned, and no third party claiming a title adverse to the plaintiff can properly be made a party to the trial of these issues. Sec. 28 of the Civil Procedure Code is not imperative, but allows a discretion to be exercised; and in such a suit it is better, both in the interests of Government and for the proper adjudication of the question of title, that it should be tried by a competent Court in a suit directly framed and brought for that purpose.—8 Cal. 238.

The creditor of an insolvent, who had assigned all his property to trustees for the benefit of all his creditors generally, sued him for his debt, joining the trustees as defendants, on the ground that they had refused to register his claim. The trustees had refused to register the claim on the ground that the plaintiff had not applied for its registration within the time notified by them, and that he would not consent to abide by the order which the High Court might make on an application by the trustees for its advice regarding the claims of creditors who, like the plaintiff, had applied for the registration of their claims after such time, but before the assets of the insolvent had been distributed. The deed of trust empowered the trustees to distribute the assets of the insolvent after a certain time among the creditors who had preferred their claims within that time, and declared that they should not be liable for such distribution to creditors who had not preferred their claims within that time; but it did not empower them to refuse to register claims made after that time, but before distribution of the assets. Held that the trustees had been properly joined as defendants in such suit; that their refusal to register the plaintiff's claim gave him a cause of action against them; and that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had applied for the registration of his claim before the distribution of the assets, the trustees had improperly refused to register it.—3 Al. 799.

Defendant No. 1, the tenant of certain land at fixed rates, on the 12th November 1877, sold his interest in the land to the plaintiff. At the time of the sale the land was in the actual possession of defendant No. 2, defendant No. 1's sub-tenant, against whom, however, defendant No. 1 had obtained an order for ejectment on the 25th June preceding. On the 25th March 1878, defendant No. 1 applied a second time for the ejectment of defendant No. 2, and while this matter was pending the plaintiff endeavoured to obtain possession of the land, but was resisted by defendant No. 2. He thereupon instituted a charge of criminal trespass against the latter. This criminal proceeding was pending when, on the 14th September 1878, defendant No. 1 obtained a second order for defendant No. 2's ejectment. Under this order he obtained possession of the land, and also of the crop planted by defendant No. 2, which he sold to defendant No. 3 on the 22nd September 1878. On the 25th of the same month the plaintiff's charge of criminal trespass against defendant No. 2 was dismissed, on the ground that defendant No. 1 was in possession, and the plaintiff had never obtained possession under his purchase. Defendant No. 1 subsequently let the land to defendant No. 4. The plaintiff, alleging that three causes of action had accrued to him—viz., (i) on the 12th November 1877, the date of the sale to him—(ii.) on the 30th March 1878, when defendant No. 1 applied a second time for the ejectment of defendant No. 2—and (iii.) on the 22nd September 1878, when defendant No. 1 took possession of the land—sued defendants Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, claiming (i.) possession of the land as against them all; (ii.) mesne-profits by way of damages for the year 1285 Fasli (September 1877—September 1878), as against defendants Nos. 1 and 2; (iii.) mesne-profits by way of damages for 1286 Fasli (September 1878—September 1879), against defendants Nos. 1 and 3; and (iv.) mesne-profits by way of damages for 1287 Fasli (September 1879—September 1880), against defendants Nos. 1 and 4. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that the Court of first instance had properly rejected the plaint, the suit being open to the objection that different causes of action against different defendants separately had been joined, for which procedure no sanction was to be found in the Code of Civil Procedure.—5 Al. 163.

A, B, C, & D, were the proprietors of a 2a. 13g. share in mauza E, and also of a 2a. 13g. share in mauza F, both in the district of Bhagalpur. On the 19th September 1872, A, B, C, and D, mortgaged their share in E and F, together with property in the district of Tirhut, to the plaintiff. On the 24th March 1873, A mortgaged his share in E and F to J. On the 13th

November 1872, A and B mortgaged their shares in E to K. On the 25th March 1874, J obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the interests of A & B were purchased on the 5th January 1875 by L. On the 17th April 1874, M, to whom the first mortgage had been assigned, obtained a decree, and attached the property mortgaged. L objected that he had already purchased the interests of A, and, on the objection being allowed, M instituted a suit against L for a declaration of priority, and obtained a decree on the 9th August 1876. In execution of this decree the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and, after satisfying the mortgage, a surplus of Rs. 7,664 remained. After the institution of the first suit, and before L's purchase, the plaintiff instituted a suit upon his mortgage in the Tirhut Court without having obtained leave to include that portion of the mortgaged property situate in the Bhagalpur district. On the 17th July 1874, a decree was made in this suit. On the 17th January 1877, K obtained a decree on his mortgage, and shares of A and B in E were sold, and purchased on the 3rd September 1877 by N. The plaintiff had his decree transferred for execution to the Bhagalpur Court, and he attached the surplus sale-proceeds and a 1a. 9g. share in E. This attachment was withdrawn on the objection of L, who drew out the surplus sale-proceeds. The share purchased by N was also released from attachment. The plaintiff now sued L, N, and the mortgagors for a declaration that his decree of the 17th July 1874 affected the E property, to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from L, and in case the decree should not be valid to the extent mentioned, for a decree declaring his prior lien on the property in E. It was contended for the defendants that the Tirhut Court had no jurisdiction in respect of the Bhagalpur property; that the suit was bad for multifariousness; that certain persons, co-sharers with the plaintiff, should have been made parties; and that the cause of action had been split. Held that the Tirhut Court had no jurisdiction in respect of the Bhagalpur property; that the suit was not bad by reason of multifariousness; and that it was not necessary to make the plaintiff's co-sharers parties, as he might be regarded as contracting on behalf of himself and the other members of the family as undisclosed principals. Held also that the cause of action had been split.—7 Cal. 739 : See also 10 C. L. R., 263.

29. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange, hundis, and promissory notes.

Joinder of parties liable on same contract.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The drawer and acceptor of bills of exchange can be joined as co-defendants in a suit brought by the holder of such bills.—I.L.R., 3 Cal. 541.

See I. L. R., 2 Al. 738, noted under sec. 32.

30. Where there are numerous parties having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such parties may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend, in such suit, on behalf of all parties so interested. But the Court shall in such cases give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such parties either by personal service or (if from the number of parties or any other cause such service is not reasonable practicable) by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

One party may sue or defend on behalf of all in same interest.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 30 was not intended to allow individuals to sue on behalf of the general public, but to enable some of a class having special interests to represent the rest of the class.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 463.

The plaintiff based her right to sue upon the fact that her deceased husband had been mutwali, and she prayed that the property in suit might be declared wugf, and that certain alienations made by her step-son since her husband's death might be set aside:—Held that the trust to which the suit related was one partly for charitable and partly for religious purposes. As far as it related to the former, it was governed by sec. 539 and if viewed in the light of the latter, by Act XX of 1863; and that the suit, not being properly framed in compliance with the provisions of either of those enactments, was not maintainable:—Held, further, that even supposing the endowment alleged was neither a public charity within the meaning of sec. 539, nor a religious endowment to which Act XX of 1863 applied, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue alone; as it was clear upon the face of the plaint that she was not alone interested in the subject-matter of the suit, and therefore that she could only sue on behalf of all who were so interested, having first obtained the leave of the Court and otherwise complied with the provisions of sec. 30.—11 Cal. 33.

There is no rule that a person named as a co-plaintiff is not to be treated as a plaintiff unless he signs and verifies the plaint. Three suits for money were filed by one of three joint-creditors, the others being named as co-plaintiffs with him in the plaints, which he alone signed and verified. An order was made by the Court after the filing of the plaints that one of these joint-creditors should be added as a co-plaintiff, as if he had not been on the record already. If the date of that order had been the date of suit brought, limitation under Act XV of 1877, sched. II, art. 67, would have applied; but it was held that all the joint-creditors became plaintiffs when the plaints were filed, the order adding parties being inoperative, and that the suits when instituted were not defective for want of parties.—17 Cal. 580.

A and B, junior members of a Malabar tarwad, sued to cancel certain mortgages executed by their karnavan and senior anandravan, on the ground that the secured debt was not binding on the tarwad, and to appoint A to the office of karnavan. The last part of the prayer was withdrawn. The mortgages were executed to secure a decree-debt, the decree having been passed ex parte against the late karnavan of the tarwad. No fraud was alleged but the Lower Courts found that the karnavan had been guilty of fraud in allowing the decree to be passed ex parte. The plaintiffs had not been parties to the decree, and the other junior members of the tarwad who had been joined were exempted from liability:—Held, that the nature of the debt was not res judicata, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaration that the mortgages in question were invalid as against them:—Held further per cur.—All the members of the plaintiffs' tarwad should have been joined actually or constructively; but (KERNAN, J., dissenting) the objection as to non-joinder is not essential, but merely formal, and weight should not be attached to it when it is first taken on second appeal.—10 Madr. 322.

The plaintiff, as manager of an undivided Hindu family, sued to recover possession of certain lands from the defendant. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's minor brother and uncle, who were his undivided co-parceners, should be made parties to the suit. The Court of first instance held that the plaintiff, as manager, could sue alone, and passed a decree for the plaintiff. The first appellate Court reversed the decree, holding that the plaintiff could not sue alone, except under the provisions of sec. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, which had not been complied with. On second appeal to the High Court, held that the defendant was entitled to have the plaintiff's uncle and minor brother placed on the record either as co-plaintiffs or as defendants. The right of a plaintiff to assume the character of manager, and to sue in that character, raises a question of fact and law which varies as the other members of the family are minors or adults, and, therefore, the defendant is always entitled in such suits, when the objection is taken at an early stage, to have the other members of the family, when they are known, placed on the record, to ensure him against the possibility of the plaintiff's acting without authority. The plaintiff was allowed on second appeal to amend his plaint by making the other members of the family parties to the suit.—12 Bom. 158.

The defendants made a gift of land to a Hindu temple for the purpose of defraying the expenses appertaining to the idol. The temple was built, and the gift made in 1870. The defendants obtained from the revenue authorities mutation of names in the idol's favour, and an acknowledgment of the person whom they nominated as agent or manager. The plaintiff, alleging that they had subsequently repossessed themselves of the land and the profits accruing therefrom, and that he was interested as a Hindu in worshipping at the temple, and professing to sue on behalf of the entire body of the worshippers there at, sued for a declaration that the land was wakf, and the idol entitled to hold it in his own name; that the defendants should be directed to apply the income of the property to the purposes of the temple, and that the Court should give such orders and instructions as might be necessary and proper for the future management of the temple and payment of income. No sanction to the institution of the suit was obtained under sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench that the gift made by the defendants constituted a trust for the purposes of the temple. Per EDGE, C. J., and TYRRELL, J., that the defendants before the Court did not constitute themselves trustees in any sense. Held also by the Full Bench that the suit was not maintainable as against those defendants. Per STRAIGHT, J., that the suit was not maintainable under the Hindu law; that the trust was one for public religious purposes; that such a suit, in which the plaintiff asked to have the trust administered by the Court, could not be maintained without the sanction required by sec. 539 of the Code; that, assuming sec. 539 to be inapplicable, and Act XX of 1863 to apply, the suit could not be maintained without the sanction required by that Act; and that, with reference to sec. 30 of the Code, no cause of action had accrued to the plaintiff alone on which he could maintain the suit. Per EDGE, C. J., and TYRRELL, J., that, if the trust were one for public religious purposes, the suit as against the defendants before the Court must fail for non-compliance with the provisions of sec. 539 of the Code, and if for private or quasi-private religious purposes, it must also fail, since there was no principle on which the plaintiff, as one of the public worshipping in the temple, could maintain it against those defendants who were not trustees, but (if they had wrongfully taken possession) trespassers; that Act XX of 1863 could not apply; and that, with reference to sec. 30 of the Code, the plaintiff could not maintain the suit alone on his own behalf, or on behalf of himself and others against those defendants. Fawahra v. Akbar Husain (I. L. R., 7 Al. 178) distinguished. Manohar Ganesh Tambekar v. Lakhmiram Govind Ram (I. L. R., 12 Bom. 247), Lutifunissa Bibi v. Nazirun Bibi (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 33), and Hira Lal v. Bhairon (I. L. R., 5 Al. 602), referred to. Wajid Ali Shah v. Dianat, ullah Beg (I. L. R., 8 Al. 31) approved.—I. L. R., 11 Al. 18.

A suit by one or more creditors on behalf of other creditors cannot be entertained without the leave of the Court being obtained for its institution. Such leave cannot be granted at the hearing.—9 Cal. 604; 13 C. L. R., 142.

If it is sought to make a decree in a suit binding on a Malabar tarwad, the procedure laid down in sec. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, should be followed if the members are numerous. A decree against a person who happens to be the karnavan of Malabar tarwad is not necessarily binding on the tarwad in the absence of fraud.—5 Madr. 201.

A subordinate Judge having permitted the junior widow of a Hindu to be made a party to the proceedings in execution of a decree obtained by the senior widow against a debtor of their deceased husband, the High Court declined to interfere under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Quære.—Whether sec. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not give a Court a discretionary power to add parties after adjudication of the question raised in the suit.—6 Madr. 227.

An order under sec. 14, Act XX of 1863, should be mandatory, and not prohibitory. Where a sacred book was kept at a temple, and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there, held that a suit would lie under sec. 14 of Act XX of 1863, by some of the persons interested in the temple, to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place, and that he should be directed to retain it as a portion of the furniture of the temple.—7 Cal. 767.

Four persons of the Chitpavan caste brought a suit in 1876, alleging that they and the members of their caste, in common with certain other castes, possessed the exclusive right of entry and worship in the sanctuary of a temple, and that the defendants, members of the Palshe caste, not being of the privileged castes, infringed that right in 1871 and thereafter by entering the sanctuary and performing worship therein. They prayed for a declaration of their right and an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with it. Held that the plaintiffs could maintain the suit for the personal injury alleged to have been suffered by themselves by the pollution of their sanctuary, whether under the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 or that of 1877, sec. 30 of the latter being merely regulative, not constitutive. Whether or not it could be contended that they and the defendants so represented their respective castes that the decree in this suit should bind all members of the two castes, would be open to argument in any future case; but it might well be consistent with general principles to hold that certain judicial proceedings taken by or against a select number as representing a large class, might, if fairly and honestly conducted, bind or benefit the whole class.—7 Bom. 323.

A shareholder of an undivided piece of land sued three of his co-sharers, who, he alleged, had trespassed on the land by building thereon, for restoration of the land to its original condition. The Court of first instance tried and determined the suit as brought and framed. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, on the ground that, there being many co-sharers, the plaintiff could not alone sue, and, under sec. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was bad. Per STUART, C. J.—That the lower Appellate Court was right in holding that sec. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code applied to the case, but that it was not right in dismissing the suit, but should have remanded it for the procedure provided by that section. Also that the permission mentioned in sec. 30 is express, and not constructive. Per BRODHURST, J.—That sec. 30 was not applicable to the case, that section contemplating a case in which there are numerous parties, having the same interest in a suit, who are all before the Court, and all anxious to have the matter in dispute disposed of, but, in order to save trouble and expense, are desirous that one or more of them shall sue or defend on behalf of all in the same interest. Per STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ.—That sec. 30 was not applicable to the case, the first part of that section implying that the plaintiff therein contemplated wishes to sue on behalf of other persons similarly interested in suing, they also wishing the same.—5 Al. 602.

In a suit by two of the worshippers at a certain mosque, instituted after having obtained the sanction of the Advocate-General under sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, against the mutwalli of the mosque, and two other persons to whom the mutwalli had mortgaged part of the endowed property to secure the repayment of a loan, it appeared that one of the mortgagees had sold some of the wakf property in execution of a decree which he had obtained upon his mortgage, and the property had been purchased by the other mortgagee. The plaintiffs prayed that the property purchased might be declared to be wakf; that the sale in execution might be declared to be invalid; that a mutwalli might be appointed by the Court; and that the costs of doing the acts of the wakf might be defrayed from the profits of the property belonging to the endowment. Held that, so far as regarded that portion of the prayer which fell within the provisions of sec. 539 of the Code, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue, as they were not “persons having a direct interest in the trust” within the meaning of the section, and that the suit should have been instituted under sec. 14 of Act XX of 1863 after sanction obtained under sec. 18. Held also that, though the plaintiffs might possibly have obtained leave to sue under sec. 30 of the Code on behalf of themselves and the other persons attending the mosque, they, not having obtained such leave, were not entitled to institute the suit for the purpose of obtaining the relief asked for in the other prayers of the plaint. The words, “trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque,” &c., mentioned in Act XX of 1863, mean the trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque, &c., to which the provisions of the Act are applicable, not the trustee &c., of any mosque. And such persons are those to whom the provisions of Reg. XIX of 1810 were applicable. The mosques, &c., to which the provisions of that Regulation were applicable, were mosques for the support of which endowments had been granted in land by the Government of the country or by individuals, and the mosques, &c., to which the provisions of Act XX of 1863 apply, are not any mosques, &c., but any mosques for the support of which endowments in land have been made by the Government or private individuals.—8 Cal. 32.

A landlord having obtained a decree against the karnavan and senior anandravans of a Malabar tarwad, for the recovery of certain lands demised on perpetual lease to the tarwad, on the ground that the tenure was forfeited by the denial of the landlord's title by the karnavan, the junior members of the tarwad sued the parties to that decree to set aside the decree and also the forfeiture of the tenure, on the ground that the karnavan had acted improperly in denying the title of the landlord. It was found that the karnavan acted bona fide in denying his landlord's title and in defending the suit.—Held, that the plaintiffs could not succeed.—7 Madr. 87.

The "Majlis Islamia" or "Mahomedan Association" of Meerut instituted a suit in its own name, by its Secretary. Held that, as such Association had not, per se, any status in law so to sue, the suit was not maintainable. Semble that, had such Association empowered one or more of its members to act for it in the matter of the suit in the manner provided by sec. 30, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, the permission mentioned in that section might have been granted.—6 Al. 284.

See I. L. R., 2 Madr. 328 & 10 Madr. 79, noted under sec. 13; 17 Cal. 906, noted under sec. 11; 15 Bom. 309, noted under sec. 26.

31. No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder of parties, and the Court may, in every suit, deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it.

Suit not to fail by reason of misjoinder.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to enable plaintiffs to join in respect of distinct causes of action.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Two of the sons of a joint Mitakshara family, consisting of the father, three sons, and the widow and sons of a deceased son, and carrying on business in partnership, filed a suit on the 19th July 1880, upon a hatchitta, dated the 11th December 1876. No time was fixed for the payment of money, but the last payment made and entered by the defendant on the hatchitta was dated 30th July 1877. On the 26th July, when the case came on for hearing, it was objected by the defendant that all the persons who sought to sue were not joined as plaintiffs. Thereupon, on the application of the original plaintiffs, the father and the third son, who were described as the surviving partners of the deceased son, were added as plaintiffs, but not until the suit as against them was barred by limitation. Held that the Court had rightly exercised its discretion in adding the 3rd and 4th plaintiffs to the record, although the suit was barred under sec. 22 of the Limitation Act as against them. Held also that the claim of the original plaintiffs was likewise, inasmuch as they could only enforce that claim in conjunction with the other plaintiffs whose rights were barred under sec. 22 of the Limitation Act. In actions of contracts it is the right of the defendant, if he takes the objection in proper time, to insist upon all persons with whom he has contracted being joined as plaintiffs, and if, after the objection has been raised, the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without taking proper steps to add the person or persons whose non-joinder has been objected to, and the Court finds that the objection was well-founded, the suit must be dismissed. Baydonath Bag v. Grish Chunder Roy (I. L. R., 3 Cal. 26) dissented from. Held, further, that the suit would have been in time if all the plaintiffs had joined in the first instance. Per CURIAN.—The words "prescribed period" in sec. 20 of the Limitation Act mean, not the period prescribed for the payment of the debt, but the prescribed period of limitation. Tarny Churn Nundee v. Shaikh Abdoor Rahman (2 C. L. R., 346) doubted. There is no equity, but often much injustice, in allowing one joint-contractor out of many to sue the defendant, notwithstanding an objection duly made by the latter, and the Court has no right to allow one co-contractor to recover under such circumstances, though he may, no doubt, adjust the same which he recovers with his co-contractors. As between the members of a joint family any one or more may be authorized by the rest to act as their agent or agents in any business-transaction; but when a joint family or any members of it carry on trade in partnership, and contract with the outside public in the course of that trade, they have no greater privileges than any other traders; if they are really partners, they must be bound by the same rule for enforcing their contracts in Courts of law as the members of any other partnership.—8 C. L. R., 457.

In a suit instituted against six different parties, plaintiff prayed for khas possession of a four-anna share in a certain lot, or, in the alternative, for a decree for arrears of rent against the defendants, or such of the defendants as should, on inquiry, appear to be respectively liable. It appeared that plaintiff had been kept out of possession by one only of the six defendants, and that, if he was entitled to a decree for arrears of rent, another of the defendants was liable for a portion only of such arrears. Held (with reference to Act X of 1877, secs. 31 and 45) that the suit was not improperly framed; that there was no objection to the prayer for alternative relief; and that the suit should not have been dismissed for joinder of causes of action.—I. L. R., 4 Cal. 949.

A, as auction-purchaser at a revenue-sale, brought a suit against a number of persons for possession of some chur land; the defendants claimed portions of the land under different titles and pleaded misjoinder. The Court upon the Amin's report gave A the option to amend the plaint by withdrawing the suit against any particular sets of defendants. A elected to go to trial on the suit as brought. Held that, under the circumstances, it was necessary for the Court to adjudicate on the question of misjoinder. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to join in one suit all the persons, on the ground that they obstructed his possession, unless he was able to show that those persons acted in concert or under some common title. Held, further, that, having regard to the provisions of secs. 31 and 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, the proper order of the Court should have been to reject the plaint and not dismiss the suit on the ground of misjoinder.—14 Cal. 435.

A sued for an injunction to restrain interference with his right to graze cattle on the bed of a certain tank. The other raiyats of the village in whom the same right vested were originally joined as plaintiffs, but the plaint was amended under sec. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and their names were struck off the record. A proved no special damage. Held (1) that the fact that the other raiyats of the village have similar rights does not make A's right a public right in the sense that no action can be brought upon it unless special damage is proved; (2) that the right claimed vests in A severally as well as jointly with the other raiyats, and the amendment of the plaint was not contrary to the provisions of sec. 31 or 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—11 Madr. 42.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 799 & 7 Cal. 739, noted under sec. 28; 6 Bom. 266 and 16 Bom. 119, noted under sec. 26.

32. The Court may, on or before the first hearing, upon the application of either party, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that the name of any party, whether as plaintiff or as defendant, improperly joined, be struck out; and the Court may, at any time, either upon or without such application, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that any plaintiff be made a defendant, or that any defendant be made a plaintiff, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added.

Consent of person added as plaintiff or next friend.

No person shall be added as a plaintiff, or as the next friend of a plaintiff, without his own consent thereto.

Any person on whose behalf a suit is instituted or defended under section 30 may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit.

Parties to suits instituted or defended under sec. 30.

All parties whose names are so added as defendants shall be served with a summons in manner hereinafter mentioned, and (subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, section 22) the proceedings as against them shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of such summons.

Defendants added to be served.

Conduct of suit.

The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such plaintiff as it deems proper.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The words in sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, "who may be likely to be affected by the result," construed to mean "likely to be affected, if added as parties."—5 B. L. R., 371; 13 W. R., 443.

After a decree has been made, whereby a suit has been referred to the Commissioner's office to have accounts taken and property sold, the Court has still power (if it should be found necessary) to add, as fresh parties to the suit, persons who are interested in its subject-matter, and are likely to be affected by its results.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 96.

No person ought, under sec. 73, to be added as a plaintiff whose right of action is barred by the Law of Limitation.—W. R., 1864, 152; 12 Bom. H. C. R., 17.

In a suit by reversioners to set aside an alienation by the widow, where the Court finds that not the plaintiffs but another reversioner not represented on the suit had such right, it should not adjudicate on the propriety or otherwise of the alienation, but the suit should be dismissed.—2 Agra H. C. R., 44.

Where a Hindu widow instituted a suit in respect of rights inherited by her from her deceased husband, and then adopted a son, held that, under sec. 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the adopted son might be made a co-plaintiff.—1 M. H. C. R., 197.

Where the son of a Hindu widow died after her re-marriage, and she sued as guardian of her daughter by her first husband claiming the estate of her son, an application by her to be joined as co-plaintiff in her own right was allowed.—10 W. R., 34.

J M executed in favour of P an instrument (authorizing P to recover, by suit or otherwise, from Messrs. W and N, a sum of Rs. 22,500 or thereabouts) which contained this clause: "From whatever sum P may recover from Messrs. W and N, he is to pay himself the sum of Rs. 8,640, which is due to himself, and also the expenses he may incur in making recovery, and he is to hand over the surplus to me." J M, ignoring the above instrument, sued N for the Rs. 22,500 mentioned in it. P thereupon applied to be made a party to the suit, under sec. 73 of the Code. His application was granted, and he was joined as a co-plaintiff. Held that P was properly made a party; but, as the validity of the instrument was disputed by J M, P should rather have been joined as a defendant than as a plaintiff.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 10.

Only persons whose claims must necessarily be taken into consideration before deciding on the plaintiff's title should be joined as defendants in a suit.—9 W. R., 158.

Sec. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code enables the Court to bring in as parties to the suit any person whose rights appear to be involved, and who may be affected by the result of the suit. It does not enable parties who are not liable to be affected by the result, to come in and raise altogether new issues which do not properly arise. Where the parties, however, all acquiesced in the irregularity, and the suit went to trial on the issues raised by the added defendant, the High Court did not think it necessary to quash the proceedings.—1 B. L. R., S. N., 26; 10 W. R., 283.

In a suit to recover possession of a certain mouzah claimed by the plaintiff as a portion of his dur-patni taluk, which was brought against several defendants, four other persons applied to be made defendants, on the ground that they were co-sharers with the defendants on the record in the property in dispute. The application was granted; the added defendants were found to be possessed of the share which they claimed, and on the proofs which they adduced the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff's claim as against the original defendants, who made no opposition, was decreed. In special appeal, on the ground that they should not have been made defendants, and that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his case against anybody else but the person against whom he had brought the suit, held that sec. 73, Act VIII of 1859, leaves to the Courts of original jurisdiction a discretion in such cases; that the section is not limited entirely to cases where the suit as framed cannot proceed; that the words "persons who may be likely to be affected by the result" do not mean persons on whom the result would be legally binding.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 24; 11 W. R., 361.

The plaintiff claimed to be entitled, as cousin of one M, to 12 annas of the estate left by M, and brought a suit against the two widows of M, to whom a certificate had been granted, under Act XXVII of 1860, to set aside the certificate, and for possession of the estate with mesne-profits from the death of M to the institution of this suit. N and others, who claimed to be entitled to a portion of the property specified in the plaint, intervened, and asked to be made defendants under sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859. Held that they were not parties likely to be affected by the result, within sec. 73, of the suit, and should not have been made parties to the suit.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 28 note; 10 W. R., 369.

In a suit against a co-heir, who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for an account of the estate of the deceased proprietor, a third party was added as a defendant under sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, "it appearing from the accounts put in that a large portion of the assets had been disposed of by him as agent" of the holder of the certificate. On appeal, held that a co-heir is entitled to follow property of the deceased into the hands of any person who has misappropriated it, and such right is not taken away by the certificate. Therefore, any person who, with the consent of the holder of the certificate, has improperly possessed himself of property belonging to the deceased, and misappropriated it, may be joined as a co-defendant. The third party was rightly so joined in this case.—5 B. L. R., 371; 13 W. R., 443.

In a suit by a landlord to eject his tenant, persons alleging a title adverse to the landlord should not be made parties under sec. 73, Act VIII of 1859. Their introduction could not change the character of the suit, and if they wish to establish their own title otherwise than through the tenant they should bring a separate suit.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 429; 21 W. R., 51.

Where a plaintiff applied for attachment of certain property before judgment under sec. 81, and a third party intervened, claiming to hold the property by purchase on his own account, held that such intervenor ought not to have been made a party under sec. 73 of the Code, but that his objection should have been entertained under secs. 86 and 246 of the Procedure Code.—2 Agra. H. C. R., 141.

Where one of several joint creditors who has no rights separate from that of the others refuses to join in the suit as plaintiff, and there is no averment of collusion on his part with the defendant, he cannot rightly be made a defendant in the suit.—11 Bom. H. C. R., 106; 1 C. L. R., 431.

The official Assignee has no legal right under the Insolvent Act to apply to be made a party to suits against the insolvent pending at the time of a vesting order being made, nor has he the power, after judgment and decree have been pronounced in a suit against the insolvent prior to his vesting order, to get himself made a party to such suit with a view of setting aside the judgment or appealing therefrom.—1 Bom. H. C. R., 251.

An appeal lies under the Civil Procedure Code, sec. 588 (2), against an order under sec. 32 that a plaintiff be made defendant.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 489.

Persons not parties in the original suit are not entitled to have themselves added as appellants in the Appellate Court.—9 W. R., 259.

After the dismissal of the plaintiffs' suit, and pending a regular appeal to the High Court, the plaintiffs applied for leave to add the name of a party to whom a share of their right in the subject-matter had been assigned subsequently to the dismissal of the suit in the Court below. The Court refused the application.—Marsh. Rep., 251; 2 Hay's Rep., 111.

In a suit for declaration of title to, and for possession of, a share in alleged ancestral property with mesne-profits, the plaintiff obtained a decree in the lower Appellate Court, from which the defendants appealed to the High Court. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died childless, and, on her application, his widow was substituted for him as respondent. Subsequently, the defendants-appellants applied to the High Court to have the deceased's father brought upon the record as respondent, alleging that he, and not the widow, was the deceased's legal representative, and solely entitled to be placed on the record as such. The father made no objection to the proposed substitution. It was common ground that either the father alone or the widow alone was the deceased plaintiff-respondent's true legal representative. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that, having regard to the words "as nearly as may be" and "as far as may be" in sec. 582 of the Civil Pro. Code, secs. 365, 366. and 367, might be applied, at all events analogically, to the case so as to enable the real legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent to be ascertained and brought upon the record; that the latter portion of sec. 582 did not limit the earlier words of the section so as to make sec. 368 the only provision applicable to the case; that a Court of record must have an inherent power to ascertain whether or not it has before it the proper parties to an appeal if the question be substantially raised; and that, therefore, the Court could and should, either before or at the hearing of the appeal, ascertain and determine, for the purposes of the prosecution of the appeal, the preliminary question whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased, and should act accordingly. Held also by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that sec. 32 of the Code did not apply to the case, and that, if it did apply, it would be the duty of the Court to decide whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. Held by MAHMOOD, J., contra, that the effect of sec. 582 read with sec. 587 was to place the defendants-appellants in the position of plaintiffs, and the deceased respondent in that of a defendant, for the purposes of array of parties; that consequently the provisions of secs. 363, 364, 365, 366, and 367, had no application; that, applying sec. 368, the Court was bound to implead the person named by the defendants-appellants as a respondent to the appeal; that, applying sec. 32, the widow occupied a position which gave her a sufficient prima facie status to be impleaded as respondent; and that, as there existed no authority in the Code allowing the Court to hold an enquiry whether the father or the widow was the true legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent, the Court should bring both upon the record as respondents, and proceed to decide the appeal after hearing both. Narain Das v. Lajja Ram (I. L. R., 7 Al. 693), Har Narain Singh v. Kharag Singh (I. L. R., 9 Al. 447), Lakshmibai v. Balkrishna (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 654), Rajamonee Dabee v. Chunder Kant Sandel (I. L. R., 8 Cal. 440; 10 C. L. R., 437), Naraini Kuar v. Durjan Kuar (I. L. R., 2 Al. 738), and Athiappa v. Ayanna (I. L. R., 8 Madr. 300), referred to.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 223.

Suit upon a bond of which the obligor was therein described as the manager of a certain mutt. The defendants, who were the sons of the obligor (since deceased), pleaded that the debt was contracted by their father for the benefit of the mutt and as manager of the mutt. The Judge ordered that the representative of the mutt be joined as defendant in the suit under sec. 32, and subsequently a decree was passed against him:—Held, that the order under sec. 32 was right, although the plaint had prayed for no relief against the mutt.—13 Madr. 32.

No question of limitation can arise with respect to the Court's power to make an order adding a party defendant to a suit.—11 Cal. 642.

In a suit for possession of immoveable property brought by three Muhammadan brothers, their three sisters were impleaded as defendants under sec. 32 and two of the latter subsequently filed a written statement in which, after stating that they were on good terms with their brothers the plaintiffs, and that the suit had been instituted with their knowledge and permission, they prayed that the suit might be decreed, subject to the condition that they would on some future occasion "settle with their own brothers as to their right and costs." The third sister did not appear to defend the suit :—Held, that the lower Courts were wrong in treating this admission as sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to a decree for possession, not only of their own share, but also of the shares of their three sisters, it being a fundamental proposition connected with the administration of justice than a plaintiff cannot sue for more than his own right, and that no defendant can, by an admission on consent of this kind, convey the right or delegate the authority to one for more than his own share in property. Lachman Singh v. Tansukh referred to.—7 Al. 353.

Where property belonging to an endowment is sought to be recovered from a third party, who asserts that he is the owner thereof, all the mutwallis of the endowment should be made parties ; Such of the mutwallis as refuse to join as plaintiffs should be made defendants.—11 Cal. 338.

Unless there is a special provision of the law, co-owners are not permitted to sue through some or one of their members, but all co-owners must join in a suit to recover their property. The defendant cannot be deprived of his right to insist on the other co owners being joined on the record by the fact that they approve of the suit being brought by the plaintiff alone.—10 Bom. 32.

There is no power in the Code to make a party to the suit a co-appellant. Secs. 32 and 582 of the Code give to an Appellate Court power only to strike out the name of a party, or to direct new parties to be added to the suit, whether as plaintiffs or defendants.—10 Bom. 227.

An order rejecting an application under sec. 32 to be made a party to a suit is not appealable under cl. 2, sec. 588.—13 Cal. 100.

The parties to the suit, the heirs and representatives of the original parties, a family carrying on a banking business, made and acted upon a new arrangement of their shares, the amounts of which were found in the First Court, and affirmed on appeal. A decree for an account and an award of interest at twelve per cent on the amounts found to be due upon the shares from the date of the closing of the business was maintained.—18 Cal. 616.

A mita held by tenants in common was sold for arrears of revenue at a time when the owners of a moiety thereof were minors. In a suit brought by the mother of these minors on their behalf against the Collector to set aside the sale, the District Court held that Regulation X of 1831, sec. 2, absolutely debarred the Collector from selling the estate of the minors during their minority and set aside the sale so far as their interests were concerned :—Held, on appeal, that the minors not being sole proprietors, their estate was not one of which the Court of Wards could assume the management, and, therefore, sec. 2 of Regulation X of 1831 did not affect the sale. In the abovementioned suit the plaintiffs impleaded also the other previous owners, of whom one was the purchaser at the sale. Two others, in their written statement, pleaded that the purchase had been made in fraud of their rights, and claimed to be still entitled to their shares in the mita on the ground that the purchaser must be held to have purchased for their benefit (Indian Trusts Act, 1882, sec. 90). They further claimed that should the sale be set aside so far as the plaintiffs' interests were concerned, the sale of their interests also should be held to be null and void. Before the suit came on for hearing the District Judge suo motu ordered that these two defendants should be made plaintiffs in the suit under sec. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure. At the date when this order was made, the claim of these defendants, had they sued to set aside the sale in their own interest, was barred by limitation:—Held, that the order was illegal.—10 Madr. 44.

The "questions involved in the suit" referred to in the second paragraph of sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, are questions between the plaintiff and the defendant, and not questions which may arise between co-defendants or co-plaintiffs, inter se. The section does not apply to questions which are not involved in the suit, but crop up incidentally during the pendency of an appeal, such as the question whether one person or another is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff-respondent. Sec. 591 of the Code enables the Court, when dealing with an appeal from a decree, to deal with any question which may arise as to any error, defect, or irregularity in any order affecting the decision of the case, though an appeal from such order might have been and has not been preferred. Googlee Sahoo v. Premalal Sahoo referred to. During the pendency of an appeal, the plaintiff-respondent died, and, on the application of the appellant, the name of H was entered on the record as respondent in place of the deceased. Subsequently K applied to be substituted as respondent, alleging that he and not H was the legal representative of the plaintiff. The Court passed an order making K a joint respondent with H. To this H objected, but he did not appeal from the order. Ultimately the Court dismissed the appeal, and passed a decree that the money claimed in the suit was payable to the two respondents. Held that sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to the case so as to authorize the Court below to add K as a respondent; that the only other section under which he might possibly have been brought in was sec. 365; that even assuming sec. 365 to apply to such a case, the Court had no power to make K a respondent jointly with H, but should have taken one or the other of the courses specified in sec. 367, so as to determine who was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff; and that the course adopted by the Court was an exceedingly inconvenient one, which ought not to have been taken, even if the Court had power under the Code to take it. Held also that, on appeal from the decree of the Court below, H was entitled to object to the order adding K as a respondent, though he had not appealed from the order itself.—9 Al. 447.

An order refusing an application under Act X of 1877, sec. 32, by a person to be added as a defendant in a suit, is not applicable.—2 Al. 904.

This section does not contemplate any application to the Court by the person proposed to be added.—5 Cal. 882.

V sued his brothers for his share of the estate of their deceased father, the father and sons being divided. V having been transported for life, his sons applied to be made plaintiffs in the suit on the ground that they had a joint interest with their father in their grandfather's estate: Held that under the circumstances, the application was properly granted.—6 Madr. 331.

The Secretary of State is not a necessary party to a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue, but the Government have such interest as would, on their application, entitle them to be made a party. Sec. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code does not preclude a Court from adding the Secretary of State as a necessary party under sec. 32 of the Code.—9 Cal. 271.

A person alleged to be a lunatic, though not found so under Act XXV of 1858, may appear either by vakil or in person. Under sec. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure no person can be added as a plaintiff unless he has previously consented thereto; and if a person objects to be added, as a plaintiff, the proper course is to make him a defendant.—7 Cal. 242.

In a suit for the partition of joint family property, the mortgagees of the right, title, and interest of the plaintiff applied under Act X of 1877, sec. 32, to be added as parties: Held that their presence was not necessary in order “to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate and settle all the questions involved in the suit” within the meaning of section —5 Cal. 882.

The object of sec. 32 which enables a Court to add parties whose presence before the Court may be necessary to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, is, to enable the Court to try and determine, once for all, material questions common to the parties and to third parties, and not merely questions between the parties to the suit.—5 Madr. 52.

Held, reading secs. 28, 29, and 32 of Act X of 1877 together, that, where an application is made under sec. 32 for the addition of a person, whether as plaintiff or defendant, such person should, as a general rule, be added only where there are questions directly arising out of and incidental to the original cause of action, in which such person has an identity of community of interest with the original plaintiff or defendant. Two suits against K for possession of the property of B, deceased, were instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge by parties claiming adversely to one another as heirs to B. The Subordinate Judge, on the applications of the plaintiffs in these suits, under sec. 32 of Act X of 1877, added the plaintiffs in the first suit as defendants in the second, and the plaintiffs in the second suit as defendants in the first. Held on appeal by the defendant K from the orders of the Subordinate Judge, applying the rule stated above, that such addition of parties, not being necessary to enable the Subordinate Judge “effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit,” were not proper. The principles on which sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859 should be interpreted enunciated by Sir Barnes Peacock in Jaygobind Dass v. Gauri Pershad Shaha, 7 W. R., 222; Raja Ram Tewari v. Lachman Pershad, 8 W. R., 15; and Ahmed Hussain v. Khodeja, 10 W. R., 316; 3 B. L. R., A. C., 28; and the remarks of PONTIFEX, J., in Muhammad Badshah v. Nicol Fleming, I. L. R., 4 Cal. 355; followed and applied.—2 Al. 738.

Plaintiff sued defendant for damages for slander of plaintiff's sister. The Court, regarding the suit as defective for want of parties, made plaintiff's sister a co-plaintiff under sec. 73 of Act VIII of 1859. Held that the defect was one not to be remedied under that section, and that as there was no right of suit in the plaintiff, the suit should have been dismissed.—1 Madr. 383.

The plaintiff in a partnership-suit to which there were twenty-one defendants applied to the Court for leave to withdraw the suit, or that the suit might be dismissed. Ten of the defendants supported the plaintiff's application. Two of the defendants objected, and applied, under sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), that they might be made plaintiffs, and that the plaintiff might be made a defendant. The Court granted their application.—7 Bom. 167.

In a suit for rent, where the defendant alleged that a person not on the record had a joint interest with the plaintiff in the property in respect of which the rent was due: Held, where the plaintiff disputed this, and objected to such course being taken, that it was improper to add such person as co-plaintiff, and that, if added at all, it should be as defendant, in order that the issue between him and the plaintiff might be properly tried. Held also that in such a case an appeal lies under sec. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code.—7 Cal. 148.

S sued N and R jointly and severally for certain monies. The Court of first instance gave S a decree for such monies against N, and dismissed the suit against R. N appealed from the decree of the Court of the first instance, but S did not appeal from it. The Appellate Court, at the first hearing of N's appeal, made R a respondent, the period allowed by law for S to have preferred an appeal having then expired, and eventually reversed the decree of the Court of first instance, dismissing the suit as against N, and giving S a decree against R. Held that, although the Appellate Court was competent to make R a party to the appeal, under secs. 32 and 582 of Act X of 1877, yet it was not competent, with reference to sec. 22 of Act XV of 1877, to give S a decree against R, the former not having appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance within the time allowed by law.—2 Al. 487.

Except possibly in the case of an assignment by the other surviving partner or partners, it is not competent to one only of two or more surviving partners to sue for a debt due to the firm. Dular Chand v. Balram Das and Gobind Prasad v. Chandar Sekhar referred to. A Court may, under sec. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure, add a party necessary to a suit, although it may be obliged by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, to dismiss the suit after such party has been added. Ramsebuk v. Ram Lall Koondoo and Kalidas Keval Das v. Nathu Bhagwan referred to. The Oriental Bank Corporation v. Charriol discussed.—14 Al. 524.

B and N, the mortgagees of a mehal, granted the mortgagors a lease of the mehal, the mortgagors agreeing to pay the mortgagees a certain rent half-yearly on account of the right they held in equal shares, and that, in default of payment of such rent, "the mortgagees" should be entitled to sue for payment. The mortgagors having made default in payment of the rent, and N refusing to join in a suit against the mortgagors to enforce payment, B sued them alone for a moiety of the rent due. The Revenue Court of first instance held, with reference to Act XVIII of 1873, sec. 106, that B could not sue separately. Held by the High Court that the order of the Revenue Court of first appeal, directing, inter alia, that the Court of first instance should re-try the suit after making N a defendant in the suit, was not illegal, notwithstanding that the provisions of Act X of 1877, sec. 32, were not made applicable to the procedure of the Revenue Courts by Act XVIII of 1873.—2 Al. 264.

During the hearing of a suit for recovery of immoveable property it appeared from the evidence and certain documents put in, that the plaintiff had mortgaged his right, title, and interest to a third person, by whom the suit was practically being carried on. On an application by the defendant for the mortgagee to be added as a party-defendant, under the provisions of sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court directed a rule to issue calling on him to show cause why he should not be added as a party-defendant or give security for costs. The rule was not applied for on petition or affidavit, and set out no grounds for the application at all. On an objection taken by the mortgagee at the hearing of the rule: Held that the grounds should have been stated on affidavit or have appeared on the face of the rule, and that the mortgagee was entitled to know what he had to answer, and consequently, the rule being informal, it was discharged with costs.—9 Cal. 735.

A sued as only son and heir of his father B. C, the widow of B, having, with the concurrence of A, taken out letters of administration of B's estate, was on the application of A at the hearing of the suit, made a co-plaintiff under sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that C ought not to have been joined as a plaintiff in the suit, inasmuch as A has no right at all to sue. Sec. 32, as far as the addition of plaintiffs is concerned only applies to those cases in which the original party who brought the suit has some title to sue. Per PONTIFEX, J.—The power given by sec. 27 of the Code ought to be exercised before the first hearing of the case. Held also that sec. 2 of Act XXVII of 1860 prohibited A from suing alone, for although he was, no doubt, beneficially entitled to recover it, yet there was no vexatious or fraudulent withholding of the debt within the meaning of that section. Per GARTH, C. J.—A debt cannot be said to be “vexatiously withheld” within the meaning of that section simply because the debtor omits to pay it.—6 Cal. 370.

Where a member of a Malabar tarwad sued the karnavan for an increased rate of maintenance:—Held, that all the members of the tarwad were necessary parties to the suit. Held, also, the Appellate Court having reversed the decree on the ground of non-joinder of such persons and directed the plaint to be returned for amendment, that the proper course was for the Appellate Court to have added the necessary parties.—7 Madr. 428.

C. sued P. to recover possession of certain lands. The plaintiff and defendant were members of the same family, and at the hearing of the suit the appellants, who were also members of the family, applied to be made parties, alleging that the suit was collusive, and that they were in possession of some of the lands which the plaintiff sought to recover, and wished to defend their possession. The Subordinate Judge granted their application, and made them co-defendants in the suit. The filed written statements setting forth their right, and time was allowed in order that the plaintiff might put in a counter statement. Before the case came on again, the Subordinate Judge had been removed, and his successor was of opinion that the causes of action, as against the original defendant P. and as against the new defendants (the appellants), were different, and ought to be the object of different suits. He accordingly dismissed the appellants from the suit under sec. 45 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), and ordered that they should bear their own costs. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the order dismissing the appellants from the suit should be reversed, and that sec. 45 did not apply. When the parties concerned, though in different relation, in a particular litigation are all before the Court, and their cases have been stated, the Court, if it finds the several causes as between plaintiff and the several defendants cannot properly or conveniently be tried together, should deal with them separately as subsuits under the title and number of the principal suit from which they spring. The dismissal of defendants added without objection, or the addition of whom has been submitted to, is not contemplated, and would tend to further needless expense.—8 Bom. 616.

A sued V and S to establish his right to attach a certain house in execution of a decree obtained by him in a previous suit. In their written statement the defendants alleged that A had obtained the decree in question by fraud. Shortly before the present suit, V had mortgaged the house to H for Rs. 33,000. About three weeks after the suit had been filed, H advanced a further sum of Rs. 5,000 to V on the same security, and on the same day (12th December, 1881,) entered into an agreement with V by which he agreed to buy the house for Rs. 45,000, the sale to be completed immediately after the decision of the present suit. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit; but, if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Subsequently V wrote to H, declaring his intention of abandoning his defence. H thereupon applied to be made a defendant to the suit, in order to protect the house from the plaintiff. Held that H was entitled to be made a party under secs. 32 and 372 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882.) Held also, that the agreement of 12th December amounted to an absolute sale, by V to H, of the equity of redemption of the house in question, and that it was not champertous.—8 Bom. 323.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 170, noted under sec. 28; 5 Bom. 609, noted under sec. 34; 14 Cal. 400, noted under sec. 27.

33. Where a defendant is added, the plaintiff, if previously filed, shall unless the Court direct otherwise, be amended in such manner as may be necessary, and an amended copy of the summons shall be served on the new defendant and the original defendants.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

34. All objections for want of parties, or for joinder of parties who have no interest in the suit, or for misjoinder as co-plaintiffs or co-defendants, shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases before the first hearing; and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived by the defendant.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The words in para. 1 of sec. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), "at or before the first hearing," are merely directory and not mandatory, and therefore a plaintiff may, subsequently to the "first hearing," amend his plaint, provided such amendment does not alter the original character of his suit. The plaintiffs (mortgagors) in a suit against their mortgagees sought only for production of the mortgage-deed or for an account, although the averments in the plaint warranted a prayer for redemption. Subsequently to the first hearing of the suit they applied to be allowed to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for redemption. Held that the provisions of sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) did not preclude the Court from permitting the amendment to be made. It is competent to a Court, at any time before passing a decree, to frame an additional issue embracing a matter not included in the plaint (provided it be not inconsistent with it), or in the written statement, but which may appear upon the allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any person present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties or persons. Sec. 34 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) limits the time within which a defendant may object for want of parties, but it does not so limit the right of the plaintiff to add parties. In some cases sec. 34 would not prevent even a defendant from objecting to the want of a party after the first hearing, e. g., where after the first hearing and before decree a coparcener or remainderman or reversioner is born, or where a woman (who is a party) is married to a man who is not a party to the suit. The objection did not exist at or before the first hearing, and therefore could not have been made or waived by the defendant; and if he made it at the earliest opportunity after it came into existence he would have satisfied the spirit of sec. 34.—I. L. R., 5 Bom. 609.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 580, noted under sec. 30, 16 Bom. 119, noted under sec. 26.

35. When there are more plaintiffs than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead, or act for such other in any proceeding under this Code: and in like manner, when there are more defendants than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead, or act for such other in any such proceeding.

Each of several plaintiffs or defendants may authorize any other to appear, &c., for him.

The authority shall be in writing signed by the party giving it, and shall be filed in Court.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where one of several representatives of a deceased judgment-creditor applies for the execution of a decree, the general powers of attorney contemplated by sec. 17, cl. I, of Act VIII of 1859, are not necessary, but it is sufficient if the applicant is authorized under sec. 115 to act for the other representatives.—2 Bom. H. C. R., 109.

Recognized Agents and Pleadors.

36. Any appearance, application, or act in or to any Court required, or authorized by law to be made or done by a party to a suit or appeal in such Court, may, except when therewith expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf:

Appearances, &c, may be in person, by recognized agent, or by pleader.

Provided that any such appearance shall be made by the party in person, if the Court so direct.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Rule of Court, dated the 22nd May 1883, and authorizing legal practitioners in certain cases to appoint other legal practitioners to hold their briefs and appear in their place, was passed to facilitate the work of the Court and for the convenience of the pleaders practising before it, and was fully within the powers conferred upon the High Court by sec. 635 of the Civil Procedure Code.—I. L. R., 9 Al. 613.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 105 and 16 Bom. 23, noted under sec. 2; 9 Al. 617, noted under sec. 635; 15 Cal. 800, noted under sec. 13.

37. The recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications, and acts, may be made or done, are—Recognized agents.

(a) persons holding general powers-of-attorney from parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application, or act, is made or done, authorizing them to make and do such appearances, applications, and acts on behalf of such parties;

Persons holding powers-of-attorney from parties out of jurisdiction.

(b) mukhtars duly certificated under any law for the time being in force, and holding special powers-of-attorney authorizing them to do, on behalf of their principals, such acts as may legally be done by mukhtars;

(c) persons carrying on trade or business for and in the names of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application, or act, is made or done, in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorized to make and do such appearances, applications, and acts.

Persons carrying on trade or business for parties out of jurisdiction.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to the territories now administered respectively by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces; but in those territories the recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications, and acts, may be made and done, shall be such persons as the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, declare in this behalf.

Recognized agents in Panjab, Oudh, and Central Provinces.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A recognized agent, under cl. 2, sec. 17, Act VIII of 1859, cannot prosecute or defend a suit in his own name. A gomasta of a firm ceases to be a recognized agent under cl. 2, sec. 17, Act VIII of 1859, when the business of the firm ceased before the institution of the suit.—5 B. L. R., (App.) 11; 13 W. R., 344.

The munim of a firm is not, for the purpose of presenting a plaint, the recognized agent (under sec. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code) of a partner who is present within the jurisdiction. The munim and such partner should join in presenting the plaint or appointing a pleader. The partners not so joining is not a ground on which an Appellate Court should reverse the decree of a lower Court, unless the irregularity affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 150.

The munim of a firm which has ceased to carry on business, who is engaged in collecting the assets of such firm, and otherwise winding up its affairs, is a recognized owner of such firm within the meaning of sec. 17, cl. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code, and can, on behalf of his absent principal, maintain or defend a suit brought in respect of the business of the firm whose affairs he is engaged in winding up.—9 Bom. H. C. R., 427.

An agent of a party, residing within the jurisdiction of the Court, not being an authorized agent as contemplated by cl. 1, sec. 17, Act VIII of 1859, was not competent to appear as plaintiff on behalf of his principal, and to file and verify the plaint as required by sec. 27 of that enactment.—1 Agra H. C. R., 115.

A mere mukhtar, unless specially authorized, is not the recognized agent of the judgment-debtor on whom notice can be rightly served within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code.—17 W. R., 389.

P filed a suit in the Second-class Subordinate Judge's Court at Mahad. As P resided at Thana, outside the jurisdiction of the Court of Mahad, she authorized her agent, under a general power of attorney, to conduct the suit on her behalf. The agent carried on the litigation up to the final decree passed by the High Court on appeal in P's favour. The agent then sought to execute the decree. The Court at Mahad passed an order upon his darkhast granting only partial execution. Against this order the agent filed an appeal in the District Court at Thana. Then, for the first time, the judgment-debtors challenged the agent's right to represent P, who was residing within the District Court's jurisdiction. This objection prevailed, and the appeal was dismissed. Held that the agent could not be prevented from executing the decree which he had obtained as agent. No objection had been taken to the agent's right to represent P at any stage of the litigation prior to the final decree. That objection must, therefore, be deemed to have been virtually waived, and could not be raised after the defendants had had their chance of success in the litigation.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 68.

A mere power to sue does not authorize an agent to do more than employ a Vakil on the terms of paying him a reasonable remuneration.—10 Bom. 18.

Act XVIII of 1879 is an amending as well as a consolidating Act, and one of the respects in which it amended the old law was the conferring upon the High Court power "to make rules declaring what shall be deemed to be the functions, powers, and duties of the mukhtears practising in the Subordinate Courts. When a person other than a duly certificated and enrolled mukhtear constantly and as a means of livelihood, performs any of the functions or powers which the rule framed by the High Court in accordance with the provisions of the Legal Practitioners Act says are the functions and powers of a mukhtear, he practises as a mukhtear, and is liable to a penalty under sec. 32 of the Act. The words "any person" in sec. 32 embrace pure outsiders as well as duly qualified and enrolled mukhteers who have failed to take out their certificates. G. N., though not a certificated mukhtear, was in the habit of appointing and instructing pleaders in the Civil Courts on account of certain persons who paid him a regular monthly salary for so doing. In a proceeding against him under the Legal Practitioners Act, G. N. made this statement: "I receive a letter from the mofussil from a person and act for him, he sending the vakalatnama with his letter. I receive monthly wages from each of the persons who employ me. Each of the employers I have mentioned belongs to a distinct family, and lives in a separate village." Held that G. N. was neither a private servant nor a recognized agent of any of his employers within the meaning of sec. 37 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was liable to a penalty under sec. 32 of the Legal Practitioners Act for having practised as a mukhtear. Held also that, having regard to the Court in which G. N. practised, the words in sec. 32, "to a fine not exceeding ten times the amount of the stamp required by this Act for a certificate authorizing him so to practise in such Court," were equivalent to the words "to a fine not exceeding Rs. 250."—14 Cal. 556.

The term 'non-resident' in sec. 37, cl. a, of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), covers every absence which may reasonably be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the Legislature in using that term; thus, where, a Marwadi had resided for forty years at Pen, and had also a place of business there, but who had gone to his native country to get his sisters married, and had been absent upwards of four months, it was held that he was 'non-resident' within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Pen Court, and that a person holding a general power-of-attorney from him was a recognized agent within the meaning of the section.—6 Bom. 100.

A suit was brought by the Political Agent, Southern Maratha Country, as administrator of the estate of the Chief of Mudhol, who was described in the plaint as being nineteen years of age, to eject the defendants from certain lands, belonging to the Chief, situated in the Satara District. The defendants raised a preliminary objection to the institution of the suit by the Political Agent, on the ground that he was neither a certificated guardian of the Chief under the Bombay Minor's Act XX of 1864, nor a recognized agent within the meaning of sec. 37 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the appointment, by Government, of the Political Agent to manage the estate of the Chief of Mudhol during a certain period could not give him the position contemplated by the Bombay Minor's Act XX of 1864. With regard to property in British India, he had no authority to sue on behalf of the minor, without obtaining a certificate of administration under the Act. Held, also, that the Political Agent was not a "recognized agent" of the Chief of Mudhol within the meaning of sec. 37, clause a, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the irregularity of the Political Agent's suing for the Chief, without authority, was one affecting the merits of the case, though not the jurisdiction of the Court. If the Political Agent was not properly representing the Chief, he had no merits, no right as against the defendants. The District Judge was, therefore, right in reversing the decrees of the first Court,—Sec. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure having no application to the present case.—11 Bom. 53.

To satisfy the conditions of sec. 76 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as to service of summons on an agent, there must be a person residing without the local jurisdiction, but carrying on business or work within those limits by a manager or agent, and sued on account of such work—that is, business either actually itself carried on by the agent or manager, or forming part of the business in the sense of a connected course of transactions to the management of which he has been duly appointed. Secs. 76 and 37, clause (c), are to be construed together, and are intended to carry out the same scheme, of relief, which rests upon the idea that, where an agent has been put forward substantially to take the place of his principal within a particular jurisdiction, he should take the place of such principal (at the option of any person who has dealt with him) in any legal proceedings that may arise out of the business or work in which the agent has been virtually a local principal. The manager or agent contemplated by the Code is one who has an initiative and independent discretion, albeit subject possibly to principles and general orders prescribed for his guidance. A mere servant employed to carry out orders or to execute a particular commission, or a factor or common agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts, is not such an agent. The firm of Ganesh Lall Soonder Lall carried on business at Agra. It had no place of business in Bombay, but it employed G as its agent in Bombay in certain dealings which it had with the plaintiff. The letters and telegrams of the firm to G were sent to the plaintiff's place of business, or addressed to G as an individual, not in the name of the firm. G did not himself initiate any business, or in any way stand between his employer's firm and the plaintiff. Held that G was not the defendant's manager or agent within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, sec. 76, and that, in an action against the defendants, service of summons upon him was not due service. G in particular instances drew hundis on the firm of Ganesh Lall Soonder Lall, which that firm duly accepted and paid. Held that he might reasonably be deemed their agent or manager for this particular kind of business if for no other; and service on him might probably suffice in the case of a plaintiff suing on hundi transactions as with the firm through him. Service unduly made under sec. 76 does not become effectual by reason of the fact of such service being subsequently notified to the parties really interested as defendants. Semble.—Service duly effected under sec. 76 is effectual without reference to the circumstance of its being or not being communicated to the real defendants.—4 Bom. 416.

38. Processes served on the recognized agent of a party to a suit or appeal shall be as effectual as if the same been served on the party in person, unless the Court otherwise directs.

Service of process on recognized agent.

The provisions of this Code for the service of process on a party to a suit shall apply to the service of process on recognized agent.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

39. The appointment of a pleader to make or do any appearance, application, or act as aforesaid, shall be in writing, and such appointment shall be filed in Court.

Appointment of pleader.

When so filed, it shall be considered to be in force until revoked with the leave of the Court, by a writing signed by the client and filed in Court, or until the client or the pleader dies, or all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client.

No advocate of any High Court established by Royal Charter shall be required to present any document empowering him to act.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Collector of a district, who was Agent for the Court of Wards, filed a suit on behalf of a ward of the Court of Wards and executed a vakalatnama to a Pleader whom he retained to conduct it. The Collector died before the suit was determined:—Held, that it was not necessary for a new vakalatnama to be executed to enable the pleader to proceed with the conduct of the suit.—I. L. R., 15 Madr. 135.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 617, noted under sec. 635; 9 Al. 618, noted under sec. 36.

40. Processes served on the pleader of any party, or left at the office or ordinary residence of such pleader, relative to a suit or appeal, and whether the same be for the personal appearance of the party or not, shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the pleader represents; and, unless the Court otherwise directs, shall be as effectual for all purposes in relation to the suit or appeal as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person.

Service of process on pleader.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

41. Besides the recognized agents described in Section 37, any person residing within the jurisdiction of the Court may be appointed an agent to accept service of process.

Agent to receive process.

Such appointment may be special or general, and shall be made by an instrument in writing, signed by the principal; and such instrument, or, if the appointment be general, a duly attested copy thereof, shall be filed in Court.

His appointment to be in writing, and to be filed in Court.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER IV.

OF THE FRAME OF THE SUIT.

Every suit shall, as far as practicable, be so framed as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects in dispute, and so to prevent further litigation concerning them.

Suit how to be framed.

Notes.

In disposing of a second appeal, the High Court is competent, under Act X of 1877, sec. 42, to consider the question whether the plaintiff has any cause of action or not, although such question has not been raised by the defendant-appellant in the Courts below or in his memorandum of second appeal, but is raised for the first time at the hearing of such appeal.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 884.

Under secs. 42 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, plaintiffs must bring their entire claim and every remedy enforceable in respect of that claim into Court at once; and, if they fail to do that in any suit, they cannot afterwards avail themselves of any remedy on which they have not chosen to insist in the first suit. Suits for enhanced rent, and suits for rent, are claims arising in respect of the same subject-matter, and a plaintiff cannot be allowed, after having unsuccessfully sued for rent at an enhanced rate, to sue for the original rent for previous years.—9 Cal. 919.

R purchased two houses under the same sale-deed. Four years afterwards he sued for possession of one of the houses, alleging that he had been dispossessed by the ancestor of the defendant. Subsequently he sued the same defendant for possession of the other, alleging that, at the time when he instituted the former suit, he had already been dispossessed of the house now in question, and by the same person. Held that, although the plaintiff's title to both houses rested on the title acquired by him under one and the same sale-deed, yet the cause of action, viz., his ouster from the two houses on different occasions, gave rise to two separate causes of action, which we has not bound to join in the former suit, there being nothing in the Civil Procedure Code to compel him to do so. Jardine Skinner and Co. v. Rance Shama Soonduree Debia (13 W. R., 196) and Ram Sunder Saha v. Delanney (20 W. R., 103) referred to.—6 Al. 616.

See I. L. R., 19 Cal. 159, noted under sec. 13.

43. Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action; but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court.

Suit to include whole claim.

If a plaintiff omit to sue in respect of, or intentionally Relinquishment of part of claim. relinquish, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished.

A person entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of his remedies; but if he omits Omission to sue for one of several remedies.

(except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing) to sue for any of such remedies, he shall not afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted.

For the purpose of this section, an obligation and a collateral security for its performance shall be deemed to constitute but one cause of action.

Illustration.

A lets a house to B at a yearly rent of Rupees 1,200. The rent for the whole of the years 1881 and 1882 is due and unpaid. A sues B only for the rent due for 1882. A shall not afterwards sue B for the rent due for 1881.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A plaintiff is bound to include in his plaint all the grounds upon which his suit is based. A second suit upon a different ground, which existed before the commencement of the first suit, would not be allowed, as it would be splitting the cause of action.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 421; 12 W. R., 336; 20 W. R., 482.

The plaintiff sued for a certain specified quantity of land as being between specified boundaries. On measurement, however, it was found there was more land within those boundaries than the plaintiff claimed. He obtained only a decree for what he claimed, though he had claimed all the land up to the boundary (the river) on one side: the excess was deducted on that side. Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that a subsequent suit in which he claimed land which had accreted to the excess portion which was not decreed to him in the former suit was not barred by section 7, Act VIII of 1859.—9 B. L. R., 150; 16 W. R., (P. C.) 5; W. R., 211.

A recovered from B, under the terms of his lease, a refund of the excess of rent paid by him in respect of the years 1861, 1862 and 1863. While that suit was pending, B recovered from A rent at the same rate in respect of the three succeeding years. Held that A was entitled to bring another suit against B for damages in respect of the excess of rent paid by him during the years subsequent to the institution of the prior suit.—1 B. L. R., (F. B.) 97; 10 W. R., (F. B.) 41.

The plaintiff brought a suit for possession of land with mesne-profits. The suit was dismissed. He appealed on the question of possession only, and obtained a decree for possession without any mention of mesne-profits, and in execution of the decree he obtained possession. Held that a subsequent suit to recover mesne-profits from the date of the decree for the period of six years next before the commencement of the suit, exclusive of the period the plaintiff was in possession, was not barred by sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859.—4 B. L. R., (F. B.) 113; 13 W., (F. B.) 15.

At a sale for arrears of rent, A became the purchaser of a certain putni talook. B, whose putni right had been sold, sued for and obtained a decree for reversal of the sale on the ground of irregularity. In the meantime, A had committed default, and the putni was again sold for arrears of rent. The zemindar drew out from the Collectorate the amount due to him. C, who had bought B's right, title, and interest in his decree, now sued for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree. He afterwards sued A for mesne-profits for the time during which he was in possession of the putni talook. This was a suit by C against A for recovery of the amount drawn out by the zemindar, on the ground that, in consequence of A having collected the rents from the talook, which were to go towards payment of the rent due to the zemindar, and having fraudulently withheld such payment, he had sustained damage to the extent of the amount taken by the zemindar. Held that the suit was barred by sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859.—5 B. L. R., 184; 13 W. R., 261; 5 B. L. R., 187 note; 13 W. R., 205.

In a suit by members of a Hindu family which had become separate in 1862, to recover certain moneys said to have been misappropriated by the defendant while manager of the joint-estate, it appeared that the plaintiffs had previously sued him since the separation to recover certain other moneys belonging to the said joint-estate, also said to have been misappropriated by him while manager, and obtained a decree. Held that the present claim should have been included in the former suit; and, whether the omission was by mistake or not, it must be taken to have been relinquished, and under sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 could not now be entertained.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 265; 12 W. R., 79.

Sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 does not bar a suit for a declaration that property in the defendant's possession is subject to the mortgagee's lien, on the ground that such property was part of the property mortgaged, and was not included in a previous suit against other parties for other portions of the property.—14 B. L. R., 418, note; 15 W. R., 486.

A Hindu widow executed deeds of gift in which her late husband's mother, the nearest reversioner, concurred. After the death of the widow, but in the lifetime of the mother, the next presumable reversioner sued to set aside the deeds and for possession. Such suit was held to be no bar to a second suit by the same plaintiff to set aside a mortgage by the widow and the mother of the deceased of a portion of the property which was the subject of the first suit, although in that suit the property was described as subject to the mortgage, and the name of the mortgagee was mentioned. The true test of the application of sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 is, whether there has been a splitting of the cause of action.—10 B. L. R., (P. C.) I; 14 Moore's I. A. 176, 187.

When two or more instalments of a promissory note, payable on the face of it by instalments, are due, the holder of the note is not at liberty to sue separately for each instalment or for some of them; he must sue for all the instalments due in one action. A judgment recovered in a suit for one instalment when others are due is a bar to a suit subsequently brought for the latter.—12 B. L. R., 37; 20 W. R. 358.

Where a suit for possession would be met by a plea in bar, the plaintiff cannot be permitted to have the question of title tried under colour of a rent suit, such a proceeding being opposed to the principle laid down in Act VIII of 1859, sec. 7.—19 W. R., 91; 8 B. L. R., 180; 16 W. R., 235.

A party is bound to bring forward his whole case in respect of the matter in litigation and open to him upon the points for decision in the suit. He cannot abstain from relying upon nor abandon a ground of claim which is in question and proper for consideration and decision in the suit, and afterwards make it a cause of fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter.—2 M. H. C. R., 131.

The plaintiff brought a suit in 1860 against the defendants to recover his share in the joint family property. The present claim, which was for a share in the rents of certain inam lands, also joint family property, was not included in the suit of 1860. At the date of the former suit the land in respect to which the present suit was brought was subject to the provisions of Reg. IV of 1831, and the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to try the suit in respect to such land without the permission of the Government. It did not appear that the plaintiff had applied to the Government for permission to sue. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded by sec. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code from maintaining the present suit. Meaning of the words "cause of action" discussed.—5 M. H. C. R., 419.

A Hindu, whose share in an ancestral estate had been alienated by a co-proprietor, instituted simultaneously three different actions against the co-proprietor, and the persons to whom the alienations had respectively been made, to recover several distinct parcels of land which constituted his share. Held that, as the plaintiff had but one single cause of action against the co-proprietor, he ought to have brought but one suit against him, and either included all the alienees in this suit, or brought separate actions against the alienees for the several pieces of land in their possession, and caused the proceedings in these suits to be stayed till the suit against the co-proprietor was determined. The course of procedure last indicated is the more correct course.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 30.

In applying the provisions of sec. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, the first thing to be considered is whether the cause of action in the second suit is the same as the cause of action in the first. If the cause of action be the same, the second suit is barred in respect of any portion of the claim omitted from the first suit, but not otherwise. Accordingly, where the plaintiff, as a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued for a share of a particular portion of the family-property leaving the rest undivided, and his suit was rejected, as it had not been brought for his whole share, it was held that the suit was no bar to a second suit to have the whole property divided, as the causes of action in the two suits were entirely distinct.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 205.

The plaintiffs in 1863 sued the defendants for the plaintiff's share in certain undivided family-property, and did not include in their claim certain lands then in the possession of mortgagees, which lands had been mortgaged by one of the defendants as manager of the family. The defendants subsequently redeemed the mortgaged lands. The plaintiffs then filed a suit to recover their share of the lands so redeemed. Held that they were entitled to maintain such suit, as the mortgaged lands had not been available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 64.

In 1869 P brought a suit against his grandmother K and another person for possession of a piece of land which P alleged had descended to him from his grandfather. In 1870 P sued the said K and one E for some trees which he also claimed by right of inheritance from his grandfather. Held that the causes of action in the two suits by P were different—viz., unlawful alienations by K of the respective properties, the subject-matter of the different suits. Sec. 7, Civil Procedure Code, requires that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising from the same cause of action; but, although the Civil Procedure allows of claims arising from different causes of action being included in the same plaint, there is no provision of law which makes it obligatory on the plaintiff to do so.—9 Bom. H. C. R., 257.

Where a mortgagor filed a suit to redeem mortgaged lands, alleging that the mortgagees in possession had been overpaid, but did not, in that suit, claim to recover the overpayments, which were therefore not awarded to him, it was held that he could not recover such overpayments in a fresh suit brought for that purpose, as his claim was barred by sec. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 97.

A suit for redemption of land, without specification of details, includes a claim for restoration of all accretions and improvements which it may have received while in the hands of the mortgagee; and if the Court omits to adjudicate upon part of the claim, the mortgagor is not precluded, by sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859, from bringing a second suit in respect of that part.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 369.

In 1861 the plaintiff brought a general partition-suit (No. 1363) to recover his share of the family-property in the possession of the first defendant, and did not include in that claim a field then in the possession of a mortgagee. The field was subsequently redeemed by the first defendant, who again mortgaged it to the second defendant. The plaintiff then filed the present suit to recover his share in the field. The first Court allowed the plaintiff's claim, but the District Judge on appeal threw it out, on the ground that it was barred both by sec. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and by the "law of limitation." The Judge based the latter finding on certain allegations made by the plaintiff in suit No. 1363, and in another suit brought by him against the first defendant and the then mortgagee of the field, from which allegations the Judge inferred a separation between the plaintiff and the first defendant. Held in special appeal that the claim was not barred by sec. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the mortgaged field was not available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit, No. 1363 of 1861. The true question for consideration in cases of this kind is whether the former suit was one in which the plaintiff might have recovered precisely that which he seeks to recover in the second, and, where the former suit is one for an actual division of property, the plaintiff is not bound in it to ask for a declaration defining his right in property not then capable of division. Vithal v. Hari Shankar (8 Bom. H. C. R., A. C., 64) followed.—12 Bom. H. C. R., 148.

The words of sec. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code were imperative against the splitting of a claim into parts. The consequences of an infringement of that direction were not, that the suit which does not include the whole claim shall for this reason be barred. The words "in bar of suit" referred to any subsequent suit brought for the portion of the claim omitted in the previous suit, and not to such previous suit itself. A plaintiff who omits to sue for a portion of his claim, stating that he does not relinquish it, but means to sue again for it, can again nothing by such a statement. Neither can such a statement furnish a reason for holding the first suit to be barred.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 90.

Sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859, did not require a plaintiff having several distinct causes of action against one defendant to comprise them all in one suit subject to the hazard of forfeiting all those not included in the first suit. The object of the clause was only to provide against splitting a cause of action.—2 W. R., Act X., 31; 3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 20.

The 7th sec. of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, prohibits the splitting of a claim, but does not require that all remedies by suit on all the securities which a creditor may hold, be enforced together. If a plaintiff, from negligence or other cause, omits to prefer a portion of his claim which seeks to charge the land, or, having preferred it, is content to accept an imperfect adjudication, or one which awards him only a portion of the relief claimed he cannot afterwards bring forward in a fresh suit matter which might well have been then disposed of.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 29.

Sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 applied whether the omission to sue had been the result of knowledge and intention or not. The test as to whether a suit was barred by sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 was, whether the claim in the new suit was in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 27.

Where a plaintiff had sued for and obtained damages against one of several persons who had joined together in defaming his character, held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that a similar suit by the plaintiff against another of such wrong-doers would not lie; and that the cause of action in both suits being identical, and satisfaction having been obtained in one, the other was barred by virtue of sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 142.

S, the plaintiff's guardian, and D, the husband of M, one of the defendants in the suit, held a mouzah in equal shares. S sold the half share held by her to M; some portion of the mouzah being in the possession of the other defendants, S and D sued them to recover it and also for mesne-profits, and obtained a decree. The defendants appealed, whereupon S filed a solehnamah. The decree was upheld, however, by the lower Appellate Court. In special appeal the Sudder Court refused to give the renouncing plaintiff any decree for mesne-profits of a share. The plaintiff, who had then come of age, was not represented in the litigation in the Court. Shortly afterwards, he sued S and M to set aside the sale to M, and obtained a decree. On D's death, M obtained possession of the land which had been the subject of the suit by S and D. The plaintiff now sued to recover a half share of the land sued for by S and D, and of the mesne-profits recovered or recoverable by M under the decrees of the Sudder Court and the lower Courts, and to set aside the solehnamah. Held that as to M the suit was not barred by sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 172.

A plaintiff suing for the recovery of land is bound to put forward his whole case at once, and cannot be allowed to maintain a second suit for the same cause of action, merely by alleging that the Collector's order sought to be set aside is of a different date and description from that which was sought to be set aside in the former suit.—2 Agra H. C. R., 305.

Where the plaintiff claimed by right of inheritance for partition of one out of a number of villages left by his ancestor, and the lower Court dismissed the claim as untenable under sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859, held that that section, though it might operate as a bar to any future claim by plaintiff for partition of the remaining villages by right of inheritance, could not be held to bar the present claim.—1 Agra H. C. R., 55.

A suit having been brought in a Small Cause Court for damages laid at Rs. 400 for wrongful dismissal, a decree was given for Rs. 75 per mensem, the amount of wages which had been agreed on, up to the filing of the plaint, the Judge intimating that for damages accruing after the filing of the plaint further suits month by month might be brought. Two suits were accordingly brought for the two months next succeeding the date of the first suit and decrees were obtained. The High Court upon an application made by the defendant set aside these decrees, on the ground that after the first suit no further suits could lie.—6 C. L., R., 91.

extended to cases of omission to ask for any particular description of relief which a plaintiff might intend to seek against the parties to the suit in respect of his cause of action.—1 W. R., 199.

The fact that a defendant's title rests upon different and distinct transactions, supported by distinct and separate evidence, does not necessarily imply that to a party contesting their title, there are different causes of action warranting separate suits.—20 W. R., 103.

In a suit for demurrage, the cause of action being the detention of a boat, plaintiff is bound to sue for the whole of the demurrage due; failing to claim a portion, he is barred by sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859, from suing subsequently for such portion.—14 W. R., 253.

A suit for damages for wrongful detention of property (in this case a cart and bullocks seized in execution of decree against another party) is barred under sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859, after a decree in a former suit for the recovery or value of the same property.—18 W. R., 337.

A suit by an heir on the same cause of action on which a suit was previously brought by his father, and for property which, though different, might have been included in that suit, is barred by sec. 7, Act VIII of 1859.—3 W. R., 25.

A former suit for a share of property purchased in the name of G, one of the members of a joint-family which claimed it to be joint-property does not bar the plaintiff from suing for other of the family-property which was bought in the name of M, another of the members, at another time, the latter claim being no part of the claim arising out of the cause of action in respect of the property first mentioned so as to come within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 7.—20 W. R., (P. C.) 450.

Where a lease in one case, after resuming certain rent-free lands on behalf of his landlord, retained them in his own possession, and, in another case, retained portions of land which he had obtained by way of lease, held that, though the lessor's title to recover was the same, the causes of action were entirely distinct.—24 W. R., 212.

A suit for arrears of rent was not barred under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 7, by the fact that the plaintiff had split his claim—i. e., the jumma; but the circumstance that a part of the jumma had been omitted would be a bar to the plaintiff suing subsequently for such part.—21 W. R., 272.

Petitioners filed two suits in a Small Cause Court on the same day to recover rent due for two successive years under the same lease. The sum of the two claims exceeded the pecuniary limits of the Court's jurisdiction. The suit for the rent of the first year was dismissed under sec. 43 on the ground that the claim ought to have been included in the suit for the second year's rent:—Held that, as the petitioners had no intention of abandoning either claim, the proper course was to allow them to withdraw both suits and file a fresh suit in a competent Court.—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 147.

A leased certain land to B. The lease expired in 1877. B continued to hold over and refused to accept a fresh lease from A. A sued B in 1882 for mesne-profits for three years, but did not claim possession of the land. The suit was dismissed on a preliminary point. A then sued B to recover possession of the land and mesne-profits. It was argued that A's claim to the land was barred by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, because he omitted to claim the land in the former suit for mesne-profits. Held that the suit was not barred.—11 Madr. 210.

The plaintiff, having obtained a decree against the defendants for the payment to her of a monthly sum for her maintenance, subsequently sued to have it constituted a charge on certain land. Held that the claim in both suits arose out of the same cause of action, and, therefore, the plaintiff was precluded by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure from asserting in the second suit the claim which she might have asserted in the first.—11 Madr. 127.

A filed a suit against B to redeem the land in dispute, alleging that it had been mortgaged to B, and that the mortgage-debt had been more than paid off. He, therefore, prayed for an account and restoration of the land on payment of the sum that might be found due. The Court found that the alleged mortgage was not proved, and dismissed the suit. Thereupon A filed a suit in ejectment against B. Held that the ejectment-suit was not barred under sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Failure in a redemption-suit does not bar a subsequent suit in ejectment, the causes of action in the two suits being essentially different.—13 Bom. 326.

Upon a settlement of accounts between plaintiff and defendants, Rs. 3,985-6-9 was found due by the defendants, who agreed to pay the same. They gave to plaintiff an order on their agents to pay Rs. 2,500 from the profits of certain land, and promised to pay the balance within a month. Plaintiff filed two suits, one for Rs. 2,500 and the other for the balance of the debt. Defendants pleaded that both suits should be dismissed, as brought in contravention of the requirements of sec. 43. The lower Courts held that there were two distinct causes of action, and decreed both claims :—Held, on second appeal, that plaintiff had only one cause of action, and that the decree in one of the suits must be reversed.—9 Madr. 279.

A claim for the price of goods sold is a cause of action of a different nature from a claim for damages for non-acceptance of goods pursuant to a contract. Such claims therefore, although arising under one and the same contract, may be sued upon separately, sec. 43 notwithstanding. Per WILSON, J.—Where there is one contract for the purchase of goods and the purchaser takes some of the goods, but breaks his contract in part by not paying for the goods he takes, and in part by not taking and paying for the remainder, and both breaches occur before any suit is brought, the claim of the person suing is one arising out of one cause of action; and the whole claim must be included in one suit.—12 Cal. 339.

When a suit for a declaration of title and confirmation of possession of certain land has been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession of the land at the time of instituting the suit, a subsequent suit on the same title to recover possession is not barred under sec. 43. A cause of action consists of the circumstances and acts which are alleged by the plaintiff to exist, and which, if proved, will entitle him to the relief or to some part of the relief prayed for, and is to be sought for within the four corners of the plaint. Jibanti Nath Khan v. Shib Nath Chuckerbutty, 8 Cal. 819, followed.—12 Cal. 291.

A testator bequeathed all his property to his nephew, in which he included the share of his brother's widow in the ancestral property; but at the same time made a suitable provision for her maintenance and worship. The widow at first sued for and obtained the allowance allotted to her under the will, and afterwards brought a suit for a share in the ancestral property. Held that, although having regard to the doctrine of election (Succession Act, sec. 172), the widow was precluded from again bringing a suit for a share of the ancestral property, it could not be said that the suit was barred under the provisions of sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the two claims were distinct and indeed inconsistent, and did not arise out of the same cause of action.—12 Cal. 60.

Act VIII of 1859 required that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action, meaning the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action upon which the suit was brought, not that every suit should include every cause of action, or every claim, which the plaintiff had against the defendant. Accordingly, where a plaintiff had sued to obtain his share of an estate in land, in consequence of having been wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant, {whom he afterwards in the present suit sued for his share of personal property, being entitled to both under a will, it was held that the subsequent suit was not barred by reason of the non-claim in the prior one. The claim in respect of the personalty had not arisen out of the cause of action which existed in consequence of the wrongful dispossession; the case was not like one of the conversion of several things; and causes of action were distinct. Moonshee Buzloor Raheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum (11 M. I. A. 553) referred to.—8 Madr. 520.

N, being mortgagee in possession of five-eighths of a pangu (share) of certain land—security for a debt of Rs. 400—hypothecated his rights to M in 1876. In 1878 K bought two-eighths of the said five-eighths from the mortgagor. In 1879, K sued N, claiming possession of his two-eighths on payment of Rs. 400, and obtained a decree and possession thereof. Pending this suit, N assigned his mortgage to M. M was aware of the suit, and K was aware of the assignment when he paid Rs. 400 into Court for N. In 1883, K bought the remaining three-eighths from the mortgagor, and sued N and M to recover possession thereof. M pleaded that the suit was barred by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as K might have recovered the five-eighths in the suit against H. Held that this plea was bad. M also pleaded that he had a valid mortgage over three-eighths Held, by Muttusami Ayyar, J., that, if the assignment of the mortgage by N to M was a real transaction, this plea was good. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—The doctrine of lis pendens can only be relied on as a protection of the plaintiff's right to property actually sought to be recovered in the suit.—9 Madr. 92.

The plaintiff sued under the provisions of Act X of 1859 to recover arrears of rent for the years 1287, 1288, and 1289 (1880—1882), after having obtained a decree for the rent due for the year 1286 (1879) in a suit instituted after the rent for the year 1289 (1882) had become due. Held that the provisions of sec. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code applied, and that the second suit was consequently barred. Madho Prakash Singh v. Murli Manohar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 405,) cited and approved; Taruck Chunder Mookerjee v. Panchu Mohiny Debya (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 791) cited.—12 Cal. 50.

A decree for damages in a suit instituted on 2nd June 1879 (27th Joist 1286 F.) on a breach of contract for not having given possession of land according to the terms of a zar-i-peshgi patta, awarded the profits of the land for 1283 F., which would have been received by the plaintiff had the contract been performed. The decree-holder then brought the present suit (14th June 1880 or 21st Joist 1287 F.) for damages for the breach of the same contract, claiming the profits accrued during 1284, 1285 and 1286 F. (1876-77 to 1878-79). Held that the High Court had rightly decided that, in regard to Act X of 1877, sec. 43, the plaintiff could not recover so much of the profits as had already accrued at the date of the institution of the prior suit, inasmuch as the claim in respect of such profits might have been included therein, viz., the profits for the two years 1284 and 1285 F., which had expired when that suit was brought.—12 Cal. 482.

In 1874 the plaintiff leased certain immoveable property to the defendant, and the latter executed a deed which he covenanted to pay the annual rent and fulfil other conditions of the lease, and gave security in Rs. 3,000 by mortgage of landed property. In 1874 the plaintiff obtained decree in the Revenue Court for arrears of rent, and the decrees were partially satisfied and then became barred by limitation. In 1884 the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the balance due by enforcement of the mortgage security against the purchasers of the mortgaged property. Held that the plaintiff had two separate rights of action, one on the contract to pay rent, and the other on the mortgage security; that he could only enforce the first by a suit in the Revenue Court for arrears of rent, and the second by suit in the Civil Court; and consequently there could be no bar to the latter suit by reason of the suit instituted in the Revenue Court, with reference to sec. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that when the plaintiff obtained his decrees for rent the mortgage security did not merge in the judgment-debts, nor did he lose his remedy on it; that the two rights were distinct, and the right of action on the mortgage security was not lost because the execution of the decrees for rent was time-barred, the only effect of which was that the debt was not recoverable in execution, but the debt existed nevertheless so far as to enable the amount secured by mortgage to be recovered by suit in the Civil Court, so long as such suits were not barred by limitation. Emam Mumtazood-deen Mahomed v. Rajcoomar Dass (15 B. L. R., 408), referred to. Held also that the amount which the plaintiff could recover by enforcement of the mortgage security was limited to Rs. 3,000.—9 Al. 23.

Where a previous suit for a declaration of title to immoveable property has been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession at the time of filing the suit, a subsequent suit on the same title for recovery of possession of the land is not barred under sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Jibunti Nath Khan v. Shib Nath Chuckerbutty followed.—14 Al. 512.

A deed of mortgage executed in 1879 for a consideration of Rs. 300 provided that the term of the mortgage should be four years certain; that certain interest should be payable; that the mortgagee should have possession; that the profits should be appropriated first in lieu of yearly interest and any balance appropriated in payment of the principal debt; and that the mortgagor should be entitled to redeem if the principal and interest were paid at the expiration of the four years. The mortgagee never obtained possession; and in 1882 he brought a suit against the mortgagor to recover the unpaid interest then due, and obtained a decree, which was satisfied by the sale of property belonging to the judgment-debtor. In 1886 he brought another suit for recovery of the principal, together with the residue of interest up to the date of suit. Held that the cause of action in the suit of 1882 was the mortgagor's non-delivery of possession of the mortgaged property, by reason of which the mortgagee had been unable to realize his interest from the usufruct; that the cause of action accrued to the mortgagee from the moment the instrument came into operation and possession was not delivered; that the cause of action to recover the principal accrued at the same time and was the same cause of action; that the plaintiff was therefore bound in the suit of 1882 to sue for the principal; and that the present suit was consequently barred by sec. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.—12 Al. 203.

The plaintiffs, having obtained a declaration of title to continue to enjoy separate possession of certain lands, sued the former defendants again for partition of the same lands. Held that the suit was unnecessary and should be dismissed, Per cur.—The claim and the remedy mentioned in sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure have reference to the cause of action litigated in the previous suit.—10 Madr. 347.

On the 5th September 1874, R., a Hindu, and his sons, borrowed Rs. 5,000 from V, and mortgaged to him certain land, items 1, 2, and 3. On the 7th September 1874, V, borrowed Rs. 5,000 from R. N., and mortgaged his rights in items 1 and 2 and land of his own to R. N. In 1877 R. N. bought, at a sale in execution of a decree against R, the share of R. in the said items 1 and 2 subject to the mortgage created by R on 5th September 1874, and to another mortgage created by R. on 11th January 1875. In 1880, R. N. sued V. and the sons of R., for arrears of interest due under his mortgage-bond. This suit was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the principal and interest due under the bond. In 1885, R. N. sued the sons of R. and V. to recover principal and interest due under his mortgage-bond. V. pleaded that, as R. N. had bought R's share in items 1 and 2 subject to the mortgages created by him, R. N's rights as mortgagee were merged in his rights as purchaser. R's sons pleaded, inter alia, that the suit was barred by the provisions of secs. 43 and 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the claim of R. N. was neither merged nor barred.—10 Madr. 160.

The plaintiff, having previously obtained against his brother, defendant No. 1, who had been the managing member of their family a decree for partition of the family property including certain debts scheduled in the plaint therein, now sued to recover his share of certain other family debts collected by defendant No. 1 without the plaintiff's knowledge:—Held, that the claim was not barred by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 43.—15 Madr 296.

The question for decision in this case was whether a plaintiff, who sued for possession of land only without suing for mesne-profits in respect of the same land, which he could have done in the same suit, is entitled to bring another suit to recover the said mesne-profits. Held, that the subsequent suit for mesne-profits was barred by sec. 43.—11 Madr. 151.

In this suit plaintiffs claimed rent for the year 1289. Previous to this another suit had been brought by the same plaintiffs for enhancement of rent for the same year. That suit was dismissed on the ground that service of notice of enhancement was not proved by the plaintiffs. It was contended for the defence in this suit that it was barred by sec. 43 of the Code, as the plaintiffs failed to claim, as they ought have done, rent at the original rate in the former suit. Held, that the dismissal of a suit for enhancement is no bar to a subsequent suit for the original rate of rent and that the two sorts of suits, are founded on distinct causes of action.—15 Cal. 145.

The Code of Civil Procedure does not prevent a person from making separate and successive applications for execution of a decree, giving reliefs of different characters, in respect to each such relief. Sec. 43, 373 and 374 do not apply to proceedings for execution of decree. Radha Charan v. Man Singh, I. L. R., 12 Al. 392, dissented from. Wajihan v. Biswanath Pershad, I. L. R., 18 Cal. 462, followed.—18 Cal. 515.

Where a contract for the sale and purchase of goods is broken by the purchaser, in part by refusal to take delivery, and in part by refusal to pay for goods delivered, both breaches having occurred before any suit is brought, the vendor is debarred by section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure from bringing two suits against such purchaser, his claim being one arising out of one cause of action and based on one and the same contract. The view taken by WILSON, J., in Anderson. Wright & Co. v. Kalagarla Surjinarain, approved. PETHERAM, C.J.—“The whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action” in section 43 means, in the above case, the entire claim which the plaintiff has against the defendant at the time the action is brought in respect of any failure or failures to accept and pay for goods purchased of him by the defendant under one contract, and the whole of such claim must be included in one action PRINSEP, J.—The expression “cause of action” is to be construed with reference to the substance rather than the form of the action. The claim in both the above cases being for damages on account of breaches of the same contract, sec. 43 read with the Illustration debars the plaintiff from bringing two suits.—19 Cal 372.

Under sec. 7, read with secs. 8, 9, & 10 of Act VIII of 1859, a plaintiff suing for mesne-profits of land is not precluded from afterwards maintaining a suit for possession of such land. Pratap Chandra Burna v. Rani Swarnamayi (4 B. L. R., F. B. 113) commented on.—9 Cal. 283.

A bond provided for the repayment of a loan with interest by a stated time. In default of payment by that time it was provided that the loan might be added to an existing mortgage for a term of years, and repaid at the end of the term, together with the mortgage-debt. After the expiration of the time fixed for the repayment of the loan, the obligee sued and obtained a decree for the interest which had accrued due at the date of the suit. He now sued for the further interest which had since become due. Held that the second suit was not barred by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for that the first suit being for interest merely, and not for principal and interest, which were then both due, the plaintiff must be taken to have elected, under the bond, to add the principal sum to the previously existing mortgage-debt, in which case he forfeited nothing by suing merely for arrears of interest as they became due.—7 Bom. 446.

In 1868 B made, it was alleged, a gift of a zemindari estate to K. In 1869 B died, and K's name was recorded in the revenue-registers in the place of B's name in respect of the estate. In 1870 K died, and her daughter S applied to have her name recorded in the revenue-registers in respect of the estate. M, the illegitimate son of B, objected, claiming to have his name recorded. His objection having been disallowed, and S's name having been recorded, M, in 1876, sued S for a declaration of his proprietary right to the estate, and, on the 29th June 1878, obtained such declaration. In January 1880, M sold a moiety of the estate, and, in December 1880, S sold the entire estate. In February 1881, M's transferees sued S and her transferee for possession of the moiety of the estate transferred to them by M. Held by the Full Bench (STUART, C. J., dissenting). That such suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, by reason that M had omitted to claim in the suit of 1876 possession of the estate. Darbo v. Kesho Rai (I. L. R., 2 Al., 356), and Kalidhun Chutturpadhya v. Shiba Nath Chutturpadhya (I. L. R., 8 Cal. 483), followed. Held also that the possession of S and her transferee could be considered adverse only from the date of the decree of the 29th June 1878, declaring M's proprietary title to the estate. Radha Gobind Roy v. Inglis (7 C. L. R. 364; 3 Suth P. C. C. 809) referred to. Held by STUART, C. J.—That such suit was barred by the provisions of sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, by reason of such omission. Darbo v. Kesho Rai (I. L. R., 2 Al. 356) distinguished. The meaning of the term “relief” explained, and the distinction between it and the term “cause of action” pointed out.—5 Al. 345.

In execution of a decree the defendant, who was sued as the representative of her deceased brother, objected, under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to the attachment of certain lands to which she set up independent title. The objection was disallowed and the land was sold. She then sued the execution purchaser to set aside the Court-sale and obtained a decree against which no appeal was preferred. She now sued for possession, and it was found that at the date of the previous suit she was not aware that the execution purchaser had obtained possession :—Held, that the suit was not barred by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 43.—14 Madr. 23.

In 1876, K sued M on a bond, dated 25th December 1869, for Rs. 5,000, by which certain land in the district of South Tanjore was hypothecated as security for the debt, and obtained a decree on the 6th of April 1876 for the sale of the lands, which he purchased on the 17th August 1876 for Rs. 6,000. K then discovered that part of the land hypothecated, situated within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Court at Kumbakonam, had been acquired by a railway company under the Land Acquisition Act in 1874, and that the compensation, Rs. 560 (claimed by M's mother, who sold the land to the company), was lodged in the treasury of Kumbakonam in the name of M's mother. K having applied to the Subordinate Court for an order for payment out of this sum, the Court, by order dated 28th February, 1880, directed that the question of title to the money should be decided by suit. K then sued M as the sole heir of his deceased mother in the District Munsif's Court of Tiruvadi (where M resided) for a declaration of right to, and to recover, the said sum of Rs. 460. The suit was filed on the 4th September, 1880. On the 16th April, 1880, M assigned his interest in the money sued for to V, who was made defendant in the suit on his own application, and pleaded (1) that the Court had no jurisdiction, as both the money and the land which it represented were, and he (V) resided, without the Munsif's Court's jurisdiction; (2) that the land having been acquired by the railway company in 1874, before the suit upon the bond was filed, this suit was barred by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (3) that this suit was barred by limitation, inasmuch as more than three years had elapsed since the money was paid by the railway company. Held (1) that the suit was for money, and that V, not having applied to stay proceedings under sec. 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must be held to have acquiesced in the jurisdiction of the Court; (2) that K not having known, at the date of his suit on the bond of the acquisition of the land by the railway company, this suit is not barred by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (3) that the suit was not barred by limitation, as the compensation was awarded to M's mother either through fraud on her part or mistake on the part of the Collector, and K did not become aware of the fraud or mistake until within six years of the suit (arts. 95, & 96, of sch. 2 of the Indian Limitation Act).—6 Madr. 344.

Held, where two suits were instituted simultaneously and one of such suits had been determined, that, assuming that the claims in such suits arose out of the same cause of action, and should have been included in one suit, the provisions of sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 were no bar to the entertainment of the second suit.—1 Al. 650.

Where a previous suit for a declaration of title and confirmation of possession of certain land has been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession at the time of filing the suit, a subsequent suit on the same title for recovery of possession of the land is not barred under sec. 43. Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum (11 Moore's I. A. 551) discussed.—8 Cal. 819.

D, being able to sue for the possession of certain property, omitted to do so, and sued in the first instance only for a declaration of her right to such property. The Court refusing to make any such declaration on the ground that she could sue for possession, D then sued for possession. Held that the second suit was not barred by sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859. See also Tulsiram v. Gungaram (I. L. R., 1 Al. 252).—2 Al. 356.

The obligee of a bond for the payment of money, hypothecating immoveable property as a collateral security for such payment, sued for the monies due on the bond, but omitted to claim the enforcement of his lien, and obtained a decree only for the payment of the amount of the bond-debt. He subsequently sued to enforce his lien. Held that, under Act X of 1877, sec. 43, as amended by Act XII of 1879, sec. 7, he could not be permitted to sue to enforce his lien.—2 Al. 838.

If a person intentionally omit to sue for any portion of his claim, the provisions of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877, as well as the provisions of sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, bar the institution of a second suit for the portion so omitted. So that, where a family property consisted of lands as well as debts, and the plaintiff at first sued for a partition of debts only, and then compromised and withdrew the suit without the permission of the Court, it was held that his second suit to demand a partition of the whole property was not maintainable.—7 Bom. 182.

The usufructuary mortgagee of certain land gave a lease of it to the mortgagor, the latter hypothecating the land as security for the payment of the rent. Arrears of rent accruing, the mortgagee sued the mortgagor for the same in the Revenue Court, and obtained a decree. Subsequently the mortgagee sued the mortgagor in the Civil Court to recover the amount of such decree by the sale of the land, claiming under the hypothecation. Held that the second suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 180.

Held by the Full Bench (STUART, C. J., dissenting).—That the Courts of Revenue in the North-Western Provinces, in those matters of procedure upon which the Rent Act (XII of 1881) of those Provinces is silent, are governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. The principle of decision in Nilmoni Singh Deo v. Taranath Mukerjee (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 295) followed. Held, therefore, that the procedure provided by secs. 43 and 373 of the Civil Procedure Code is applicable to suits tried under the N.-W. P., Rent Act, 1881.—5 Al. 406.

J had a right to share in a certain estate, as an heir to her father, and also as an heir to her brother. She transferred such right by sale to H. H sued S, who had acquired the whole estate by purchase at sales in execution of decrees against the other heirs of J's brother, for J's share as one of her brother's heirs in such estate, and obtained a decree. H then sued S for J's share as one of the father's heirs in such estate. Held that H was debarred from bringing the second suit by the provision of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 171.

The plaintiffs brought a suit to have themselves declared entitled to an account, and obtained such a declaratory decree without asking for, or obtaining, any consequential relief. The defendants took no steps to render an account, and the plaintiffs brought another suit against them "for the amount of such Company's papers and other debts that might be found due by the defendant on an adjustment of accounts." Held that the plaintiffs were not barred from bringing such suit, sec. 15 of Act VIII of 1859 being intended to modify the provisions of sec. 7 of the same Act.—Tulsi Ram v. Gunga Ram (I. L. R., 1 Al. 252) followed and approved.—8 Cal. 483.

Where a plaintiff originally sued for a certain sum upon his khatta-books, and an objection was taken by the defendant that he ought to have sued upon a hatchitta, whereupon the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing for the amount admittedly due upon the hatchitta, in addition to the amount he claimed upon his khatta-books. Held that, when the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing upon the hatchitta, his causes of action which, when the suit was originally framed, were distinct, became united; that there was no relinquishment in the original suit within the terms of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 7 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, sec. 43): and that the plaint was rightly amended.—3 Cal. 785.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants for possession of the land upon which certain trees stood, and for such trees, stating that on the 19th June, 1879, the defendants had interfered with their possession of such trees, and had wrongfully taken the fruit thereof. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendants for the value of the fruit upon such trees, alleging that on the 19th June 1879, the defendants had wrongfully taken such fruits. Held that, as the cause of action i. e., the taking of such fruit, was in both suits identical, and the plaintiffs not having claimed the value of such fruit as mesne-profits in the first suit, the second suit was barred by the provisions of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 543.

When money is due on two or more bonds at the time of the institution of a suit, and the bonds appear to have been originally passed in respect of one claim, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to sue upon both bonds in one action. There is nothing in sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure which would justify the Court in going behind the bonds to consider the circumstances out of which they sprung, albeit those circumstances might themselves at the time have constituted a cause of action. There is no provision in the Mofussil Small Cause Courts Act (XI of 1865), similar to sec. 34 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (IX of 1850), which forbids a plaintiff's dividing any cause of action for the sake of bringing two or more suits in the Small Cause Courts of the Presidency.—7 Bom. 134.

At the close of the Bengali year 1283, which was on the 11th April, 1877, the defendant owed to the plaintiff, his landlord, the rents of his holding for the years 1281, 1282, and 1283. The plaintiff, in the month of April 1878, before the close of the year 1284, instituted a suit for the rent for 1281 only, and obtained a decree. On the 10th April 1879, he instituted another suit for recovery of the rents for the years 1282, 1283, & 1284. Held that the claim for the years 1282 and 1283 was barred under sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The cases of Raja Sutto Churn Ghosal v. Obhoy Nund Das, (2 W. R., Act X, Rul., 31), Ram Soondar Sein v. Krishno Chander Goopto (17 W. R., 380), and Kristo Kinker Puramanick v. Ramdhan Chattangia (24 W. R., 326), are overruled by sec. 43 of Act of X 1877.—6 Cal. 791.

Claims for the recovery of possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits are distinct claims, and separate suits will lie in respect of each claim. Sec. 44 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely permits the joinder in one suit of a claim for recovery of immoveable property with one for mesne profits in regard to the same property. Kishori Lal Roy v. Sharut Chunder Mozumdar Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, and Madan Mohun Lal v. Lala Sheosanker Sahai, referred to. Venkoba v. Subbanna dissented from.—19 Cal. 615.

A mortgagee had two remedies in respect of the mortgagor's breach to pay the stipulated interest at the time fixed by the contract of mortgage, one being a suit on foreclosure-proceedings to convert the mortgage into a sale, and the other a suit to recover his money against his debtor by enforcement of his lien against the mortgaged property. He sued for the first remedy in respect of such breach, omitting the second. His suit was dismissed on the ground that he was not entitled to such remedy until the expiration of the mortgage-term. He afterwards sued for the second remedy. Held that inasmuch as the mortgagee was not, at the time of his suing for the first remedy, "a person entitled to more than one remedy," not being "entitled" to the first, but only to the second, his omission at that time to sue for the second remedy was not, under sec. 43 of Act X of 1877, a bar to his afterwards suing for it.—3 Al. 857.

S, as one of the heirs of his brother, sued the sons of M, the other heirs of M, for, amongst other things, a declaration of his right to share in the rights and interests of M as the mortgagee under a deed of mortgage, which he valued at the principal sum advanced under the mortgage, viz., Rs. 5,600, stating his cause of action to be the obstruction caused by the sons of M to his sharing in M's estate. He obtained a decree declaring his title to the share claimed. L, one of the sons of M, had fraudulently concealed from, and kept S in ignorance of, the fact that previously to the suit he had realized Rs. 8,624 under the mortgage. On this fact coming to S's knowledge, he sued the sons of M to recover his share of that sum. Held that the second suit was not barred by section 7 of Act VIII of 1859. Bulwant Singh v. Chittan Singh (H. C. R., N.-W. P., 1871, p. 27), followed and observed on.—1 Al. 543.

According to the terms of a mortgage, possession of the mortgaged property was to be delivered to the mortgagee, and he was to take the mesne-profits. The mortgagor refused to deliver possession of the property, and the mortgagee sued him to enforce specific performance of the contract to deliver possession, and obtained a decree. At the time this suit was brought, the mortgagee had been kept out of possession of the property for two years, during which time the mortgagor had taken the mesne-profits. The mortgagee subsequently sued the mortgagor to recover the mesne-profits of the mortgaged property for those two years. Held that, as the mortgagee might in the former suit, in addition to seeking the specific performance of the mortgage-contract, have asked for such mesne-profits by way of compensation for the breach of it, and as the claim for possession and mesne-profits was in respect of the same cause of action, viz., the breach of the contract to give possession, the second suit was barred by the provisions of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 660.

On the 27th Joist 1286 F. S. (2nd June 1879), the plaintiff brought a suit to recover damages for the breach of a contract on the part of the defendant, for not having made over possession to him of certain leasehold properties, the damages claimed being for the profits accrued due for the year 1283 F. S. (1875-6). In this suit he obtained a decree. On the 21st Joist 1287 F. S. (14th June 1880), the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant to recover damages for the profits accrued for the years 1284, 1285, and 1286 F. S. (1876-7 to 1878-9). Held that the plaintiff should have included the damages for the years 1284 and 1285 (1876-7 and 1877-8) in his former suit, and that he was debarred by sec. 43 of Act X of 1877 from including in his second suit any portion of his claim for damages which had accrued due at the time of his first suit, and for which he had omitted to sue ; but that he was entitled to recover damages for the year 1286 (1878-9). Taruck Chunder Mookerjee v. Panchu Mohini Debya (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 791) followed.—9 Cal. 143.

The plaintiff held a mortgage of certain immoveable property given to him by the defendant to secure the repayment of a loan of money with interest. The plaint stated the fact of the mortgage, but prayed only for a money-decree. The mortgage contained a personal undertaking to repay. Plaintiff's counsel, directly upon the case being called on for hearing, and before the case had in any way been gone into, applied (under sec. 43 of Act X of 1877, Civil Procedure Code) for leave to reserve his remedies under the mortgage, taking then only a money-decree—an application which, it is provided by that section, must be made "before the first hearing." Held that the application was, not too late. The said mortgage was dated 16th February, 1870, and the plaint in this suit was filed on the 28th April, 1881. The plaintiff maintained that he was not time-barred, as he had twelve years within which to bring the suit under article 132 of sch. 2 of Act XV of 1877. Held that the plaintiff was too late in bringing a suit for a money-decree on the promise to pay in the mortgage, inasmuch as the article referred to was meant to apply to suits brought to enforce against the property payment of "money charged upon immoveable property," and not, under any circumstances whatever, to a suit for a mere money-decree.—5 Bom. 463.

On the 1st July 1878, there was a settlement of accounts between the plaintiff and defendants, and a debt was acknowledged due by the latter to the former ; and, on the same day, the plaintiff and defendants entered into a trading partnership, which was carried on till August. On the 30th September the defendants extorted a release from the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff's claims against them, arising out of the two transactions mentioned, and all other transactions between them, were released. On the 23rd November the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants, and, in the plaint, after stating the fact of the settlement of 1st July 1878, the balance found due therein to the plaintiff, the extortion of the release, and the misappropriation of the sums due to the plaintiff by the defendants as the cause of action, prayed for cancellation of the release, and for recovery of the amount due to the plaintiff by the defendants under the settlement of 1st July 1878. Held, in a suit to wind up the partnership of July and August, 1878, that the plaintiff was not bound by sec. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have included in his former suit his claim arising out of that partnership, and that the former suit, being in substance a suit upon the account stated on 1st July 1878, and not for damages for extorting the release, was no bar to the present suit.—6 Madr. 49.

A mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagor to have a declaration of his lien over the mortgaged properties, and obtained a decree. He afterwards brought another suit against certain attaching creditors of his mortgagor, to have a declaration of his lien over certain surplus monies in the hands of the Collector, who, previous to the institution of the first suit, had sold certain of the mortgaged properties free of all incumbrances for arrears of Government revenue. Held that the second suit was not barred under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 7. Held also that the mortgage-decree declaring the lien over all the mortgaged properties covered the surplus sale-proceeds then in the hands of the Collector, because these monies must, as between the mortgagee and attaching creditors of the mortgagor, be taken to represent the mortgaged properties. Heera Lall Chowdhry v. Jankee Nath Mookerjee (16 W. R. 222) followed. The doctrine of marshalling does not apply as between a mortgagee and attaching creditors of the mortgagor who hold mere money-decrees. The period of limitation prescribed by art. 15, sch. 2 Act IX., of 1871, for a suit to set aside an order of a Civil Court, does not apply where the order simply amounts to a declaration that the Court considers it has no jurisdiction to act in the proceeding before it.—6 Cal. 142.

A, a Hindu widow, granted, without legal necessity, a mukurari lease of certain mauzas, portion of her husband's estate, to B. During B's possession part of the lands comprised in the granted mauzas were taken up by Government, and the compensation-money was lodged in the collectorate. A having afterwards died, the next heirs of A's husband, on the 7th October 1871, sued B to recover possession of the mauzas, but, not being aware of the facts, did not, in that suit, claim the compensation-money lying in the collectorate. While this suit was still pending, B, in March 1872, drew the compensation-money out of the collectorate. The heirs, after obtaining a decree against B for possession of the mauzas, on the 13th September 1875, instituted a fresh suit against him to recover compensation-money wrongfully drawn out by him from the collectorate. Held, first, that the suit was not barred by sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859. Held also that it was not barred by limitation, although more than three years had elapsed since the money had been drawn out by B, art. 118, (and not art. 60) of sch. 2 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1871) applying to the case. Held, further, that the claim of the heirs was a proper subject for a regular suit, and could not have been heard and determined in the course of the proceedings in execution of the decree which they had obtained against B for possession of the mauzas.—5 Cal. 597.

In 1876 accounts were stated between B and D, and a balance of Rs. 800 was found to be due from D to B. D gave B an instrument whereby he agreed to pay the amount of such balance in four annual instalments of Rs. 200. B at the same time noted in his account-book that such balance was "payable in four instalments of Rs. 200 yearly." In July 1879, B sued D upon such instrument for the balance of the first instalment. The Court trying this refused to receive such instrument in evidence on the ground that it was a promissory note, and as such was improperly stamped. Thereupon B applied for, and obtained, permission to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh one for the original debt. In October 1879, B again sued D, claiming the balance of the first and second instalments, basing his claim upon the note made by him in his account-book. He obtained a decree in this suit for the amount claimed by him. In 1880, B again sued D, claiming the amount of the third instalment, again basing his claim upon such note. Held by SPANKIE, J., that the suit last-mentioned was barred by the provisions of sec. 43 of Act X of 1877, inasmuch as B should, in the second suit brought by him against D, have claimed the balance of the money found due from D to him upon the accounts stated between them, instead of claiming the balance of the instalment due. Held by OLDFIELD, J., that such suit was not so barred, the cause of action therein and in the former suit being different. Held by the Court that the agreement by D to pay the balance found due from him to B on accounts stated between them in instalments of Rs. 200 annually could not be proved by the note made by B in his account-book, but could only be proved by the promissory note.—3 Al. 717.

Rule a.—No cause of action shall, unless with the leave of the Court, be joined with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, or to obtain a declaration of title to immoveable property, except—

Only certain claims to be joined with suit for recovery of land.

(a) claims in respect of mesne-profits or arrears of rent in respect of the property claimed,

(b) damages for breach of any contract under which the property or any part thereof is held, and

(c) claims by a mortgagee to enforce any of his remedies under the mortgage.

Rule b.—No claim by or against an executor, administrator, or heir as such, shall be joined with claims by or against him personally, unless the last-mentioned claims are alleged to arise with reference to the estate in respect of which the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued as executor, administrator, or heir, or are such as he was entitled to, or liable for, jointly with the deceased person whom he represents.

Claims by or against executor, administrator, or heir.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts, except rule v.

A suit for possession of his house and for rent were held to be causes of action properly joined by a plaintiff in one suit.—3 B.L.R., (App.) 77; 11 W. R., 542.

Under five different pattas, A granted to B patni leases of five different mehals. The rents of the mehals falling into arrears, the mehals were sold on two different dates. A purchased two of the mehals, C purchased two of the mehals, and D purchased one of the mehals. In a suit brought by B against A, C, and D, to set aside the sales on the ground of irregularity, held that the suit was bad for multifariousness, and must be dismissed.—9 B. L. R., 241; 18 W. R., 288.

The dismissal of a suit for multifariousness is not a hearing and determination of the suit within the meaning of sec. 2, Act VIII of 1859.—13 B. L. R., (App.) 37.

Sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 does not bar a suit for a declaration that property in the defendant's possession is subject to the mortgagee's lien, on the ground that such property was part of the property mortgaged, and was not included in a previous suit against other parties for other portions of the property mortgaged.—14 B. L. R., 418N.

An action for slander cannot be brought jointly against several defendants: separate actions should be brought against each. Quære.—Whether words simplifying, "You are a drunkard, thief, cheat, and the paramour of your sister in-law, you bastard," applied to a Brahmin, and actionable per se, without allegation of special damage.—15 B. L. R., 161.

An action for slander may be brought against several defendants where the words spoken are not actionable per se, but only become so by reason of the special damage, which is the result of the conjoint action of all the defendants.—15 B. L. R., 166n.

Under sec. 8 of the Code of 1859, it was decided that the words, "cognizable by the same Court," referred to the nature of the suit, and not to its value. Therefore, a Principal Sadr Amin was held to have jurisdiction under that section to try a suit for land and for mesne-profits, the entire claim not exceeding his jurisdiction, although the value of the suit, so far as the claim was for land, was below the value cognizable by him.—Luchmee Pershad Doobey v. Kallasoo, B. L. R., Sup. Vol. 620; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 89; 7 W. R., 175. Overruling Dhurum Rawoot v. Ramnath Sahoo, 2 Hay's Rep., 585.

A plaint against several defendants for causes of action which have accrued against each of them separately, and in respect of which they are not jointly concerned, should be rejected. Rajaram Tewar v. Luchmun Prasad, B. L. R., Sup. Vol. 731; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 216; 8 W. R., 15; 9 W. R., 490; 18 W. R., 464.

When a plaint discloses different causes of action against different parties, it is bad in law, and the suit is not maintainable.—2 B.L.R., (App.) 53; 11 W. R., 397; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 245.

A suit against five defendants, including claims of the most miscellaneous character against each defendant, was dismissed by the first Court, on the ground of multifariousness. The Subordinate Judge, on appeal, held that plaintiff was in any case entitled to a decision on one of his claims; and further held that the suit was not multifarious. Held on special appeal that the Court could not select one claim on which to proceed, when plaintiff insisted on pressing all. Held further that the plaint was multifarious; and, though it would not be permissible for defendant to take that objection for the first time after the case had been fully gone into on the merits, yet, as the objection had been taken originally, the suit was properly dismissed by the first Court.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 341; 11 W.R., 273.

One of three widows of a Mahomedan sued the other two, together with her deceased husband's sons and other heirs, for possession of 18 out of 96 sehams of property left by the deceased, to which she was entitled by right of inheritance under the Mahomedan law; and to set aside two deeds of bi-mukasa, or gift in lieu of dower, one dated 28th July 1842, granted in favour of one widow over a part of the property in suit, and the other dated 14th March 1847, in favour of the other widow, over other portions of the same property. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, on the ground of a misjoinder of causes of action; and that there were two causes of action which could not be tried together under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 8. Held, per KEMP, J. (whose opinion as senior Judge prevailed), that there was no misjoinder of causes of action; that the case must be remanded to the Judge for trial on the merits. Held per GLOVER, J.—This was such a misjoinder as was provided against by sec. 8 of Act VIII of 1859, and that the Judge was right in dismissing the suit.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 190; 12 R., 11.

The owner of a share in a taluk granted a se-patni patta thereof to the plaintiff, but before registration granted a se-patni to the Bengal Coal Company. In a suit against the owner and the company for possession of the se-patni taluk for damages caused by the refusal to register, and also for compelling registration of the se-patni patta, held that three distinct causes of action were improperly joined; that the suit was not maintainable in a Civil Court, as the plaintiff's title rested upon an unregistered deed; that there was no cause of action as against the company to enforce registration of the patta; and that a distinct stipulation is not necessary to bind a person to cause registration of a deed required by law to be registered, but he virtually agrees to do so when he executes a contract, which by the law in force requires registration.—3 B. L. R., (App.) 49; 11 W. R., 398.

The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator, and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made answerable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate, is to be adhered to in this country, where there is a different procedure. Therefore, where a suit brought against the Administrator-General as administrator of the estate of one W B by a creditor of the deceased, other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of assets of the estate of the deceased, held that, there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator de son tort, or that they had been partners with the deceased, or that they could not be sued, if necessary, by the legal representative himself, and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative, they were wrongly made parties, and the suit ought to be dismissed as against them for misjoinder. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate, he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator-General might have against them.—15 B. L. R., 296.

In a case, however, where the plaintiff was the lessor, and the defendant the lessee, of certain land under an agreement whereby the defendant agreed to occupy the land for two years, and to deliver a certain quantity of paddy at four specified periods, defendant failed to deliver the paddy. In a suit for rent, held that, although the plaintiff might have sued for each instalment of rent as it fell due, the aggregate of such unpaid instalments should be deemed one cause of action.—4 M. H. C. R., 234.

Plaintiffs, members of a Pagoda Committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, sued defendants for the recovery of Rs. 4,480-2. The plaint alleged that, in October 1865, the 1st defendant and another agreed to travel and collect subscriptions for the purpose of erecting a tower at the entrance of the pagoda in question, paying to the pagoda Rs. 130 a month during the period they should be engaged in the work, irrespective of the actual collections. That an agreement to this effect was executed, and 1st and 2nd defendants deputed to collect subscriptions. That both were engaged in the work until November 1869. That under the terms of the said agreement a sum of Rs. 6,500 was due, of which only Rs. 2,019-14 were credited in the accounts of the pagoda. That 1st and 2nd defendants, when required to account for the balance, informed the plaintiffs that they had paid to the 3rd defendant, the then manager of the said temple, Rs. 5,330, and that only Rs. 1,170 was due by them. The present suit was accordingly filed against the defendants for the sum of money due by them. The Court of first instance decreed against 3rd defendant alone. On appeal, the Civil Judge dismissed the suit as against the 3rd defendant on the ground of multifariousness, he having been sued on the ground of misappropriation, while the cause of action against the 1st defendant was breach of contract. Held on special appeal that the suit was not multifarious. That the 3rd defendant was properly included in the suit as a defendant, and did not appear to have been prejudiced in his defence by the course of the proceedings.—7 M. H. C. R., 123.

Plaintiff alleged that, his father having died while he was a young child, during his minority his father's widows (defendants 1, 2, & 3) alienated the whole of the estate, in portions, to different people at different times. He, therefore, brought this suit against all alienees to recover the estate as a whole. The District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action. Upon appeal, held that the Judge was wrong. That plaintiff's cause of action, the right, was his relation to the family to which the property appertained, and on this right, if established, and if he be not otherwise barred, he would be entitled to recover. The fact that various persons, during his minority, affected to purchase portions of the property, did not destroy the unity of his ground of action.—7 M. H. C. R., 260.

A suit brought against a number of alienees of a deceased member of an undivided family, for the recovery of family-property illegally alienated by him, is not such a suit as ought to be dismissed on the ground of multifariousness. It is most desirable that the whole of the alienation should be at once before the Court called upon to decide the question, in order to secure the soundness of the particular decision, and perhaps the avoidance of discordant decisions in different cases upon facts nearly the same.—7 M. H. C. R., 290.

A minor interested in contesting the execution and validity of an alleged will by her father having been improperly joined with the alleged executors of the said will as co-plaintiff, the decrees of the Courts below were reversed, in order that the minor might be made a defendant, and a guardian ad litem appointed to protect her interests.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 310.

The misjoinder of plaintiffs, which does not produce error in the decision of the case on its merits, is not a ground for the reversal of a decree on special appeal. Semble.—That such misjoinder is not a ground for the reversal of a decree in regular appeal. Where the widow of H, a Muhammadan, and his two daughters, brought a joint suit for their respective shares of the estate of H which were awarded to them jointly, held that this was an error of procedure which did not affect the merits of the case.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 177.

A suit was brought against six defendants, the cause of action against five of them being unconnected with the cause of action against the sixth. The Assistant Judge, in whose Court the suit was brought, tried one of the causes of action over which he had jurisdiction, but refused to try the other over which he had no jurisdiction. In appeal, the District Judge refused to enter into the merits of either on the ground of the misjoinder of the causes of action. Held that the District Judge was bound to enter into the merits of the claim over which the Court of first instance had jurisdiction, it not being affected by the error in the misjoinder of the two claims.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 19 ; 23 W. R., 408.

Several causes of action against different defendants cannot be joined in one suit. Therefore, where a suit was brought to set aside several transactions entered into by a guardian with different persons, and no relief was sought against the guardian, it was held that the suit was bad by reason of misjoinder.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 75; 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 153; 8 W. R., 364; 10 W. R., 187; 8 W. R., 461.

Misjoinder of causes of action is not alone a valid ground of special appeal.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 443; Agra H. C. R., (F B.) Ed. 1874, 238.

A suit to set aside two sale-transactions of different dates, and made to different vendees, will be dismissed for misjoinder.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 221.

A suit to recover possession as cultivators, brought by two plaintiffs, whose holdings, although originally one, have, for a long time, been separated and held separately, will be dismissed for misjoinder.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 306.

Plaintiff, having obtained a decree establishing his title to a number of villages constituting one taluqa, subsequently brought one suit against all the persons severally in possession of several estates constituting the taluqa for mesne-profits during their wrongful possession. Held that there being no common liability, the suit must be dismissed for misjoinder.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 86.

Sec 9 applied to a suit of the nature described in sec. 8, and not to a suit in which distinct causes of action against distinct defendants were improperly joined.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 40; 12 W. R. 70.

A plaintiff cannot bring, in one suit, a claim for a declaration of his right to redeem, and also a claim to a declaration of his right to damages.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 70.

Where a plaintiff sued to recover an estate in the possession of several persons, who held, not collectively, but in different portions, by virtue of several auction and private sales and mortgages, held that the Court of first instance should have dismissed the plaint for misjoinder, leaving the plaintiff to bring separate suits in respect of the several pieces of property in possession of each defendant, or set of defendants.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 108.

The legal result, when a suit is dismissed for misjoinder, is that the plaintiff pays the defendant's costs.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 20.

Where a plaintiff originally filed a plaint against the defendant and several other persons to invalidate a number of conveyances and sales, of which some had been confirmed by decrees, or had been made in execution of decrees, and which related to land in two different zillahs, and the Subordinate Judge passed an order purporting to be an order, under sec. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, for the trial of the several causes of action separately, and directed the plaintiff to file several plaints, and there being no difficulty in respect of the stamp-duty chargeable on the institution of the suits, from plaintiff suing in forma pauperis, and the appellants having paid the proper stamp-duty on the appeals:—Held that the result of such order and direction might be regarded as the institution of new suits and that, so far as the suits were cognizable by the Court of the Subordinate Judge, or by the High Court in appeal, the High Court might, in the absence of any objection on the part of the parties, proceed to dispose of them. The High Court accordingly dismissed the suits relating to property in a district not cognizable in the Court of first instance; and in those appeals in which, by reason of the amount being less than Rs. 5,000, the appeal lay to the District Judge, returned such appeals to the appellant, for presentation in the proper Court. A direction in such a case to file separate plaints is not within the scope of sec. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section does not require the plaintiff to file separate complaints, but provides for the separate trial of the several causes of action contained in the one complaint filed on the institution of a suit. Where several causes of action have been improperly joined in one suit, the complaint should be rejected on the ground of misjoinder.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 153.

The plaintiff alleged in his complaint that R had agreed in a bond to borrow from him Rs. 5,000 in order to institute a suit against D as to his share in certain joint ancestral property; that R consequently borrowed Rs. 3,000 from him, and that, while the suit was pending, R and D, in collusion with each other and their mother, in order to deprive the plaintiff of his money, agreed to refer the suit to their mother, who, by reason of their collusion, made a statement, which resulted in a smaller sum being decreed to R than was claimed by him, and in the property in suit remaining in the possession of D; and that, as both R and D had taken collusive proceedings, with intent to obstruct the plaintiff's realization of his money, they were both liable for the said sum of Rs. 3,000 and he therefore brought this suit to recover Rs. 3,000 principal, and Rs. 3,000 an equivalent of that sum, under the terms of the bond; and that the cause of action arose on the day on which R and D agreed to refer their suit to their mother. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 25.

They did not allege, however, that the fields in question, or any of them, had been recorded as jointly belonging to the defendants, nor was such the case. Held that under such circumstances the plaintiffs had no such common cause of action in the matter of the suit against the defendants as would justify the course taken in suing them all together. Held also that the irregularity of that course, by which the matter of the suit was brought before another Court than that which would otherwise have had cognizance of it, was calculated to produce error or defect in the decision on the merits.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 72.

Though a Revenue Court had, under Act X of 1859, no jurisdiction to take cognizance of a suit against the sureties of a lessee, a suit brought against the lessees and their sureties was not bad for misjoinder.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 222.

K was in possession of mouzah Dharmapore as usufructuary mortgagee. A share in the mouzah was sold in the execution of a decree against the shareholder. It was afterwards transferred by private sale to S by the auction-purchaser. S, alleging that the mortgage-debt had been satisfied out of the usufruct, sued to recover possession of the share, and impleaded not only K, but also the heirs of the mortgagors and his vendee, the auction-purchaser, but no cause of action was declared against those parties, nor did they resist the suit. The lower Courts dismissed the suit on the ground that separate causes of action, now between the same parties, had been included in one suit. The High Court reversed the decrees of the lower Courts so far as they dismissed the suit against the heirs of the mortgagors and the mortgagee, and remanded the suit for trial, as since the heirs of the mortgagors were interested in the account which must have been taken in the suit, it was necessary to make them parties in order that they might be bound by it.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 208.

The holder of a bond hypothecating property who seeks to recover the debt due under the bond from his debtor, and to bring to sale the hypothecated property which is in the hands of a purchaser, is at liberty to implead the debtor and the purchaser in the same suit, and there is no objection to such an action on the ground of misjoinder.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 323. Distinguishing Makund Ram Debi Das. 6 N.-W. P. 324, note.

The ancestor of the defendants held as mortgagee a ten biswas share of a mouzah. Of this share 5 biswas were recovered and held by the plaintiffs as proprietors. Of the remaining 5 biswas, 3 biswas $6\frac{3}{4}$ biswanees belonged to D, and 1 biswa $13\frac{1}{4}$ biswanees to H. These 5 biswas were in the defendants' possession. The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of them, alleging that the mortgage had been redeemed out of the usufruct, and that they had acquired D's right by auction-purchase in the year 1848, and H's rights by private purchase from his sons in 1873. They also sued for mesne-profits. The defendants pleaded that they held the 5 biswas in suit as proprietors, having acquired D's rights by private purchase in 1847, and H's rights similarly in 1851. They also pleaded that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs had brought a suit to establish the sale alleged to have been made to them by H's sons, and that suit was still pending, the claim for possession of H's share could not be maintained, and they lastly pleaded that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs admitted that the rights of D and H were acquired by them under separate sales, their claims to those rights could not be joined in one suit. The plaintiffs replied that, assuming the claim to H's share could not be maintained on the basis of the alleged sale to them, they were nevertheless entitled to possession of H's share in virtue of their right to D's share, both shares having been jointly mortgaged. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to ask in one suit for a determination of their claim to the possession of the shares, and to any surplus mesne-profits which might be found to be due in respect of them on taking account, and that the pendency of the suit to establish their purchase of H's share did not deprive them of the right to sue to recover possession from the mortgagees, although it might have been necessary to determine incidentally in the suit the question at issue in the suit respecting the purchase. Held also that, if the plaintiffs established their right to the share of D, but failed to prove their title as purchasers of H's share, they could not obtain possession of the share on the ground that it was mortgaged jointly with the shares which they already held, and with the share of D, for, according to their own allegation, the mortgage-debt had been redeemed, and there was no longer any common liability which they were required to discharge.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 246.

The lessor sued, under Act X of 1859 (sec. 23, cl. 4, and sec. 78), to recover an alleged balance of rent and cesses due under two leases, and interest, and claimed the ejectment of the lessees from the possession of the properties comprised in both leases, and (by an additional statement of claim) for the amount of arrears due by asamis at the commencement of the leases, basing the latter claim on a stipulation contained in the leases that, whatever arrears should, at the date of the execution of the leases, be shown to be due from the asamis in a list prepared by the patwari, such arrears should be paid by the lessees, either by instalments or in one payment, as the lessors should think fit, that the lessees should make no objection to the payment of such arrears, and that, if the lessees failed to pay such arrears, they should pay the expenses of the servants of the lessors who might proceed to the villages for the purpose of realizing the arrears, Held that this latter claim could only be brought in a Civil Court. The Court refused to admit in special appeal the plea that the lessor should have instituted separate suits to recover the arrears of rent due on each lease, as it allowed the objection that the leases could not be declared forfeited for the aggregate of the arrears of rent and cesses due on both leases, but that the forfeiture of each lease was incurred in respect of the arrears due on it, and that the lower Courts should have therefore determined and declared in their decrees what was the amount of arrears due in respect of rent and cesses on each lease separately.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 342.

The plaintiff was compelled to pay the whole costs of a suit, in which there was a misjoinder of causes of action, and which resulted in his and his co-defendants being charged with costs relating to causes of action with which they had no concern. The plaintiff sued, after deducting Rs. 71 as his own proper share, to recover the balance from his co-defendants. The plea of misjoinder was allowed.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 82.

A registering officer having refused to register a deed of sale of certain property executed by S in favour of B, B sued S and K, claiming the completion of the sale with delivery of the sale-deed duly-executed, and possession of the property by cancelment of a deed of mortgage of the same executed in K's favour by S. Held that the suit was bad for misjoinder.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 103.

Three several sales of separate shares in the same mahal were the subject-matter of the deed of sale in a suit for pre-emption, and the purchasers of one of the shares and the purchaser of the other two shares were different persons, and the plaintiff claimed the right of pre-emption in respect of all three shares, and indiscriminately impleaded all the several vendors and vendees who had no community of interest in the subject-matter of the suit. The Court, allowing the plea of misjoinder, which both the lower Courts had overruled, remanded the case to the Court of first instance, in order that the plaint might be returned to the plaintiff for amendment, and the suit tried and decided afresh after amendment.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 188.

Where the plaintiff claims to recover possession of two distinct portions of a property from which he has been dispossessed at different periods and under different circumstances, and claims them under the same title and from the same party, there is no impropriety in the two claims being joined in one suit.—1 Hay's Rep., 555.

A claim for rent in arrear and a claim to remove clouds on the title to demise raised by the tenant are not objectionable on the ground of multifariousness, and may, therefore, be included in the same plaint.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 273; 5 W. R., (P. C.), 65; 10 Moore's I. A., 438.

Installments of rent were held to form different causes of action.—17 W. R., 380; 2 W. R., Act X., 31.

A village had been divided into four separate portions, with four different parties, who were afterwards dispossessed under one and the same survey-award, which demarcated the village as appertaining to the defendant's estate. Held that the four parties could sue jointly.—2 W. R., 219.

In a suit by a son against a father and certain purchasers to obtain a declaratory decree in respect to certain property, the fact of each purchaser being concerned only in a portion of the case does not render the suit multifarious.—3 W. R., 102.

The claims of different parties setting up different leases from A, and thus opposing the purchaser of the estate from A in obtaining possession, may be joined in one suit brought to set aside their leases, and to recover the profits which they had misappropriated.—4 W. R., 109.

It was held that a claim for a hundi may be joined in one suit with a claim for the return of money paid in excess of rent due.—7 W. R., 409; 3 W. R., 128.

Where the payee of a hundi, in a suit to recover the amount of the same, made four persons defendants—viz., the drawer and the acceptor of the hundi, his own endorsee, and a party whom plaintiff alleged to be the principal, whose agent was the drawer—the suit was held to be a combination of four suits in one, not allowed by the Civil Courts.—10 W. R., 263.

It is too late for defendants to object with effect to a suit on the ground of multifariousness after it has been fully tried and decided on the merits ; but the objection is one which a defendant has a right to raise on the settlement of issues, or on a motion to take the plaint off the file.—11 W. R., 273.

In trying two distinct suits turning upon entirely separate documents, a lower Appellate Court was held to have reversed the procedure indicated in sec. 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859.—11 W. R., 280.

Where a plaint had been rejected as having been filed against several persons who had different defences, it was held to be within the discretion of the Judge, in appeal, to dismiss the suit, and saddle the plaintiff with the costs of all the defendants, notwithstanding that all the latter, except one set, admitted the claim, and retired from the contest.—12 W. R., 76.

A lower Appellate Court has no power to reverse the decree of a Court of first instance on the ground of misjoinder of parties. After a Court of competent jurisdiction has exercised its discretion under sec. 15, Act VIII of 1859, and passed a declaratory decree, it does not lie within the power of a Court of Appeal, under sec. 350 of that Act, to set aside the decree upon an objection which does not affect the merits, and which was not taken at the time when the decree of the first Court was passed.—13 W. R., 176.

It is not the title, but the infringement of it, which constitutes the cause of action ; and two suits are not necessarily brought upon the same cause of action merely because the title relied upon in both cases is one and the same.—13 W. R., 196.

In a suit for rent as of a single howala, where the defendants pleaded, and the Court found, that the lands constituted two howalas, it was held not to be necessary to dismiss the suit, if justice could be done between the parties on the other issues.—13 W. R., 284.

Held that there was no misjoinder of different causes in a suit including plaintiff's whole claim, where his cause of action was that the Revenue Commissioners had taken possession of his lands and given it in patta to other people.—14 W. R., 381.

The auction-purchaser of a taluq seeking to obtain possession against the former proprietors, many of whom are cultivators holding separate possession of specific portions, and having their houses on the land, must sue them specially for those portions to which they lay claim. He cannot sue the whole community in the aggregate for all the lands of the village.—16 W. R., 155.

It is illegal to join different causes of action in the same suit against different parties where each has a distinct and separate interest—e. g. to a joint action for the price of timber against defendants who purchased each one pair of timber from the plaintiff separately from the other.—21 W. R., 206.

Where a single suit for rent against the holders of several tenures is objected to on the ground of misjoinder, the mere fact of non-registration as separate holdings is no answer to the objection. The Court should be enquire whether the tenants have not, in fact, been dealt with as holders of separate tenures.—22 W. R., 334.

In a suit by a mortgagee for possession of the mortgaged property, on the allegation that some of the defendants under subsequent mortgages and purchases had opposed him in obtaining possession; and to have it declared that the said mortgages and purchases were inoperative, held that the plaintiff had but one cause of action upon his mortgage-deed, and was right in joining all the defendants in the suit.—22 W. R., 532.

Sec. 8 of the old Code of 1859 prohibited by implication the joinder of divers causes of action against divers persons.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 40; 23 W. R., 389.

In a suit to recover possession on the ground of dispossession by all the defendants in consequence of certain Act X decisions, held that there was but one cause of action, and that the fact that the defendants each claimed to hold portions of the property under different titles could not make the suit bad for misjoinder.—23 W. R., 400.

In a suit against A K for contribution of monies paid in satisfaction of two decrees under which the present plaintiffs and defendants were jointly liable, and one of which decrees was founded on an ikrar executed by the parties to the present suit and by one F, not a party, who was expressly excluded from liability in the decree last mentioned, the Judge considering that F was liable under the ikrar, but not liable under the bond on which the other decree was founded, decided that there were two distinct causes of action, and dismissed the suit. Held that the cause of action on which plaintiffs relied was simply the joint liability of the parties under the decree, and the suit was not multifarious.—25 W. R., 41.

In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave under sec. 44, Rule a, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house. The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits, for recovery of the house and the grain respectively, in the Court of the Munsif:—Held that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint, on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that, although this might have been a misapplication of sec. 44, Rule a, of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree with reference to the definition in sec. 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge; and that, therefore, a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under sec. 622.—I. L. R., 8 Al. 191.

An objection to the attachment and sale of certain immoveable property, raised by one who claimed to have purchased the same at a sale in execution of a prior decree, was disallowed on the ground that, under the prior decree, the rights of one only of the present judgment-debtors had been sold and purchased by the objector. In accordance with this order, two-thirds of the property under attachment were sold; and the objector thereupon brought a regular suit for a declaration of his right as a purchaser of the whole property in execution of the prior decree. To this suit he impleaded as defendants the decree-holder and the judgment-debtors. The suit was decreed, and in the result the decree-holder alone was compelled to pay the whole of the costs. Subsequently he brought a suit for contribution in respect of these costs, making defendants to the suit (i) R, one of his co-defendants in the previous suit, personally and as heir of A, who was another of those co-defendants; (ii) N; and (iii) S: these two being sued in the character of heirs of A. Held, with reference to a plea of misjoinder within the terms of rule b of sec. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code, that even if there were misjoinder of parties, the first Court, having proceeded to trial of the suit, and not having rejected the plaint or returned it for amendment or amended it, should have disposed of it upon the merits, and found what A's share in the amount paid by the plaintiff was, and whether assets to that amount had come to the hands of the defendants as her heirs.—9 Al. 221.

Sec. 44 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, does not forbid the joinder of several causes of action entitling the plaintiff to the recovery of immoveable property, but a joinder with such causes of action of other causes of action of a different character except in the cases therein specified.—5 Madr. 161.

The plaintiff sued for specific performance of an agreement in writing, which set forth inter alia, that the defendants had agreed to sell, &c., under certain conditions as agreed upon. The defendants alleged that the written agreement did not contain the whole of the agreement between the parties, and offered parol evidence in support of their contention. Held (reversing the judgment of WILSON, J.) that the parol evidence was admissible to show what was meant by the clause "certain conditions as agreed upon." Per PONTIFEX, J. (GARTH, C. J., dissenting).—The evidence was admissible under proviso 1, sec. 92 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). Discussion as to the meaning of sec. 92 of the Evidence Act and of secs. 17, 22, and 26 of the Specific Relief Act. Per PONTIFEX, J.—It is of the essence of specific performance that part only of an agreement should not be performed. Part of the purchase-money had been advanced by the plaintiffs to the defendants, for which the defendants had given their promissory notes; and the plaint contained a prayer that the defendants be ordered to pay over the amount of the notes. Held (affirming the decision of WILSON, J.) that there was no misjoinder of causes of action within the meaning of sec. 44, rule a, of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877).—6 Cal. 328.

In the mofusil of this Presidency the transfer of the ownership of immoveable property to a vendee who has obtained a decree ordering the specific performance of the contract of sale to himself does not wait for the execution of a conveyance—even if the vendor is required, as he seldom is, to execute such a conveyance—but is affected by the passing of the decree itself, coupled with the payment of the purchase-money. A entered into an agreement with B for the purchase of moveable and immoveable property, and paid a deposit. Under such an agreement, by sec. 85 of the Indian Contract Act, the ownership of the moveable property would not pass before the transfer of the immoveable property. B, instead of conveying to A the property agreed to be conveyed to him, conveyed it to C, and put him, C, in possession. A brought a suit against C and B, and obtained a decree, setting aside the conveyance to C, and ordering B specifically to perform his contract and execute a conveyance of the property to himself, A. This decree was confirmed on appeal. B refusing to execute the conveyance to A, the conveyance was executed by the Court under the provisions of sec. 202 of Act VIII of 1859, C still detaining possession of the moveable and immoveable property in question, A brought this suit against him to recover possession of the same. The suit was brought within three years of the final decree of the Court of Appeal in the former suit, ordering a conveyance of the property to be executed to A, but not within three years of the date of agreement to purchase, and it was contended that as to the 'moveable' property the suit was time-barred. Held that the suit for the possession of the moveable property was not time-barred, as the right to possession of both moveable and immovable property accrued to A, at the earliest, on the date of the final decree for specific performance of the agreement of sale, and it was from that time that the "detainer's possession" first became unlawful under art. 49, schedule ii of Act XV of 1877. An objection that the plaintiff has joined together causes of action which, by sec. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code, may not be joined together without leave first obtained, is taken too late if it is taken for the first time in the Court of Appeal after the case has been already heard on its merits.—5 Bom. 554.

A plaintiff sued on the 28th February 1881 for specific performance of a contract entered into on the 1st March 1878 by defendant No. 1, and joined in that suit as a defendant a third person, who alleged that he was the owner of the property, the subject of the contract, seeking to obtain possession and other relief as against such third person, stating that he was a benamidar of defendant No. 1. Such third person contended in his written statement that the suit was multifarious, but the point was not decided in the lower Courts. On second appeal, such third person contended that the discretion given to the Court under sec. 22 of the Specific Relief Act ought not to be exercised, as the plaintiff had slept on his rights for nearly three years; and also contended that the suit was multifarious, and that he ought not to have been made a party thereto. Held, that although the principle of the objection, as to the delay of the plaintiff in bringing his suit, was an important one, and one which ought to be considered by the Courts in the exercise of their judicial discretion under sec. 22 of the Specific Relief Act, yet the point not having been taken in the Courts below, and there being nothing on the record to lead the Court to presume that the ordinary rule applicable to suits of this nature had been disregarded in the Courts below, the objection ought not, under the circumstances, to be allowed to prevail in second appeal. Held also, per MITTER, J. (PIGOT, J., dissenting), that as regards the objection to the suit for misjoinder, and under sec. 44 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the Appeal Court was precluded by sec. 578 of the Code from reversing the decree of the lower Court, as the error (if an error at all) could not affect the merits of the decision. Held also, that the principle laid down in the cases of De Houghton v. Money, L. R., 2 Ch. App., 166, and Luckumsey Ookerda v. Fazulla Cassumbhoy, I. L. R., 5 Bom. 177, is only applicable where, from the plaintiff's case, it appears that a third party, not a party to the contract, has a distinct interest from that of the other parties to the contract, which interest is sought to be declared null and void.—10 Cal. 1061.

45. Subject to the rules contained in Chapter II and in section 44, the plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant, or the same defendants jointly; and any plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendant, or the same defendants jointly, may unite such causes of action in the same suit.

But if it appear to the Court that any such causes of action cannot be conveniently tried or disposed of together, the Court may, at any time before the first hearing, of its own motion, or on the application of any defendant, or at any subsequent stage of the suit, if the parties agree, order separate trials of any such causes of action to be had, or make such other order as may be necessary or expedient for the separate disposal thereof.

When causes of action are united, the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit shall depend on the amount or value of the aggregate subject-matters at the date of instituting the suit, whether or not an order has been made under the second paragraph of this section.

Suit by some of the junior members of a Malabar tarwad against the karnavan and the other members of the tarwad, and certain persons to whom some of the tarwad property had been alienated by the karnavan, for a declaration that the alienations were not binding on the tarwad. Held that the suit was not bad for multifariousness. Vasudeva Shanbhaga v. Kuleadi Narnapai (7 Madr. H. O. R., 290) followed.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 234.

The judgment of the majority of the Full Bench in Narsingh Das v. Mangal Dubey (I. L. R., 5 Al. 163), except in its general observations as to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to joinder of parties and causes of action, proceeded upon and had reference to the special circumstances of the case, and to the allegations made by the plaintiff in his plaint, and was not intended to be carried further. In a suit for possession of immoveable property, part of which had been usufructually mortgaged by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2, the plaintiff alleged that the first defendant had no title to make such a mortgage, while both defendants maintained such title. Held that, inasmuch as the title of defendant No. 2 was derived from defendant No. 1, and stood or fell with the failure or success of the plaintiff's claim against the latter, there were not two causes of action but one, namely, infringement of the plaintiff's right by the defendant No. 1, and hence the suit was not bad for misjoinder of causes of action.—11 Al. 33.

A stranger to a contract of which specific performance is sought cannot be a party to the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff, sued as against one defendant for specific performance of a contract to sell land, and as against another for a declaration that he was not entitled to any charge upon the said lands, held that the latter defendant was improperly made a party to the suit.—5 Bom. 177.

The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that the several alienations made by defendant No. 1 (a Hindu widow) to the other defendants were void, and that they (the plaintiffs,) were entitled to the several properties after her death; also for an injunction, restraining her from making similar unlawful alienations in the future. Held that the suit as framed was not maintainable, inasmuch as it included within it several distinct causes of action, which, under sec. 45 of Act X of 1877, could not be joined together in the same suit. The course which should be adopted by a Court or Judge, where there has been such a misjoinder of causes of action, discussed.—7 Bom. 289.

The sons of R and of K and of S possessed proprietary rights in two mahals of a certain mauza. P possessed proprietary rights in one of those mahals. In April, 1879, the sons of R sold their proprietary rights in both mahals to G. In August, 1879, the sons of K sold their proprietary rights in both mahals to G. Later in the same month the sons of S sold their proprietary rights in both mahals to N. G sued N to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of the sale to the latter, and obtained a decree. P then sued to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of the three sales mentioned above, so far as they related to the mahal of which he was a co-sharer, joining as defendants G and N and the vendors to them. G alone objected in the Court of first instance to the frame of the suit. That Court overruled the objection, and gave P a decree. The lower Appellate Court reversed this decree on the ground of misjoinder. Held that in respect of G there was no misjoinder, but that in respect of the other defendant there was misjoinder, of both causes of action and parties. Inasmuch as, however, G alone objected to the frame of the suit, and the defect did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, the lower Appellate Court ought not, regard being had to sec. 578 of Act X of 1877, to have reversed the decree of the Court of first instance by reason of such defect.—4 Al. 163.

The power given by sec. 45 does not extend to an order for the dismissal of defendants, and that a fresh suit should be brought against them. Such an order would not be one for the "separate disposal" of the several causes of action; it would be an order preventing the disposal of them in the suit before the Court.—8 Bom. 616.

Sec. 45 is meant to apply to cases in which questions arise as to the joinder or severance of several causes of action against the same defendant. For non-joinder or misjoinder of parties provision is made in sec. 32, and the plaintiff had not resisted the joinder of the appellants as defendants. The Subordinate Judge could only strike out the name of a party upon an application being made, and no such application had been made.—8 Bom. 616.

Two co-sharers of a village, holding separate shares, sold their shares separately to the same person, upon which a third co-sharer of the village sued them and the vendor jointly to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the sales. Held that the frame of the suit was bad by reason of misjoinder of defendants and causes of action, and the suit had been properly dismissed on that ground.—6 Al. 106.

See I. L. R., 6 Madr. 239, noted under sec. 26; 4 Cal. 949, noted under sec. 31; 5 Al. 163, noted under sec. 28.

46. Any defendant, alleging that the plaintiff has united in the same suit several causes of action which cannot be conveniently disposed of in one suit, may, at any time before the first hearing, or, where issues are settled, before any evidence is recorded, apply to the Court for an order confining the suit to such of the causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit.

Notes.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 616, noted under secs. 32 and 45.

47. If, on the hearing of such application, it appears to the Court that the causes of action are such as cannot all be conveniently disposed of in one suit, the Court may order any of such causes of action to be excluded, and may direct the plaint to be amended accordingly, and may make such order as to costs as may be just.

Court, on hearing application, may exclude some causes, and order amendment.

Every amendment made under this section shall be attested by the signature of the Judge.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE INSTITUTION OF SUITS.

48. Every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf.

Suits to be commenced plaint.

Notes.

When a plaint discloses different causes of action against different parties, it is bad in law, and the suit is not maintainable.—2 B. L. R., (App.) 53 ; 11 W. R., 397 ; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 245 ; 8 W. R., 64.

A suit against five defendants, including claims of the most miscellaneous character against each defendant, was dismissed by the first Court, on the ground of multifariousness. The Subordinate Judge, on appeal, held that plaintiff was in any case entitled to a decision on one of his claims ; and further held that the suit was not multifarious. Held on special appeal that the Court could not select one claim on which to proceed, when plaintiff insisted on pressing all. Held further that the plaint was multifarious ; and though it would not be permissible for defendant to take that objection for the first time after the case had been fully gone into on the merits, yet, as the objection had been taken originally, the suit was properly dismissed by the first Court.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 341.

The presentation of a plaint at the private residence of the Munsif was held not a sufficient institution of the suit.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 5.

An appeal must be presented to the Judge, and not to the Moonserim. The placing of a petition on a table when the officer is not present is not a presentation to him.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 341.

49. The plaint must be distinctly written in the language of the Court ; provided that, if such language is not English, the plaint may

Language of plaint.

(with the permission of the Court) be written in English ; but in such case, if the defendant so require, a translation of the plaint into the language of the Court shall be filed in Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Pleadings in Indian Courts should not be construed with the same strictness as they are in the English Courts.—21 W. R., 59 ; 6 W. R., (P. C.) 1 ; 2 Moore's I. A. 344 ; 7 W. R., (P. C.) 8 ; 3 Moore's I. A., 383 ; 13 W. R., 248.

Particulars to be contained in plaint.

50. The plaint must contain the following particulars :—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought ;
(b) the name, description, and place of residence of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description, and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained ;

(d) a plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action, and where and when it arose ;

(e) a demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims ; and

(f) if the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished.

If the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint must state the precise amount so far as the case admits.

In money-suits.

In a suit for mesne-profits, and in a suit for the amount which will be found due to the plaintiff on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint need only state approximately the amount sued for.

When the plaintiff sues in a representative character, the plaint should shew, not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, but that he has taken the steps necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

Where plaintiff sues as representative.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues as B's executor. The plaint must state that A has proved B's will.

(b) B sues as C's administrator. The plaint must state that A has taken out administration to C's estate.

(c) A sues as guardian of D, a Muhammadan minor. A is not D's guardian according to Muhammadan law and usage. The plaint must state that A has been specially appointed D's guardian.

Defendant's interest and liability to be shewn.

The plaint must shew that the defendant is, or claims to be, interest in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand.

Illustration.

A dies, leaving D his executor, C his legatee, and B a debtor to A's estate. C sues D to compel him to pay his debt in satisfaction of C's legacy. The plaint must shew that B has causelessly refused to sue D, or that B and D have colluded for the purpose of defrauding C, or other such circumstances rendering D liable to C.

If the cause of action arose beyond the period ordinarily allowed by any law for instituting the suit, the plaint must shew the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed.

Grounds of exemption from limitation-law.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The prayer in the plaint ran shortly thus: "To adjudicate prescriptive right to irrigate the lands of certain mauzas; to remove two bunds on the named river at specified places; and to obtain an order for the flow of water of the said river as far as the villages comprising the Pergunna of Havelli Kharrakpore." Held that, as there was no evidence as to how much the volume of water was diminished, no conclusion could be arrived at as to whether the plaintiff's right had been infringed or not, and that therefore the suit had been properly dismissed.—4 B. L. R., (App.) 30; 13 W. R., 48.

A suit cannot be dismissed merely on the grounds that the plaint did not contain a specification of the land in the defendant's possession, and that there was an error in the plaint in the description of the defendant's residence.—6 B. L. R., (App.) 84; 14 W. R., 174.

An application was made to take a plaint off the file on the grounds, 1st, of indefiniteness; and, 2nd, that the plaintiff had not deposited security in accordance with sec. 34 of Act VIII of 1859. The plaint, which was filed on 12th December 1870, stated that the cause of action arose "previous to 21st August 1869," but did not show that the suit was not barred. PHEAR, J.—I think I must order the plaint to be taken off the file. If the plaintiff's amendment is correct, he will not be damaged by this course; if incorrect, the suit cannot be maintained. The plaintiff will pay the costs. If necessary, leave will be given now to bring a fresh suit.—7 B. L. R., (App.) 23.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for a kobala. The defendant took an objection to the wording of the summons, in which his proper title, "Roy Bahadur," was not mentioned. The Munsif ordered the plaintiff to amend his plaint in five days, and, on his failure to do so, rejected his plaint under sec. 29 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal the Judge upheld the Munsif's order. The High Court set aside the Munsif's order, observing that the object of the law, which was to properly identify the defendant, had been fully carried out, and remanded the case for trial on its merits.—12 B. L. R., 445 note; 12 W. R., 450.

In a suit by the plaintiffs to recover damages from the defendant, a surety, upon a contract to deliver coffee to the plaintiffs, the plaint did not allege the willingness of the plaintiffs to pay on delivery. Held on special appeal that such allegation was not necessary, its absence not having prejudiced the defendant. The plaint alleged a contract to deliver on the 2nd March, and the evidence showed an extension of the time to the 31st March, but the pleadings alleged that the breach was on the 2nd March. Held that this objection was not tenable, the defendant having been perfectly aware of the case he had to meet on this point. The surety had begun to perform the duty which the principal had contracted to perform. Held that this circumstance did not preclude the plaintiffs from suing the defendant as surety.—7 M. H. C. R., 364.

Where a defendant admits the execution of a document upon which he is sued, the onus lies on him to get rid of the effect of such admission. A defendant must be taken to admit all material allegations in the plaint which he does not traverse. In an action against a firm, the names of the partners should be specified in the plaint, and a summons served on one or more of its members if resident within its jurisdiction.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 85.

In every such plaint, plaintiff should name the amount of damages which he seeks to recover as compensation for the injury of which he complains.—10 Bom. H. C. R., 182.

A plaint under Act XX of 1864, by a relative of a minor against his administrator, must specify one or more acts of misconduct, or assign some satisfactory reason for apprehending an injury to the estate of the minor by the administrator.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 414.

A suit, in which the plaint discloses a cause of action falling within the period of limitation, should not be dismissed after the framing of issues, merely because the Court considers that an erroneous date has been assigned in the plaint as the cause of action. The plaint should be amended.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 354.

A suit should not be dismissed for what is obviously a mere mistake in the plaint, viz., the erroneous statement of the date of a mortgage made many years before the plaintiff acquired an interest in the property, where all the parties to it were dead, and the deed itself lost.—3 Agra H. C. R., 33; 3 Agra H. C. R., 218.

A suit should not be dismissed at the last stage of the proceedings in regular appeal for want of sufficient distinctness in the plaint, but such defect may be cured by examining the plaintiff or his pleader on that point.—3 Agra H. C. R., 162; 15 W. R., 286.

If a plaint discloses a cause of action, a judge on appeal ought not to dismiss the suit, on the ground merely of defect in the allegations in the plaint.—Marshall's Rep., 198; 1 Hay's Rep., 467.

The indistinctness of boundaries is, under Act VIII of 1859, not a cause of non-suit.—1 Hay's Rep., 555.

In a suit to recover possession, plaintiff is bound, under sec. 26, Act VIII of 1859, to give the date on which he was dispossessed as accurately as possible, especially where one of the issues is whether he has been in occupation of the land within twelve years of suit.—11 W. R., 238.

A suit should not be dismissed for mere defects in the plaint, if the evidence shows there is a good cause of action.—10 W. R., 460.

A claim for contribution should distinctly set forth the amounts due by each party sued, failing which the plaint should be rejected.—14 W. R., 373.

Plaints must state the relief sought for, the subject of the claim, the cause of action, and when it accrued; and in suits for damages for injury done, the nature of the injury ought to be set out. The strict rules of English law do not necessarily apply to plaints in this country.—13 W. R., 248.

It is not absolutely necessary for the mother to describe herself as guardian in the plaint, when the suit is evidently brought by her as mother of her minor son.—17 W. R., 144.

Under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 26, cl. 5, all that it is necessary for plaintiff to do is to describe the property in such a manner as many suffice for identification ; it is not absolutely necessary to set forth the boundaries.—18 W. R., 461.

A suit brought by minors through the manager of their property as next friend must follow the form prescribed by Beng. Act IV of 1870.—20 W. R., 453.

In the case of an unincorporated or unregistered Company, the plaintiff, if he does not know of what persons the Company is composed, may sue the Company by the name under which they are carrying on business, stating in his plaint his inability to describe them better.—8 W. R., 45.

A suit to recover land without defining boundaries cannot be maintained, because, if decreed, the decree could not be executed.—25 W. R., 39.

As to the effect of misdescription of area and boundaries in a suit for enhancement of rent.—22 W. R., 426.

Where the object of a suit is to prevent the plaintiff's right's over certain lands from being infringed upon, the boundaries of the lands should be given in the plaint.—2 C. L. R., 134.

To describe the plaintiff as residing in Chitpore Road in the town of Calcutta is not a sufficient description, under sec. 50 of the Civil Procedure Code, of his place of abode ; nor is it sufficient under that section to describe the defendant as formerly of Calcutta without alleging that the plaintiff has been unable to ascertain his place of residence more definitely.—4 C. L. R., 366.

Where the owner of a tank wishes to bring a suit against a person for fishing in the tank without his permission, the plaint should be framed for the recovery of damages for trespass, and should not be based on an alleged dispossession by reason of the defendants fishing in the tank.—3 C. L. R., 509.

The fact of A's plaint not showing when the cause of action arose is ground for rejecting the plaint, but no ground for finding on the trial that the suit is barred upon an issue raised as to limitation.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 343.

Under sec. 26, Act VIII of 1859, the plaint is intended to be a statement of facts, and not merely a prayer for relief. The words "cause of action" in that section, as distinguished from the "relief sought for" and the "subject of the claim," mean the grounds entitling the plaintiff to the remedy he seeks.—1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 12.

A plaint charging fraud must set forth particulars ; general allegations however strong the words, not even amounting to an averment of fraud of which a Court can take notice. After an examination of the plaintiff's pleader by the Court to discover whether there were grounds, which did not appear, for an amendment, a suit was dismissed on the defects of the plaint, which, charging fraud, did not set forth a good cause of action in regard to the above. Held that dismissal was not the proper mode of disposal of the suit ; but the plaint should have been rejected, a course which would have enabled the plaintiff, if he found himself at a future time in a position to make averments giving relevancy to an action, to present a fresh plaint.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 533.

The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants had encroached on the bed of a tank, raised embankments, and cultivated crops which interfered with the plaintiffs' supply of water ; and they prayed for a decree ejecting the defendants from the land encroached on and restraining them from interfering with it. Held, that the Court was not precluded by sec. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure from passing a decree, declaring the plaintiffs' right to the water of the tank, directing the defendants' embankments, &c., to be removed, and regulating the cultivation of their lands ; but that the defendants' liberty of cultivation should not be restricted more than was necessary to secure the plaintiffs' supply of water.—11 Madr. 94.

In a suit for cancellation of a sale-deed by the person whose name appeared on it as executant, it was alleged in the plaint that it was a forgery, and that if it was not a forgery, its execution had been obtained by fraud and that it was, moreover, void for want of consideration. The plaintiff's interest in the property to which the instrument related had been assigned by her to another by a conveyance which contained certain covenants by her with regard to the land :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit. Per cur : The gist of the plaintiff's charge against the defendant was that she had never executed a sale deed in his favor, and that the document set up by him was a forgery. It was not competent to the plaintiff to combine with this charge as an alternative the wholly inconsistent charge that if she did execute the document no consideration was received by her or that fraud had been practised upon her.—13 Madr. 549.

In all cases, whether a plaint is verified by the plaintiff or by some other person, the party verifying should state shortly what paragraphs he verifies of his own knowledge, and what paragraphs he believes to be true from the information of others.—6 Cal. 675.

There is no law at present in force in the mofussal which obliges a person claiming under a will to obtain probate of the will, or otherwise establish his right as executor, administrator, or legatee before he can sue in respect to any property which he claims under the will. In any suit or proceeding instituted by him, it is for the Court in which the suit or proceeding is pending to determine, for the purposes of such suit or proceeding, whether the will is genuine and valid, and confers upon the plaintiff or applicant the right which he claims.—6 Bom. 73.

51. The plaint shall be signed by the plaintiff and his Plaints to be signed and verified. pleader (if any), and shall be verified at the foot by the plaintiff, or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case :

Provided that, if the plaintiff is, by reason of absence or for other good cause, unable to sign the plaint, it may be signed by any person duly authorized by him in this behalf.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the plaintiffs described themselves as lately carrying on business under the name of C and Co., held that there was no irregularity in the plaint being signed by C and Co., and verified only by A B, one of the partners.—5 B. L. R., (App.) 89.

By the practice of the Court, in a suit brought by a firm, one partner can, without having obtained special leave, verify the plaint on his own behalf and also on behalf of his co-partners. Quare.—Whether such a practice is correct, or ought to be allowed to continue? Act XIV of 1870 does not affect the procedure to the High Court.—12 B. L. R., 35.

The plaintiff in a suit went on a pilgrimage after he had been ordered to file a written statement, but without having filed it. Not having return when the case was on the board, his son applied, under secs. 28 and 123 of Act of VIII of 1859, for leave to verify and file a statement, alleging himself to be interested as a reversioner. The application was refused. Held that a third party will not be allowed to verify and file a written statement for a plaintiff who has culpably neglected to file one himself.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 153.

The Judge on appeal dismissed a suit, on the ground that the plaint was verified by an agent, when it might and ought to have been verified by the plaintiff himself. Held that, the plaint having been admitted, the suit ought not to be dismissed for this defect, but the Judge might properly have required the verification of the plaintiff to be supplied.—Marshall's Rep., 344; 2 Hay's Rep., 325.

Sec. 36 read along with sec. 51, of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), shows that a plaint which may be presented by an authorized agent may in like manner be subscribed by him, and that subscription would be a compliance with sec. 51.—3 C. L. R., 579.

Under sec. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act X of 1877, the Court may in its discretion admit a plaint which has been subscribed by an authorized agent of the plaintiff.—3 C. L. R., 15

When a plaint has been verified by a person who has not shown to the Court that he is a person competent to verify it, the Court will order the plaint to be removed from the file.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 39.

The verification of a plaint signed with the name of the plaintiff by her mooktear, and which does not aver what is false, but attempts to do what the law estops her from doing, is not a false verification within the meaning of sec. 24, Act VIII of 1859.—W. R., (F. B.) 41; Marsh. Rep., 127; 1 Ind., Jur., O. S., 44.

A plaintiff may be excused from verifying his plaint, not only by reason of his absence, but also for any other good cause to the satisfaction of the Court.—7 W. R., 168.

It is not competent to a Judge of a Small Cause Court to raise any objection to the verification of a plaint by an agent, after such verification has been expressly sanctioned by him at the commencement of the suit.—12 W. R., 465.

A plaint, signed by a person holding a general power-of-attorney to sue on behalf of the plaintiff, is properly signed within the meaning of the proviso in Act X of 1877, sec. 51 (as amended by Act XII of 1879).—4 Bom. 468 (F. B.)

A person filing a written statement in a suit is bound by law to state the truth, and if he makes a statement which is false to his knowledge or belief, or which he believes not to be true, he is guilty of giving false evidence within the meaning of sec. 191 of the Penal Code.—6 Al. 626.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 675, noted under sec. 50.

52. The verification must be to the effect that the same is true to the knowledge of the person making it, except as to matter stated on information and belief, and that as to those matters he believes it to be true.

Contents of verification.
Verification to be signed and attested.

The verification shall be signed by the person making it.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the plaint alleges matter which cannot be personally known to the person making the verification, and which is not stated to be on information and belief, a verification which does not distinguish how much is true to the knowledge of the person making it, and what is alleged to be true on information and belief, does not fulfil the requirements of sec. 52, Act X of 1877.—4 C. L. R., 366.

The Court must be satisfied, under sec. 52, that a person, other than a plaintiff verifying the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case; but in the case of person holding a general power-of-attorney, or of any other recognized agent, the Court will not insist on any extreme stringency of proof.—4 Bom. 468 (F. B.)

Sec. 52 does not require the verification of a plaint to be made in the presence of an officer of the Court; but having regard to the necessity of satisfying the Court that the person, other than the plaintiff, who verifies the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case, it is desirable that a verification by such a person should be made in the presence of the Court, unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient ground for dispensing with its attendance.—4 Bom. 468 (F. B.)

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 675, noted under sec. 50.

When plaint may be rejected, returned for amendment, or amended.

53. The plaint may, at the discretion of the Court,—

(a) at, or at any time before, the settlement of issues, be rejected, if it does not disclose a cause of action;

(b) at, or at any time before, the settlement of issues, be returned for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, and upon such terms as to the payment of costs occasioned by such amendment as the Court thinks fit, if it—

(i) is not signed and verified as hereinbefore required,

(ii) does not state correctly and without prolixity the several particulars hereinbefore required, or contains particulars other than those so required,

(iii) is wrongly framed by reason of non-joinder or misjoinder of parties, or joins causes of action which ought not to be joined in the same suit, or

(iv) is not framed in accordance with the provisions of sec. 42;

(c) at any time before judgment be amended by the Court upon such terms as to the payment of costs as the Court thinks fit:

Provided that a plaint shall not be amended, either by the party to whom it is returned for amendment, or by the Court, so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.

When a plaint is amended under this section, the amendment shall be attested by the signature of the Judge.*

The property of several co-sharers, some of whom were minors, was sold to a single purchaser, under a deed of sale, which contained a covenant by the vendors, who professed to act on behalf of themselves and the minors, that they would compensate the vendee for any loss he might incur, should the minors, when they come of age, not ratify the sale. A sued to enforce her right of pre-emption in respect of the lands sold. The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that A could not enforce her claim of pre-emption in respect of the shares of the minors, and on the Court's suggestion the plaint was amended so as to ask only for enforcement of her claim in respect only of the shares of the vendors of full age. Held that A was bound to claim her right against all the shares, and could not enforce it in respect of some only. Semble.—A plaint cannot be amended in an Appellate Court.—I. B. L. R., (A. C.) 78, 10 W. R., 111.

An Appellate Court is competent at any stage to allow objections to be taken to an apparent defect in the plaint. Held that a party against whom an order has been obtained under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, must, if he sue for its reversal, assert substantially the same right as that which has been contended for in the execution. Held by JACKSON, J., that, in a suit for declaration of title, defendants must have given a cause of action by impugning it antecedently to plaint filed, even though their written statement be hostile.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 212; 11 W. R., 40.

An application was made to amend a plaint by substituting the names of Messrs. L L for the Official Assignee as defendants. Messrs. L L had been adjudicated insolvents, and one of them had obtained his personal discharge. As to this there was a mis-statement in the plaint, to amend which was also asked in the present application. No written statements had been filed by either party to the suit. PHEAR, J., granted the application, ordering the costs to be paid by the plaintiff.—7 B. L. R., (App.) 65.

The defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take the plaintiff's mare "Bridesmaid" on "racing terms,"—all winnings to be divided equally between them, and the plaintiff to have the option of claiming a one-fourth share of any lottery in which she might be brought by or on account of the defendant ; the plaintiff to keep and train "Bridesmaid" for Rs. 60 a month. Subsequently the plaintiff agreed to keep and train, for a like sum for each horse, five horses belonging to the defendant. The defendant having been posted as a defaulter, the plaintiff at the defendant's request advanced certain sums to the Secretary of the Calcutta Races to enable the defendant's horses to run. As security for the repayment of such advances, and of a sum of Rs. 4,456-6 which had become due to the plaintiff, and which included an item of Rs. 1,149 for "balance of bets and lotteries" and a smaller sum in respect of certain tickets in the "Secundra Raffle," the defendant gave to the plaintiff a letter of hypothecation of his five horses, whereby it was agreed that, in case of the defendant's default, the plaintiff should be at liberty to sell the horses. The defendant made default, and the plaintiff advertised the horses for sale. On the same day the defendant wrote and gave to the plaintiff a letter, stating that, in consideration of the plaintiff's withdrawing the advertisement, and withholding the sale for a certain period, he would give the plaintiff a promissory note for the balance of his claim. A note for Rs. 7,000 was accordingly given by the defendant to the plaintiff. In the account delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, he had by mistake over-credited the defendant with Rs. 744 in an item headed, "Cash received from the Secretary of the Calcutta Races, balance of racing account," and under which was included the following item : "I. O. U., deducted from lottery account Rs. 480." On receiving information of the error, the defendant gave the plaintiff another promissory note for Rs. 744. In an action of the notes brought under Act V of 1866, the plaintiff obtained a decree, which was set aside on the defendant's application, and leave was given to him to appear and defend. Written statements were then filed on the plaintiff's application. Held, by Macpherson, J., that the two promissory notes were given as a security for the whole of the plaintiff's claim ; that the items for "balance of bets and lotteries" and for the "Secundra Raffle" being rendered illegal by the Lottery Act (V of 1844), part of the consideration for the notes was illegal, and no action was maintainable upon them. His Lordship, therefore, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, held, by COUCH, C. J., that the promissory note for Rs. 7,000 was not vitiated by the Rs. 1,149 being part of the consideration for it : although that portion of the latter sum which was won by lotteries was obtained by an illegal transaction, it was not illegal, for the defendant to receive the money, and, having done so, to pay the plaintiff his share, or to promise to do so. But the money paid in respect of the "Secundra Raffle," being money paid in execution of an illegal purpose, was an illegal consideration, which dis-entitled the plaintiff to recover on the note. Held further that the note for Rs. 744 was given upon good consideration. All the facts of the case being stated in the plaintiff's written statement, the Court might allow the plaint to be amended, and framed an issue as to what amount was due to the plaintiff in respect of the consideration for the note for Rs. 7,000. Held, by MARKBY, J., that both notes were good, inasmuch as the promise contained in them did not spring from, nor was it the creature of, the original illegal agreement, but was a separate agreement.—9 B. L. R., 441; 18 W. R., 424.

A sued B to obtain possession of certain land, on the ground that he had a right of pre-emption thereto, in preference to that of B, to whom the same had been sold. He stated in his plaint that he was a co-partner (shafia khalit) or the vendor. The defendant set up that he was also a co-partner in the mouza ; and, therefore, had equal right with the plaintiff. The Mun-sif held that, even if the interest of all the co-sharers of the mouza be equal, the plaintiff had a particular right to the lands in dispute, as they were situate within his own share of the putti. The principal Sudder Ameen confirmed the judgment of the Lower Court, holding that the objection of the defendant was fanciful and whimsical. On special appeal, held that the question of vicinage was immaterial, as "the right which the plaintiff claimed was not a right of vicinage, but a right as co-partner. He distinctly used in his claim the Mahomedan term, showing that he claimed his right as a co-partner. He cannot be allowed to travel beyond his plaint and he cannot, therefore, obtain a decree by right of vicinage."—Per KEMP and E. JACKSON, JJ., Kunjabehari Lal v. Giridhari Lal, Special Appeal No. 271 of 1868, from Tirhoot. 21st July 1868. [1 B. L. R., S. N., 10 W. R., 189.] 3 B. L. R., (App.) 142.

Where in the plaint the relief sought for was possession and mesne-profits, and the plaint was in the course of the suit amended, and an additional stamp paid, so that the suit became one for resumption, held the amendment was improperly made, and the suit must proceed as a suit for possession and mesne-profits.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol. 581; 6 W. R., 211.

An estoppel in pais need not be pleaded in order to make it obligatory. With the Indian system of pleading, a party's statement in a judicial proceeding cannot be excluded like allegations in bills in equity and pleadings at common law. But mere statements for the purpose of a particular judicial proceeding can only be exclusive evidence in another proceeding as to such material facts embodied therein as must have been found affirmatively to warrant the judgment of the Court upon the issues joined. They are then conclusive between the same parties, not because they are the statements of those parties, but because, for all purposes of present and prospective litigation, they must be taken as truth. A brought a pauper suit, and virtually denied possession of certain property. B petitioned to dispauper A, alleging that A was possessed of such property. The Court decided that A was in possession, and rejected her prayer to be allowed to sue as a pauper. Held in a subsequent suit by A's representative against B's representative for the property that, even if A's allegation, found to be false, could be treated as an estoppel, B's allegation, found to be true, would also be an estoppel, and "estoppel against estoppel setteth the matter at large;" but that, although A's allegation was receivable evidence against A and her representative, they were not concluded by such allegation and the decision thereon.—2 M. H. C. R., 31.

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was in possession of property, and prayed the Court to cause the registry to be altered into his name, without alleging that the proper authorities had improperly refused to make the entry, and without joining as a defendant the only person who had power so to do, held that the plaintiff's suit ought to have been dismissed.—2 M. H. C. R., 363.

Where a plaint alleges the cause of action to be the prosecution of a false charge of forgery, and the statement of the subject-matter imports that the charge was false to the knowledge of the defendant, the omission to allege expressly malice and the absence of reasonable and probable cause is no good ground of objection to the hearing of the suit. Magistrates are not incapacitated to give evidence of matters which have come before them in the course of a preliminary inquiry into a criminal charge. Held that in a suit for a malicious prosecution the defendant had a right to the evidence of the Subordinate Magistrate who held a preliminary inquiry into a charge of forgery preferred by the defendant against the plaintiff. Semble, a defect which appears on the face of the plaint, which would have rendered it inadmissible, is not a matter for amendment at the final hearing of the suit.—3 M. H. C. R., 372.

In a suit by the plaintiffs to recover damages from the defendant, a surety, upon a contract to deliver coffee to the plaintiffs, the plaint did not allege the willingness of the plaintiffs to pay on delivery. Held on special appeal that such allegation was not necessary, its absence not having prejudiced the defendant. The plaint alleged a contract to deliver on the 2nd March, and the evidence showed an extension of the time to the 31st March, but the pleadings alleged that the breach was on the 2nd March. Held that this objection was not tenable, the defendant having been perfectly aware of the case he had to meet on this point. The surety had begun to perform the duty which the principal had contracted to perform. Held that this circumstance did not preclude the plaintiffs from suing the defendant as surety.—7 M. H. C. R., 364.

In 1874 plaintiff sued to recover certain property, or its value, “dishonestly misappropriated” on the 21st January 1872 by first defendant, assisted by the other defendants. The lower Court held that the right to sue did not accrue until the property had been demanded and refused; that the plaint contained no allegation of such demand and refusal; that the plaint could not be amended by the insertion of such an allegation after answer; filed and that therefore the suit could not be maintained. Held, reversing the decree, that, even if the present case were one in which the provision as to demand could have any application at all, still the suit ought not to have been dismissed on that technical ground when the defendant by his answer traversed the whole of the allegations in the plaint, and pleaded the Statute of limitations.—7 M. H. C. R., 400.

Where a mortgagor brings a suit to redeem mortgaged land on payment of such sum as shall be found due to the mortgagee, the Court is not justified in decreeing possession without payment in favour of the mortgagor, merely because the mortgagee denies the existence of the mortgage. Where a point is taken on appeal, the Appellate Court should consider and decide it, although the vakil may omit to argue it.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 9.

Where a lessor sues to eject his tenant on the expiration of the latter's term, or for breach of the conditions of his lease, and fails to prove the lease, he is not ordinarily at liberty in the same suit, ignoring the lease, to fall back upon his general title as though he had not set up and failed to prove the alleged lease. A plaintiff must be limited to the case which he puts forward in this plaint, but he may put forward an alternative case in his plaint from the commencement, as the defendant then will know that he has more than one case to meet, and will not be taken by surprise. Where the plaintiff has not put forward an alternative case in the plaint, he may have leave to amend his plaint and to state his case correctly therein, if the Court think that he has rested his claim upon wrong grounds from misinformation, ignorance of law or fact, mistake, or misconstruction of document.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 1.

Secs. 29 and 31 of the Civil Procedure Code empower the Court to permit such amendment in the plaint as may enable the Court to give relief in respect of the wrong originally complained of, but not to allow totally new causes of action to be added by a supplemental plaint.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 171; Ed. 1873, 250.

The plaintiff brought a suit against the Secretary of State, which the Judge dismissed ; on the petition of the plaintiff he allowed the plaint in the suit so disposed of to be amended, and the name of a new defendant to be substituted, and a different cause of action to be stated. Held that the Judge acted illegally, and that the plaintiff should have been referred to a new suit. The Secretary of State is only responsible for the acts of public servants done within the scope of their authority.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 118; Ed., 1873; 204.

A plaint may be amended upon subsequent application, with reference to an objection taken when it was filed.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 273.

Amendment of a plaint is not allowable after issues are fixed.—5 W. R., 234.

A plaintiff can be allowed to amend his case only when he has an honest case, but either through mistake or some misapprehension he was not placed the real facts before the Court.—16 W. R., 123.

Where the plaint, on the face of it, is one in which a manager suing on behalf of minors is himself plaintiff, and which seeks to set aside deeds constituting a mortgage transaction, the court cannot, by amending the plaint, turn the suit into a redemption-suit on the part of the minors.—20 W. R., 453.

The court is not to make a case for a plaintiff which he has not made for himself.—7 W. R., 478.

A plaint charging fraud must set forth particulars ; general allegations, however strong the words, not even amounting to an averment of fraud of which a Court can take notice. After an examination of the plaintiff's pleader by the Court to discover whether there were grounds, which did not appear, for an amendment, a suit was dismissed on the defects of the plaint, which, charging fraud, did not set forth a good cause of action in regard to the above. Held that dismissal was not the proper mode of disposal of the suit ; but the plaint should have been rejected, a course which would have enabled the plaintiff, if he found himself at a future time in a position to make averments giving relevancy to an action, to present a fresh plaint.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 533.

A suit in the Court of a District Munsiff to enforce acceptance of a patta and execution of a muchlika by defendant in respect of a holding in a village to which plaintiff claimed title was dismissed as not being maintainable. Held that the suit should not have been dismissed, but the plaint should have been amended by the addition of a prayer for a declaration of the plaintiff's title : and that the Court then would have had jurisdiction to grant by way of consequential relief the relief originally sought.—12 Madr. 481.

The plaintiff brought this suit in the High Court at Bombay against the defendant for defamation alleged to be contained in a notice that appeared in the Bombay Gazette on the 9th April 1888. The defendant was the chairman of the Hinganghat Mill Company. The plaintiff had been for some years secretary and manager of that company. In April 1888, he was dismissed from his appointment, and shortly afterwards she filed a suit (No. 1 of 1888) in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner at Wardah, in the Central Provinces (which was the Court of the district in which Hinganghat is situated), for wrongful dismissal. The present suit was filed in July 1888. The defendant took out a summons calling on the plaintiff to show cause why the suit should not be stayed, and the plaint returned to the plaintiff, in order that, if he thought proper, it might be presented to the Court at Wardah. The defendant relied on the following points :—(1) that neither he nor the plaintiff resided or carried on business at Bombay ; (2) that all the defendant's witnesses resided at Wardah ; (3) that the other suit (No. 1 of 1883) was pending at Wardah, and that the decree of that suit would decide the present case also. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to sue in Bombay.—13 Bom. 178.

In a suit for collision originally filed against the owners of a ship, held that the plaintiffs might amend the plaint by adding the ship as a party-defendant.—12 Bom. 237.

A suit was brought by the manager of the M Bank against the executrix of B to recover a sum of money as due upon a bond executed by B in favour of the Bank. The plaint described the defendant as " Mrs. Sarah G. Barlow of Mussoorie," and stated that she was executrix of the deceased B. It began thus :—" George Henry Webb, manager of the above-named plaintiff's business, states as follows," and proceeded to state that the deceased was, at the time of his death, " indebted to the plaintiff," and to set forth the cause of action in detail. It was signed and verified thus :—" For the M Bank, Limited, G. H. Webb, Manager." The Court of first instance returned the plaint for amendment under sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code : (i) because the defendant was not properly described ; (ii) because the plaint was set out as made by George Henry Webb as manager, and not as on the part of the Bank ; and (iii) because the suit should not have been brought in the form in which it was brought, but in the form referred to in sec. 213 and No. 105 of sch. iv of the Code. Held, that the first of these grounds failed, because it was clear that the defendant was stated to be the executrix of the deceased, and the suit was brought against her in that capacity. Held that the second ground did not come within sec. 53 of the Code, as it was clear that the circumstances set out in the plaint applied to the case of the plaintiff Bank, and the plaint sufficiently fulfilled the requirements of the Code that the facts which the plaintiff considers essential should be concisely and clearly set out, and that the verification should be made by some one acquainted with these facts. Held, with reference to the third ground, that the plaintiff was at liberty to bring a suit for money against any person administering to or representing an estate ; and if such suit should be found, with reference to the facts in evidence, not maintainable, it should be dismissed ; but there was no authority for returning a plaint for amendment, when it was found that the suit was not maintainable in the form in which it was brought, in order to amend it so as to convert the suit into one of a different character.—9 Al. 188.

A plaint can be rejected, returned for amendment, or amended by the Court of first instance only at or before the first hearing of the suit, and not after the first hearing thereof. Modhe v. Dongre dissented from. Soorj-mukhi Koer's Case, Burjore v. Bhagana, and Fazul-un-nissa Begam v. Mulo distinguished by MAHMOOD, J. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The plaint may, for causes other than those mentioned in sec. 53, be amended by the Court after the first hearing.—7 Al. 79.

Where in an action of ejectment against a tenant holding over, the lease sued on was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration, and the plaint was not amended to one containing an alternative claim for partition :—Held, that the plaintiff could not be allowed to fall back upon his general title, and obtain a decree for partition.—10 Bom. 451.

The decision of the Court of first instance, that a plaint is undervalued, is binding upon the Court of appeal, reference or revision ; but the Court of first instance is not justified in rejecting the plaint without giving to the plaintiff an opportunity of affixing the proper stamp. Where it is open to the plaintiff to ask for an account, against the defendant, of moneys received by him under a certificate of heirship, and for payment of moneys not properly accounted for, he is precluded by sec. 2 of the Specific Relief Act, I of 1877, from asking for a mere declaratory decree. Plaint allowed by the High Court to be amended by insertion of a prayer for account.—9 Bom. 355.

Where, at the first hearing of a suit, the plaint is returned for amendment within a fixed time under the provisions of Act X of 1877, sec. 53, and it is amended accordingly, it cannot afterwards be again returned for amendment.—2 Al. 671.

Where a plaintiff's claim as originally stated in his plaint was based on the allegation of the invalidity of a will, an application at the hearing of the case to amend the plaint by inserting a clause submitting that, even if the will were valid, it did not dispose of the whole of the testator's property was refused,—the Court holding, under sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), that the case made by the proposed amendment would be inconsistent with the case made in the plaint as originally framed.—7 Bom. 155.

Where a plaintiff alleged that M, the deceased widow of S, a Hindu, while administering the estate of her deceased husband, borrowed money from plaintiff for purposes binding on the estate, and executed a promissory note to secure the payment of the same, and that the first and second defendants, as reversionary heirs of S, and the third defendant, were in possession of the estate of S, and refused to pay the debt incurred by M: Held that the plaint was properly rejected as disclosing no cause of action against the defendants.—4 Madr. 375.

The plaintiff in a suit applied for the amendment of the plaint. The defendant objected to the amendment, and a day was fixed by the Court for the "admission or rejection of the petition, and the determination of the defendant's objections thereto." The Court, after hearing the parties, made an order allowing the "petition of amendment," and rejecting the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed from such order to the High Court. Held that, inasmuch as orders amending plaints then and there are not made appealable by Act X of 1877, and it was into this category, if into any at all, that such order must fall, such order was not appealable.—3 Al. 854.

In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title in respect of land, where the plaint did not disclose any facts from which it could be said that the defendants denied the plaintiff's title, but from the proceedings in the original cause it was established that, before the suit was brought, there was a dispute existing between the parties as regards the title, and that a decree in favour of the plaintiffs had been passed by the original Court on the merits of the case: Held that though the plaint might have been rejected in the first instance under sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground that it did not disclose any cause of action, it was too late for an Appellate Court to reverse the decree solely on that ground, without being satisfied that no such cause of action was established on the evidence.—7 Cal. 343.

Sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, which provides that a plaint cannot be amended so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character, does not prevent a plaintiff, who has been ousted after suit brought for declaration of title, from amending his plaint by adding a prayer of possession. If the congregation of a church as a body cease to follow the observances of a particular form of worship, and in preference for forty years follow those of a different form of worship, there would be no one left for whom and by whom the original form of worship can be continued, the objects of the original trust cease to exist, and the church-funds and property become impressed with a trust for the performance of the later form of worship. Where a defendant out of the jurisdiction of the Court was summoned to produce a letter, and did not comply with the summons, but appeared by pleader at the last moment at the hearing of the suit, and service of notice on the pleader to produce the letter would have been nugatory, secondary evidence of the letter was admitted under sec. 66, proviso 6 of the Evidence Act.—2 Madr. 295.

Where, after a trial has begun, or even after it has concluded, it appears that the Court has not jurisdiction to hear the case, the plaint should be returned in order that it may be presented to the proper Court, and no additional court-fees are payable. The pre-existing state of the law as recognized by the tribunals is one of the chief means of interpreting laws of procedure. Jagjivandas Javherdas Seth v. Magdum Ali (I. L. R., 7 Bom. 487 overruled.—8 Bom. 313.

See I. L. R., 6 Madr. 239, noted under sec. 26 ; 5 Bom. 609, noted under sec. 34 ; 11 Madr. 94, noted under sec. 50 ; 11 Madr. 42, noted under sec. 31 ; 15 Madr. 255 noted under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act.

When plaint shall be rejected.

54. The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases:—

(a) if the relief sought is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(b) if the relief sought is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(c) if the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any positive rule of law :

(d) if the plaint, having been returned for amendment within a time fixed by the Court, is not amended within such time.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The personal performance of the tulub-ishhad, or demand for pre-emption by the pre-emptor, depends on his ability to perform it. He may do it by means of a letter or messenger, or may depute an agent, if he is at a distance, and cannot afford personal attendance. Where a defendant, after the case had been gone into on the merits, set up that the suit had been under-valued, and the Court of first instance found in favour of the plaintiff on that issue, but the lower Appellate Court was of a contrary opinion, and dismissed the suit, held that the lower Appellate Court should, before dismissing the suit on that ground, have allowed the plaintiff the option of supplying the necessary stamps, as the first Court would have done, under sec. 31, Act VIII. of 1859. In any case, the order of the first Court was not one affecting the merits of the case or jurisdiction of the Court; and, therefore, under sec. 350, Act VIII. of 1859, the suit could not be dismissed on appeal upon that ground.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 139; 12 W. R., 484.

We are of opinion that there is no ground for this review. We are asked to pass an order enabling the applicant to have the plaint back in order to file it in the proper Court. The case was discussed at great length when the special appeal was argued, but no such request was then made before us. It was held by us, on the plaintiff's own showing, that the Court in which the suit was brought was admittedly a Court which had no jurisdiction to try it. If a party brings a suit in a Court which, according to his own showing, has no jurisdiction to try the case, it does not lie in him, failing in that Court, to ask to have the plaint back in order to file it in the proper Court. However, as the matters stand in the case, this request, as an alternative plea, was never made or otherwise raised before; and I think that to allow such a point to be raised at this stage would be against the proper legal principle—viz., that there must be some end to litigation.—6 B. L. R., App. 141.

Where a plaint is rejected under sec. 30 of Act VIII of 1859 by the first Court, on the ground that it is undervalued, an appeal lies from such order under sec. 36 of Act VIII of 1859, and this appeal was not taken away by the note to art. II, Sch. B to Act XXVI. of 1867, the object of which was to prevent appeals only where the question merely related to the amount of stamp to be impressed upon the plaint.—7 B. L. R., (F. B.) 663; 16 W. R., (F. B.) 10; 7 B. L. R., 664 note; 13 W. R., 415.

On the presentation of a plaint for libel, the Court must see whether the alleged libellous matter set out in the plaint is really libellous; if it is not, there is no ground of action, and the plaint ought not to be admitted. If the words which are set out in the plaint are not a libel, the plaintiff cannot, by alleging that they were printed and published by the defendant with the intent to injure the plaintiff, and bring him into public scandal and disgrace, and to expose him to public scorn and ridicule, and to cause it to be suspected that the plaintiff was a dishonest person, and had been actuated by sinister and fraudulent motives, make them a libel; nor can the plaintiff, by alleging that words are spoken ironically, make them libellous if they do not appear to the Court to be so.—10 B. L. R., 7; 18 W. R., 516.

Where a plaint, is returned for amendment under sec. 29 of the Code of Civil procedure, the order of return should specify a time for such amendment. Where the plaintiff, within three years from the arising of the cause of action, presented his plaint, which was returned to him for amendment, but without specifying a time for such amendment, and the plaint was re-produced and filed some days beyond the three years, and the defendants pleaded the Statute of Limitation, held that the date of commencing the action was that of the original presentation of the plaint.—1 M. H. C. R., 427.

Where the lower Court rejected a plaint on the ground of an improper joinder of causes of action, and also that the suit was not sufficiently valued, and the High Court were of opinion that there had been no improper joinder of causes of action, the order of the lower Court was reversed, and the Civil Judge directed to deal with the case in accordance with sec. 31, Act VIII of 1859.—2 M. H. C. R., 436.

A suit between two brothers, A and B, respecting ancestral property, was compromised, and the particulars of the compromise embodied in a razinama presented in Court by both parties. A having died, his widow and B presented in Court another razinama, embodying the particulars of an arrangement respecting the property, in which she had become interested as widow, and which was comprised in the former razinama; and of this second razinama they subsequently put in an amended copy. Held that a claim arising out of such arrangement could not, within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 2, be considered to have been a cause of action heard and determined in the former suit. A plaintiff will not be rejected under sec. 32 of Act VIII of 1859, if the subject-matter alleged raises a fair question of claim or right for trial and determination between the parties. The mere unlikelihood of the plaintiff's success is not enough to justify the rejection of his plaintiff.—1 M. H. C. R., 240.

Where the plaintiff in a suit to establish a right to landed property and to recover arrears of rent alleged no specific acts of ownership since 1845, but contained a statement general enough to let in evidence of such acts, and it did not appear that the plaintiff had been questioned, held that the plaintiff should not have been rejected under sec. 32 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that it appeared to the Court that the right of action was barred by lapse of time.—1 M. H. C. R., 322.

Though a plaintiff has been registered, the Court may reject it under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 32, as barred by the Act of Limitation. The contract of hypothecation defined. When land is hypothecated, the contract gives the creditor an interest in immoveable property, and the period of limitation for actions on such contract is twelve years under cl. 12 of sec. 1 of Act XIV of 1859. A creditor suing under such a contract must prove that there was an actual pledge, and that the land was part of the debtor's estate at the time of pledge. The decree will then be for sale of the property hypothecated, unless the debtor pay the amount due with interest within a period to be named by the Court.—2 M. H. C. R., 51.

Held that the Court to which a plaintiff is presented has no authority to reject it, merely because the document upon which the plaintiff sues is not produced with the plaintiff, as directed by sec. 39 of Act VIII of 1859; and that the High Court has power to set aside such an order of rejection, as well as the decision of the District Court confirming it in appeal, and to direct that the plaintiff be received.—2 Bom. H. C. R., 391.

Where there is a want of jurisdiction in the Court to which a plaintiff is presented to try the cause of action mentioned in it, the plaintiff should be returned to the plaintiff.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 212; 1 Agra H. C. R., 228; 10 W. R., 385.

Where a plaintiff is presented to the Judge of a district, in which plaintiff an officer of Government is added as a nominal defendant, no cause of action being alleged against him, the proper course for the District Court to adopt is either to reject the plaintiff or to call upon the plaintiff to amend it by striking out the name of the officer improperly added as a defendant, and, upon the plaintiff consenting to do so, to return the plaintiff to the plaintiff for presentation to the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. Where the District Judge did not adopt this course, but proceeded to try the cause, the High Court annulled his decree, and (the plaintiff consenting to amend his plaintiff) returned it to him for amendment and presentation to the proper Court.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 17.

A Judge, in considering, under sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, whether he should admit or reject a plaintiff, is wrong in referring to documents and facts not stated in, or annexed to, the plaintiff, nor ascertained by him by interrogation of the plaintiff, although such documents and facts may have been on record in other proceedings in the Judge's Court. In a plaint claiming damage for an unsuccessful criminal prosecution of the plaintiff by the 1st defendant, and sanctioned by the 2nd defendant as a Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff (though stating in the plaint that the 2nd defendant "maliciously, and without authority," sanctioned the prosecution, and that the Magistrate before whom it was brought held that there was no cause whatever for the charge,) did not allege in the plaint that the 1st defendant prosecuted him (plaintiff) maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause, or that the prosecution was sanctioned by the 2nd defendant without reasonable or probable cause. Held that the plaint was properly rejected, and that there was no good ground for allowing the plaint to be amended, the plaintiff having delayed the filing of it until the last day but one allowed by the law of limitation. Quære.—Whether the first and second defendants could properly be joined in such an action? In every such plaint, plaintiff should name the amount damages which he seeks to recover as compensation for the injury of which he complains.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 182.

A suit a set aside to false sale-deed was sufficiently valued at the sum mentioned in that sale-deed. And even if this were not so, it was the duty of the Court, in which such suit was preferred, to give the suitor the option of supplying such additional stamp as was thought necessary before rejecting the plaint.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 17; Ed. 1873, 16.

Where it appears that the relief sought in a suit has been undervalued, and that the Court is not competent, by reason of the real value of the relief sought, to try the suit, the plaint must be returned to the plaintiff under sec. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code, although the defendant may have been called upon to enter upon his defence and has filed his written statement. An order dismissing a suit on the ground that, by reason of the value of the relief sought, the Court has no jurisdiction, is an order affecting the merits, and an appeal lies from such order. See Muzhur Ali v. Basoo (8 W. R., 47.)—11 C. L. R., 300.

If at the hearing of a suit it proves to be undervalued, and if the Court would not have jurisdiction to entertain it if properly valued, the suit ought to be dismissed.—8 W. R., 47; 2 Hay's Rep., 386.

Where a plaint is rejected under sec. 32, Act VIII of 1859; the plaintiff can bring a suit on the same subject-matter, provided he is not barred by lapse of time.—14 W. R., 289.

The Deputy Registrar has no authority to make an order returning a petition of appeal when the stamp-fee paid upon is insufficient. The right course for that officer, if his requirements as to stamps are not complied with, is to lay the matter before the Court. But if the appellant is ready to pay what is required, then, whether the time for filing the appeal has expired or not, the Deputy Registrar is bound to receive it, if it was originally presented in time.—24 W. R., 258.

Where a Subordinate Judge, after registering a plaint and allowing the parties to go to issue on the question of jurisdiction, found that he had no jurisdiction, it was held that he did wrong, under Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 3, in dismissing the suit. He ought to have returned the plaint to the plaintiff.—23 W. R., 263.

A plaint, which is unnecessarily prolix, or argumentative, or which contains irrelevant matter, ought to be rejected by the Court to which it is presented, or ought to be returned to the plaintiff for amendment. A plaint which contains a prayer that the defendant may be criminally prosecuted for forgery should be rejected.—8 W. R., 295.

A plaint drawn up in what is, practically, Persian ought not to be admitted on the file, but should be rejected or returned for amendment and presentation in Urdu, the ordinary language of intercourse and business in use in the district (Patna).—8 W. R., 495.

Where a petition of appeal had been filed, time allowed for the issue of notice, and a day fixed for hearing, it was held to be the duty of the Judge, under sec. 31, Act VIII of 1859, on finding that the petition was inadequately stamped, to give the appellant an opportunity of filing the proper stamp.—11 W. R., 145.

Sec. 54 of the Civil Procedure Code may be applied at any stage of a suit.—I. L. R., 12 Al. 553.

An Appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped.—6 Cal. 249.

Sec. 54 of Act X of 1877, which directs that a plaint shall be rejected in certain cases, applies only to the initial stages of suit before a plaint has been registered.—2 Madr. 308.

The law may lay down, for purposes of revenue, certain rules for the valuation of suits; but such valuation cannot be accepted as a criterion of the actual amount or value of the claim upon which the jurisdiction of a Court depends. The actual value of the estate to which the plaintiff claims to be entitled, and not the value which it may eventually represent to the plaintiff, is the value of the subject-matter.—Bom. 538.

A plaint can only be rejected under sec. 54 of Act X of 1877 before it is registered.—8 Cal. 192.

On the 6th April, 1891, the plaintiffs obtained an order giving them leave to amend the plaint and proceedings in the suit. By the order this amendment was to be made on or before the 30th April, 1891. On the 18th August, 1891, the plaintiffs obtained a summons calling on the defendants to show cause why the time allowed for amendment should not be extended for a month and why the hearing of the suit should not be postponed. Held, making the summons absolute, that although the time originally fixed for amendment had expired, the Judge had a discretion to extend the time, and that under the circumstances the plaintiffs were entitled to the order asked for.—16 Bom 263.

Where, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 336, a memorandum of appeal is returned for the purpose of being corrected, the Appellate Court should specify a time for such correction. Where an appellant presented an appeal within the period of limitation prescribed therefor, and the Appellate Court returned the memorandum of appeal for correction, the appeal, again presented some days after the period of limitation, was held presented within time, the date of its presentation being the date it was presented.—1 Al. 260.

55. When a plaint is rejected, the Judge shall record with his own hand an order to that effect with the reason for such order.

Procedure on rejecting plaint.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When rejection of plaint does not preclude presentation of fresh plaint.

56. The rejection of the plaint on any of the grounds herein-before mentioned shall not, of clude the plaintiff from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An appellate Court has no power to set aside a decision arrived at by the Court of first instance as to the valuation of the property in suit.—6 B. L. R., App. 11: S. C., 14 W. R., 381.

Under Act XXVI of 1867, the decision of a Court of first instance, as to the valuation of the subject-matter of a suit, is final.—6 B. L. R., App. 12; 14 W. R., 451: 6 B. L. R., App. 11: S. C., 14 W. R., 381.

A suit was brought in the Court of a Munsiff, who gave judgment for the plaintiffs, but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the claim was improperly valued. A second suit on the same cause of action was then brought in the Court of the Munsif, who again decided for the plaintiffs; but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the suit was prohibited by Reg. II. of 1827, sec. 21. The High Court, on special appeal, reversed that decision, and remanded the suit; and the District Judge then threw out the claim under sec. 2 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the cause of action had already been heard and determined. In a second special appeal against this decision, held that the plaintiffs were not precluded from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action; and that the case came within the spirit of sec. 36 of Act VIII of 1859, as, there being no express power given by the Code to reject a plaint after it had been registered by reason of the claim being improperly valued, the doing so ought to have only the same effect as if the plaint had been originally rejected.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 110.

See I. L. R., 12 Al. 553, noted under sec. 54.

When plaint shall be returned to be presented to proper Court.

57. The plaint shall be returned to be presented to the proper Court in the following cases:—

(a) if a suit has been instituted in a Court whose grade is lower or higher than that of the Court competent to try it, where such Court exists, or where no option as to the selection of the Court is allowed by law:

(b) if, in a suit relating to immoveable property, but not coming under the proviso to section 16, it appears that no part of such property is situate within the local limits of the Jurisdiction of the Court to which the plaint is presented:

(c) if, in any other case, it appears that the cause of action did not arise, and that none of the defendants are dwelling, or carrying on business, or personally working for gain, within such local limits.

On returning a plaint, the Judge shall, with his own hand, endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reason for returning it.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Held in special appeal that the lower Appellate Court was right in setting aside the proceedings of the Munsif, on the ground that the property in suit was valued at an amount beyond his jurisdiction; but the plaintiff was entitled to have the plaint returned to him that he might present it with the proper additional stamp before the proper Court.—5 B. L. R., App. 13; 15 W. R., 385.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to determine a suit where the defendants dwell, or the cause of action arises, within the jurisdiction of the Court.—6 M. H. C. R., 43.

The fact that the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court gives the Court jurisdiction in civil suits irrespective of the residence of the defendants.—5 M. H. C. R., App. 4.

In a suit filed in a District Munsif's Court to recover certain land, the defendants alleged that the value of the land was understated by the plaintiff, and exceeded by far the pecuniary limits of the Court's jurisdiction. Upon enquiry the Munsif found this allegation to be true, and directed the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in a superior Court. The plaint having been presented in the Subordinate Court, the Subordinate Judge, on the authority of Jagjivan Javerdhas Seth v. Magdum Ali (I. L. R., 7 B., 487), dismissed the suit:—Held that the procedure adopted by the Munsif was correct.—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 62.

In all cases where no option as to the selection of the Court is allowed by law to the plaintiff, a plaint presented in a wrong Court must be returned for presentation in the proper Court.—10 Madr. 211.

A Munsif, after hearing the evidence on both sides, found that the suit had been under-valued; but instead of returning the plaint under sec. 57 of Act X of 1877, he dismissed the suit: Held, that the provisions of sec. 57 were imperative, and might be put into force at any stage of the hearing; and that such dismissal of the suit was a matter which affected the merits of the case, and formed a proper subject for an appeal.—8 Cal. 334.

A suit to redeem a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands was instituted in the Munsif's Court. After the suit had been admitted, and the parties called on to produce evidence, the Munsif ordered the plaint in the suit to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court on the ground that the suit should have been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the value of the property in suit being beyond the jurisdiction of a Munsif: Held that, under Act VIII of 1859, the Munsif's order was appealable to the lower Appellate Court, and under Act X of 1877, the lower Appellate Court's order to the High Court.—1 Al. 620.

Although Act X of 1877, sec. 57, contemplates the return of the plaint should error be patent when it is first presented, yet there is nothing in the wording of that section which forbids the return of the plaint at a later stage in the suit. Where, therefore, after the issues in a suit were framed, the Court decided that it had no jurisdiction, and returned the plaint to be presented in the proper Court: Held that, in so doing, the Court acted under sec. 57; and its decision, not coming within the definition of a "decree" in Act XII of 1879, sec. 2, was not appealable as such, but was appealable under Act X of 1877, sec. 588, as an order.—2 Al. 357.

The plaintiff in this suit claimed in a Civil Court (i.) a declaration of his right to certain land ; (ii.) that certain leases of such land, so far as their terms exceeded the term of settlement, should be cancelled ; and (iii.) arrears of rent for such land. The Court held, as regards claim (i.), that the plaint did not disclose a cause of action, as it was not alleged that the defendant had disputed the plaintiff's right ; as regards claim (ii.) that, with reference to the terms of sec. 29 of Act XVIII of 1873, the plaintiff's cause of action had not yet arisen : and as regards claim (iii), that it was cognizable in a Court of Revenue ; and it directed that under sec. 57 of Act X of 1877 the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff to be presented to the Revenue Court. Held that under the circumstances the plaint should have been rejected, and not returned.—3 Al. 766.

The Court of first instance made an order returning the plaint in a suit to be presented to the proper Court, on the ground that it was not competent to try such suit. On appeal from such order the Appellate Court, holding that the Court of first instance was competent to try such suit, made an order "decreeing the appeal." It subsequently made an additional order directing that the case "should be returned for re-trial." On appeal to the High Court from such additional order, held that the appeal would not lie, as it was in reality one from an order passed in appeal from an order returning a plaint, which, under the last clause of sec. 588 of Act X of 1877, was final, and not an appeal from an order remanding a case under sec. 562, the character of the original order of the Appellate Court not being altered by the passing of the additional order.—3 Al. 855.

An allottee, under a private partition, sued to stay subsequent partition-proceedings brought under Reg. XIX of 1814, and to have his possession confirmed. The defendants objected to the valuation of the suit, and to the suit being heard by the Civil Courts, no proceedings having first been instituted before the Revenue Authorities. Held that such a suit should be considered to be one for a declaratory decree, or for something in the nature of an injunction and that, therefore the plaint should not be stamped according to the value of the entire estate. That the question, whether the Collector would have brought the lands to partition, depended upon whether they were held "in common tenancy ;" if they were not so held, the Collector would be only competent to make an assignment of the Revenue in proportion to the several portions of the land held by the shareholders. That a private partition is no bar to proceedings in the Revenue Courts under sec. 30 of Reg. XIX of 1814. A Munsif dismissed a suit, on the ground that, if it had been properly valued, it would not have come within his jurisdiction. The District Judge, affirmed the Munsif's judgment, and directed the plaint to be returned for presentation to the proper Court under sec. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code. This was not done. Held that a second appeal would lie. Ajoodhia Lall v. Gumani Lall (2 C. L. R. 134) approved. Adjoodhya Pershad v. Kristo Dyal (15 W. R., 165) dissented from.—8 Cal. 126.

The right to join in one suit two causes of action against a defendant cannot be exercised, unless the Court to which the plaint is presented has jurisdiction over both causes of action. The defendants, who resided and carried on business at 'Bombay,' acted as the agents of the plaintiff for the sale, purchase, and despatch of goods to 'Tellicherry,' where the plaintiff resided. The plaintiff sued the defendants for money due on account of the transactions in 'Tellicherry':—Held, that no cause of action arose in 'Tellicherry.' To the claim arising out of the agency-transactions the plaintiff joined a claim on account of a partnership-transaction, which claim was triable by the Court of the District Munsiff at 'Tellicherry.' The Subordinate Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to try the claim arising out of the agency-transactions, found that nothing was due to the plaintiff on account of the partnership-transaction, and dismissed the suit:—Held, that the plaint ought to have been returned to the plaintiff with the proper endorsement as required by sec. 57 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.—7 Madr. 171.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 478, noted under sec. 25; 7 Al. 230, noted under sec. 15; 14 Madr. 462, noted under sec. 13 of the Madras Civil Courts Act.

58. The plaintiff shall endorse on the plaint, or annex thereto, a memorandum of the documents (if any) which he has produced along with it; and, if the plaint be admitted, shall present as many copies on plain paper of the plaint as there are defendants, unless the Court, by reason of the length of the plaint or the number of the defendants, or for any other sufficient reason, permits him to present a like number of concise statements of the nature of the claim made, or of the relief or remedy, required, in the suit, in which case he shall present such statements.

If the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or issued.

The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint.

The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such memorandum and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct.

The Court shall also cause the particulars mentioned in section 50 to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose, and called the Register of Civil suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaint is admitted.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

59. If a plaintiff sues upon a document in his possession or power, he shall produce it in the Court when the plaint is presented, and shall, at the same time, deliver the document, or a copy thereof, to be filed with the plaint.

If he rely on any other documents (whether in his possession or power or not) as evidence in support of his claim, he shall enter such documents in a list to be added or annexed to the plaint.

List of other documents.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A document given to a witness as a script to refresh his memory is not "received in evidence" within the meaning of sec. 39 of Act VIII of 1859, and need not, therefore, have been produced when the plaint was filed. In an action by the vendee against the vendor for breach of a contract to deliver goods "in two or three days," held that the measure of damages was the difference between the contract-price and the price which similar goods bore on the lapse of a reasonable time for delivery not less than three days from the date of the contract.—1 M. H. C. R., 168.

Held that the Court to which a plaint is presented has no authority to reject it, merely because the document upon which the plaintiff sues is not produced with the plaint, as directed by sec. 39 of Act VIII of 1859; and that the High Court has power to set aside such an order of rejection, as well as the decision of the District Court confirming it in appeal, and to direct that the plaint be received.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 369.

In a suit brought upon a promissory note, where the note was produced when the plaint was presented, and marked by the officer of the Court, but the Judge, at the hearing, refused to receive it, when tendered in evidence, because he found that there was no copy of the note among the papers, and the plaintiff's counsel was unable to explain the omission, and there being no application made to withdraw, the suit was dismissed. Held that the Judge ought to have received the note in evidence, as it was "produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint was presented;" that the plaintiff counsel was not bound, under the circumstances, to apply to withdraw the suit; and that the Judge was not justified in dismissing the suit, which was accordingly remanded under sec. 351 of the Code, with a direction that it should be restored to its original place on the register, and be tried by one of the Judges of the Court.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 66.

The plaintiff, as purchaser at a Court's sale, sued in 1871 for possession of certain immoveable property, and tendered in evidence a sale-certificate, dated 20th September 1865. The first Court decided against the plaintiff, on the ground, among others, that the certificate was not registered, though registration of it was compulsory. On the 9th February 1875, the plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court against that decree, and, on the 26th July 1875, applied to that Court for permission to give in evidence a new certificate of sale, issued on the 1st February 1875, regarding the same property as that to which the certificate of the 20th September 1865 related. Held by the High Court that, as the new certificate was issued after the first Court had made its decree, the High Court ought not to receive it, or to suggest or facilitate any application to the lower Court for a review of its decree on documentary evidence, which had no existence when that Court made such decree. (Distinction pointed out between this case and Mohidin v. Mahadaji (S. A., 437 of 1872). Quære—Whether, under the circumstances of this case, the Subordinate Judge, who issued the new certificate of sale on the 1st February 1875, ought to have so issued it, in order that the plaintiff might register it, the plaintiff having already lost, by his own laches, the right to register the original certificate? Quære.—

Whether the Court of first instance ought to have received the second certificate if it had been issued and tendered in evidence subsequently to the filing of the suit, but previously to the original hearing?—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 247.

In compliance with an application for the sale of land to satisfy a decree, the Civil Court put up certain land to auction in four lots. One lot was purchased by the plaintiff for Rs. 88, and each of the other three were bought by him for less than Rs. 100, the price for the whole amounting to Rs. 111-8-0, for which amount the Court granted a single certificate of sale, dated 10th February 1874. This certificate was never registered. The plaintiff applied to be put in possession; but, the defendant resisting him, his application was rejected. On the 16th of November 1879, the plaintiff brought this suit to have his right declared to the piece bought for Rs. 88, and to recover its possession. Along with the plaint the plaintiff produced the unregistered certificate of sale of the 10th February, 1874. On the application of the plaintiff, another certificate for the same property was issued by the Court to the plaintiff on the 31st of October 1877,—that is, three years after the confirmation of sale. This was registered on the 20th of December 1877, and was produced by the plaintiff in the proceedings which gave rise to the present suit. It was obtained by the plaintiff on the 23rd of February 1880, and tendered in evidence, but was rejected under sec. 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held that, although the four lots purchased by the plaintiff at the auction-sale were included in one certificate of sale, such certificate, although one instrument in form, should, for the purpose of registration, be regarded as four separate certificates of the four several lots. Held also that the registered certificate of sale, though issued three years after the confirmation of sale, was valid and admissible in evidence. Vithal Janardan v. Vithojirav Putlajirav approved, and In re Khaja Pathanji and Tukaram v. Satvaji Khandoji dissented from. Held also that the refusal to admit in evidence the registered certificate of sale under sec. 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) on the ground that it had not been produced with the plaint, as required by sec. 59 of the Code, was improper, there having been no doubt of its existence at the date of suit.—I.L.R., 8 Bom. 377.

Statement in case of documents not in his possession or power.

60. In the case of any such document not in his possession or power, he shall, if possible, state in whose possession or power it is.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

61. In case of any suit founded upon a negotiable instrument, if it be proved that the instrument is lost, and if an indemnity be given by the plaintiff, to the satisfaction of the Court, against the claims of any other person upon such instrument, the Court may make such decree as it would have made if the plaintiff had produced the instrument in Court when the plaint was presented, and had, at the same time, delivered a copy of the instrument to be filed with the plaint.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The indorsees of a cheque sued the indorser, stating in their plaint that the cheque had been lost, and that the defendant refused to give them a duplicate of it, and claiming a duplicate of it or the refund of the money they had paid the defendant on the cheque. Held that the plaint disclosed a cause of action against the defendant. Held also that the plaint should be amended by joining the drawer of the cheque as a defendant in the suit.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 754.

62. If the document on which the plaintiff sues be an entry in a shop-book or other book in his possession or power, the plaintiff shall produce the book at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies.

Production of shop-book.

The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification; and, after examining and comparing the copy with the original, and attesting the copy if found correct, shall return the book to the plaintiff, and cause the copy to be filed.

Original entry to be marked and returned.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

63. A document which ought to be produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint is presented, or to be entered in the list to be added or annexed to the plaint, and which is not produced or entered accordingly, shall not, without the leave of the Court, be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing of the suit.

Inadmissibility of document not produced; when plaint filed.

Nothing in this section applies to documents produced for cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses, or in answer to any case set up by the defendant, or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 377, noted under sec. 59.

CHAPTER VI.OF THE ISSUE AND SERVICE OF SUMMONS.Issue of Summons.*

64. When the plaint has been registered, and the copies of concise statements required by section 58 have been filed, a summons may be issued to each defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified, Summons.

(a) in person, or

(b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or

(c) by a pleader accompanied by some other person able to answer all such questions.

Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court:

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint, and admitted the plaintiff's claim.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

65. Every such summons shall be accompanied with Copy or statement an- to summons. one of the copies or concise statements mentioned in section 58.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

66. If the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the defendant, the summons shall order him to appear in person in Court may order defendant or plaintiff to appear in person. Court on the day therein specified.

If the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the plaintiff on the same day, it may make an order for such appearance.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A plaintiff, who had been ordered, under sec. 66, to appear in person in Court upon a day specified, failed to appear, and under sec. 107, read with sec. 102, his suit was dismissed. He then applied to the Court under sec. 103, for an order to set the dismissal aside, but his application was rejected. He thereupon preferred an appeal from the decree dismissing the suit under the provisions of sec. 540:—Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to appeal from the decree dismissing the suit, and that his only remedy was by way of an appeal under sec. 588 (8) of the Code from the order rejecting the application to set the dismissal aside. Lal Singh v. Kunjan (I. L. R., 4 Al. 327.) referred to.—I. L. R., 8 Al. 20.

No party to be ordered to appear in person unless resident.

67. No party shall be ordered to appear in person unless he resides—

(a) within the local limits of the Court's ordinary original jurisdiction, or

(b) without such limits and at a place less than, fifty or, within 50 or, where there is railway, 200 miles. where there is railway-communication for five-sixths of the distance between the place where he resides and the place where the Court is situate, two hundred miles from the Court-house.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

68. The Court shall determine, at the time of issuing the summons, whether it shall be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit; and the summons shall contain a direction accordingly:

Summons to be either to settle issues or for final disposal.

Provided that, in every suit heard by Courts of Small Causes, the summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

69. The day for the appearance of the defendant shall be fixed by the Court with reference to its current business, the place of residence of the defendant, and the time necessary for the service of the summons; and the day shall be so fixed as to allow the defendant sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on such day.

Fixing day for appearance of defendants.

What shall be deemed 'sufficient time' must be determined with reference to the circumstances of the case.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

70. The summons to appear and answer shall order the defendant to produce any document in his possession or power, containing evidence relating to the merits of the plaintiff's case, or upon which the defendant intends to rely in support of his case.

Summons to order defendant to produce documents required by plaintiff or relied on by defendant.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

71. When the summons is for the final disposal of the suit, it shall direct the defendant to produce, on the day fixed for his appearance, the witnesses upon whose evidence he intends to rely in support of his case.

On issue of summons for final disposal, defendant to be directed to produce his witnesses.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Service of Summons.

72. (1) If the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is instituted, or has an agent resident within that jurisdiction who is empowered to accept the service of the summons, the summons shall ordinarily be delivered or sent to the proper officer to be served by him or one of his subordinates.

Delivery or transmission of summons for service.

(2) The proper officer may be an officer of another Court than that in which the suit is instituted, and, where he is such an officer, the summons may, subject to any rules which the High Court may make in this behalf, be sent to him by post or in such other manner as the Court may direct.*

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

73. Service of the summons shall be made by delivering or tendering a copy thereof signed by the Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, and sealed with the seal of the Court.

Mode of service.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

74. When there are more defendants than one, service of the summons shall be made on each defendant.

Service on several defendants.

Provided that, if the defendants are partners, and the suit relates to a partnership-transaction, or to an actionable wrong in respect of which relief is claimable from the firm, the service may be made, unless the Court directs otherwise, either (a) on one defendant for himself and for the other defendants, or (b) on any person having the management of the business of the partnership at the principal place, within the local limits of the Court's ordinary original civil jurisdiction, of such business.

—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Whenever it may be practicable, the service shall be made on the defendant in person, unless he have an agent empowered to accept the service, in which case service on such agent shall be sufficient.

Service to be on defendant in person, when practicable, or on his agent.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Persons merely looking after the affairs of a defendant are not agents on whom service of summons will be sufficient under sec. 49, Act VIII of 1859.—17 W. R., 33.

76. In a suit relating to any business or work against a person who does not reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court from which the summons issues,

Service on agent by whom defendant carries on business.

* This section has been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 10, for the one originally enacted.

service on any manager or agent, who, at the time of service, personally carries on such business or work for such person within such limits, shall be deemed good service.

For the purpose of this section, the master of a ship is the agent of his owner or charterer.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

77. In a suit to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immoveable property, if the service cannot be made on the defendant in person, and the defendant have no agent empowered to accept the service, it may be made on any agent of the defendant in charge of the property.

Service on agent in charge, in suits for immoveable property.

78. If in any suit the defendant cannot be found, and if he have no agent empowered to accept the service of the summons on his behalf, the service may be made on any adult male member of the family of the defendant who is residing with him.

When service may be on member of defendant family.

Explanation.—A servant is not a member of the family within the meaning of this section.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

79. When the serving officer delivers or tenders a copy of the summons to the defendant personally, or to an agent or other person on his behalf, he shall require the signature of the person to whom the copy is so delivered or tendered to an acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original summons.

Person served to sign acknowledgment.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a respondent refused to sign the acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original notice of the appeal, and the serving officer, instead of affixing a copy of the notice on the outer door of the house in which the respondent was residing, returned the notice to the Court with an affidavit stating the respondent's refusal to sign the acknowledgment, and the Court passed an ex parte decree against the respondent. Held that under the circumstances there was no due service of the notice, and that the appeal was wrongly decided ex parte. Held also that a second appeal lies from an ex parte decree of a lower appellate Court.—I. L. R., 16 Bom. 117.

Procedure when defendant refuses to accept service.

80. If the defendant or other person refuses to sign the acknowledgment.

or if the serving-officer cannot find the defendant, and or cannot be found. there is no agent empowered to accept the service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person on whom the service can be made, the serving-officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides, and then return the original to the Court from which it issued, with a return endorsed thereon or annexed thereto stating that he has so affixed the copy and the circumstances under which he did so.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An affidavit in support of service of a writ of summons under sec. 80 of the Civil Procedure Code should show that proper efforts have been made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found.—I. L. R., 19 Cal. 201.

Where the service of summons has been effected on a defendant by affixing a copy of the summons on the door of his dwelling-house, the Court must decide whether the summons has been duly served by such affixing or not, and, if it decides in the negative, a new summons must be issued, or substituted service directed. Before the Court can decide in favour of the sufficiency of this mode of service, it must be satisfied that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service. Where a summons has been transmitted by one Court to another for service by the latter, the transmitting Court is not bound, in every case, to satisfy itself that the law as to service has been strictly followed. The presumption in favour of the proceedings of a Court of Justice is that everything has been duly performed, and if the return made by the Court serving the summons states that the summons has been duly effected, that presumption must prevail, unless the return disclose some patent irregularity or clear divergence from the law. As a rule, on a return from a competent Court, that summons has been duly effected, it may be presumed that either personal service has been effected, or substituted service under sec. 82, or under secs. 80 and 82 combined.

As proof of due service of summons, a return from the Court of Small Causes at K was relied upon in the High Court. The return was in the following words:—"Read bailiff's endorsement on the back of the process, stating that the summons has been affixed to the defendant's house on the 22nd December 1884 at 9 A. M., and proof of the same having been duly taken by me, it is ordered that the summons be returned." Held that there was no sufficient service. The return itself proved the insufficiency. There was no statement, under the hand of the Judge, that the summons had been duly effected, and it did not appear that anything had been done beyond fixing the summons on the defendant's door. That affixing was not sanctioned after inquiry by the local Court, as required by sec. 82. All that appeared to have been done was the affixing prescribed by sec. 80, which was insufficient until confirmed under sec. 82.—10 Bom. 202.

81. The serving-officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served under section 79, endorse or annex, or cause to be endorsed or annexed, on or to the original summons, a return stating the time when, and the manner in which, the summons was served.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

82. “When a summons is returned under section 80, the Court shall, if the return under that section has not been verified by the affidavit of the serving-officer, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving-officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching his proceedings,”* and may make such further enquiry in the matter as it thinks fit; and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served, or order such service as it thinks fit.

Where the Court is satisfied that there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service, or that, for any other reason, the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way, the Court shall order the summons to be served by affixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, and also upon some conspicuous part of the house (if any) in which the defendant is known to have last resided, or in such other manner as the Court thinks fit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In cases of substituted service, it is not sufficient to show that the notice has been attached to the door, unless the condition which renders such a mode of service good, viz., that the person who ought to be served is keeping out of the way, has been first established to the satisfaction of the Court.—(P. C.) 2 P. C. R., 836; (19 W. R., 353; 12 B. L. R., 229). See also 22 W. R., 482; 24 W. R. 381.

Where substituted service of summons is ordered under Act X of 1877, sec. 82, a sufficient time ought, under sec. 84, to be given for notice of the fact to reach the defendant, wherever he may be; and if an ex parte decree be obtained by the plaintiff, the Court, on being satisfied that the time fixed was insufficient, will set aside the decree.—I. L. R., 2 Bom. 449.

See I. L. R., 16 Bom. 177, noted under sec. 79.

83. The service substituted by order of the Court shall be as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally.

Effect of substituted service.

* The words quoted have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 11, for the words, “when a summons is returned under sec. 80, the Court shall examine the serving-officer on oath touching his proceedings,” as originally enacted.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

84. Whenever service is substituted by order of the Court, the Court shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require.

When service substituted, time for appearance to be fixed.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

85. If the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of any Court other than the Court in which the suit is instituted, and has no agent resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the latter Court empowered to accept the service of the summons, such Court shall send the summons, either by one of its officers or by post, to any Court, not being a High Court, having jurisdiction at the place where the defendant resides, by which it can be conveniently served, and shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require.

Service of summons when defendant resides within jurisdiction of another Court, and has no agent to accept service.

The Court to which the summons is sent shall, upon receipt thereof, proceed as if it had been issued by such Court, and shall then return the summons to the Court from which it originally issued, together with the record (if any) made under this paragraph.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

86. Whenever any process, issued by any Court established beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Rangoon, is to be served within any such town, it shall be sent to the Court of Small Causes within whose jurisdiction the process is to be served, of process issued by Provincial Courts.

and such Court of Small Causes shall deal with such process in the same manner as if the process had been issued by itself, and shall then return the process to the Court from which it issued.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

87. If the defendant be in jail, the summons shall be delivered to the officer in charge of the jail in which the defendant is confined,

Service on defendant in and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant.

The summons shall be returned to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon, and signed by the officer in charge of the jail, and by the defendant.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Court will take judicial notice of the signature of the jailor under sec. 16, Act XV of 1869 (Prisoners' Testimony Act).—4 B. L. R., (O. C.) 51.

88. If the jail in which the defendant is confined is not in the district in which the suit is instituted, the summons may be sent by post or otherwise to the officer in charge of such jail, and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant, and shall return the summons to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon, and signed as provided in section 87.

Procedure if jail be in different district.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

89. If the defendant resides out of British India, and has no agent in British India empowered to accept the service, the summons shall be addressed to the defendant at the place where he is residing, and forwarded to him by post if there be postal communication between such place and the place where the Court is situate.

Service when defendant resides out of British India, and has no agent to accept service.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A summons cannot be sent by post to any place to which letters are not registered by a post-office. A special bailiff cannot be sent to serve civil process in a foreign territory.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 59; S. C., 10 W. R., 349.

Where a respondent resides at Chandernagore—i. e., out of British territory—the summons or notice of appeal should be forwarded to him by post under a registered cover; and if he does not appear, a verified statement should be put in to show that he is at present, or has recently been, residing there.—15 W. R., 31.

90. If there is a British Resident or Agent, or a Superintendent appointed by the British Government, or a Court established or continued by the authority of the Governor-General in Council, in or for the territory in which the defendant resides, the summons may be sent to such Resident, Agent, Superintendent, or Court, by post or otherwise, for the purpose of being served upon the defendant; and, if the Service in foreign territory through British Resident or Court.

Resident, Agent, or Superintendent, or the Judge of the Court, returns the summons with an endorsement under his hand that the summons has been served on the defendant in manner hereinbefore directed, such endorsement shall be evidence of the service.*

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

91. The Court may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, substitute for the summons a letter signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, when the defendant is, in the opinion of the Court, of a rank which entitles him to such mark of consideration.

Substitution of letter for summons.

The letter shall contain all the particulars required to be stated in the summons, and, subject to the provisions contained in section 92, shall be treated in all respects as a summons.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

92. When a letter is so substituted for a summons, it may be sent to the defendant by post or by a special messenger selected by the Court, or in any other manner which the Court thinks fit; unless the defendant has an agent empowered to accept service of summons, in which case the letter may be delivered or sent to such agent.

Mode of sending such letter.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Service of Process.

93. Every process issued under this Code shall be served at the expense of the party on whose behalf it is issued; unless the Court otherwise directs.

Process to be served at expense of party issuing.

The court-fee leviable for such service shall be levied within a time to be fixed by the Court before the process is issued.

Costs of service.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A plaintiff in the Munsif's Court filed a list of witnesses, but failed to deposit tulubana, or cost of the service of summons, for their attendance. The Court failed to fix a time for the service of tulubana. The processes were not served, and the Court dismissed the suit, because the plaintiff had produced no evidence in support of his claim. Held, under Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 2, the lower Court should first have fixed a time for the deposit of tulubana. Case remanded.—3 B.L.R., App. 25. S.C., 11 W.R., 290.

* This section has been substituted for the original by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 12.

Though it is the duty of the Court to issue process after application has been made for execution, yet the law fully intends that, when the decree-holder sees that the Court has taken no steps to issue any process, he shall be diligent, and move the Court from time to time, as required, to keep him within the period of limitation.—13 W. R., 83.

94. All notices and orders required by this Code to be given to or served on any person shall be in writing, and shall be served in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of summons.

Notices and orders in writing how served.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Postage.

95. Postage, where chargeable on any notice, summons, or letter issued under this Code, and forwarded by post, and the fee for registering the same, shall be paid within a time to be fixed by the Court before the communication is forwarded :

Postage.

Provided that the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, may remit such postage, or fee, or both, or may prescribe a scale of court-fees to be levied in lieu thereof.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE APPEARANCE OF THE PARTIES, AND CONSEQUENCE OF NON-APPEARANCE.

96. On the day fixed in the summons for the defendant to appear and answer, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by their respective pleaders, and the suit shall then be heard, unless the hearing be adjourned to a future day fixed by the Court.

Parties to appear on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

97. If, on the day so fixed for the defendant to appear and answer, it be found that the summons has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the court-fee leviable for such service, the Court may order that the suit be dismissed :

of suit, where not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay fee for issuing.

Provided that no such order shall be passed, although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if, on the day fixed for him to appear and answer, he attends in person or by agent, when he is allowed to appear by agent.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the Court of first instance ordered a co-defendant to be joined in the suit, but the plaintiff failed to pay the allowance necessary for the purpose of causing a notice to be served on such co-defendant, who accordingly did not appear at the hearing, held that the proper course for the Court to have adopted was to dismiss the suit under sec. 5 of Act XXIII of 1861. Where the Court did not adopt that course, but proceeded with the suit, and passed a decree, from which the original defendant appealed on the merits to the Assistant Judge, without taking the objection that the suit ought to have been dismissed, it was held that he could not raise this objection for the first time in special appeal. Semble.—The provisions contained in the first portion of sec. 5 of Act XXIII of 1861 are imperative. —5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 118.

A special appeal lay from an order passed under secs. 5 and 6 of Act XXIII of 1861 dismissing an appeal for non-service of notice in consequence of failure to deposit the cost of issuing the same.—3 W. R., Mis. 23 ; 7 W. R., 338.

A notice to a respondent having been returned unserved, owing to the omission on the part of the appellant to deposit the requisite tulubana in the proper Court, the default under secs. 5 and 6, Act XXIII of 1861, was held to be in no way excused by the fact of its having been committed by an ignorant karpardaz, or man of business, whom appellant chose to employ, rather than a vakil.—11 W. R., 417.

An order under sec. 97 of the Civil Procedure Code, dismissing a suit, on its being found that the summons has not been served on the defendant, in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the court-fee leviable for such service, is not appealable.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 627.

The plaintiff sued the defendant in Bombay for damages for breach of contract. The suit was filed on the 13th May, 1890. The summons was not served on the defendant, but on the 16th May the plaintiff's agent procured his arrest before judgment. On that day he was brought before a Judge of the High Court, and was at once discharged. When the case subsequently came on for hearing, the plaintiff applied, under sec. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), for leave to withdraw the suit, with liberty to file a fresh suit on the same cause of action. The defendant's counsel objected, and claimed either that the plaintiff should continue his suit to a hearing, or that the suit should be dismissed with costs, and that compensation for his arrest should be awarded to the defendant under sec. 491 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiff contended that inasmuch as the summons had not been served on him, the defendant was not entitled to appear, and that no compensation could be awarded to him. Held—(1) that inasmuch as the plaintiff had by a legal process brought the defendant before the Court, the defendant had the right to appear at the hearing of the case, although no summons had been served upon him, and that he was entitled to object to the suit being dismissed under Rule of Court No. 64 ; (2) that under the circumstances the defendant was entitled to compensation for his arrest under sec. 491 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) ; (3) that the plaintiff might withdraw the suit under sec. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) with liberty to bring a fresh suit on payment of the costs incurred by the defendant in the present suit.—15 Bom. 160.

98. If, on the day fixed for the defendant to appear and answer, or on any other subsequent day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, neither party appears, the suit shall be dismissed, unless the judge, for reasons to be recorded under his hand, otherwise directs.

If neither party appears, suit to be dismissed.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When a suit is dismissed for default of the plaintiff, and no appearance has been entered by the defendant, the plaintiff can, under sec. 110, Act VIII of 1859, bring a fresh suit after a lapse of 30 days, if he be not otherwise barred by lapse of time.—3 B.L.R., App. 130. See 24 W.R., 114.

The provisions of sec. 110 of Act VIII of 1859 are properly applicable under sec. 33 of Act XXIII of 1861 to proceedings in execution-decree.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 10. See 5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 164.

The affidavit of a party alleging inability to attend from illness is not enough to satisfy the Court, but for this purpose there must be a medical certificate, or the affidavits of third parties.—Bourke's Rep., (O.C.) 115.

When a case has been struck out in consequence of the non-appearance of the plaintiff, the Court will grant a fresh summons.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 40.

A decree-holder having allowed the term of three years to run within a very few days of expiry before applying for execution, and then, though allowed five days to pay tulubana, having neglected to do so, his application was found to be not bona fide. Held that sec. 7, Act XXIII of 1861, did not apply to the case, that section applying only to suits dismissed under the provisions of sec. 5 of that Act.—15 W. R., 473.

A District Munsif struck a case off the file of his Court on neither party appearing. Subsequently, on an application by the plaintiffs, the case was restored. The order of restoration was reversed by the District Judge:—Held, (1) that the order to strike off the case was illegal; (2) that assuming that the case was dismissed, no appeal lay to the District Judge, whose order was accordingly made without jurisdiction.—I. L. R., 10 Madr. 270.

A suit was filed in a Munsif's Court, but neither party appeared for the hearing, and the suit was dismissed. The Munsif subsequently on review made an order restoring the suit, and eventually decreed for the plaintiff. The defendant, in the meanwhile, appealed to the District Court against the order of restoration, and after the date of the decree, the District Court made an order allowing the defendant's appeal. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, and the order of the District Court was reversed and the order of restoration upheld. Held that the Munsif's decree was not passed without jurisdiction.—10 Madr. 190.

See I. L. R., 15 Madr. 111, noted under sec. 13.

99. Whenever a suit is dismissed under section 97 or section 98, the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit; or if, within the period of thirty days from the date of the order

In such case plaintiff
may bring fresh suit, dismissing the suit, he satisfies the Court that there was a sufficient excuse for his not paying the court-fee required within the time allowed for the service of the summons, or for his non-appearance, as the case may be, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the dismissal, and appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the plaintiff in a suit failed to deposit the 'talubana' required for the purpose of issuing summonses to certain persons whom it was proposed to make defendants in addition to the original defendants in such suit, and the Court on that ground irregularly dismissed such suit as against such original defendants by an order purporting to be made under sec. 110 of Act VIII of 1859 on a day previous to that fixed for the hearing of such suit, held that such order of dismissal did not preclude the plaintiff from instituting a fresh suit.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 318.

99.A If, after a summons has, whether before or after the first day of June 1882, been issued to the defendant, or to one of several defendants, and returned unserved, the plaintiff fails for a period of one year from such return to apply for the issue of a fresh summons, and to satisfy the Court that he has used his best endeavours to discover the residence of the defendant who has not been served or that such defendant is avoiding service of process, the Court may dismiss the suit as against such defendant.

In such case the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

100. If the plaintiff appears, and the defendant does not appear, the procedure shall be as follows:—

(a) if it is proved that the summons was duly served, the Court may proceed ex-parte:

(b) if it is not proved that the summons was duly served, the Court shall direct a second summons to be issued and served on the defendant:

(c) if it is proved that the summons was served on the defendant, but not in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on the day fixed in the summons, the Court shall postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and shall direct notice of such day to be given to the defendant.

If it is owing to the plaintiff's default that the summons was not served in sufficient time, the Court shall order him to pay the costs occasioned by such postponement.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A defendant against whom a decree has been passed ex parte, and who has not adopted the procedure provided by sec. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, can appeal from such decree under the general provisions of sec. 540. Lal Singh v. Kunjan (I. L. R., 4 Al. 387) dissented from.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 445.

The plaintiff in a suit described one of the defendants thus: "N. C., guardian on behalf of her own minor son, S. C." Upon the presentation of the plaint the Court directed the plaintiff to produce an affidavit to the effect that the mother of the minor defendant was his guardian, and, an affidavit having been made that the "minor defendant" was under the guardianship of the mother, ordered a suit to be registered, and summons to be issued on the defendants. N. C. then filed a written statement, alleging that she held the land in suit on behalf of the minor. Held that, having regard to the orders of the Court and the allegations made in the plaint and written statement, the suit was substantially brought against the minor, and the error of description in the plaint being one of mere form, could not, without proof of prejudice, invalidate a decree against him in the suit. Held also that the want of a formal order appointing a guardian ad litem was not fatal to the suit, when it appeared on the face of the proceedings that the Court had sanctioned the appointment. Held (O'KINEALY, J., dissenting) that the fact that an order appointing a guardian ad litem at the instance of the plaintiff was made ex parte was not necessarily fatal to the suit, unless it could be shown that the minor had in any manner been prejudiced thereby. Per MITTER, J. (PETEHRAM, C. J., concurring), that, although the matter of the appointment of a guardian ad litem is left to the discretion of the Court, it is always desirable that the appointment at the instance of the plaintiff should not be made, unless the minor, or his friends and relatives in whose care he may be, failed to move the Court for that purpose within a reasonable time after receiving notice of the institution of the suit.—14 Cal. 204.

The plaintiff sued, under sec. 3, clause w, of Act XVII of 1877, for money due on a bond, dated the 8th September 1877. The defendant, though duly summoned, did not appear on the day fixed in the summons, which was for the final disposal of the suit. The Court, therefore, proceeded with it ex parte. The defendant, being subsequently summoned and examined as a witness under sec. 7 of the Act, admitted the bond sued upon, but pleaded part-payment of the plaintiff's claim. He then applied to the Court that his witnesses should be summoned, and that their evidence be taken in support of his allegation. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that he (defendant) was not entitled to offer the evidence. On his referring the case to the High Court, held, that it was his duty to summon the witnesses named by the defendant.—5 Bom. 184.

When the plaintiff in a suit appears at the hearing, and the defendant does not appear, the proper procedure to follow is that prescribed by sec.

100 of Act X of 1877, whether the defendant has been summoned only to appear and answer the claim, or has in addition been summoned to attend and give evidence. It is not necessary, before proceeding to hear and determine a suit ex parte under sec. 100, that all the process prescribed by law for compelling the attendance of the defendant as a witness should be exhausted. It is sufficient that due service of the summons upon the defendant is proved. If such proof is not given, the courses to be adopted are one or other of those mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sec. 100 according to the circumstances of the case. The plaints and records in a number of suits upon bonds instituted by the same plaintiff against different persons were destroyed by fire. The suits were re-instituted, and duplicate copies of the plaints were filed. The only evidence of the contents of the bonds, from which the plaints were prepared, consisted of a register kept by the plaintiff's gumashtas of the names of the executants of the bonds, the matter in respect of which the bonds had been given, the amounts due thereunder, and the names of the attesting witnesses. From this register the duplicate plaints had been prepared. Held that, though the register was not secondary evidence of the contents of the bonds, yet it was a document which might be referred to by a witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory under sec. 159 of the Evidence Act.—5 Cal. 353.

See I. L. R., 7 Al. 538, noted under sec. 101.

101. If the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex-parte, and the defendant, at or before such hearing, appears and assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit, as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance.

Procedure where defendant appears on day of adjourned hearing, and assigns good cause for previous non-appearance.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 12th December 1883, on which day the defendant did not appear, and the case was adjourned to the 18th December, and, as the defendant did not then appear, a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. A vakalatnama, had been previously filed on the defendant's part, and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment.

Held that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an "appearance" by him within the meaning of sec. 100 of the Civil Procedure Code, which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified, issued under sec. 64; that the decree was therefore ex parte within the meaning of secs. 100 and 108, and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under sec. 583, clause (9) from an order rejecting an application to set the decree aside. (2 Al. 67 distinguished.)—I. L. R., 7 Al. 538.

Defendants, who put in no appearance at the original hearing, and who have subsequently been refused leave to appear and defend are at liberty, where an ex parte decree has been passed against them, to appeal to a higher Court, without previously taking any steps to have the ex parte decree set aside under sec. 108 of Act X of 1877.—8 Cal. 272.

See I. L. R., 5 Bom, 184, noted under sec. 100.

102. If the defendant appears, and the plaintiff does not appear, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless the defendant admits the claim, or part thereof, in which case the Court shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission, and, where part only of the claim has been admitted, shall dismiss the suit so far as it relates to the remainder.

Procedure where defendant only appears.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The abandonment of proceedings taken under sec. 269, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, does not amount to dismissal in default under sec. 114, and is no bar to plaintiff's bringing a fresh suit.—10 W. R., 61.

The dismissal of a suit for the plaintiff's non-attendance is a highly penal matter, and the punishment ought not to be inflicted unless after a distinct order to attend, and upon proof that the plaintiff has deliberately disobeyed the Court's order.—17 W. R., 141.

An order made in a suit "number kharij or struck off" is not a passing of judgment against the plaintiff by default under sec. 114, Act VIII of 1859, precluding him from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action.—17 W. R., 219.

In a case struck off for default, if the order has been properly made under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 114, the remedy is by motion under sec. 119; if improperly made, it is open to appeal.—21 W. R., 124.

The plaintiff duly attended the Court on the day fixed for the hearing of his case, and waited for some time, as the Judge happened to be sitting on that day at first in the appeal Court. Believing that, when the Judge took his seat in his own Court, a part-heard case would be proceeded with and would occupy some time, the plaintiff left the Court-house and went to assist his employer, who had sent for him to explain some matters connected with a mercantile transaction. The plaintiff returned to the Court in about half an hour, and found that in his absence his suit had been called on for hearing and dismissed under sec. 102 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). On application under sec. 103 to set aside the order of dismissal, held, refusing the application, that the above circumstances did not amount to "sufficient cause" for his non-appearance when his suit was called on for hearing. He was not taken unawares. He was under no compulsion to leave the Court, nor was his absence due to any weighty Cause. He accepted the risk of the case being called on his absence.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 12.

Sec. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code does not take away the remedy of appeal from a decree dismissing a suit under sec. 102. Lal Singh v. Kunjan, (I. L. R., 4 Al. 387), Ajudhia Prasad v. Balmukand (I. L. R., 8 Al. 354), and Partab Rai v. Ram Kishen Weekly Notes, 1883, p. 171, referred to.—9 Al. 427.

In a suit, issues having been settled, the final hearing of the suit was adjourned to a fixed date for final disposal. On that date plaintiff did not appear, and the suit was dismissed. Held that, as this was not a case which had been adjourned in favour of either party to enable him to "produce his proofs, or cause the attendance of his witnesses," the order was not one which could properly be made.—1 Madr. 287.

See I. L. R., 16 Cal. 98 & 545, 13 Madr. 510, noted under sec. 13.

103. When a suit is wholly or partially dismissed under Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit. sec. 102, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside; and, if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall set aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

No order shall be made under this section unless the plaintiff has served the defendant with notice in writing of his application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Per GARTH, C.J.—The operation of sec. 103 of the Code of Civil Procedure is confined to those cases only where a second suit is brought for the same object and cause of action as the suit which is dismissed.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 426.

Where a suit was adjourned on the application of the defendant, and on the day to which the case was adjourned the plaintiff was absent, and the suit was dismissed for default by an order purporting to be passed under sec. 158 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882:—Held, that sec. 158 was not applicable to the circumstances, and that the plaintiff was entitled to apply under sec. 103 to have the dismissal set aside.—7 Madr. 41.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 427 & 13 Bom. 12, noted under sec. 102; 15 Madr. 111, noted under sec. 13.

104. If, on the day fixed for the hearing of a suit against a defendant residing out of British India, who has no agent empowered to accept service of summons, or on any day to which the hearing has been adjourned, the defendant does not appear, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for permission to proceed with his suit, and the Court may direct that the plaintiff be at liberty to proceed with his suit in such manner and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit.

Procedure where defendant residing out of British India does not appear.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

106. If there be more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed, and the Court shall, at the time of passing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear.

107. If a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person under the provisions of section 66 or section 436, does not appear in person, or shew sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing sections applicable to plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, who do not appear, and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the decree upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court, or otherwise, as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Process for enforcing judgment is executed within the meaning of sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 and sec. 58 of Act X of 1859, when an attachment of the property of the defendant has taken place; and any application by the defendant under those sections to set aside an ex-parte decree must be made within thirty and fifteen days respectively from the date of the attachment.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 947; 9 W. R., 236.

Sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to a defendant who is only absent on an adjourned hearing. It relates only to one who has never appeared.—3 B. L. R., Ap. 121; 12 W. R., 169.

Sec. 119 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) is made applicable to rent-suits under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.) by the provisions of sec. 34 of the latter Act. Sec. 103 of Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.) does not apply to applications for a re-hearing after an ex parte decree on the ground of ignorance of the suit.—7 B. L. R., 207 ; 16 W. R., 17.

A suit was postponed on the application of the defendant's pleader ; but on his applying for further adjournment at the time fixed for hearing, the application was refused ; the Court tried the case, the defendant not appearing, and not being represented, and gave a decree for the plaintiff. An appeal was allowed, and the case was sent back for retrial.—8 B. L. R., 44 ; 15 W. R., 503.

Where a decree is passed ex parte in an original suit, the defendant has no right to a special appeal, even though his appeal may have been entertained by the Civil Court.—1 M. H. C. R., 189.

A party to a suit, against whom a judgment ex parte has been passed in regular appeal, cannot prefer a special appeal from that judgment. He must first proceed under sec. 119 of the Civil Procedure Code to get rid of the ex parte judgment against him —3 M. H. C. R., 109 ; 6 M. H. C. R., 1.

The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November, when issues were settled, and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd January the plaintiff changed her vakil, and applied by the new vakil for a summons for a witness ; and on the 23rd the new vakil stating that, owing to the absence of his witnesses, he was not prepared to go on with the case, the Judge dismissed the suit. Held that, under sec. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit. Sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 does not empower a Judge to set aside a decree passed under sec. 148 of the same Act. Semble, sec. 114, as well as secs. 110 and 111 of the Code, have reference only to the first hearing of the suit, which may be either on the day named in the summons, or on a subsequent day to which such hearing may have been adjourned.—4 M. H. C. R., 56.

Where a defendant appears in person or by pleader, the fact that the defendant is not prepared to put in a written statement does not warrant the trial of a suit ex parte.—2 M. H. C. R., 311.

The parties to a suit appeared on the day fixed for the first hearing. On the application of the defendant's vakil the hearing was adjourned, in order to enable them to obtain certain documents from the Collector's office, and afterwards put in written statements. This they failed to do on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and when the suit came on for final hearing, they were still in default, and also failed to appear in person or by vakil. A decree was given for the plaintiff. Held that the decree of the original Court was not an ex parte decree under sec. 147 of the Code of Civil Procedure for non-appearance, but a decree under sec. 148, and was therefore appealable.—4 M. H. C. R., 254.

The effect of granting an application under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 is to declare that there has not been yet a valid decree in the suit, and thereby any attachment that has issued in execution of the decree which has been set aside becomes invalid. A obtained a decree ex parte against B. Property belonging to B was attached in execution. While under attachment, B sold the property to C. Afterwards B applied for and obtained an order under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside A's decree, and for a new trial. Held that C's purchase was not null and void under sec. 240 of Act VIII of 1859.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 17.

On appeal from the rejection of an application made under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside a judgment by default, held that, in order to satisfy the Court "that the plaintiff was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing," it was enough to show that there had been a bona-fide mistake, which was not unreasonable.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (O.C.) 60.

A Judge has no jurisdiction to grant an application, made by a defendant against whom an ex parte judgment has been passed, to set aside the judgment after the expiration of the thirty days allowed, by sec. 119 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for making such applications. Such an application must be made within thirty days after the first process for enforcing the judgment against such defendant has been executed. Though an order passed for setting aside a judgment is, on the merits of the application, final, yet where a Civil Court makes an order setting aside an ex parte judgment on an application presented after the period allowed by law has elapsed, an appeal against that order will lie, on the ground that it has been made without jurisdiction.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 44; 15 W. R., 175; 26 W. R., 99.

Held that the hearing of a suit in which a pleader was duly appointed on behalf of the defendant, but not instructed to answer, or instructed not to answer at all, was an "ex parte" hearing, and that no appeal lay from a judgment passed in such suit.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 206.

On an application made under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside a judgment by default, held that the words "prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing" should be read so as to include the case of the absence of the plaintiff's counsel or attorney, when such absence has been caused by a bona-fide mistake. Under such circumstances, a judgment by default under sec. 114 was set aside upon payment by the attorney for the plaintiff of costs of the hearing.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 282; 2nd Ed. 267.

The Court of first instance refused to receive the defendant's written statement, because it had been tendered after the day on which the Court had ordered it to be filed, and the delay had not been satisfactorily explained. The Court, however, framed the issues in the presence of the defendant's pleader, who was allowed to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses. The Court made a decree in favour of the plaintiff. In appeal, the District Judge held that the decree of the first Court was ex parte under sec. 119 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that, therefore, no appeal lay. Held by the High Court in special appeal that the decree of the first Court was not ex parte under the circumstances.—1 Bom. H. C. R., 217.

A mere formal appearance in Court, with no further action than the putting in a written statement, does not prevent a decision passed in such a case from being regarded as an ex parte decision under the Civil Procedure Code.—1 N. W. P. H. C. R., Ed. 1873, 154.

The plaintiff's witnesses not being present on the day fixed for the hearing of the plaintiff's suit, it was dismissed for default of prosecution under sec. 114 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was afterwards re-admitted under sec. 119. Held that, the default not being of the nature described in sec. 114, the suit was wrongly dismissed under that section, and for the same reason, that the suit was improperly dismissed under that section, it was also improperly re-admitted under sec. 119.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 74. See also 7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 126.

The remedy, when a case in execution of a decree is disposed of in the absence of the judgment-debtor, is that provided by sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and not an appeal.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 164; 4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 10.

An application under sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, for the re-hearing of a case decreed ex parte, was rejected. Under that law this order was appealable. No appeal was, however, filed until October 1st, 1877, on which date Act X of 1877 came in force. Held that the appeal was inadmissible, there being no provision in Act X of 1877 for such an appeal.—1 C. L. R., 402.

An ex parte decree having been granted in a suit against A personally and as guardian of her infant sons, the infants subsequently applied under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside the decree, on the ground that the summons had not been duly served. It was proved that the summons had been duly served upon A, and the application was dismissed. On appeal to the High Court, held that, although so far as the decrees made A personally liable, the Court had no power to interfere, yet as the infants were not responsible for their non-appearance, it might be said that they had been prevented by "sufficient cause from appearing," and that the decrees might be set aside under sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 (sec. 108 of Act X of 1877) as against them.—6 C. L. R., 69.

An appearance in person or by pleader, without putting in any answer or written statement, is an appearance within the meaning of sec. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and the judgment pronounced thereafter is not an ex parte judgment, and therefore an appeal will lie.—Marshall's Rep., 32; 7 W. R., 295.

A defendant in a suit instituted before the passing of Act VIII of 1859 was entitled, under sec. 387, to any advantage of right which he might have possessed under the old procedure; but this did not bar him from availing himself of any advantages which he might obtain from the new procedure—e. g., a re-hearing, under sec. 119, in the case of an ex parte decree.—W. R., 1864, Mis., 36.

The object of sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, was to make it imperative on a defendant against whom an ex-parte decree had been passed, and who desire to come in and set aside that decree, to apply to the Court as soon as possible after he had notice of the passing of the decree—i. e., within a reasonable time not exceeding thirty days from the first actual execution of process to enforce the judgment.—7 W. R., 375.

Where a party applies, under sec. 119, Code of Civil Procedure, to have an ex-parte decree set aside, on the allegation that the decree was obtained upon a petition of confession of judgment put in by a person fraudulently employed to personate him, the Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegation, and, if it be established, the decree may be set aside.—6 W. R., Mis., 36.

Where a Court of first instance had admitted an application, made after the time allowed by law, to set aside an ex-parte decree, held that the Appellate Court was authorized to try in appeal whether under the law the Court of first instance had power to receive the application, and, if its order was made without jurisdiction, to set it aside.—6 W. R., 300.

Process of enforcing a judgment (within thirty days from which a defendant may apply to set aside an ex-parte decree) has not been executed within the meaning of sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, until the proceedings in execution have been brought to a termination by a sale of the property attached.—7 W. R., 198.

In a case in which one of many defendants, who was made a party to the suit, did not appear, and a decree for possession was passed without any such special orders regarding that defendant as might have been passed under sec. 116, Act VIII of 1859, held that no ex-parte judgment was passed against her, and she could not re-open the suit, under sec. 119, Code of Civil Procedure.—9 W. R., 597.

Where in the absence of a plaintiff's pleader the case was decided it was held to have been decided ex parte, and his proper course was held to be an application for review, not a special appeal.—10 W. R., 348.

Where a defendant entered appearance and filed a written statement, the case cannot be ex parte, through the defendant does not appear in person at the hearing ; and the defendant's vakil is entitled to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses.—11 W. R., 5.

A suit having been decreed against a number of defendants, some of whom did not appear, one (R) of the latter applied for a new trial under sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, and the case was remanded by the Judge to the Sudder Ameen. On the last day of the new trial, another (K) of the defendants, against whom judgment had been given ex-parte, tendered a written statement in which it was alleged that summons had not been duly served upon her. The statement was received, and the suit was dismissed in toto. In appeal, the Principal Sudder Ameen reversed that part of the decree which related to K, on the ground that she had presented no petition in conformity with sec. 119 of the Code. Held that K was properly before the Sudder Ameen's Court, and was entitled to the benefit of the order of dismissal, and that the Principal Sudder Ameen went on too narrow a ground, and should have tried the case on its merits.—11 W. R., 18.

It is not necessary that the judgment-debtor should have special notice of any process for enforcing an ex parte decree ; he is bound to seek the remedy provided by sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, within thirty days after execution of any process to enforce the judgment.—13 W. R., 436.

Where a defendant was prevented by the fraud of the plaintiff from appearing on the last day of hearing, the suit was held to have been decided ex parte, notwithstanding that the defendant had been represented on the first day of hearing ; and the first Court was held to have done right in reatoring the case to the file under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 119.—18 W. R., 457.

When a duly authorized vakil of the defendant under a vakalutnama filed in Court in appears for his client on the day fixed, and the case comes on for hearing, the decree passed on such hearing is not an ex parte decree, even though the pleader be not sufficiently instructed to proceed with the case.—20 W. R., 53.

An application by a party to set aside an ex parte decree, which application he has had an opportunity of making within time, and has neglected to do so, should not be entertained on the supposition that there has been collusion to defeat the defendant's rights.—26 W. R., 99.

There is no appeal from an order setting aside an ex-parte decree.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 426.

A defendant failing to comply with an order to answer interrogatories, the Court, under sec. 136 of the Code struck out his defence, and, proceeding ex-parte, passed a decree against him.

Held, that the decree could not be treated, in respect of the remedy by appeal, as an ex-parte decree and so not appealable under the ruling in 4 Al. 387, but that an appeal would lie from the decree.—7 Al. 159.

Under sec. 540 of the Civil Procedure Code an appeal lies from decrees passed ex parte. If a defendant appears at the first hearing, and files a written statement, he should not be placed ex-parte.—3 Madr. 264.

Held by STUART, C. J., and STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ. (OLDFIELD and BRODHURST, JJ., dissenting), that a defendant against whom a decree has been passed ex-parte, and who has not adopted the remedy provided by sec. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code, cannot appeal from such decree under the general provisions of sec. 540.—4 Al. 387.

An ex-parte decree was obtained against a defendant, who applied to have it set aside under sec. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code. The application was made more than thirty days from the date of attaching the defendant's property in execution of the decree, but within thirty days of the service of the sale-proclamation. Held that the application was barred by limitation under art. 164, sch ii., Act XV of 1877.—9 Cal. 869.

An ex-parte order was made against S, to whom a certificate under Act XL of 1858 had been granted, revoking such certificate, and granting it to A, and directing S to deliver the property of the minor to A and to render an account of all moneys received and disbursed within thirty days. In pursuance of this order a precept or injunction was served on S informing her that the certificate granted to her had been revoked, and had been granted to A, and directing her to deliver the property of the minor to A and to render him accounts of all moneys realized and expended within one month. Held that such precept or injunction was a "process for enforcing" such ex-parte order, and that it was "executed" when it was served on S, within the meaning of art. 164 of the Limitation Act, 1877.—6 Al. 14.

The only proper mode of dealing with cases, whether a regular suit or a miscellaneous proceeding, when the parties do not appear, is to dismiss it. A case so dismissed can be restored on application under sec. 108, which is, by sec. 647, applicable as well to execution proceedings as to suits and appeals.—10 Cal. 416.

109. No decree shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid, unless notice thereof in writing has been served on the opposite party.

No decree to be set aside

CHAPTER VIII.

OF WRITTEN STATEMENTS AND SET-OFF.

110. The parties may, at any time before or at the first hearing of the suit, tender written statements of their respective cases, and the Court shall receive such statements, and place them on the record.

Written statements.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

This section contemplates that a defendant shall, in his written statement, set forth the case he intends to make at the trial.—I.L.R., 1 Bom. 209.

A written statement of his case, tendered by a party to a suit at any time before or at the first hearing of the suit, is not liable to any court-fee and may be written on plain paper (sec. 110 of Act X of 1877). A written statement called for by the Court after the first hearing is also exempt from stamp-duty (sec. 19 of Act VII of 1870).—5 Bom. 400.

In a suit for wrongful dismissal, in which the defendants pleaded justification by reason of the plaintiff's misconduct, held (1) that the defendants at the hearing could not give evidence of a transaction involving instances of misconduct not set forth in their written statement. They should either have filed a supplemental written statement before the hearing, or have furnished the plaintiff with particulars of the misconduct in question, and intimated to him their intention of relying on the transaction as going to establish the general allegation of misconduct. (2) That, although the transaction in question could not be made the subject-matter of an auxiliary issue, the evidence of it, as such, could not be received, yet that questions relating to it might be put to the plaintiff in cross-examination for the purpose of affecting his credit. Supplemental written statements cannot be filed after the parties have entered upon their case at the hearing. Statements laid by clients before Counsel for the purpose of obtaining legal advice are privileged. A was employed by B, at intervals of a week or fortnight, to write up B's account-books, B furnishing him with the necessary information either orally or from loose memoranda. Held that the entries so made could not be given in evidence to contradict A, under sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, as previous statements made by him in writing. The statements were really made, not by A, but by B, under whose instructions A had written them. Held also that it is only such books as are entered upon as transactions take place that can be considered as books regularly kept in the course of business with sec. 34 of the Indian Evidence Act.—4 Bom. 576.

111. If in a suit for the recovery of money the defendant claims to set-off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally removeable by him from the plaintiff, and if, in such claim of the defendant against the plaintiff, both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards, unless permitted by the Court, tender a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set off.

The Court shall thereupon inquire into the same, and if it finds that the case fulfils the requirements of the former part of this section, and that the amount claimed to be set-off does not exceed the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction, the Court shall set-off the one debt against the other.

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement.

Inquiry.

Such set-off shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit, so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both in the original and on the cross-claim; but it shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree.

Effect of set-off.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeaths Rupees 2,000 to B, and appoints C his executor and residuary legatee. B dies, and D takes out administration to B's effects. C pays Rupees 1,000 as surety for D. Then D sues C for the legacy. C cannot set-off the debt of Rupees 1,000 against the legacy, for neither C nor D fills the same character with respect to the legacy as they fill with respect to the payment of the Rupees 1,000.

(b) A dies intestate and in debt to B. C takes out administration to A's effects, and B buys part of the effects from C. In a suit for the purchase-money by C against B, the latter cannot set-off the debt against the price, for C fills two different characters, one as the vendor to B, in which he sues B, and the other as representative to A.

(c.) A sues B on a bill of exchange. B alleges that A has wrongfully neglected to insure B's goods and is liable to him in compensation, which he claims to set off. The amount not being ascertained cannot be set-off.

(d.) A sues B on a bill of exchange for Rupees 500. B holds a judgment against A for Rupees 1,000. The two claims being both definite, pecuniary demands may be set-off.

(e) A sues B for compensation on account of a trespass. B holds a promissory note for Rupees 1,000 from A, and claims to set-off that amount against any sum that A may recover in the suit. B may do so, for, as soon as A recovers, both sums are definite pecuniary demands.

(f) A and B sue C for Rupees 1,000. C cannot set-off a debt due to him by A alone.

(g) A sues B and C for Rupees 1,000. B cannot set-off a debt due to him alone by A.

(h.) A owes the partnership-firm of B and C Rupees 1,000. B dies, leaving C surviving. A sues C for a debt of Rupees 1,500 due in his separate character. C may set-off the debt of Rupees 1,000.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A, by deed of zur-i-peshgi, let certain lands to B to secure a sum advanced by him to her, and interest thereon. B covenanted to pay certain dues annually to A. On failure by B, A obtained a decree against him for the amount. In execution of a decree against B, C purchased his interest in the sum secured by the deed of zur-i-peshgi, and sued A to recover the same. Held that A was entitled in such suit to set off the amount of the decree obtained by her against B.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 84; 10 W. R., 380.

A and B, having obtained a decree for a sum of money against C and D, sold part of their interest therein to E, who afterwards sold the same to F. G obtained a decree against F, and in execution attached and sold F's interest in the decree obtained by A and B, and H became the purchaser of the same. H applied for execution against C and D. A claimed to have set off the amount of a decree obtained by his son I against G, and which C alleged was held by I benami for him as a cross-decree within the meaning of sec. 209 of Act VIII. of 1859. Held that the decrees could not be set off. Also held that a special appeal lies from a regular appeal heard ex parte.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 110; 10 W. R., 450.

Where there were cross-decrees, and one of the decree-holders was, by an order of the Court made with the consent of both parties, bound, in executing his decree, to set off the amount of the decree against him, held that it would be inequitable to allow the other decree-holder to obtain execution in full without setting off the amount decreed against him. A decree cannot be executed, nor can it be seized and sold in portions.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 114; 11 W. R., 488.

Plaintiff sued in a Small Cause Court, on an instalment-bond, for Rs. 81. The bond had been executed for nuzzur or salami contemporaneously with the execution of a patta and kubuliat, by which the defendants agreed to pay the plaintiff Rs. 335 a year, for two years, as rent for certain land. The patta and kubuliat had not been registered. A previous suit brought by the plaintiff under Act X of 1859 had been, therefore, dismissed, and no oral evidence was admitted to prove the terms of the patta and kubuliat. The defendants now claimed a set-off against the amount claimed under the bond, on the footing of a contract contained in the patta and kubuliat. The Judge refused to receive them in evidence, or to receive oral evidence of their contents, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the High Court on four questions submitted by him. Held that the suit on the bond was properly cognizable by the Small Cause Court as a simple debt due under the bond. It was clearly not for an ab-wab or illegal cess; whether it was nuzzur or salami was immaterial. The defendant having benefited in the Act X suit by the fact that no oral evidence had been admitted to prove the contents of the patta and kubuliat, it would have been contrary to rule and inequitable to admit such evidence now in support of his claim of set-off.—5 B. L. R., App. 1; 13 W. R., 307.

A contract of guarantee is a "matter of contract and dealing" within the terms of sec. 17 of 21 Geo. III., c. 70, and therefore such a contract made by a Hindu is not affected by sec. 4 of the Statute of Frauds. When a defendant raises a claim of set-off, on the trial of that issue, he must be considered as plaintiff.—5 B. L. R., 639. As to how cases of set-off will be dealt with.—1 M. H. C. R., 396.

The purchaser of a decree sought to execute the decree, but was opposed by the judgment debtor, who sought to set-off two other decrees, obtained by herself and her sisters, against the judgment-creditor. These decrees were obtained about the date of the purchase, but it did not appear whether previously or subsequently. Held, in neither case could they be the subject of set-off.—6 B. L. R., App. 125; 15 W. R., 127.

In a suit brought against a lessee of a portion of an estate by one of the co-sharers for money alleged to be due as the plaintiff's share of arrears of rent for a certain period, where the claim was admitted, held the defendant was not entitled to set-off under sec. 121, Act VIII of 1859, the plaintiff's share of the Government revenue of the whole estate which had been paid by the defendant for the period for which the arrears of rent were alleged to be due. Held also that there was no such connexion between claim of the plaintiff and the counter-claim of the defendant as would entitle the defendant, as a matter of equity apart from legislative enactment, to a set off.—13 B. L. R., 440; 22 W. R., 15.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree against B in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Some time afterwards B recovered a decree in the Munsif's Court against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon applied for the attachment of this decree in satisfaction of their own against B. Before attachment, however, B assigned her decree to C. On C trying to execute B's decree against the plaintiffs, they brought the present suit for a declaration of their right to have a set-off made of the two decrees. Held that such a suit would not lie.—13 B. L. R., 489; 22 W. R., 235.

Act VIII of 1859, sec. 209, which provides for the set-off of cross-decrees, applies only to decrees of the same Court, or decrees sent to a Court for execution. Therefore, when, on application for execution of a decree in the Court of a Principal Sudder Ameen, it was sought to set off a decree obtained in the Judge's Court, which had not been sent to the Principal Sudder Ameen for execution, held, that sec. 209, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply. Question referred, not answered, on the ground that it did not arise in the case.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol. 203; 6 W. R., Mis., 72.

Secs. 121 and 195 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) have not the effect of enlarging the right of set-off. In a suit against the acceptor to recover the amount due upon several bills of exchange, the defendant sought to set-off a claim for unliquidated damages unconnected with the bills of exchange. Held that defendant has no right to set-off his claim against the debt due to the plaintiffs. Semble, the right of set-off will be found to exist, not only in cases of mutual debts and credits, but also where cross-demands arise out of the same transaction, or are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant be driven to a cross-suit.—2 M. H. C. R., 296.

The statement of a party to a suit is admissible original evidence against him to prove the contents of a written instrument. In a suit to recover balance of rent due, the defendant pleaded the pendency of a suit brought by him in the District Munsif's Court against the plaintiff for damages for illegal dispossession, and that he had given credit against the amount of damages for the balance of rent due. Held that the pendency of the suit in the District Munsif's Court was not a bar to the present suit; but that it was open to the Court in its discretion to postpone the hearing of the present suit until the District Munsif had given his decision.—3 M. H. C. R., 158.

The right set-off exists where there are cross-demands arising out of one and the same transaction, or where they are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant be driven to a cross-suit. In a suit to recover money due under a contract made between the plaintiff and defendants, held that the defendants were entitled to set-off the amount of damages which the defendants had proved they had sustained by reason of the plaintiff's breach of the contract sued on. Where a written contract, liable to an optional stamp, is put in evidence by the defendants, the plaintiff cannot recover a larger amount under it than (if stated) the optional stamp upon the instrument would have been sufficient to cover. In a suit for the recovery of money due under a written contract, the defendants admitted that a sum of Rs. 6,328-4 was due to the plaintiffs, subject to certain deductions which they claimed to be entitled to set-off against the plaintiff's claim. The defendants put in evidence the written contract, the stamp upon which was only sufficient to cover the sum of Rs. 5,000. Held that, notwithstanding the admission of the defendants, the plaintiff could only recover Rs. 5,000 in the suit.—4 M. H. C. R., 120.

Held that a defendant may deny the plaintiff's claim, and also plead a set-off, and may obtain a decree for it, although a sum may be found to be due to the plaintiff.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 151.

Before cross-decrees can be set-off the one against the other, it is necessary that they should be in the same Court for execution.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 104; 16 W. R., 303.

A Court cannot entertain the question of set-off if the amount claimed by the defendant exceeds the amount cognizable by it. When a defendant pleads a set-off, and claims a decree, the subject-matter of the suit is no longer the mere claim of the plaintiff, but the cross-claims of both the parties.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 114.

G and R referred to arbitration disputes between them regarding the partition of their paternal estate. The concluding portion of the award ran as follows: "Both parties shall jointly satisfy the debts on the creditors demanding payment, which debts are joint, and have hereunder been declared payable by both parties. Should one party neglect to pay or show carelessness in the matter, and should the other be obliged to pay the whole amount of any such debts, the latter shall be competent to realize from the former the portion of the debt paid on his account, together with costs and interest, by the enforcement of this award, and shall also be entitled to recover the amount by suit in Court. Both parties shall act up to this award in its entirety. The sum of Rs. 338-0-9, which has been found due and payable by Gauri Sahai to Ram Sahai as per account showing the mutual dealings between the parties, shall be made good as follows, i.e. Gauri Sahai shall pay to Ram Sahai the whole amount of Rs. 338 0-9 by the middle of the month of Pus 1276 Fasli, either in a lump-sum or by instalments, and in case of non-payment within the said period he shall be charged with interest at the rate of one per cent. up to the day of payment." R sued to recover from G the money found to be due and payable to him under the award. G admitted the claim, but desired to set-off half the amount of certain debts, which were payable under the award by the parties jointly, and which he alone had satisfied. The Lower Appellate Court deducted from the claim items of the demand admitted by R, but refused to determine G's right to set-off the items which R disputed, on the ground that they could be more conveniently enquired into in a separate suit. It was held that sec. 27 of Act XXIII of 1861 was no bar to the hearing of a special appeal. It was also held (per Stuart, C. J., Spankie, J., dissenting) that G was entitled to demand a set off, and that the lower Appellate Court should have enquired into the disputed items of the demand, and not have referred G to a separate suit in respect of those items.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 127.

If the cultivator suffers damage in execution of a decree of the Civil Court, he may sue and claim compensation for such damage; but until such damage has been ascertained and decreed, it cannot be set-off against a claim for rent.—2 Agra H. C. R., Pt. II., 177.

Under sec. 121, Act VIII of 1859, a defendant could not claim a set-off for damages in respect of an alleged breach of contract which had not been ascertained in a suit brought against him to recover the amount due on certain dishonoured hundis.—3 Agra H. C. R., 43 and 97.

A and B were the proprietors of a jote, of which B leased half of his share to C as mirasidar. The zemindar brought a suit for rent of the jote against A and B, and got a joint decree, in execution of which he put up the jote for sale. C; in order to save his mirasi right, paid the amount of the decrees before sale, and then sued A and B for the amount so paid. Held that C was entitled to recover, and that a claim for rent by B against C, but which C disputed, could not be admitted as an answer to C's claim in the present suit or as a set-off. It is essential to the validity of a set-off that the debts should be mutual, due from and to the same parties and in the same right. Beng. Reg. VIII of 1819, sec. 13, and Beng. Act VIII of 1869 sec. 62, discussed.—2 C. L. R., 414.

In a suit by a zemindar for arrears of rent, the defendant alleged that his tenure had been placed under the management of the Collector, and had so remained for a number of years, and that the Collector from money realised by him as manager had, in addition to satisfying all other claims of the plaintiff, paid the rents accruing, not only during the period of his management, but up to, and inclusive of the years the arrears of rent for which were claimed in the suit. The lower Court refused to consider the defendant's plea, on the ground that it was in the nature of a set-off, and that not being a debt due from the plaintiff to the defendant, it was not such a set-off as could be allowed by the Court. Held that the plea was a plea of payment merely, and not in the nature of a set-off.—4 C. L. R., 296.

In ascertaining the amount due for contribution in a suit by one of two persons jointly liable under a decree for rent, the Court is bound to take into consideration sums paid by the defendant, on former occasions, for rent in excess of his own share of the rent, although such sums are not claimed in his written statement, the sums paid not being in the nature of a set-off.—12 C. L. R., 539.

Held that, according to the true construction of sec. 246 of Act X of 1877, a purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to enquire whether the judgment-debtor had a cross-judgment of a higher amount such as would have rendered the order for execution incorrect. If the Court has jurisdiction, such purchaser is no more bound to enquire into the correctness of an order for execution, than he is as to the correctness of the judgment upon which execution issues.—L. R., 13 I. A., 105.

A had dealings with a firm consisting of a father and two sons, who carried on business jointly. Shortly after the father's death the two brothers separated, and A dealt with each separately, having notice of the separation. A could not set off, against a claim made by one of the brothers in respect of the separate dealings between himself and A, a debt due to himself from the former joint concern.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 354.

A widow is liable for a debt contracted by her husband. Such debt may be set off against a debt due to her.—1 W. R., Mis., 23.

A claim for rent cannot be pleaded as a set-off in a suit for money paid by the plaintiff on account of revenue to protect a lease in the nature of a mortgage held by him.—1 W. R., 297.

In order to admit of a set-off being made when there are cross-decrees the parties must be the same, and the sum due under each decree or decrees must be definite.—5 W. R., Mis., 12.

A judgment-debtor is entitled to set-off a decree whether the judgment-creditor may or may not intend to object on appeal to the judgment debtor's decree.—5 W. R., Mis., 52.

A set-off is not admissible in a suit for mesne-profits, which is not a suit for a debt within the meaning of sec. 121, Act VIII of 1859.—5 W. R., 160.

Where execution of A's decree against B was stayed, pending the passing of a decree in B's cross-suit, held that no subsequent purchase of B's rights and interests in his cross-suit could be set up as a bar to A's rights to attach the whole of the decree in the cross-suit, in execution of his decree against B.—7 W. R., 219.

The decree must be under execution at the same time,—7 W. R., 535.

In a suit for money claimed on account of the carriage of goods in which defendant pleaded non-indebtedness and a set-off on account of damage caused to the goods, held that defendant could not answer the claim with the set-off on account of damages; though the extent, if any, to which defendant was entitled to draw back might be put in issue, after which it would still be open to defendant to bring an action against plaintiff for special damages.—10 W. R., 295.

An award of private arbitration per se did not come under the provisions of sec. 209 of Act VIII of 1859, so as to be set-off against a decree of Court.—11 W. R., 144.

S had against M in the Rungpore Court a decree for costs which he removed for execution to the Court of Beerbhoom. On this M applied to the latter Court, under sec. 209, Act VIII of 1859, for stay of execution pending the decision of another suit which he had brought against S. Held that, on the decision of the other suit, it ought to have been ascertained which party had a decree for the larger sum, and that execution should have been taken out by that party only, and for so much as should remain after deducting the smaller sum, which should have been entered on the decree for the larger sum.—12 W. R., 212.

When a decree in favour of an appellant describes a set of costs as due by the appellant to the respondent, it means, not that any sum should be actually paid to the latter, but that the costs in question should be deducted from the gross amount decreed, and the remainder only recovered under the decree, sec. 209, Code of Civil Procedure, had no application in such a case.—12 W. R., 308.

Where two parties have to recover sums from each other under the same decree (not cross-decrees), the party entitled to the lesser sum cannot be allowed to take out execution against the party entitled to the larger sum, and the Court is bound to direct a set-off or to enter satisfaction of the smaller sum upon the decree.—13 W. R., 106.

Where a widow administering her husband's estate sued to recover certain moveable property wrongly appropriated by her son, who pleaded a set-off on account of a claim against his father, held that defendant was rightly referred to a separate suit.—14 W. R., 136.

Under sec. 121, Act VIII. of 1859, a defendant, desirous of setting off against the claim of the plaintiff the amount of any payment made by him on plaintiff's account, was bound to tender a written statement containing the particulars of his demand.—14 W. R., 473.

A liquidated sum due on a bond is capable according to law, even without an agreement to that effect, of being set-off against sums due for rent. 16 W. R., 225.

A Revenue Court acting under the provisions of sec. 24, Act X of 1859, had jurisdiction to allow a set-off for any sums which the agent might either have paid to his principal directly, or used for the benefit of his principal with his sanction and authority.—18 W. R., 339.

Where there are cross-decrees for possession and mesne-profits in respect to the same land, the earlier decree comprehending only a part of the land embraced in the latter, each party may take out execution and be entitled to receive wasilat separately.—16 W. R., 256.

A set-off cannot be allowed for costs not actually awarded as where a decree of the High Court gave the successful appellant costs of that Court and of the lower Appellate Court, but omitted to award the costs of the first Court.—16 W. R., 308.

A decree which is incapable of being enforced cannot be set-off against a decree which is alive.—16 W. R., 308.

Setting off an unascertained sum against another is a mode of settlement which, if suggested to the parties as a compromise, may with their assent, be a fit end of a litigation, but cannot properly be made the basis of a decree between hostile litigants.—17 W. R., 113; 10 B. L. R., 45.

It is not equitable to allow a set-off against a claim relating to a particular account stated of a matter of another nature altogether.—17 W. R., 177.

Where a Court makes two different awards of costs in one and the same decree, when it ought to have made a decree only for the difference between them, held that execution could only be taken out for the difference between the two amounts awarded.—19 W. R., 187.

Where a defendant claims a right of set-off arising out of one and the same transaction as that in which the suit originated, it is not equitable to drive him to a cross-suit: a decree under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 195, and the latter portion of sec. 121, being of the same effect and subject to the same rules as if it had been made in a separate suit.—20 W. R., 410.

An indefinite claim for damages in the nature of unascertained mesne-profits cannot be pleaded as a set-off against a specific claim for rent of later years. Such damages must be sued for separately. In a suit for rent a defendant has no right to set-off against the plaintiff's claim money in deposit with the plaintiff, unless such money was due and payable to the defendant at the time the suit was brought.—22 W. R., 1.

In a suit for arrears of rent, where defendant pleaded that, under an arrangement between him and plaintiff's ancestors, payment had been made by him in cash or in kind, and asked for an account to be taken, the lower Court was held to have been wrong in decreeing the suit, on the ground that it could not go into evidence on a question of set-off in a rent-suit, and was bound to take an account.—23 W. R., 20.

Plaintiffs, as being entitled collectively to an 11-anna share of the jumma of a talook, and alleging that they had obtained such portion of their share as the 14-anna talookdars were liable for, sued the 2-anna sharer for what he ought to have contributed. The lower Appellate Court, finding that the defendant had a 2-anna share in the zemindari, as well as in the Shikmi, considered that the one right might be set-off against the other, and that the plaintiffs had consequently no claim against the defendant. Held that this conclusion was erroneous, for though there were in a certain sense opposing rights, still they were not mutual rights as between the parties to the present suit. The plaintiffs were entitled to get a 2-anna share of the jumma from the defendant and the 14-anna talookdars jointly, and the defendant was entitled to get a like share from these 14-anna talook dars and himself jointly, but the defendant had no right to set-off the debt thus due to him against the debt due to the plaintiffs from the same persons.—23 W. R., 134.

A, got a decree against B, who subsequently got a larger decree against A, which he sold to C. After that A executed his decree, and put up B's decree for sale and bought it himself. C then took out execution against A, who having unsuccessfully put in a claim under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 246, brought a suit to have his claim established, and the sale of B's decree to C declared collusive. Both the lower Courts found that the sale was bona fide. Held that this finding could not be set aside on special appeal, but that, when C took out execution, A might apply for a set-off under section 209.—24 W. R., 299.

Sec. 195, Act VIII. of 1859, which enabled a defendant to obtain a decree against a plaintiff in respect of a counter-claim, was only applicable where defendant had been allowed to "set off" a demand against plaintiff's claim, and did not apply to a case where, in ascertaining a defendant's liability for mesne-profits, deductions were allowed from the rent proved to have been received, in the nature of allowances made for costs of cultivation or collection expenses.—25 W. R., 275.

When the defence raises a cross-demand which is found to arise out of the same transaction as, and is connected in its nature with, the plaintiff's suit, the defendant is entitled to have an adjudication of it, although it may not amount to a set-off under sec. 111 of the Civil Procedure Code. Bhagbat Panda v. Bamdeb Panda (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 557) relied on. Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti (2 M. H. C. R., 296) referred to.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 711.

In a suit in which the plaintiff sued, as son of a deceased vakil, to recover the amount of a promissory note and bond executed by the defendant to his deceased father, the defendant alleged in his written statement that the plaintiff's father had collected funds belonging to him, as his vakil, exceeding the amount due on the promissory note and bond and asked for a decree for the difference :—Held, (1) that the written statement must be regarded as a plaint in regard to the set-off and should have been stamped accordingly : (2) that if the plaintiff claimed as the heir and representative of his father the set-off was rightly pleaded ; (3) that when a memorandum of appeal is insufficiently stamped the deficient stamp duty should be levied by the Appellate Court.—15 Madr. 29.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover Rs. 36-7-9 from the defendant, under the Small Cause jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge, the defendant claimed to set-off Rs. 72, which exceeded the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Judge as a Small Cause Judge. On reference to the High Court, held that the set-off might be pleaded by the defendant. The Judge would exercise his Small Cause Court jurisdiction in trying the claim of the plaintiff and his ordinary jurisdiction in trying the set-off.—12 Bom. 31.

A written statement containing a claim of set-off is chargeable with the court-fee which would be payable on a plaint of that nature.—13 Bom. 672.

The provision of the Code, sec. 111, does not take away from parties any right to set-off, whether legal or equitable, which they would have had independently of that Code. And such right exists, not only in cases of material debts and credits, but also where cross-demands arise out of the same transaction, or are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant should be driven to a cross suit. (2 M. H. C. R., 296 and 4 M. H. C. R., 120 followed.)—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 557. Also 7 Al. 284.

The provisions of Act X. of 1877 do not give the right to set-off claims for unliquidated damages, but that Act does not take away any right of set-off, whether legal or equitable, which parties to a suit would have independently of its provisions.—4 Bom. 407.

Where, in a suit for the price of goods sold and delivered, the defendant admitted that there was a sum of Rs. 1,159-12 due by him to the plaintiff, but sought to set-off the sum of Rs. 972 as damages sustained by him by reason of the non-delivery of some of the goods contracted for: Held that as the claim of the defendant against the plaintiff was connected with the same transaction, and arose out of one and the same contract, as that in respect of which the plaintiff's suit was brought, and as the amount of the defendant's claim was capable of being immediately ascertained, the defendant might set-off his claim.—4 Bom. 407.

The usufructuary mortgagee of certain lands sued the mortgagor for the money due under the mortgage. The mortgagor alleged that the mortgagee had committed waste, and was liable to him for compensation, which he claimed to set-off. Held that, under Act X. of 1877, sec. 111, the amount of such compensation could not be set-off.—2 Al. 252.

The heirs to M, deceased, appointed A, one of the heirs, manager of M's estate with a view to the payment of the debts due by the deceased. A creditor of the deceased sued his heirs to recover his debt, and obtained a decree, in execution of which the share of Z, one of the heirs in M's landed estate, was sold. The sale-proceeds exceeded Z's share of such debt, and she sued the other heirs for contribution in respect of the difference. The defendants claimed a set-off in respect of Z's share of the liabilities of M's estate which had been satisfied by A as manager. Held that the set-off claimed could not be entertained in such suit.—5 Al. 299.

The defendant was lessee from Government of a bridge of boats over the Ganges under a lease for five years, the consideration for which was payable by instalments extending over the term of the lease. The lease contained, amongst other provisions one to the effect that the Government, if it saw fit at the expiration of the lease to farm the bridge to any other contractor, should be bound to take over the lessee's plant at a fair valuation to be determined by arbitration; and another clause provided that "should the Government, however, see fit to cancel the lease during its currency with a view to substitute a pontoon bridge, or for any other cause for which the lessee is not responsible he will be entitled to compensation from Government for all losses." The lessee died before the expiration of the lease, and the Magistrate of the District, acting on behalf of the Government, proceeded to deprive his representatives of the use of the bridge and to seize the stock and materials. The Magistrate then directed two persons to assess the value of the stock, which was ultimately fixed at Rs. 10,900. The Magistrate added a percentage, bringing the total amount up to Rs. 12,100; and a suit was filed on behalf of Government against the representatives of the deceased lessee giving credit to the defendants for such amount, and claiming the balance due in respect of the last two instalments under the contract. Held that the sum of Rs. 12,100 assessed in the manner above described could not strictly be regarded as a set-off. The suit was one for balance of account and the defendants were entitled to dispute the correctness of the plaintiff's estimate of the item allowed in their favor.—13 Al. 296.

See I. L. R., 15 Madr. 290, noted under sec. 2 of the Transfer of Property Act.

112. Except as provided in the last preceding section, no written statement shall be received after the first hearing of the suit :

No written statement to be received after first hearing.

Provided that the Court may, at any time, require a written statement or additional written statement from any of the parties, and fix a time for presenting the same :

Provisoes.

Provided also that a written statement, or an additional written statement, may, with the permission of the Court, be received at any time for the purpose of answering written statements so required and presented.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Counsel for defendant applied to be allowed to file an additional written statement. PHEAR, J., said that, in such cases, the Court would make a great difference between the case of an application by the plaintiff, and that of an application by the defendant. The plaintiff would not be allowed to file an additional written statement in such a case as the present; but although the filing of such an additional written statement as that now sought to be filed by the defendant would rightly be the subject of strong comment by the plaintiff at the hearing, still the Court would grant the application of the defendant upon the conditions that the defendant pay the costs of this application and of filing the additional written statement, and that he furnish the plaintiff with a copy of the additional written statement free of charge.—3 B. L. R., App. 11.

An application was made by the defendants for an order under sec. 124, Act VIII. of 1859, directing the removal from the file, or the amendment of, the plaintiff's written statement, on the ground that it contained irrelevant matter, namely, letters containing an offer made by the defendants without prejudice. MACPHERSON, J., ordered the paragraphs relating to the offer to be struck out.—12 B. L. R., App. 19.

A Court was held not to have done wrong in admitting a supplemental written statement which it had called for under sec. 122, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, which did not add to or vary the plaintiff's claim.—11 W.R., 71.

Interrogatories are not in this country to be framed to anticipate or supply defects of pleading or to ascertain the case of the other side. Where the pleading of either party is too vague, the Court may call for a further or fuller written statement, or may frame and record issues until the case raised by the pleadings is ascertained with sufficient clearness. A plaintiff may interrogate with a view to obtain information or admission in support of his own case, and this right extends not only to his original case, but also to any answers which he has to make to the defendant's case, subject to the qualification (inter alia) that the interrogatories must be directed to a case on which the plaintiff has already determined and to which he has committed himself. He cannot be allowed to put fishing questions in order to try whether he can discover any flaw in the defendant's case or suggest any answer to it.—I. L. R., 17 Cal. 840.

113. If any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pass a decree against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit.

Procedure when party fails to present written statement called for by Court.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

114. Written statements shall be as brief as the nature of the case admits, and shall not be argumentative, but shall be confined as much as possible to a simple narrative of the facts which the party by whom or on whose behalf the written statement is made believes to be material to the case, and which he either admits or believes he will be able to prove.

Form of written statements.

Every such statement shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively, and each paragraph containing, as nearly as may be, a separate allegation.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff in a suit went on a pilgrimage after he had been ordered to file a written statement, but without having filed it. Not having returned when the case was on the board, his son applied, under secs. 28 and 123 of Act VIII. of 1859, for leave to verify and file a statement, alleging himself to be interested as a reversioner. The application was refused. Held that a third party will not be allowed to verify and file a written statement for a plaintiff who has culpably neglected to file one himself.—Bourke's Rep. (O. C.) 153.

To a suit, brought in 1883, for redemption of a mortgage made in 1853, of villages in Oudh, subsequently included in the mortgagee's talukdari estate and sanad, the defence was that, the mortgagor having brought a suit in 1864 to redeem, and not having appeared at the hearing, in person or by pleader, judgment was passed, the mortgagee having appeared to defend against the plaintiff under sec. 114 of Act VIII. of 1859. Held that, although the plaintiff, who had claimed in the prior suit the under-proprietary right in virtue of a sub-settlement, claimed in the present suit the superior proprietary right, the difference in the mode of relief claimed did not affect the identity of the cause of action, which was, in both cases, the refusal of the right to redeem; and that under sec. 114 of the Act the judgment of 1864 was final.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 422.

115. Written statements shall be signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore provided for signing and verifying plaints, and no written statement shall be received unless it be so signed and verified.

Written statements to be signed and verified.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 626, noted under sec. 51.

116. If it appears to the Court that any written statement, whether called for by the Court or spontaneously tendered, is argumentative or prolix, or contains matter irrelevant to the suit, the Court may amend it then and there, or may, by an order to be endorsed thereon, reject the same, or return it to the party by whom it was made for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, imposing such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Power of Court as to argumentative, prolix, or written statement.

When any amendment is made under this section, the Judge shall attest it by his signature.

of amend-

When a statement has been rejected under this section, the party making it shall not present another written statement, unless it be expressly called for or allowed by the Court.

Effect of rejection.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE EXAMINATION OF THE PARTIES BY THE COURT.

117. At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall ascertain from the defendant or his pleader whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact made in the plaint, and shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of fact as are made in the written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not, expressly or by necessary implication, admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court shall record such admissions and denials.

Ascertainment whether allegations in plaint and written statements admitted or denied.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

118. At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied, may be examined orally by the Court; and the Court may, if it thinks fit, put, in the course of such examination, questions suggested by either party.

Oral examination of party, or companion of himself or his pleader.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where defendants summoned under sec. 41, Act VIII of 1859, did not appear on the day fixed for them to appear and answer, and their reasons for non-attendance not having been considered sufficient, they were not allowed to appear in the case, held that the Court of first instance was justified in disposing of the case in their absence, and that sec. 125, Act VIII of 1859, contemplates a case in which a party who has appeared at the proper time afterwards appears by pleader.—12 W. R., 207.

119. The substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing by the Judge, and shall form part of the record.

Substance of examination to be written.

120. If the pleader of any party who appears by a pleader refuses or is unable to answer any material question relating to the suit which the Court is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Court may postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day, and direct that such party shall appear in person on such day.

Consequence of refusal or inability of pleader to answer.

If such party fails, without lawful excuse, to appear in person on the day so appointed, the Court may pass a decree against him or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER X.

OF DISCOVERY, AND OF THE ADMISSION, INSPECTION, PRODUCTION, IMPOUNDING, AND RETURN OF DOCUMENTS.

121. Any party may, at any time, by leave of the Court, deliver, through the Court, interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite party, or, where there are more opposite parties than one, any one or more of such parties, with a note at the foot thereof, stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer:

Power to deliver interro.

Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same person without the permission of the Court, and that no defendant shall deliver interrogatories for the examination of the plaintiff unless such defendant has previously tendered a written statement, and such statement has been received and placed on the record.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 121 of the Code of Civil Procedure contemplates (1) leave to interrogate, and (2) the service of the interrogatories through the Court. It is the duty of the Court under that section to determine whether the applicant should be allowed to interrogate the other side, but not to determine at that stage what question the party interrogated should be compelled to answer. Where an ex parte order is made in chambers giving leave to interrogate, the party ordered to answer has a right to come into Court to have the order set aside if the case is one in which interrogatories should not have been allowed. When an order for the administration of interrogatories is properly made, a party objecting to the interrogatories administered may, at his peril, omit to answer the interrogatories to which he objects; but the more prudent course is to file his affidavit in answer, stating it in his objections to answer such questions as he objects to. Where interrogatories are scandalous, or in any way an abuse of the process of the Court, the Court may interfere at any stage. The power given to the Court by sec. 36 should not be exercised except in extreme cases.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 707; 5 C. L. R., 509.

The question as to whether the Courts below have exercised a proper discretion in dismissing a suit under sec. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code is one into which the High Court will not enter on special appeal. When interrogatories are delivered with the leave of the Court under sec. 121 of the Procedure Code, and the Court orders such interrogatories to be answered within 10 days under sec. 126, there is virtually an order passed under the provision of Chapter X of the Code; and consequently, upon the party interrogated failing to comply with such order, the Court has the power to pass an order under sec. 136.—10 Cal. 505.

Omission to answer interrogatories, delivered after leave granted under sec. 121 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not render the party so omitting to answer liable to have his defence struck out under sec. 136 of the Code. Lalla Debi Pershad v. Santo Pershad, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 505, overruled.—18 Cal. 420.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 840, noted under sec. 112.

122. Interrogatories delivered under section 121 shall be served on the pleader (if any) of the party interrogated, or in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of summons, and the provisions of sections 79, 80, 81, and 82, shall, in the latter case, apply, so far as may be practicable.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

123. The Court, in adjusting the costs of the suit, shall, at the instance of any party, inquire or cause inquiry to be made into the propriety of delivering such interrogatories; and if it thinks that such interrogatories have been delivered unreasonably, vexatiously, or at improper length, the costs occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answers thereto shall be borne by the party in fault.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

124. If any party to a suit be a body corporate or a joint-stock company, whether incorporated or not, or any other body of personsempowered by law to sue or be sued, whether in its own name or in the name of any officer or other person, any opposite party may apply to the Court for an order allowing him to deliver interrogatories to any member or officer of such corporation, company, or body, and an order may be made accordingly.

Service of interrogatories on officer of corporation or company.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Any party called upon to answer interrogatories, whether by himself or by any such member or officer, may refuse to answer any interrogatory on the ground that it is irrelevant, or is not put bona fide for the purposes of the suit, or that the matter inquired after is not sufficiently material at that stage of the suit, or on any other like ground.

to refuse to answer interrogatories as irrelevant, &c.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial S. C. Courts.

126. Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed in Court within ten days from the service thereof, or within such further time as the Judge may allow.

Time for filing affidavit in answer.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where in an affidavit of documents, privilege is claimed for a correspondence on the ground that it contains instructions and confidential communications from the client (the plaintiff) to his solicitor, it must appear not merely that the correspondence generally contains instructions, &c., but that each letter contains instructions or confidential communications to the attorneys with reference to the conduct of the suit. Bewicke v. Graham, 7 Q. B. D., 400, followed.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 265.

See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 505, noted under sec. 121.

127. If any person interrogated omits or refuses to answer, or answers insufficiently, any interrogatory, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer, or to answer further, as the case may be. And an order may be made requiring him to answer, or to answer further, either by affidavit or by viva-voce examination, as the Judge may direct: Provided that the Judge shall not require an answer to any interrogatory which in his opinion need not have been answered under Section 125.

Procedure where party omits to answer sufficient-

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts. See I. L. R. 18 Cal. 420, noted under sec. 121.

128. Either party may, by a notice through the Court, within a reasonable time not less than ten days before the hearing, require the other party to admit (saving all just exceptions to the admissibility of such document in evidence) the genuineness of any document material to the suit.

The admission shall also be made in writing, signed by the other party or his pleader, and filed in Court.

If such notice be not given, no costs of proving such document shall be allowed, unless the Judge otherwise orders.

If such notice is not complied with within four days after its being served, and the Judge thinks it reasonable that the admission should have been made, the party refusing shall bear the expense of proving such document, whatever may be the result of the suit.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

129. The Court may, at any time during the pendency therein of any suit, order any party to the suit to declare by affidavit all the documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to any matter in question in the suit, and any party to the suit may, at any time before the first hearing, apply to the Court for a like order.

Every affidavit made under this section shall specify which (if any) of the documents therein mentioned the declarant objects to produce, together with the grounds to such objection.

NOTES.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In a suit brought by two Mahomedan parda-nashin ladies for recovery of immoveable property by right of inheritance, an order was passed under sec. 129 of the Civil Procedure Code, requiring the plaintiffs to declare by affidavit "all the papers connected with the points at issue in the case which were or had been in their possession or control." After some ineffectual proceedings, the plaintiffs were peremptorily ordered to file their affidavit on a certain date. On that date an affidavit was filed on their behalf by their brother and mukhtear, with a list of their documentary evidence; but the affidavit and list was considered defective upon several grounds, one of which was that it ought to have been made by the plaintiffs personally. Further time was then given to the plaintiffs to amend these defects, and ultimately they filed an affidavit purporting to be made by them personally, praying that the Court would have it verified in any manner thought proper, provided that their parda-nashini were not interfered with. The Court, under sec. 316 of the Code, dismissed the suit for want of prosecution, in consequence of the orders under sec. 129 not having been complied with, though ample opportunity had been given to the plaintiffs, and no sufficient ground for non-compliance had been shown. Held, without going into the question of the sufficiency or non-sufficiency of the action of the plaintiffs with regard to the orders made under sec. 129 of the Code, that, looking at the disabilities of the plaintiffs and the circumstances of their suit, the case was not one in which it was expedient to enforce the liability to which they might have exposed themselves under the peculiar provisions of sec. 136.—I. L. R., 8 Al 265.

130. The Court may, at any time during the pendency therein of any suit, order the production of documents in his possession or power relating to any matter in question in such suit or proceeding as the Court thinks right; and the Court may deal with such documents when produced in such manner as appears just.

Power to order production of documents during suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, interlocutory orders passed under sec. 387 refusing applications for the issue of a commission to examine witnesses, or, under sec. 130, directing the production of documents, cannot be revised.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 256.

Under sec. 130 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), a Judge has no discretion to refuse to allow inspection of documents relating to matters in question in a suit, provided they are not privileged. Confidential communications between principal and agent relating to matters in a suit are not privileged. Held in a suit for an injunction to restrain the defendant from using certain trade-marks that telegrams and letters between the plaintiff's firm in London and their managing Agent in Bombay, relating to the subject-matter of the suit, were not privileged.—Bastros v. White (L. R., 1 Q. B. D. 423) and Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia (L. R., 2 Ch. D. 644) followed.—2 Bom. 453.

131. Any party to a suit may, at any time before or at the hearing thereof, give notice through the Court to any other party to produce any specified document for the inspection of the party giving such notice or of his pleader, and to permit such party or pleader to take copies thereof.

Notice to produce for inspection documents referred to in plaint, &c.

No party failing to comply with such notice shall afterwards be at liberty to put any such document in evidence on his behalf in such suit, unless he satisfies the Court that such document relates only to his own title, or that he had some other and sufficient cause for not complying with such notice.

Notice of non-compliance with such notice.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

If a notice under sec. 131 of the Civil Procedure Code be not answered as provided by sec. 132, the party seeking the inspection of documents may apply for an order under sec. 133, and his application must be supported by an affidavit. The Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order under sec. 136, unless the provisions of sec. 134 are strictly complied with.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 768.

Before the Court will make an order under sec. 133 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the preliminary steps mentioned in sec. 131 must be taken by the party applying for the order.—10 Cal. 56.

132. The party to whom such notice is given shall, within ten days from the receipt thereof, deliver through the Court to the party giving the same a notice stating a time, within three days from such delivery, at which the documents, or such of them as he does not object to produce, may be inspected at his pleader's office or some other convenient place, and stating which (if any) of the documents he objects to produce, and on what grounds.

Party receiving such notice to deliver notice when and where inspection may be had.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Defendant was owner of certain cotton-ginning factories at and near A in the mufassal, and had also a place of business in Bombay. He entered into a contract in Bombay with the plaintiff to gin certain cotton of the plaintiff's at the said factories of the defendant in the mufassal. Plaintiff brought a suit for damages for the breach of this contract, and demanded inspection, in Bombay, of all the defendant's books relating to the business of the said ginning factories belonging to the defendant. The defendant was willing to give the inspection asked for, but contended that it should be had at A, where all the books in question were kept, and objected to bringing the books down to Bombay, as demanded by the plaintiff. Held that the contract, though made in Bombay, having been intended to be performed at a considerable distance from Bombay, at and near A, where the business of ginning was conducted, and where the books relating to the said business were kept, A was the proper place at which to give inspection.—I. L. R., 5 Bom. 467.

133. If any party served with notice under section 131 omits to give notice under section 132 of the time for inspection, or objects to give inspection, or names an inconvenient place for inspection, the party desiring it may apply to the Court for an order of inspection.

Application for order of inspection.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Letters written by one of the defendant's servants to another, for the purpose of obtaining information with a view to possible future litigation, are not privileged, even though they might, under the circumstances, be required for the use of the defendant's solicitor. In order that privilege may be claimed, it must be shown on the face of the affidavit that the documents were prepared or written merely for the use of the solicitor.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 655.

See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 56, noted under sec. 131.

134. Except in the case of documents referred to in the plaintiff, written statement, or affidavit of the party against whom the application is made, or disclosed in his affidavit of documents, such application shall be founded upon an affidavit, showing (a) of what documents inspection is sought, (b) that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and (c) that they are in the possession or power of the party against whom the application is made.

Application to be founded on affidavit.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

135. If the party from whom discovery of any kind or inspection is sought objects to the same or any part thereof, and if the Court is satisfied that the right to such discovery or inspection depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that, for any other reason, it is desirable that any such issue or question should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, the Court may order that the issue or question be determined first, and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection.

Power to order issue or question on which right to discovery depends to be first determined.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The intention of sec. 135 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) is to give the Court the power of raising and determining an issue for the exclusive purpose of deciding the right to discovery of evidence which is to be used at the trial, and therefore, from the nature of the case, before the hearing of the cause. It should be a rule of practice that, when an order is made under sec. 135 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) by the Judge in chambers, the suit should be set down for the trial of the particular issue as well as of the cause itself when it comes to a hearing before the same Judge.—I. L. R., 6 Bom. 572.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract to purchase an indigo-factory, the defendant denied that the agreement relied on was final, and alleged that the plaintiff had induced him to sign the agreement by means of representations regarding the nature, the extent, the value, and the net income of the property, all of which representations the defendant charged were false and fraudulent to the knowledge of the plaintiff. The plaintiff in his affidavit of documents set out a list of title-deeds evidencing his title to, and the books of accounts and other papers and documents relating to, the property agreed to be purchased, and these he claimed to withhold from the defendant's inspection, on the ground that they were not sufficiently material at that stage of the suit. Held that the documents were not protected.—10 Cal. 808.

136. If any party fails to comply with any order under this chapter to answer interrogatories, or for discovery, production, or inspection, which has been duly served, he shall, if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of prosecution, and, if a defendant, to have his defence (if any) struck out, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not appeared and answered ; and the party interrogating, or seeking discovery, production, or inspection, may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order accordingly.

Consequences of failure to answer or give inspection.

Any party failing to comply with any order under this chapter, to answer interrogatories, or for discovery, production, or inspection, which has been served personally upon him, shall also be deemed guilty of an offence under section 188 of the Indian Penal Code.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A defendant failing to comply with an order to answer interrogatories, the Courts, under sec. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code, struck out his defence, and proceeding ex parte, passed a decree against him. Held that the decree could not be treated, in respect of the remedy by appeal, as an ex parte decree, and, therefore, under the ruling in Lal Singh v Kunjan, (I. L. R., 4 Al 387) not appealable, but that an appeal would lie from the decree.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 159.

The powers given to the Court by Act X of 1877, sec. 136, should not be exercised except in extreme cases.—5 Cal. 707 ; 5 C. L. R., 509.

Where a defendant neglects to comply with an order for production and inspection, the Court will, although in the last resort, order his defence to be struck out.—9 Cal. 923.

The High Courts in India possess the power of enforcing obedience to their orders by attachment for contempt. An order for attachment for contempt is not an order in exercise of the High Court's civil jurisdiction, and therefore does not come within the provision of sec. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code. Contempts are in the nature of offences, and therefore, under sec. 15 of the Letters Patent, 1865, an appeal lies from an order of committal for contempt. In dealing with an appeal from such an order, the Appellate Court will not go behind the order, the disobedience to which constitutes the contempt.—7 Bom. 5.

Under the authority conferred by the Charters of the Supreme Courts, and continued by their own Letters Patent, the High Courts in India possess the power of enforcing obedience to their orders by committal for contempt. As regards the High Courts in India, the remedies provided by sec. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) in cases of disobedience to an order of Court may be regarded as cumulative. They subject the offender to particular liabilities for his contumacy, but do not extinguish the Court's power of constraining him to obedience. An application may properly be made in Court to commit for contempt of an order made in Chambers.—7 Bom. 1.

See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 505 and 18 Cal. 420, noted under sec. 121 ; 14 Cal. 768, noted under sec. 131 ; 8 Al. 265, noted under sec. 129.

137. The Court may of its own accord, and may in its discretion upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either from its own records or from any other Court, the record of any other suit or proceeding, and inspect the same.

Every application made under this section shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit of the applicant or his pleader, showing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made, and that the applicant cannot, without unreasonable delay or expense, obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record, or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which, under the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, would be inadmissible in the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Held that declarations made in pleadings in suits instituted before the Code of Civil Procedure came into operation are inadmissible as evidence of the facts stated therein. Held also that a Civil Court which inspects the record of another case, under sec. 138 of Act VIII of 1859, can only use as evidence such documents as are otherwise unobjectionable, and admissible for or against either of the parties to the suit.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 361; 2nd Ed. 341.

A Court had no discretion to refuse to send records which had been sent for by another Civil Court under sec. 138 of Act VIII of 1859.—4 C. L. R., 36.

A Judge may send for and inspect any document filed with any record in his Court; and there is nothing in the Code of Procedure to prevent his basing his decision, wholly or mainly, on such document.—1 W. R., 63.

Under sec. 138 a Court was not bound to send for the whole record, but only for such papers as might be specially mentioned in the application.—W. R., 1864, 272.

A Judge was not bound, under sec. 138, Act VIII of 1859, upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, to send for the record of any other suit.—7 W. R., 109; 18 W. R., 13.

In a suit on a registered bond in which defendant asked the Court to send for the registration books, with a view to prove the non-existence of the bond at the time it purported to be certified, held that, as defendant had failed to summon the Deputy Registrar, it was not necessary for the Judge to use the discretion given in sec. 138, Act VIII of 1859.—14 W. R., 302.

A casee's book is not strictly an official record. Before a document could be inspected under the provisions of sec. 138, Code of Civil Procedure, applied to Appellate as well as Original Courts, the Court was bound to see whether it came under the description of a public record.—15 W. R., 173.

Where a specific title has been alleged but not proved, and the plaintiff endeavours to succeed in the first Court or second Court of Appeal upon title by twelve years' adverse possession, he must be prepared to show that this other title by twelve years' adverse possession was raised in the Court of first instance, with sufficient clearness to enable his adversary to understand that he claimed to succeed as well by twelve years' adverse possession as by the specific title alleged. In all cases in which parties apply for a summons to compel the attendance of witnesses, or a summons to produce documents, or apply to have a document sent for under sec. 137 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court ought not to refuse such application, merely because, in its opinion, the witnesses cannot be present, or the documents cannot be produced, before the termination of the trial.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 560.

138. The parties or their pleaders shall bring with them, and have in readiness at the first hearing of the suit, to be produced when called for by the Court, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely, and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court at any time before such hearing has ordered to be produced.

Documentary evidence to be in readiness at first hearing.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Although in custom the ghatwali tenure descended from father to son, no succession was legal or valid till confirmed by the zemindar, and reported by him to the Government authorities. Where Government has dispensed with the services of the ghatwals, the zamindar is under no obligation to continue to appoint, and may, on a vacancy occurring, settle the tenure as he pleases. Parties are required to have with them in Court, at the first hearing of the suit, all their documentary evidence, but need not file it then, unless it is called for.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 120 ; 10 W. R., 179.

By sec. 128 of Act VIII. of 1859, it was not necessary to file with the plaint all the documents that the plaintiff intended to give in evidence. A document which is to be given in evidence need not be translated previous to the hearing of the case.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 91 ; Cor. 151.

This section applies to documents which have been produced at the filing of the plaint but not filed, and in this way is not incompatible with sec. 39.—1 Hyde's Rep., 145.

Documents produced in Court under sec. 128, Act VIII. of 1859, become, upon and by reason of their production, exhibits in the case.—8. W. R., 91.

Under sec. 128, Act VIII. of 1859, the parties, though not entitled as of right to adduce fresh documentary evidence after the issues in the case are settled, may yet tender such evidence, stating the grounds upon which it was not tendered at an earlier stage ; and the Judge may receive or reject such evidence, but the grounds on which he acts should be stated on the record.—9 W. R., 294.

The main object of sec. 128 was to prevent parties from manufacturing evidence pending the trial to meet unexpected exigencies, and not to shut out true, good, and valuable evidence, merely because the party had, without good and assignable cause, abstained from bringing it before the Court at the first hearing.—23 W. R., 29.

139. No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party, which should have been, but has not been, produced in accordance with the requirements of section 138, shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, unless good cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production there-of. And the Judge receiving any such evidence shall record his reasons for so doing.

Effect of non-production of documents.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial S. C. Courts.

Certain documents having been allowed by the District Munsif to be filed by the plaintiff during the trial of a suit, the District Judge, on appeal, held that he was bound to strike them off the file, on the ground that they were not filed with the plaint nor entered in any list annexed to the plaint, and because the Munsif had not recorded any reason for admitting them:—Held that, as the documents had been admitted in evidence by the Lower Court, the appellate Court was bound to consider them.—I.L.R., 8 Madr. 373.

140. The Court shall receive the documents respectively produced by the parties at the first hearing, provided that the documents produced by each party be accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court may, from time to time, direct.

Documents to be received by Court.

The Court may, at any stage of the suit, reject any document which it considers irrelevant or inadmissible, recording the grounds of such rejection.

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible documents.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Court cannot be said to have received documents as admissible in evidence when for want of time to inspect and consider them, it orders them to be filed; nor would it be wrong in law in rejecting or returning them after proper inspection; the object of sec. 129, Act VIII. of 1859, being that papers should be produced in a regular manner, and inspected by a Court at its convenience.—11 W. R., 350.

Attention drawn to the neglected provision of the Code of Civil procedure, 1859 (sec. 129), which prohibits Courts from receiving on the record of a case, without restriction and without discrimination, documents which are either irrelevant or inadmissible.—11 W. R., 576.

The High Court refused to interfere under sec. 15 of the Charter Act to set aside an order rejecting a document, made by a Court under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 129, an appeal from such order being barred by sec. 363.—18 W. R., 511.

141. (1) Subject to the provisions of the next following sub-section, there shall be endorsed on every document which has been admitted in evidence in the suit the following particulars, namely :—

- (a) the number and title of the suit,
 - (b) the name of the person producing the document,
 - (c) the date on which it was produced, and
 - (d) a statement of its having been so admitted,
- and the endorsement shall be signed by the Judge.

(2) If a document so admitted is an entry in a book, account, or record, and a copy thereof has been substituted for the original under the next following section, the particulars aforesaid shall be endorsed on the copy, and the endorsement thereon shall be signed by the Judge.*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Exhibits produced in Court ought to be endorsed with the name of the person who produces them as required by sec. 132 of Act VIII. of 1859 —6 W. R., 1.

A suit for possession by right of inheritance was brought by a claimant, alleging himself to be the heir, against the alleged adopted son of the last male owner, denying that an adoption purporting to be made by the widow had been duly authorized by the deceased. The Court of first instance called upon the defendant to prove his title as a son by adoption, notwithstanding that the plaintiff was out of possession, and could not have succeeded, in the event of the defendant's failure to prove it, without first proving his own title as collateral heir by descent: thus, in effect, proposing to make the establishment of the plaintiff's title depend upon the failure or success of the defendant in proving the adoption. The High Court pointed out the error of this proceeding, and the Judicial Committee affirmed its judgment, concurring also in its finding that the adoption had been proved. It was found also that the loss of the anumati-patra had been established; so that secondary evidence of it was receivable.—I L. R., 18 Cal 201.

(1) If a document admitted in evidence in the suit count in current use, the party on whose behalf the account is produced may furnish a copy of the entry.

(2) If such a document is an entry in a public record produced from a public office or by a public officer, or an entry in a book or account belonging to a person other than a party

*Secs. 141, 141A, 142, and 142A, have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VIII. of 1888), sec. 13, for secs. 141 and 142 as originally enacted.

on whose behalf the book or account is produced, the Court may require a copy of the entry to be furnished—

(i) where the record, book, or account, is produced on behalf of a party, then by that party, or

(ii) where the record, book, or account, is produced in obedience to an order of the Court acting of its own motion, then by either of any party.

(3) When a copy of an entry is furnished under the foregoing provisions of this section, the Court shall, after causing the copy to be examined, compared, and attested in manner mentioned in section 62, mark the entry, and cause the book, account, or record in which it occurs to be returned to the person producing it.*

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

142. When a document relied on as evidence by either party is considered by the Court to be inadmissible in evidence, there shall be endorsed thereon the particulars mentioned in clauses (a), (b), and (c) of section 141, sub-section (1), and a statement of its having been rejected, and the endorsement shall be signed by the Judge.*

Endorsements of documents rejected as inadmissible in evidence.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 18 Cal. 201, noted under sec. 141.

142A. (1) Every document which has been admitted in evidence, or a copy thereof where a copy has been substituted for the original under section 141A, shall form part of the record of the suit.

Recording of admitted and return of rejected documents.

(2) Documents not admitted in evidence shall not form part of the record, and shall be returned to the parties respectively producing them.*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a document tendered in evidence in a Court of first instance was rejected as inadmissible, but was nevertheless allowed to remain on the record of the case,—Held that the mere fact of the document remaining on the record did not make it evidence in the appellate Court, but it must be tendered as evidence in the appellate Court and accepted thereby.—I. L. R., 14 Al. 356.

* Secs. 141, 141A, 142, and 142A, have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 13, for secs. 141 and 142 as originally enacted.

ring the matter to the lower Court for enquiry "to ascertain the amount of maintenance which might appear to be justly and properly payable with reference to the means of the defendants and the other facts of the case, and to proceed to decision in the manner indicated in sec. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code," was equivalent to a direction of issues, and rendered any further issues unnecessary.—2 B. L. R., (P. C.) 72; 11 W. R., (P. C.) 33; 12 Moore's I. A. 495.

Where a plaintiff fails to show that a mortgage created by certain persons as executrix and executors of a Hindu will has been validly created by them in that capacity, the Court will, unless it is manifestly inequitable to do so, allow him to raise an issue that the mortgage was validly created by the parties in another character. Held per MARKBY, J., that the executors of the will of a Hindu cannot, by virtue only of their character of executors, mortgage the estate of the testator, in the absence of any power, express or implied, contained in the will. Held, on appeal, a creditor who purchases under an execution against the general assets of a testator's estate takes subject to a mortgage created in pursuance of a power contained in the will; and in a suit to foreclose, the purchaser is rightly made a party. Though the payment of debts is a charge on the property of a testator, it is not a charge on any specific portion of that property.—3 B. L. R., (O. C.) 7; 11 W. R., (O. C.) 21.

The children of fornication or adultery (wahiduzzina) have no nasab or consanguinity; hence, the right of inheritance being founded on nasab, one illegitimate brother cannot succeed to the estate of another. A man cannot acknowledge a brother, so as to establish the nasab.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 103; 12 W. R., 512.

The plaintiff sued for declaration of her title to property, of which the defendant was in possession, but of which she produced the title deeds in favour of herself. Held the onus was on the defendant to disprove the plaintiff's title. On the evidence, the defendant wished to raise issues as to the unchastity and inability of the plaintiff to succeed, and as to her suing on behalf of another person, not having alleged that she was doing so, neither of which matters were referred to in his written statement; but leave to raise them was refused, and the Court held that the plaintiff was, under the circumstances of the case, entitled to rely on the title given her by the production of the title-deeds in her favour.—6 B. L. R., 144.

Where, on an appeal, the Council for the appellant admitted he could not succeed on the merits as the evidence stood on the record, and their Lordships were of opinion that substantial justice had been done, the mere omission to settle issues by the Court of first instance, which was not made a ground of appeal to the first Court of Appeal, but was noticed and commented on by that Court, was held not to constitute a fatal mis-trial of the cause so as to render a new trial necessary.—6 B. L. R., 148; 15 W. R., (P. C.) 15; 13 Moore's I. A. 573; 22 W. R., 448.

A second adoption cannot take place in the lifetime of the first adopted son. Where the son of the son first adopted sued as heir of the second adopted son to obtain the property left by him, and the suit throughout was contested with respect to his claim as heir of that second adopted, held that the plaintiff could not, on appeal, shift his ground and regard the second adopted son as a trespasser, and seek to recover the property on the ground of its having belonged to the ancestor.—11 B. L. R., (P. C.) 391; 19 W. R., 12; L. R., I. A., Sup., Vol. 131.

In a suit for division of a village between members of the same family, the defendant alleged that a former division relied upon by the plaintiff was merely nominal and never intended to be carried out, and also that the village was in 1836 granted to his father for his sole use, and both these allegations were found against defendant, who appealed, on the ground that the village, which is an inam, was granted to defendant, for his sole use in 1857, on the death of his father. Held that the grant to defendant was not a new grant, and was subject to the rights of the other members of the family. Per INNES, J.—The defendant not having been prejudiced by the circumstance that no issue was framed upon the question whether a fresh grant was made to the defendants, the decision of the lower Court ought to be confirmed.—2 M. H. C. R., 470.

The plaintiffs, the cultivators of certain lands yielding rent to a pagoda of which 1st defendant is the recently appointed dharmakarta, claimed to be declared proprietors of the said lands; to be exempted from the payment of rent at the rate of two-thirds of the gross produce; to be declared liable to pay a certain lower rent set forth in the plaint; and to obtain a refund of the amount paid under an order of the Sub-Collector in 1863, passed without jurisdiction, in excess of the rent justly payable. The issue given by the Principal Sadar Amin was "whether the 1st defendant is entitled to rent at the rate specified in document A." Held that this issue was in too general terms, and only embraced a part of the matter in dispute; and the issue "what is a fair and reasonable rate of rent" directed to be sent down to the lower Court.—3 M. H. C. R., 25.

The issues should raise matters fairly in controversy between the parties, even though the pleadings may be defectively drawn. The effect of the istemrar sanad is to ascertain, and limit, the demand of the Government for revenue, and to recognize and confirm, subject to this, the proprietary rights already in existence. Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga (9 Moore's L. A. 539) distinguished.—8 M. H. C. R., 114.

Plaintiffs contracted with defendants to sell them two numbered shares on payment of the price by defendants on or before 1st July 1865. Plaintiffs were in possession of the shares at the time of the contract, and continued so until they sold them after default made by the defendants; and they were registered as holders of the shares on the 1st July, when the share certificates, with transfer-deeds in blank, were tendered to defendants, who refused to accept them, or to pay the purchase-money. On the issue whether plaintiffs were ready and willing to perform the contract on their part, held that the acts necessary to be done on 1st July were concurrent; and that plaintiffs being able and willing on that day to make a valid transfer, if defendants had been ready to pay the price, plaintiffs were not bound to take any further step until the purchase-money was paid by defendants. There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure which imposes upon the Judge the duty of allowing an issue to be raised on a point of law which he considers to be perfectly clear.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 272; 2nd Ed. 258.

It may be laid down as a general rule that only such averments should be made the subject of issues as are essential to support the cause of action and are denied by the defendant, or as are essential to support a plea and are denied by the plaintiff. Mere pieces of evidence which are to be adduced to enable the Court to infer the truth of a material averment ought not to be made the subject of separate issues.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 303.

A plaintiff may have been actuated by ill-will in instituting a suit, and may have done so out of pique; but if he establish that he had a cause of action, his motive in bringing the suit will not be an answer to it, although where the evidence in support of his case is doubtful, the Court, in weighing that evidence, may properly take into consideration the motives imputed to the plaintiff as having induced him to sue.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 303.

Held that the Court was not, on its own motion, competent to determine a question which was not alleged, nor raised by the pleadings of the parties. But if the question was raised even on the day of the hearing of the case at any time before the decision of the case, the Court ought not to have rejected it, because it was not raised by the written statement; but ought to have framed issues to determine the question.—3 Agra H. C. R., 246.

In a suit raising issues of fact it did not appear from the record transmitted from India that the Judge of the Zillah Court had, in conformity with the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII. of 1859), secs. 139, 141, settled or recorded the issues in the suit, although he allowed evidence in the cause to be taken. In such circumstances the Judicial Committee postponed the hearing of the appeal until a certified copy of the proceedings in the cause should be transmitted, and in the alternative, of no such issues being settled, set aside the decree of the Sudder Court at Agra, with directions to that Court to remand the suit to the lower Court to be tried upon issues to be settled and recorded in conformity with the provisions of Act VIII. of 1859.—11 Moore's I. A., 25.

All that can be done under sec. 139, Act VIII. of 1859, must be done at the settlement of issues; sec. 141 gave the Court discretion to amend or add issues only if some new matter should turn up in the course of the case.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 308.

Under sec. 139 of Act VIII. of 1859, the issues were to be framed upon the plaint, written statements, and allegations of the parties or their council.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 333.

If by inadvertence or other cause the recorded issues do not enable the Court to try the whole case on the merits, an opportunity should be afforded by amendment, and, if need be, by adjournment for the decision of the real points in issue.—6 Moore's I. A. 393; 18 W.R., 81 note; 18 W.R., 297.

The question of a prescriptive right of occupancy cannot arise as an issue in a case where a tenant sues to recover possession of land from which he alleges he has been illegally ejected. The tenant might have been in lawful possession only six weeks, and yet his eviction might have been illegal, and he would be entitled to recover.—7 W. R., 27.

A Court cannot refuse to enquire into a plea set up by a plaintiff's pleaders in reply to questions put them by the Court, although such plea was not advanced in the original plaint. Sec. 139, Code of Civil Procedure, authorised a Court to frame issues on allegations collected from the oral examination of parties or their pleaders, notwithstanding discrepancy between these allegations and the written pleadings.—8 W. R., 354.

If the parties do not secure the attendance of their witnesses at the first hearing, and there are, on the examination of parties, issues upon which evidence is necessary, the Court is bound to fix a day for the hearing of such evidence.—9 W. R., 246.

In a suit for a kabuliat of twenty-five parcels of land, where the defendant alleged that he only held three, and that he was not the tenant of the plaintiff, but of a third party who intervened claiming the land as included in his half share of a part of a talook as being the person in receipt of the rents, the lower Appellate Court declared that, as neither party had given any conclusive evidence of actual possession, and as the ryot's holding had been found to appertain to the half share of which the intervenor had proved possession, the plaintiff was entitled to a kabuliat for a moiety of the plots held by the defendant, held that the ryot was entitled to be heard whether he paid the rents to the plaintiff, and whether he was bound to give the kabuliat asked for, and plaintiff was entitled to be heard whether the ryot held three parcels or twenty-five.—11 W. R., 366.

The mortgage of certain property having been purchased by S, he sold it to G, who foreclosed, got a decree for possession, and sold to W. W's intervention having failed in a suit for arrears of rent by a party setting up a title intermediate between him and the ryot, on the ground of a miras pottah obtained from the mortgagor subsequently to the mortgage, he (W) sued to have his right declared to the rents payable by that ryot. The suit was dismissed on certain issues in the Court of first instance, but decreed in appeal on the single issue as to the pottah, having been granted subsequent to the conditional sale. Held that this issue arose legitimately, and was one within the lower Appellate Courts discretion to allow and within its jurisdiction to determine.—12 W. R., 19.

In a suit by a lessee to recover a sum on account of dispossession on the allegation that his lessors had fraudulently given a second lease to another party, and that with the exception of a specified sum collected by himself the remaining collections for the year had been made by the lessors, and that he was entitled to recover those collections, held that, with reference to the footing on which the plaintiff sued, it was not for the Judge to assess damages, but to find on the allegation that the lessors had collected the year's rents with the exception of a given sum.—12 W. R., 198.

It is not the written statements of parties, but the issues framed under the Code of Civil Procedure, which ought to be the index of what has been and has to be adjudicated.—12 W. R., 229.

Where certain zemindars sued to recover khas possession of certain shares of land, alleging that defendants were wrongfully in possession, it was held that, though bound to prove their right to khas possession, yet, whether they proved themselves to have been recently in khas possession or not, they had a right to a decision as to the alleged wrongful possession of the defendants.—12 W. R., 365.

When the plaintiff claimed pre-emption on one ground, and the Court raised an issue as to his right on another ground, to which the parties assented, and the case was decided against him, as he had not proved his right on that ground, held that the Court would not interfere with the finding on special appeal —13 W. R., 205 ; 13 W. R., 189.

In a suit by putnidars for rent where the defendants plead a lakhiraj title set up long before the plaintiffs acquired their putni, the issue to be tried is, not whether the lakhiraj title is valid or not, but whether plaintiffs have at any time received rent for the lands in dispute.—14 W. R., 149.

Where a Court shortly before decision recorded a proceeding declaring its intention to frame additional issues, and reserved the actual framing of the issues for the time of giving judgment, its procedure was held not to be warranted by sec. 141 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—15 W. R., 151.

Issues are to be fixed under sec. 139, Code of Civil Procedure, when both parties appear and the Court can ascertain from them what are the points upon which they are at issue. The Court is not bound to fix any issue when the defendant does not appear, but ought to proceed under sec. 111 to hear the case ex parte.—15 W. R., 145.

In a suit for possession of a piece of land, where defendant pleads limitation, and his witness unexpectedly discloses that his possession is that of a mortgagee, held that it was impossible for the Court to over look that testimony, and that it was its duty to frame an issue, find expressly on the fact of the mortgage, and provide for the rights of the mortgagee; for if the mortgage was found to subsist in defendant, the plaintiff could not in this case recover a decree for possession but should be referred to a suit properly framed for redemption.—16 W. R., 44.

In a suit to have the portion of a bund cut by the defendant closed up, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from so cutting the bund in future as to injure the plaintiff, held that it was material to try the question whether the plaintiff had a cause of action and also the question as to the property in the bund, because, if the bund belonged exclusively to the plaintiff, the defendant, unless he could prove a right of user, was a trespasser, and on the other hand, if it belonged exclusively to the defendant, it would be necessary to enquire whether the defendant had so used his own property as to injure the property of his neighbour.—17 W. R., 359.

Where a quite new and different issue is raised in the Appellate Court, it ought to be done in such a way as to give the parties the fullest opportunity of producing evidence upon it, because if it is at all likely that, in consequence of the issues framed in the first Court, the parties were induced to abstain from giving evidence, it would not be right to decide the issues against them on account of the absence of evidence.—17 W. R., 361. See 11 W. R., 61.

In a suit to recover possession of certain premises, on the allegation that defendant had sold them to plaintiff's husband nearly twelve years previously, defendant denied the execution of the deed on which plaintiff relied. The first Court was satisfied as to the fact of execution; but perceiving that possession had not followed, had some doubt as to the nature of the transaction, and examined a witness thereon. The result was that the transaction was found to be not an absolute sale, but a mortgage. As this fact, however, had been neither pleaded nor relied upon, the Munsif gave plaintiff a decree. The lower Appellate Court, finding that the preliminary foreclosure proceedings had not been taken by the plaintiff, reversed the decision. Held that it was incumbent on the Court of first instance, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 141, to frame an issue as to the nature of the transaction, and that the suit was properly dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, because plaintiff had not foreclosed the mortgage.—19 W. R., 333.

A suit to recover possession of land in the wrongful possession of the defendant having been decreed by the first Court, the decision was reversed by the lower Appellate Court, because it did not appear that there had been any demand of possession. Held that, before deciding the case in this way, the lower Appellate Court ought to have framed an issue as to whether there had been a demand of possession.—20 W. R., 401.

In a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates, where it is found that a single notice has been issued, although there are two holdings at two rents, the Court should frame an issue which will allow the plaintiffs and the defendant, if they wish it, to give evidence—the former to show that the two holdings are now held at one consolidated rent, and it may be enhanced as of one holding—and the latter that he is entitled to have the enhancement made in such a way that he may give up one and retain the other.—20 W. R., 442.

Parties are not bound by an opinion of the lower Court on a matter not in issue in the same manner as if the Judge had decided an issue formally and properly raised before him; and when a case comes before the High Court on appeal, it should be determined upon the issues and grounds raised in the Court below, except where, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 354, the Court would consider it right to frame an additional issue.—21 W. R., 59.

A defendant is not precluded from setting up a defence which does not appear in her written statement where the plaint does not set forth the true facts, and the Court will allow an issue to be raised on it.—21 W. R., 407; 23 W. R., 172.

It is competent to a Judge to determine a case on the day when the issues are settled, if he is satisfied that the evidence then before him is decisive of the matter in dispute, unless one of the parties makes a distinct objection to the Judge proceeding to a decision, and asks for an opportunity to produce evidence in support of his case.—22 W. R., 426.

In a suit by a person claiming as the ultimate heir in reversion to the estate of a deceased widow, it was held that the plaintiff was bound, before he could be allowed to succeed against the minor in possession, to pledge himself to a specific case and to prove that case, and the lower Court was held to have done wrong in raising an issue which was not based and moulded upon some specific affirmative allegation made as part of the plaintiff's case, thus putting the minor to the peril of such an issue merely on a general negative statement made by his guardian.—22 W. R., 469.

Where the lower Court had omitted to frame proper issues, the High Court refused to send the case back with a view to this being done, because the parties had not been prejudiced at all by the omission, both of them having adduced evidence upon all the questions upon which they were at difference.—24 W. R., 275.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 840, noted under sec. 112.

Allegations from which issues may be framed.

147. The Court may frame the issues from all or any of the following materials :—

(a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties or persons ;

(b) allegations made in the plaint or in the written statements (if any) tendered in the suit, or in answer to interrogatories delivered in the suit ;

(c) the contents of documents produced by either party.

Note.

A Court, in framing issues, is not bound down to the language of the plaint and written statement; but may frame them not only from the pleadings, but also from the statements of the parties and their pleaders made before the Court.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 407.

148. If the Court be of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court, or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, to be fixed by the Court, and may (subject to the rules contained in the Indian Evidence Act) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose hands it may be, by summons or other process.

149. The Court may, at any time before passing a decree, amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed.

The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree, strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced.

Notes.

A Court is not authorized by sec. 149 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) to frame new issues which have the effect of altering the nature of the suit. A Court's power of raising additional issues is co-extensive with its power of amending pleadings, and is subject to the same restrictions. The plaintiff originally sued the defendant as a trespasser, claiming damages for wrongful occupation and for injury done to the land in dispute. Sometime after the issues had been framed, the plaintiff applied for an amendment of the plaint, and sought to recover rent for the land in suit, on the basis of a subsisting tenancy. The Subordinate Judge, without making the amendment, framed two additional issues, viz, (1) whether the suit was based on the relation of landlord and tenant, and (2) whether the thikans in dispute were let to the defendant, and what rent the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of the same. The Subordinate Judge found on these issues that the tenancy was still subsisting, and passed a decree for the rent claimed. Held that the Subordinate Judge had no authority, under sec. 149 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to frame the new issues.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 664.

A Judge is not bound to make any amendment in the issues of a case, except for the purpose of more effectually putting in issue and trying the real question or questions in controversy as disclosed by the pleadings on either side. Bizjie Bebee v. Manohar Doss (2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 118), Wilkin v. Reed (15 C. B., 192), Lucas v. Tarleton (3 H. and N. 116), followed. Where no injustice would be done to either party, the Courts, in the exercise of their discretion, under special circumstances, may allow issues to be raised upon matter which does not strictly come within the proper scope of the pleadings. The power to allow such amendments is given by the first of sec. 149 of Act X of 1877, corresponding with the first part of sec. of Act VIII of 1859.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 64.

150. When the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question of fact or of law to be decided between them, they may state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing—

Questions of fact or law may by agreement be stated in form of issue.

(a) that upon the finding of the Court in the affirmative or the negative of such issue, a sum of money specified in the agreement, or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them; or that one of them be declared entitled to some right or subject to some liability specified in the agreement;

(b) that upon such finding some property specified in the agreement and in dispute in the suit shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or as that other may direct; or

(c) that upon such finding one or more of the parties shall do or abstain from doing some particular act, specified in the agreement, and relating to the matter in dispute.

Court, if satisfied that agreement was executed in good faith, may pronounce judgment.

151. If the Court be satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper,—

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,
(b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and

(c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it may proceed to record and try the issue, and state its finding or opinion thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and may, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and, upon the judgment so given, decree shall follow, and may be executed in the same way as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPOSAL OF THE SUIT AT THE FIRST HEARING.

152. If, at the first hearing of a suit, it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment.

If parties not at issue on any question of law or fact.

153. Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant, and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants.

154. When the parties are at issue on some question of law or of fact, and issues have been framed by the Court as hereinbefore provided, if the Court be satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once supply is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit, and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues ; and, if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit :

Provided that, where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present, and none of them object.

If the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument, as the case requires.

Notes.

When a day is fixed for the settlement of issues in a case, the Court ought not to proceed to dispose finally of the case except with reference to the specific circumstances detailed in sec. 145, Act VIII of 1859.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 97 ; Ed. 1873, 147.

When the issues are framed and the plaintiff and defendant are ready and willing to proceed, the Sitting Judge has power under sec. 145 to proceed to the hearing and final disposal of the case.—1 Ind. Jur., O.S., 14.

Although a case may have been set down for final disposal, if it be a case in which further evidence is required, the Judge is bound, under sec. 145, Act VIII of 1859, to adjourn the case, unless he is satisfied that the plaintiff has, without sufficient cause, failed to produce his evidence.—7 W. R., 84.

155. If the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit, and either party fails, without sufficient cause, to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues under section 146, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary to its decision upon such issues.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF ADJOURNMENTS.

156. The Court may, if sufficient cause be shown, at any stage of the suit, grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may, from time to time, adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Court may grant time, and adjourn hearing.

In all such cases the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Costs of adjournment.

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing to be necessary for reasons to be recorded by the Judge with his own hands.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Without defining what is the right mode of exercising the discretion vested in the Judge with regard to adjournments, the High Court held that the Judge ought, under sec. 146 of the Code, to have granted an adjournment in this case when it was applied for, on the first day after the Judge's return to the district that the applicant really had an opportunity of appearing before the Judge, in order to enable the applicant to file his documents and produce his witnesses; sec. 147, Act VIII of 1859, not applying to a case where no day has been fixed for the hearing of the case.—18 W. R., 325.

Where defendant had known for some time previously that his case was coming on and what evidence was necessary, a medical certificate, to the effect that he was confined to his bed by lumbago, was held to be no sufficient ground for adjournment.—24 W. R., 202.

A Court ought not to adjourn a case for the production of a document, much less (when it does so) to allow witnesses and several of the parties who were interested in the result, and who had been previously examined, to be recalled and to add to and vary the evidence which they had previously given, in order to prove a case which they had not set up.—(P. C.) 3 P. C. R., 304; 26 W. R., 55; L. R., 3 I. A. 259.

157. If, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Chapter VII., or make such other order as it thinks fit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 10 Madr. 270, noted under sec. 98.

158. If any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance, of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, &c.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When a case is remanded by an Appellate Court for trial under sec. 148, Act VIII of 1859, the Court of first instance has no authority to receive new evidence, nor the lower Appellate Court to decide thereupon.—3 B. L. R., App. 91 ; S. C. 12 W. R., 23.

The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November, when issues were settled, and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd of January the plaintiff changed her vakil, and applied by the new vakil for a summons for a witness, and on the 23rd, the new vakil stating that owing to the absence of his witnesses he was not prepared to go on with the case, the Judge dismissed the suit. Held that, under sec. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit.—4 M. H. C. R., 56.

The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 10th July 1867. Neither of the parties nor their vakils appeared. Thereupon the Court dismissed the suit under sec. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, but afterwards, upon the application of the plaintiff's vakil, restored it to the file for hearing under sec. 119. Plaintiff obtained further adjournments to produce witnesses, the last being an adjournment to the 28th September. On that day the vakils of both parties appeared, but no witnesses, and the Court again dismissed the suit under sec. 148 for failure to produce witnesses. On the 22nd of October the suit was again, under sec. 119, restored to the file on the application of the plaintiff's vakil, and a decision was afterwards come to, for the plaintiff, upon the merits. On appeal the last-mentioned decree was reversed, and the decree passed under sec. 148 (whether the first or second decree was not specified) upheld, upon the ground that, as sec. 119 was inapplicable to a decree passed under sec. 148, the Court of first instance had acted without jurisdiction in restoring the suit to the file. Held on special appeal, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the first decree of dismissal, being a decree which might have been made under sec. 147, was one to which sec. 119 might be applied ; that the second decree of dismissal was one to which sec. 148 alone applied, consequently one subject only to review or to an appeal, and the proceeding had in October 1867, being substantially an application for review, was one which the Court had power to grant.—6 M. H. C. R., 262.

The Court of first instance refused to grant plaintiff's application to be allowed to examine 2nd defendant as a witness on her behalf, thinking the grounds of such application insufficient for the exercise of its discretion under sec. 162 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the adjourned date of hearing, plaintiff failed to produce any other witness, and the suit was dismissed under sec. 148. On regular appeal, the Civil Judge considered that the Court of first instance ought not to have refused plaintiff's application; but held that the refusal was a final order not open to question in appeal. On special appeal, held that the Civil Judge was wrong on the latter point. That if the plaintiff had been prevented from examining the 2nd defendant on insufficient grounds, she had not committed default under sec. 148; that the decree on the finding of the Civil Court was not maintainable without enabling plaintiff to examine 2nd defendant; and that that finding was conclusive in the special appeal. The decrees of both the lower Courts were consequently set aside, and the case remanded.—6 M. H. C. R., 299.

The plaintiff, upon whose application the Court of first instance adjourned the hearing of the suit, failed to cause the attendance of his witnesses on the day fixed for the further hearing, and the Court of first instance threw out the suit, stating that it did so under sec. 110, Act VIII of 1859. Both parties to the suit were represented on that day by their pleaders. The Court of first instance subsequently entertained and rejected an application under sec. 119 for a rehearing. The lower Appellate Court admitted and allowed an appeal against the order of the Court of first instance. Both the orders of the lower Courts were reversed, it being held that the Court of first instance must be regarded as having acted under sec. 148 of the Code.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 77.

The terms of sec. 148, Act VIII of 1859, do not prevent an Appellate Court, on good and sufficient cause shown, from remanding a case disposed of thereunder, in order that justice may be done between the parties.—13 W. R., 464.

When adjournments are made by a Court, in order to give effect to its processes for compelling the attendance of the witnesses being thus made as much on its own motion at the instance of the defendant as at the instance of the plaintiff, the case cannot be said to come under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 148, which contemplates a case where a party has obtained time to produce his witnesses and has failed to do so.—19 W. R., 34.

The Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the dismissal of a suit on refusal or failure of a party to deposit the amount ordered by the Court as remuneration to a Commissioner appointed under sec. 394 to examine accounts. The remuneration of a Commissioner appointed by the Court to examine accounts should, as a rule, be a definite amount, and not at a monthly allowance.—I. L. R., 3 Madr. 259.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 41, noted under sec. 103; 10 Madr. 270, noted under sec. 98; 13 Madr. 510, noted under sec. 13.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF THE SUMMONING AND ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

159. The parties may, after the summons has been delivered "or sent"* for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit, obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, before the day fixed for such settlement or disposal, as the case may be, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The 20th of March 1877 having been fixed for the final hearing of a suit, the plaintiff on the 17th of March, and defendant on the 19th, filed their lists of witnesses to be summoned. Both lists were ordered merely to be put up with the record. When the suit came on for hearing, it was dismissed on the ground that, when the plaintiff filed his list, there was not sufficient time left to summon the witnesses. Held that the Judge was not justified in dismissing the suit on this ground, unless he found that it would have been absolutely impossible to secure the attendance of the witnesses, had the summonses been granted on the 17th instant. Sec. 149 of Act VIII of 1859, and sec. 159 of Act X of 1877, discussed.—9 C. L. R., 569.

Under sec. 159 parties are entitled to summonses for their witnesses at any time before the final hearing ; but if there has been delay and want of diligence in consequence of which witnesses, not having been served in good time, are not present, the Court may properly refuse to adjourn the hearing.—I. L. R., 9 Bom. 308.

Under sec. 159 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV) of 1882, a party to a suit is entitled, as of right, to obtain summonses for his witnesses any time before the day fixed for the disposal of the suit.—15 Bom. 86.

160. The party applying for a summons shall, before the summons is granted, and within a period to be fixed by the Court, pay into Court such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the person summoned, in passing to and from the Court in which he is required to attend, and for one day's attendance.

If the Court be subordinate to a High Court, regard shall be had, in fixing the scale of such expenses, to the rules (if any) laid down by competent authority.

Scale of expenses.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under sec. 151, Act VIII of 1859 (extended to Revenue Courts by sec. 67, Act X of 1859), the defendant was not bound to pay into Court the costs of summoning and defraying the expenses of the witnesses, until the Court had fixed what was reasonable.—9 W. R., 128.

An order was made directing the realization (under sec. 151, Civil Procedure Code, 1859) by attachment and sale of the expenses of a witness after he was discharged without being required to give evidence. A miscellaneous appeal having been filed from the order, the High Court issued a rule to show cause why the appeal should not be allowed. On no cause being shown, the appeal was filed.—12 W. R., 430.

161. The sum so paid into Court shall be tendered to the person summoned, at the time of serving the summons, if it can be served personally.

Tender of expenses to witness.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

162. If it appear to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf that the sum paid into Court is not sufficient to cover such expenses, the Court may direct such further sum to be paid to the person summoned as appears to be necessary on that account, and, in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party obtaining the summons ; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence, or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid.

Procedure where insufficient sum paid in.

If it be necessary to detain the person summoned for a longer period than one day, the Court may, from time to time, order the party at whose instance he was summoned to pay into Court such sum as is sufficient to defray the expenses of his detention for such further period, and, in default of such deposit being made, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party at whose instance he was summoned ; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence, or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid.

Expenses if witness detained more than one day.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

163. Every summons for the attendance of a person to give evidence or produce a document shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also whether his attendance is required for the purpose of giving evidence or to produce a document, or for both purposes ; and any particular document which the person summoned is called on to produce shall be described in the summons with reasonable accuracy.

Time, place, and purpose of attendance to be specified in summons.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

164. Any person may be summoned to produce a document, without being summoned to give evidence ; and any person summoned merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the summons, if he cause such document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

165. Any person present in Court may be required by the Court to give evidence or to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or power.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

166. Every summons to a person to give evidence or produce a document shall be served as nearly as may be in manner hereinbefore prescribed for the service of summons on the defendant; and the rules contained in Chapter VI. as to proof of service shall apply in the case of all summonses served under this section.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

168. If the serving-officer certify to the Court that the summons for the attendance of a person, either to give evidence or to produce a document, cannot be served, the Court “shall, if the certificate of the serving-officer has not been verified by affidavit, and may if it has been so verified, examine the serving-officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court,”* touching the non-service; and upon being satisfied that such evidence or production is material, and that the person for whose attendance the summons has been issued is absconding or keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service of the summons, may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence, or produce the document, at a time and place to be named therein; and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door of the house in which he ordinarily resides.

If he does not attend at the time and place named in such proclamation, the Court may, in its discretion, at the instance of the party on whose application the summons was issued, make an order for the attachment of the property of the person whose attendance is required, to such amount as the Court thinks fit, not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of the fine which may be imposed under Section 170 :

Provided that no Court of Small Causes shall make an order for the attachment of immoveable property.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 159, Code of Civil Procedure, gives a Civil Court a discretion as to the issue of proclamation and subsequent orders for attachment ; but such Court is bound to exercise a reasonable discretion.—8 W. R., 505.

The proclamation issuable under sec. 159, Act VIII of 1859, could not be legally affixed to the mal cutcherry of a defaulting witness. Before the provisions of that section can come into play, personal service of summons must be attempted. In the absence of process of legal service, the magistrate's order of imprisonment for contempt, under sec. 174 of the Penal Code, and sec. 168 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, was quashed.—7 W. R., Cr. 58.

On application being made under secs. 159 and 168 of Act VIII of 1859 for issue of process against an absconding witness, the Court, if satisfied (as it was bound to be) that the witness had absconded, and that he was a material witness, ought to grant the application, unless the applicant had placed himself in such a position by his conduct that it would be inequitable to grant it.—1 W. R., 26.

A Court was not authorized to issue the proclamation and attachment mentioned in sec. 159, Code of Civil Procedure, unless it was proved to its satisfaction that the evidence of the witness was material, and that he was avoiding the summons ; and, after these circumstances have been shown, it was a matter of discretion to issue the proclamation and attachment, and after issue to let the case stand over.—13 W. R., 416.

Where an application was made at a very late stage of a case to enforce the provisions of sec. 159 of the Code of Civil Procedure, without proffer of any proof that the witness was absconding or keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service of the summons, the lower Appellate Court was held to have been justified in not postponing the case to secure the attendance of the witness, although material.—15 W. R., 176.

169. If, on the attachment of his property, such person appears, and satisfies the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of the summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein, the Court shall direct that the property be released from attachment, and shall make such order as to the costs of the attachment as it thinks fit.

If witness appears, attachment may be withdrawn.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

170. If such person does not appear, or, appearing, fails to satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of the summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein, the Court may impose upon him such fine, not exceeding five hundred rupees, as the Court thinks fit, having regard to his condition in life and all the circumstances of the case, and may order the property attached, or any part thereof, to be sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs incurred in consequence of such attachment, together with the amount of the said fine (if any):

Provided that, if the person whose attendance is required pays into Court the costs and fine as aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

171. Subject to the rules of this Code as to attendance and appearance, and to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, if the Court at any time thinks it necessary to examine any person other than a party to the suit, and not named as a witness by a party to the suit, the court may, of its own motion, cause such person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence, or to produce any document in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine him as a witness, or require him to produce such document.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

172. Subject as last aforesaid, whoever is summoned to appear and give evidence in a suit must attend at the time and place named in the summons for that purpose, and whoever is summoned to produce a document must either attend to produce it, or cause it to be produced, at such time and place.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

173. No person so summoned and attending shall depart unless and until (a) he has been examined or has produced the document and the Court has risen, or (b) he has obtained the Court's leave to depart.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

document has been served fails to comply with the summons, or if any person so summoned, and attending departs in contravention of Section 173, the Court may order him to be arrested and brought before the Court :

Provided that no such order shall be made when the Court has reason to believe that the person so failing had a lawful excuse for such failure.

When any person so brought before the Court fails to satisfy it that he had a lawful excuse for not complying with the summons, the Court may sentence him to fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Explanation.—Non-payment or non-tender of a sum sufficient to defray the expenses mentioned in section 160 shall be deemed a lawful excuse within the meaning of this section.

If any person so apprehended and brought before the Court cannot, owing to the absence of the parties or any of them, give the evidence or produce the document which he has been summoned to give or produce, the Court may require him to give reasonable bail or other security for his appearance at such time and place as it thinks fit, and, on such bail or security being given, may release him.

Procedure when witness apprehended cannot give evidence or produce documents.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 168 of the Civil Procedure Code requires that there should appear to the Court to be satisfactory ground for believing that the default on the part of witnesses summoned to give evidence is without lawful excuse before issuing a warrant for the arrest of such witnesses. But it is not necessary for this purpose to institute a formal investigation, and come to a determination on the evidence adduced.—5 M. H. C. R., 104.

Where a lower Appellate Court, by the terms of its order on a petition for the apprehension of witnesses, under sec. 168, Code of Civil Procedure, undertook to see that proper orders should be passed, it was bound to pass such orders as might, in its judicial discretion, be necessary under that section.—9 W. R., 359.

Where witnesses do not appear on summons, it is for the parties to move the Court, not for the Court to proceed, suo motu, to further the production of the witnesses, though the Court may issue attachment under sec. 168, Code of Civil Procedure, if it is shown that the witnesses are absconding or keeping out of the way.—13 W. R., 324.

175. If any person so failing to comply with a summons absconds or keeps out of the way, so that he cannot be apprehended and brought before the Court, the provisions of sections 168, 169, and 170, shall, mutatis mutandis, apply.

Procedure when witness absconds.

177. If any party to a suit present in Court refuses, without lawful excuse, when required by the Court, to give evidence or to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or power, the Court may, in its discretion, either pass a decree against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as the Court thinks fit.
Consequence of refusal of party to give evidence when called on by Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A defendant failed to appear when ordered to attend under sec. 170, Act VIII of 1859. The Judge did not at once pass judgment against him, but called the plaintiff's witnesses, and refused to allow the defendant's vakeel, who was present, to cross-examine them. Held that the Judge ought to have allowed the defendant's vakeel to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses.—2 B. L. R., App. 12.

The discretion which a Court has, under sec. 170 of Act VIII of 1859, of passing judgment against a party for non-compliance with the Court's order to attend and give evidence, or produce documents in a suit, is not confined to cases where the party summoning him cannot prove his case otherwise than by the evidence of such other party, or where the fact to be proved is solely and exclusively within the knowledge of such other party. A bare allegation by a defendant in his written statement, without any proof in support of it, that a certain person is his inveterate enemy, is not sufficient to discredit that person's testimony.—9 B. L. R., 215 ; 17 W. R., 550 ; 9 B. L. R., 218 note ; 12 W. R., 369.

In a suit to recover the balance alleged to be due on a partnership transaction, the 1st defendant, who was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, refused to produce certain accounts relating to the partnership which he was directed to produce by the Civil Judge. Thereupon, judgment was given against the 1st defendant under sec. 170 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the High Court, holding that the accounts were relevant and material evidence in the suit, and that the Civil Judge was justified in requiring the 1st defendant to produce them, and being satisfied that the accounts were in the possession or control of the 1st defendant, affirmed the judgment of the Civil Judge.—4 M. H. C. R., 142.

The provisions of sec. 170 of the Code of Civil Procedure ought to be exercised with the most temperate discretion. Where the Court might have treated one of the defendants as in default, and passed judgment against him under the above section, instead of doing so, passed over the default, and made an order adjourning the further hearing of the suit, and on the day to which the hearing was adjourned disposed of the suit under sec. 170, held that the Court by its own act was not in a position to treat the defendant as in default.—4 M. H. C. R., 231.

A judgment passed against a plaintiff under sec. 126 of Act VIII of 1859 was reversed by the High Court in special appeal, as there was nothing on the record to show that the party refused “to answer any material question relating to the suit.”—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 360; 2nd Ed. 340.

The non-attendance of the defendant, when cited as a witness to give evidence, is not alone sufficient to justify the decision of the suit against him under sec. 170 of the Civil Procedure Code. His absence may be an unfavourable circumstance, but the Court will not always be disposed to attach to it such weight as to regard it as justifying a decree in the plaintiff's favour.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 67.

Sec. 170, Act VIII of 1859, was not intended to empower a Court to decree a claim which on the face of it is barred by limitation, simply because the defendants had been summoned and did not appear.—7 W. R., 46.

A Court may avail itself in an execution-case of the power given by sec. 170, Act VIII of 1859, to summon a party to give evidence, and, on his failing to comply with that order, to pass judgment against him.—8 W. R., 64.

To render a person liable to the penalty prescribed by sec. 170, Act VIII of 1859, it must be shown that notice had been duly served on him, and that he had failed to comply with the requisition contained in that notice.—11 W. R., 110.

Sec. 170 was applicable to the procedure in suits under the Bengal Rent Act.—4 W. R., Act X., 18; 4 W. R., Act X., 50.

Sec. 170, Act VIII of 1859, authorized dismissal for default only against the plaintiff who failed or refused to attend, not against the plaintiffs who appeared.—1 W. R., 25; 1 W. R., 168.

178. Whenever any party to a suit is required to give

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE HEARING OF THE SUIT AND EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

179. On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit, or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove.

Explanation.—The plaintiff has the right to begin, unless he to right to where the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff, and contends that, either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant, the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts

In a suit for partition of certain property and trading business, the defendants resisted the suit, admitted a nucleus of joint property, and claimed the right to begin, on the ground that the onus was on them to prove that the whole property and the trading business were not joint. Held that, unless the defendants admitted all the allegations, or all the material allegations, the plaintiff was entitled to begin.—7 C. L. R., 274.

At the hearing of a case on a preliminary issue, the defendant, by whom the issue is raised, has the right to begin. Two counsel for the same party may be heard in argument of a preliminary issue.—1. L. R., 12 Bom. 454.

Statement and production of evidence by other party.

180. The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any).

Reply by party beginning.

The party beginning is then entitled to reply.

Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues, or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party. In the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence, and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning; but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case.

Note.—This section applies to provincial Small cause Courts.

181. The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence, and under the personal direction and superintendence, of the Judge.

Witnesses to be examined in open Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a will is contested, the proceedings should take, as nearly as may be, the form of a regular suit, as if brought by the party propounding the will; and where a judge granted a probate, it was held to be a serious defect with reference to Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 38, and Act VIII of 1859, sec. 172, that he took down only memoranda of the evidence, and not their testimony in the language in ordinary use in proceedings before the Court.—24 W. R., 162.

Where a Court of first instance, considering it unnecessary to examine certain witnesses for the defence, dismissed the suit, and the lower Appellate Court, disbelieving the evidence of those witnesses for the defence who were examined, allowed the plaintiff's appeal, held that, before doing so, the lower Appellate Court should have afforded the defendants an opportunity of supplementing the evidence which they had given in the first Court by the testimony of those witnesses whom that Court had declared it unnecessary to hear, and that the case must be regarded as one in which the first Court had refused to examine the witnesses tendered by the defendants. The Court directed the first Court to examine the defendants' witnesses, and, having done so, to return their depositions to the lower Appellate Court, which was to replace the appeal upon its file and dispose of it, —I. L. R., 9 Al. 339.

182. In cases in which an appeal is allowed, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the language of the Court, by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness, and also in the presence of the parties or their pleaders, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Failure to comply with the provisions of secs. 182 and 183 of Act X. of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code) in a judicial proceeding is an informality which renders the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence based on such deposition; and under sec. 91 of Act I of 1872 (Indian Evidence Act), no other evidence of such deposition is admissible.—I. L. R., 6 Cal. 762.

183. If the evidence is taken down under section 182 in a language different from that in which it was given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence as taken down in writing shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given.

184. In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Judge, he shall be bound, as the examination of each witness proceeds, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(2) where a Judge is prevented by any sufficient reason from complying with a direction under sub-section (1), he shall record the reason and cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court.

(3) Evidence taken down under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall be in the form mentioned in section 182, and be read over and signed, and, as occasion may require, interpreted and corrected, as if it were evidence taken down under that section.

(4) The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, revoke or vary a direction notified under sub-section (1).

186. The Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of any party or his pleader, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appear any special reason for so doing.

187. If any question put to a witness be objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection, and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the Court thereon.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

190. If the Judge be rendered unable to make a memorandum as above required by this chapter, he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded, and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court.
Judge unable to make such memorandum to record reason of his inability.

Every memorandum so made shall form part of the record.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

191. (1) where the Judge taking down any evidence, or causing any memorandum to be made, under this Chapter, is prevented by death, transfer, or other cause from concluding the trial of the suit, any successor to such Judge may deal with such evidence or memorandum as if he himself had taken it down or caused it to be made, and proceed with the suit from the stage at which his predecessor left it.
Power to deal with evidence taken down by another Judge.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply, so far as they can be made applicable, to a suit transferred under section 25 :

Provided that a Court transferring a suit under that section may, if it thinks fit, direct that the Court to which the suit is transferred shall recall all or any of the witnesses who have been examined, and take their evidence afresh.*

Notes.

A Subordinate Judge, having taken all the evidence in a suit before him, and having completed the hearing of the suit, except for the arguments of counsel on both sides, was removed, and the case came on for hearing before his successor. The new Subordinate Judge took up the case from the point at which it had been left by his predecessor, and proceeded to judgment and decree:—Held that the only power given by the Civil Procedure Code in such cases is to allow the evidence taken at the first trial to be used as evidence at the second trial, and not to allow the two hearings to be linked together and virtually made one; that the Subordinate Judge should have fixed a day for the entire hearing of the suit before himself, and should first have heard the opening statement on behalf of the plaintiff, the evidence produced by both sides, and the arguments on behalf of both, and then finally decided the case which he had himself heard and tried; that he might, in accordance with the provisions of sec. 191 have allowed the depositions which had been taken before his predecessor to be put in; and that, in neglecting to take this course, and in deciding the case upon materials which were never before him, his action was illegal, and the judgment and decree were nullities.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 857.

A Subordinate Judge, having taken all the evidence in a suit before him, adjourned the case to a future date for disposal. Upon the date fixed, a further adjournment was made. The Subordinate Judge, at this stage of the proceedings, was removed, and a new Subordinate Judge was appointed. Held that the trial, so far as it had gone before the first Subordinate Judge, was abortive, and, as a trial, became a nullity. Held also that the duty of the second Subordinate Judge, when the case was called on before him, was to fix a date for the entire hearing and trial of the case before himself; that he might, at the request of the pleaders, have fixed the same day upon which the case was called on, and proceeded to try it at once; and that the trial should then have proceeded in the ordinary way, except that the parties would be allowed, under sec. 191 to prove their allegations in a different manner. Jagram Das v. Narain Lal (7 Al. 857) referred to.—8 Al. 35.

The trial of a suit was completed except for argument and judgment, and a date was fixed for hearing argument. At this point a new Subordinate Judge was appointed, and he adjourned fixing a particular date for disposal of the case. After some further adjournments, the Subordinate Judge delivered judgment, having heard argument on both sides upon the evidence taken by his predecessor. The District Judge on appeal upheld the decision, a second appeal preferred to the High Court, and an objection was raised on the appellant's behalf that the proceedings taken before the Subordinate Judge were void, and he could not be said to have tried the case, inasmuch as no evidence was taken before him, and his judgment was based solely on evidence recorded by his predecessor. No objection of this kind was taken in either of the Courts below:—Held by the Full Bench that with reference to the grounds of appeal, and under the circumstances of the case, the officer who passed the decree in the Court of first instance had jurisdiction to deal with and determine the suit in the mode in which he did. Jagram Dos v. Narain Lal and Afzal-ul-nissa Begam v. Al Ali discussed.—8 Al. 576.

192. If a witness be about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or if other sufficient cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may, upon the application of either party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided.

Power to examine witness immediately.

Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient, of the day fixed for the examination, shall be given to the parties.

The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him, and may then be read at any hearing of the suit.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

193. The Court may, at any stage of the suit, recall Court may recall and examine witness. any witness who has been examined, and who has not departed in accordance with section 173, and may (subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit.

A Court continuing a suit under section 191 may recall and re-examine a witness who has departed in accordance with section 173.

—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF AFFIDAVITS.

194. Any Court of first instance and any Appellate Power to order any point to be proved by affidavit. Court may, at any time, for sufficient reason, order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing, on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable :

Provided that, where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

195. Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may, at the instance of either party, order the attendance, for cross-examination, of the declarant. Power to order attendance of declarant for cross-examination.

Such attendance shall be in Court, unless the declarant is exempted under this Code from personal appearance in Court, or the Court otherwise directs.

—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

196. Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the declarant is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted, provided that reasonable grounds thereof be set forth.

The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party producing the same.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

197. In the case of any affidavit under this Code—

- (a) any Court or Magistrate, or
- (b) any officer whom a High Court may appoint in this behalf, or
- (c) any officer appointed by any other Court which the Local Government has generally or specially empowered in this behalf, may administer the oath of the declarant.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF JUDGMENT AND DECREE.

198. The Court, after the evidence has been duly taken, and the parties had been heard either in person or by their respective pleaders or recognized agents, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

199. A Judge may pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor, but not pronounced.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

200. The judgment shall be written in the language of the Court, or in English, or in the Judge's mother-tongue.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

201. Whenever the judgment is written in any language other than that of the Court, the judgment shall, if any of the parties so re-

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined.

Oath of declarant by whom to be administered.

Power to pronounce judgment written by judge's predecessor.

Language of judgment.

* Translation of judgment.

quire, be translated into the language of the Court, and the translation shall also be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

202. The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it, and shall not be altered or added to, save to correct verbal errors or to supply some accidental defect not affecting a material part of the case, or on review.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

203. The judgments of the Courts of Small Causes need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereupon.

The judgments of all other Courts shall contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 203 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not relieve the Judge of a Small Cause Court from the necessity of giving some indication in his judgment that he has understood the facts of the case in which such judgment is given. Where a judgment in a Small Cause Court suit stated merely that the suit was dismissed for reasons given in the Judge's decision in another suit, and the judgment in the suit so referred to was in the following words:—"Claim for recovery of money lent with interest. Reply. Defendant pleads that he has paid the debt to the plaintiff. Issue. Has the defendant paid the debt claimed to the plaintiff? Finding. It is not proved that the defendant paid the debt to the plaintiff. Ordered that the claim is decreed with costs"—held that this was, in fact, no judgment at all, and the case must be remanded for re-trial on the merits under the analogy of sec. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, read with sec. 647 ib.—13 Al. 533.

204. In suits in which issues have been framed, the Court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons thereof upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of the issues be sufficient for the decision of the suit.

Notes.

In a suit for ejectment by a land-lord against his tenant the following amongst other issues were raised, viz., whether the notice alleged was sufficient, and whether the defendant was entitled to a right of occupancy. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, finding upon the admitted facts that the notice alleged was insufficient, but also decided the other issues raised, and held that the defendant was not entitled to a right of occupancy. Held, that the finding upon the question of notice based upon the admitted facts being sufficient to dispose of the whole case, the Court erred in proceeding to determine any other issues raised in the suit.—I. L. R., 10 Cal. 1095.

See I. L. R., 4 Madr. 134, noted under sec. 13; 8 Bom. 368, noted under sec. 561.

205. The decree shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced; and, when the Judge has satisfied himself that the decree has been drawn up in accordance with the judgment, he shall sign the decree.

Date of decree.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The mere specification of costs in a decree without an allotment of responsibility is not a sufficient compliance with sec. 189, Act VIII of 1859.—15 W. R., 4.

A copy of the judgment, with the schedule of costs appended, does not constitute a proper decree such as is required under sec. 189, Code of Civil Procedure.—15 W. R., 326.

206. The decree must agree with the judgment: it shall contain the number of the suit, the names and descriptions of the parties, and particulars of the claims, as stated in the register, and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the suit.

Contents of decree.

The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the suit, and by what parties, and in what proportions such costs are to be paid.

If the decree is found to be at variance with the judgment, or if any clerical or arithmetical error be found in the decree, the Court shall, of its own motion, or on that of any of the parties, amend the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment, or to correct such error: provided that reasonable notice has been given to the parties or their pleaders of the proposed amendment.

Power to amend decree.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Court has power to amend its decree by bringing it into conformity with the judgment after the said decree has been confirmed on appeal.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 354.

In a suit for money against the karnavan and two anandravans of a Malabar tarwad, the judgment directed a "decree for the plaintiff as prayed" but the decree ordered payment by one anandravan only. Land belonging to the tarwad was attached and sold in execution, an objection by the other members of the tarwad having been overruled. After the sale, the decree was amended and brought into conformity with the judgment. In a suit brought by other members of the tarwad against the karnavan, the decree-holder and the execution-purchaser, it was found that the judgment-debt had been contracted for proper tarwad purposes, and that the land had been sold for its proper value :—Held, that the sale was binding on the plaintiffs.—14 Madr. 150.

The judgment in an appeal adjudged interest to be paid for the period prior to the institution of the suit only. The decree contained an order for payment of interest from the date of the suit on wards :—Held that no variance with the judgment, within the meaning of sec. 206, was involved in the additional order contained in the decree.—7 Al. 755.

When an original decree is amended under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, it, as amended, is the decree in the suit ; and an appeal, therefore, lies from it under the provisions of sec. 540, when the validity of the amendment can be questioned. The matter of amending a decree does not by itself constitute a “ case,” within the meaning of sec. 622 but forms part of the proceedings in the suit in which the decree is made :—Held, therefore, per OLDFIELD, J., that, where an original decree, which was appealable, was amended by the Court of first instance, under sec. 206, the High Court had no power to revise such amendment under sec. 622 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J.—An order passed under sec. 206 amending a decree is a separate adjudication, and is not merely a part of the original decree, and cannot alter its date, and such an order is not appealable under sec. 588 of the Code. Such an order, therefore, can be revised by the High Court under sec. 622.—7 Al. 276.

A District Judge, by an order passed under sec. 206 altered a decree passed by his predecessor in the terms, “ I dismiss the appeal.” to read “ I accept the appeal,” on the ground that his predecessor had obviously meant to say that he accepted the appeal, and that the decree as it stood failed to give effect to the judgment. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the order passed by the Judge under sec. 206 could not be made the subject of revision by the High Court under sec. 622 because there was an appeal from the amended decree, which became the decree in the suit, and superseded the original decree. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That an order passed under sec. 206 constituted an adjudication separate from that concluded by a decree under the Code passed after the parties had been heard and evidence taken, and that the order in the present case was therefore a separate adjudication, and was not appealable under sec. 588. Also that, in saying that by “ dismissed,” his predecessor meant “ decreed,” the Judge had altered the decree in a manner not warranted by the terms of sec. 206, that he had, therefore, exercised his jurisdiction “ illegally and with material irregularity,” within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Code, and that the Court was consequently competent to revise his order. Raghunath Das v. Raj Kumar (I. L. R., 7 Al. 276) referred to.—7 Al. 411.

The Court in a suit upon a bond gave the plaintiff a decree, making a deduction from the amount claimed of a sum covered by a receipt produced by the defendant as evidence of part-payment, and admitted to be genuine by the plaintiff. The decree was for a total amount of Rs. 1,282. Subsequently, on application by the decree-holder, and without giving notice to the judgment debtor, the Court which passed the decree, purporting to act under sec. 206, altered the decree, and made it for a sum of Rs. 1,460. The decree-holder took out execution, and the judgment-debtor objected that the decree was for Rs. 1,282 and had been improperly altered. The Court executing the decree disallowed the objection, on the ground that it was not such as could be entertained in the execution-department:—Held that the decree as it originally stood was in accordance with the judgment, and the Court had no power to alter it as it did, and the proceeding was further irregular, in that no notice was given to the opposite party as required by sec. 206 of the Code:—Held also that, when a decree-holder executes his decree, a judgment-debtor is competent to object that the decree is not the decree of the Court fit to be executed, and therefore not capable of execution; and that the judgment-debtor in this case could raise the question whether the decree, which was altered behind his back, was a valid decree, and fit to be executed.—8 Al. 377.

Art. 173 of schedule ii. of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applies only to applications made to a Court to exercise powers which, without being moved by such application, it is not bound to exercise, and not to applications made to a Court to do acts which it has no discretion to refuse to do. It does not govern an application under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, for amendment of a decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment, it being the bounden duty of a Court, of its own motion, to see that its decrees are in accordance with the judgments and to correct them if necessary. Gaya Prasad v. Sikri Prasad (I. L. R., 4 Al. 23), dissented from. The petition of Kishan Singh (Weekly Notes, 1883, p. 262) Kylasa Goundan v. Ramasami Ayyan, (I. L. R., 4 Madr. 172), and Vithal Janardan v. Vithojirav Putlajirav referred to.—9 Al. 364.

Where a decree for possession of immoveable property, passed by a lower Appellate Court, omitted to specify the plots of land to which it related, and was upheld by the High Court by a decree which likewise gave no specification of those plots, and the lower Appellate Court subsequently, on the decree-holder's application, amended its decree, under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, by inserting the required specification, held that, inasmuch as the effect of the amendment was not to alter the effect of the High Court's decree, or to effect property other than that actually claimed and decreed, the amendment was not contrary to law. Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (I. L. R., 4 Al. 376), Gobardhan Das v. Gopal Ram (I. L. R., 7 Al. 366), Kristo Kinkur Roy v. Rajah Burrodacant Roy (14 Moore's I. A., 465), and Sundara v. Subbana (I. L. R., 9 Madr. 354), referred to.—10 Al. 51.

The effect of sec. 579 of the Civil Procedure Code is to cause the decree of the Appellate Court to supersede the decree of the first Court, even where the appellate decree merely affirms the original decree, and does not reverse or modify it. Where a decree has been affirmed on appeal, the only decree which can be amended under sec. 206 of the Code is the decree to be executed, and the decree to be executed is that of the Appellate Court and not the superseded decree of the first Court, though the latter may, if necessary, be referred to for the purpose of executing the appellate decree. The only Court which has jurisdiction to amend the appellate decree is the Court of appeal. So held by the Full Bench, MAHMOOD, J., dissenting. Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (I. L. R., 4 Al. 376) explained and followed. Kistokickur Roy v. Raja Burrodanaunt Roy (11 Moore's I. A. 465) discussed. The insertion of the word "not" in the last line but one of the judgment, and also in the head-note in Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (I. L. R., 4 Al. 376) was a clerical error. Per MAHMOOD, J.—When a decree has been simply affirmed on appeal, sec. 579 of the Code does not imply that the appellate decree supersedes the original decree, so as to render it ineffective for purposes of execution. In such a case the lower Court continues to have jurisdiction to entertain an application for amendment of its own decree under sec. 206 of the Code; and such application is not governed by any article of the Limitation Act, and may be made at any time. It may be granted under sec. 206, even where an application for review of judgment under sec. 623 upon the same grounds would be barred by sec. 624. A decree, awarding the plaintiff's possession of immoveable property, did not comply with sec. 206 of the Code by containing the particulars of the claim or specifying clearly the relief granted. On appeal by the defendant, the High Court, in general terms, confirmed the decree, and dismissed the appeal. The decree-holders then applying for execution, the judgment-debtors objected that the decree was incapable of execution, and this objection was allowed by the High Court on appeal. The decree-holders applied to the High Court to amend its decree, but the application was refused; and they then made a similar application to the first Court to amend its original decree which had been affirmed on appeal. This application was granted by a Judge who was not the Judge who had passed the original decree. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that the Court below had no jurisdiction to make such amendment, the original decree having been superseded by the High Court's appellate decree. Held by MAHMOOD J., contra, that the Court below had jurisdiction to make such amendment, and could make it any time; that the High Court's decree could not be amended, because the former order refusing amendment had become final and operated as res judicata; that the amendment of the original decree under sec. 206 was not barred by sec. 624; and that it would be denying justice on account of technicalities to hold that the original decree, though affirmed on appeal, could be neither executed nor amended.—11 Al. 267.

The decree of a Court of first instance having on appeal been affirmed, by the High Court, the first Court altered the decree which had been affirmed, intending to bring it into accordance with the judgment of the High Court. After the decree had been altered, application was made to execute it as altered, but this was opposed by the judgment-debtor, on the ground that that was not the decree which could be executed. Held by the Full Bench that the objection must prevail, on the grounds that the decree sought to be executed was not that of the Appellate Court, and that the decree had been altered by the first Court, which had no power to alter it. Abdul Hayai Khan v. Chunia Kuar (I. L. R., 8 Al. 377) referred to. Held by the Division Bench that the order of the first Court, disallowing the objection, and directing that execution of the decree as altered should proceed, could not be regarded as passed under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was an order passed in execution of decree, and as such was appealable.—11 Al. 314.

Applications to the Court under sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not governed by the Limitation Act. A Small Cause Court rejected an application made under sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure to bring a decree into conformity with the judgment, on the ground that a former application had been dismissed for default, and the petitioner was bound to apply within one month from the date of dismissal, and was now too late. On an application to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code to set aside this order:—Held, that the High Court could not interfere.—10 Madr. 51.

An application, under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to correct errors in a decree, not being one within the purview of article 178 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act XV of 1877, is not governed by any limitation, and can be made at any time such errors are discovered.—11 Bom. 284.

An application to amend a decree, which is found to be at variance with the judgment, in accordance with the provisions of sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, is an application of the kind mentioned in No. 178 of sch. ii. of Act XV of 1877, and as such subject to the limitation of three years.—4 Al. 23.

The plaintiff sued on a bond in which real property was hypothecated. In his claim the property hypothecated was detailed, and the property itself was impleaded as a defendant, and he obtained a decree in the following terms: "Decree for plaintiff in favour of his claim, and costs against defendant." Held that the decree was to be regarded as simply for money, and not for enforcement of lien.—2 Al. 342.

Where the plaintiff by his claim sought for a decree for money and enforcement of lien on the property hypothecated in the bond on which the claim was based, and he obtained a decree for the "claim as brought," without any specification in it as to the relief he sought by charging the property hypothecated: Held that such a decree was a decree for money only, and did not enforce the charge on the property. Muluk Fuqueer Bakhsh v. Manohar Dass (H. C. R., N.-W. P., 1870, p. 29) followed.—2 Al. 345.

Any order made upon an application for a review of judgment—except an order absolutely rejecting the application—becomes, if it in any way modifies or alters the original order (although the modification or alteration extends only to the rectification of a clerical mistake), the final order in the case; and party aggrieved by the original decree is entitled, although the modification or alteration was made in his favour, to treat the order upon review of judgment as the final decree or order in the case; and if it was made by a Court, an appeal from which lies in the Court of a District Judge, he is entitled to prefer his appeal at any time within thirty days from its date. When an application for a review of judgment is made upon several grounds, one of which refers only to the question of adjudication of costs, and the Court to whom the application is made holds all the other grounds to be untenable, but is of opinion that there has been a clerical mistake in that part of its order or judgment which refers to costs, it may reject the application absolutely, and permit the applicant to apply, under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, for a rectification of the clerical mistake; but if it does not do so, but, on the application for a review of judgment, amends the clerical mistake in its original order, the decree drawn up in conformity to his order becomes the final decree, and an appeal will lie against it if brought within the time prescribed for bringing an appeal against any other similar decree.—6 Cal. 22.

The plaintiff in a suit claimed possession of villages said in the plaint to be "detailed below." No details of the villages were given in the plaint itself, but a separate paper containing a list of villages was filed with the plaint. The plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of "all the villages claimed," but there was no indication in the decree what those villages were. Held that the Court executing the decree was not justified in reading the contents of the list of villages attached to the plaint into the decree, and awarding the decree-holder possession of the villages named in such list. S. A. No. 310 of 1882, decided 11th August 1882, (not reported), followed. Debi Charan v. Pirbhu Din Ram (I.L.R., 3 Al. 388) referred to.—6 Al. 30.

Where a Court improperly refused to amend a decree, which was at variance with the judgment, held that in so acting the Court had acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally and with material irregularity, within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and its order was consequently subject to revision under that section. On the question whether the High Court should refrain from exercising its powers under sec. 622 by reason of the long time which had elapsed from the date of the decree, held that the petitioner was not fairly chargeable with laches.—6 Al. 125.

Whether an order made by a single Judge of the High Court directing the amendment of a decree passed in appeal by a Division Bench of which he had been a member is an order made under sec. 206 read with secs. 582 and 632 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or by virtue of the inherent power which the High Court has in the exercise of its Appellate Civil jurisdiction to amend its own decrees, it is one to which the provisions of Chapter XLIII of the Code of Civil Procedure are applicable, and from such order no appeal under sec. 10 of the Letters Patent will lie. Hurish Chunder Chowdry v. Kali Sunderi Debia discussed.—14 Al. 226.

207. When the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property, and such property is identified by boundaries or by numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the decree shall specify such boundaries or numbers.

208. When the suit is for moveable property, if the decree be for the delivery of such property, it shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

209. “When a decree is for the payment of money,”* the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

Where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefore shall not lie.*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A creditor having stipulated for interest at a certain rate is entitled to a decree for interest at that rate up to the date of decree. Mangniram. Marwari v. Dhowtal Roy (I. L. R., 12 Cal. 569) dissented from.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 485.

Interest after date of suit is in the discretion of the Court, notwithstanding that a fixed rate of interest is mentioned as payable "up to realization" in the bond sued upon.—12 Cal. 569.

The contract rate of interest must be allowed up to the date of decree in accordance with Act XXVIII of 1855, sec. 2. The Civil Procedure Code, sec. 209, does not expressly refer to suits in which interest has been contracted for, and does not repeal the former Act.—3 Madr. 125.

A decree for money directed that its amount should be payable "according to the terms of the judgment-debtor's written statement." In his written statement the judgment-debtor had promised to pay interest on the judgment-debt if the same were not discharged by a certain day. Held, having regard to the decision of the full Bench in Debi Charan v. Pirbhu Din (I. L. R., 3 Al. 388), that the judgment-debtor having failed to discharge the judgment-debt by such day, he was bound by the terms of the decree to pay interest on its amount.—3 Al. 775.

A decree directed accounts to be taken of what was due for principal and interest under a mortgage, such interest to be allowed "up to the time of payment hereinafter mentioned, or until six months from the date of the decree," whichever first should happen; and further directed the plaintiff to pay what should be reported due for principal and interest up to the date of payment and costs, with interest at 6 per cent. from the date of taxation until payment, within six months after the Registrar should make his report. The plaintiff tendered a sum sufficient to cover the principal and interest due, but insufficient to cover costs, at a time prior to the drawing up of the Registrar's report. Held that the payment of principal and interest "hereinafter mentioned" referred to a time after the Registrar had made his report, because the sum to be paid was a sum reported to be due by the Registrar, and that, therefore, a tender made before the Registrar's report was given was not a sufficient tender to stop interest from the date of the tender.—9 Cal. 33.

210. In all decrees for the payment of money, the Court may, for any sufficient reason, order that the amount shall be paid by instalments, with or without interest.

And, after the passing of any such decree, the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor, and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that the amount decreed be paid instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the defendant, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit.

Save as provided in this section and section 206, no decree shall be altered at the request of parties.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When the lower Courts ordered the decree to be paid by instalments which were hardly sufficient even to cover the interest, and did not provide for the interest and penalty conditioned in case of default, held that they had exercised the discretion vested in them by sec. 194, Act VIII of 1859, arbitrarily and without due caution, and their order could be interfered with and set aside on special appeal.—1 Agra H. C. R., 116; 1 Agra H. C. R., 270.

Held that, when the not ordering the amount of the decree to be paid by instalments has arisen from any error or omission, or it is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice, the Court which passed the decree has power to review it, and to make an order for payment by instalments. Otherwise the Court has no power to make such an order subsequent to the decree without the consent of the judgment-creditor.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 77.

The discretion vested in Courts by sec. 194 of Act VIII of 1859 should not be exercised without sufficient reason.—2 Hay's Rep., 68.

It should not be applied to an action for money due on an instalment-bond, the terms of which had been broken.—2 Hay's Rep., 95.

A decree was made for payment of the decretal amount by monthly instalments running over a period of twelve years; and it was provided that on default the decree-holder might execute the decree as a whole for the balance then due. In 1883 a default was made, and in 1884 the decree-holder filed an application for execution in respect thereof, but did not proceed with it, and continued to receive the monthly instalments. In 1887, he made another application for execution, in which he relied on the same default. Held that the default, if it was one, had been waived by the decree-holder, and that such waiver was a good defence to the present application. Mumford v. Peal (I. L. R., 2 Al. 857) and Asmutullah Dalal v. Kally Churn Mitter (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 56) distinguished.—I. L. R., 11 Al. 482.

A simple money decree was passed in 1871, and was transferred to another Court for execution, and in June 1882, an application was made for execution; and, shortly afterwards, the Court to which the decree had been transferred sanctioned an agreement between the parties for satisfaction of the decree by instalments. In June 1885, an application was made to the Court which passed the decree to again transfer it for execution, and this application recited the previous agreement and certain payments which had been made, and it was granted. A further application for execution for the remaining instalments was made in April 1883. Held by EDGE, C. J., that the Court to which the decree was transferred had no power in 1882, to sanction the agreement under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code; that if the order in June 1885, of the Court passing the decree were regarded as a sanction (which it would be very difficult to hold), that order nevertheless could not operate as one under sec. 210 altering the decree; that if any decree in the case were capable of execution it was the decree of 1871, which had never been altered by a Court and that inasmuch as a previous application for execution had been made in June 1882, that decree was dead, as well under sec. 230 of the Code as under art. 179, sch. ii. of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held by STRAIGHT, J., that the order of June 1885 was not, and could not be, an order sanctioning the agreement of June 1882, and the decree consequently stood unaltered; and, an application to execute it having been made and granted since Act XIV of 1882 came into operation, the decree was now dead under sec. 230 of the Code. Per EDGE, C. J.—The Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution has no power to sanction an agreement under sec. 257A of the Code for satisfaction of the decree by instalments, but such sanction can be given only by the Court which passed the decree. An agreement sanctioned under sec. 257A cannot be treated, without anything more, as a decree of the Court, and cannot operate as an order under sec. 210, though an order under sec. 210 would operate as a sanction under sec. 257A. The decree in a suit which must be executed is the decree as originally passed or as altered by a proper order for that purpose, as e. g., by an order under sec. 210.—12 Al. 571.

On the 23rd February 1878, an application was made for execution of a decree, dated the 3rd December 1877, in which the decree-holder stated that the judgment-debtor had agreed to pay the balance then due on the 13th August 1878. The application was then struck off on the 26th June 1878. On the 30th June 1881, the decree-holder again applied for execution, and on the 11th July 1881, the judgment-debtor, with the consent of the decree-holder, applied for time to pay the balance due till the 8th September 1881, and that application was also struck off. On the 1st March 1883, the decree-holder again applied for execution. Held that the application was not barred by limitation upon the ground that the application by the judgment-debtor, made on the 11th July 1881, alleging that he had come to an arrangement with the decree-holder for the payment of the amount due by instalments, having resulted in its being registered and the proceedings struck off, amounted to a direction that the decretal amount be paid by instalments as stipulated in the petitions, and that, this being so, there was a decree passed on that date under the provisions of the second paragraph of sec. 210 of which the decree-holder was entitled to have execution.—11 Cal. 143.

Act X of 1877, sec. 210, is not applicable in a suit for the recovery of the amount of a bond-debt by the sale of the property hypothecated by such bond. In such a suit, therefore, the Court cannot direct that the amount of the decree shall be payable by instalments.—2 Al. 320.

There is nothing in Act X of 1877, sec. 210, or elsewhere in that Act, authorizing a Court to direct that the amount of a decree should be paid within a fixed time from its date. Seemle.—That sec. 210 is not applicable in a suit for the recovery of the amount of a bond-debt by the sale of the nankar allowance hypothecated by such bond.—2 Al. 649.

The word “debt” in secs. 20 and 21 applies only to a liability for which a suit may be brought, and does not include a liability for which judgment has been obtained. Therefore, where the last application for execution of a decree had been made on the 14th December 1872, and a notice under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 216, issued on the 19th January 1873, and on the 28th April 1873, the judgment-debtor filed a petition notifying part-payment, which petition was signed by the judgment-creditor, held, in an application for execution made on the 27th April 1876, that further execution was barred by Limitation (Act IX of 1871).—2 Cal. 468.

Quære.—Whether “a decree for the payment of money” means merely what is commonly known as a money-decree, or includes, a decree in which a sale is ordered of immoveable property in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting such property, within the meaning of sec. 194 of Act VIII of 1859 and sec. 210 of Act X of 1877. Where a Court, on the ground that the defendant was “hard pressed,” directed the amount of a decree to be paid by instalments extending over ten years, and allowed only one-half of the usual rate of interest, held that there was no sufficient reason for directing payment of the amount of the decree by instalments, and that such Court had exercised its discretion injuriously to the plaintiff, by the length of the period over which the instalments were extended, and by allowing a rate of interest less than the ordinary rate.—2 Al. 129.

In exercise of the discretion given by sec. 194 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859), the Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiff making the amount awarded payable by instalments, but gave no interest after the institution of the suit. The Appellate Court amended the decree by awarding the interest from the institution of the suit at six per cent. per annum, the rate originally contracted for being 24 per cent. per annum. Held, although the stipulated rate was properly awardable, the award of the lower rate was not illegal or beyond the competency of the Court below, with whose discretion the High Court will not interfere. A mortgagee is, as a general rule, entitled to the costs of enforcing his security; but where the Court, in consideration of his usurious bargain, declines to award them wholly or in part, the High Court will not interfere.—3 Bom. 202.

Where a decree was passed by consent in 1872 for payment to plaintiff through the Court of Rs. 300 by fifteen annual instalments on the 20th February in each year, and in default of payment of any instalment, the whole amount became recoverable, and four years’ instalments were paid out of Court, and default made on the 20th February 1877, and plaintiff applied to recover the instalment of 1877 by execution on the 17th November 1879 and the first March 1880, held that the application of November 1879 was not barred under cl. b, art. 179, sch. ii. of the Limitation Act of 1877. inasmuch as, when the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, came into force (1st October, 1877), the application was not barred under cl. 6, art. 167, sch. ii. of the Indian Limitation Act, 1871. Held also that the provision as to the whole amount becoming recoverable at once if default was made did not affect the admissibility of the application for execution, because that provision had not been enforced, and the obligation to pay by instalments was still subsisting —3 Madr. 256.

A Collector, to whom a decree for sale of mortgaged property has been transferred for execution under sec. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code, is limited to one of the three courses specified in sec. 321, and may not depart from them; much less may he do what the Court itself could not do in such a case—allow payment of the debt to be made by instalments. A Collector, to whom a decree has been so transferred for execution, acts ministerially, and, when he delegates his functions to an Assistant or a Mamlatdar, incurs a risk of having to answer in damages to the person who is by any error or mistake deprived of the fruits of his judgment; and this risk attaches independently of malice or negligence. The Court that has made a decree or judicial order, which has been transmitted to the Collector for execution, is not deprived of the judicial powers with respect to it, which may still at any particular time be competent to such Court, and which it would have had the order been placed in the hands of its own ordinary officer, the nazir. In the exercise of such powers the Court has authority to recall its own record transmitted to the Collector.—7 Bom 332.

The words “decree passed against an agriculturist” in sec. 20 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists’ Relief Act (XVII of 1879) mean a decree passed against an agriculturist personally, and do not include decree for the recovery of money by the sale of mortgaged property. The effect of that section must be taken to be an enlargement of the indulgence granted by sec. 210 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), but only in those cases to which the latter section applies. By sec. 210 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court may, after the passing of a decree in money-suits, order the amount to be paid by instalments, provided the decree-holder consents. By sec. 20 of Act XVII of 1879 the Court may make the same order in similar suits, without the consent of the decree-holder. In the case of a debt secured by a mortgage, the agriculturist’s remedy lies in a suit, not for an account, but for redemption; and the only decree which can be made in such a suit, in the absence of any special provision in the Act, is the ordinary decree for payment of the whole amount within six months, or, in default, for foreclosure. Hardeo Das v. Hukam Singh (I. L. R., 2 Al. 320) referred to and approved.—5 Bom. 604.

A judgment-debtor, whose property was about to be sold, appeared before the officer appointed to conduct the sale, and applied for its postponement, producing a surety and a bond, in which such surety promised to pay the amount of the decree within one year, if the judgment-debtor did not do so. Such officer thereupon applied to the District Judge to postpone the sale, stating that such surety was willing to pay the amount of the decree by instalments within one year, and forwarding such bond. The District Judge ordered the sale to be postponed, and the papers to be sent to the Munsif who had made the decree and ordered the sale of the property. The Munsif made no order regarding the security, but merely made an order that the amount of the decree should be paid by instalments within one year. The judgment-debtor did not pay the amount of the decree within the time fixed, and the decree-holder therefore applied for execution of the decree against such surety. Held that, inasmuch as the decree-holder had not been a party to the proceedings of the sale officer or of the District Judge, and as the parties had not appeared before the Munsif, and as such surety had not agreed to pay the amount of the decree by instalments, the provisions of sec. 210 of Act X of 1877 were not applicable, and such surety had not become a party to the decree as altered by the Munsif; that such surety had not made himself a party to the decree by promising to pay its amount within one year; and that therefore his liability was not one which could be enforced in execution of the decree under sec. 253 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 809.

Where a bond is payable by instalments, and expressly stipulates for the payment of the whole debt on failure in the payment of any instalment, the law of limitation runs on the whole amount of the bond against the obligee from the day on which the obligor first makes default in the payment of any instalment, unless the obligee waive the default, and afterwards from the day on which any fresh default is made in respect of which there is no waiver. The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, sch. ii., art. 75, but the Courts may have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, sec. 194, nor Act X of 1877, sec. 210, confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that, on default, the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second, which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment soon after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay Rs. 100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of Rs. 100 each with interest at 6 per cent. till payment. The District Judge, in appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court on second appeal that neither of the lower Court has jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by them, terms which the Court preferred. Held also that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made, viz., on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment, and that the Subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary.—4 Bom. 96.

On the 26th of June 1873, a judgment debtor applied under sec. 210 of the Code of Civil Procedure for two years' time to pay the amount of the decree, which was dated 12th March 1878. Notice having been given to the judgment-creditor, an ex-parte order was made allowing the judgment-debtor two years' time to pay, but the decree itself was not altered in accordance with this order. On the 9th of July 1882, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree. Held, that the application was not barred by limitation.—7 Madr. 152.

The parties to a decree for money, dated the 14th July 1871, entered into a compromise, whereby, in lieu of a portion of the decretal money, the decree-holder was placed in possession of certain property, and the remainder of the decretal money was to be paid by fixed annual instalments, and, in case of default in the payment of any instalment, it was agreed that the entire amount should become immediately realizable by execution of the decree. On the 11th December, 1882, the decree-holder, alleging default in payment of the instalments, applied for execution of the compromise. Held that such an agreement could not be treated as an instalment-decree, and, as such, capable of execution. Debi Rai v. Gokal Prasad (I. L. R., 5 Al. 585) followed.—6 Al. 623.

211. When the suit is for the recovery of possession of immoveable property yielding rent or other profit, the Court may provide in the decree for the payment of rent or mesne-profits in respect of such property from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the party in whose favour the decree is made, or until the expiration of three years from the date of the decree (whichever event first occurs), with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court thinks fit.

Explanation.—“Mesne-profits” of property mean those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received, or might, with ordinary diligence, have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits.

Notes.

Mesne-profits are in themselves simply damages which do not exist as an obligation to be discharged until they have been awarded by a Court competent to do so. Therefore, according to sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, mesne-profits payable at the time of execution” must mean mesne-profits which have been at that time directed to be paid by a decree of Court. The two portions of sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 are in direct connection with secs. 196 and 197 of Act VIII of 1859. A obtained a decree against B for recovery of possession of certain property, and for mesne-profits up to the date of the suit, but the decree was silent as to mesne-profits after that time. Held that A was not barred by the provisions of sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 from bringing a suit against B for mesne-profits during the time that A was kept out of possession after the decree.—1 B L.R., (A.C.) 138.

A minor, who had been adopted by a widow as a son to her deceased husband, was not made a party to an appeal, which she preferred after the adoption, from a decree made against her when she represented the estate. Held that, as liability under the decree, made when the widow fully represented the estate, devolved upon the minor on his adoption, the widow's estate being also thereupon divested, it would be right for her to continue to defend, but only as guardian of the minor. Also that, it having been for the minor's benefit that the widow, as guardian, should appeal from a decree, which had already diminished his estate, the minor was bound by the adverse decree of the Appellate Court, although he had not been made, formally, a party thereto. The principle of the decision in Dhurm Dass Pandey v. Shamasoondery Debia (3 Moore's I. A. 229) referred to, and applied in this case. Held, also, that the minor, by his adoptive mother as his guardian, was liable in a suit for mesne-profits, brought after the decree upon title, it being made clear that the suit for mesne-profits was substantially brought against the minor. Sureshchunder Wum Chowdhry v. Jugutchunder Deb (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 204) approved.—I.L.R., 16 Cal. 40.

In a suit for recovery of possession and mesne-profits, the Court has power under sec. 211 of the Civil Procedure Code either to award mesne-profits up to the date of the institution of the suit or up to the date of delivery of possession. And where a decree for possession is silent as regards mesne-profits which have accrued between the date of the institution of the suit and delivery of possession, a separate suit will lie for such subsequent mesne profits, secs. 13 and 244 of the Code being no bar to it. Sadasiva Pillai v. Ramalinga Pillai. L. R., 2, I. A., 219; 15 B. L. R., 383; Fakharuddin Mahomed Ashan Chowdhry v. Official Trustee of Bengal, L. R., 8 I. A., 197; I. L. R., 8 Cal. 178; Byjnath Pershad v. Badhoo Singh, (10 W. R., 486; Pratap Chandra Burna v. Swarnamayi, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 113; 13

W. R., F. B., 15; and Haramohini Chowdhrari v. Dhamani Chowdhrani, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 138, referred to.—I. L. R., 17 Cal. 968.

Land was put up for sale and purchased in execution of a decree. The sale was confirmed, and the purchaser was put into possession. On appeal against the order confirming the sale, the High Court held that the sale had been vitiated by certain irregularities and set it aside. The purchaser preferred an appeal to the Privy Council against the judgment of the High Court. While the appeal was pending, he was compelled to deliver up possession of the land, but security was furnished under an order of the Court by persons not being parties to the suit for its redelivery to him, and for the payment of mesne profits, in the event of his appeal being successful. Meanwhile, the land in question was placed in charge of a receiver on the motion of other persons holding decrees against the judgment-debtors. On appeal the Privy Council reversed the order of the High Court. The purchaser was accordingly replaced in possession of the land; and he applied for execution in respect of the mesne profits against the respondents in the Privy Council and the sureties. The Court of First Instance dismissed the application as against the sureties and limited the applicant's claim against the others to the net income of the land, less the cost of management by the receiver, and allowed him no interest:—Held, (1) the order must be taken to have been made under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 610, and an appeal lay therefrom; (2) although the appeals to the High Court and the Privy Council related to the order confirming the sale and not to that by which possession was awarded, and the order in Council did not direct payment of mesne profits, yet such payment was within its purview as being a benefit by way of restitution fairly and reasonably consequential upon it. Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (L. R., 3 P. C., 465) followed; (3) the application was rightly dismissed against the sureties. (4) the charges involved by the appointment of the receiver should not have been allowed against the petitioner, since they were not necessary in the ordinary course of prudent management: (5) interest at 6 per cent should have been allowed to the petitioner on the mesne profits for each year from the end of the year to the date of payment.—15 Madr. 203.

Where the parties to a suit for certain land and for the payment of mesne-profits in respect of the same were co-sharers in the estate comprising such land, and the defendants had themselves occupied and cultivated such land, held that the most reasonable and fitting mode of assessing such mesne-profits was to ascertain what would be a fair rent for such land if it had been let to an ordinary tenant and had not been cultivated by the defendants. Both parties appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance, and both the appeals were dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing his appeal, whereupon the defendant took objections to the decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing his appeal. Held that such objections could not be entertained.—2 Al. 651.

such profits is disputed, the Court may either determine the amount by the decree itself, or may pass a decree for the property, and direct an inquiry into the amount of mesne-profits, and dispose of the same on further orders.

Notes.

In the Course of a suit for declaration of right to property, and for partition, a compromise was entered into, by which it was agreed that certain property already ascertained should be divided in certain proportions, and that certain other property, not yet ascertained, should, on being ascertained, be partitioned on the same basis. The Court merely recorded the compromise, and declared that the decree should be according to terms therein set out. Held that this decree could be only executed as to the property which had been ascertained as divisible, and that as to the other property the decree must be taken as declaratory only. The Court executing a decree is bound by the terms of the decree, and it is only in cases provided for by secs. 211 and 212 of Act X of 1877, corresponding with secs. 196 and 197 of Act VIII of 1859, that it is at liberty to determine the rights of the litigants in proceedings taken after decree.—4 C. L. R., 97. See I. L. R., 8 Madr. 137.

See I. L. R., 19 Cal. 132, noted under art. 178 of the Limitation Act, 19 Cal. 159, noted under sec. 13.

213. When the suit is for an account of any property and for its due administration under the decree of the Court, the Court, before making the decree, shall order such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, and give such other directions, as it thinks fit.

Administration-suit.

In the administration by the Court of the property of any person who dies after this Code comes into force, if such property proves to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities, the same rules shall be observed as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and as to debts and liabilities proveable, and as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities respectively, as may be in force for the time being with respect to the estates of persons adjudged insolvent ; and all persons, who, in any such case, would be entitled to be paid out of such property, may come in under the decree for its administration, and make such claims against the same as they may respectively be entitled to by virtue of this Code.

Note.

On the 22nd July 1886, one R. L. obtained a money decree against one P. C. On the 5th November 1886, P. C. died ; and on the 18th Dec. 1886, R. L. applied to attach certain properties belonging to the estate of his judgment-debtor, which properties were actually attached on the 8th and 12th January, 1887. On the 21st December, 1886, one S. filed a suit to administer the estate of the deceased, and on the 20th January 1887 obtained the usual administration-decree. On the 5th May 1887, S. applied for an order staying all proceedings taken by R. L. against the estate of P. O., and directing him to come in should he think fit so to do, and prove his claim in the administration-suit. Held that the attachment did not create any interest in, or charge upon, the properties in favour of the attaching creditor as against other creditors, and that the order asked for ought to be granted.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 202.

214. When the suit is to enforce a right of pre-emption

Suit to enforce right of pre-emption. in respect of a particular sale of property, and the Court finds for the plaintiff, if the amount of purchase-money has not been paid into Court the decree shall specify a day on or before which it shall be so paid, and shall declare that, on payment of such purchase-money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against him, the plaintiff shall obtain possession of the property, but that, if such money and costs are not so paid, the suit shall stand dismissed with costs.

Notes.

In two rival suits for pre-emption each pre-emptor was made a defendant in the other's suit. The suits were tried together upon the same evidence and were disposed of by a single judgment, but by separate decrees. In one of the suits the pre-emptor obtained a decree in the terms of sec. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. In the other, the pre-emptor obtained a decree, subject to the condition that, in the event of the first pre-emptor failing to execute his decree, the second pre-emptor should be entitled to execute it. The decree in the first suit was not appealed, and became final. The second pre-emptor appealed from the decree in his own suit, upon the grounds that the amount ordered to be paid was excessive, and that the first pre-emptor had lost his right, and the decree in the second suit should not have been made subject to the condition above stated. Held that the appellant, if he desired to get rid of the decision regarding the first pre-emptor's preferential right, should have appealed against the first pre-emptor's decree, but that, that decree having become final, the questions between the two pre-emptors could not be re-opened on appeal from the second pre-emptor's decree.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 123.

A suit for pre-emption was decreed conditionally on the plaintiff paying Rs. 1,595, which the Court determined was the amount of the sale-consideration. He paid the amount to the vendees, and the payment was certified under sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Subsequently the decree was modified on appeal by increasing the amount of sale-consideration to Rs. 1995, which the plaintiff was required to pay as the condition of pre-emption. He never paid the difference between the amount fixed by the first Court and the sum fixed as the true price by the Appellate Court, and the suit consequently stood dismissed. He then assigned to the plaintiff in the suit his right to recover the amount, Rs. 1,595, from the vendees, who, after unsuccessful application made to the Court of first instance, under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, to recover the amount, instituted this suit. Held that the assignee was a representative of the plaintiff in the pre-emption suit within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the suit was therefore barred under the provisions of that section.—10 Al 354.

A Court of first instance decreed a claim for pre-emption conditionally, on the pre-emptor paying into Court Rs. 125 within a specified period, and also awarded the pre-emptor Rs. 39-9-0 as his costs in the suit. Within the specified period the pre-emptor paid into Court the Rs. 125, and subsequently executed his decree for costs, by drawing out therefrom the Rs. 39-9-0. After this the decree was modified on appeal, the Appellate Court raising the Rs. 125 payable as the condition of pre-emption to Rs. 200, and reversing the first Court's order as to costs. Within the period specified in the Appellate Court's decree the pre-emptor paid into Court the further sum of Rs. 75. Subsequently the vendee, defendant, applied to the Court under sec 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the property in suit restored to him, contending that the pre-emptor had failed to pay the full Rs. 200 within the prescribed period. Held by Straight, J., affirming the judgment of Mahmood, J, that this contention must fail; that the payment of Rs. 125 due under the first Court's decree could not be said to have been reduced by the pre-emptor subsequently executing against the amount so paid the order of that Court in his favour for costs, and that the subsequent payment of Rs. 75 within the period prescribed by the Appellate Court satisfied the requirements of that Court's decree, subject to the judgment debtor's right to recover the cost realized in execution of the first Court's decree. Held by Tyrrell, J., contra, that, although the pre-emptor had once made a payment, which for a few days was a compliance with the first Court's decree, such compliance became immaterial when that decree was modified on appeal, and as he had never had in any Court a credit for Rs. 200, as required by the Appellate Court's decree, which alone was the decree in the cause, he had failed to fulfil the condition essential to pre-emption, and therefore the defendant's application should be allowed.—10 Al. 400.

In a suit for pre-emption, the decree of the Court of first instance was conditional upon payment of the purchase-money within one month from its date. After this period had expired without payment, the defendants appealed from the decree. The appeal was dismissed and the decree affirmed, and no fresh period for payment was expressly allowed by the decree of the Appellate Court. Held that the decree of the Appellate Court must be taken to have incorporated the terms of the decree of the Court of first instance, that the period of one month allowed for payment of the purchase-money must be calculated from the date of the Appellate Court's decree, and that payment by the decree-holder within one month from that date was in time. Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (I. L. R., 4 Al. 376), Luchman Persad Singh v. Kishun Persad Singh (I. L. R., 8 Cal. 218), Gobardhan Das v. Gopal Ram (I. L. R., 7 Al. 306), Noor Ali Chowdhuri v. Koni Meah (I. L. R., 13 Cal 13), and Daulat v. Bhukandas Manekchand (I. L. R., 11 Bom. 172), referred to.—11 Al. 346.

Where in a suit for pre-emption the decree, while decreeing the plaintiff's right to pre-emption upon payment of the pre-emptive price within one month from the date of the decree, omitted to state what would be the effect on the plaintiff's suit of non-payment within the prescribed period:—Held that the plaintiff, unless he had paid the pre-emptive price before the expiry of the said month, could not enforce his decree for pre-emption. Kodai Singh v. Jaisri Singh referred to.—Bandhu v. Shah Muhammad Taqi dissented from.—14 Al. 529.

The decree of the Court of first instance in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption directed that the sum which that Court had ascertained to be the purchase-money should be deposited within one month from the date of the decree. Plaintiff appealed, contending that such sum was not the purchase money. While the appeal was pending, the time fixed by the decree of the Court of first instance expired without any deposit having been made. The Appellate Court dismissed the appeal, fixing by its decree, of its own motion, a further time for the deposit. Held that the Appellate Court was competent to extend the time for making the deposit, and its action and order did not contravene the provision of Act X of 1877, sec. 214.—2 Al. 744.

M sued K and J to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of property which he alleged K had sold to J. K denied that she had sold such property to J. J set up as a defence that M had waived his right of pre-emption. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, on the ground that the alleged sale had not taken place. J appealed, making M and K respondents. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the appeal, also holding that the alleged sale had not taken place. J then appealed to the High Court, making K the respondent. Held that neither the appeal from the original decree in the suit, nor the appeal from the appellate decree therein, was admissible. Held also that the finding as to the alleged sale was one between the plaintiff and defendants in the suit, and not between the defendant-vendor and the defendant-vendee who were litigating, and would not bar adjudication of the matter in issue between them in a suit brought by the latter for the establishment of the sale.—3 Al. 152.

The decree in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption, dated the 12th December 1879, declared that the plaintiff should obtain possession of the property on payment of the purchase-money "within thirty days," but that, if such money was not so paid, the suit should stand dismissed. The period specified in the decree for the payment of the purchase-money, the day on which the decree was made not being computed, expired on the 11th January following. That day was a Sunday. The plaintiff paid the purchase-money into Court on the next day, the 12th January. Held that, inasmuch as the day on which the decree was made should not be taken into account in computing the period specified in the decree for the payment of the purchase-money, nor the last day of that period, that day being a Sunday, the plaintiff had complied with the condition imposed on him by the decree. Semle.—That, if the plaintiff had actually failed to deposit the purchase-money within thirty days as directed by the decree, his suit would have been liable to be dismissed, as he could not have claimed to have such period computed from the date the decree became final.—3 Al. 850.

The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in sec. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court, the defendants objected, in the execution-department, to such payment, on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection. They had previously appealed from the decree. The Appellate Court heard both appeals together, and, holding that the purchase-money had not been paid into Court within time, reversed the decree, and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree, which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection, but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time, and such order became final. Held that, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself, and therefore the proceedings in the execution-department touching that question were ill-founded, such order was not a bar to the hearing of the second appeal preferred by the plaintiff.—4 Al. 420.

The decree in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption directed, in accordance with the provisions of sec. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the plaintiff should obtain possession of the property and recover costs of the suit from the defendants (vendor and vendee) on payment of the purchase-money within a fixed time, but that, on default of such payment, the suit should stand dismissed. The plaintiff deposited within time the purchase-money with the exception of a sum less than the amount of costs awarded to him. He subsequently applied for delivery of possession of the property in execution of the decree and for the recovery of the costs awarded to him, deducting from such costs the unpaid portion of the purchase-money. Held, applying, by analogy of secs. 221 and 247 of the Civil Procedure Code, the equitable doctrine of set-off, that the plaintiff was entitled, when depositing the purchase-money under the decree, to deduct therefrom the sum the decree awarded to him as costs, and that, therefore, the decree did not become null and void by reason that he had not deposited the full amount of the purchase-money within time. Degumburee Dabee v. Eshan Chunder Sein (9 W. R., 230), Jugo Mohun Bukshee v. Soorendro Nath Roy Chowdhry (3 W. R., 106), and Brijnath Dass v. Juggarnath Dass (I. L. R., 4 Cal. 742), referred to —6 Al. 351.

K and R, two co-sharers of a village, instituted separate suits in which each claimed to enforce the right of pre-emption, based on the wajibularz, in respect of the same sale of a share in a village to a stranger. The Court of first instance made the plaintiff in one suit a defendant in the other. The suits were tried together, and R. being held to have a better right under the terms of the wajibularz than K, his suit was decreed, contingent upon payment by him of the purchase-money within one month from the date of the decree. K's suit was dismissed absolutely. Held, that decrees in cases where two rival pre-emptors of the same decree seek to enforce pre-emption, as each necessarily must do, in respect of the whole property conveyed by one transfer, are defective if they dismiss the suit for any proportion of the property without providing for the contingency of the rival pre-emptor decree-holder omitting to enforce his decree in respect of the share decreed to him. A fortiori, where the rival decree-holders possess different decrees of pre-emption, the decree, in at least one of the rival suits, must be essentially defective if no provision is made for the contingency of the superior pre-emptor never enforcing his right. The question what should be the form of the decree in such cases, can be dealt with only by exercising the vast and flexible jurisdiction possessed by the Courts of Equity in adopting their decrees to the exigencies of each case, so as to grant the actual relief required by the parties. Held, applying the principles of equity to the present case, that the Court of first instance acted rightly in adding the name of each rival pre-emptor as party-defendant in the suit of the other, and in decreeing the claim of the superior pre-emptor, but that the decree in K's suit was defective and inequitable, inasmuch as it dismissed the suit in toto, disallowing pre-emptive claim wholly irrespective of the contingency of R's omission to enforce the pre-emption decreed to him by depositing the purchase-money within time. As K admittedly had pre-emptive right as against the vendee, his suit should have been decreed against the latter in the terms of sec. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code ; subject ; however, to the condition that the decree should not take effect, so far as the enforcement of pre-emption was concerned, in the event of R's enforcing the superior pre-emptive right decreed to him.—6 Al. 370.

See I. L. R., 14 Madr. 328, noted under sec. 13.

215. When the suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, the Court before making its decree, may pass an order fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken and other acts to be done as it thinks fit.

Notes.

In a suit for an account of partnership-transactions, the Subordinate Judge, in whose Court the suit was instituted, framed certain issues with the object of ascertaining who managed the business ; with whom the partnership-property was ; whether the defendants ought to account ; what was the capital, and what the expenditure and profits of the firm ; and, after taking evidence on those points, dismissed the suit. Held that the Subordinate Judge should have followed the course pointed out in forms 132 and 133 of sch. iv. of the Civil Procedure Code, and at the first hearing should have determined whether there had been a partnership ; what were its conditions ; was it dissolved, or ought it to be dissolved ; and who were the parties interested, and in what shares ; and, upon determining these questions, should have directed accounts to be taken ; and, after the accounts had been taken, should have made a final decree. Held, also that the suit should not have been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, and the case was transferred to the Court of the District Judge. The plaint in a partnership-suit ought to be framed on the lines of form 113 in sch. iv. of the Code, and the accounts should be taken as prayed in that form. Under ordinary circumstances, the costs of a partnership-suit should be paid out of the assets of the partnership, or, in default of assets, by the partners in proportion to their respective shares, unless any partner denies the fact of a partnership, or opposes obstacles to the taking of the accounts, and so renders a suit necessary, when he is usually made to pay the costs up to the hearing.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 428.

T, B, R, and W, the owners of a certain estate in equal shares in 1863, entered into a partnership " for the cultivation of tea and other products " upon such estate. In 1864, H, E, and I, joined the firm. In 1870 H died ; and in 1871 T purchased his share and those of E and I, and in 1873 of R. In 1875, T gave the Delhi and London Bank a mortgage on such estate as security for the repayment of money which he had borrowed from the Bank ostensibly for the purposes of the estate. The Bank obtained a decree against him personally for the money, in execution of which his rights and interests in the estate were put up for sale on the 20th June 1877, and were purchased by the Bank, which obtained possession of the estate in August 1877. In August 1879, B and W's executor sued T and the Bank, claiming a declaration that they were or had been partners with T in the estate ; that, if the partnership should be held to be subsisting, it might be dissolved, or that, if it had ceased to exist, the date of its termination might be fixed ; and that, in either event, a liquidator might be appointed to and shall be for the recovery of any sum which appears to be due to either party.

The decree of the Court with respect to any sum awarded to the defendant shall have the same effect, and be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal or otherwise, as if such sum had been claimed by the defendant in a separate suit against the plaintiff.

The provisions of this section shall apply whether the set-off is admissible under section 111 or otherwise.

Application for execution of a decree was made on the 10th November 1869, and on the 27th November 1869, notice issued under sec. 216 of the Civil Procedure Code. Again on the 4th February 1873, application was made for execution, and notice was issued on the 19th February 1873, under sec. 216. A subsequent application for execution was made on the 31st August 1874, and the order for notice to issue, under sec. 216, was made on the same day. The question raised in appeal against the order to issue execution was whether the plaintiff's right to execution was barred, and had been so when the application, dated 31st August 1874, for execution, was made. Held on appeal by the High Court (Kernan and Kindersley, JJ.) that, as the application for execution of the 4th February 1873, being more than three years after the date of issuing the last prior notice under sec. 216, viz., 27th November 1869, was late under art. 167, para 5, Act IX of 1871, execution was barred by limitation at and before the date of that application, and that this bar was not removed by the circumstance that the judgment-debtor had allowed the service of the notice on him in February 1873 to pass unchallenged. Raja Chilicany v. Ragavulu Naidu (5 M. H. C. R., 100) distinguished. Held also, following Chunder Coomar Roy v. Bhogobutty Prosonno Roy I. L. R., 3 Cal. 235, that "applications to enforce a decree" in para. 4 of art. 167, Act IX of 1871, mean "applications under sec. 212 or otherwise by which proceedings in execution are commenced, and not applications of an incidental kind made during the pendency of such proceedings."—I. L. R., 2 Madr. 1.

217. Certified copies of the judgment and decree shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court, and at their expense.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF COSTS.

218. When disposing of any application under this Code, the Court may give to either party the cost of such application, or may reserve the consideration of such costs for any future stage of the proceedings.

219. The judgment shall direct by whom the costs of ^{Judgment to direct by} each party are to be paid, whether by ^{whom costs to be paid.} himself or by any other party to the suit, and whether in whole or in what part or proportion.

Notes.

A L D and others, having got a decree in a suit in which S B D, a purdah-nashin, was plaintiff, a rule nisi was obtained by them against J C S, and another, on the ground that he was the real plaintiff, and S B D only a nominal one. It appeared that S B D had no means of her own, but lived in the house of J C S, who could explain nothing of her circumstances, or why she was residing in his house; but he stated that she had purchased the former plaintiff's right in the suit against a decree, she having been previously uninterested in the matter, and the only reason suggested for her doing so was that a small portion of the premises in question would serve for carrying out a religious purpose said to be entertained by her. The Court found that S B D was only a sham plaintiff, and that J C S was the real one, and the rule was made absolute. Held that the words "another party" in sec. 187 of Act VIII of 1859 should be read as if identical with "another party to the suit." Held, also, that the Court cannot, by its judgment in any given suit, deal directly with persons not before it in that suit; that the Court has the same power of directing that the costs of any party to a suit for the recovery of land shall be paid by a person who is not on the record, as the late Supreme Court had, and as the Courts at Westminster still possess and exercise; that the recovery of costs from the real plaintiff in a suit in which the plaintiff on the record is only a sham one, is not a step in the proceedings in any particular suit, nor can it be made the subject of a separate plaint, but is of the nature of a substantive proceeding in personam, and is within the equitable jurisdiction of the Court; that, if the plaintiff on the record in a suit be only a sham one, the defendant may proceed against the real plaintiff for costs; that the real plaintiff in a suit, in which the one on the record is a sham plaintiff, is liable for the costs.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 44. Affirmed on appeal, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 96. S. C. 14 W. R., O. C., 1.

The costs in a partition-suit, where the property is of so small a value that it is likely to be wholly absorbed by the expenses, and where the suit by a joint-holder is therefore brought unjustifiably and to the detriment of the others, ought to be paid by the plaintiff.—1 Hyde's Rep., 122.

Portion of the costs awarded to the defendant in exercise of the discretion given by Act VIII of 1859, sec. 187, where in a suit for some jewels it appeared on the evidence of the plaintiffs that they were not worth so much as stated in the plaint, and the suit might have been brought in the Small Cause Court.—1 Hyde's Rep., 172.

If the Official Assignee defends a suit, he is liable, in the event of failure, to be ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs in the same way as any other defendant; and if the estate be insufficient to pay the costs, he will have to bear them personally. It is for him to protect himself by getting a guarantee of indemnity from the parties who set him in motion.—I. L. R., 7 Bom. 424.

220. The Court shall have full power to give and apportion costs of every application and suit in any manner it thinks fit, and the fact that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the case is no bar to the exercise of such power:

Power of Court as to costs.

Provided that, if the Court directs that the costs of any application or suit shall not follow the event, the Court shall state its reasons in writing.

Every order relating to costs made under this Code, and not forming part of a decree, may be executed as if it were a decree for money.

Certain plaintiffs were the holders of the following decree obtained on a mortgage-bond: "It is ordered that the defendants shall pay to the plaintiffs the sum of Rs. 2,550 and costs Rs. 312, total Rs. 2,862, within two months from the date of the signing of the decree; interest will run on the said amount at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum up to realization. If the defendants do not pay the amount within the time prescribed, they will lose their right of redeeming the property mortgaged, and possession thereof will be given to the plaintiffs." On the judgment-debtors making default, the decree-holders applied for execution, the Subordinate Judge directed execution to issue, but held that execution could not be had for costs under the terms of the decree; and this order was upheld by the District Judge on appeal. Held that the decree-holders were entitled to their costs of the suit from the judgment-debtors personally, or from properties belonging to the judgment-debtors other than those mortgaged.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 185.

Where the original Court has made an erroneous order for costs under a misapprehension of fact and law, an appeal lies from such order under the Civil Procedure Code, although the appellant complains of nothing else but the order for costs so erroneously made.—16 Bom. 676.

A decree for foreclosure containing a distinct and separate order for costs was afterwards confirmed by an order absolute for foreclosure, and the mortgagee under such order obtained possession. Subsequently he applied for execution of the order for costs. Held that the costs awarded could not be considered part of the money due upon the mortgage, and, as such, superseded by the order absolute and the mortgagee's possession thereunder, and the application must, therefore, be allowed. Rutnessur Sein v. Jusoda (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 185) referred to.—10 Al. 179.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 577, noted under sec. 412.

221. The Court may direct that the costs payable to one party by another shall be set-off against a sum which is admitted or is found in the suit to be former to the latter.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The decree in a redemption-suit directed the plaintiff (the mortgagor) to pay the mortgage-money and interest to the defendant, and directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff the costs of the suit. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to set-off the amount of his taxed costs against the mortgage-money which he was liable to pay under the decree, notwithstanding any claim that the defendant's attorney might have against the defendant in respect of the defendant's costs of suit.—I. L. R., 4 Cal. 742.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 351, noted under sec. 214.

222. The Court may give interest on costs at any rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, and may direct that costs, with or without interest, be paid out of, or charged upon, the subject-matter of the suit.

On the 21st August 1876, certain immoveable property belonging to M was put up for sale, and was purchased by R. On the 20th April 1877, such sale was set aside under sec. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the order attaching such property and the notifications of sale had not, as required by sec. 222, been signed by the Court executing the decree, but by the munsarim of the Court. On the 27th June 1877, M conveyed such property to H, who purchased it bona fide, and for value, and satisfied the incumbrances existing thereon. On the 15th April 1878, R sued H and N to have the order setting aside such sale set aside, and to have such sale confirmed in his favor, on the ground that it had been improperly set aside under sec. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, the judgment-debtor not having been prejudiced by the irregularities in respect whereof such sale had been set aside. Held (by Oldfield, J.) that although such sale might have been improperly set aside, yet inasmuch as the order of attachment and the notifications of sale could have no legal effect, having been signed by the munsarim of the Court executing the decree, and not by the Court, as required by sec. 222 of Act VIII of 1859, and inasmuch as it would be inequitable, after the incumbrances on such property had been satisfied and the state of things changed, to allow R, after standing by for a year, and permitting dealings with the property, to come in and take advantage of the change of circumstances, and obtain a property become much more valuable at the price he originally offered, R ought not to obtain the relief which he sought. Held (by Straight, J.) that the fact that the Court executing the decree had not signed the order of attachment and the notifications of sale vitiated the proceedings in execution ab initio, and rendered the sale which R desired to have confirmed void, and R's suit therefore failed, and had properly been dismissed.—I. L. R., 3 Al. 701.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE EXECUTION OF DECREES.

A.—Of the Court by which Decrees may be executed.

223. A decree may be executed either by the Court which passed it, or by the Court to which it is sent for execution under the provisions hereinafter contained.

Court by which decree may be executed.

The Court which passed a decree may, on the application of the decree-holder, send it for execution to another Court—

(a) if the person against whom the decree is passed actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other Court, or

(b) if such person has not property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree sufficient to satisfy such decree, and has property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other Court, or

(c) if the decree directs the sale of immoveable property situate outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it, or

(d) if the Court which passed the decree considers, for any other reason, which it shall record in writing, that the decree should be executed by such other Court.

The Court which passed a decree may, of its own motion, send it for execution to any Court subordinate thereto.

The Court to which a decree is sent under this section for execution shall certify to the Court which passed it the fact of such execution, or, where the former Court fails to execute the same, the circumstances attending such failure.

If the decree has been passed “in a suit of which the value as set forth in the plaint did not exceed two thousand rupees, and which, as regards its subject-matter, is not excepted by the law for the time being in force from the cognizance of either a Presidency or a Provincial Court of Small Causes,” and the Court which passed it wishes it to be executed in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Rangoon, such Court may send to the Court of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Rangoon, as the case may be, the copies and certificate respectively mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of section 224; and such Court of Small Causes shall thereupon execute the decree as if it had been passed by itself.

If the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court. But, if the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a decree of one Court has been transmitted to another for execution under sec. 284 of Act VIII of 1859, the latter Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application to cancel its own order for striking off the case, whatever "striking off" amounts to.—1 B.L.R., (F.B.) 91; 10 W.R., (F.B.) 46.

A obtained a decree in the Nuddea Court against B, who had obtained a decree against C in the Beerbhoom Court. The latter was attached by the Nuddea Court, and sold to A in execution of his decree. A then petitioned the Beerbhoom Court for execution against C. Held that the Nuddea Court had jurisdiction to attach and sell B's decree against C, and A had a right to apply to the Beerbhoom Court for execution thereof.—2 B.L.R. (A. C.) 65; 10 W. R., 357.

A decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moorshedabad was sent to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajshahye for execution, and certain property was attached in that district. A claimant of the attached property then obtained from the former Court an order on the second Court to send the record back again to Moorshedabad for the purpose of executing the decree there, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had property in that district; and also on the allegation, unsupported by oath, that the property sought to be attached in Rajshahye was his. Held that the Subordinate Judge of Moorshedabad had acted without jurisdiction, and the record must be sent back to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajshahye for execution. Held also that the claimant had no locus standi in the Moorshedabad Court to make such application.—3 B. L. R., (A.C.) 181; 11 W. R., 557.

Where the High Court passes a decree on appeal from a Mofussil Court, the Court which has to execute the decree of the High Court is governed by the rules which govern the execution of its own decrees. An appeal prosecuted to a decree is a proceeding to enforce a decree within the meaning of sec. 20 of Act XIV of 1859. Also, held there was such a proceeding where, on the judgment-debtor seeking to obtain leave from the High Court to appeal to the Privy Council, the execution-creditor intervened. The ruling in Chowdhry Wahid Ali v. Mullick Inayet Ali (6 B. L. R. 52) that, whether the decree of the lower Court is reversed or modified or affirmed, the decree passed by the Appellate Court is the final decree in the suit, and as such the only decree which is capable of being enforced by execution, not dissented from, except that it was suggested that in all cases it may be expedient expressly to embody in a decree of affirmance so much of the decree below as it is intended to affirm, and thus avoid the necessity of a reference to the superseded decree. Quære.—Can the ruling in Anundmayi Dasi v. Purno Chandra Roy (Case No. 569 of 1865; 24th August 1866) be supported?—10 B.L.R., 101; 17 W.R., 292; 14 Moore's I.A. 465.

The plaintiff, as manager of the estate of her husband, a lunatic, obtained a decree, and attached and became the purchaser of the lands of the defendant in execution of the decree. The Judge required her to give security for the proceeds of the sale before he would allow actual possession to be given to her. The sale was confirmed, but several months elapsed before she found security, and meanwhile the same lands were attached and purchased by other creditors under another decree against the said debtor, and possession was given to them. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) the title of the plaintiff must prevail. The security was ordered for the protection of the lunatic against misappropriation by his manager ; it was not a proceeding affecting the judgment-debtor. The second sale ought not to have been ordered or confirmed. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, property may be attached without view to immediate sale. A Court has power to send its decree for concurrent execution into several places, although in its discretion it may refuse to exercise such power.—10 B. L. R., 214 ; 17 W. R., 289 ; 14 Moore's I. A. 529.

A money-decree was made by the Judge of the 24-Pergannahs against a mortgagor who was possessed of property in the 24-Pergannahs, and also of an estate called Kismut Kosdaha, 18 mouzahs of which lay in Zillah 24-Pergannahs, and 42 mouzahs in Zillah Nuddea. The whole estate was entered in the taujih of, and the Government revenue was payable in, the Collectorate of Nuddea. The Judge of the 24-Pergannahs, without selling the property of the judgment-debtor which was within his jurisdiction, transmitted a certificate, under sec. 285 of the Civil Procedure Code, to the Judge of Nuddea, stating that no portion of the amount of the decree had been realized by the Court of the 24-Pergannahs. Thereupon, Kismut Kosdaha was attached and sold by order of the Nuddea Court. In a suit brought against the purchaser for possession of the 18 mouzahs lying in the 24 Pergannahs by a person who claimed to have bought the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in those mouzahs, but who, in fact, was not the real purchaser, held that the suit ought to have been dismissed because of the non-joinder as plaintiff of the real purchaser. Held further that "part of an estate" in sec. 249, Act VIII of 1859, means an aliquot part of an estate. Held also that, although the Court of the 24-Pergannahs strictly ought not to have granted the certificate until the property in the 24-Pergannahs had been sold, the error in so doing did not make the certificate void, or avoid the proceedings in the Nuddea Court, Kismut Kosdaha being substantially in the Nuddea District. Maharajah of Burdwan v. Sreenarain Mitter (9 W. R., 346) commented on.—11 B. L. R., 56 ; 19 W. R., 434.

An order passed by a Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution is not open to appeal, unless the order has been made in the course of the actual execution of the transferred decree. The Court to which a decree has been transferred can take cognizance of a question of limitation, but the question must be one arising from facts which are legitimately before the Court in the course of execution, and not a matter of limitation arising antecedent to transfer. Quære.—Whether, where a decree has been transferred to the Munsif's Court for execution, an appeal will lie to the Judge from the Munsif's order in the matter of the execution ?—13 B. L. R., App. 27. S. C., 21 W. R., 292.

The Transfer of a decree from one Court to another under sec 284 and the following sections of the Civil Procedure Code does not give the latter Court a jurisdiction to entertain and determine any question with regard to limitation, or otherwise which arose between the parties antecedent to the date of transfer.—13 B. L. R., App. 30. S. C., 21 W. R., 330.

When a decree has been transmitted by the Court which passed it to another Court for execution, the latter Court has jurisdiction to try whether or not execution of the decree is barred by the law of limitation. Per Peacock, C.J.—When there are different laws of limitation in force in the two Courts, the law applicable to the proceedings in execution of the decree should be the law of the Court to which the decree is transmitted for execution.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 970 ; 10 W. R., (F. B.) 10 ; 5 W. R., Mis., 14 ; 7 N. W. P. H. C. R., 115 ; 7 W. R., 19.

Process of execution against the person or personal property of a judgment-debtor may be issued on the decree of a Court of Small Causes by a Court in another district. Before issuing such process of execution, the Court receiving the decree is bound to see that the provisions in secs. 236 and 287 of the Civil Procedure Code have been strictly complied with. The documents required to be transmitted for the purpose of obtaining execution or a copy of the decree and a certificate of any sum remaining due under it, together with a copy of any order for execution that may have been passed. Act XXVI. of 1867 requires that copies of the decree and of the order for execution should be stamped. The certificate requires no stamp.—4 M. H. C. R., 331.

When an Assistant Judge is invested with all the powers of a District Judge within any part of the district of such Judge, the Court of the Assistant Judge must be considered, equally with the Court of the District Judge, the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, and a decree sent for execution in such part of the district is properly executed by or under the directions of such Assistant Judge. The functions of the Court executing a decree are judicial, and not merely ministerial.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 37.

A decree passed by a Principal Sadr Amin of the district of North Canara, before that district was transferred to the Bombay Presidency, should be executed by the First-class Subordinate Judge who has succeeded to the Court and function of such Principal Sadr Amin, and cannot by him be delegated for execution by a Second-class Subordinate Judge, though the amount of such decree be less than Rs. 5,000. The provision in the Bombay Courts' Act (XIV. of 1869), that in suits under Rs. 5,000 the Second-class Subordinate Judges only shall have jurisdiction, does not affect the execution of decrees passed before that Act came into force.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 113.

The Court to which a decree is sent for execution by another Court has the power to take the same steps, including the issue of a notice under sec. 216 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which it could take in execution of its own decree.—11 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 19.

Under the authority of sec. 284 et seq., the Court of the agent for Sirdars, not having jurisdiction over a Sirdar's son, who is not himself a Sirdar, cannot transfer a decree passed against the Sirdar to a Civil Court for execution against the son. To obtain enforcement in such a case against his heir of a decree against the Sirdar, the decree-holder may file a suit in the ordinary Civil Court on his decree.—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 212.

A Zillah Judge has no power to transfer proceedings in execution of a decree to a Subordinate Court unless duly authorized under sec. 19 of Act XVI. of 1868.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 113; Ed. 1873, 199.

A decree transmitted to a Court for execution is to be regarded as a decree of that Court for the purpose of execution, and an appeal, therefore, lies against the order of a District Judge passed in execution of a decree transmitted to his Court from a Small Cause Court.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 168.

Where a decree-holder, who had obtained a decree in the Civil Court of Loodhiana, which had been transmitted to Seharunpore for execution, assigned his decree before the Seharunpore Court to a third party without the knowledge or consent of the Loodhiana Court, and monies were paid to the purchaser, by the judgment debtor on such assignment, and the assignment was subsequently, on objection being taken, sanctioned by the Civil Court of Loodhiana, held, on an application for the refund of such monies, that, although they were paid under an irregular sanction of the Seharunpore Court, yet that, as at time of payment the purchaser was undoubtedly entitled to receive them, and the irregularity of the procedure of the Seharunpore Court had since been cured, and the purchaser was now in a position to execute the decree, that it would clearly be inequitable to order the refund of the money on the score of irregularities.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 69.

Where a decree is transmitted by one Court to another for the purpose of execution, the latter Court has no jurisdiction to alter the decree, or the amount mentioned in the order for execution.—Marshall's Rep., 244; 2 Hay's Rep., 113; 9 W. R., 387; 10 W. R., 95; 1. B. L. R., (A.C.) 62.

Where a decree had been obtained in a Zillah Court, and sent to Calcutta for execution, the Court made an order directing a notice to issue, calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree should not be executed by the High Court. On appeal the order was upheld.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 189; 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 399.

The Court of the Principal Sadr Amin at K having been abolished after a decree was passed by it, and the case having been transferred to the Court of the Judge of the zillah by which execution was regularly issued, held that the Judge's Court had jurisdiction to entertain a subsequent application for execution, though made after the re-establishment of a Principal Sadr Amin's Court at K.—7 W. R., 124.

Every Court is bound to execute its own decree, if it can, by process (when necessary) issued against the property or person of the judgment-debtor: it is only when the decree cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court whose decree it is, that it may be sent to another Court for execution. There is no intermediate procedure between these two executions.—9 W. R., 347.

Where a Subordinate Judge's Court in one district, executes the decree of a Subordinate Judge's Court of another district, it is bound by sec. 292, Act VIII. of 1859, to comply with a requisition from the latter Court to transmit to it the record of the case.—11 W. R., 230.

A judge has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition from, and order the release of, a judgment-debtor imprisoned in execution of a decree, while the execution-proceedings are before the Subordinate Judge.—12 W. R., 65.

Where a Judge had made an ex-parte order for transfer of a case in execution, it was held he had power to recall it.—13 W. R., 232.

Held that, after the orders of Government of 1867, dividing the whole of the jurisdiction of the Principal Sadr Amin of Rajshahye into two portions, the Small Cause Court Judge of Pubna alone had jurisdiction to perform in the district of Pubna the duties which, but for those orders, would have been performed by the Principal Sadr Amin of Rajshahye.—14 W. R., 396.

Where execution was sought of a decree which was passed in 1850, and which could not be executed by the revenue authorities in consequence of the transfer of its jurisdiction in such matters to the Civil Courts, held that the Civil Courts had jurisdiction to entertain the application.—17 W. R., 472.

The Judge had power, under Act XVI. of 1868, sec. 19, to transfer to the Subordinate Judge a case under Act IX. of 1861, an application under the latter Act not being a suit.—17 W. R., 551.

Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 284, does not restrict the granting of a certificate transferring a decree for execution to another Court to cases where such decree cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court, whose duty it is to execute the same. A certificate may be granted upon its appearing to the latter Court that the decree could not have been completely executed by the sale of the property in its own district, but that it could be so executed by the sale of the property in the other district.—19 W. R., 307.

When a copy of a decree or order for execution is transmitted by the Judge of one district A to the Judge of another B for the purpose specified in Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 287, the Judge of B has no authority to transfer it to a third district. If complete, execution cannot be had in district B; it is the business of the decree-holder to have his decree re-transmitted to the Court, whose duty it is to execute it, and there to obtain a fresh certificate for transmission to any other district where execution may be practicable. 21 W. R., 337.

A Court having local jurisdiction is competent to sell in execution of a decree one or more outlying portions of an estate, even though the greater portion of that estate is not within its jurisdiction.—23 W. R., 154.

Under sec. 20 of Act XI of 1865, a Court of Small Causes may transfer a decree for execution to another Court, not only when there has been a sale of such moveables of the debtor as the judgment-creditor has been able to discover, and the proceeds of such sale have not been sufficient to satisfy the decree, but also when no sale has taken place at all, and the decree remains unsatisfied by reason of there being no moveable property of the judgment-debtor which can be found within the jurisdiction capable of being sold.—3 C. L. R., 558.

Two executions of the same decree, so far as attachment of different properties of the judgment-debtor is concerned, may proceed simultaneously, though ordinarily the sales in execution should not take place simultaneously.—7 C. L. R., 537.

A mortgage-decree was passed directing the sale of certain property wholly situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree. After the decree the district within which the property was situate was transferred and placed under the local jurisdiction of another Court. The judgment-debtor then applied to the first Court for execution of the decree, and thereupon the judgment-debtor objected that that Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application or to direct the sale of the property. Held that that Court had authority to execute its own decree and bring the property to sale. Held, further, that sec. 223 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure does not curtail the power of a Court to execute its own decree, but gives it a discretion either to execute the decree itself or, on the application of the decree-holder, to send it to another Court for execution, and thereby extends rather than limits the Court's power.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 667.

The Court that has the power to pass a decree for sale of a property has also power to carry out its decree by selling that property, whether any portion of that property be within the local limits of its jurisdiction or not. Per GHOSE, J., sec. 223, clause (c) of the Civil Procedure Code leaves it to the discretion of the Court to send the decree for execution of the Court having local jurisdiction.—19 Cal. 13.

Sec. 223 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which declares that the Court which passes a decree may, on the application of the decree-holder, send it for execution to another Court, should be interpreted to mean another Court having jurisdiction and competent to execute that decree, having regard to the amount or value of the subject-matter of its ordinary jurisdiction. Narasayya v. Venkata Krishnayya (I. L. R., 7 Madr. 397) dissented from. 16 Cal. 465.

Where parties are prevented from doing a thing in Court on a particular day, not by any act of their own, but by the act of the Court itself, they are entitled to do it at the first subsequent opportunity.—18 Cal. 631.

The application by a decree-holder for a copy of a decree with intent to apply for execution is not a step in aid of execution within the meaning of cl. 4 of art. 179 of sch. 2 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1879, 11 Madr. 336.

Two decrees were passed against the same defendant in the Court of a District Munsif and on the small cause side of a Subordinate Court in the same District, respectively. The holder of the decree in the small cause suit attached and brought to sale the judgment-debtor's interest in a benefit fund. The other decree-holder applied for rateable distribution, his decree having been transferred for execution to the Subordinate Court directly and not through the District Court:—Held, (1) that the direct transfer of the decree of the District Munsif was not illegal; (2) that the Subordinate Judge had inherent jurisdiction to execute the decree of the District Munsif; (3) that the order for rateable distribution was right.—15 Madr. 345.

The plaintiff, having obtained a decree against the defendant in the Court at Bhusaval, sought to execute it by attaching a moiety of the defendant's pay. The defendant was a sorter in the Railway Mail Service, and travelled between Bhusaval and Nagpur, at which latter place he resided and received his pay. By an order of attachment issued, at the plaintiff's instance, by the Bhusaval Court to the defendant's disbursing officer at Nagpur, a moiety of the defendant's pay having been withheld by that officer, the defendant applied to the Bhusaval Court to cancel the order, contending that it was illegal, as neither he nor his disbursing officer resided at Bhusaval. On reference to the High Court, held that the order of attachment was ultra vires, as neither the defendant nor his disbursing officer resided within the jurisdiction of the Bhusaval Court. The proper procedure was to send the decree of the Bhusaval Court for execution to Nagpur, where the disbursing officer resided, and the defendant's pay was available for satisfaction of the decree.—12 Bom. 44.

The Courts of British India have no authority to send their decrees for execution to Courts not in British India.—12 Bom. 230.

Where a Court makes an order for execution of a decree and transmits the decree for execution to another Court, the latter Court has no power to determine whether execution is barred by limitation. The order for execution made by the transmitting Court is binding on the parties until reversed on appeal. It is otherwise, however, where the transmitting Court has made no order for execution, but has merely transmitted the decree and the certificate of non-satisfaction.—15 Bom. 28.

The Courts of British India have no power to execute a decree passed by the Court of a Foreign State. A decree of the Civil Court of Cooch Be-har having been transferred for execution to the District of Rungpore :—Held, that the Courts of Rungpore had no jurisdiction to execute the decree.—13 Cal. 95.

Where the original suit is a suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes, and the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 500 in value, no second appeal will lie in respect of an order made in execution proceedings relating thereto, whether such proceedings are taken in the Court which passed the decree or in that to which the decree may have been transferred for execution. Nazar Husain v Kesri Mal approved.—12 Al. 579.

The plaintiff, having obtained a money-decree against H. and others in a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulia, applied for execution by attachment and sale of their immoveable property. That property was accordingly sold, but before the realization of the assets the defendant, who also had obtained a money decree against the same judgment-debtors in the same Court in its Small Cause jurisdiction, applied for the execution of his decree by attachment and sale of the immoveable property, which had already been attached at the instance of the plaintiff. The Court under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code Act (XIV of 1882) rateably distributed the proceeds of the sale between the plaintiff and the defendant. The plaintiff now brought this suit in the Small Cause jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulia to recover from the defendant the amount paid to him, alleging that it had been illegally paid, as the procedure laid down in sec. 223 of the Code had not been followed :—Held, that, as ruled in Bhagyvan Dayalji v. Balu, a Subordinate Judge invested with Small Cause Court powers has generally to follow the procedure prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure. This governs his proceedings both in trial and execution, whether the suit is a Small Cause or not. If the two jurisdictions assigned to the Subordinate Judge's Court and to the Subordinate Judge personally are locally co-extensive, there is no distinction of sides or branches. But where, as in some cases, the ordinary jurisdiction is wider locally than the Small Cause jurisdiction, the Court is, in that part of its territory which lies outside the Small Cause Court jurisdiction, to be regarded as a separate Court, so far, that a decree in a Small Cause should not generally be executed on property beyond the Small Cause jurisdiction without a transfer, i. e., a dealing with the execution as in a suit tried in the usual way, for reasons to be recorded in writing. As all is done by the same Judge, a suggestion and an order recorded in the case are sufficient without a formal transmission as to a distant Court.—9 Bom. 237.

Small Cause Courts in the mofassal are not at liberty to execute decrees against moveable property beyond their local jurisdiction.—2 Bom. 532.

On the 15th May 1876, a judgment-creditor obtained a decree in the Civil Court of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, which are included amongst the Scheduled Districts, and on or about the 15th May 1876, at his instance, it was sent with a certificate of non-satisfaction to the Court of a Munsiff in the Regulation District of Chittagong for execution. After sundry unsuccessful attempts to execute the decree, an application was made on the 17th September 1886 for its execution. The judgment-debtor objected that under sec. 229 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) the Munsiff's Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree, as it could only act under that section, and the Code had never been extended to the Chittagong Hill Tracts. Held that, as at the time the decree was passed and sent to the Munsif for execution Act VIII of 1859 was in force, and by sec. 284 of that Act the judgment-creditor had a right to have his decree sent to any Civil Court for execution, he was entitled now to have it executed, as neither Acts X of 1877 or XIV of 1882, by express words or implication deprived him of that right. Held, further, that the intention of the Legislature was, with regard to decrees obtained in Scheduled Districts after the Code of 1877 came into force, that such decrees should not be executed by Courts in British India unless and until, under the provisions of sec. 5 of the Scheduled Districts Act (XIV of 1874), the Government had issued the notification therein referred to applying to the Scheduled Districts such portion of the Code of Civil Procedure as they thought proper to apply. Quære.—Whether a decree passed by a Court in a Scheduled District, and sent for execution to a Court in a Regulation District after Act X of 1877 came into force, can be executed by the latter Court in the absence of such a notification extending the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to the Scheduled Districts.—15 Cal. 365.

Whether a decree for rent, under Act X of 1859, made in one district, can be transferred to another for execution, is a question which the High Court can decide in the exercise of its "superintendence over all Courts subject to its appellate jurisdiction," under 24 and 25 Vic., c. 104, sec. 15. Decrees for rent made by the Collector under sec. 23 of Act X of 1859 can be executed by a Civil Court to which they may be transferred under the sections of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to "the execution of a decree out of the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed."—9 Cal. 295.

The holders of a decree, made in 1866, against K and certain other persons jointly, applied to recover mesne-profits in execution thereof. K paid the decree-holders the mesne-profits claimed, and then sued his co-judgment-debtors for contribution, and in 1878 obtained a decree against them. Subsequently the holders of the decree of 1866 again applied to recover mesne-profits in execution thereof, and in the proceedings which followed it was decided that mesne-profits were not recoverable under the decree. After this K's representatives applied for execution of the decree of 1878. The lower Courts refused to execute the decree, on the ground that, as under the decree of 1866, on which the decree of 1878 was based, mesne-profits were not recoverable, it would not be equitable to allow a decree for contribution passed on a contrary supposition to be executed. Held that the lower Courts were not competent to go behind the decree of 1878, but must deal with it as it stood.—5 Al. 53.

A Mufussal Court of Small Causes must adopt the machinery of sec. 223 of the Civil Procedure Code in all cases where execution is sought against persons or property outside its local jurisdiction. Such a Court, therefore, cannot attach the salary of a public officer where the same is disbursed outside its local jurisdiction. Hossein Ally v. Ashotosh Gangoolly (3 C. L. R., 30 followed).—6 Al. 243.

Although by the Madras Civil Courts' Act, 1871, the ordinary jurisdiction of Munsifs is limited in suits and applications of a civil nature to those in which the subject-matter does not exceed in value Rs. 2,500, sec. 223 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives jurisdiction to a Munsif's Court to execute a decree in a suit beyond its jurisdiction which has been transferred to it for execution by a District Court.—7 Madr. 397.

The Courts of Subordinate Judges invested with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Small Cause Court under sec. 28 of Act XIV of 1869 does not thereby become "Courts of Small Causes constituted under Act XI of 1865." They merely exercise a similar jurisdiction. This makes their decisions final in the cases to which the jurisdiction extends, but it does not imply that the variations of procedure prescribed expressly for the Courts constituted under Act XI of 1865 are applicable to Courts constituted under a different Act and subject to different conditions. The Court of a Subordinate Judge exercising Small Cause Court powers is, under sec. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), one of the "other Courts exercising jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes," and, as such, its procedure is governed by the Civil Procedure Code without the variations provided by Act XI of 1865. Under sec. 223 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code the Court which has passed a decree in its Small Cause Court jurisdiction may, for any good reason to be recorded in writing, transfer its decree to the other branch of the same Court, as it might to a different Court, for execution, without requiring a certificate under sec. 20 of Act XI of 1865. For this purpose the two branches or sides of the Subordinate Judge's Court may be regarded as different Courts.—8 Bom. 230.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 513, noted under sec. 649; 14 Cal. 661, noted under sec. 19; 17 Cal. 699, noted under sec. 16.

Procedure when Court desires that its own decree shall be executed by another court.

224. The Court sending a decree for execution under section 223 shall send—

- (a) a copy of the decree ;
- (b) a certificate setting forth that satisfaction of the decree has not been obtained by execution within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed, or, where the decree has been executed in part, the extent to which satisfaction has been obtained and what part of the decree remains unexecuted ; and
- (c) a copy of any order for the execution of the decree, and, if no such order has been made, a certificate to that effect.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

All orders passed by a Court between parties to the decree, and relating to the execution of the decree, are, unless they are specially barred, appealable. There is no special prohibition against an appeal from an order directing or refusing the issue of a certificate under sec. 285, Act VIII of 1859.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 73.

The words "a copy of any order for the execution of the decree" in sec. 224, cl. c, of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) mean a copy of any subsisting order.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 371.

The jurisdiction of a Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution is strictly limited to carrying out such execution. Such Court has no power to issue a certificate under secs. 285, and 286 of Act VIII of 1859, transferring the decree, already transferred to it, to another Court for execution. The Court to which a decree has been properly transferred for execution having struck the case off the file, a subsequent application for a further transfer of the Case to another Court for execution should be made to the Court which originally passed the decree sought to be executed. Bagram v. Wise considered.—3 Cal. 512.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 513; noted under sec. 649.

225. The Court to which a decree is so sent shall cause such copies and certificate to be filed, without any further proof of the decree or order for execution, or of the copies thereof, or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it, unless the former Court, for any special reasons to be recorded under the hand of the Judge, requires such proof.

Court [receiving] copies of decree, &c., to file same without proof.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

226. When such copies are so filed, the decree or order may, if the Court to which it is sent be the District Court, be executed by such Court or by any subordinate Court which it directs to execute the same.

Execution of decree or order by Court to which it is sent.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

227. If the Court to which the decree is sent for execution be a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been made by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

Execution by High Court of decree transmitted by other Court.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

228. The Court executing a decree sent to it under this chapter shall have the same powers in executing such decree as if it had been passed by itself. All persons disobeying or obstructing the execution of the decree shall be punishable by such Court in the same manner as if it had passed the decree. And its order in executing such decree shall be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal as if the decree had been passed by itself.

Powers of Court in executing transmitted decree.

Appeal from orders in executing such decrees.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In execution of a decree for enforcement of hypothecation by sale of specific property, an objection by the judgment-debtor that the property is not transferable, with reference to sec. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, cannot be entertained.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 130.

The powers which the foreign Court has, under sec. 228 are confined to the execution of the decree, and the Court cannot question the propriety or correctness of the order directing execution, nor can it, with reference to sec. 239 of the Code, stay execution except temporarily.—7 Al. 330.

See I. L. R., 9 Cal. 295 & 12 Al. 579, noted under sec. 223.

229. A decree of any Court established “or continued”* by the authority of the Governor-General in Council in the territories of any Foreign Prince or State, which cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was made, may be executed in manner herein provided within the jurisdiction of any Court in British India.

Decrees of Courts established by Government of India in Native States.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When a decree of one Court has been transmitted to another for execution under sec. 284 of Act VIII of 1859, the latter Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application to cancel its own order for striking off the case, whatever “striking off” amounts to.—1 B. It not being shown that the Court of the dewan ahilkar of Cooch Behar is a Court within the British territories, or a Court established by the Governor-General in a foreign state, held the Judge of Rajshahye had no jurisdiction, under sec. 284, Act VIII of 1859, to execute a decree of that Court.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 134; 13 W. R., 154.

When an Assistant Judge is invested with all the powers of a district Judge within any part of the district of such Judge, the Court of the Assistant Judge must be considered, equally with the Court of the District Judge, the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, and a decree sent for execution in such part of the district is properly executed by or under the directions of such Assistant Judge. The functions of the Court executing a decree are judicial, and not merely ministerial.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 37.

229A.† So much of the foregoing sections of this Chapter as empowers a Court to send a decree for execution to another Court shall be construed as empowering a Court in British India to send a decree for execution to any Court established or continued by the authority of the Governor-General in Council in the territories of any Foreign Prince or State to which the Governor-General in Council has, by notification in the Gazette of India, declared this section to apply.

Execution in British India of decrees of Courts of Native States.

229B.* The Governor-General in Council may, from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India,—

(a) declare that the decrees of any Civil or Revenue Courts situate in the territories of any Native Prince or State in alliance with Her Majesty, and not established “or continued” by the authority of the Governor-General in Council, may be executed in British India, as if they had been made by the Courts of British India, and

(b) cancel any such declaration.

So long as such declaration remains in force, the said decrees may be executed accordingly.

-This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

B.—Of Application for Execution.

When the holder of a decree desires to enforce it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or, if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court, then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof.

The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor.

Where an application to execute a decree for the payment of money or delivery of other property has been made under this section and granted, no subsequent application to execute the same decree shall be granted after the expiration of twelve years from any of the following dates (namely):—

(a) the date of the decree sought to be enforced or of the decree (if any) on appeal affirming the same, or

(b) where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money, or the delivery of any property, to be made at a certain date—the date of the default in making the payment or delivering the property in respect of which the applicant seeks to enforce the decree.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Court from granting an application for execution of a decree after the expiration of the said term of twelve-years, where the judgment-debtor has, by fraud or force, prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application.

The quoted words, “or continued,” have been inserted by the same amending Act and section. Any reference made before the commencement of Act VII. of 1888 in any notification or other document to sec. 434 shall be read as a reference to sec. 229B.

“Notwithstanding anything herein contained, proceeding may be taken to enforce any decree within three years after the passing of this Code, unless when the period prescribed for taking such proceedings by the law in force immediately before the passing of this Code shall have expired before the completion of the said three years.”*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A and B obtained a decree against C. A obtained an order for execution of his share in the amount of the decree. C pledged immoveable property as security to A, who caused it to be sold. B applied to the Court for her share in the sale-proceeds. The Principal Sadr Amin to refused the application. On appeal, held the order for execution ought, in express terms, to have reserved the rights of the other decree-holders to share in the proceeds of the execution. The case was sent back that the Principal Sadr Amin might apportion the amount realized amongst all the decree-holders.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 28.

Where two joint-decree-holders, each interested in an eight-anna share in a money-decree, issued joint-execution, and one of them, after the death of the other, received the whole amount due under the decree, held that this was only satisfaction as respects half of the decree, and that the representatives of the deceased were entitled to issue execution for the remaining half.—2 B. L. R., Ap. 43; 11 W. R., 262.

Two out of several co-decree-holders applied to the Judge's Court to execute their share of a decree. Held that this was not an application upon which the Court would proceed in execution, and that it could not in appeal be changed into an application for an execution of their whole decree. Although a Judge should, when necessary, direct notices to be served on judgment-debtors, he cannot proceed in execution on a mere application to issue such notices over the parties who are bound to apply under sec. 212 of Act VIII of 1859.—3 B. L. R., Ap. 21; 17 W. R., 19; 23 W. R., 342.

Where an application was made to the Civil Court under sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code by the petitioner disputing the right of a decree-holder to dispossess him of certain immoveable property, and the Civil Judge rejected the application, held that sec. 231 of the Civil Procedure Code did not give the petitioner a right of appeal to the High Court.—5 M. H. C. R., 183.

There is no provision of law which allows a decree-holder to apply for partial execution of a decree, nor any which allows several joint-decree-holders to put in separate applications for execution of a decree in respect of their several shares. An application made by one of several joint-holders of a decree enures for the benefit of all.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 90.

If a Court thinks fit to grant an application made by an assignee of a decree, under sec. 208, Civil Procedure Code, he becomes a party within the meaning of sec. II, Act XXIII. of 1861, and his name should be brought on the record.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 90; 13 W. R., 244.

* See Act XII of 1891, (Repealing and Amending Act.)

Where a decree-holder, in the execution of a decree for the possession of land, mesne-profits, and costs, applied for and obtained possession of the land and costs, and afterwards, within three years, applied in execution of the decree for mesne-profits, the execution of the decree for mesne-profits was not barred by limitation by reason of more than three years having elapsed from the date of the decree. When a decree is of a complex nature, and grants different kinds of relief to be obtained by process of different kinds, there is no valid objection to separate applications for partial execution of the decree.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 95.

When the judgment-debtors are jointly and severally liable to pay the decreed amount, the fact that one has paid his quota of an instalment will not modify his joint liability. If default be made by the other judgment-debtor, and an order protecting the estate of the former from proceedings to realise the whole sum decreed is improper.—1 Agra H. C. R., Mis. 14.

One of several joint-decree-holders is not bound by the acts of another who has compromised with the judgment-debtor, and agreed to receive payment by instalments.—1 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 16.

When a decree-holder having a joint-decree against several persons deals with some of them as severally liable for certain respective shares, he cannot execute the same decree as a joint one against the remaining judgment-debtors.—2 Hay's Rep., 297.

A joint-decree was passed in favour of A and B, and A subsequently applied for execution alone, alleging that B would not join with him in the application. The judgment-debtor stated, and B admitted, that more than half of the decretal money had been paid to the latter (out of Court), but the Court disbelieved the statement, and ordered execution to issue for the full amount of the decree. Held that the Court should, under sec. 207 of Act VIII of 1859, have allowed execution for half amount of the decree only.—3 C. L. R., 513.

Having regard to sec. 44 of the Contract Act, a release of one of two judgment-debtors who are made jointly liable for the amount of the decree does not discharge the other from liability; execution can be taken out against him.—6 C. L. R., 212.

In executing a joint decree against several debtors, it is not open to a Court to stay the sale of the property of certain of the debtors, upon their offering to pay what they consider their share of the amount due under the decree; nor can a Court, in such a case, upon proper action taken by the judgment-creditor, refuse to attach and sell the property of any one of the judgment-debtors in satisfaction of the entire judgment-debt. The liabilities of joint-debtors as amongst themselves, if not settled privately can be determined only in another suit.—8 C. L. R., 34.

On the third June 1879, an application was made for execution of a decree passed in 1836, and upon that application certain property was attached. On the 23rd October following, the proceedings were struck off, an order, however, being made at the same time that the attachment should continue. On the 31st December 1880, the decree-holder applied that the property under attachment should be sold. The preceding application for execution previous to that of 3rd June 1879 was made on the 8th August 1877. It was objected that the proceedings upon the applications of the 31st December 1880, and 3rd June 1879, were barred under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that these proceedings were not barred, inasmuch as the previous application had not been made under sec. 230 of the Code. Anandray Chimuji Avati v. Thakurchand (I. L. R., 5 Bom. 245) followed. Held also that the application of 3rd December 1880 could not be treated as a fresh application for execution within the meaning of the 3rd paragraph of the section referred to.—9 C. L. R., 297.

An application for execution of a decree, which was more than twelve years old, having been made on the 4th August 1880, under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an order was made for the attachment of the moveable property of the judgment-debtor. No moveable property having been found, the Court was asked to attach his immoveable property, but, refusing to do so, struck off the proceedings. The application for execution having been renewed on the 13th September 1880, it was held that the former application for execution must be treated as having been granted within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Code, and, consequently, that the further application was barred under that section, the decree being more than 12 years old.—9 C. L. R., 321.

A decree for possession and wasilat having been made in 1854, it was, by an order in January 1881, directed upon the report of an amin that the decree-holder should recover a particular sum for wasilat. On the 14th March 1881 the decree-holder filed a petition, praying that certain properties of the debtor might be attached and sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of the wasilat. Held that, under sec. 230 of Act X of 1877, the application of 14th March 1881 was not barred. The decree of 1854, so far as the wasilat was concerned, might be taken to be merely interlocutory, and did not become final until January 1881.—11 C. L. R., 17.

A mortgaged property, burdened with the payment of an entire debt to two share-holders, is liable to sale at the instance of both creditors separately so long as their claims remain unsatisfied. The act of one of two holders of a bond cannot destroy the lien of the other on property pledged to both as security for a joint debt.—3 W. R., 130.

Joint decree-holders are not entitled to apply separately for execution of the decree limited to what they consider their respective interests in it.—6 W. R., Mis., 65 ; 6 W. R., Mis., 76 ; N.-W. P. H. C. R., 413.

Though one of two or more decree-holders may, with the permission of the Court, take out execution of a joint-decree under sec. 207, the execution must be for the whole decree, and not for any fractional share to which the decree-holder may consider himself entitled, the Court making such orders as may be necessary for protecting the interest of other decree-holders.—7 W. R., 10 ; 22 W. R., 354.

One out of several decree-holders cannot execute a decree in respect of his own separate interest, or otherwise than the decree as a whole. In this case, however, the decree-holder was allowed to amend his application to execute the decree for his own share, and to convert it into an application to execute the whole decree.—7 W. R., 535.

The rule of law which forbids application for execution of part of a decree does not bar application for all that remains due upon a decree where the rest has been previously satisfied.—12 W. R., 370.

On an appeal from an order passed in execution of a decree for possession and mesne-profits, the High Court laid down the principle that, though the decree was in words a joint and several decree for mesne-profits, yet where it could be proved incontestably that out of a number of defendants any one had been in possession only of particular lands or a distinct mouzah or lease, his liability to satisfy the decree would in equity extend no further than to such particular land, mouzah, or lease, and for such land the decree-holder could take out execution as against lessor and lessee; the principle was then applied to the case under appeal. Held, in explanation of that opinion, that, as the appellant was the lessee of one village, he could be held jointly and severally liable with the proprietors (co-defendants, and the decree-holder could proceed against him either severally or jointly with those defendants, and realise the wasilat due on that village.—14 W. R., 175.

Where some of the decree-holders in a joint-decree apply for execution, the application may be refused or granted at the discretion of the Court, which is bound to see that injury is not done to the rights of absent decree-holders; but whether the Court does so or not, all recoveries in execution so made must be for the benefit of all the decree-holders.—16 W. R., 29.

The fact of a decree-holder giving a release to one or more of the judgment-debtors who were jointly and severally liable, cannot prevent his proceeding against the others for the balance due.—16 W. R., 49.

A joint-decree remains a joint-decree, notwithstanding the acts of the decree-holder in realising his money from one or more of the judgment-debtors separately, for he is entitled to realise his debt from any one of the debtors, and by proceeding against one he does not relieve the other debtors from their joint liability to him.—17 W. R., 497.

A judgment-debtor, on being arrested in execution of a decree, presented a petition asking for fifteen days' time to pay the amount of the decree, and, the decree-holders consenting, the Court made an order in the terms, "Let the petition be filed." Held that this order did not amount to one directing payment of money to be made at a certain date within the meaning of sec. 230, cl. b, of the Civil Procedure Code. Bal Chand v. Raghunath Das I. L. R., 4 Al. 155) followed.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 16.

An application to the Court which passed a decree, for a certificate to allow execution to be taken out in another Court, is not an application for the execution of the decree within the terms of sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The "granting" of an application under that section includes the issue of process for execution of the decree.—16 Cal. 744.

Future maintenance awarded by a decree when falling due can be recovered in execution of that decree without further suit.—19 Cal. 139.

An application was made in 1886 for execution of a decree dated 1873. In the interval viz., in October 1879, the judgment-debtor was arrested on an application in execution by the decree-holder, but execution was not proceeded with further. Held that the application made in 1886 was time-barred under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—11 Mad. 132.

An application for execution of a decree obtained against the judgment-debtor in 1870 was presented by the applicant on the 26th January 1885. Several previous applications for execution had been made, and the last two, viz., on the 29th July 1881 and 29th June 1882, had been granted. The judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court. He contended that execution of the decree was barred. Both the lower Courts were of opinion that the decree was not barred, and allowed execution to issue. On appeal by the judgment-debtor to the High Court, held, that the application for execution was too late. As there had been an application made and granted on the 29th July 1881 under the Code of 1877, and twelve years from the date of the decree would have elapsed before June, 1885, the application in question was barred, and was not saved by the concluding clause of sec. 230 of the Code (Act XIV of 1882).—11 Bom. 524.

The words "law in force" include the Civil Procedure Code, 1887, as well as the Limitation Act then in force:—Held, therefore, where an application for execution of a decree of 1872 had been made and granted in January 1882, and under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, further execution became barred, before the date on which the Code, 1882, came into force, that no application within three years from such date could be granted under sec. 230 of that Code.—9 Madr. 454.

A decree, passed in April 1872, was kept alive by various applications for execution up to 1883. In February and December of that year two such applications were made, but the proceedings on both occasions terminated in the applications being struck off without any money being realized under the decree. In November 1884, the decree-holder again applied for execution, the application being the first made after the decree had become twelve years old, and being made within three years from the passing of the Code, 1882:—Held that the application must be entertained in accordance with the ruling of the Full Bench in Musharaf Begam v. Ghalib Ali (I. L. R., 6 Al. 189). Tufail Ahmad v. Sadhu Saran Singh (Weekly Notes, 1885, p. 193) dissented from. Jokhu Ram v. Ram Din (I. L. R., 8 Al. 419) referred to.

Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the previous execution proceedings, initiated by the applications of February and December 1883, having terminated in those applications, being struck off, it could not be said that the applications were 'granted' within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code. Paraga Kuar v. Bhagwan Din (I. L. R., 8 Al. 301) referred to.—8 Al. 536.

The judgment-debtor, on seeing the Court's bailiff approach his house to attach his property, left the verandah, went inside the house, chained the door, and refused to open it when called on to do so by the bailiff:—Held, that the conduct of the judgment-debtor amounted to a prevention by fraud of the execution of the decree within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code (at application of 2).—9 Bom. 318.

The effect of the decision of the Full Bench in Shohat Singh v. Bridgman is nothing more than that a decree is to be regarded as the decree to be executed, whether it reverses, modifies or confirms: but when it affirms and adopts the mandatory part of the first Court's decree, that decree may be, and should be referred to, and the mandatory part of it so affirmed should be executed as though it were the decree of the appellate Court. Kristo Kinkur Roy v. Rajah Burrodacount Roy referred to. Where the first Court of appeal affirmed the decree of the Court of first instance, and the High Court affirmed the decree of the lower appellate Court and dismissed the appeal, and the decree-holder made an application of which the object clearly was to have execution taken under the decree of the appellate Court, by carrying out the mandatory part of the decree of the Court of first instance:—Held that the objection that the decree-holder did not in his application expressly ask the Court to execute the decree of last instance was under the circumstances a mere technical objection, and there was no reason why the execution asked for should not be allowed.—7 Al. 366.

In 1868 a decree was obtained for Rs. 1,100, which provided that the amount should be paid in instalments, the first instalment being Rs. 200, to be paid at the end of the first year, and that the other instalments should be Rs. 100 at the end of each subsequent year, and that in the event of failure to carry this out, and 2½ months after the fallings due of the in-instalment, and whole amount should be exigible in a lump sum with interest, at 8 annas per cent. per mensem. In 1877, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, asserting that Rs. 600 had been paid up to that time by five instalments, one of Rs. 200, and four of Rs. 100 each, and that default had been made in payment of the fifth instalment of Rs. 100, and he asked to recover the whole amount due on the decree. No order was passed on this application, and eventually the case was struck off. In 1880, the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree, upon the same grounds as those upon which the previous application was based. Notice was issued and served, and a warrant issued for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, but eventually the case was struck off. In 1883, the decree-holder, on the same grounds, made another application for execution. It was contended by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as no instalments had been paid, and, even if they had been paid, they could not be recognized, not having been certified. Held that the proper time from which to reckon the limitation of twelve years was the fifth year from the date of the bond, the whole claim from the beginning and the order passed in 1880 having gone upon that basis; that the Court could not go behind that order; and that consequently the decree-holder was within time, and might take out execution.—7 Al. 373.

A decree for money was passed on the 19th March, 1866. The first application for its execution, made after Act X of 1877 came into force, was dated the 16th December, 1878. On this application an order was made by the Court executing the decree (Munsif) for the sale of certain property belonging to the judgment-debtor. The latter objected to the execution of the decree, on the ground of limitation, and the decree-holders filed an answer to the objection. On the 14th July, 1879, the case was struck off because the decree-holder had not deposited certain process fees without the disposal of the objection. On the 1st October, 1879, the decree-holders again applied for the sale of the property, and it was ordered to be sold. On the 17th February, the judgment-debtor presented a petition repeating the objection, which, on the 13th March, 1880, the Munsif entertained and disallowed. This order was affirmed in appeal by the District Judge, and again by the High Court. Meanwhile, the Munsif had struck off the case from the file of execution cases pending in his Court, on the ground that the records had been despatched to the appellate Court. On the 18th September, 1882, the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree, praying that "the suit might be restored to its number, and that the judgment-debt might be caused to be realized by attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property specified in the former schedule":—Held that the decree-holder was entitled to execution of the decree, and that he could get it under the application which was made on the 1st October, 1879 inasmuch as the matter was made res judicata by the decree of the High Court in appeal, and it must be taken that that decree was correctly passed, and that the order for sale passed upon it was properly made and that the sale ought to have taken place:—Held also that the proper application for the decree-holder to have made in September, 1882 was that the case might be restored to the Munsif, and that the present application might be so dealt with as to effect the same result, because the prayer contained therein referred to the number of the proceedings of October, 1879, and to the schedule of the property then ordered to be sold.—7 Al. 439.

Under sec. 230 after a decree is twelve years old, there is a prohibition against its being executed more than once, i.e., an application for execution should not be granted if a previous application has been allowed under the provisions of that section. The mere filing of a petition with the result that the application contained in it is subsequently struck off, is not "granting" an application within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Code, and secs. 245, 248 and 249, show that there is a broad distinction between admitting an application for the purpose of issuing notice to the other side and of hearing the objections that may be urged, and a decision of the Court as provided in sec. 249. In 1865 a decree was passed for a sum of money payable by yearly instalments for a period of sixteen years. Down to March 1877 various amounts were paid on account of the decree. In that month an application was made for execution of the decree, the result being an arrangement for liquidation of the amount then due, which was confirmed by the Court. A second application for execution was made on the 9th March 1881, the decree then being more than twelve years old. All that was done with reference to this application was that notice to appear was issued to the judgment-debtor's representatives, and subsequently a petition was filed notifying that an arrangement had been effected, under which a certain sum had been paid by one of the said representatives in satisfaction of the claim against him, and that the other had agreed to pay the balance by yearly instalments. Upon this, the application for execution was struck off. On the 5th March 1883, another application for execution was made, notice to appear was issued, and after this notice a petition was put in intimating that an arrangement had been come to, and praying that execution might be postponed, whereupon the application was struck off. Again, on the 31st March 1884, the decree-holder applied once more for execution of the decree. Held that neither the previous application of the 9th March 1881, nor that of the 5th March 1883, could properly be said to have been "granted" within the meaning of sec. 230 and under these circumstances, the decree, though twelve years old and upwards, was not barred by that section, and the application for execution should be allowed.—8 Al. 301.

The holder of a decree, bearing date the 15th June 1872, applied for execution thereof on the 9th February 1885, the previous application being dated the 27th November 1883:—Held, that the application for execution was not barred by sec. 230. Musherraf Begum v. Ghalib Ali (I. L. R., 6 Al. 189) followed. Goluck Chandra Mytee v. Harapria Debi, (I. L. R., 12 Cal. 559) Bhawani Das v. Daulat Ram (I. L. R., 6 Al. 388), and Sreenath Goocho v. Yusoof Khan (I. L. R., 7 Al. 556), referred to. Tufail Ahmad v. Sadhu Saran Singh (Weekly Notes, 1885, p. 193) discussed and dissented from by MAHMOOD J.—The rule of construction being that a limited meaning can only be given to general words in a statute where the statute itself justifies such limitation, the words "any decree" in the proviso to sec. 230 must not be construed as confined to such decrees as would be barred on the date of the Code coming into force, inasmuch as no reason for so restricting the meaning of those words can be found in the Code or is suggested by the legislative policy, upon which clauses such as the proviso in question are based. This policy is to prevent a sudden disturbance of existing rights in consequence of new legislation; but it is beyond its object and scope to revive rights or remedies which have already expired before the new Act comes into operation; and although the Legislature may revive such rights or remedies, it can only do so by express words to that effect.—8 Al. 419.

In the last paragraph of sec. 230 the words, "the law in force immediately before the passing of this Code," refer to and include Act X of 1877, as amended by Act XII of 1879. Musharraff Begum v. Ghalib Ali, (I. L. R., 6 Al. 189) dissented from.—12 Cal. 559.

A decree was passed on the 6th September 1876, and on the 6th July 1888 an application for execution was made in the terms of sec. 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure which did not contain a list of property, as prescribed by sec. 237, and the decree-holder did not produce the same till the 11th September 1888. The application having been made and admitted, any further application would be barred after the 6th September 1888. Held BY THE FULL BENCH that the application of the 6th July 1888 was one within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Per PRINSEP, PIGOT, and GHOSE, JJ.—Held that the application was defective as not complying with the provisions of sec. 237, and as it was not amended within due time or under the provisions of sec. 245, the decree-holder was barred. Per PRINSEP and PIGOT, JJ.—Macgregor v. Tarini Churn Sircar, I. L. R., 14 Cal. 124, should be overruled. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—The application could not be carried out without amendment, and no amendment could be made after the application had been admitted and registered under sec. 245. So much of the decision in Macgregor v. Tarini Churn Sircar as decides that an application may be amended after admission and registration should be overruled. Per O'KINEALY, J.—The original application was defective, and the further application of the 11th September 1888 was barred. An application to execute a decree if admitted, and order for execution made under sec. 245, should be dealt with on its merits and decided accordingly.—17 Cal. 631.

The concluding clause of the same section refers to the question of limitation, and not that of due diligence.—2 Al. 281.

The words, "the last preceding application," in Act X of 1877, sec. 230, cl. 3, mean an application under that section, and not an application under Act VIII of 1859.—2 Al. 275.

After a sale of land in execution of a decree, and before its confirmation, the judgment-debtor cannot object to the validity of the sale, on the ground that the execution of the decree is barred by the provisions of sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877.—6 Madr. 237.

Under the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), an application to the Court to continue the attachment of immoveable property, but to stay the sale of it, held to be a proceeding to keep in force the decree.—2 Madr. 218.

Per INNES, J.—The right to execute decrees having been curtailed by sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, the provisions of the Limitation Act should be construed as far as possible so as to prevent the defeat of bona fide endeavours to secure the fruits of a decree once obtained.—5 Madr. 141.

A judgment-debtor, who, though able to pay his judgment-debt, dishonestly evades payment for more than twelve years by eluding service of warrants and making applications to the Court (which had the effect for the time of staying execution), is guilty of fraud within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Madr. 365.

The date referred to in the last paragraph of sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as the date of "the passing of" that Act held to be the 30th March 1877, the date when that Act received the assent of the Governor-General, and not the 1st October 1877, the date of the coming into force of that Act.—7 Bom. 214.

An order under sec. 230 of Act X of 1877 by a Court executing a decree refusing an application to execute it at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor, being a “decree” under sec. 2 of the Act, an Appeal lies against such order, and the Appellate Court is bound to consider whether the lower Court has properly exercised the discretion vested in it by sec. 230 of that Act.—7 Bom. 301.

Where an application to execute a decree was made under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure before the Amendment Act (XII of 1879) came into force, but was not disposed of until after sec. 230 was altered by that Act, held that the rule in Wright v. Hale (6 H. and N. 227) applied, and that the Act, as amended, was the law to be applied.—3 Madr. 98.

Under sec. 230 of Act X of 1877, an application for execution is said to be ‘granted,’ when it is made regularly and formally. The expression ‘granted,’ is equivalent to the expression ‘admitted’ as used in sec. 245. Where, therefore, an application for execution under sec. 230 of Act X of 1877 is not ‘granted,’ a subsequent regular and formal application under the same section may be allowed if made within time.—8 Cal. 297.

Where an application to execute a decree of 1862 was made under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, on the 14th of December, 1877, and a notice was issued to the judgment-debtor under sec. 248 but no further steps were taken:—Held that a subsequent application made within three years from that date was not affected by the twelve years’ rule, as the last preceding application had not been granted within the meaning of sec. 230.—6 Madr. 172.

The parties to a decree presented a petition to the Court executing the decree, stating that it had been agreed between them that the amount of the decree should be paid by ten monthly instalments of Rs. 500 each. The Court made an order directing that such petition should be filed. Held that this order did not amount to one directing payment of money to be made at a certain date, which would give a fresh period of limitation under sec. 230 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code.—4 Al. 155.

No process can legally issue upon an application for the execution of a decree already barred by limitation, nor can an application made under such circumstances be a valid application, or one which, under the Act, would give the execution-creditor a fresh period of limitation. Unless it can be shown that such was the express intention of the Legislature, none of the provisions of the present Limitation Act (XV of 1877) can be made applicable to any matter which, at the time when such Limitation Act came into force, had already become barred by the operation of the prior Limitation Act.—5 Cal. 894.

On the 1st June 1880, several decree-holders applied to the subordinate Civil Court of Parner for execution of their decree. They had taken out execution several times previously—the date of their last preceding application being 1st June, 1877. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the applications were barred under the last clause of sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). On his referring the cases to the High Court, held that the applications were not barred, inasmuch as the previous applications for execution had not been made under sec. 230 of Act X of 1877, that Act not being then in force.—5 Bom. 245.

An application, under Act VIII of 1859, for execution of a decree, was rejected by the Judge, on the ground that the judgment-creditor had withdrawn the former application. This order was reversed on appeal, and the case was sent back for disposal on its merits. The Judge then held that Act X of 1877, which had just come into force, applied, and, on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to get execution upon his former application, dismissed the petition. The Judge referred the case to the High Court upon the question whether he was, under the circumstances, at liberty to grant the application. Held that he was. The application should have been dealt with under the law which was in force at the time of execution was sought. The effect of the provisions of Act X of 1877, sec. 230, considered.—1 Madr. 403.

The transferee of a decree applied, while an application by the original holder of such decree to execute it was pending, to be allowed to execute it. The Court, in accordance with Act X of 1877, sec. 232, directed notice of the transferee's application to be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor. The transferee failed to pay the court-fee leviable for the issue of such notice, and the Court dismissed his application. The transferee subsequently made a second application to be allowed to execute the decree. Held that such application could not be rejected, with reference to sec. 230, on the ground that due diligence had not been used on the former application to procure complete satisfaction of the decree, because such application had not been granted, and, therefore, the question whether "on the last preceding application" due diligence was used to procure such satisfaction did not arise.—2 Al. 384.

In execution of a decree passed more than twelve years before the date of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), certain judgment-creditors applied for the attachment and sale of certain specified property belonging to their judgment-debtor, previous to the date on which the three years allowed for such execution under sec. 230 would have expired. Subsequently, after the three years had elapsed, they filed a fresh application, praying that certain other property of their judgment-debtor might be attached and sold in lieu of that specified in their former application, and that the latter might be released. Held that execution of the decree was barred by limitation. Per PRINSEP, J.—Under sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was intended by the Legislature that a decree-holder, seeking to execute a decree passed more than twelve years before, should have one opportunity to execute that decree, and that, if he fails to satisfy it on that application, any further application becomes barred.—7 Cal. 556.

The holder of a decree applied for execution under sec. 230 of Act X. of 1877, and the application was granted. Within three years after the passing of Act XIV. of 1882, by which Act X, of 1877 was repealed, he applied, for the first time, under sec. 230 of the former Act, for execution of the decree. At the time this application was made, more than twelve years had elapsed from the date of the decree. Held by STRAIGHT, BRODHURST, and TYRRELL, JJ., that the application might be granted, it being the first made under sec. 230 of Act XIV. of 1882, and the first made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the decree, and not being barred by the last paragraph of sec. 230 of that Act, read in conjunction with the 3rd paragraph of sec. 230 of Act X of 1877, the "law in force" mentioned in the last paragraph of sec. 230 of Act XIV. of 1882 referring to the law of limitation in force at the time the Act was passed, and not to the third paragraph of sec. 230 of Act X. of 1877. Held by STUART, C. J., and OLDFIELD, J., that the application should not be granted, the effect of the last paragraph of sec. 230 of Act XIV. of 1882 being to bar any proceedings to enforce a decree under that Act which would have been barred under sec. 230 of Act X. of 1877, if taken thereunder, on the ground that the period of twelve years had elapsed from the dates specified in that section.—6 Al. 189.

Where an application was made under sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, as amended by Act XII. of 1879, for execution of a decree more than twelve years old, and the application was granted, held that a subsequent application for execution of the decree, under sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, should have been refused, since the decree had been once allowed the benefit of the three years' grace under the last paragraph of sec. 230 of the Code of 1877, and then became dead or un-executable. Held that there is nothing in the Code of 1882 to justify the conclusion that it was intended to revive decrees which had become dead before it became law, and that here the decree-holder's right having already become dead before the enactment of the present Code, the passing of that Code could not bring that right into existence again. Musharraf Begam Ali v. Ghalib Ali (I. L. R., 6 Al. 189) distinguished.—6 Al. 388.

A decree which directs payment to be made annually to be decree-holder is not a decree, which directs payment of money to be made at a certain date within the meaning of sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure or clause 6 of Article 179 of Schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. Where a decree directed annual payments to be made, and the decree-holder applied for and obtained payment of the money due for 1877 and 1878 in March 1879 by execution, and then applied in July 1882 for the sums due for 1880 and 1881:—Held, that this application was barred by limitation.—7 Madr. 83.

Sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, does not affect the period of limitation prescribed by article 180 of schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.—7 Madr. 540.

See. 3 C. L. R., 513; 4 C. L. R., 70; I. L. R., 10 Cal. 417, noted under sec. 108; 12 Al. 571, noted under sec. 210; 6 Cal. 504, 6 Bom. 258, noted under Art. 180 of the Limitation Act.

231. If a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, any one or more of such persons, or his or their representatives, may apply for the execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all, or, where any of them has died, for the benefit of the survivors and the representative in interest of the deceased.

If the Court sees sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed on an application so made, it shall pass such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who have not joined in the application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The circumstance that the petition of one of several decree-holders in applying for execution requires amendment because of the list of property being incomplete, is no ground for declaring such application to be superseded by a latter application made before the completion of the necessary amendment by another co-decree-holder for execution. Two executions of the same decree, so far as attachment of different properties of the judgment-debtor is concerned, may proceed simultaneously, though ordinarily the sales in execution should not take place simultaneously.—7 C. L. R., 537.

A Hindu obtained in 1878 a decree for partition of certain property and applied in 1888 to have it executed. It appeared that the decree holders' son, having obtained against him in 1881 a decree for a share of whatever he should acquire under the decree of 1878, had applied for execution of the last-mentioned decree; and reliance was now placed on that application to save the bar of limitation:—Held, that assuming the decree of 1881 had effected an assignment by operation of law of the decree of 1878, the father and son were not joint decree-holders within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, sec. 231, and the father's application for execution was barred by limitation.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 347.

A Hindu obtained in 1878 a decree for partition of certain property, and he now applied in 1888 to have it executed. He relied in bar of limitation on an application for execution made by his son, who had obtained a decree against him in 1881 in a partition suit, whereby his right was established to one-fifth of whatever should be acquired by the father by virtue of the decree of 1878. The father's application for execution in 1888 was held to be barred by limitation in Ramasami v. Anda Pillai (I. L. R., 13 Madr., 347). On review it appeared that the son had applied for execution of the whole decree, stating that his father would not join him in such application, and that notice was given to the father:—Held, (1) that the son was an assignee by operation of law of one-fifth of the judgment-debt in the suit of 1878; (2) that his application accordingly kept the decree alive under Limitation Act, 1877, sched., 11, art. 179, cl. 4, and the father's application in 1888 was not barred by limitation.—14 Madr. 252.

Although the Civil Procedure Code does not allow one of several decree-holders to apply for the partial execution of a joint-decree, yet an application by one of such decree-holders for execution of the decree in respect of so much of the relief granted to all as he considers appertains to him individually may keep in force the decree as being an application according to law.—3 Madr. 79.

One of two holders of a joint decree applied for execution of the decree to the full amount. It appeared that the other decree holder had received a certain sum from the judgment-debtor on account of the decree out of Court, but this payment had not been certified:—Held, that the payment was valid only to the extent of the share to which the payee was entitled, and that this share having been ascertained and credit given for it, the decree should be executed in favour of the present applicant for the balance.—15 Madr. 343.

A decree passed jointly in favour of more persons than one can only be legally executed as a whole for the benefit of all the decree-holders, and not partially to the extent of the interest of each individual decree-holder. Held, therefore, where one of two persons in whose favour a decree for money had been passed jointly applied, on the 27th April 1880, for execution of a moiety of such decree, and the other of such persons made a similar application on the 30th April 1880, that such applications, not being in accordance with law, were not sufficient to keep the decree in force. Also that the illegality of such applications could not be cured by a subsequent amended application for the execution of the decree as a whole preferred after the period of limitation had expired.—4 Al. 72.

A joint-decree cannot be executed by one of the several joint-holders in respect only of his share of the decree. Ram Autur v. Ajudhia Singh (I. L. R., 1 Al. 231). The Collector of Shahjahanpur v. Surjan Singh I. L. R., 4 Al. 72), and Haro Sanker Sandyal v. Tara Chandra Bhattacharjee (3 B. L. R., 114), followed. When, by operation of law, one of several joint judgment-debtors acquires the position of the decree-holder in respect of the whole judgment-debt, the effect is to extinguish the liability of the other judgment-debtors, and the decree cannot be executed against them. But when one of them so acquires only a partial interest in the decree, the effect is not to extinguish the entire judgment-debt, but so much only of it as such judgment-debtor has so acquired. Wise v. Abdool Ali (7 W. R., 136), Pogose v. Fakurooddeen Mahomed Ashan (25 W. R., 343), Degumburee Dabee v. Soroop Chunder Hazra (9 W. R., 230), and Koshallee v. Nund Lall (N.-W. P. H. C. R., 1874, p. 1), referred to. Held, therefore, where one of several joint decree-holders applied for execution in respect of his own share only, and the joint judgment-debtors under the decree had inherited the right therein of one of the joint decree-holders, that the application was contrary to law; that so much of the judgment-debt as had devolved upon such persons had been extinguished; and that application should have been made for execution in respect of the entire unextinguished portion of the judgment-debt. Brojeswari Chowdhranee v. Tripoora Soonderee Debi (3 C. L. R., 513) and Mussammat Bibee Budhun v. Mussammat Hafezah (4 C. L. R., 70) followed.—5 Al. 27.

See I. L. R., 9 Cal. 831, noted under sec. 244; 13 Madr. 236, noted under sec. 7 of the Limitation Act.

232. If a decree be transferred by assignment in writing, or by operation of law, from the transferee of decree. decree-holder to any other person, the transferee may apply for its execution to the Court which passed it; and, if that Court thinks fit, the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree-holder:

Provided as follows:—

(a) where the decree has been transferred by assignment, notice in writing of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to such execution:

(b) where a decree for money against several persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The assignee of a decree should apply to the Court which passed the decree, and not to the Court to which the decree had been forwarded under sec. 285, Act VIII. of 1859, for execution, for the purpose of being substituted in the place of the original decree-holder. The word "Court" in sec. 208, Act VIII. of 1859, does not include the Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution.—5 B. L. R., 497; 14 W. R., 65.

Where S obtained a decree for possession against D P, the person in possession, and subsequently, in a suit brought by J P claiming the property against S, a decree was passed in the terms of a compromise, whereby S consented that J P should execute his (S's) decree, held that J P was entitled, under sec. 208, Civil Procedure Code, to recover possession in execution of S's decree from D P, although D P had not been made a party to the second suit.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 34; Ed. 1873, 31.

A person claiming to be the assignee of a decree should apply for recognition of his title to the Court which pronounced the decree and for leave under sec. 208 of the Civil Procedure Code to have his name substituted in lieu of that of the plaintiff.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 46; 9 Bom. H. C. R., 49; 4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 90.

By a deed, dated 2nd July 1876, Y mortgaged properties Nos. 1 and 2 to A, and subsequently by separate deeds he again mortgaged the same properties respectively to B and C. C afterwards purchased Y's equity of redemption in property No. 2, and on the 19th November 1880 A obtained a mortgage-decree against Y which he sold to B, who now sought to execute it. C was merely benamidar for B. Held that, on B consenting to allow property No. 2 to be first sold free of all incumbrances, it was necessary for B to proceed by regular suit.—13 C. L. R., 272.

Sec. 208, Act VIII. of 1859, put a party, to whom a decree is transferred, into the position of the original decree-holder, and entitled him to have the decree executed, as if application were made by the original decree-holder.—7 W. R., 205.

A Court charged with the execution of a decree has no other discretion with regard to noticing a transfer thereof than that which is given to it by sec. 208, which only applies to cases where the transferee can and does come forward to claim execution for himself, instead of the original decree-holder.—10 W. R., 354.

Can the purchasers of a share in a decree be added upon the record under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 208, as co-decree-holders?—24 W. R., 11.

The discretion given to a Court under sec. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to allowing execution of decrees by assignees must be exercised reasonably. The mere fact of the existence of a cross claim against the assignor of a decree by his judgment-debtor is no reason for refusing issue of execution on the application of the assignee.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 446.

Upon the death of the full owner, the mother took out probate of a will in which she was appointed executrix. The will was afterwards disputed by the minor son of the testator, and probate was revoked; but, while the mother was in possession of the estate as executrix, she sued and obtained a decree for rent under Beng. Act VIII. of 1869. Upon the application of the minor for the execution of the decree, held that the minor was in a position to execute the decree, his succession to the estate of his father being a succession or transfer by operation of law within the meaning of sec. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held also that the mode in which the decree was executed under the old Rent Act, Beng. Act VIII. of 1869, was, in so far as it was a right at all that belonged to the judgment-creditor, not a private right, but a mere right of procedure, and the execution was therefore to be governed by Act VIII. of 1885.—16 Cal. 347.

A petition, by one claiming to be the purchaser at a Court-sale of the interest of a decree-holder under a decree, for execution of the decree was rejected. Held no appeal lay from the order rejecting the petition.—12 Madr. 511.

A decree for damages and costs having been obtained against P and C, A, to whom P was indebted, and was about to assign property as security, in order to prevent P being adjudicated an insolvent, and with a view to execute the decree against C if possible, purchased the decree. A applied, under sec. 232 for leave to execute the decree. This application was rejected by KRENAN, J., on the ground that the decree was certain to be executed against C, and not against P, under whose orders and for whose benefit C acted when he infringed the right of, and became liable in damages to, the plaintiff in the suit :—Held, on appeal, that the benefit likely to be gained by P by this transaction was no sufficient ground for refusing leave to A to execute the decree.—8 Madr. 455.

The transferee of a decree for costs, associating with him the transferor, made an application under sec. 232 to be allowed to execute the decree. The application was opposed by the judgment-debtor, and was rejected, and the Court referred the transferee to a regular suit. After taking various proceedings ineffectually, he instituted a suit for the recovery of the sum to which he was entitled as costs under the decree transferred to him :—Held that the plaintiff, as the holder of the decree by assignment, could only recover the amount under it by executing the decree, and not by a separate suit; but that he was entitled to have a decree declaring that the assignment to him of the decree-holder's rights under the decree was valid, and gave him a right to execute it, and that the Court's order under sec. 232, which disallowed the execution, was an improper one, a suit for this relief being maintainable; for, there being no appeal from orders under sec. 232, there would otherwise be no remedy, and that, looking at the plaint and the issues on which the parties were divided, and the fact that the Court which refused the plaintiff's application for execution referred him to a regular suit, this relief might properly be given in the present suit. Per MAHMOOD, J., that the suit was maintainable, inasmuch as the present plaintiff never having been accepted on the record as holder of the decree, the questions which were disposed of by the Court executing the decree, as between the plaintiff and the judgment-debtor, could not be regarded as questions within sec. 244.—7 Al. 457.

Three out of six decree-holders sold their share in the decree to A., who thereafter made an application to the Court under sec. 232. This application was dismissed, on the ground that A's purchase was made benami for some of the judgment-debtors. In a subsequent suit brought by A and the persons who were said to be the real purchasers, it was contended that a separate suit was barred under the provisions of sec. 244, cl. (c) :—Held, that A was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, nor the representative of any such party, and that the suit was not barred.—12 Cal. 105.

Certain property was mortgaged by A to B. Subsequently, this property was purchased by C at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained by a third person against A. B then brought a suit on his mortgage-bond against A and C, and obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged properties, and also a personal decree against A; B assigned his rights under this decree to C, who applied for execution under sec. 232 of the Code. A objected to execution issuing, relying on proviso (b) to sec. 232:—Held that proviso (b) to sec. 232 applies only to decrees for money personally due by two or more persons; and that the decree obtained by B against A and C not being a personal decree against C, (he having been made a defendant only by reason that he had purchased the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage-debt), C, as assignee of B, was entitled to take out execution.—11 Cal. 393.

A person attaching a decree is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of that term as used in sec. 244, cl. (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and in every case is entitled to enforce execution of the decree which he has attached. When the decree attached has been passed by the same Court as the decree in execution of which it has been attached, the Court has jurisdiction to execute the attached decree on the application of the attaching creditor.—15 Cal. 371.

No legislative prohibition exists to the transfer of a portion of a decree; and provided that the whole decree is executed, and the rights of all parties interested are cared for, there is no objection to the transferee being allowed to carry on the execution-proceedings. Seetaput Roy v. Ali Hossein, 24 W. R., 11, dissented from.—17 Cal. 341.

The person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is entitled to execution, unless it be shown by some other person, under sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, that he has taken the decree-holder's place.—18 Cal. 639.

A holder of a certificate of administration granted under sec. 7 of Regulation VIII of 1827 is a transferee by law of a decree obtained by the deceased within the meaning of sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and is competent to apply for execution of such a decree.—11 Bom. 368.

An assignee of a decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi at all to apply for execution of a decree, but, as regards one who claims to be an assignee in writing or by operation of law, the Court has a discretion under sec. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), whether to recognize such assignment or not. When an assignee of a decree applied for execution, and the judgment-debtors contended that the decree sought to be executed had been obtained by fraud, and was, therefore, a nullity and incapable of execution. Held, that it was not open to the judgment-debtors to raise the defence of fraud in the course of the execution proceedings.—15 Bom. 307.

The words of sec. 28 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), "some portion of the property," should not be read as meaning some substantial portion. Sheo Dayal Mal v. Hari Ram (I. L. R., 7 Al. 599) dissented from. The holders of a decree for the sale of mortgaged property transferred the same to M by instruments which were registered at a place where a small portion only of the property was situate. Subsequently M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferees applied, under sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application, on the grounds that M's name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders who had transferred to him, and that the transfers to M were inoperative, as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate in accordance with sec. 28 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It appeared that no notice had been issued to M, under sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, that he was dead, and that his legal representatives had not been cited as required by law. The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held that the matter involved questions arising between the parties to the decree or their representatives within the meaning of sec. 244 (c) of the Code, and that the order allowing the application was therefore a decree within the definition of sec. 2, and was appealable as such. Held that, even assuming that the judgment debtor had a locus standi to raise the objection that notice had not been issued to the applicants transferor, he had no possible interest in the question, and could not be prejudiced by the passing of the order; that it was not necessary to cite the representatives of the transferor; and that the order not being one upon which execution of the decree could issue, but merely for a transfer of names, the objection that the transferor had not been cited under sec. 232 was not a substantial one. Held that the objection in reference to sec. 28 of the Registration Act could only properly be raised between the transferor and the transferee, and not by the judgment-debtor, and moreover had no force. Held that it could not be said that where a decree has been assigned by one assignor to another, the substitution of his name on the record in lieu of that of the original decree-holder was a condition precedent to the assignor's passing title under the assignment.—9 Al. 46.

R died in May 1859, leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant, Purmananddas, and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against Luckmidas Khimji as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi, to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant, Purmananddas. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him (inter alia) "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee, Purmananddas, a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for Rs. 31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said wadi. Subsequently to this decree, Luckmidas Khimji opened an account in the name of the appellant, Purmananddas, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent, Vallabdas Wallji, was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of Luckmidas Khimji, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. On appeal, held, that the decree was admissible, although not registered. Held also that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." As such he was entitled to sue out execution, and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree-holder within the meaning of clause (c) of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and had a right of appeal against the order of the Judge in chambers refusing execution. Held also that the payments made to the appellant on account of the decree, although not certified to the Court under sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), were effectual to prevent the appellant's application for execution from being barred by limitation. It would, however, be necessary for the appellant to certify these payments.—11 Bom. 506.

The transferee of a decree stands in the same position for getting execution as the transferor. If a decree is transferred by assignment after the death of the judgment-debtor, notice of the transfer, as required by sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), may be served on the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. This death of the judgment-debtor does not render the transferred decree incapable of execution. Under sec. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code, the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor is liable summarily only in respect of property actually received by him, or taken into his disposition. On the 27th March 1878, one Bai Bhicaiji obtained a decree for Rs. 2,100 against one Phirozsha, who died in July of that year, leaving his son Hormazsha his legal representative. Subsequently one Homjibhai sued Hormazsha as the legal representative of Phirozsha upon a mortgage executed by the latter in his life-time, and obtained a decree, in execution of which he sold the mortgaged property by auction, and bought it in himself for Rs. 810. On appeal, this decree was reversed on the 3rd August, 1883. Instead of thereupon, recovering the property which had been sold in execution, Hormazsha on the 16th November 1883 agreed with Homjibhai that the latter should retain it on payment of Rs. 240 as costs of the suit. Shortly before this compromise was effected, Bai Bhicaiji sold her decree to the appellant, Khushrobhai, who in 1884 applied for execution against Hormazsha. The Subordinate Judge made an order for execution against Hormazsha, personally to the extent of Rs. 810, holding that Hormazsha had fraudulently adjusted the decree in Homjibhai's suit, and that, even if there was no fraud, he, as administrator of Phirozsha's estate, ought to have recovered back the money realised by the sale, instead of accepting a compromise. On appeal, the order of the Subordinate Judge was reversed by the District Judge. On appeal to the High Court, held confirming the order of the District Judge, that Hormazsha was not personally liable. Under sec. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) a representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, who has failed purposely or negligently to recover some debt due to the estate of the deceased, or some property belonging to it, is not liable in the same way as for property of the deceased which has come to his hands. In that section, property is not defined as identical with assets, and so to include mere rights of action. Nor is it provided that in an execution proceeding the representative shall be made answerable as well for what with diligence on his part would have come to his hands, as what actually has come to his hands. It may well be that, while the Legislature intended to bring the representative under the control of a summary inquiry where he had actually received property, it did not intend to make him answerable in other cases except through the medium of a suit for administration or other regular action.—11 Bom. 727.

To enable the heir of a deceased person to apply, under sec. 208 of Act VIII of 1859, for the execution of a decree held by such person, a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not indispensable.—1 Al. 686.

Where a decree was sent to a Court for execution, and was subsequently transferred by assignment, and the transferee applied for the execution of the decree to the Court to which the decree was sent for execution, held that such application should be made, not to such Court, but to the Court which passed the decree—2 Al. 283.

See I. L. R., 2 Al. 384, noted under sec. 230; 13 Madr. 347 and 14 Madr. 252, noted under sec. 231; 11 Bom. 153, noted under sec. 2.

233. Every transferee of a decree shall hold the same subject to the equities (if any) which the judgment debtor might have enforced against the original decree-holder.

Transferee to hold subject to equities enforceable against original holder.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.}

234. If a judgment-debtor dies before the decree has been fully executed, the holder of the decree may apply to the Court which passed it to execute the same against the legal representative of the deceased.

If judgment debtor die before execution, application may be made against his representative.

Such representative shall be liable only to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his hands, and has not been duly disposed of; and for the purpose of ascertaining such liability, the Court executing the decree may, of its own motion, or on the application of the decree-holder, compel the said representative to produce such accounts as it thinks fit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where it was sought to execute a decree obtained against a person who had died since the date of the decree, by attaching certain immoveable property in the possession of the personal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, and such personal representative claimed to hold the property, not in her representative character, but in her own right, held that her claim was not a claim under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, but that the case came under secs. 210 and 211. It was a matter between the parties to the suit relating to the execution of the decree, and, as such, was, under sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not to form the subject of a regular suit. The order rejecting the claim was therefore open to appeal.—12 B. L. R., 65. S. C. 20 W. R., 280.

Plaintiff, alleging that he is owner in possession of one-third of an eight-anna share of a specified mauza, and that his enjoyment thereof is menaced by reason of the defendant having attached it, caused it to be sold, and then himself purchased it, in execution of a decree held by him against a third person, prays for a declaration of his (plaintiff's) right of ownership and possession. The title which plaintiff sets up is as follows: The eight-anna share in question which formerly belonged to one S, who, by two deeds made in the years 1810 and 1813 respectively, mortgaged it, under the form of a conditional sale, to O. S had three sons, H, A, and N; and in 1819 he sold nearly all his property, including the premises mortgaged by the deeds of 1810 and 1813, to his two eldest sons, H and A. In the following year 1820, these two sons, with the view to liquidating their father's debts, entered into a new arrangement with O, and, amongst other things, got him to accept a fresh mortgage from them of the eight-anna share, in lieu of the original two mortgages of the same given in 1810 and 1813. Afterwards, namely, in 1830, O took due steps for foreclosing the mortgage against H and A, and obtained his final decree for foreclosure in 1831. Subsequently to this again, it appearing that the mauza was being held free of payment of Government revenue, the Government revenued it, and in 1842, among other mahals, settled the eight-anna share with O's widow as representing the proprietor, her late husband, then deceased. From O's widows the plaintiff derived by purchase the one-third of the eight-anna share, in respect of which he sues. When the property in suit was attached in 1866 at the defendant's instance, in execution of his decree of 1836, the present plaintiff duly preferred his claim to it under the provisions of sec. 246, but this claim was disallowed by the Court which was charged with the execution of the decree, and thereupon the plaintiff brought this suit. Held that the onus was on the defendant to make out that he had an equitable right to this property, which originated either at the death of S, or which sprang up in consequence of the decree against S's representatives, and has survived the alienations of the last 30 or 40 years, so as to enable him to assert it against the present plaintiff.—12 B. L. R., 66 note ; 10 W. R., 199.

When a decree has been passed against a deceased person, execution of such decree cannot be had under the Civil Procedure Code against his legal representatives.—14 B.L. R., 334 note. S. C. 10 W. R., 455.

Where a Hindu died, leaving a childless widow and a separated brother, it was held that, until a legal representative is appointed to the deceased's estate, his widow is the only person who can defend a suit as his representative, and that, while a decree obtained against the widow will enable a creditor to attach and sell, not only the widow's lief-estate in the immoveable property, but also the reversionary estate of the remainder-man, yet a decree obtained against the remainder-man will not enable the creditor to touch the estate in the hands of the widow. When a decree has been obtained against A in his lifetime, and A dies before execution, A's estate is properly described in the proceedings in execution as the estate of A (sec. 210, Code of Civil Procedure) ; and in the certificate of sale, the purchaser is properly declared to have purchased the right, title, and interest of A in the property sold ; but this Procedure is improper in cases in which the debtor dies before or pending the suit, and the suit is brought or continued against his representative. In such cases the representative, and not the deceased person, is the defendant (secs. 104 and 203) ; and in the notification of sale (sec. 249), and in the certificate of sale (sec. 259), it ought to be set forth that what is sold is the right, title, and interest of the representative on the record. A bona fide purchaser, without notice for valuable consideration at an auction-sale, is, as a general rule, entitled to protection, notwithstanding any irregularity or defect in the proceedings or decree in the suit. But when the decree is against the representative of a deceased person, the purchaser is bound to satisfy himself that the party sued as the representative of the deceased is his legal representative. The legal representative of a deceased person, though not a party to the suit, will be bound by the execution-sale, if he either knowingly allowed the suit to be defended by another person claiming to be the legal representative, or, if knowing of the sale, he stood by and allowed the purchaser to pay in the belief that he acquired a good title. Edabji Hormasji v. Mahabu Begum (Special Appeal No. 266 of 1869) considered.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 37.

A right of second appeal, where it existed prior to Act X. of 1877, now exists in the case of any proceedings in execution which were commenced prior to, and were still pending on, the 1st of October 1877. An order was made under sec. 210 of Act VIII. of 1859, making the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor parties to a suit in execution of a decree obtained against the deceased in his lifetime. Subsequently the decree-holder discovered that certain property which he claimed to be the property of the deceased was in the possession of a third person, C; and he applied to have C's name put upon the record, and to be allowed to execute the decree against him. Held that the Court had no power to put C's name on the record.—3 C. L. R., 437.

The representative of a deceased person, in whose favour a decree has been made, cannot claim execution as a matter of strict right; but must satisfy the Court, under sec. 210, Civil Procedure Code, that it is proper that he should be allowed satisfaction of the decree; and the Court cannot determine the question without hearing the opposite side.—21 W. R., 31.

V, a Muhommadan woman, died, leaving her husband and several minor children as her representatives. In execution of a money-decree obtained against V, the creditor attached certain land which belonged to V, and made her husband and two of her children parties to the execution-proceedings. The land was sold and purchased by the decree-holder. Held, in a suit brought by the children of V to set aside the sale on the ground, inter alia, that some of them were no parties to the proceedings in execution, and that the others, being minors at the time, had not been represented by a guardian appointed by the Court, that the sale was valid.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 90.

A decree-holder attached land of the judgment-debtor in execution of his decree and a sale proclamation was made; the judgment-debtor died and his legal representatives were not brought on to the record, but the execution proceeded to sale:—Held, that the sale should be set aside.—15 Madr. 399.

A decree-holder in a District Munsif's Court obtained an order for possession of land in execution of his decree on 20th August, on which day the judgment-debtor died. Possession was delivered on 28th August. The persons dispossessed presented a petition under sec. 332, of the Code of Civil Procedure disputing his right to be put into possession, on the ground, inter alia, that the judgment-debtor was not represented on the record. On appeal against the appellate order of the District Judge, held, assuming that the order for possession was made prior to the death of the judgment-debtor, there was no necessity for the decree-holder to bring any other person on to the record between the date of that order and the date on which the order was executed. Ramasami v. Bagirathi (I.L.R., 6 Madr. 180) distinguished.—12 Madr. 211.

An application for execution against one of the representatives of a sole judgment-debtor saves limitation against another representative. Accordingly, where the plaintiff, on the death of his sole debtor, sued out execution on the 18th June 1881, under a dorkhast No. 718 of 1878, against V, one of the three sons of the debtor, and the execution-proceedings continued till the death of V in March 1884, whereupon the plaintiff applied on the 28th May 1884 to put M and N, the brothers of V, on the record as his representatives, held that the application was not too late against M and N regarded as joint representatives with their brother V of their father, the original judgment-debtor.—12 Bom. 48.

Where a judgment-debtor dies after the passing of the decree, and his legal representatives are brought on the record in execution proceedings to represent him in respect of the decree, questions which they raise as to property which they say does not belong to his assets in their hands, and as such is not capable of being taken in execution, are questions which under sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code must be determined in the execution department, and not by separate suit. There is no distinction in this respect between the positions of legal representatives added to the suit before, and those added after, the decree. Under the last paragraph of sec. 234, the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate, and finds this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution, and giving the auction-purchaser a good title under the sale; and the Court's order is subject to appeal but not to a separate suit under sec. 283. Where the legal representative asserts that the property is his own, and has not come to him from the deceased judgment-debtor, he cannot set up a jus tertii, so as to come in under sec. 278 and the following sections of the Code. He can only do so where he opposes execution against any particular property on the ground that, although it is vested in him, it is vested in him not beneficially by reason of his being the representative of the judgment-debtor, but as trustee or executor of some one else. In that case either party may have the question of jus tertii determined in a separate suit. So held by the Full Bench, TYRRELL, J., dissenting. Held by TYRRELL, J., contra, that where the legal representative of a deceased party to the decree appears, not in his capacity of legal representative contesting a question arising between the parties and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, but in his personal character independent of the suit and decree, and prefers a claim under sec. 278 on the ground that the decree has no operation against certain property attached, for reasons personal to the objector and antagonistic to all the parties and their representatives as such, the objector is not debarred from bringing a separate suit by the mere accident that he is a legal representative in the execution proceedings. Observations by STRAIGHT, J., as to the necessity of conducting the proceedings in execution of decree with the same care, and, as far as practicable, in accordance with the same procedure as that adopted in regular suits. Rajrup Singh v. Ramgolam Roy approved. Abdul Rahman v. Muhammad Yar and Awadh Kuari v. Raktu Tiwari overruled. Bahori Lal v. Gauri Sahai distinguished.—12 Al. 313.

Sec. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code applies only to cases where, after the death of the judgment debtor, the decree-holder seeks to bring to sale property which was of the judgment-debtor in his life-time, and which was not at the time of his death under attachment at the suit of the decree-holder. It does not apply to cases where the judgment-debtor dies after attachment but before sale. An attachment would not abate on the death of the judgment-debtor, and his death would not render it necessary for the decree-holder to take any steps to keep in force an attachment of property made in the judgment-debtor's lifetime. Property under attachment must be considered as in the custody of the law. There is no provision in the Civil Procedure Code requiring notice to be given personally to a judgment-debtor or his legal representative of a sale of property under attachment. If the legal representative is damnified by the sale, his remedy is by application under sec. 311 of the Code. So held by the Full Bench, MAHMOOD, J., dissenting. Where, subsequent to the attachment of immoveable property in execution of a simple money decree, the judgment-debtor died, and the property was then sold, without making the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor parties to the sale proceedings,—held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that the sale was regular and valid notwithstanding such omission. Ramasami Ayyangar v. Bagirathi Ammal dissented from. Held by MAHMOOD, J., that on the principle of audi alteram partem, and because the rules provided by the Civil Procedure Code for suits should, under sec. 647, be applied to execution proceedings (those proceedings including and terminating in the sale), the omission to make the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor parties to the sale proceedings was an irregularity; but that such irregularity would not invalidate the sale without proof of a substantial injury within the meaning of sec. 311; and that as in the present case no such substantial injury was either alleged or proved, the sale was valid. Held also by MAHMOOD, J., that a person claiming by title paramount to or independent of the judgment-debtor is within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Code. Asmutunnissa Begum v. Ashruff Ali dissented from. Abdul Huq Mazoomdar v. Mohini Mohun Shaha followed.—12 Al. 440.

In execution of a money decree passed against a Hindu, since deceased, ancestral property in the possession of his son was attached. A petition by the son objecting that the property was not liable to be attached in his hands was dismissed:—Held, that the order dismissing the petition was wrong, for when a judgment-creditor seeks to attach ancestral property after it has vested in the son by survivorship under Hindu law upon the father's death, he cannot be considered as executing the decree against the property of the deceased judgment-debtor within the meaning of sec. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—13 Madr. 265.

In an undivided Hindu family, although the interests of the sons in the ancestral estate are liable to satisfy the father's debts, the holder of a money-decree against the father who has not attached the ancestral estate before the death of the father cannot execute the decree against the ancestral property as assets in the hands of the representatives of the judgment-debtor under sec. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. Zemindar of Sivagiri v. Alwar Ayyangar (I. L. R., 3 Madr. 42) followed.—I. L. R., 5 Madr. 232.

In a suit by the trustees to remove the defendant from the management of certain temples, a decree for mesne-profits was passed against the defendant, who was the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad. Held that the tarwad property in the hands of the deceased defendant's successor was not assets of the deceased in the hands of his successor liable to satisfy the decree under sec. 234. The share of a deceased father in an undivided Hindu family passes by survivorship to the sons, and is not assets in their hands to satisfy a decree against the father under sec. 234.—5 Madr. 223.

A Hindu widow instituted a suit to recover possession of certain property belonging to her deceased husband, and that suit was dismissed with costs. The widow having died before execution for the costs was taken out, the decree-holder sought to take out execution against the next heirs of the late widow's deceased husband. Held that the fact that the widow did not in her suit seek to recover any interest personal to herself, but that she contracted the judgment-debt in the effort to recover a portion of her husband's estate, to which, in its entirety, the next heirs of her late husband had succeeded, was sufficient to make the whole estate liable, and would entitle the decree-holder to satisfy his decree against "the legal representatives" of the late widow's husband, under sec. 234 of Act X of 1877. In a decree against a Hindu widow, it should be stated whether the decree is a personal decree, or one against her as representing her deceased husband.—6 Cal. 479.

As the entire interest in an impartible zamindari passes upon the death of the father to the son, there is nothing in the estate itself which can be attached as assets of the father under a decree against him, or which can be made available in execution of the decree against his son as his representative. Though a son is bound, under Hindu law, to pay his father's just debts from any property he may possess, yet, when he is made a party to a decree as representative of his deceased father for the purpose of executing it, his liability is limited to the amount of assets of the deceased which may have come to his hands and has not been duly disposed of. An appeal lies from an ex-parte order directing attachment in execution of a decree.—3 Madr. 42.

The first mortgagee of certain immoveable property obtained a decree for the sale of the property, caused the property to be attached, and then ceased to prosecute the execution-proceedings. The second mortgagee then obtained a decree for the sale of the property, caused it to be attached and put up for sale, and purchased it himself. The first mortgagee then applied for the sale of the property, and the property was put up for sale, and was purchased by him. After the order for his sale was made, and before it took place, the judgment-debtor died, and the sale took place without his legal representatives being made parties to the execution-proceedings. The Courts which executed these decrees were of two different grades, the Court which executed the first mortgagee's decree being of the lower grade. In a suit by the first mortgagee against the second mortgagee, for possession of the property, held that the sale to the first mortgagee was not invalid, with reference to the provisions of sec. 285 of the Civil Procedure Code, because it had not been ordered and held by the Court of the higher grade, inasmuch as when such sale was ordered by the Court of the lower grade, the property was not under attachment in execution of the decree of the Court of the higher grade, that decree having been executed by the sale of the property, and therefore the provisions of that section were not applicable. Badri Prasad v. Saran Lal distinguished. Per OLDFIELD, J., that there was nothing in the provisions of secs. 285 or 295 of the Civil Procedure Code to support the contention that the first mortgagee, after allowing the property to be sold, was debarred from enforcing execution of his decree against it, and was only entitled to look to the assets realized at the sale for the satisfaction of his decree. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the sale to the first mortgagee was not void because the judgment-debtor had died before it took place, and it took place without his legal representatives being made parties to the execution-proceedings, inasmuch as the provisions of sec. 308 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case of the death of a judgment-debtor, and there was nothing in sec. 234, even if that section is applicable to a case where the judgment-debtor dies while execution is proceeding and after sale of his property had been ordered, to imply that the sale is absolutely void, if no legal representative has been brought on the record. Dulari v. Mohan Singh and Gulabdas v. Lakshman

Narhar referred to. Per STRAIGHT, J., that there was no legal obligation on the first mortgagee to resort to the procedure of sec. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code since the sale to the second mortgagee had passed to him the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor, and the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor had none of his property in their hands, and there is no provision in the Code of Civil Procedure which required the first mortgagee to make the second mortgagee a party to the proceedings in execution of the former's decree, and the latter could not have successfully objected to the sale in execution of that decree, and therefore that sale was not voided by the death of the judgment-debtor antecedent to its taking place.—6 Al. 255.

S mortgaged four parcels of land to M. M obtained a decree against S directing the sale of the lands mortgaged. S died and K was brought in as his representative under sec. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure. M applied for execution against the lands mortgaged as assets of S. K objected to the sale of three parcels, on the ground that one parcel belonged to himself (K) and two to the family to which S belonged and of which K was the manager. The District Munsif investigated these questions under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and directed that execution should proceed against all four parcels. The District Court on appeal reversed the order of the Munsif on the ground that he had no power to decide these questions under sec. 244, and that the proper course was for M to attach the properties and for K to make a claim. This course was adopted and K's claim was rejected and the four parcels were sold and brought by V. K thereupon brought a suit against M and V to cancel the sales to V:—Held, that, by virtue of sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the suit would not lie.—7 Madr. 255.

A suit having been brought against the holder of an impartible zemindari upon a promissory note, a decree was passed by consent, whereby certain land was directed to be sold in the event of the debt not being paid in a certain way. After the death of the zemindar execution proceedings were taken against his son to obtain a sale of the said land:—Held, that the decree could be executed against the son.—7 Madr. 339.

See I. L. R., 11 Bom. 727, noted under sec. 232; 17 Cal. 711, noted under sec. 244.

235. The application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain, in a tabular form, the following particulars (namely):—

- (a) the number of the suit;
- (b) the names of the parties;
- (c) the date of the decree;
- (d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree;
- (e) whether any and what adjustment of the matter in dispute has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree;

(f) whether any and what previous applications have been made for execution of the decree and with what result;

(g) the amount of the debt or compensation with the interest (if any) due upon the decree, or other relief granted thereby;

(h) the amount of costs (if any) awarded;

(i) the name of the person against whom the enforcement of the decree is sought; and

(j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether by the delivery of property specifically decreed, by the arrest and imprisonment of the person named in the application, or by the attachment of his property, or otherwise as the nature of the relief sought may require.

Notes.

An application for execution of a decree need not be accompanied with either the original decree or a copy.—9 W. R., 362; 11 W. R., 271; 16 W. R., 25.

The plaintiff obtained a decree on the 25th July 1882, which directed that he should give the defendant possession of certain parcels of land at the end of next Margashirsha (i. e., 9th January 1883), and that, on his doing so, the defendant should remove certain hedges and sheds, and restore the land in suit to the plaintiff. On the 9th December 1885, the plaintiff applied to execute the decree. The defendant resisted the application as being time-barred. He contended that the plaintiff having failed to deliver up the land in his possession within the time specified in the decree, he had lost his right to execute the decree. Held that the application was not time-barred. The specification of the end of Margashirsha had merely the effect of postponing the operation of the decree till that time, and the plaintiff had three years from that date within which he might seek execution. The mention of a term when a particular right is to become enforceable is not a condition precedent, whether the enforcement be otherwise subject to a condition or not.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 23.

An appeal lies from an order passed under sec. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code staying execution of a decree pending a suit between the decree-holder and judgment-debtor. The words "such Court" in sec. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code do not limit the exercise of the powers given by that section only to decrees passed by the Court in which the suit is pending, but with reference to secs. 235 (d), 581, and 583 that Court is empowered to stay execution of decrees transferred to it for execution from either a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction or a Court of appeal. The plaintiff instituted a suit against defendant for recovery of money and other reliefs which was ultimately dismissed in appeal by the High Court, and he was ordered to pay defendant Rs. 1,000 as cost of the litigation. Plaintiff then brought this suit against defendant in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Farukhabad, and while it was pending defendant applied to the Court to execute his decree for costs. Plaintiff then applied for stay of the execution, and his application was refused by the first Court, but granted by the District Court. On appeal by defendant to the High Court, Held that an appeal lies from the order, and the Judge's order was correct. Mittun Bibi v. Buzloor Khan (8 W. R., 392) disapproved.—10 Al. 349.

Upon a application under sec. 235 of Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code) for the execution of a decree, which directed the judgment-debtor forthwith to pull down and remove such portion of a wall as had been erected by him upon the wall of the decree-holder, the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required to be given was stated in column (j) of such application to be by giving the decree-holder possession of his wall by pulling down the wall erected thereon. The Court directed an order to issue to the Nazir to remove the judgment-debtor's wall from the top of the decree-holder's wall. Held that the decree-holder's application could not be granted in that form, and that he should have asked the assistance of the Court to be given in the way provided for by sec. 260 of Act X of 1877, by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor or the attachment of his property or both. Held also that the Court was wrong in passing the order it had, but that it should have pointed out to the decree-holder the manner in which he should have asked the assistance of the Court to be given and the remedy to which he was entitled; and that, upon such amended application being made, the proper course to pursue was to serve a notice on the judgment-debtor, directing him to comply with the order contained in the decree within a time to be fixed by such notice; and that, if he failed to comply with such order within the time so limited, the Court might then, at the instance of the decree holder, make an order, either for the judgment-debtor's imprisonment, or for the attachment of his property, due regard being had to the provision of sec. 260 in the latter case. Held, further, that the High Court, in special appeal, should not vary the order for execution which had been passed in such a way as to give the decree-holder that relief for which he did not ask.—8 Cal. 174.

Whenever an application is made for the attachment of any moveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor, but not in his possession, the decree-holder shall annex to the application an inventory of the property to be attached, containing a reasonably accurate description of the same.

Application for attachment of moveable property to be accompanied with inventory.

ment of any immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor, it shall contain at the foot a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and also a specification of the judgment-debtor's share or interest therein to the best of the belief of the applicant, and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same.

Every such description and specification shall be verified in manner hereinbefore provided for the verification of plaints.

Notes.

In attaching an estate paying revenue to Government, the attaching creditor must, in addition to the information required by the 1st clause of sec. 213, Act VIII of 1859, in respect of ordinary immoveable property, give also the special information indicated in the latter clause of that section, that section being cumulative in respect of estates paying revenue to Government.—11 W. R., 175.

The intention of sec. 213, Act VIII of 1859, is that the description in a notice of attachment should be sufficient to identify the property ; and in the case of an estate paying revenue to Government, that there should be a specification of the revenue.—12 W. R., 488 ; 18 W. R., 411.

Where a property was described as a lakheraj tank with four banks, the boundaries of which were given, the identification was held to be fully made out.—18 W. R., 411.

A decree-holder, on the 8th July 1885, applied for execution of a decree dated the 10th July 1873, omitting to set out specifically in such application a description of the immoveable property sought to be attached. On the 24th July he applied for and obtained one month's time to file a list of these properties ; and on the 7th August, after filing the list, applied for the attachment and sale of such properties. The judgment-debtor contended execution was barred by limitation. Held that the omission to file on the 8th July the list describing specifically the properties sought to be attached, was a mere defect of description which could be remedied under sec. 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure by allowing an amendment to be made ; and further that the two applications of the 8th and 24th July should be considered as one entire application dating from the date of the 8th July. Syud Mahomed v. Syud Abedoollah (12 C. L. R., 279) followed.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 124.

Under the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) an application to the Court to continue the attachment of immoveable property, but to stay the sale of it, held to be a proceeding to keep in force the decree.—2 Madr. 218.

A hypothecation bond executed in 1878 by the husband (deceased) of defendant No. 1 to secure a debt due by him to a partner of the plaintiff was assigned to the latter in 1888. In 1882 the plaintiff, who was aware of the existence of this instrument, brought the land comprised in it to sale in execution of a money decree obtained by him against the executant, and defendant No. 3 became the purchaser. At the time of the sale the plaintiff gave no notice of the existence of the encumbrance. In a suit to recover the principal and interest due on the hypothecation bond :—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped from recovering the secured debt against the land.—15 Madr. 412.

Application was made for the attachment, in execution of a decree, of a muafi holding belonging to the judgment-debtor. The numbers and areas given in such application as the numbers and areas of the lands comprised in such holding were the numbers and areas of certain revenue-paying lands, and were not the numbers and areas of any lands held as muafi by the judgment-debtor. The order of attachment described the property as described in the application for attachment. The judgment-debtor having alienated by sale a muafi holding belonging to him, the decree-holders sued to have such alienation set aside as void under the provisions of sec. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held that, having regard to the description given in the application for attachment and the order of attachment, it could not be said that the muafi holding alienated by the judgment-debtor was under attachment at the time of the alienation, and its alienation was therefore not void under sec. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held also that the material misdescription of the property in this case in the order of attachment protected the alienees, who were bona fide purchasers, from having the alienation set aside as void under sec. 276, as the attachment could not, under the circumstances, be held to have been "duly intimated and made known" as required by that sec.—3 Al. 698.

With reference to the question whether the whole joint family property or only the interest of the father therein is liable under a decree obtained against a Hindu father, held that where there is nothing to show any limitation of the extent of the interest sold, whether the sale took place in execution of a decree on a mortgage or of a simple money decree, it may be presumed that the family property and not the mere undivided share of the father was sold. Pem Singh v. Partab Singh referred to. The specification required by sec. 237 of the Civil Procedure Code, of the judgment debtor's share or interest in immoveable property sought to be attached should state distinctly whether it was the judgment-debtor's undivided share, or the family property in which the judgment-debtor had an undivided share, which was sought to be attached, and should also specify what that family property was. If the specification merely referred to the judgment-debtor's share and interest in what was the family property, the Court would hold, unless something to the contrary appeared, that the sale was of that share and interest only.—14 Al. 190.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 556 and 17 Cal. 631, noted under sec. 230.

238. If the property be land registered in the Collector's office, the application for attachment shall be accompanied by an authenticated extract from the register of such office, specifying the persons registered as proprietors of, or as possessing any transferable interest in, the land or its revenue, or as liable to pay revenue, for such land, and the shares of the registered proprietors.

When application must be accompanied by extract from Collector's register.

C.—Of staying Execution.

239. The Court to which a decree has been sent for execution under this chapter shall, upon sufficient cause being shewn, stay the execution of such decree for a reasonable time, to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court by which the decree was made, or to any Court having appellate jurisdiction in respect of the decree or the execution thereof, for an order to stay the execution, or for any other order relating to the decree or execution which might have been made by such

When Court may stay execution.

Court of first instance or Appellate Court if execution had been issued thereby, or if application for execution had been made thereto ; and, in case the property or person of the judgment-debtor has been seized under an execution, the Court which issued the execution may order the restitution or discharge of such property or person pending the result of the application for such order.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Principal Sadr Amin is competent, under sec. 290, Act VIII of 1859, to allow the stay of execution of a decree of the High Court on its original side for a sufficient time to enable the judgment-debtor to make his application to the High Court for a new trial, on the ground that the decree had been obtained ex parte without his knowledge.—8 W. R., 202.

A party appealing against a decree, which directs him to pay money, may obtain stay of execution of the decree, so far as it directs payment, on his lodging the amount in Court, unless the other party gives security for the repayment of the money in the event of the decree being reversed. If such security be given by the successful party, then stay of execution should not be granted.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 241.

It is not open to the Court to refuse to execute a decree against which no appeal has been preferred, and the time for appealing against which has expired.—10 Cal. 817.

Where a decree passed by a Court governed by the Code of Civil Procedure is sent for execution to another Court in British territory likewise governed by the Code, it is not open to the latter to refuse to execute it, on the ground that the former had no jurisdiction. In case of doubt, the Court where execution is sought may adjourn the execution proceedings in order to enable the party interested to make an application to the Court passing the decree, and thence, if necessary, to the higher Courts of the same province in their turn.—7 Bom. 481.

Where a Court in one district transfers a decree for execution to a Court situate in another district, it is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree to question the correctness or propriety of the order under which the decree was sent Court to such for execution. Where, in the opinion of the Court, sufficient cause has been shown against the execution of a decree transferred for execution, the Court executing the decree should follow the procedure prescribed by sec. 239, of the Code of Civil Procedure.—5 Cal. 736 ; 21 W. R., 141, 219.

240. Before passing an order under section 239 to stay execution, or for the restitution of property or the discharge of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require such security from, or impose such conditions upon, the judgment-debtor as it thinks fit.

Power to require security from, or impose conditions upon, judgment-debtor.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

241. No discharge under sec. 239 of the property or person of a judgment-debtor shall prevent it or him from being re-taken in execution of the decree sent for execution.

Liability of judgment-debtor discharged, to be re-taken.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

242. Any order of the Court by which the decree was passed, or of such Court of appeal as aforesaid, in relation to the execution of such decree, shall be binding upon the Court to which the decree was sent for execution.

Order of Court which passed decree or of Appellate Court to be binding upon Court applied to.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

243. If a suit be pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court, on the part of the person against whom the decree was passed, the Court may (if it thinks fit) stay execution on the decree, either absolutely or on such terms as it thinks fit, until the pending suit has been decided.

Stay of execution pending suit between decree-holder and judgment-debtor.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

No appeal lies against an order under the last clause of sec. 209 of the Code of Civil Procedure, staying the execution of a decree. The High Court, however, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, will examine the judicial propriety of such an order. Where a Subordinate Judge, in consequence of a fresh suit by the plaintiff, stayed the execution of a decree which was passed in the defendant's favour for costs, the High Court, in exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, reversed the stay-order.—11 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 151.

Sec. 209 of Act VIII of 1859 provides that, whenever a suit shall be pending in any Court against the holder of a decree of such Court by the judgment-debtor, the Court may, if it appears just and reasonable to do so, stay execution on the decree, either absolutely or on such terms as it may think proper, until a decree shall be passed in the pending suit. Any Court, to which a decree is transmitted for execution, can, under the section, stay execution, notwithstanding that the suit pending between the judgment-debtor and the holder of the decree is pending in such Court, and not in the Court which transmitted the decree.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 181.

A decree-holder having attached the property of his judgment-debtor in execution, the latter applied for a stay of execution until the decision of a pending suit brought by him against the judgment-creditor. The Court allowed the application, continuing the attachment on the property, and struck the execution case off the file. The decree-holder appealed to the High Court. Held that no appeal lay.—1 L. R., 9 Cal. 214; 12 C. L. R., 53.

See 10 Cal. 817, noted under sec. 239; 10 Al. 389, noted under sec. 235.

D.—Questions for Court executing Decree.

244. The following questions shall be determined by order of the Court executing a decree, and not by separate suit (namely) :—

Questions to be decided by Court executing decree.

(a) questions regarding the amount of any mesne-profits as to which the decree has directed inquiry ;

(b) questions regarding the amount of any mesne-profits or interest which the decree has made payable in respect of the subject-matter of a suit, between the date of its institution and the execution of decree, or the expiration of three years from the date of the decree ;

(c) any other questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives, and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, or to the stay of execution thereof.*

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to bar a separate suit for mesne-profits accruing between the institution of the first suit and the execution of the decree therein, where such profits are not dealt with by such decree.

If a question arises as to who is the representative of a party for the purposes of this section, the Court may either stay execution of the decree until the question has been determined by a separate suit, or itself determine the question by an order under this section.†

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The lower Appellate Court held that A could not bring his suit for mesne-profits, after he had obtained a decree for possession in a prior suit, in which " he not having valued his suit so as to include the claims for wasilat," no provision had been made for mesne-profits. Decision reversed on special appeal. Per KEMP and E. JACKSON, JJ.—1 B. L. R., S. N., 3.

A, a decree-holder, applied for execution of his decree, but was opposed by B, the judgment-debtor, on the ground that A had sold his decree to a third party, from whom it had passed to B's son. Held that this was a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution of the decree, and might be determined by order of the Court executing the decree under sec. 11 of Act VIII. of 1859. Per LOCH and GLOVER, JJ.—1 B. L. R., S. N., 9; 10 W. R., 144.

A, in execution of a decree of the lower Court against B, obtained possession of certain land therein mentioned. On appeal by B, the High Court reversed the decree of the lower Court, and ordered restitution of the property to B; but no mention of mesne-profits was made in the decree. B then sued for recovery of mesne-profits for the period during which A had been in possession. Held that such a suit would not lie. The question of mesne-profits ought to have been decided in execution under sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 146; 10 W. R., 131.

In a former suit brought for possession of immoveable property against J and her father, and subsequently revived against J as the representative of her father, possession and mesne-profits were decreed against J in her representative capacity, while as against her, in her individual capacity, the suit was dismissed. The decree-holder, after obtaining possession, attached and sold in satisfaction of his decree for mesne-profits J's private property, notwithstanding her objections, and himself became the purchaser, but never obtained possession. This sale, ordered on the 8th October 1863, was confirmed by the Judge on 15th March 1864. The present suit was brought by J for confirmation of her possession of her private property by cancellation of the execution-sale. Held (MACPHERSON and GLOVER, JJ., dissenting) that such suit was maintainable, and that J, in her individual capacity, was not a party to the suit in which execution issued, within the meaning of sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—2 B. L. R., (F. B.) 73; S. C., 11 W. R., (F. B.) 1; 12 W. R., 201.

When money has been taken in execution of a decree which is subsequently reversed or modified, no fresh suit will lie for its recovery; the matter must be enquired into by the Court which passed the decree as a question arising between the parties relating to the execution of such decree.—4 B. L. R., App. 64; 2 W. R., 275; 4 W. R., 66.

Where, in a suit for land, the Court decreed to the plaintiff possession of the land, but made no decree in respect of mesne-profits, held that the plaintiff could not, under sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861, obtain an order, from the Court executing his decree, declaring him entitled to any or what amount of mesne-profits. Under sec. 11 the question must relate to something comprised in the decree.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 111; 13 W. R., 11; 18 W. R., 122; 25 W. R., 327.

The plaintiff brought a suit for possession of land with mesne-profits. The suit was dismissed. He appealed on the question of possession only, and obtained a decree for possession without any mention of mesne-profits; and afterwards, in execution of the decree, he obtained possession of the land. Held that the plaintiff could afterwards bring his suit to recover mesne-profits from the date of decree for the period of six years next before the commencement of the suit, exclusive of the period during which the plaintiff was in possession. Secs. 2, 7 and 196 of Act VIII of 1859, and sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, were no bar to such suit.—4 B. L. R., (F. B.) 113; 13 W. R., (F. B.) 15.

A, a judgment-debtor, paid to B, the decree-holder, a sum of money by way of compromise, in full satisfaction of the decree. B failed to certify this payment to the Court, and afterwards executed her decree for the full amount. In a suit by A against B for recovery of the amount previously paid out of Court in satisfaction of the decree, held that, notwithstanding sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, the suit was maintainable.—5 B. L. R., 223; 13 W. R., (F. B.) 69. Overruling 3 W. R., S. C. C. Ref. 3.

When the Privy Council declares an appellant entitled to real property of which he was out of possession, and directs the High Court to make the inquiry necessary to ascertain what is comprised therein, and to proceed in the suit as upon the result of such inquiry may appear to be just, the High Court, on being applied to for execution, ought, besides giving possession, to ascertain and award the mesne-profits up to the date of giving possession. An appeal will lie as of right from the order of a single Judge of the High Court as to execution of a decree of the Privy Council where the property is over Rs. 10,000. 5 B. L. R., 605. S. C. 14 W. R., (P. C.) 23; 13 Moore's I. A., 490.

B sued his brother C for possession of certain lands. B and C came to an amicable settlement, one of the terms of which was that C, during his life, should retain possession of certain of the lands, and that, after his death, they should pass to B. A decree was given in accordance with the terms of the compromise. On C's death, his widow refused to put B in possession of the lands. B sought to obtain possession of the lands with mesne-profits by executing the decree under the compromise against C's widow. Held that he ought to proceed by regular suit.—6 B. L. R., App. 142; 14 W. R., 485.

A sued for possession of certain lands, to which he alleged he was entitled as wussee (executor) under a wusseentnamah (will), and which B had fraudulently, during the minority of himself and his brother, caused to be put up for sale under a decree, the execution of which was barred by lapse of time. B had become the purchaser at such sale. Held that a suit would not lie for the purpose of having it determined that the execution of B's decree was barred.—11 B. L. R., 42; 20 W. R., 5. See 5 B. L. R., 68; 13 W. R., 273; 23 W. R., 257; 24 W. R., 45.

The decree of the High Court affirmed under the circumstances of the case: but held (contrary to the opinion of the majority of a Full Bench):—Where a decree against a person in a representative capacity has been properly passed, and proceedings have been taken under it to obtain execution against the party in his representative character, he is a party to the suit with respect to any question which may arise between him and the other parties relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 11.—11 B. L. R., (P. C.) 149; 18 W. R., 185; 20 W. R., 162.

Where a party who has obtained a decree for land takes possession by his own act, and not by the act of the officer of Court, of more land than the decree gives him, held that a suit will lie to recover back possession of any land taken in excess of the decree.—12 B. L. R., 201; 12 W. R., 85.

The plaintiff (special respondent) sued to recover certain lands under the following circumstances: The defendant (special appellant) held a decree for the recovery of certain lands from the plaintiff within certain boundaries specified in the decree. In execution of that decree, the present defendant (then the decree-holder) took possession of the lands in dispute, averring that they were covered by the decree. This possession was given through an officer of the Court. Thereafter, the present plaintiff (then the judgment-debtor) appeared before the Court which has jurisdiction to execute the decree, and complained that the present defendant had illegally taken possession of the lands, because they were not covered by the decree. The Court determined that the decree did cover the lands, and rejected the application. The plaintiff then sued to recover possession of the lands, which was, as alleged, wrongly taken under the defendant's decree. Held that the suit would not lie. It was a question arising between the parties, and related to the execution of the decree, under sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Such question, therefore, should be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit. 12 B. L. R., 203 note; 12 B. L. R., 207 note. S. C. 12 W. R., 85. See W. R., 1864, 208; and W. R., 1864, 247.

Where something has been done wholly contrary to what the decree ordered, it cannot be considered as an act done in the execution of the decree. In this case the decree was to lower a bund to the proper height, and that height was to be regulated according to the papers of the Munsif. If, in addition to lowering the embankment to the proper height, whatever it was, holes have been cut, or breaches made, in the embankment, so lowered, it was not done in execution of the decree, which ordered the embankment to be lowered—not that the embankment, when lowered, should be rendered useless by having holes or breaches made in it. Upon the above facts it was held that a suit would lie for trespass.—12 B. L. R., 208 note; 11 W. R., 516. See also 3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 413; 12 W. R., 329.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree against B in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Sometime afterwards B recovered a decree in the Munsif's Court against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon applied for the attachment of this decree in satisfaction of their own against B. Before attachment, however, B assigned her decree to C. On C trying to execute B's decree against the plaintiffs, they brought the present suit for a declaration of their right to have a set-off made of the two decrees. Held that such a suit would not lie.—13 B. L. R., 489; 22 W. R., 235.

In a previous suit brought by S, the present appellant, against M to recover possession of certain land, H and others, claiming to be the owners of the property, asked leave to come in and defend the suit, which leave was refused. The suit was dismissed, and S appealed, and in her appeal she named H and his co-sharers as respondents, and a notice was consequently served upon them in the usual form. H and his co-sharers did not appear, and the judgment of the first Court being reversed, a decree for recovery of possession was given on 2nd November 1868, in which they were included. Subsequently H and his co-sharers brought a suit to have their title to this very property declared, one of the defendants being S herself. H and the other plaintiffs obtained a final decree declaring their title to the lands claimed by them on 31st December 1870. Whilst this second suit was pending, S took proceedings in execution of her former decree to recover a sum of Rs. 375, awarded her by that decree either for costs or mesne-profits (it was not clear which), whereupon D and his co-sharers, in order to prevent a sale of the property, deposited in Court the amount claimed under protest, and S received that amount on account of her decree. D and his co-sharers now brought the present suit against S to recover the amount so paid. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree, which was affirmed on appeal. S appealed to the High Court. Held that, as D had not been made a party to the first suit (S v. M), he was entitled to recover from S the sum received out of Court by S.—13 B. L. R., App. 17.

In construing the provisions of sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, notwithstanding certain earlier decisions to a contrary effect, all the Indian High Courts have now recognized it to be settled law that, where the decree is silent touching interest, or mesue-profits, subsequent to the institution of the suit, the Court executing the decree cannot, under the section in question, assess or give execution for such interest or mesne-profits, but that the plaintiff is at liberty to assert his rights thereto by a separate suit. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, although of opinion that, if the matter had been res integra, the provisions of the section might have admitted of a different interpretation, being unwilling to run counter to a long and concurrent course of decisions of the Indian Courts in what is really a mere matter of procedure, accepted this construction of the law as binding. The plaintiff obtained a decree for the possession of certain lands with mesne-profits up to the date of suit. No claim was made in the plaint for mesne-profits accruing due after the date of suit, and the decree was silent in respect thereof. An appeal against the decree having been brought by the defendant, execution was from time to time stayed by the Court on the defendant giving security to abide the event of the appeal, for the execution of the decree, and for payment of the mesne-profits accruing, while the plaintiff remained out of possession. The decree having been confirmed on appeal, the plaintiff applied for execution in respect of the interim mesne-profits. Held in the Court below that, as these were not provided for by the decree, they could not, under sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, be awarded in execution, but must be made the subject of a separate suit. Held by the Judicial Committee that the proceedings, whereby the defendant led the Court to stay execution, and continue him in possession, laid him under an obligation to account in the suit for the mesne-profits which he engaged to pay; and that this obligation was capable of being enforced by proceedings in execution, notwithstanding the construction given by the Court to sec. 11; since even if the defendant's liability to account were not to be considered "a question relating to the executing of the decree" within the meaning of the section, he was, in any case, precluded by the ordinary principles of estoppel from contending that the mesne-profits in question were not payable under the decree. Where a Court has a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a claim, parties may be held to an agreement that the questions between them should be heard and determined by proceedings contrary to the ordinary cursus curiæ.—15 B. L. R., 383; L. R., 2 I. A. 219; 24 W. R., 198. S. C. in High Court, 7 M. H. C. R., 97; 1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 167; Ed. 1873, 246; 22 W. R., 160; 25 W. R., 215.

A regular suit will lie at the instance of one decree-holder against another for a refund of money that has been erroneously paid away to the latter contrary to the provisions of sec. 270 of Act VIII of 1859.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1022; 9 W. R., 515. See 3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 164.

Even with the permission of the Civil Court a separate suit cannot be brought for mesne-profits between the institution of the original suit and the execution of the decree thereon. Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11, commented on.—1 M. H. C. R., 453; 2 M. H. C. R., 435.

Plaintiff owed defendant a judgment-debt. He paid the debt, but not through the Court. Defendant then fraudulently applied to the Court to execute the decree, and the Court, being debarred by sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure from recognizing payment made otherwise than through it, executed the decree by making the plaintiff pay again the sum decreed. Plaintiff sued to recover the amount overpaid. Held by the majority of the Court (SCOTLAND, C. J., and INNES, J., dissenting) that such a suit is not maintainable.—3 M. H. C. R., 183; I. L. R., 1 Madr. 203.

The words in sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, "questions arising between the parties to the suit," cannot be limited to questions arising between those who were parties to the suit at the date of the decree; but, after decree, the representative of a decree-holder, or the representative of a defendant against whom an execution is sought under secs. 210 and 216 of the Code, become parties to the suit for the purpose of execution, and questions arising between them are questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of sec. 11 of the amending Act.—3 M. H. C. R., 263.

A plaintiff in possession under a decree for land and mesne-profits applied for further execution as to mesne-profits, and obtained an order from the Court of first instance (the District Munsif's Court). This order was reversed by the Appellate Court (the Civil Court leaving it still open to the Court of first instance to make a further order). Plaintiff, however, instead of applying again for execution, instituted a fresh suit for mesne-profits in the Civil Court. The Civil Judge rejected the plaint. Held that sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861 warranted the rejection of the plaint, on the ground that the mesne-profits to which plaintiff laid claim in the suit were payable in respect of the subject-matter of the former suit.—3 M. H. C. R., 287.

Where no liability to mesne-profits is imposed by a decree, sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861 does not give a power to extend the relief granted by the decree in respect of the right to mesne-profits, but only to determine questions regarding the amount thereof when the right thereto has been ascertained by the decree.—4 M. H. C. R., 257.

A suit does not lie to enforce a liability specifically by the decree of a Civil Court in the mofussil, the right of suit in such case being taken away by sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—4 M. H. C. R., 453.

The plaintiff sued to recover certain land of which the defendant obtained possession in execution of a decree in a former suit in which the plaintiff was a defendant, although it was not part of the land mentioned in the plaint or decree in the former suit. Held that the plaintiff's suit could not be maintained, and that his only remedy for the wrongful dispossession was a proceeding under sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861.—5 M. H. C. R., 185.

The ancestors of the plaintiff brought a suit in 1821 before the Registrar of the Adalat Court to eject the defendant's grandfather from a piece of ground. The Registrar found that the defendant was a tenant under the plaintiff at a monthly rent, and the Court decreed that defendant should remain in possession so long as he should continue to pay the rent regularly, and that, in default of payment, the plaintiff should be placed in possession. An attempt to obtain possession in execution of that decree in 1861 failed, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession with arrears of rent. Held that sec. 11, of Act XXIII. of 1861 precluded the plaintiff from maintaining the suit.—5 M. H. C. R., 375.

By the terms of a decree passed by the District Munsif, the plaintiff was declared entitled to the possession of certain land together with the crops upon it. The plaintiff asked for execution of the decree in respect of the land and the crops which he alleged had been unlawfully taken away by the defendants, and possession of the land was given to the plaintiff, but he was referred to a separate suit for the damage sustained by him by reason of the removal of the crop. Held that no separate suit could be maintained, but the plaintiff's remedy was by a proceeding in execution under sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861 (Civil Procedure Code).—6 M. H. C. R., 13.

Suit brought to recover the amount to which plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in favour of himself and defendant as co-plaintiffs in a former suit. It appeared that defendant purchased the property sold in execution of the decree, and that the price for which the sale took place was sufficient to satisfy the decree. Instead of paying the purchase-money into Court, defendant, with the knowledge and assent of plaintiff, retained the whole sum upon the understanding that he should give the Court a receipt for himself and on behalf of plaintiff, and afterwards pay to plaintiff his portion of the amount decreed. Accordingly defendant presented a petition to that effect, and obtained a certificate confirming the sale. Defendant having failed to pay plaintiff his portion, the present suit was brought. Upon these facts, it was held in special appeal that the decree was satisfied by sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and that the execution-proceedings were completely at an end, the defendant having been, by the assent of the plaintiff, made his agent for the acknowledgment of the satisfaction of the decree. No subsequent application under the decree could have been entertained by the Court which executed it. Therefore plaintiff's claim was not a matter determinable under sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861.—6 M. C. R., 304; 17 W. R., 14.

Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree, at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be inquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 393; 2nd Ed. 371.

Where a decree awarding possession of immoveable property is silent as to mesne-profits accruing between the filing of the plaint and the execution of the decree, the Court executing the decree has no power to award such; the proper course for the plaintiff to adopt under such circumstances is to apply to the Court which passed the decree for a review, or else to file a separate suit. Jiva Patil v. Melukji Anant Nathina (3 Bom. H. C. R., A. C., 31) overruled.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 181; 4 W. R., 92.

N obtained a decree against A for certain lands, and was put in possession of them in execution of the decree. On appeal, the decree against A was reversed, and the lands were accordingly restored to him, but no provision was made as to the mesne-profits received by N when he was in possession of the lands under the decree of the lower Court. In a suit brought by A against N to recover such mesne-profits, it was held that the suit would lie, and was not prohibited by sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 74.

When a suit is brought to recover possession of immoveable property, and the decree does not provide for the mesne-profits that accrued during the suit, a separate suit may be maintained for them. Where, however, it can be shown that the omission in the decree to provide for mesne-profits was the deliberate act of the Court, the defendant may set that up as a defence in the separate suit.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 109.

In a suit for mesne-profits (not being a suit for land and its mesne-profits) interest on mesne-profits cannot be recovered.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 7.

A obtains possession of property under a decree. The decree is subsequently reversed. Held, 1st, that A must restore the property itself, or its actual value as determined by evidence, and not the amount for which it may have been sold; and, 2ndly, under sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861, that a claim for its restoration need not be the subject of a separate suit, but may be enforced in a miscellaneous proceeding.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 297.

Plaintiff's father purchased a house on the 11th June 1854 at a sale made under a decree against G D, but was not put into possession of it. Accordingly, in 1866, he obtained a decree for possession, which, however, was never executed. The defendant, in 1870, obtained possession of the house by another sale made in execution of another decree against G D. The present suit was instituted by plaintiff in 1871. Held that, not only was the remedy on the cause of action which accrued in 1854 and the decree of 1866 barred, but also that Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11, prevented the plaintiff from bringing a new suit on the fresh cause of action accruing to him under the decree of 1866, as that section "took away from the parties to the suit the right to raise by a fresh suit any question as to their rights and liabilities under the decree." Ranganasary v. Shappani (5 M. H. R., 375) followed.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 433.

An application to the Court, passing a decree for possession in favour of the heirs of a mortgagee for further execution thereof, by taking an account, is not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged lands and to recover possession thereof. The proper course for a mortgagor who seeks for an account and redemption, or for redemption alone, is to bring an independent suit for that purpose. Janoji v. Byankatesh (2 Bom. H. C. R., 371) overruled.—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 160.

A mortgagee was put into possession of the mortgaged property, under a decree obtained by him against the mortgagor, to the effect that the mortgagee should remain in possession until the mortgage-debt was paid. The mortgagor subsequently paid into Court the money due under the mortgage-decree, and applied to be restored to the possession of the mortgaged property. Both the lower Courts granted the mortgagor's application. On special appeal, held (following the decision of the Full Bench in Ravji Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram Maluckchand, 12 Bom. A. C. 160) that such an application was not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the property and to recover possession from the mortgagee, the previous decree for possession having been fully executed when the mortgagee was put into possession.—12 Bom. H. C., (A. C.) 163.

A suit will, notwithstanding sec. 206 of Act VIII. of 1859, lie for damages for an alleged breach of contract in not certifying to the Court a payment of money in satisfaction of a decree, made out of and not through the Court, in consequence of which the same was fraudulently recovered a second time by the person omitting to certify the said payment.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 155; Ed. 1873, 237. S. C., Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 185.

A claim for damages for injury to certain goods belonging to plaintiff, but attached by the defendant in execution of a decree held by him against the plaintiff, pending such attachment, through the alleged negligence of the defendant, is a matter which should be determined by a separate suit, and not by the Court executing the decree under which the goods were attached.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 187.

The plaintiff held a decree against the defendants, and agreed to take an elephant in satisfaction, the defendant promising, if satisfaction were entered up, to be responsible for the value of the elephant, should it be claimed and recovered by any other person. It was so claimed and recovered, and the plaintiff sued for its value. Held that the suit was not barred by sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 126.

A decree passed for money was lost or destroyed: the decree-holder on suing out execution was referred to a regular suit. Held that the existence of the decree and of its terms might have been enquired into in the execution department, and that the order of the Court, to which application for execution was made, could not confer jurisdiction on a Court to entertain such a suit.—1 Agra H. C. R., 78.

Where the object of the suit was to set aside orders passed in the miscellaneous department relating to execution of decree, held that such suit was untenable; sec. 11, Act XIII. of 1861, having distinctly prohibited all remedy by separate suit, and the remedy provided being an appeal from the order complained of.—1 Agra H. C. R., 93.

Where by a decree the plaintiff's right to a monthly allowance was declared, held that any failure on the part of the person bound to pay by the terms of the decree would constitute a good cause of action; and a fresh suit brought on the assertion of payment being withheld would not be affected by the provisions of sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861.—2 Agra H. C. R., 23.

Held that sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, does not apply to suits brought by a decree-holder to question an alienation made by the judgment-debtor, inasmuch as the transferee was not a party to the former suit, and only questions between the parties to the suit must of necessity be determined in the execution department.—2 Agra H. C. R., 180.

Interest on a sum awarded for mesne-profits may properly be withheld until the date of the decree, since the amount is not ascertained before that time.—Marshall's Rep. 105; 1 Hay's Rep. 181; 11 W. R., 25.

According to the practice of the native Courts in Bombay, a sum found due for mesne-profits was a judgment-debt and carried interest by its own force. On petition in the native Court after decree upon appeal in England, interest was awarded on the amount of mesne-profits decreed, though not prayed for in the plaint, or given by the decrees in India or the order of affirmance in England.—3 Moore's I. A. 220.

A sold to B certain logs of timber, and 95 logs were delivered to B in part performance of the contract. C brought a suit against A and B, claiming the logs under another title. Pending this suit, C entered into an agreement with D, selling him the logs in the event of being successful in his suit. The judgment of the Court of first instance was in C's favour, and under such judgment D obtained possession of the logs in suit. This judgment was on appeal reversed. B then brought a suit in the nature of an action of trover against C and D for the logs and damages. The Court, without entering into the merits, dismissed the suit, on the ground that it was not maintainable, as the same relief would have been obtained under the provisions of sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Held by the Judicial Committee, reversing such Judgment, that there had been a miscarriage, as that section did not apply, the suit by B against C and D being to recover damages for a tort alleged to have been committed by C and D, and that the latter was not a party to the original suit or bound by the judgment in that suit.—13 Moore's I. A., 69.

A suit by a ryot against another for damages on account of illegal appropriation of the produce of the land, including the ryot's profits, by the defendant during certain years, is not a suit for mesne-profits, and is therefore unaffected by sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. The question regarding amount cannot be settled in execution, but by separate suit.—3 W. R., 1.

Mesne-profits for the period during which the decree-holder was executing the decree and was kept out of possession by the opposite party may be awarded by the Court under sec. 11 Act XXIII of 1861. It is not necessary to bring a separate suit.—6 W. R., Mis., 13.

A claim for damages in respect of injury sustained by goods while under attachment in execution of a decree which was afterwards set aside, is not a matter to be disposed of under sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, but must be made the subject of a separate suit.—7 W. R., 45.

A decree-holder took out execution against A and B. When B's property was attached, his widow, C, came forward, and laid claim to it on the part of her minor son, urging that, as B was not liable under the decree, his property could not be sold. The objection was disallowed and the property was sold. Held that sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, did not prevent C from suing to set aside that sale, and recover B's property, on the ground that B was not liable under the decree.—7 W. R., 361.

The words "party to a suit" in sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, include the heirs, assignees, and representatives of such party, and consequently give the purchaser of a decree all the rights of appeal, &c., which his vendor had.—8 W. R., 197; 10 W. R., 205.

The plaintiffs were held entitled to interest on mesne-profits.—8 W. R., 322.

Sec. 206, Act VIII of 1859, does not bar a suit brought to recover money paid into the Collectorate as Government revenue, although the person on whose behalf the money was paid had an Act X. decree against the person paying the money, as the entire amount of the decree was eventually recovered by taking out execution of the whole decree.—8 W. R., 449.

Where it is contended that the decree that has been executed is not the decree that was passed between the parties, but a decree modified by a subsequent decretal order, sec. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, does not apply, the question not being one relating to the execution of the decree and between the parties to the suit.—8 W. R., 506.

Where the holder of a decree for maintenance is opposed in execution by the heirs of her judgment-debtors, the questions arising between them cannot be determined in execution, but must be tried in a regular suit. Quære, if the original judgment-debtor were alive, could the decree-holder enforce her claim for maintenance by execution without a fresh suit for each instalment unpaid?—10 W. R., 93.

A Court executing a decree has no power to assess mesne-profits, unless it is ordered by the decree that the mesne-profits are to be assessed in execution; and it is an essential part of a decree which orders mesne-profits to be assessed in execution, to fix the period in respect of which such mesne-profits are to be assessed.—11 W. R., 200.

The mesne-profits which, under the provisions of sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, are assessable by the Court executing the decree, are only such as have been by the decree made payable in respect of the subject-matter of the suit between the date of the suit and the date of the execution of the decree. Any question of mesne-profits not determined by the Court making the decree is not properly cognizable by the Court executing the decree.—11 W. R., 339.

Sums paid in execution in excess of what was the due under decree can only be recovered by application to the Court which executed the decree, not by a separate suit.—15 W. R., 160.

Although the common practice is to make interest payable from the date on which the mesne-profits are assessed, interest was given in a suit for mesne-profits which ought to have been paid by the defendants, but which plaintiffs had been made to pay, from the date when they ought to have been paid by the defendants.—17 W. R., 228.

Where a decree was silent as to the plaintiff's right to mesne-profits after the date of filing the suit, and did not reserve any question of mesne-profits for further investigation, the Court which executed the decree was held to have acted ultra vires in ordering an investigation into mesne-profits which may have accrued due pending the suit and up to the time of execution.—19 W. R., 154.

A judgment-creditor having caused certain property of his judgment-debtor to be sold in execution, the proceeds realised did not amount to the full judgment-debt. Afterwards the judgment-debt was reduced in appeal to a sum far below the amount realised in execution, and the judgment-debtor brought a suit to recover the excess moneys. Held, with reference to Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11, that the suit did not lie, but that the Court which was charged with the execution of the decree had full jurisdiction to determine the question and order a refund.—19 W. R., 413.

Where a decree-holder in execution takes possession of more land than is covered by the decree, and on an objection raised, and after inquiry made, the excess land is subsequently relinquished, the question of wasilat, being one which arises between the parties to the suit with reference to the execution of the decree must, under Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11, be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit.—20 W. R., 415 ; 7 W. R., 372.

A suit to enforce a contract by which a dispute was adjusted between a decree-holder and judgment-debtor is not barred by Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 206.—22 W. R., 298.

A decree awarding possession with wasilat from the date of suit was held to be rightly construed as awarding mesne-profits until the date when delivery of possession should be effected, and reserving the question of the amount for adjustment in execution.—22 W. R., 328.

In a suit for possession under an usufructuary mortgage, plaintiff obtained a decree which was afterwards authoritatively interpreted to mean that he was to get possession of the property in order to repay himself out of the profits, keeping the usual accounts, and, after satisfaction of his claim, restore the property. Held that, under the terms of the decree, he was in effect required to certify, for the information both of the Court and of the judgment-debtors, the amounts received and outstanding ; and that the Court executing the decree was bound to require from him, from time to time, a statement of the amount received, and could deal with the matter under Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11.—23 W. R., 156.

Where a refund is claimed of the proceeds of an execution-sale, on the ground that the decree has been satisfied by compromise, the matter ought to be tried under Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11, and not by regular suit.—23 W. R., 207.

Certain decree-holders, having been sued successfully for possession by the judgment-debtors in the first Court, appealed to the High Court, who reversed the decision, and whose order was confirmed by the Privy Council. The decree-holders on this applied for execution and for mesne-profits for the interval during which they had been kept out of possession. Held that they were entitled to what they claimed in execution without bringing a regular suit, as the effect of the High Court's decree was to replace the parties in statu quo.—23 W. R., 441.

A suit will lie to set aside a sale made in contravention of the terms of sec. 64, Beng. Act VIII of 1869, the judgment-debtor not being bound to oppose the sale in the proceedings in execution.—25 W. R., 156.

Although the assessment of mesne profits is reserved for the period of execution of decree, it is an essential part of the decree itself, and not a mere process in execution, and must therefore be made by a Court authorised to pass the decree.—25 W. R., 270.

A party who has been put upon the record, whether rightly or wrongly, is so far a party to the suit that he has a right of appeal under Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 11.—2 C. L. R., 545.

In execution of a decree the property of the judgment-debtor was sold, and on an account being taken, a certain sum therein appearing to be due was paid in December 1868 to the decree-holders. Subsequently, on the application of the judgment-debtor, the account was re-opened, and had been overdrawn by the decree-holders. In 1876 the judgment-debtor applied to the Court which executed the decree for an order for the repayment of the amount overdrawn. Held that, while the application was not barred by any provisions of the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country; and, further, that the application had been presented in the proper Court, as required by sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861 (corresponding with sec. 244 of Act X. of 1877).—4 C. L. R., 577.

Interest on mesne-profits may be allowed from the commencement of the suit at the annual rate allowed by the Court. Hurropersaud Roy v. Shamapersaud Roy (I. L. R., 3 Cal. 654) followed.—6 C. L. R., 357.

A sale on the 4th March 1871, of certain property sold in execution of a decree obtained by A, having been confirmed on the 5th May 1878, notice was, on the 31st May, received that the judgment-debtor had been adjudicated a bankrupt in London, and an application was made to the Court to abstain from dealing with his property. All proceedings were thereupon stayed, and on the 8th of July 1878 the purchaser applied to the Court for a refund by the present plaintiffs, who were the administrators of A, of this purchase-money, and on the 19th of the same month an order was made for such refund. The amount was refunded without protest by the plaintiffs who then sued the purchaser and the original judgment-debtor to recover the amount paid by them. Held that the suit would not lie, but that the question was one to be determined under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code by the Court executing the decree.—10 C. L. R., 573.

K and M were brothers alleged to be joint in food, dwelling, and business. In a suit which was brought against K, and which was unsuccessfully defended by him on behalf of himself and the joint family, a decree for costs was passed against him. K died after decree and the decree-holder in execution had K's sons put on the record as his representatives. Certain property was attached in execution, and the sons objected that the property in question had come to them as the self-acquired property of their uncle M, who had died after K, and that they had inherited no property from their father K. Their objection was allowed by the Court executing the decree, and the property was ordered to be released from attachment. In a suit brought by the assignee of the decree-holder against the sons of K to establish his right to proceed against the property in question in execution of the decree against K, held that the question of the liability of the property to be taken in execution in the hands of the defendant was a "question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives, and relating to the execution, &c., of the decree" within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit was consequently not maintainable. The cases as to the position of representatives added to the suit either before or after decree referred to and discussed.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 1.

D obtained a decree against the father of A and R, Hindus, on a hypothecation bond whereby certain land was pledged as security for repayment of a loan. The decree declared the land liable to be sold for repayment of the debt. The judgment-debtor having died before the decree was executed, A and R were made parties to the proceedings in execution, and the land was attached. A and R objected to the attachment, on the ground that their shares in the land were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree, as they were not parties to the suit. This objection was allowed, and D brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be sold. That suit was dismissed on the ground that a suit for a declaration would not lie. D then sued to recover from A and R the balance due under the decree against their father after crediting the amount recovered by the sale of their father's share. It was objected that the suit was barred by sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the duty of a son under Hindu law to pay his father's debt out of his own share of ancestral estate is not a matter which can be decided under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The questions contemplated by sec. 244 are those which relate to the enforcement of the obligation created by the decree. The obligation to pay the father's debts out of the son's share of the ancestral estate is not an obligation created by a decree against the father.—11 Madr. 413.

When a Munsif set aside on review an order rejecting an objection to the execution of a certain decree, and the District Court on appeal refused to interfere, held that no second appeal lay to the High Court.—12 Madr. 125.

In execution of a decree the defendant, who was sued as the representative of her deceased brother, objected under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the attachment of certain lands to which she set up independent title. The objection was disallowed, and the land was sold. She then sued the execution-purchaser to set aside the Court-sale, and obtained a decree against which no appeal was preferred. She now sued for possession. Held that the suit lay, notwithstanding the order under sec. 244. Per Cur.—The words “not competent” in sec. 44 of the Evidence Act refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction.—12 Madr. 228.

The assignee of a decree applied for execution; his application was dismissed and he was never brought on to the record as decree-holder. He now sued for the cancellation of the order refusing execution and for a declaration of his right to execution:—Held, that the suit was not precluded by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 244.—14 Madr. 478.

At a sale in execution of a decree a decree-holder, who had obtained leave to bid, was alleged to have made a bid through his agent of Rs. 90,000, but he shortly afterwards repudiated the bid, and did not pay the deposit. The property was put up for sale again on the following day under sec. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was in due course knocked down for a smaller sum. The judgment-debtor filed a petition under sec. 293 to recover from the decree-holder the loss by re-sale; the petition was rejected. On appeal, held (1) that the question at issue was one arising between the parties to the suit, and that an appeal lay against the order rejecting the petition; (2) that the property, having been forthwith put up again and sold under sec. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was re-sold within the meaning of sec. 293.—12 Madr. 454.

By a sanad duly executed on the 20th August 1850, the plaintiffs' father, Yeshvantrav, who was a vatandar deshmuikh, appointed the defendants and their heirs hereditary vatani gumastas, and granted, by way of remuneration for their services, Rs. 201 and a quantity of grain out of the annual vatan income in perpetuity. In consideration of certain sums obtained from the defendants, Yeshvantrav mortgaged the vatan property to the defendants, who subsequently sued Yeshvantrav upon the mortgage. That suit was referred to arbitration, and an award was duly made, and a decree upon the award was obtained by the defendants against Yeshvantrav. In 1859, execution of the decree was granted against Yeshvantrav. In 1864 the services connected with the vatan were discontinued by Government. In 1871 Yeshvantrav died. The defendants, having kept the decree alive, sought in 1881 to execute the decree against the plaintiffs' eldest brother, who filed objections, but his objections were overruled, and execution was ordered to issue. The plaintiffs brought this suit in 1883 for a declaration that the defendants were no longer entitled to the allowance under the sanad, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from the execution of the decree against the vatan. The defendants contended (inter alia) that the sanad could not be cancelled, Yeshvantrav having granted it as full owner; that the receipt, by the defendants, of the allowance had been adverse since 1864, when their services had ceased; and that the execution-proceedings against the plaintiffs' father and their elder brother in 1859 and 1881, respectively, bound the plaintiffs. Both the lower Courts decided in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal by the defendants to the High Court, held (confirming the decree of the lower Courts) that the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaratory decree and to the injunction prayed for. Although the management of the vatan was vested by the sanad in the defendants and their heirs in perpetuity under the title of gumastas, nevertheless the remuneration attached to the office by Yeshvantrav was in derogation of his successor's rights, and was, therefore, at any rate in the absence of proof of custom, invalid against them. Held also that, having regard to the terms of the sanad, it was in the power of the original grantor, or any of his successors, to determine the office and the remuneration at any time after the vatan services ceased in 1864. Held also that, assuming the grant by Yeshvantrav to be invalid as against his successor, adverse possession would only run against the plaintiffs from the time of his death in 1871, and the present suit having been filed within twelve years from that date was not barred. Held further that the proceedings in execution of the decree of 22nd June 1859, including the order of the 18th June 1881, did not bind the plaintiffs, under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1832), the plaintiffs not having been parties to them.—12 Bom. 80.

Mere ignorance of the law cannot be recognized as a sufficient reason for delay under sec. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV. of 1877). A obtained a decree against B as the heir and legal representative of his deceased uncle C. The decree directed that the amount adjudged should be recovered from C's assets in the hands of B. In execution of this decree certain property was attached. B claimed this property as his own, and sought to remove the attachment, but the Court passed an order confirming the attachment on the 20th November 1880. In 1881 B filed a regular suit to set aside this order. The suit was dismissed in 1885, as barred by sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1832). Thereupon B filed an appeal from the order in execution made on the 20th November 1880. This appeal was rejected as time-barred, under art. 152 of sch. ii of the Limitation Act, XV. of 1877. Held that the time spent in the actual proceedings in the suit to set aside the order in execution might be deducted in computing the delay that occurred before the appeal was filed. But the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the time that intervened between the date of the order appealed against and the date of filing the suit.—12 Bom. 320.

In execution of a decree on a mortgage certain property was sold which the plaintiff in this suit claimed as his own under a sale to himself by the sons of the judgment-debtor. He applied to the Court to have the sale set aside, but, failing in his application, he sued both the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser for a declaration of his title to the property in question. The Assistant Judge held, on appeal, that the suit was not maintainable, on the grounds (1) that, the greater part of the property being included in the decree, the question of title ought to have been settled in execution-proceedings under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882) and not by a separate suit; and (2) that, even if the point could be raised in a separate suit, the present suit was premature, as the plaintiff should have waited till he was dispossessed by the auction-purchaser. Held (reversing the decision of the Assistant Judge) that sec. 244 did not bar the present suit. It could not apply except as regards property affected by the decree, and a part of the property claimed by the plaintiff was not included in the decree. Moreover, the question in the present suit did not arise between the parties to the former suit or their representatives. Held also that the suit was not premature. A person, whose property is sold in execution of a decree against a third party, is not bound to wait till he is dispossessed by the auction-purchaser. As soon as his title is denied, he is entitled to bring his suit.—13 Bom. 34.

A purchaser at a Court sale is not a party, or the representative of a party, within the meaning of section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) He is, therefore, not bound by any order in the miscellaneous inquiry under section 280, 281, or 282 of the Code. Nor is he bound by the specifications contained in the proclamation of sale of the claims of intervenors. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. The defendants intervened, and objected to the attachment, on the ground that they held the property on permanent tenancy. Their objection was allowed, and the Court made an order, directing the property to be sold, subject to the defendant's rights. In the proclamation of sale, however, it was stated that the Court did not guarantee the title of the intervenors. The plaintiff purchased the property at the Court-sale. He then sued to eject the defendants. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had purchased, subject to their rights as permanent tenants. Both the lower Courts rejected the plaintiff's claim, on the ground that he was bound by the order in the miscellaneous inquiry, which had become conclusive by reason of his having omitted to sue within one year from the date of the order. Held, reversing the lower Court's decision, that the order in the miscellaneous inquiry was not binding on the plaintiff as an auction-purchaser.—15 Bom. 290.

Held that the assignees of a purchaser from a judgment-debtor of property, the subject-matter of a decree for enforcement of hypothecation, were entitled to come in and protect the property from sale in execution of the decree by tendering the debt and costs under sec. 291 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the executing Court was bound to accept the money, and stop the sale. Held also, where the executing Court had refused to accept the money, and the sale had taken place, that a suit by the assignees to set aside the sale and for a declaration of their right to come in under sec. 291 was not barred by sec. 244 of the Code.—10 Al. 1.

The defendants along with one N and C had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Panjab, and obtained a decree on the 23rd July 1878, for Rs. 30,545-12-0. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884, the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar, treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive, for fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885, they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it was stated that the application was "for execution against Ajudhia Prasad, and after his death against Angan Lal, the own brother, and Durga Kuar, widow, and Lachman Prasad and others, sons of Ajudhya Prasad, residents of Kundarki, and the said Angan Lal, at present residing at Umballa, and employed in the Commissariat Transport Department, judgment-debtors." It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor was dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and Angan Lal himself has realised Rs. 9,637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta, and appropriated the same; therefore, to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable." Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal, as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate, and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further that, as A left issue, it was wrong to call him as heir to A, and take out execution-process against him. In reply to these objections the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased, and therefore liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased, and had realised the amount from the Commissariat office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended, first, that the suit was in effect a suit under sec. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and therefore barred as not having been brought within a year from the order of the Subordinate Judge; and, secondly, that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under sec. 244 of the Code, and therefore no separate suit would lie. Held that the first contention must fail, inasmuch as an essential condition precedent to a suit under sec. 283 of the Code is the making of an attachment of some property; of objection being taken to such attachment; of investigating being made into such objection; and, lastly, of its being allowed or disallowed; and these do not exist in this case. The second contention also must fail, as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against Angan Lal upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Mirza Mahomed Aga Ali Khan Bahadur v. Balmukund (L. R., 3 I. A. 241), Sayid Nadir Hossain v. Bipen Chund Bassarat (3 C. L. R., 437), were referred to.—10 Al. 479.

Where, subsequent to a decree, a portion of the rights to which the decree relates devolves either by inheritance or otherwise upon the judgment-debtor, or is acquired by him under a valid transfer, the decree does not become incapable of execution, but is extinguished only pro tanto. This rule of law is sufficiently general to comprehend alike cases in which the decree is for money only and where it is for immoveable property. The rule of law against breaking up the integrity of a mortgage-security is a rule aiming at the protection of the mortgagee, and is not applicable to cases where the mortgagee himself has acquired the ownership of a portion of the mortgaged property. Disputes as to the legality of the purchase by judgment-debtors of the rights of some of the decree-holders in the property to which the decree relates, and the extent of the share acquired under the purchase, are questions falling within the purview of cl. c. of sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree. Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 27), Wise v. Abdool Ali (7 W. R., 136) and Pogose v. Fukurooddeen Mahomed Ahsan (25 W. R., 343), referred to.—10 Al. 570.

In a suit upon a hypothecation bond a third party was made defendant, as she claimed the hypothecated property. The mortgagee obtained a decree for recovery of the amount of the bond, and for enforcement of the mortgage. In execution of the decree, the debt not being satisfied by sale of the mortgaged property, the decree-holder caused certain other immoveable property in the possession of the third party to be attached. She objected to the attachment, on the ground that this property was her own, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree. The objection was allowed, and the decree-holder then sued for a declaration that the property belonged to the mortgagor judgment-debtor, and was liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree. Held that, as no claim in the former suit was made against the objector personally or in a representative character, but, as regards her, the only claim was virtually for a declaration that she was not entitled to the hypothecated property, the decree affected her only so far as it negatived her alleged interest in that property, and, so far as it was sought to be enforced against other property, she was a stranger to that suit, and her objection must be taken to have been decided under secs. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the present suit was rightly brought under sec. 283, and was not barred by sec. 244. Kameshwar Pershad v. Run Bahadur Singh (I. L. R., 12 Cal. 458) referred to. Mulmantri v. Ashfak Ahmad (I. L. R., 9 Al. 605) and Nimba Harishet v. Sitaram Paraji (I. L. R., 9 Bom. 458) distinguished.—11 Al. 74.

B obtained an ex-parte decree for arrears of rent against S under Act X of 1859, and in execution of that decree brought the tenure to sale. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale, on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution-proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent, and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie, and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined, and were determined, by the Court executing the decree. Held, that neither sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, nor the corresponding sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, has any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, and that the suit, being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. Mahomed Isuf Meah (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 376) distinguished.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 179.

H. D. and R. D. owned a 6-anna share in certain decrees. The other decree-holders subsequently sold their 10-annas share to H. S. and S. M., two of the judgment-debtors. H. D. and R. D. then proceeded to execute the decrees, and in satisfaction thereof were allowed to receive, upon giving security under sec. 231 of the Code, the full 16-anna share of the decretal amount from H. S. and S. M., notwithstanding the objection of the latter on the ground of their purchase. Thereupon H. S. and S. M. brought a suit for declaration of their right of purchase and the recovery of a 10-anna share of the money in the hands of H. D. and R. D. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Held, also, that the provisions of sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not affect the suit, which was brought, not upon the allegation that the decrees were satisfied by the plaintiffs' purchase, but, on the contrary, was founded upon the proposition that the decrees were not so satisfied. Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Khaki Aruth (I. L. R., 11 Bom. 6) referred to. Held, further, that the claim was not within the words "relating to the execution of the decree" in sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as it did not raise any question in respect to the furtherance of, or hindrance to, or the manner of carrying out, the execution of the decrees.—15 Cal. 187.

The pandaram of a mutt being empowered under a decree to nominate a person to be the head of a subordinate mutt, subject to the approval of the Subordinate Court, made a nomination and died before the Subordinate Court had come to a determination as to the fitness of his nominee. His successor in office was brought on to the record and revoked his nomination and made a fresh nomination. The Subordinate Court treated the fresh nomination as a nullity and made an order confirming the first. The pandaram appealed against this order:—Held, (1) that an appeal lay against the order complained of; (2) that the person, whose nomination had been confirmed, was a necessary party to the appeal; (3) that the nomination first made was revocable for good cause, and that the fitness of the person nominated by the appellant should be investigated by the Subordinate Judge.—13 Madr. 338.

Held BY THE FULL BENCH:—An objection taken by a person who has become the representative of the judgment debtor in the course of the execution of a decree to the effect that the property attached in satisfaction thereof is his own property, and not held by him as such representative, is a matter cognizable only under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and not the proper subject-matter of a separate suit by a party against whom an adverse order may have been passed under secs. 280 and 281 as provided by sec. 283. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PRINSEP, O'KINEALY, and GHOSE, JJ.):—Secs. 278 to 283 of the Civil Procedure Code do not cover the case of any contest between parties to the suit or their representatives on the record of the suit in regard to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree. The effect of the decision between such parties is that the right to enforce or oppose execution is determined under sec. 244, subject to the result of such appeal as is allowed by law. Per PRINSEP and O'KINEALY, JJ.:—Section 244 should be liberally construed to prevent litigation.—17 Cal. 711.

Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C. J., PRINSEP, TOTTENHAM, and PIGOT, JJ., GHOSE, J., dissenting), that when circumstances affecting the validity of a sale in execution have been brought about by the fraud of one of the parties to the suit, and give rise to a question between these parties such as, apart from fraud, would be within the provisions of sec. 244, a suit will not lie to impeach the validity of the sale on the ground of such fraud. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. Mahomed Isuf Meah, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 376; Viraraghava Ayyangar v. Venkatacharyar, I. L. R., 5 Madr. 217; Paranjape v. Kanade, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 148; and Sakharam Gobind Kale v. Damodar Akharam Gujar, I. L. R., 9 Bom. 468, approved; Gobind Chandra Majumdar v. Uma Charan Sen, I. L. R., 14 Cal. 679, dissented from in part. Held that in such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled, whether the sale has been confirmed or not, to make, as against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, such application (if any) under sec. 311 as he may be entitled to make, his time for making it being computed from the time when the fraud first became known to him. Held further, that in cases in which the decree or the purchase is made benami, sec. 244 does not apply, and a suit may be held to lie to set aside the sale. Per GHOSE, J.—An objection under sec. 311, or upon the ground of fraud, raised by the judgment-debtor after the sale has been confirmed under sec. 312, cannot be dealt with under sec. 244. In such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled upon the ground of fraud to bring a suit to set aside the sale, or at all events to have it declared that the sale passed no title to the purchaser, or that the purchaser is a trustee for him. There is no special provision in the Code for setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud when it has once been confirmed.—17 Cal. 769.

A judgment-debtor, upon the attachment of certain land in execution of decrees passed against him personally by the Revenue Court, instituted a suit for declaration and establishment of his right to such land, not as his own property, but as wakf, of which he was mutawalli or trustee :—Held that, inasmuch as the plaintiff was not suing in his own right, but in his capacity as custodian trustee, or manager of the wakf property, and he must, therefore, be taken to fill a character separate from that in which the decrees were passed against him by the Revenue Court, his suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 244. Madho Prakash Singh v. Murli Manohar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 406) and Shankar Dial v. Amir Haidar (I. L. R., 2 Al. 752) referred to.—7 Al. 36.

The plaintiff in a suit for possession of immoveable property obtained a decree for possession thereof, and in execution of the decree obtained possession of the property. This decree was subsequently reversed on appeal by the defendant. The decree of the Appellate Court was silent in respect of the mesne-profits which the plaintiff had received while in possession. The defendant instituted a suit to recover those profits :—Held, per PETHERAM, O. J., OLDFIELD, BRODHURST, and DUTHOIT, J. J. that the suit was not barred by sec. 244, of the Civil Procedure Code the question raised by such suit, although it might have arisen out of the decree of the appellate Court, not “relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree,” within the meaning of that section, (because, at the time, no such question had arisen or was in existence), and therefore not one in respect of which a separate suit is barred by that section. Pratab Singh v. Beni Ram (I. L. R., 2 Al. 61) distinguished by OLDFIELD J.

Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the suit was not barred by sec. 244, the mesne-profits sought to be recovered not having been realized in execution of the decree reversed on appeal.

Per DUTHOIT, J.—The words in cl. (c) of sec. 244, “any other questions arising,” &c., should be read as “any other questions directly arising ; otherwise the most remote inquiries would be possible in the execution department.—7 Al. 170.

Where certain property was attached in execution of a decree passed upon a bond against the legal representatives of the obligor, and the judgment-debtors objected to the attachment on the ground that the property was not part of the obligor's estate and liable to be taken in execution of the decree, but was property which they could claim in their own right :—Held that the matter in dispute was one between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was, therefore, to be determined in the execution department and not by regular suit. Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussammat Jumae 11 B. L. R., 155) Shankar Dial v. Amir Haidar (I. L. R., 2 Al. 752) and Nath Mal Das v. Tajammal Husain (I. L. R., 7 Al. 36) referred to.

Per MAHMOOD J.—That the turning point upon which the application of the rule contained in sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code barring adjudication in a regular suit depends, is whether the judgment-debtor, in raising objections to execution of decree against any property, pleads what may analogically be called a jus tertii, or a right which, although he represents it, belongs to a title totally separate from that which he personally holds in such property. Kanai Lall Khan v. Sashi Bhouson Biswas (18 W. R., 102) dissented from.—7 Al. 547.

Where, certain property having been attached in execution of a decree, the representative of the judgment-debtor objected that the property had been acquired by himself and not inherited from the judgment-debtor, and was therefore not liable in execution, held that the question was one which must be decided in the execution department under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Ram Ghulam v. Hazaru Knar (I. L. R., 7 Al. 547) referred to.—7 Al. 733.

Held that persons other than the decree-holders, or the persons whose property was sold in execution of decree, were not competent to apply to the Court under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale. M, in whose name property had been purchased at an execution sale which was improperly set aside, brought a suit to have the order setting aside the sale reversed, and the sale confirmed in her favour, and for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of a decree of the defendants against third persons, under which it had been attached and advertised for sale. Held that such a suit could only be maintained under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), but that sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code indicated the intention of the Legislature that such questions should be determined in the execution department, and, reading together the provisions of secs. 244, 278 and 283 of the Code, the suit was premature, and therefore not maintainable.—7 Al. 583.

After the death of a childless Hindu widow, a lessee from her of property which had belonged to her husband obtained against her vendees of part of the same property, a decree for damages for wrongfully keeping him out of possession. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow, and to exempt from liability the judgment-debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree the said property was sold and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment debtors had died during the execution proceedings, and her son was duly impleaded as her representative, and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property; and his vendee sued the decree-holder to recover possession, on the ground that the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow, the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow; that those rights had expired upon her death, and left nothing to be sold, and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff vendor, and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree, neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution proceedings; and that the suit was barred by sec. 244. Ram Ghulam v. Hazaru Kuar followed. Bahori Lal v. Gauri Sahai distinguished. Mulmantri v. Ashfak Ahmad, Roop Lall Dass v. Bekani Meah and Ravunni Menon v. Kunju Nayar referred to.—12 Al. 73.

B obtained a decree on a settlement of accounts made with V as trustee of a mutt. V's title as trustee having subsequently been negatived by decree, and the title of S declared, B applied to execute his decree against the property of the mutt, and to have S substituted as party to the suit in place of V. The application was rejected by the Munsif, but on appeal the District Judge made S a party, and reserved for determination in execution-proceedings the question whether the debt was contracted for the benefit of the mutt:—Held, that S was properly made a party, but that it was not open to him to raise this question in execution-proceedings.—9 Madr. 80.

The provisions of sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code prohibit not only a suit between parties and their representatives, but also a suit by a party or his representatives against a purchaser at a sale in execution of the decree, the object of which is to determine a question which properly arises between the parties or their representatives, and relates to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree.

A judgment-debtor, whose occupancy-tenure had been sold in execution of a decree for money, sued the purchaser for recovery of the property, on the ground that the sale of occupancy-rights in execution of decree was illegal and void, being in contravention of the provisions of sec. 9 of Act XII of 1831 (N.-W. P. Rent Act). Held by the Full Bench that the question involved in the suit was one of the nature referred to in sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code as determinable only by order of the Court executing the decree, and that the suit was, therefore, not maintainable. Narain v. Puran (Weekly Notes, 1883 p. 218) referred to.—8 Al. 146.

In execution of a decree certain property was sold in pursuance of an order under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and purchased by a person not a party to the suit, who subsequently obtained possession of the property. That order was subsequently set aside. In a suit by the judgment-debtor to recover possession of the property from the auction-purchaser by setting aside the sale:—Held, that the order directing the sale had the force of a decree, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief claimed. Jan Ali v. Jan Ali Chowdhry, (10 W. R., 154) followed.—11 Cal. 362.

The defendant obtained a decree against the plaintiff as representative of his (the plaintiff's) deceased uncle, and in execution he attached the property in dispute. The plaintiff objected to the attachment, but his objection was disallowed, and the property was sold. The plaintiff did not appeal against the order disallowing his objection, but filed the present suit to establish his right. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiff's claim. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court:—Held, reversing the decree of the Courts below, that the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable. The question raised in the present suit was one which ought to have been taken in the execution-proceedings in the former suit under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882); and having been, as a fact, raised and decided against the plaintiff, he could not bring a separate suit.—9 Bom. 458,

In 1877 the plaintiffs sued the defendant for possession of certain properties, and obtained a decree. In execution of this decree, the plaintiff, on 12th of July 1879, obtained formal possession of the properties sued for. The defendant continued to remain in actual possession and occupation of a portion of the premises, and refused to give up possession of the same to the plaintiff, who served with a two month's notice to quit in June 1881. The plaintiff did not evict the defendant in execution of the decree obtained by him against the defendant, but instituted a fresh suit for that purpose:—Held, that such a suit would lie. Seemle, that the delivery of formal possession in execution of a decree for possession gives a cause of action, against a defendant who remains in occupation of the premises, which may be enforced in a regular suit.—11 Cal. 93.

The provisions of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code govern equally the procedure of the Court which passed the decree, when executing such decree, and the Court to which the decree is sent for execution. Cooke v. Hiseeba Beebee (N.-W. P. H. C. R., 1874, p. 181) referred to.

All orders staying execution of decrees, whether passed by the Court which passed the decree, or by the Court to which it is sent for execution, are "questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution" thereof, within the meaning of sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and, as such, appealable, irrespective of the provisions of sec. 588. Kristomohiny Dossee v. Bama Churn Nay Chowdry (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 733) and LuchmEEPut Singh v. Seeta Nath Doss (I. L. R., 8 Cal. 477) followed.

The widest meaning should be attached to clause (c) of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code so as to enable the Court of first instance and the Court of appeal to adjudicate upon all kinds of questions arising between the parties to a decree and relating to its execution.

There is no provision in the law which empowers the Court passing a decree to set aside the proceedings under which the decree-holder has already been placed in possession in execution of his decree. The provisions of sec. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code, have no reference to a case in which execution has already been carried out, and the decree-holder placed in possession of the property decreed to him.—7 Al. 73.

Under sec. 244, clause (c), and 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) no compromise of a decree which has not been duly certified under the provisions of the last-mentioned section can be recognized by any Court, and a separate suit to enforce such compromise is not maintainable.—10 Bom. 155.

The word "representative" as used in clause (c), sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, means any person who succeeds to the right of any of the parties to the suit after the decree is passed. A Hindu widow mortgaged certain properties, and afterwards by an ekrarnamah made them over to B, the next heir. The ekrarnamah contained a condition, that B was to be liable for the widow's debts. Subsequently the mortgagee brought a suit against the widow on the mortgage, and joined B as a party, on the ground that he was in possession of the mortgaged properties. That suit resulted in a money-decree being passed on appeal by the High Court against the widow personally, the property in the hands of B being held not to be liable. The case was taken on appeal to the Privy Council, and pending the hearing of that appeal the widow died, and B was brought on the record as her legal representative. The decree of the High Court was ultimately confirmed by the Privy Council. In execution of the decree it was sought to make B liable to satisfy the amount out of the properties which he had obtained under the ekrarnamah, the mortgagee not having been aware of the conditions of the document before the decree of the High Court:—Held that, so far as these properties were concerned, he was not the legal representative of the widow, as he inherited them as heir-at-law of her husband, and that his title to them under the ekrarnamah was not that of a “representative” within the meaning of clause (c) of sec. 244. Held, further, that the question of B’s liability under the ekrarnamah did not fall within the scope of the provisions of clause (c) of sec. 244 as being a question to be decided between the “parties” to the suit, as although B was a party to the suit, the only claim against him was that the property in his hands was liable, as having been previously hypothecated, and as the suit was dismissed so far as that claim was concerned, it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree.—12 Cal. 458.

In execution of a decree by R S, another creditor claimed a rateable share of the proceeds realized. His claim was rejected. Pending an application to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside this order, the share claimed by S was detained in Court at his request. The High Court rejected the application of S, and R took out execution for the costs incurred therein and for interest on the sum detained in Court at the request of S.—Held that the interest could not be awarded to R in execution of the decree for costs.—8 Madr. 494.

In 1879, D obtained a decree against S. S gave security for the satisfaction of the decree, whereupon D agreed not to take proceedings in execution. In breach of this agreement, D in the same year applied for execution, and sold certain immoveable property belonging to S, of which K became the purchaser. K did not apply for possession until 1883, in which year he applied for and obtained possession of the property. S alleged that he then for the first time became aware of the sale, and that by the fraud of D and K he had been kept in ignorance of the execution-proceedings taken by D in breach of the above-mentioned agreement, and within thirty days after K obtained possession, he (S) applied for a reversal of the orders which had been passed in the aforesaid fraudulent proceedings. The Subordinate Judge held that the application was barred by article 166 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act, (XV of 1877), and referred the applicant to a separate suit to set aside the sale. On application to the High Court:—Held that a separate suit would not lie, and that the relief sought by S could only be obtained, at all events as against D, by an application under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held also that art. 166 of sch. 2 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) did not apply. That article, as amended by sec. 108 of Act XII of 1879, only applies to applications made under sec. 311 or sec. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code seeking to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, or on the ground that the decree-holder has purchased without the permission of the Court.—9 Bom. 468.

In a suit for partition a compromise was entered into by all the parties except S, and a decree obtained on the terms thereof. In execution S was dispossessed, and presented a petition to the Court, objecting that the decree was not binding on her. The petition was rejected. Held that the objection raised by S ought to have been investigated under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that S was entitled to appeal against order rejecting the petition.—8 Madr. 473.

The Court has power to award to a successful appellant interest upon an amount found on appeal to have been improperly levied in execution of a decree.—9 Madr. 506.

G instituted a suit against H, C, and P, which was dismissed with costs, but an appeal was preferred. Pending the appeal, however, C took out execution of the decree for costs, and brought to sale a house belonging to G, of which H became the purchaser, paid the purchase-money, and got possession. Subsequently the decision dismissing the suit was reversed on appeal, and the defendants in that suit were ordered to pay a certain sum to G with costs. G then applied for restitution of her house which had been sold under the decree reversed, and eventually obtained an unconditional order for possession—H being left to any remedy open to him in respect of the purchase-money. G having obtained possession of the house, H brought a suit against her to recover the purchase money. Held, that notwithstanding sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code he was entitled in this suit to recover the purchase-money, as money received to his use, the consideration for it having failed. H was not, in his character as an auction-purchaser, a party to the execution-proceedings, and for the purpose of the suit was to be treated as a third person.—13 Cal. 326.

The parties to a suit agreed upon a compromise, the result of which was that the plaintiff obtained by the decree a greater quantity of land than he had originally claimed, and a decree was drawn up in accordance with the compromise. In the execution-proceedings, the defendant raised an objection that the plaintiff could not have execution for a greater quantity of land than he had claimed originally, and the Court executing the decree allowed the objection. No appeal from the Court's order was made, but the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the larger amount of land mentioned in the compromise. Held that the order of the Court executing the decree was erroneous in law, and might properly be reconsidered upon an application for review; but that the present suit came within sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, therefore, could not be maintained.—9 Al. 229.

R. having obtained a decree for money against K, the karnavan of the defendants, K died, and the defendants were made parties to the suit as representatives of K. Tarwad property was then attached by R, and the defendants having objected, the Court raised the attachment. R sued for a declaration that the property released was liable to be sold. Held, that the suit was barred by sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—10 Madr. 117.

A mortgagor obtained a decree for redemption on payment of the mortgage amount, together with a further sum assessed as the value of improvements made by the mortgagee. When the decree-holder applied for the execution of the decree, it was contended on behalf of the mortgagee that the improvements ought to be revalued, as they were, at the time of execution, of more value than at the date of the decree:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to revaluation in the execution-proceedings.—10 Madr. 367.

A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent, and obtained a decree for a certain amount, and a declaration that, if the amount were not paid within fifteen days, the tenant should be ejected under sec. 52, Act VIII of 1869. The amount was not paid, and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed, and succeeded in getting the decree set aside, and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced, and a decree made directing that if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days, and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsiff's Court to recover mesne-profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie, as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, as the suit was instituted in the Munsiff's Court, and the Munsiff under the circumstances of the case was the officer who, in the first instance, would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsiff, which he did not possess, and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessuree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer (19 W. R., 90) this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held, also, that, the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts, and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court, it could not be raised on second appeal. Quære.—Whether such a suit does not lie, and whether the decisions in Lati Kooer v. Sahodra Kooer. (2 C. L. R., 75) and analogous cases to the effect that such a suit does not lie, are correct. Ram Ghulam v. Dwarka Rai (I. L. R., 7 Al. 170) cited and approved.—14 Cal. 605.

S S brought a suit under a mortgage-bond, making R S, a subsequent incumbrancer, a defendant, and obtained a decree for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises. After the decree a compromise was effected between all the parties with the exception of R S, by the terms of which, in consideration of the judgment-debtors (mortgagors) undertaking to do certain acts, S S promised to execute his decree against only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises. The judgment-debtors (mortgagors) having failed to carry out the compromise, S S applied for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises, but on the petition of R S setting out the terms of the compromise to which he was no party, the Subordinate Judge, by an order of the 7th September 1885, held that under the agreement S S was entitled to sell only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises, which was accordingly directed to be sold. That order was not appealed against, but subsequently in March 1886, S S made a fresh application for a sale of the remainder of the premises, R S objecting. Held that the order of the 7th September was one which the Courts was competent to make under sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and by reason of that order not being appealed it became final.—14 Cal. 640.

Where questions are raised between the parties to a decree relating to its execution, discharge, or satisfaction, the fact that the purchaser at a judicial sale, who is no party to the decree of which the execution is in question, is interested and concerned in the result has never been held to prevent the application of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, limiting the disposal of these matters to the Court executing the decree. The plaintiffs in a suit to have the judicial sale of a zemindari set aside alleged that the decree-holder, in part satisfaction of his decree, had received, from them and other co-sharers in the zemindari, their proportionate amounts of the debt decreed, and had agreed that their shares should be exempt from the execution sale about to take place: that the sale took place, subject to that exemption: that the decree-holder, however, with whom some of the co-sharers and the purchasers colluded, fraudulently had the sale set aside, revived the attachment, and caused a second sale, at which all the shares in the zemindari were sold. Held, that the question, besides that the charge of fraud was not sufficiently specific, was determinable, in virtue of sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, only by order of the Court executing the decree.—19 Cal. 683.

An order refusing an application to execute a decree is not an adjudication within the rule of res judicata.—6 Cal. 203.

An order directing an account is not an order in the nature of a final decree, and is unappealable ; such an order merely directs certain proceedings to be taken, in order that a final decree may thereafter be made.—9 Cal. 773.

A suit for the recovery of money paid to a judgment-creditor out of Court in satisfaction of a decree, but not certified, is barred by sec. 244 (c) of Act X of 1877 and by the last paragraph of sec. 258 as amended by Act XII of 1879.—6 Bom. 146.

There is no appeal against an order made under Act X of 1877, sec. 244, determining questions between the parties to a suit as to the amount of mesne-profits recovered by the plaintiff subsequently to the decree, and as to the amount payable on account of the costs of execution of that decree.—2 Bom. 553.

There is no appeal against an order under sec. 244 of Act X of 1877, granting an application for the sale of certain property, to satisfy a sum which, in the course of execution proceedings has been found to be due to the applicant for mesne-profits.—5 Cal. 50.

Moneys realized as due under a decree, if unduly realized, are recoverable by application to the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit. The opinion of STUART, C. J., in the Agra Savings Bank v. Sri Ram Mitter (I. L. R., 1 Al. 388) differed from. Haramohini Chaudhrai v. Dhonmani Chaudrai (1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 193) and Ekauri Singh v. Baij Nath Chattapadhyaya (4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 111) distinguished.—2 Al. 61 ; 2 Agra H. C. R., 45.

In a suit to recover possession of land, the defendants resisted execution, on the ground that they were cultivators, and that the decree only authorized the plaintiff to recover possession as proprietor. The objection was overruled, and the defendants were ejected. They then sued to set aside the order made in the execution-proceedings and to recover possession. Held that the suit was barred under sec. 244, cl. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code.—9 Cal. 872 ; 12 C. L. R., 571.

A judgment-debtor, who claims to have a sale of his land to set aside on the ground of fraud committed by the judgment-creditor, who procured a sale without advertisement, and purchased the property without leave of the Court, is debarred from bringing a suit to set aside the sale, inasmuch as the question is one arising between the parties to the suit, and relates to the execution of the decree within the meaning of sec. 244.—5 Madr. 217.

The holder of a decree against a firm caused certain property to be attached in execution of the decree as the property of the firm. One of the partners in the firm objected to the attachment, on the ground that such property was not the property of the firm, but was his private property. The Court disallowed the objection, whereupon such partner appealed from the order disallowing this objection. Held that such order was not one under sec. 244 (c) of Act X of 1877, but under sec. 281, and was therefore not appealable.—4 Al. 190.

A decree-holder, having assigned a share of her decree, applied several times jointly with such assignee for execution. On a subsequent application made by the original decree-holder alone, the Court, while granting the application, directed that the proceeds arising from such execution should only be paid over to the co-decree holders jointly. Held that the question in dispute being one between co-decree-holders, and not between parties to the suit or their representatives, as contemplated, by Act X of 1877, sec. 244, art. (c), no appeal would lie from such order.—5 Cal. 592.

An order for attachment and sale of property in execution of a decree is an order "of the same nature with" an order made in the course of a suit for attachment of the debtor's property. The latter order is appealable under sec. 588, cl. r, of the Code of Civil Procedure. It follows that an order for attachment and sale in execution of a decree is (according to the requirement of sec. 588, cl. j) "of the same nature with appealable orders made in the course of a suit," and therefore is appealable under that section.—8 Cal. 28.

Where an application was made for the issue of execution of decree, and the District Munsif made an order refusing execution, the decree being one passed not in a regular suit, and governed by the one-year limitation, and the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's order, applying the three years' limitation, held by the High Court that, as Act X of 1877, sec. 588, provided that orders passed in appeal from orders under sec. 244 should be final, no second appeal lay, and that the High Court could not interfere under sec. 622, as the Subordinate Judge has jurisdiction to hear the appeal.—1 Madr. 401.

Where a plaintiff, in bringing a suit for possession and for mesne-profits, approximately estimates the amount of such mesne-profits at a certain sum, and obtains a decree which leaves the amount due as mesne-profits to be ascertained in execution, he is not bound down to the amount claimed in his plaint, but if more is found due to him, he is entitled, on payment of further court-fees, to recover the larger amount so found due. Baboojan Jha v. Byjnath Dutt Jha (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 474) distinguished. A Court, in execution-proceedings, cannot look behind the decree when the decree does not limit the amount of wasilat to be awarded.—8 Cal. 295.

By a decree in an administration-suit, A was appointed Receiver to manage the estate. A died, and by a subsequent order B was appointed Receiver. One of the defendants in the suit applied to have B removed from the office of Receiver, on the ground of his alleged mis-management of the estate. The application was refused. Held that the order of refusal was appealable, whether the former Code or the present Code of Civil Procedure was deemed to be applicable, being an order made in respect of a question arising between the parties to a suit relating to the execution of the decree.—5 Bom. 45.

A decree enforcing a first mortgage of certain property not being satisfied, the property was sold in execution of a decree of a later date enforcing a second mortgage of the property. Per STUART, C. J.—That the decree enforcing the first mortgage could not be executed against the property, but the holder of such decree was bound to bring a fresh suit against the purchaser of the property to enforce his decree. Per STRAIGHT, BRODBURST, and TYRRELL, JJ.—That a fresh suit was the most convenient and expeditious remedy. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the purchaser not being the "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of sec. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, the holder of such decree must bring a fresh suit to enforce it.—5 Al. 452.

In 1875 a decree was passed against N as representative of L, who died pending the suit, declaring N liable to the extent of the assets of L which might have come to the hands of N. In 1879 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, and, without proof that any of the assets of L had come to the hands of N, obtained an order, and attached lands belonging to N. N objected to the attachment, but the Munsif, without investigation, rejected his claim, and directed N to bring a regular suit. The land was sold and purchased by A B. N, after an abortive attempt to obtain a review of the Munsif's order from his successor, brought a suit in 1880 against the decree-holder and A B to recover the land. Held that, as N was a party to the former suit within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, the suit would not lie.—5 Madr. 391.

On appeal from an order allowing an application by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder for execution, the Appellate Court, holding that the applicant must obtain a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 before he could take out execution of the decree, made an order directing that execution of the decree should be stayed until the applicant had obtained such certificate. Held that such order fell under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was therefore appealable. Also, following the principle enunciated in Lachmin v. Ganga Prasad (I. L. R., 4 Al. 485), that the possession of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 was not "an imperative condition precedent to the institution" of execution-proceedings by the representative of a deceased decree-holder; but that, where the judgment-debtor objects to the title of the person claiming to execute the decree, the Court should consider whether the objection is vexatiously raised or is a bona fide one.—5 Al. 212.

A suit will not lie upon a decree the execution of which is barred by the provisions of the Limitation Act. A suit may be brought in the High Court of Bombay upon a judgment obtained in the Court of Small Causes of Bombay. The execution of the decrees in such suits is rigorously confined to immoveable estates. The ground of the interference of the High Court in such cases is that, practically, the judgment-creditor could not recover his debt except by process against the immoveable estate of the debtor. In such cases the plaint must contain an averment, and the plaintiff must establish, to the satisfaction of the High Court, that there is not any sufficient moveable property of the defendant against which the decree of the Court of Small Causes can be fully executed, and that he has immoveable property situated within the original jurisdiction of the High Court against which execution can be had. Moonshi Golam Arah v. Curreem Bux Shaikji (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 294) referred to.—6 Bom. 7.

M, who held a decree against S for possession of certain immoveable property and costs, assigned such decree to S by way of sale, agreeing to deliver the same to him on payment of the balance of the purchase-money. He subsequently applied for execution of the decree against S claiming the costs which it awarded. S thereupon paid the amount of such costs into Court, and, having obtained stay of execution, sued M for such decree, claiming by virtue of such assignment. The lower Court held that the suit was barred by the provisions of sec. 244 of Act X of 1877, and also, treating such assignment as an uncertified adjustment of such decree, that it was barred by the terms of the last paragraph of sec. 258 of that Act. Held that the suit was not barred by anything in either of those sections. The words "any Court" in the last paragraph of sec. 258 refer to proceedings in execution and to the Court or Courts executing a decree.—3 Al. 533.

S, alleging that a money-decree against him held by G had been adjusted out of Court by a payment in cash and the delivery of certain property, and that M had, notwithstanding such adjustment, applied for execution of such decree, and recovered the amount thereof, as the Court executing such decree had refused to determine whether it had been satisfied on the ground that such adjustment had not been certified, sued M for the money which he had paid him out of Court. Held that the suit was not barred by the provisions of sec. 244 of Act X. of 1877 or of sec. 258 of that Act. The last paragraph of sec. 258 means that the Court executing the decree shall not recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment out of Court. It does not prohibit a suit for money paid to a decree-holder out of Court, and the payment of which, not being certified, could not be recognized, and which the decree-holder had not returned, but had misappropriated by taking out execution of the decree a second time, and securing the amount in full through the Court.—3 Al. 538.

A Subordinate Judge admitted a plaint in forma pauperis, but, holding that he had no jurisdiction to try the suit, returned the plaint to the plaintiff for its presentation in the proper Court, and ordered each party to pay his own costs. After the presentation of the plaint in another Court, and before the termination of the suit, the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp-duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper-suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge in appeal. On second appeal to the High Court, held that there was no appeal, and, therefore, no second appeal, under sec. 244, cl. c, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), against the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing execution of the order as to costs, inasmuch as the question was not between the parties to the suit. Held further that, under sec. 412 of Act X of 1877, the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to make the order for payment of court-fees by the plaintiff. The High Court accordingly, in the exercise of their extraordinary jurisdiction, annulled the Subordinate Judge's order about costs, and all the subsequent proceedings consequent upon that order.—6 Bom. 590.

Certain persons, claiming by right of inheritance to C, sued B, N, A, K, and others for possession of certain immoveable property, and obtained a decree, dated in August 1876, for possession of the same. In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree Z purchased certain immoveable property from B, N, A, and K. Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same, alleging that his vendors had inherited the same from D, that it was not affected by that decree, and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it in execution of that decree. Held by the Court that, the plaintiff not being the representative of any of the parties to the suit in which that decree was passed, in the sense of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but being, if his allegations were true, a purchaser from certain of the judgment-debtors of property not affected by that decree, the suit was not barred by the provisions of that section.—Partab Singh v. Beni Ram (I. L. R., 2 Al. 61) distinguished. Observations by Stuart, C.J., on his judgment in the Agra Savings' Bank v. Sri Ram Mitter (I. L. R., 1 Al. 388), and on the judgment of the Full Bench in Partab Singh v. Beni Ram (I. L. R., 2 Al. 61) referring to the judgment.—5 Al. 94.

In execution of a decree on a mortgage-bond executed by the father of the judgment debtors, since deceased—which decree directed that the mortgage-lien should be enforced, first, by sale of the property specially mortgaged; and, secondly, if the debt remained unsatisfied, by the sale of the other property in the possession of the judgment-debtors—the judgment-creditors proceeded to have the mortgaged property sold. After the issue of the sale-notification, and three days prior to the date fixed for the sale, one of the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale stayed, on the ground that an administration-suit was pending with respect to the property of his father, the mortgagor, and also asked that a receiver might be appointed and arrangements made for the purpose of paying off the mortgage-debt and saving the property from being sold. On this application the Court passed an order staying the sale. Held that such order was appealable, being a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution of that decree, and as such coming within the provision of cl. c, sec. 244, Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code). Held also that the Court was wrong in passing such order, inasmuch as there were no reasonable grounds why a secured creditor should be debarred from enforcing his security pending the administration-suit.—7 Cal. 733.

One Khelut Chunder was entitled to a share in Pargana Alumpore. Before he obtained possession, Government revenue on the whole estate fell due. Khelut failed to pay his share, and his co-sharer, Kaminee, to save the estate, paid the whole sum due, and subsequently sued Khelut for the amount, eventually obtaining a decree. Subsequently this decree became vested in one Rutnessur, and the Pargana Alumpore came into the possession of Kaliprosono Ghose. Rutnessur obtained an order for execution against the property of Khelut, and, having transferred his decree to the High Court, proceeded to enforce the decree against Kristo Mohinee, the widow of Khelut, and her son, by attaching the family dwelling-house in Calcutta. The widow and son then brought this suit against Kaliprosono to have the share of Khelut in Alumpore ascertained, and praying for a decree calling upon Kaliprosono to pay the amount of the value of the share of Alumpore in satisfaction of Rutnessur's decree. Held that the suit could not be maintained so far as it attempted to make the decree a charge against Alumpore. Questions as to part satisfaction of a decree cannot, according to cl. c. sec. 244 of Act X of 1877, be raised in a separate suit. That section alludes to parties to the decree or their representatives; but it is not on that account open to a plaintiff to evade the section by adding an unnecessary party to the suit. Held on appeal that the suit was rightly dismissed; that, as far as Rutnessur was concerned, it had already been decided that Rutnessur was entitled, if he so chose, to execute his decree against the Calcutta property; and that, therefore, that question was res judicata; and that, as regards the plaintiff's claim that the patni given by Kaliprosono to Hurry Churn should be treated as part-payment to Rutnessur, such a question could only be decided in execution-proceedings. That the mere existence of the agreement between Kaliprosono, Rutnessur, and Hurry Churn did not entitle the plaintiff to join them as co-defendants in the suit. That, as far as Kaliprosono was concerned, the suit brought against him could only be treated as a suit to establish a charge or lien on land out of Calcutta, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction to try it.—8 Cal. 402.

On an application for execution for the full amount due under a decree by some of several joint decree-holders, the judgment-debtor objected to execution being granted for the full amount of the decree, on the ground that he had already paid off a large portion of the money due under the decree to B, one of the joint decree-holders. The payment was made out of Court, but B, who claimed to be entitled to a $12\frac{1}{2}$ -anna share in the decree, certified the payment in the manner prescribed by sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and represented that his claim had been satisfied in full. The other joint decree-holders denied B's right to the $12\frac{1}{2}$ -anna share claimed by him, and refused to recognise the payment said to have been made to him. The lower Court disallowed the objection, and granted execution for the full amount of the decree. Held that, regard being had to the provisions of the General Clauses Act (I of 1868), the word "decree-holder" in sec. 258 of Act XIV of 1882 should be read in the plural, and looking at the provisions of sec. 231 of the latter Act, the Court ought not to recognise payments made out of Court, unless made and certified for the benefit of all the joint decree-holders of any portion of the decree in excess of that to which the decree-holder so paid is undisputedly entitled. Held also that a judgment-debtor is entitled to credit for any sum paid bona fide to one of several joint decree-holders, and duly certified to the Court by the latter, and that the other joint decree-holders cannot execute the decree for more than their own share. Held further that in this case the lower Court was wrong in wholly ignoring the payment certified by the decree-holder B, and that it should have determined, first, whether the payment to B was a fraud on the other joint decree-holders; and, secondly, what amount the latter were entitled to have out of the whole decree, the latter being the main question between the applicants for execution and the judgment-debtor, and as such clearly within the scope of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. See Ranee Nyna Kooer v. Doolee Chund (22 W. R., 77), Brojeswari Chowdhranee v. Tripoora Soondere Debi (3 C. L. R., 513), and Mahima Chandra Roy v. Pyari Mohan Chowdhry (2 B. L. R., App. 43).—9 Cal. 831.

An objection to the attachment of property attached in execution of a decree was allowed, the decree-holder being ordered to pay the costs of the objector. The decree-holder thereupon brought a suit to contest the order allowing the objection. He did not seek in this suit relief in respect of the costs. He obtained a decree setting aside the order allowing the objection. He then applied to the Court which had made the order to order a refund of the amount of the costs which had been paid to the objector. Held that the application being regarded as one with regard to a portion of an order made under sec. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court was functus in the matter, and could not make or enforce such an order as was sought for; and that its order disallowing the application was not appealable, as it was not one made under sec. 244, and if taken to be one passed with reference to sec. 280, an appeal was barred by sec. 283.—6 Al. 21.

A suit for money having been brought against the holder of an impartible zemindari, a decree was passed in 1867 by consent to the effect that the zemindar undertook to pay a certain sum by yearly instalments and hypothecated certain land as security. A memorandum of this decree was registered under sec. 42 of Act XX of 1866. The last instalment fell due in February 1870. The decree was kept alive against the zemindar up to his death in 1873. Upon the death of the zemindar proceedings in execution were taken against his son, who succeeded to the zemindari, but were set aside on appeal. In January 1882, a suit was brought against the son to recover the amount of the last instalment due by this father under the decree of 1867 :—Held that the suit was neither barred by the provisions of sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, nor by limitation.—7 Madr. 328.

A judgment-debtor sued the decree-holder for recovery of possession of certain land which had been sold in execution of the decree, and to set aside the sale on the ground that the land was not liable, under sec. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, to sale in execution of decree. Held that the question at issue between the parties was clearly one relating to the executing and satisfaction of the decree, and that the suit was therefore barred by the provisions of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.—6 Al. 393.

A plaintiff, alleging that her husband (deceased) had advanced money on the security of land belonging to a family of four Hindus, sued them to enforce his lien and obtained a decree. The representatives of one of the defendants only appealed, and the decree was reversed as regarded them. The decree was executed as against the other defendants by the attachment and sale of their shares of the land, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. The successful appellants obstructed her in her attempts to obtain possession, and she now sued them for partition of the three-quarters share purchased by her :—Held, that the suit was not precluded by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 244.—15 Madr. 226.

A judgment-debtor, alleging that he had entered into an agreement with the decree-holder in satisfaction of his decree, and that the latter had, in breach of such agreement, procured the issue of a warrant of attachment, now sued for a declaration that the decree had been satisfied, and prayed also for the cancellation of the warrant of attachment :—Held, that the suit was not maintainable.—15 Madr. 302.

A judgment-debtor, alleging that his right as occupancy-tenant of certain land had been sold in execution of the decree, sued the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser to set aside the sale as illegal under sec. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act. The Court of first instance decreed the claim, and ordered the defendant-decree-holder to refund the purchase-money. Held that, as between the defendant-decree-holder and the plaintiff, the question at issue was one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, and was therefore, under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit. Janki Singh v. Ablakh Singh, (I. L. R., 6 Al. 393) followed. Held also that, apart from this consideration, it was beyond the lower Court's power to make an order directing the decree-holder to refund the purchase-money, that being a matter between two co-defendant which was not raised, and could not be decided, in the present suit.—6 Al. 448.

Where a judgment-debtor, pending the execution proceedings, was granted permission to examine the state of the accounts, but failed to do so, and then made a fresh application to the Court for the same purpose after the execution proceedings had been struck off, and the decree declared to be satisfied : Held, that the question must be determined with reference to the provisions of sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the only course open to the judgment-debtor would have been to apply for a review of the order which declared the decree to be satisfied and struck off the execution proceedings : Held, also, that the words, "the following questions shall be determined by order of the Court executing the decree," of sec. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must be interpreted to mean the Court executing the decree at the time when the application is made, and that they do not include the Court which has executed the decree and has, therefore, become functus officio.—10 Cal. 538.

An order passed on appeal by a High Court determining a question mentioned in sec. 244 of Act X of 1877 is a final “decree” within the meaning of sec. 595 of that Act. Held, therefore, where such an order involved a claim or question relating to property of the value of upwards of ten thousand rupees, and reversed the decisions of the lower Courts, that, notwithstanding the value of the subject-matter of the suit in which the decree was made in the Court of first instance was less than that amount, such order was appealable to Her Majesty in Council.—3 Al. 633.

E.—Of the Mode of executing Decrees.

245. The Court, on receiving an application for the execution of a decree, shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of sections 235, 236, 237, and 238, as may be applicable to the case, have been complied with; and, if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow it to be amended then and there, or within a time fixed by the Court. If the application be not so amended, it shall be rejected.

Every amendment made under this section shall be attested by the signature of the Judge.

When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the register of the suit a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application:

Provided that, in the case of a decree for money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount for which the decree has been made.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 15, Act XXIII. of 1861 (Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 215), did not make essential that the decree itself should be filed, but only required certain particulars specified in sec. 212, Act VIII. of 1859, on which the Judge is empowered to pass orders for execution.—4 W. R., Mis., 16.

Sec. 15, Act XXIII. of 1861, did not authorise a Judge to reject an application for the execution of a decree on the ground of an irregularity in form. Where the application is irregular, the Judge should either return it immediately to the applicant for correction, or with his consent cause the necessary correction to be made.—6 W. R., Mis., 15.

Under sec. 15, Act XXIII. of 1861, if an application for execution corresponds with the terms of a decree, it should be admitted. If the decree needs correction, the Court executing cannot correct it; but it is for the defendant to apply to the Court which made the decree.—8 W. R., 277.

On the 9th of April 1880, A applied for execution of a decree, which he had obtained against B. On the 20th of April 1880, the Judge of the Court, under the provisions of sec. 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure, ordered the application to be amended within seven days. This order was disobeyed, but no order rejecting the application was asked for or passed. On the 11th of May 1880, the applicant prayed leave to make the amendment, which prayer was granted. Held that the order of the 11th of May 1880, granting leave to amend, was not ultra vires of the Judge, under the provisions of sec. 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 8 Cal. 479.

245A.* Notwithstanding anything in the last foregoing section or in any other section of this Code, the Court shall not order the arrest or imprisonment of a woman in execution of a decree for money.

Prohibition of arrest or imprisonment of woman in execution of decree for money.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

245B.* (1) Notwithstanding anything in section 245 or in any other section of this Code, when an application is for the execution of a decree for money by the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the Court may, instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the Court on a day to be specified in the notice, and show cause why he should not be committed to jail in execution of the decree.

Discretionary power to permit other judgment-debtors to show cause against imprisonment.

(2) If appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall not, if the decree-holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

246. If cross-decrees between the same parties for the payment of money be produced to the Court, execution shall be taken out only by the party who holds a decree for the larger sum, and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller a sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum.

Cross decrees.

* These two sections have been inserted by the Debtors' Act (VI of 1888), sec. 2.

If the two sums be equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees.

Explanation I.—The decrees contemplated by this section are decrees capable of execution at the same time and by the same Court.

Explanation II.—This section applies where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees, and as well in respect of judgment debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

Explanation III.—This section does not apply, unless—the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other, and each party fills the same character in both suits; and the sums due under the decrees are definite.

Illustrations.

(a) A holds a decree against B for Rs. 1,000. B holds a decree against A for the payment of Rupees 1,000 in case A fails to deliver certain goods at a future day. B cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this section.

(b) A and B, co-plaintiffs, obtain a decree for Rs. 1,000 against C, and C obtains a decree for Rs. 1,000 against B. C cannot treat his decree as a cross-decree under this section.

(c) A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 1,000. C, who is a trustee for B, obtains a decree on behalf of B against A for Rs. 1,000. B cannot treat C's decree as a cross-decree under this section.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The purchaser of a decree held by A, against whom B holds a cross-decree, takes it subject to a set-off on account of B's decree.—1 B. L. R., (F. B.) 23; 10 W. R., 450; 6 W. R., Mis., 73; 18 W. R., 442; 19 W. R., 85; 21 W. R., 141.

A, by deed of zuripeshgi, let certain lands to B to secure a sum advanced by him to her, and interest thereon. B covenanted to pay certain dues annually to A. On failure by B, A obtained a decree against him for the amount. In execution of a decree against B, C purchased his interest in the sum secured by the deed of zuripeshgi, and sued A to recover the same. Held that A was entitled in such suit to set off the amount of the decree obtained by her against B.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 84; 10 W. R., 380.

Where there were cross-decrees, and one of the decree-holders was, by an order of the Court made with the consent of both parties, bound, in executing his decree, to set-off the amount of the decree against him, held that it would be inequitable to allow the other decree-holder to obtain execution in full without setting off the amount decreed against him. A decree cannot be executed, nor can it be seized and sold, in portions.—3 B.L. R., (A. C.) 114; 11 W. R., 488.

The purchaser of a decree sought to execute the decree, but was opposed by the judgment-debtor, who sought to set-off two other decrees, obtained by herself and her sisters, against the judgment-creditor. These decrees were obtained about the date of the purchase, but it did not appear whether previously or subsequently. Held, in neither case could they be the subject of set-off.—6 B. L. R., App. 125; 15 W. R., 127.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree against B in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Some time afterwards B recovered a decree in the Munsif's Court against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon applied for the attachment of this decree in satisfaction of their own against B. Before attachment, however, B assigned her decree to C. On C trying to execute B's decree against the plaintiffs, they brought the present suit for a declaration of their right to have a set-off made of the two decrees. Held that such a suit would not lie.—13 B. L. R., 489; 22 W. R., 235.

Act VIII of 1859, sec. 209, which provides for the set-off of cross-decrees, applies only to decrees of the same Court, or decrees sent to a Court for execution. Therefore, when on application for execution of a decree in the Court of a principal Sadr Amin, it was sought to set-off a decree obtained in the Judge's Court, which had not been sent to the Principal Sadr Amin for execution, held that sec. 209, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply. Question referred, not answered, on the ground that it did not arise in the case.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 503; 6 W. R., Mis., 72.

The statement of a party to a suit is admissible original evidence against him to prove the contents of a written instrument. In a suit to recover balance of rent due, the defendant pleaded the pendency of a suit, brought by him in the District Munsif's Court against the plaintiff for damages for illegal dispossession, and that he had given credit against the amount of damages for the balance of rent due. Held that the pendency of the suit in the District Munsif's Court was not a bar to the present suit, but that it was open to the Court in its discretion to postpone the hearing of the present suit until the District Munsif had given his decision.—3 M. H. C. R., 158.

Before cross-decrees can be set-off the one against the other, it is necessary that they should be in the same Court for execution.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 104; 16 W. R., 303.

Held that, according to the true construction of sec. 246 of Act X of 1877, a purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to inquire whether the judgment-debtor had a cross-judgment of a higher amount such as would have rendered the order for execution incorrect. If the Court has jurisdiction, such purchaser is no more bound to inquire into the correctness of an order for execution, than he is as to the correctness of the judgment upon which execution issues.—L.R., 13 I.A. 106; I.L.R., 14 Cal. 18.

Where a decree for the plaintiff has been obtained in a suit, and a cross-suit is pending, the Court will not stay proceedings in execution of the first suit, or order the proceeds of that decree to be paid into Court to abide the result of the second.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 330.

In order to admit of a set-off being made when there are cross-decrees, the parties must be the same, and the sum due under each decree or decrees must be definite.—5 W. R., Mis. 12.

Where execution of A's decree against B was stayed pending the passing of a decree in B's cross-suit, held that no subsequent purchase of B's rights and interests in his cross-suit could be set up as a bar to A's rights to attach the whole of the decree in the cross-suit, in execution of his decree against B.—7 W. R., 219.

Where a cross-decrees had been obtained, and one of them had been assigned, in a suit by the other decree-holder to set aside the assignment as fraudulent, held that it was fraudulent, and the right of set-off was unaffected. Quære.—Whether, had the assignment been a bona fide one, i.e., for a valuable consideration, the assignee would have taken the decree subject to the equities or liabilities of the decree-holder to the judgment-debtor.—7 W. R., 470.

An award of private arbitration per se did not come under the provisions of sec. 209 of Act VIII of 1859, so as to be set-off against a decree of Court.—11 W. R., 144.

S had against M in the Rungpore Court a decree for costs which he removed for execution to the Court of Beerbhoom. On this M applied to the latter Court, under sec. 209, Act VIII of 1859, for stay of execution pending the decision of another suit which he had brought against S. Held that, on the decision of the other suit, it ought to have been ascertained which party had a decree for the larger sum, and that execution should have been taken out by that party only, and for so much as should remain after deducting the smaller sum, which should have been entered on the decree for the larger sum.—12 W. R., 212.

When a decree in favour of an appellant describes a set of costs as due by the appellant to the respondent, it means, not that any sum should be actually paid to the latter, but that the costs in question should be deducted from the gross amount decreed, and the remainder only recovered under the decree. Sec. 209, Code of Civil Procedure, had no application in such a case.—12 W. R., 308.

Whether the provisions of sec. 209 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, were applicable to decrees passed under Act X of 1859.—16 W. R., 303. There is now no distinction in this respect between rent-decrees and other decrees.

If a Court ordering a sale in execution of a decree has jurisdiction, a purchaser of the property sold is not bound to inquire into the correctness of the order for execution, any more than into the correctness of the judgment upon which the execution issues. Notwithstanding anything in sec. 246 of the Code of Civil Procedure, he is not bound to inquire whether the judgment-debtor holds a cross-decree of higher amount against the decree-holder any more than he is to inquire, in an ordinary case, whether the decree, under which execution has issued, has been satisfied or not. These are questions to be determined by the Court issuing execution. Where property, sold in execution of a valid decree, under the order of a competent Court, was purchased bona fide and for fair value:—Held that the mere existence of a cross-decree for a higher amount in favour of the judgment-debtor, without any question of fraud, would not support a suit by the latter against the purchaser to set aside the sale.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 18.

Under two decrees of the Sadr Diwani Adalat passed in 1864, A was entitled to two-thirds and B to one-third of certain immoveable property, with mesue-profits in proportion. Each obtained possession of the immoveable property decreed to him. B appealed to the Privy Council from both decrees in respect of the two-thirds awarded to A. In April 1866, pending the appeal, A applied for an account of the mesne-profits due to him after setting off the mesne-profits due to B, but as he failed to comply with a condition requiring him to give security for the amount claimed, in case the Privy Council should allow B's appeal, the application was struck off. In January 1867, B applied for the mesne-profits of the one-third decreed to him, and the Court found Rs. 18,000 to be the amount so due, but, on application by A, stayed further execution pending the Privy Council's decision. In 1873 the Privy Council dismissed B's appeal. In 1885, A, in execution of the Privy Council's decree, applied for Rupees 50,000 as mesne-profits in respect of the two-thirds. B at the same time applied that the Rs. 18,000 declared in 1867 to be due to him in respect of the one-third might be set-off against the amount claimed by A. Held, that the question of the amount due to A up to the date when he acquired possession of the two-thirds and which had never been decided, should be reopened from the point at which it was left in 1866; that if this amount exceeded the Rs. 18,000 declared in 1867 to be due to B, satisfaction of A's claim to that extent should be entered up and the balance recovered from B; and that this course, if not strictly in accordance with the letter, was in accordance with the spirit of secs. 246, 247 of the Civil Procedure Code, and at all events, should be allowed on principles of natural equity. Held, also that, until the amount due to A had been definitely ascertained in the execution department, B's right to maintain his set-off did not arise; that the set-off was, therefore, not barred by limitation; that the order of January 1867, was equivalent to a decree for the amount declared thereby as due to B; that, when the execution department had determined the amount due to A, that decision also would be a decree, and that sec. 246 of the Code could then be applied.—10 Al. 188.

A judgment-debtor may set-off against the amount of the decree against him, the amount of a decree which he has obtained against the decree-holder and other persons.—9 Cal. 479.

S and two other persons held a decree for costs against M, which did not specify the separate interests of each in the decree, and M held a decree for money against S alone, which he wished to treat as a cross-decree under sec. 246 of Act X of 1877. Held that the decree held by S and the other persons was not a decree between the same parties as the parties to the decree held by M, and M's decree could not, be therefore, be treated as a cross-decree under that section.—2 Al. 91.

Sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code is applicable to cross-decrees, and not to cross-claims under one decree.—2 Al. 272.

In April 1877, M and S for money, and on the 10th May 1887, S sued M for money, both suits being instituted in the same Court. In the meantime, on the 9th May 1877, B applied for the attachment of the money claimed by M in his suit, and obtained an order prohibiting M from receiving, and S from paying, any sum which might be found in that suit to be due by S to M. On the 23rd June, 1877, M obtained a decree in his suit against S, and S obtained a decree in his suit against M, S's decree being for the larger sum. On the same day, under the provisions of sec. 209 of Act VIII of 1859, satisfaction for the smaller sum was entered on both decrees, and execution taken out of S's decree for so much as remained due. At the same time S objected to B's attachment, but his objection was disallowed. Held in a suit by S against B to have the order disallowing his objection set aside, and the property and legality of the set-off above-mentioned established, regard being had to the provisions of sec. 209 of Act VIII of 1859, that the attaching order of the 9th May could have no operation or effect, and that, even if B had followed up that order, and attached M's decree against S, that step would not have put him in a better position, for the same section being followed, and the decrees being essentially cross decrees, that for the smaller sum became absorbed in the one for the larger, and attachment could not affect it.—2 Al. 866.

Where a decree-holder holds a decree against several persons jointly, one of whom holds a decree against him singly, both decrees being executable in the same Court, it is competent to the holder of the joint decree, under the provisions of sec. 246 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to plead such decree in answer to an application for execution of the decree against him singly.—14 Al. 339.

See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 817, noted under sec. 239 ; 9 Al. 64, noted under sec. 411.

247. When two parties are entitled under the same decree to recover from each other sums of different amounts, the party entitled to the smaller sum shall not take out execution against the other party ; but satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree.

Cross-claims under same decree.

When the amounts are equal, neither party shall take out execution, but satisfaction for each sum shall be entered on the decree.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

To make sec. 247 of the Code applicable in the case of cross-claims under one decree, the parties entitled thereunder to recover from each other must hold the same character and possess identical rights of enforcing execution, and enforcement of the decree can only be refused, or satisfaction entered up, when this is the case. Held, therefore, where a decree for money of a Court of first instance directed that the money should be realizable from certain specific property of the defendant, and exempted his person and other property, and the lower Appellate Court modified this decree by extending it to the person of the defendant, and in second appeal the High Court set aside the lower Appellate Court's decree and restored that of the first Court, directing that the costs of the defendant in the lower Appellate Court and in the High Court should be paid by the plaintiff, that, inasmuch as the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the judgment-debt due to him from the defendant from such specific property, whereas the defendant was entitled to recover the judgment-debt due to him from the plaintiff from his person and property, the provisions of sec. 247 were not applicable.—5 Al. 272.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 351, noted under sec. 214 ; 9 Al. 64, noted under sec. 411 ; 10 Al. 188, noted under sec. 246.

Notice to show cause why decree should not be executed.

248. The Court shall issue a notice to the party against whom execution is applied for, requiring him to show cause

If it were to be treated as joint property, he could have none, for the deceased's interest would then have disappeared, having gone by survivorship to his brother.—16 Bom. 636.

The omission to give the notice required by sec. 248 of Act X of 1877 to the judgment-debtor on application for the execution of the decree affects the regularity of the sale which subsequently takes place in execution of the decree, and the validity of the entire execution-proceedings. Ramessuri Dassee v. Doorgadas Chatterjee (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 103) followed. Held, therefore, where execution of a decree was applied for against the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, and the notice required by sec. 248 of Act X of 1877 was not given to such legal representative, and certain immoveable property belonging to the deceased judgment-debtor was sold, that such sale had been properly set aside by the Court executing the decree by reason of such omission. Quære.—Whether such omission was an irregularity in "publishing or conducting" the sale within the meaning of sec. 311 of that Act.—3 Al. 424.

When a judgment-debtor has died after decree, but before application has been made to execute the decree, the Court, before directing the attachment and sale of any property to proceed, must issue a notice to the party against whom the execution is applied for, to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him, and its omission to do so will invalidate the entire subsequent proceedings. A judgment having been obtained by A against B, and B having died before application was made for execution, A applied for execution of his decree upon a tabular statement, in which the judgment-debtor was stated to be C, widow of B, and C was also described as the person against whom execution was sought. Upon this application, the property mentioned in the tabular statement was directed to be attached and sold, and it was accordingly sold in execution, and purchased by A. No notice under sec. 248 of the Civil Procedure Code had been served upon C before issue of execution. Held that the application was improper; that the order for attachment and sale should not have been made; and that the Court which made it should have set the execution aside as soon as it became aware that no notice had issued previous to its issue. The fact of there being no section in the Code expressly authorising a Court to set aside its proceedings is immaterial, as every Court has an inherent right to see that its process is not abused or does not irregularly issue, and may set aside all irregular proceedings as a matter of course, provided that the interests of third parties are not affected. Semble.—Under sec. 248, the fact that application to execute the decree had been made in the lifetime of B would make no difference, unless an order had been made and the property actually attached under it; as whenever an application is made for execution against a legal representative of the judgment-debtor, the notice required by the section must be issued to him, unless the Court has already ordered execution to issue against him upon a previous application.—6 Cal. 103; 7 C. L. R., 105; 3 Al. 424.

249. If the person to whom notice is issued under the last preceding section does not appear, or does not shew cause to the satisfaction of the Court why the decree should not be executed, the Court shall order the decree to be executed.

Procedure after issue of notice.

If he offers any objection to the enforcement of the decree the Court shall consider such objection, and pass such order as it thinks fit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An application was made to execute a decree, and notice was issued under sec. 216 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to the party against whom execution was applied for, to show cause why the decree should not be executed. He came and presented by his pleader a petition containing certain grounds of objection. The Judge did not fix any day for hearing the petition, but the case was subsequently called on, and was repeatedly placed before him, but the pleader did not attend, and therefore the objections were disallowed. The Judgment-debtor afterwards applied to the Judge to re-consider the order, but his application was refused. The High Court remanded the case to the Judge to try the nature of the objections taken by the judgment-debtor, observing that, if a day had been fixed, and the party had not then appeared, the Judge would have been justified in not going further into the case, but might have disposed of it at once.—5 B. L. R., App. 65; 14 W. R., 155.

A petition, under sec. 217, Act VIII. of 1859, is not required to be verified.—8 W. R., 200.

250. When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing provisions have been taken, the Court, unless it sees cause to the contrary, shall, “subject to the provisions of sections 245A and 245B,”* issue its warrant for the execution of the decree.

Warrant when to issue.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a judgment-creditor had obtained a writ of attachment against the property of his judgment-debtor, but the debtor had no property to the knowledge of the creditor against which the attachment could be enforced, held (reversing the decision of the Court below) that he was entitled to an order for execution of the decree by attachment of the person of the debtor. In an application for such an order, the onus is on the judgment-debtor to show that he has no means of satisfying the debt, and that he has not been guilty of any misconduct, and not on the creditor to show that, by sending the debtor to prison, some satisfaction of the debt would be obtained.—8 B. L. R., 255; 258 note.

In a suit for an account by a principal against his agent, the plaintiff should ask in his plaint that a proper account may be taken. If the defendant is found liable to render such account for a certain period, the Court should make an interlocutory decree declaring that he is so liable, and direct him to file an account in Court within a fixed period. This decree may be enforced under sec. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure prescribed by secs. 394 and 395 and form 157 of sch. iv. to the Code should be followed. When the accounts have been taken, the Court must determine the amount due, and the final decree should be for the payment of this amount, and also, if necessary, for the delivery of any papers, vouchers, or other documents which have come into the hands of the agent in the course of his employment. In a suit for an account against A and B as agents, the plaintiff asked for an account as against A from 1265 (1858) to 1283 (1876), and as against B from 1281, (1874) to 1283 (1876). Held that there had been no misjoinder. The seven days within which a notice of objection to a decree by a respondent under sec. 561 of the Code must be given is not a period to which the provisions of paragraph 2 of sec. 5 of the Limitation Act can be extended, and the Court has no discretion to extend the period. Forms of keeping accounts of joint property in the mufassal considered.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 654.

* The words quoted have been inserted by the Debtors' Act (VI of 1888), sec. 3

251. Such warrant shall be dated the day on which it is issued, signed by the Judge or such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf, sealed with the seal of the Court, and delivered to the proper officer to be executed.

And a day shall be specified in such warrant on or before which it must be executed, and the proper officer shall endorse thereon the day and manner in which it was executed, or, if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return it with such endorsement to the Court from which it issued.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

252. If the decree be against a party as the legal representative of a deceased person, and the decree be for money to be paid out of the property of the deceased, it may be executed by the attachment and sale of any such property:

Decree against representative of deceased for money to be paid out of deceased's property.

If no such property remains in the possession of the judgment-debtor, and he fails to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such property of the deceased as is proved to have come into his possession, the decree may be executed against the judgment-debtor to the extent of the property not duly applied by him, in the same manner as if the decree had been against him personally.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff sued the defendants on the ground that they were in possession of his deceased debtor's property. It being found that the defendants received no assets from the deceased, held that the suit was rightly dismissed. If the suit had simply been against the defendants as heirs or personal representatives of the deceased, and if they had alleged that no assets had come to their hands, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree against them as representatives of the deceased, if he had prayed for such a decree, without going to trial on the question whether or not the defendants had assets ; and in that case he might have proceeded, in enforcement of his decree, under the provisions of sec. 203 of Act VIII. of 1859.—6 B. L. R., App. 106 ; S. C. 14 W. R., 431.

Where a Hindu died, leaving a childless widow and a separated brother, it was held that, until a legal representative is appointed to the deceased's estate, his widow is the only person who can defend a suit as his representative, and that, while a decree obtained against the widow will enable a creditor to attach and sell, not only the widow's life-estate in the immoveable property, but also the reversionary estate of the remainderman, yet a decree obtained against the remainderman will not enable the creditor to touch the estate in the hands of the widow. When a decree has been obtained against A in his lifetime, and A dies before execution, A's estate is properly described in the proceedings in execution as the estate of A (sec. 210, Code of Civil Procedure) ; and in the certificate of sale, the purchaser is properly declared to have purchased the right, title, and interest of A in the property sold ; but this procedure is improper in cases in which the debtor dies before or pending the suit, and the suit is brought or continued against his representative. In such cases the representative, and not the deceased person, is the defendant (secs. 104 and 203) ; and in the notification of sale (sec. 249), and in the certificate of sale (sec. 259), it ought to be set forth that what is sold is the right, title, and interest of the representative on the record. A bona-fide purchaser, without notice for valuable consideration at an auction-sale, is, as a general rule, entitled to protection, notwithstanding any irregularity or defect in the proceedings or decree in the suit. But when the decree is against the representative of a deceased person, the purchaser is bound to satisfy himself that the party sued as the representative of the deceased is his legal representative. The legal representative of a deceased person, though not a party to the suit, will be bound by the execution-sale, if he either knowingly allowed the suit to be defended by another person claiming to be the legal representative, or, if knowing of the sale, he stood by and allowed the purchaser to pay in the belief that he acquired a good title. Edalji Hormasji v. Mahabu Begum (Special Appeal No. 266 of 1869) considered.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 37.

Property must, under Act VIII of 1859, be attached before being sold in execution of decree, the words "attachment and sale" in sec. 203 being taken together and not read distributively.—1 Hyde's Rep, 158 ; 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 125.

A, a Muhammadan, died possessed of immoveable property, and leaving a widow, a daughter, and a sister, B, his heiresses according to Muhammadan Law. B was entitled to one-sixth share of an undivided moiety of a certain portion of the property which was situated in Calcutta. After A's death, the L Bank sued his daughter and her husband and two of her husband's brothers in a Mufassal Court to realise certain mortgage-securities executed by A to the Bank, and obtained a decree by consent. Neither the widow nor B, who was then absent from the country, were parties to this suit. The Bank, in execution of their decree, caused certain property of A, including the undivided moiety of the Calcutta property, to be sold by the Sheriff of Calcutta. The defendant became the purchaser at this sale, and obtained possession of the property. The certificate of sale stated that what was sold was "the right, title, and interest of A, deceased, the ancestor, and of the defendants (naming them), the representatives, in a moiety of a piece of land situate," &c. B afterwards sold and assigned her share in (among other properties) the above-mentioned undivided moiety of the Calcutta property to the plaintiff, who now sued the purchaser at the execution-sale to recover the subject of his purchase. Held by GARTH, C. J., and KEMP and JACKSON, JJ. (MARKBY and AINSLIE, JJ., dissenting), that the decree and the execution founded upon it did not affect the share of B in the estate of A, and consequently that the property in question did not pass to the defendant under the sale made by the Sheriff. Per GARTH, C. J.—A decree by consent against one heir of a deceased debtor cannot, under the Muhammadan Law, legally bind the other heirs. Per MARKBY, J.—Under the Muhammadan Law, the estate of an intestate decedent entire, together with all the debts due from and owing to the deceased. The creditor of an intestate Muhammadan must enforce his claim against the estate in a suit properly framed for the purpose. Such a suit is properly framed if all the persons in possession of that particular portion of the estate which it is intended to charge or made parties to it. The right of a Muhammadan heir claiming the property of his deceased ancestor who died indebted is a right of representation only, and, except as representative, he has no right to the property whatsoever. A person may be a representative within the meaning of sec. 203 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with sec. 252 of Act X of 1877), so as to make the decree effectual for the purpose therein stated, although that person is not the heir.—I. L. R., 4 Cal. 142.

A plaintiff is entitled to sue the legal representative of his deceased debtor, and to obtain a decree against him, without proving that assets have come into his hands. It is sufficient if there are assets of which he may become possessed. The decree should mention that it is against the defendants in that character, and should be executed as directed by sec. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Rayappa Chetty v. Ali Saheb (2 M. H. C. R., 336) followed.—8 Bom. 309.

253. Whenever a person has, before the passing of a decree in an original suit, become liable as surety for the performance of the same or of any part thereof, the decree may be executed against him to the extent to which he has rendered himself liable, in the same manner as a decree may be executed against a defendant:

Provided that such notice in writing as the Court in each case thinks sufficient has been given to the surety.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where sale in execution of a decree was stayed on the security given by a third party, held that, on default by the defendant, the decree could not be summarily enforced against such surety under sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859.—4 B. L. R., App. 27; 13 W. R., 35.

H obtained a decree in the High Court against S for certain moveable and immoveable property. S appealed to the Privy Council. While that appeal was pending, H applied for the execution of her decree, and N became her surety for Rs. 10,000. The decree, however, was not executed. The Privy Council reversed the decision of the High Court, and dismissed the suit of H with costs. S then sought to execute his decree for costs against N, the surety. Held that N was not liable.—6 B. L. R., App. 126. S. C. 14 W. R., 410.

Where a person became a surety, in the course of the proceedings on an appeal, to pay all such sums as may be decreed against the plaintiff on appeal, the decree, when passed, can be executed against the surety under sec. 204 of the Civil Procedure Code, and an appeal will lie from an order made in execution of such decree against the surety. Where a person became surety, and gave a security-bond undertaking to pay all sums of money that might be decreed against the plaintiff on the defendant's appeal, and the appeal was dismissed for default; and on the application of the plaintiff, the Recorder made an order cancelling the bond, and returned it to the surety, without notice to the defendants, and afterwards the defendant's appeal was on application restored, and a decree passed against the plaintiff, held that the Recorder's order was invalid, and execution could issue against the surety notwithstanding that order.—7 B. L. R., 81; 15 W. R., 538.

A surety-bond taken by the Court under sec. 8 of Act XXIII. of 1861, after judgment has been pronounced, can be enforced under sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859.—8 B. L. R., 205; 15 W. R., 21.

An application was made against one R S for execution under sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859. It appeared that a suit had been instituted by A C against H S and others in the District Court of Hooghly; that it had been dismissed with costs; that the plaintiff had appealed to the High Court from the decision of the Judge of Hooghly; that, pending the appeal, H S and his co-defendants had applied for and obtained an order from the High Court calling upon A C to give security for his costs in the Court below and of the appeal; that R S had, in pursuance of the order, charged his house in Calcutta with the payment of the costs to the extent of Rs. 2,000; that the appeal to the High Court was dismissed with costs; that the costs of the Court below and of the appeal amounted to Rs. 2,052-7-6; and that the present applicants had been unable to realize the costs by execution within the jurisdiction of the Hooghly Court. They now applied for execution against R S by the attachment and sale of the house charged by him with the payment of Rs. 2,000. MACPHERSON, J., made the order as prayed.—9 B.L.R., App. 17.

By virtue of sec. 11 of Act XXIII. of 1861, and the provisions of sec. 204 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an appeal lies from an order passed in a matter between a judgment-creditor and sureties on behalf of a judgment-debtor for the performance of the decree.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 119; 8 W. R., 24.

Where, by an arrangement sanctioned by the proper Court, the terms of a decree were varied, and provision was made for its payment by instalments, for the payment of a portion of which instalments a surety executed a bond hypothecating his property, held that the terms of sec. 204 of the Civil Procedure Code are not applicable to such an arrangement.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 88.

When a person has become liable as security for the performance of a decree, sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859 gives a remedy to the decree-holder against the surety in addition to any remedy which he may have on the surety-bond. It does not prevent the decree holder from bringing a suit on the surety-bond to enforce the contract made with him by the surety, and the lien on the property mortgaged to secure the performance of that contract.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 261.

In consideration of the plaintiffs being allowed to proceed with the execution of a decree which they had obtained in the High Court, A became surety upon a bond for the payment of what might be due to the defendants by such plaintiffs in the event of their decree being reversed or modified by the Privy Council, to which an appeal was then pending. Held that the summary procedure under sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859 might be enforced against A as such surety. Compare Act X. of 1877, sec. 253.—3 C. L. R., 505.

Where a Court, during the pendency of an inquiry under Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 8, allowed the defendant to be at large upon security for his appearance when called upon, and when the Court had concluded the inquiry, it was found that the defendant had appeared, the liability of the surety was held to be at an end.—24 W. R., 292.

A surety must be taken to have entered into his contract only for the time during which the relation created by the instrument of suretyship exists, and with reference only to the person to whom he made himself responsible.—25 W. R., 250.

When security had been given on behalf of the respondent to an appeal under sec. 546 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the due performance of the decree of the Appellate Court and the appeal had been successful:—Held, that under the provisions of secs. 253 and 583, the decree of the Appellate Court could be enforced against the sureties in execution proceedings. Venkapa Naik v. Baslingapa (I. L. R., 12 Bom., 411), approved.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 1.

A plaintiff, having preferred an appeal to Her Majesty in Council, was called upon to furnish security. Thereupon A, on behalf of appellant, executed a security bond for the costs of the respondent. The appeal was dismissed with costs by Her Majesty in Council. On an application by the respondent in the appeal for execution to issue against the estate of A, the surety (who had died in the meantime), held that the liability of the surety under the security-bond could not be enforced in execution of the decree of Her Majesty in Council. Bans Bahadur Singh v. Mughla Begum, (I. L. R., 3 Madr., 107) dissented from.—12 Cal. 402.

An appeal was preferred to the Privy Council from a final decree passed upon appeal by the High Court, and B and certain other persons on behalf of the appellant gave security for the costs of the respondent. The Privy Council dismissed the appeal, and ordered the appellant to pay the costs of the respondent. The respondent applied to the Court of first instance for the execution of that order against B and the other persons as sureties. Held that, under Act X of 1877, secs. 610 and 253, such order could be executed against the sureties.—2 Al. 604.

In 1874 the execution of the decree of an Appellate Court was stayed pending an application for review of judgment, upon the judgment-debtor giving security for the execution of the decree, and a surety was accepted on his behalf:—Held that the judgment-creditor could not proceed summarily against the surety under the provisions of sec. 253 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.—7 Madr. 284.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 809, noted under sec. 210; 15 Madr. 203, noted under sec. 211.

254. Every decree or order directing a party to pay money as compensation or costs, or as the alternative to some other relief granted by the decree or order, or otherwise, may be enforced by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, or by the attachment and sale of his property in manner hereinafter provided, or by both.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money, and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable, but "de facto" void.—I. L. R., 5 Al. 86.

A suit on a bond in which immoveable property was hypothecated was adjusted by the defendant agreeing to pay the amount claimed and costs, with interest, by instalments within a fixed time, and that, in the event of default, the plaintiff should be at liberty to bring such property to sale. The Court made a decree ordering the defendant to pay the plaintiff the amount claimed and costs, with interest, "in accordance with" such agreement. Held (TURNER, J., and OLDFIELD, J., dissenting) that such decree was a mere money-decree, and not one which gave the plaintiff a lien on such property.—3 Al. 216.

255. If the decree be for mesne-profits or any other matter, the amount of which in money is to be subsequently determined, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him under the decree has been ascertained, be attached as in the case of an ordinary decree for money.

Decree for mesne-profits or other matter, amount of which to be subsequently ascertained.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When, in a suit for possession of land and mesne-profits at a rate stated in the plaint, a decree is passed which directs that the amount of mesne-profits be ascertained in execution of the decree, the plaintiff is not limited to the amount or rate stated in his plaint, though it may be used as evidence against him in favour of the defendant. Baboojan Jah v. Byjnath Dutt Jha (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 472; S. C., 7 C. L. R., 539) explained.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 112.

See I. L. R., 19 Cal. 139, noted under sec. 230.

256. When a decree is passed for a sum of money only, and the amount decreed does not exceed the sum of one-thousand rupees, the Court may, when passing the decree, on the oral application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof by the issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment-debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or against his moveable property within the same limits.

Power to direct immediate execution of decree for money not exceeding Rs. 1,000.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 701, noted under sec. 222.

Modes of paying money under decree.

257. All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows (namely):—

(a) into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree ; or

(b) out of Court to the decree-holder ; or

(c) otherwise as the Court which made the decree directs.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A sold a decree obtained by him under Reg. VII. of 1799 to B, but after the sale realized the decree from the judgment-debtor. On application by B for execution, on 2nd January 1862, the fraud was discovered, and B was referred by the Collector to the Civil Court. On 2nd October 1866, B brought his suit for recovery of his purchase-money from A. Held that the period of limitation ran from the discovering of the fraud. The suit was not barred. Sec. 206 of Act VIII. of 1859 does not apply to decrees under Reg. VII. of 1799.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 76.

Where a judgment-debtor executed a kistbandi, or instalment-bond, providing for the satisfaction of the decree which had been obtained against him, and subsequently failed to pay according to the terms of the kistbandi, held that the decree-holder could enforce his claim under the terms of the kistbandi by proceedings in execution, and need not file a fresh suit.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 223 ; 11 W. R., 86.

A judgment-creditor is entitled to prove payments made according to the terms of a kistbandi for the purpose of showing that his right to sue out execution under the kistbandi was not barred by limitation. Query, whether part-payments under a decree may not be proved, although they have not been made through the Court, or certified to the Court, under sec. 206 of Act VIII. of 1859.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 320 ; 11 W. R., 232 ; 15 W. R., 459.

Where a creditor has obtained a decree for money payable by instalments, the whole amount to become due on failure by the debtor to pay one of the instalments, he is, upon failure, entitled, notwithstanding sec. 206 of Act VIII. of 1859, to come into Court and certify to the Court, and prove payment of the earlier instalments, to show that execution of his decree is not barred.—4 B. L. R., (F. B.) 130 ; 13 W. R., (F. B.) 40 ; 15 W. R., 66.

A had obtained a decree against B, C, and D, in execution of which the Sheriff attached certain property belonging to B, C, and D, who were carrying on business in partnership. The property was sold, and the proceeds paid into Court ; and by order of Court, A received a sum in part-satisfaction of his decree. Subsequently A, at the request of B, and without receiving any consideration, gave him a letter in Bengali, purporting to be a release to him of the remainder of his decree, but such adjustment was not made through the Court. A afterwards applied for execution of his decree against B, C, and D, but his application was refused, the Court treating the letter as a release. A appealed. Held, on appeal, that the letter was not a release : there was no consideration for it. The adjustment of the decree should have been made through the Court or certified to it in accordance with sec. 206, Act VIII. of 1859.—6 B. L. R., 339 ; 15 W. R., O. C., 5.

Various applications were made to execute a decree, and on one of them the sum of Rs. 1,000 was paid. Further applications were afterwards made, on which finally it was arranged that a further payment of Rs, 1,000 down should be made, and that the residue should be paid with interest by monthly instalments. The judgment-creditors sought to set aside the arrangement, and to execute their original decree as if no such arrangement had been made. Held that the decree could not be enforced in supersession of such agreement.—10 B. L. R., App. 28; 19 W. R., 155.

Where a decree had been obtained for a certain sum of money without interest, and afterwards a kistbandi was filed, by which the decree-holder and the judgment debtor agreed that the amount of the decree should be paid by instalments with interest, and the judgment-debtor had, by his conduct for several years, treated the kistbandi as if it were a decree, held that, under the circumstances of the case, the judgment-debtor could not afterwards object that the kistbandi could not be executed as a decree, and that a fresh suit should be brought upon the kistbandi; but the decree-holder was entitled to take proceedings on the kistbandi as if it were part of the original decree.—14 B.L.R., 287; 21 W.R., 310; 5 W. R., Mis., 19.

There is no procedure under Act VIII of 1859 under which execution can be taken out upon a kistbandi, filed in Court after decree, which has not been incorporated with the decree.—14 B. L. R., 288 note; 15 W. R., 542.

Where a decree was obtained for a sum of money, and afterwards by an arrangement between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder it was agreed that the decree should be payable by instalments with interest at a very large rate, and payments had subsequently been made of large sums of money in the terms of the arrangement, and a balance remained due, it was held that the decree-holder could not recover in execution of the decree any sum beyond what was stated in the decree.—14 B. L. R., 291 note; 16 W. R., 275, 6 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 1.

A kistbandi, or arrangement to pay by instalments the amount of a decree obtained upon a bond, does not effect an extinction of the original debt or the mortgagee's lien upon property mortgaged to him by the bond.—14 B. L. R., 423 note. S. C. 11 W. R., 481.

Plaintiff owed defendant a judgment-debt. He paid the debt, but not through the Court. Defendant then fraudulently applied to the Court to execute the decree, and the Court, being debarred by sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure from recognizing payment made otherwise than through it, executed the decree by making the plaintiff pay again the sum decreed. Plaintiff sued to recover the amount overpaid. Held by the majority of the Court, SCOTLAND C. J., and INNES, J., dissenting) that such a suit is not maintainable.—3 M. H. C. R., 188.

Where a decree has been adjusted between the parties by a contract binding upon them, a Court is not bound to issue process of execution upon the original decree in violation of the terms of the contract, although the decree-holder refuses to certify the adjustment of the decree under sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure, especially where the Court executing the decree is the Court to which the parties would go for the purpose of enforcing the contract.—7 M. H. C. R., 387.

Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree, at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be inquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under sec. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 393; 2nd Ed. 371.

Held that the rejection under sec. 206 of Act VIII of 1859 of a defendant's objection in a Mofussil Small Cause Court to the execution of a decree, on the ground that it had been adjusted out of Court, did not bar his right to bring a suit against the execution-creditor to recover the thing alleged to have been given in satisfaction of the decree.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 76.

K, an execution-creditor of C, applied to the Court by which the decree was passed, and caused C to be imprisoned under it. C then entered into a compromise upon certain terms with K for the adjustment of the decree, and K thereupon, but without certifying the terms of such adjustment to the Court, petitioned for the release of C, who was accordingly released. Subsequently K again applied to the Court to compel satisfaction of the whole amount of the decree against C. This application was opposed by C, on the ground that an adjustment of the decree had taken place between him and K. The Judge however, refused to enter into the question of the adjustment, as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held on appeal that the Judge was in error; that it was the duty of K, on applying for the release of C, to certify the adjustment to the Court; that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so; and that, not having done so, the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full, but that, under the circumstances, it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to inquire into the terms of the adjustment. Case remanded for that purpose.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 120.

H sued B to recover possession of a certain house. B answered that the house was his own; that H having fraudulently got possession of it, he, B, had filed a suit to recover possession; that a decree was passed in his favour in the lower Court, which, however, was reversed on appeal; that, pending special appeal, a compromise had been entered into between him and H, in pursuance of which he, B, was put in possession of the house. The terms of this compromise were not certified to the Court under sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that this compromise, having been effected after the decree in favour of B had been reversed, did not come within the meaning of sec. 206. and was therefore a good defence to the suit of H.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 78.

A suit will, notwithstanding sec. 206 of Act VIII of 1859, lie for damages for an alleged breach of contract in not certifying to the Court a payment of money in satisfaction of a decree, made out of and not through the Court, in consequence of which the same was fraudulently recovered a second time, by the person omitting to certify the said payment.—1 N. W. P. H. C. R., 155; Ed. 1873, 237; S. C. Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 185.

A Court executing decrees, whilst giving effect to sec. 206 of Act VIII of 1859, should also take reasonable care that its process is not about to be abused for fraudulent purposes. It may, by examining the judgment-debtor and others having knowledge, inform itself of the position of the decree, and whether it has, or has not been, satisfied. This, however, is merely an enquiry to inform the Court, and it need not frame and decide an issue.—2 N. W. P. H. C. R., 48.

The suing on a kishundi in Court does not necessarily make it the instrument of a public adjustment through the Court, within the meaning of sec. 206, Act VIII of 1859.—7 W. R., 485.

A letter from a decree-holder to his vakeel to put in an acknowledgment into Court is not a settlement out of Court certified to the Court in the manner required by sec. 206, Act VIII of 1859, to warrant further investigation in the matter.—7 W. R., 510.

Where several of the acts required to be done in execution of a decree are such as can be done through a Court, and where all of them are acts the doing of which may be certified to the Court by the person in whose favour the decree was made, the policy of sec. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to exclude the reception of evidence upon the point, or any question arising out of evidence before the Court. No adjustment, can be recognised unless made through the Court or certified by the person in whose favour the decree was made.—8 W. R., 319.

Sec. 206, Act VIII of 1859, does not bar a suit brought to recover money paid into the Collectorate as Government revenue, although the person on whose behalf the money was paid had an Act X decree against the person paying the money, as the entire amount of the decree was eventually recovered by taking out execution of the whole decree.—8 W. R., 449.

Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount decreed to the officer of the Court under the authority and pressure of the Court's process, he is entitled to protection; the latter clause of sec. 206, Act VIII of 1859, relating, not to such payments, but to voluntary adjustment.—9 W. R., 462.

A petition signed and filed in Court by a judgment-creditor certifying payment of the amount due to him by his judgment-debtor is a sufficient certificate of payment under the decree in the terms of sec. 206, Code of Civil Procedure.—12 W. R., 358.

Where a decree-holder agrees for a good consideration not to enforce his decree, the Court may legitimately, on the suit of the opposite party, issue an injunction against the former not to do what he has agreed not to do, Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 206, notwithstanding.—22 W. R., 194.

Act VIII of 1859, sec. 206, applied only to proceedings which were taken while the decree was in execution, and did not preclude the Court, before putting the decree in execution, from enquiring if it has been satisfied out of Court.—22 W. R., 270.

A suit to enforce a contract by which a dispute was adjusted between a decree-holder and judgment-debtor is not barred by Act VIII of 1859, sec. 206.—22 W. R., 298.

Where a party to a suit was directed by the High Court to pay the costs of the day, and his solicitor paid the money into Court under sec. 257 of the Code of Civil Procedure, held that section was not applicable, as the order was not a decree.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 120.

257A. Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt shall be void, unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable.

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly of any sum in excess of

Agreement to give time to judgment-debtor.

Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt.

the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void, unless it is made with the like sanction.

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment-debt; and the surplus (if any) shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff obtained a money-decree against the defendant Hur Patel, and in execution thereof attached his property. Thereupon, at Hur Patel's request, five persons gave a havala or oral undertaking to pay the amount of the decree, and the attachment was removed. It appeared that some payment was made under the havala. Subsequently Hur Patel and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 executed a bond to the plaintiff reciting the havala, the payment thereunder, and agreeing to pay the amount of the decree with interest. Neither the havala nor the bond was brought to the notice of the Court for sanction, and the decree, which was capable of execution, was then destroyed. The plaintiff now sued to recover the debt due under the bond. The District Judge was of opinion that the part of the bond which contained a promise to pay interest was void, but that in respect of the principal amount of the decree it was not void. On reference to the High Court, held that the whole bond was void. The havala was an agreement such as is contemplated in para. 1 of sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and was void for want of sanction of the Court under that section. The bond, regarded as one in consideration of the havala or as an agreement for satisfaction of the decree, was also void under para. 2 of the same section for a similar reason.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 499.

On the 16th July, 1886, S. obtained a decree against K. for Rs. 315 with costs. On the next day K. paid S. Rs. 200 in part satisfaction of the decree, and induced K. to accept a bond by which he (S.) gave up the costs and by which K. was to pay the balance of the decree with interest at the end of eight months. S. sued upon the bond. K. contended that the bond was void under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) and that the suit would not lie. Held, that the suit would lie. Since the amendment made in sec. 258 by Act VII of 1888 such payments or adjustments may be recognized by a Civil Court, except when executing the decree, and, therefore, a suit based upon such a payment or adjustment should be admitted. The concluding clause of sec. 258 has no direct bearing on sec. 257A, as it relates to a different subject-matter. Quære—Whether sec. 257A relates exclusively to agreements to extend the time for enforcing decree by execution, as ruled by the Calcutta High Court, or is applicable to all agreements according to the view taken by the Bombay High Court? Where there are different rulings of the different High Courts on a particular point, a Judge should follow the rulings of the High Court to which he is subordinate. Jhabar Mahomed v. Modan Sonahar (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 671), Madhavray Anant v. Chilu (P. J. for 1881, p. 315), Ganesh Shivram v. Abdullabeg (I. L. R., 8 Bom. 538), Pandurang Ramchandra v. Narayan (I. L. R., 8 Bom. 300), and Davlatsing v. Pandu (I. L. R., 9 Bom. 176), referred to.—15 Bom. 419.

The decree in a redemption-suit directed that the lands mortgaged should be allowed to be redeemed on payment of Rs. 30-7 0 by the plaintiff to the defendant. The decree was subsequently modified by substituting Rs. 91-2-6 for Rs. 30-7-0. On the 3rd October 1885, the parties entered into an agreement whereby (inter alia) the time to pay the decreed debt was extended to five years from that date, but no sanction of the Court was obtained. On the 18th February 1888, the parties applied to the Court to sanction the agreement of 1885. On reference to the High Court, held that the agreement in question required the Court's sanction under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882), for want of which it was void so far as it related to the judgment-debt, and that the sanction could not be given at the date it was applied for.—13 Bom. 54.

P having obtained a decree against B, the son of the latter gave the son of the former an instalment-bond for the judgment-debt without the sanction of the Court. In a suit by P's son to recover the debt on the bond, held that the suit would lie. Sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882) applies only to agreements between the parties to the suit or decree.—13 Bom. 671.

Sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, when it provides that "every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void" unless made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court, &c., does not make such agreements illegal, in the sense prohibited by law. It only prevents such agreements being enforced in a Court of Law. Where such an agreement to give time, never sanctioned by the Court as required by section 257A, formed part of the consideration for a bond, and had actually been enjoyed by the obligee to bond. Held, that such consideration, not being in its nature illegal, and not having as a fact failed, there was no reason why the obligor should not enforce the terms of the bond.—16 Bom. 618.

Although a Court executing a decree is bound by the terms thereof, and cannot add to or vary or go behind them, the effect of sec. 375 read with sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code is that, when a decree is put into execution, the proceedings taken therefor amount to a separate litigation in which the parties can enter into a compromise much in the same manner as in a regular suit. Such a compromise does not extinguish the decree; and the Court executing the decree is bound, subject to the conditions indicated by sec. 375, to give effect to the compromise. In execution-proceedings the word "suit" in sec. 375 must, with reference to sec. 647, be read as meaning "execution of decree." By reason of the words in sec. 375, "lawful agreement or compromise," the provisions of sec. 257A become applicable to such a case; and, so long as the requirements of that section are satisfied, the compromise becomes a part of the decree itself, and—at least as between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor—can be given effect to in execution of the decree. When such a compromise has been duly made and sanctioned by the Court executing the decree, neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor can resile from the position assumed by them in the matter of the compromise. Even if such a compromise has been irregularly sanctioned by the Court executing the decree—the irregularity not amounting to want of jurisdiction—the compromise must take effect until the order sanctioning it is set aside, and, until that happens, the parties are bound by it in all proceeding relating to the execution of the decree, and, where they have acted upon it, they are estopped thereafter from questioning its validity. Sita Ram v. Dasrath Das (I. L. R., 5 Al. 492) followed. Debi Rai v. Gokal Prasad (I. L. R., 3 Al. 585), Ram Lakhan Rai v. Bakhtaur Rai (I. L. R., 6 Al. 623), Fateh

On the 22nd March, 1886, the applicant presented an application to a Subordinate Judge, praying that the adjustment of certain decrees, dated the 28th March 1867, and 11th July 1871, might be certified, and a sanction granted to a sankhat, dated 18th March 1880, passed to him by the defendant in satisfaction of the said decrees and in substitution of to bonds dated February 1879. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the application could not be granted, inasmuch as the execution of the decrees was then barred by limitation, referred the case to the High Court under sec. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code, (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the question could not be referred under sec. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), as the order applied for to the Subordinate Judge was appealable under sec. 2 of the Code. The question raised by the application related to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of sec. 244 of the Code.—11 Bom. 57.

An agreement entered into to pay interest not awarded by a decree in addition to the sum decreed without the sanction of the Court which passed the decree is void under sec. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act XIV of 1882, so far as it operates in satisfaction of the Judgment-debt.—9 Bom. 176.

The plaintiff's father had in his lifetime obtained a decree against the first defendant and two other persons. This decree having been partly satisfied, the first defendant and his son, who was no party to the decree, executed a bond for the amount still remaining due. At the date of the bond the decree was barred by limitation. No sanction for the bond was obtained under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code. The adjustment was secured under sec. 258. The plaintiff now sued upon the bond. On reference the High Court. Held, that the bond did not require the sanction of the Court under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). That section relates to judgment-debts which are still enforceable. Held, also, that judgment-debt is a debt within the contemplation of sec. 25, clause (3) of the Contract Act IX of 1872.—14 Bom. 390.

The provisions of sec. 257A of Act XIV of 1882 are intended to prevent binding agreements between judgment-debtors and judgment-creditors for extending the time for enforcing decrees by execution, without consideration, and without sanction of the Court; and are not intended to prevent the parties from entering into a fresh contract for the payment of the judgment-debt by instalments or otherwise.—11 Cal. 671.

The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant under which the judgment-debtor was liable to pay the amount by instalments with interest at 4 per cent. Eventually, the defendant failing to pay, the plaintiff accepted a bond executed jointly by the defendant and his father, by which they both became liable for the amount of the decree with interest at 18 $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. In a suit on the bond, it was contended that the bond was void under sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, as being an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt made for no consideration and without the sanction of the Court, and also without such sanction providing for payment of a sum in excess of the amount due under the decree; that it was void within the meaning of sec. 23 of the Contract Act as being forbidden by, or of a nature to defeat the provisions of, sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code; and that, consequently, the suit on it was not maintainable. Held, that sec. 257A of the Code was not applicable. That section was framed to prohibit the enforcement of an agreement of the kind mentioned therein, if made without the sanction of the Court, in execution of the decree, but was not intended to take away the right of parties of entering into a fresh contract, either for payment of the judgment-debt, to give time for such payment, or for the payment of a larger sum than may be covered by the decree, if it be for a proper consideration. In this case the consideration for the bond was a lawful consideration; it could not be said that because satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court, there was no consideration. Held, also, the bond was not void under sec. 23 of the Contract Act. Semble: The words "any law" in that section refer to some substantive law, and not to an adjective law, such as the Procedure Code is.—16 Cal. 504.

The provisions of sec. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, apply only as between parties to the decree.—6 Madr. 101.

The decree-holder and judgment-debtor of a decree filed a petition (sulehnama) in the Court executing the decree, praying that the Court would sanction an arrangement providing for the payment of the decree by instalments and enhancing the rate of interest made payable by the decree. The Court sanctioned the arrangement. Held that the "sulehnama" was within sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and the decree might be executed in accordance with its provisions.—5 Al. 492.

On the 27th August, 1878, the holder of a decree for money and the judgment-debtor agreed that the amount of the decree should be payable by instalments, and that, if default were made in payment of any one instalment, the whole decree should be executed. The Court executing the decree sanctioned this agreement. On the 28th November 1881, default having been made, the decree-holder applied for recovery of the whole amount of the decree. Held that the application was not one to which No. 179, sch. ii. of the Limitation Act, 1877, was applicable, but No. 178, and the period of limitation began to run from the date of default. The principle recognized in Baghubans Gir v. Sheosaran Gir (I. L. R., 5 Al. 243) and Kalyanbhai Dipchand v. Ghanshamlal Jadunathji (I. L. R., 5 Bom. 29) applied.—5 Al. 596.

G, the father of the plaintiff, obtained two decrees: one against the defendant A and his father, and the other against A's father alone; and in satisfaction of these decrees obtained a bond without the sanction of the Court, and brought a suit to recover the sum due under the said bond. Held that the bond was void under the second clause of sec. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—8 Bom. 538.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 623 and 12 Al. 571, noted under sec. 210.

258. If any money payable under a decree is paid out of Court, or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, or if any payment is made in pursuance of an agreement of the nature mentioned in section 257A, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree.

Payment to decree holder.

The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after due service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to appear on the day fixed, or, having appeared, fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

Unless such a payment or adjustment has been certified as aforesaid, it shall not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree.*

Notes.

The section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In 1881 R obtained a decree against M for possession of certain property with costs. Subsequently a compromise of the questions at issue in the suit was come to between R and M, one of the terms of which was that R gave up his claim to costs. Satisfaction of the decree was not entered up in Court. In 1884 K, purporting to be acting on behalf of R, but without his knowledge or sanction, applied for execution of the decree for costs, and in the execution-proceedings which followed a share of M in a tank was sold and purchased by A. M thereupon brought a suit against A, R, K, and others to set aside the sale, alleging that the whole of the execution-proceedings had been taken without notice to him, and had been fraudulently taken by the defendants in collusion with one another in order to deprive him of his share in the tank. It was found that A's purchase was an innocent one, and untainted with fraud. Held, upon the authority of Rewa Mahton v. Ram Kishen Singh (L. R., 13 I. A. 106; S. C., I. L. R., 14 Cal. 18), that the sale could not be set aside. Such a sale could only be set aside if it were shown that the Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree; but as the decree remained an unsatisfied decree so far as the Court was concerned, and capable of being executed, the compromise not have been certified to the Court, the Court had jurisdiction to execute it. Held, further, that the execution proceedings could not be held to be void, as, although instituted by a person who had no authority to institute them, they were instituted in the name of the decree-holder, and neither the Court nor the auction-purchaser was bound to see that the application was made bona fide on his behalf. Pat Dasi v. Sharup Chand Mala (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 376) commented on.— I. L. R., 15 Cal. 557.

A decree-holder having proceeded to execute his decree against his judgment-debtor, the latter objected, stating that the decree had been already satisfied, although the adjustment thereof had not been certified to the Court as required by sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The judgment-debtor, being under the circumstances compelled to deposit the amount of the decree in Court, applied for and obtained sanction to prosecute the decree-holder for an offence under sec. 210 of the Penal Code. It was contended that the case did not fall within that section, as the satisfaction, not having been certified to the Court, could not be recognized by the Court executing the decree, and that consequently no offence had been committed. Held that the words "after it has been satisfied," used in sec. 210 of the Penal Code, indicate only the fact of the satisfaction of the decree. The fact that the satisfaction is of such a nature that the Court executing the decree could not recognize it does not prevent the decree-holder from being properly convicted of an offence under that section.—16 Cal. 126.

In a suit brought by a Hindu to recover certain land, defendant pleaded that he held the same under a mortgage granted to him by plaintiff's mother and guardian in satisfaction of a decree obtained against plaintiff's deceased father. Plaintiff contended that, as the mortgage was in adjustment of a decree, and the adjustment had not been certified to the Court, the mortgage could not be recognised by virtue of sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that, as there had been no certified adjustment of the decree, the mortgage could not prevail against plaintiff's claim. Haji Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Kaki Aruth (I. L. R., 11 Bom. 6) followed, and Mallamma v. Venkappa (I. L. R., 8 Madr. 277) distinguished.—11 Madr. 469.

In 1877, M executed a mortgage to S in consideration of a sum paid in cash, and a debt due by M to S under a decree. S did not certify satisfaction of the decree to the Court under sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure, nor was this stipulated for in the instrument of mortgage. Held, in a suit to enforce the mortgage, that sec. 258 was no bar to the plaintiff's right to recover.—12 Madr. 61.

An appeal lies against an order dismissing an application made under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 258, that the adjustment of a decree be recorded as certified.—14 Madr. 99.

The plaintiff had been a surety for the defendant on a bond for Rs. 50 passed to G by the defendant. G obtained a decree against the plaintiff on this bond, and the plaintiff satisfied the decree by paying G Rs. 38 in full satisfaction. The payment was made out of Court, and was not certified to the Court. The plaintiff now sued the defendant to recover the money so paid by him to G. He called G as a witness, who acknowledged he had received Rs. 38 from the plaintiff in full satisfaction of the decree. Held that the last clause of sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882) did not apply to such a case, and that the payment made by the plaintiff to G might be proved.—12 Bom. 235.

An application for execution of a decree payable by instalments was resisted by the judgment-debtor as barred by limitation on the ground that nothing had been paid under the decree, and that the application was made more than three years after the first instalment fell due. The decree-holder pleaded that he had waived the default in payment of the first instalment by accepting such payment shortly afterwards, and that the application was in time, having been made within three years from the date when the second instalment was due. Held that the decree-holder could not raise this plea, as the payment in question had not been certified to the Court executing the decree, and therefore could not, under sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, be recognized. Sham Lal v. Kanahia Lal and Zahur Husain v. Bakhtawar not followed.—12 Al. 569.

Where a regular suit under sec. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure was brought to establish the plaintiff's right to certain attached property on the allegation that the property attached had been transferred to him in satisfaction of a decree held by him against the judgment-debtor. Held that it was not necessary that such transfer should be certified under the provisions of sec. 258 of the Code Civil Procedure. The prohibition to take cognizance of adjustments and payments referred to in sec. 258 above-mentioned relates only to the Court executing the decree.—13 Al. 339.

Where a decree has been satisfied out of Court, and the payment has not been recorded in accordance with sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is nevertheless open to the quondam judgment-debtor, when suing to have a sale made by the quondam decree-holder after satisfaction of the decree set aside, to prove the payment of the decretal money otherwise than by a certificate under that section.—14 Cal. 376.

Under sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) no Court can recognize an uncertified adjustment of a decree for any juridical purpose whatever. A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor, the consideration for which is, that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree; as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and, therefore, no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one Haji Omar Khamesa against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree, Haji Omar Khamesa was declared entitled to recover Rs. 9,961-5-6 with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of Rs. 200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to Haji Omar Khamesa of certain property, with power to him to sell the same, and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default, for six months. Haji Omar Khamesa assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequent to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883), the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant, by the defendants, that they would pay Rs. 9,961-5-6, with interest at six per cent., by monthly instalments of Rs. 400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree, both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of Rs. 4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held, that the suit would not lie as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court, as required by sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882).—11 Bom. 6.

The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for Rs. 60 and costs, Rs. 29-10-1, against which the defendant immediately appealed. Shortly afterwards the defendant sent Rs. 70 to the plaintiff's vakil, intimating by a letter that the remittance was in part-payment of the decree, and that an arrangement would be made to pay the balance. The plaintiff did not take out execution of the decree, but the part-payment was not certified to the Court. On appeal, the decree was reversed and the defendant applied for the refund of the amount which he had paid to the plaintiff. The Court of first instance granted the application. The plaintiff appealed, and the Appellate Court reversed the order, holding that, under the provisions of sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, the payment made by the defendant not having been certified could not be recovered. Held by the High Court that the defendant was entitled to recover the amount paid to the plaintiff. The decree having been reversed on appeal the payment, whether certified to the Court or not, could only be regarded as made without consideration, and the defendant was entitled to have it restored. The Court accordingly under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code discharged the order of the lower Appellate Court, and restored the order of the Court of first instance.—11 Bom. 724.

The provision in sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, which forbids any Court to recognize a payment under, or an adjustment of, a decree, unless certified to the Court executing the decree, does not debar a suit for damages for a breach of a contract to certify.—8 Madr. 277.

In determining under sec. 258 of Act XIV of 1882 whether or no the cause shown by the decree-holder is sufficient, it is incumbent upon the Court to investigate and decide any questions of fact upon which the parties may not be agreed. In such an investigation the evidence may be given either orally or by affidavit. The term "to show cause" does not mean merely to allege causes, nor even to make out that there is room for argument, but both to allege cause and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court.—11 Cal. 166.

Sec. 258 which provides that no payment or adjustment of a decree not certified to the Court, as in the said section provided, shall be recognized by any Court, does not debar a Criminal Court from recognizing such payment where the decree-holder is charged with fraudulently executing a satisfied decree.—9 Madr. 101.

An adjustment of a decree not certified to the Court by either party within the time limited by law cannot be recognized as a bar to execution.—3 Madr. 113.

Where a judgment-debtor has, out of Court, partly satisfied his decree-holder subsequent to the transmission of the decree for execution to another Court, but before actual execution has been applied for, he is entitled, on execution in full being demanded, to an order from the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution, calling upon the decree-holder to certify the fact of such part-payment.—5 Cal. 448.

In 1878, a decree-holder, having received certain grain from the judgment-debtor in satisfaction of the decree, failed to certify satisfaction of the decree to the Court in accordance with the provisions of sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, and executed the decree nevertheless. In a suit for damages against the decree holder it was held that the judgment debtor's remedy for the wrong suffered was not taken away by the provisions of secs. 244 and 258 of the Code.—5 Madr. 397.

N, having obtained a decree in a suit against K, requested him to discharge certain sums due on outstanding bonds which N had given to third parties, promising to credit the sums so paid to the amount due under the aforesaid decree. K paid as requested, but N took out execution in full of the decree, and the Court refused to recognize the payments made by K out of Court. In a suit by K for the money paid as aforesaid, held that, the payments not having been made directly in adjustment of a decree, the suit was not barred.—1 Madr. 203.

Where a decree-holder, declared to be entitled to possession of certain lands, subsequent to decree executed a patta in favour of his judgment-debtor, who has then in possession, and afterwards took out execution under his decree, held (on an objection by the judgment-debtor that, under these circumstances, he has entitled to possession) that, satisfaction of the decree not having been entered up, such objection could not be dealt with under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code deals with the adjustment of any decree, and not merely with the adjustment of a money-decree.—6 Cal. 786 ; 8 C. L. R., 36.

Certain immoveable property having been attached in execution of a decree for money dated in 1879, directing the sale of such property, T, who had purchased such property in 1880, objected to the attachment. His objection having been disallowed, he used to establish his right to the property and for the removal of the attachment. He claimed on the ground, amongst others, that the decree of 1879 has been wholly adjusted. The alleged adjustment had not been certified under sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the provisions of that section did not debar the Courts trying the suit from determining as between T and the decree-holder whether the decree of 1879 had been adjusted or not. Sita Ram v. Mahipal (I. L. R., 3 Al. 533) and Shadi v. Ganga Sahai (I. L. R., 3 Al. 538) followed.—5 Al. 269.

The provisions of sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code Act VIII. of 1859, only prevent the Court executing the decree from recognizing a payment made out of Court, and do not bar a suit for the refund of such payment. G held a decree against D, who satisfied it out of Court, and obtained a receipt from G to the effect that it was satisfied. Notwithstanding this, G executed the decree, and recovered the amount of it through the Court, although D pleaded satisfaction in the execution-proceedings, and produced the receipt. In a suit brought by D against G for refund of the money received by G out of Court, the defendant contended that the suit was not maintainable. Held that it was maintainable according to the law as it stood before the passing of Act XII of 1879. Gunnamani v. Paran Kishore (5 B. L. R., 223) and Gulawad v. Rahimtulla (4 Bom. H. C. R., 76) followed. Quere.—Whether such a suit is maintainable under sec. 36 of Act XII of 1879, which has been substituted for sec. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Held also that the statement contained in the receipt passed by G to D, to the effect that the decree had been satisfied, was sufficient to shift the burden of proof to the defendant to show that it was an incorrect statement.—4 Bom. 295.

Where under a bond a decree was adjusted by making a small deduction, and by providing for the payment of the balance as part of the entire amount of the bond. Held, that since the amendment made in section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by section 27 of Act VII of 1888 (Act amending the Civil Procedure Code of 1882) such adjustment may be recognized by a Civil Court, except in execution.—16 Bom. 589.

The plaintiff held a decree against the defendant, and in execution of it attached the defendant's property. A compromise was then made, by which the defendant executed to the plaintiff the bond sued upon, in satisfaction of the judgment-debt. The compromise, however, was not certified to the Court. Held that the bond was without consideration. The adjustment of the decree, not having been certified to the Court, was not binding on the plaintiff, and therefore constituted no valid consideration.—8 Bom. 300.

The holder of a money-decree agreed to accept, in satisfaction of the amount thereof a part-payment in cash, and a lease of certain lands for five years, rent free. The judgment-debtor made the payment, and gave the lease agreed on. Afterwards the decree-holder executed the decree against the judgment-debtor, and then the judgment-debtor brought the present suit for a declaration that the money-decree was satisfied, and for damages against the decree-holder. Held, that such a suit would lie. Guna-

See I. L. R., 15 Madr. 343, noted under sec. 231 ; 11 Bom. 506, noted under sec. 232 ; 6 Bom. 146, 3 Al. 533, 3 Al. 538, 9 Cal. 831, 15 Cal. 187 and 15 Madr. 302, noted under sec. 244 ; 15 Bom. 419, noted under sec. 257A ; 13 Madr. 236, noted under sec. 7 of the Limitation Act.

259. If the decree be for any specific moveable, or for any share in a specific moveable, or for the recovery of a wife, it may be enforced by the seizure, if practicable, of the moveable or share, and by the delivery thereof to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he appoints to receive delivery on his behalf, or by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, or by attaching his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment if necessary.

When any attachment under this section has remained in force for six months, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree, and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder, in cases where any amount has been fixed under section 208, such amount, and, in other cases, such compensation, as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application.

If the judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to pay, or if, at the end of six months from the date of the attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made, or, if made, has been refused, the attachment shall cease to exist.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except so far as relates to recovery of wives.)

N had obtained a decree that "the defendants do, within six weeks after service upon them of this decree, remove the obstruction and reopen the pathway or lane leading from the north-west end of the plaintiffs-house northwards to a public road, as the same existed before the commencement of the suit, and as described in the plaint." Held that, under sec. 200, the only way in which the decree could be executed was by the imprisonment of the party against whom the decree was made, or by attaching his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment of property, if necessary. Accordingly the decree ordering the removal of the obstruction was reversed as illegal.—10 B. L. R., App. 12 ; 18 W. R., 282.

Per MARKBY, J.—In a suit by a husband for restitution of conjugal rights, a decree that “the case be decreed awarding the plaintiff to take defendant as his married wife” is not a proper form of decree. The decree may order the wife to return to her husband’s protection, but such a decree is not one which can be enforced in the manner provided by sec. 200, Act VIII. of 1859, as being an order “for the performance of a particular act.”—14 B. L. R., 298 ; 23 W. R., 179.

The Court will not order the father of a Hindn girl, in a suit to which the girl is not a party, to specifically perform the marriage of his daughter with a person to whom the daughter has been betrothed. It will, however, award damages against the father for breach by him of the contract of betrothal. Semble—That, according to Hindn law, a betrothal is not to be treated as an actual and complete marriage. No order for enforcing a decree by imprisonment under sec. 200 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be made until the defendant has had an opportunity of obeying the decree, or has contumaciously refused to obey it.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 122.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights brought against a wife and certain persons said to be detaining her from her husband, the proper form of decree is one enjoining the wife to return to her husband, and the other co-defendants to abstain from preventing her return.—2 N.-W. P. H.C. R., 314.

In suits for restitution of conjugal rights the decree should be in the form that the wife do return to her husband, with which decretal order if she fails to comply, she may be dealt with under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to attachment and imprisonment for non performance of the act decreed, for a wife cannot be delivered in execution as a chattel.—2 Agra H. C. R., 337 ; 3 Agra H. C. R., 88.

Quære.—Whether, under the present procedure, the Court can enforce its order upon a wife to return to her husband’s by giving her over bodily, into her husband’s hands. Such disobedience would seem to fall within sec. 200 of the Code, and to be enforceable only by imprisonment, or attachment of property, or both.—8 W. R., (P. C.) 3 ; 11 Moore’s I. A. 551.

A, who had been directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter returning to her husband, after the date of the decree permitted her daughter, who was of age, to reside in her house. Held that such conduct on the part of A was no such evidence of interference with her daughter’s return as would justify the execution of the decree against her, under the provisions of sec. 200 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with secs. 259 and 260, Act XIV of 1882).—I. L. R., 1 Al. 501.

260. When the party against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for the performance of, or abstention from, any other particular act, has been made, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree or injunction, and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced by his imprisonment, or by the attachment of his property, or by both.

When any attachment under this section has remained in force for one year, if the judgment-debtor has not obeyed the decree, and the decree-holder has applied to have the attached property sold, the property may be sold; and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree-holder such compensation as it thinks fit, and may pay the balance (if any) to the judgment-debtor on his application.

If the judgment-debtor has obeyed the decree, and paid all costs of executing the same, which he is bound to pay, or if, at the end of one year from the date of the attachment, no application to have the property sold has been made and granted, the attachment shall cease to exist.

Notes.

By a decree relating to certain joint property belonging to the plaintiff and defendant, but which had previously been held in the sole name of the defendant, it was directed that the plaintiff and defendant should jointly manage the property, and that the names of both should appear in all papers connected with such property. The plaintiff subsequently applied to have his name registered in the collectorate, but was opposed by the defendant, who, it appeared, also allowed the amlahs of the estate to continue to use his sole name. Held that the Court had, under the circumstances, jurisdiction under sec. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code to attach the defendant's property until he had obeyed the decree by having the joint names of himself and the plaintiff inserted in all documents belonging to the estate.—8 C. L. R., 487.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 174, noted under sec. 235; 10 Cal. 817, noted under sec. 239.

261. If the decree be for the execution of a conveyance, or for the endorsement of negotiable instrument, and the judgment-debtor neglects or refuses to comply with the decree, the decree-holder may prepare the draft of a conveyance or endorsement in accordance with the terms of the decree, and deliver the same to the Court.

The Court shall thereupon cause the draft to be served on the judgment-debtor in manner hereinbefore provided for serving a summons, together with a notice in writing stating that his objections (if any) thereto shall be made within such time (mentioning it) as the Court fixes in this behalf.

The decree-holder may also tender a duplicate of the draft to the Court for execution, upon the proper stamp-paper if a stamp is required by law.

On proof of such service, the Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall execute the duplicate so tendered, or may, if necessary, alter the same, so as to bring it into accordance with the terms of the decree, and execute the duplicate so altered :

Provided that, if any party object to the draft so served as aforesaid, his objections shall, within the time so fixed, be stated in writing, and argued before the Court ; and the Court shall thereupon pass such order as it thinks fit, and execute, or alter and execute, the duplicate in accordance therewith.

Notes.

The Registrar of the High Court has authority, when so directed by an order of Court, to execute a conveyance on behalf of a party refusing to do so, so as to pass his estate, if any, but has no authority to bind him by entering into any covenants on his behalf. The power of the Registrar to execute such a conveyance rests upon statutory authority. General covenants for title and quiet enjoyment extend to the case of a defect known to the purchaser at the time of the sale, unless the intention of the parties that they should not do so is clearly expressed in the covenants themselves. "Conveyance," as used in Rule 436 (Belchambers' Rules and Orders), means such an instrument as may be necessary to transfer the estate, if he has any, belonging to the person on behalf of whom the Registrar executes the transfer to the purchaser. Circumstances under which a parda-nashin lady will be relieved from liability under covenants contained in a conveyance executed to her. D, an heir of one X, a deceased Hindu lady, sold and conveyed to M, in March 1878, a moiety in certain premises belonging to the estate of X. Subsequently a decree was made for partition of the estate left by X in a suit to which D, A, R, G and S were parties, and an order was made in that suit directing the premises, of which D had so sold a moiety, to be sold by the Registrar, and the parties were directed to join in the conveyance, the Registrar being directed to approve and execute the same on behalf of G, who was an infant. At the sale the plaintiff purchased the premises, and thereafter D refused to execute the conveyance, which included the usual covenants for title and quiet enjoyment. A summons was thereupon taken out against him, and an order was made directing the Registrar to execute the conveyance on his behalf. The conveyance was then executed in September 1885 by A, S, and R, and by the Registrar on behalf of D and the minor G. In a suit instituted by M under the conveyance of 1878, the Court held that he was entitled to possession, as against the plaintiffs, of the moiety of the premises covered by his conveyance. The plaintiff, therefore, brought a suit against D, A, R, G, and S to recover damages for breach of the covenants for title and quiet enjoyment. It was not found that R had any good independent advice in the matter, or that she clearly understood the nature of the contract she was entering into, and the liabilities she was taking upon herself. Held that, although the Registrar had authority to execute the conveyance on behalf of D and G, he had no authority to enter into the covenants on their behalf, and that the suit should be dismissed as against them. Held, also, that, having regard to the position of R, the suit should also be dismissed as against her.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 330.

Where a bona fide contract, whether oral or written, is made for the sale of property, and a third party afterwards buys the property with notice of the prior contract, the title of the party claiming under the prior contract prevails against the subsequent purchaser, although the latter's purchase may have been registered, and although he has obtained possession under his purchase.—10 Cal. 710.

262. The execution of a conveyance, or the endorsement of a negotiable instrument, by the Court under the last preceding section, may be in the following form: "C. D., Judge of the Court of (or as the case may be), for A B in a suit by E F against A B," or in such other form as the High Court may, from time to time, prescribe, and shall have the same effect as the execution of the conveyance or endorsement of the instrument by the party ordered to execute or endorse the same.

Note—See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 710 & 16 Cal. 330, noted under sec. 261.

263. If the decree be for the delivery of any immovable property, possession thereof shall be delivered over to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he appoints to receive delivery on his behalf, and, if need be, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate the property.

Note.

In 1877 the plaintiffs sued the defendant for possession of certain properties, and obtained a decree. In execution of this decree, the plaintiff, on 12th of July 1879, obtained formal possession of the properties sued for. The defendant continued to remain in actual possession and occupation of a portion of the premises, and refused to give up possession of the same to the plaintiff, who served him with a two months' notice to quit in June 1881. The plaintiff did not evict the defendant in execution of the decree obtained by him against the defendant, but instituted a fresh suit for that purpose. Held that such a suit would lie. Sembla, that the delivery of formal possession in execution of a decree for possession gives a cause of action against a defendant who remains in occupation of the premises, which may be enforced in a regular suit.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 93.

264. If the decree be for the delivery of any immovable property in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, and not bound by the decree to relinquish such occupancy, the Court shall order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum, or in such other mode as is customary, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree in regard to the property:

Provided that, if the occupant can be found, a notice in writing containing such substance shall be served upon him, and in such case no proclamation need be made.

Notes.

A decree-holder purchased, in execution of his decree, the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, a member of a joint Hindu family, in the family dwelling-house and land attached thereto. Held, Per NORMAN, TREVOR, LOCH, and BAYLEY, JJ, that sec. 224 of Act VIII. of 1859 did not apply; that A was entitled to actual possession of the share of his judgment-debtor in the house as well as in the land, but his share must be marked out so as to cause the least possible inconvenience to the other members of the family. Per KEMP, J.—An equivalent in value of the share in the house should be apportioned to him out of the land, which greatly exceeded the dwelling-house in value.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 172; 2 W. R., Mis., 30; 8 W. R., 239; 18 W. R., 23.

Where compliance with the formalities prescribed by sec. 224, Act VIII. of 1859, and a legal receipt for possession, were found as facts, they were held to give such a right under a Civil Court's decree as would prevail over one founded on mere actual receipt of rent.—9 W. R., 358.

In order to a legal possession being given under sec. 224, Act VIII. of 1859, it was essential that all the requirements of that section be carried out.—15 W. R., 99.

Delivery of possession by going through the process prescribed by sec. 244 of Act VIII of 1859 is the only way in which the decree of the Court awarding possession to the plaintiff can be enforced; and as, in contemplation of law, both parties must be considered as being present at the time when the delivery is made, such delivery must, as against the defendant, be deemed equivalent to actual possession. As against third parties such symbolical possession is of no avail, because they are not parties to proceedings. But if the defendant subsequently dispossesses the plaintiff by receiving the rent and profits, the plaintiff will have twelve years from such dispossession to bring another suit.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 584.

265. If the decree be for the partition or for the separate possession of a share of an undivided estate paying revenue the Government, the partition of the estate or the separation of the share shall be made by the Collector and according to the law (if any) for the time being in force for the partition, or the separate possession of shares, of such estates.

Notes.

The meaning of sec. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that, where a revenue-paying estate has to be partitioned into several revenue-paying estates such partition must be carried out by the Collector. Zahrn v. Gowri Sunkar (I. L. R., 15 Cal. 198) approved.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 203.

The duty of the Collector, to whom a decree has been referred under sec. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) for partition, is not confined to mere division of the lands decreed to be divided, but includes the delivery of the shares to their respective allottees.—11 Bom. 662.

Sec. 265 does not apply to property held on raiyatwari tenure, but to permanently settled estates.—6 Madr. 97.

In 1862 it was held by the Sadr Court that sec. 225 of Act VIII of 1859 did not apply to raiyatwari estates. This ruling having always been acted on in the Madras Presidency, held by the Full Bench that a different construction should not, under these circumstances, be placed on sec. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. Muttu v. Kudalalaga (I. L. R., 6 Madr. 97) confirmed.—7 Madr. 382.

V mortgaged to the plaintiff his house and certain undivided land in which H and others, Hindu co-parceners, had a share. R bought the interest of H in the land at a Court sale, and let to H and V, who, failing to pay rent, were sued by R, who got a decree for possession. This decree transferred for execution to the Collector, who sold the land, and rateably distributed the proceeds, except to V, who declined to take the amount tendered as his share. The plaintiff sued V and the purchasers under R's decree to recover his mortgage debt by a sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held that R's decree, not being for partition of the family property, or for the separate possession of a share, was not one contemplated by sec. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The proceedings of the Collector were without jurisdiction, and the plaintiff was entitled to ignore them, and assert his claim under the mortgage. That the defendants being in actual possession—albeit through a sale under a void decree—could not be ousted in the present suit, and were entitled to say that the plaintiff had not proved his title to sell the specific lands mortgaged.—8 Bom. 539.

When the Collector makes a partition under sec. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), the Civil Court has no power to examine his work or to direct him to make a fresh partition. Dev Gopal Savant v. Vasudev Vithal Savant (I. L. R., 12 Bom. 372) followed.—15 Bom. 527.

M obtained against R a decree for possession of "a one-fourth share of the two follow lands, Nos. 490 and 541, measuring 7 bighas and 2 bighas 16 biswas respectively, after removal of the trees planted thereon." The Court, in executing the decree, placed the decree-holder in joint possession of the two plots, to the extent of the one-fourth share decreed to him, but declined to remove the trees until the said share had been specifically ascertained and partitioned by the Collector, in reference to sec. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the decree could not be understood to entitle the plaintiff to remove the trees from a larger area than that to which he was entitled under that decree; and that, so long as that area remained joint and unascertained, the plaintiff could not execute the decree in the manner sought. Held also that the decree in the present case could not be called a "decree for the partition or for the separate possession of a share of an undivided estate paying revenue to Government," within the meaning of sec. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to require the intervention of the Collector for the purpose of executing the decree; and that the Court of first instance, in order to meet the exigencies of the decree, should have separated the one-fourth to which the plaintiff was declared entitled, and, in executing the decree, should have ordered that the trees standing on the one-fourth area should be uprooted.—6 Al. 452.

Under sec. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) a Civil Court cannot effect partition of lands paying revenue to Government. The Collector alone is empowered under that section to do so. The general Hindu law as to partition, which lays down that, except in certain special cases determined by family custom or usage, partition of all family property can be made, is equally applicable to sheri lands leased by Government for a certain number of years; there is no Act of Legislature which excludes lands leased by Government from its operation.—16 Bom. 528.

In 1851 an estate was brought under butwara under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814. At such butwara a portion of the estate, being covered with water, and unfit for cultivation, was not divided, but left joint amongst all the co-sharers, the land-revenue payable on account of the whole estate being apportioned amongst the several estates into which the portion divided was split up. Subsequently, on the portion remaining joint becoming dry and fit for cultivation, an application was made by one of the co-sharers to the Collector to partition the same under the provisions of Beng. Act VIII of 1876, but that officer refused to do so, on the ground that the land "did not bear an assessed revenue, and was not shown in the towji." In a suit brought under the above circumstances to compel the Collector to make the partition, and in the alternative to have it made by the Civil Court, held that, though the reason given by the Collector for refusing was an erroneous one, he was not bound to make the partition under the provisions of Beng. Act VIII of 1876, as the land in suit was not liable for the payment of one and the same demand of land-revenue, and was therefore not a joint undivided estate within the terms of sec. 4, cl. (9) of that Act. Held also that the word "estate," as used in sec. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code, must not be construed in the same limited and defective sense in which it is used in Act VIII of 1876, but must be taken to be there used in its ordinary signification, and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for partition under the provisions of that section. Chundernath Nandi v. Hur Narain Deb (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 153,) approved.—10 Cal. 435.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 153, noted under sec. 13.

F.—Of Attachment of Property.

266. The following property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree (namely),
 Property liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree. lands, houses, or other buildings goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hundis, promissory-notes, Government securities, bonds, or other securities for money, debts, shares in the capital or joint-stock of any railway, banking, or other public Company or Corporation, and, except as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, moveable or immoveable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which, or the profits of which, he has a disposing power, which he may exercise, for his own benefit, and whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person, in trust for him or on his behalf:

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale (namely) :—

(a) the necessary wearing apparel "and bedding"* of the judgment-debtor, his wife, and children;

(b) tools of artizans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle

* See Act No. XII. of 1891.

“ and seed-grain”* as may in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such ;

(c) the materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by agriculturists ;

(d) books of account ;

(e) mere rights to sue for damages ;

(f) any right of personal service ;

(g) stipends and gratuities allowed to military and civil pensioners of Government, and political pensions ;

(h) the salary of a public officer or of any servant of a Railway Company or local authority to the extent of—

(i) the whole of the salary where the salary does not exceed twenty rupees monthly ;

(ii) twenty rupees monthly where the salary exceeds twenty rupees and does not exceed forty rupees monthly; and

(iii) one moiety of the salary in any other case ;†

(i) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Native Articles of War apply ;

(j) the wages of labourers and domestic servants ;

(k) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest ;

(l) a right to future maintenance ;

(m) any allowance declared by any law passed under the Indian Councils Act, 1861, by a Governor or a Lieutenant-Governor in Council to be exempt from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree ;‡

(n) where the judgment-debtor is a person liable for the payment of land-revenue, any moveable property which under any law applicable to him is exempt from sale for the recovery of an arrear of such revenue ;§

Explanation.—The particulars mentioned in clauses (g), (h), (i), “ (j)”, and (m)¶ are exempt from attachment or sale, whether before or after they are actually payable ;

Provided also that nothing in this section shall be deemed—§ Cls. m and n have been added by Act VII. of 1888, sec. 28.

¶ The letters and word quoted have been substituted by the same Act and section for the word and letter “ and (j) ”.

(a) to exempt the materials of houses and other buildings from attachment or sale in execution of decrees for rent, or

(b) to affect the Army Act, 1881, or any similar law for the time being in force.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except so far as relates to immoveable property.)

The defendants in this suit were sirdars of coolies. A decree was obtained against them by the plaintiff in respect of goods supplied for the coolies. It was proved that by, virtue of custom, a sirdar of coolies is entitled to have the wages of coolies paid to him, so that he may deduct the amounts due to him by the respective coolies for food supplied by him to them, but it was not found that the coolies were hired on the basis of such custom. In execution of the decree an order was made upon the officer of the Public Works Department, in whose employ the coolies were, attaching all monies which are or may become payable to the debtor, whether on their own personal account or on account of coolies over whom they are sirdars. PEACOCK, C. J.—We are of opinion that the attachment cannot be maintained. Monies payable to the sirdars, on account of the coolies, could not be attached. Nothing more could be attached than the money payable to the sirdars on their own personal account. It is clear that, according to the custom, the contract is not made with a sirdar to pay him so much a month or fortnight, as the case may be, for providing so many coolies, but that the contract is for wages to the coolies themselves, which are payable to the sirdar, in order that he may deduct what is due by the coolies to him. Even if the contract had been entered into upon the basis of the custom found, the wages of the coolies did not constitute a debt to the sirdars, but debts to the coolies themselves, which, for a certain purpose, might be paid into the hands of the sirdar. We are of opinion that, under the circumstances, Major Perkins was not indebted to the sirdars; and therefore, that the wages of the coolies were not attachable under sec. 236 of Act VIII. of 1859. The money was, however, attached under sec. 237. The finding does not bring the case within that section. There is no finding that Major Perkins had any monies in his hands. Even if the fact had been found that Major Perkins had been supplied by the Government with money for the purpose of paying the expenses of public works entrusted to his charge, such money would not in our opinion, fall within the word, “desposit” within the meaning of sec. 237. If it could be shown that any one or more of the coolies was or were indebted to the sirdars for supplies furnished to them by the sirdars, the amount due from each cooly to the sirdar, and for which he had a lien on such cooly’s wages might be attached. But the amounts so due from all the coolies constituting the gang could not be attached in the general way attempted by the attachment actually issued. It would be very mischievous, and would probably stop the supply of labour for public works, if the whole of the wages, of the coolies could be attached, in the manner proposed, in satisfaction of a decree against their sirdar. This is borne out by the statement of the cooly Indraban, which is forwarded with the finding. He says: “We have left Major Perkins’s service. It is three months since. We are now with Mr. Mann. Our pay was decreed. We have not got our pay. We have therefore left Major Perkins’s service.” By the words “our pay was decreed,” we understand him to refer to the attachment of the coolies' pay under the decree against Badal Sing.—1 B. L. R., (S. N.) 15; 10 W. R., 149.

Salaries or other debts due from the Railway Company to any of its servants can be attached in satisfaction of a Small Cause Court decree under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 236. The attaching Court must make a written order to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the Court-house, and a copy is to be delivered or sent registered by post to the debtor. The registered letter should be addressed to the agent of the Railway Company at the head office of the Company. It need not be sent through the High Court, although the head office is within the jurisdiction of the High Court.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 109; 10 W. R., 447.

A decree-holder, who was also a partner of the judgment-debtor, sought to attach, in execution of his decree, the share of the judgment-debtor in the assets of the partnership business, the business then being in the hands of the Receiver of the Court under a decree for dissolution and winding up. Held that such share of the judgment-debtor was not property within the meaning of sec. 205 of Act VIII. of 1859, and therefore not liable to attachment in execution.—5 B. L. R., 382.

A decree-holder in execution attached and seized certain property which belonged to the judgment-debtor in partnership with another person, who alone at the time of attachment was in actual possession. Held that such property was the subject of attachment in execution of the decree against the one partner, but such attachment must be limited to his share, and the attachment should be by prohibitory order, not by actual manual seizure.—5 B. L. R., 386.

Under sec. 205 of the Civil Procedure Code, sums to be attached must not be inchoate, but existing and definite; and although liquidated demands in their nature definite and certain, though sub lite and unproved, may be seized, a mere expectancy or a mere right of suit cannot be attached; the attachment must operate at the time of attachment, and not be anticipatory, so as to fasten on some future state of property in which the suit may result. A claim which may accrue under a pending award cannot be sold in execution.—7 B. L. R., 186 14 Moore's I. A. 40. see 8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 150.

A decree of Court falls within the description of "other property" in sec. 205 of the Civil Procedure Code, and is therefore liable to attachment, which should be made under sec. 237.—7 B. L. R., 318; 15 W. R., 34.

The interest of an heir, according to the Hindu law, expectant on the death of a widow in possession, is not property, and therefore not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree under sec. 205 of Act VIII of 1859.—7 B. L. R., 341; 15 W. R., (F. B.) 17; 6 W. R., 34; but see 7 B. L. R., 343 note; 12 W. R., 54.

The stipend of a Carnatic stipendiary is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained against the stipendiary, it being one of the description of personal grants expressly protected from attachment in satisfaction of any decree or order of a Court by sec. 3, Reg. IV. of 1831, extended by Act XXIII of 1838. These enactments are not impliedly repealed by secs. 205 and 237 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—4 M.H.C.R., 277.

Arrears of Yeomiah pension due to the estate of deceased Yeomiahdar, which have accidentally accumulated, are not subject to attachment in satisfaction of a decree of a Civil Court obtained against the representatives of the Yeomiahdar.—5 M. H. C. R., 371.

A bona fide assignment by a debtor of his entire property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors divests him of any interest which can be the subject of attachment subsequently issued in execution of a decree against such debtor, until the trusts of the deed of assignment have been carried out.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 233.

Books of account cannot be taken in execution.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 42 ; 3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 334.

Articles of such a perishable nature that they cannot be kept for fifteen days, and sold according to the Civil Procedure Code, ought not to be taken in execution.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 156.

The whole salary of a peon in the service of a mamlatdar under Government is liable to attachment as it becomes due.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 110.

Ornaments on the person of a Hindu wife, forming part of her stri-dhan, cannot be taken under an execution against her husband. On certain occasions, however, the husband may take them, but the right is personal to him.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 129.

Necessary wearing apparel is not liable to attachment under sec. 205 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 272.

The official remuneration of the officiating hereditary officer is not liable to civil process so long as it is in the hands of the Collector or other disbursing officer, but as soon as it is in the hands of the hereditary officer himself, it is deprived of any special protection.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 400.

Where a person deposited upon the works of another certain materials to be used in carrying out a contract with such second person, and the latter had recognised and accepted such deposit by the advance of the value thereof, held that such materials had vested in the person with whom they were deposited as a purchaser, and were not liable to attachment under a decree against the depositor.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 337.

Although a Court will not allow account-books to be attached and brought to sale as mere waste paper, yet to prevent a judgment-debtor from making away with his books, and defeating a decree-holder, it will be competent to a Court executing a decree, if execution is applied for by attachment of debts, to require the judgment-debtor to produce his books in Court, and leave them in the custody of the Court.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 334.

The right of a Hindu son during his father's lifetime in ancestral property, viz., a right of joint enjoyment thereof under the father's management, and a right of partition under certain circumstances, together with the right of succeeding the father in the management after his death, may be vested rights, and are undoubtedly rights of an incipient proprietary character, but they do not constitute a transferable or inheritable property, and they cannot survive the person in whom they are vested.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 137.

The pay of a military officer cannot be attached in the hands of the paymaster in the execution of a decree where no provision for its stoppage has been made in the decree.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 331.

Quaere.—Whether a mere expectancy is liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.—6 C. L. R., 528 ; 10 C. L. R., 61.

The pay of an officer of the Small Cause Court will be set aside by an order of the High Court, in satisfaction of judgment obtained in that Court.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 259.

A sum receivable by way of assignment is not liable to be attached and sold in execution of decree.—2 Hay's Rep., 142.

A ship-owner having mortgaged his ship has still an interest in her seizable in attachment under the Civil Procedure Code. An attachment on a vessel in respect of the mortgagor's right and interest does not affect the validity of a sale under a prior mortgage.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 241.

R C D, a Hindu, died possessed of property, leaving as his heiress his widow, R D. He also left four daughters, two of whom died in the lifetime of their mother, each leaving a son. R D died, leaving her surviving two daughters, P D and J D, who succeeded to the estate of R C D. Held that J B, one of the sons of J D, had no such interest in the property as could be attached and sold in execution of a decree against him.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 277; 15 W. R., (F. B.) 18 note.

A decree is held to be part of a judgment-debtor's effects, and not to fall under the head of immoveable property.—W. R., 1864, Mis., 28.

A decree for possession of land is of the nature of immoveable property, and a Judge has no jurisdiction to interfere with the order of a lower Court setting aside the sale of such a decree.—4 W. R., Mis., 22.

Where a deed is executed stipulating the grant of a regular maintenance payable from the grantor's estate, and recoverable, in the event of non-payment, from that estate, the allowance so granted is property which can be attached under the provisions of sec. 205, Act VIII of 1859.—11 W. R., 138.

Where a part of the military pay of a sergeant employed under the Executive Engineer was erroneously remitted by his superior to a Small Cause Court, which had directed execution against the sergeant's pay, it was held that the sum remitted should be refunded to the Executive Engineer.—14 W. R., 441.

An annuity, the payment of which is a charge upon an estate, is property which can be attached under the provisions of sec. 205, Act VIII of 1859, at the instance of the person who has inherited the estate from the grantor of the annuity, and by whom the annuity is payable.—17 W. R., 254.

The salary of a telegraph officer which is due for past services is a debt which may be attached under sec. 236, Act VIII of 1859.—18 W. R., 124.

Quære.—May not the creditor of a member of a joint Hindu family have, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 205, some remedy against the property to which his debtor may be entitled?—22 W. R., 214.

A prospective right of maintenance cannot be attached, and a contingency of this kind is not included in Act VIII of 1859, sec. 205, as something capable of attachment.—23 W. R., 427.

Standing crops are, for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure, immoveable property.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 193.

In execution of a decree in a District Munsif's Court, certain property having been sold, a balance, after satisfying the decree, remained in favour of the judgment-debtor X. After the date of sale, but before the whole of the purchase-money had been paid into Court, X applied to the Court by petition, praying that the amount due to him might be paid to A, to whom, he alleged, he had assigned it. Before any order was made on this petition, B, C, D and E, in execution of separate decrees against X, attached the sum in Court. The District Munsif ordered that B, C, D and E should be paid before A. A brought a suit against B, C, D, and E in another District Munsif's Court for a declaration that he was entitled to the money and to set aside the said order. The Munsif set aside the order, and declared the plaintiff to be entitled to the amount. B, C, D, and E severally appealed against this decree, and the District Court passed a decree in each appeal, dismissing A's suit. A presented one second appeal, making B, C, D, and E parties thereto, against the four decrees of the District Court. Held (1) that A was bound to file a separate appeal against each of the decrees passed by the District Court; (2) that A (having by permission of the Court amended his second appeal and filed three more second appeals) was entitled to a decree, declaring his title to the amount claimed.—11 Madr. 280.

A, having obtained a decree against B, who was a bhagdar, attached his bhag in execution, including the gabhan or site upon which B's house was built. B applied to have the attachment removed from the gabhan, on the ground that he was an agriculturist, and that, therefore, the gabhan of his house was protected from attachment by cl. c. of sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the gabhan was subject to attachment, and was not protected by the above clause. B did not hold as an agriculturist. He could not have occupied the house, except as a bhagdar, and it was as part of a bhag that the site was attached. The protection of sec. 266. cl. c, was intended for agriculturists in the strictest sense, and for agriculturists in that sole character.—12 Bom. 363.

The jotishi vritti, being right to receive certain emoluments as a reward for personal service, is not liable to attachment under sec. 266 (f) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Semble.—Under the Hindu law, vrittis are to be regarded as generally extra commercium.—12 Bom. 366.

A percentage received by a khot for collecting the assessment on dhara lands is not "salary," nor is such a khot a "public officer," within the contemplation of sec. 266, cl. h, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The Collector, therefore, cannot object to the attachment of such percentage in execution.—13 Bom. 673.

A decree upon a hypothecation-bond which only provides for its enforcement against the hypothecated property cannot be executed against the person or other property of the judgment-debtor, though an order for costs contained therein may be so executed.—10 Al. 127.

One N, the sole owner of a certain village, had a son J. J had two wives. By his first wife he had a son U. J's second wife was G, by whom he had a son whose widow is K, the defendant in the suit. J died, leaving U his son, G his widow, and K his son's widow, and on his death U inherited the village. Prior to the year 1874 U had made a gift to G of 105 bighas situate in the village. In 1874 the rights and interests of U in the village were sold by auction and purchased by T, the ancestor of the plaintiffs. G by a deed of gift conveyed the 105 bighas to K, and ultimately died on 26th January 1883. Plaintiffs then sued to set aside the gift and for possession of the land. The learned Judge found that the land was given to G in lieu of her maintenance which she was to hold rent-free for her life, and that she had been in possession thereof for twenty years. Further, that U had the right to resume the land, and assess it to rent on the death of G, and that all the rights and interests of U in the land were attached and sold in 1874. On second appeal it was contended that the interest of U in the land at the time of the sale of the village by auction was in the nature of a mere expectancy, and therefore could not be sold, and was not sold. Held that U gave to G the usufruct of the land for her life in lieu of her maintenance. That after the gift the interest of U in the land was of the same character and carried with it the same consequences as the reversion, which the lessor would have for land leased for life or years and analogous to the right which a mortgagor who had granted a usufructuary mortgage would have. That U had a vested right in the land which was capable of being sold, and that right passed to the auction-purchaser at the sale of 1874. Counsel for appellant cited the following cases in the course of his argument : Koraj Koonwar v. Komui Koonwar (6 W. R., C.R., 34), Ram Chunder Tanta Doss v. Dhurmo Narain Chukarbatty (15 W. R., F.B. R., 17), Tuffuzzool Husain Khan v. Raghunath Pershad (14 Moore's I. A. 41).—10 Al. 462.

The plaintiff having purchased at an execution sale the interest of the judgment-debtor in a partnership, of which the undivided father (deceased) of the judgment-debtor had been a member, now sued the other partners praying that an account be taken and that the share of the judgment-debtor be paid to him :—Held, that the execution sale was not bad in law and that the present suit was accordingly maintainable. Dwarika Mohun Das v. Luckhimoni Dasi (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 384) dissented from.—13 Madr. 447.

The mangalsutra, a neck-ornament which is worn by a Hindu married woman during the life-time of her husband, and never removed, is a part of her necessary wearing apparel, and is exempted from execution under sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882).—I.L.R., 9 Bom. 106.

The sale of arms by the Nazir of the Court, in execution of a decree, is a sale by a public servant in discharge of his duty, and is, therefore, excluded by sec. 1, cl. (b) from the operation of the Indian Arms Act (XI of 1878). It is expedient for the Court ordering such sale to give notice of the sale and of the purchaser's name and address, as contemplated by sec. 5 of that Act, to the Magistrate of the District or to the police-officer in charge of the nearest police-station.—9 Bom. 518.

Where a judgment-debtor is entitled to a debt secured by a collateral hypothecation of land, and the decree-holder attaches and sells the judgment-debtor's interest in the bond, such interest is immoveable property for the purpose of attachment and sale under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. Per TURNER, C. J.—Quære—Whether the decree-holder could not sell the debt apart from the security as moveable property.—9 Madr. 5.

The nature of an upadhikpana vritti on the river Godavari at Nasik was stated to be as follows :—“ The vritti is an hereditary priestly office, by virtue of which certain religious ceremonies are performed on the river Godavari on behalf of pilgrims who pay fees to the holders of such priestly offices for performance of such religious ceremonies at or about the time of their performance. By law and usage, a certain relationship grows up between certain pilgrims or worshippers and a particular priest, and when such relationship exists, such pilgrims or worshippers are called yajmans, or clients of the priest, whose right to offer and perform the religious ceremonies in question for such yajmans becomes exclusive against rival priests, so far that, under the Hindu law as applied and followed in this Presidency, if any such yajmans accept the religious services of another priest, they must compensate the priest, whose yajmans they are, by giving to him a reasonable fee :—Held, that such a vritti is a “right of personal service” within the meaning of clause (f) of sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and, therefore, protected from attachment.—10 Bom. 395.

Sec. 151 of the Army Act, 1881, not being affected by the provisions of sec. 266, the attachment by a Civil Court of a moiety of the monthly salary of a debtor subject to military law, not exceeding Rs. 20, is legal.—9 Madr. 170.

The doors and window-shutters of a pucca building cannot be separately attached in execution of decree, forming as they do part of an immoveable property, and having no separate existence.—11 Cal. 164.

By a deed of assignment the usufruct of certain land was given to a Hindu widow for her maintenance, the deed expressly stipulating that the same was not to be in any way alienated. A judgment-creditor of the widow caused the land to be attached in execution of a money-decree. The widow contended that the land was protected from attachment under sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Both the lower Courts disallowed the widow's contention. On appeal to the High Court, held, reversing the orders of the lower Courts, that, having regard to the proviso against alienation contained in the deed of assignment, the usufructuary interest in the land assigned to the widow was one over which she had no power of disposal, and, consequently, could not be attached and sold in execution of a money-decree against her.—10 Bom. 342.

Neither the whole corpus, nor any specific portion of the corpus, of an estate in the hands of a trustee who is a judgment-debtor is rendered liable to attachment in execution of the decree against him, because a surplus of income is in his hands for his own benefit after due performance of the trusts ; nor does such corpus, or any part of it, come, for that reason, within the meaning of sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which only authorizes the attachment of property over which the judgment-debtor has a disposing power, exerciseable for his own benefit. Where a trust had been created for specific purposes, viz., the performance of religious and other duties, and the trustee had duly appointed another trustee in his place, the latter being entitled to hold the trust-estate, held that, a decree having been made against the trustee personally, the corpus of the trust-estate could not be sold to satisfy the claim of the judgment-creditor, nor could any specific portion of the corpus of the estate be taken out of the hands of the trustee, on the ground that there was, or might be, a margin of profit coming to him personally after the performance of the trusts. Held, also, that, in a suit in which all the parties interested were not before the Court, there could be no decision as to the extent of the trusts, nor as to whether any surplus profits of the trust-estate would, or would not, after the performance of the trusts, belong to the trustee personally.—15 Cal. 329.

Upon a claim by a puisne mortgagee to redeem prior incumbrances, and in the alternative, for a decree ordering a sale of the property mortgaged, the sale was decreed, with application of the purchase-money to pay incumbrances in their due order ; and with redemption by the plaintiff of a prior mortgagee, who was to have an option to redeem. Previously to the mortgage, a fractional interest in the property (which interest was purchased by the plaintiff at a judicial sale) had been the subject of a settlement by a Mahomedan on his wife, under the condition that if he should have no child by her, his two sons by another wife should each have an estate therein. He died without other children. Held, that the two sons had taken definite interests capable of being attached, within sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code, not being mere expectancies. Held, also, that a judicial sale of property, purporting to be of all the interest of a judgment-debtor, carries with it any enlargement thereof that may have occurred after the attachment and before the sale; and that, accordingly, the above-mentioned settlor having died without a child by that wife, between the date of the attachment and the sale, the sons' augmented interests passed thereby. The plaintiff in this suit had succeeded to four, out of five, mortgages, subsequent to his own, which had been executed before a decree obtained by a mortgagee. This decree had been purchased by the first defendant, who also bought the property at the execution sale. The plaintiff had also succeeded to several mortgages executed pending the suit in which the decree was made. Held, that a distinction must be made in respect of whether the mortgages so transferred to the plaintiff had been executed before or after the bringing of the above suit. As regards the mortgages executed before it, the plaintiff not having been a party to that suit, was entitled to redeem the first defendant who was purchaser of the decree. As regards the mortgages executed after that suit was brought, the plaintiff was bound by the decree, and his interest in the mortgages, transferred pendente lite, passed to the purchaser. On the other hand, persons who have taken transfers of property subject to a mortgage cannot be bound by proceedings in a subsequent suit, between the prior mortgagee and the mortgagor, to which they have not been made parties. As regards the Court's power to regulate the interest, held, that although, in the decree for sale, the rate of interest on the debt, payable to the mortgage decree-holder, was reducible from the date of the decree from the rate stipulated, to the Court rate, an order to that effect could only be made for the benefit of the judgment-debtor, as a party to the suit. The plaintiff, seeking to redeem a mortgage prior to the suit must pay the interest at the rate agreed upon in the mortgage; there being no authority, either under sec. 10 of Act XXIII of 1861, or under the Civil Procedure Code, sec. 209, to reduce it to the Court rate.—18 Cal. 164.

Under clause (h) of sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, a moiety of the salary of a public officer drawing half-pay (exceeding Rs. 20 per mensem) on sick leave is liable to attachment.—6 Madr. 179.

A debt secured by mortgage of immoveable property cannot be sold in execution of a decree under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to moveable property.—9 Cal. 511.

Although it is probable that the enactments of section 266, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, were not meant to cover pensions payable by a foreign State when remitted for payment to their pensioner in India, they certainly include all pensions of a political nature payable directly by the Government of India. A pension guaranteed payable by the latter by a treaty obligation contracted with another sovereign power is in the strictest sense a political pension. An allowance, payable by the Government of India under an arrangement made between the King of Oudh and the Governor-General in 1842 for the benefit of members of the King's family and household, and their respective heirs in perpetuity, and payable to one of such heirs, who has inherited it, as his share in the interest in the Oudh loan of 1842, is a political pension within the meaning of section 266, sub-section (g), Civil Procedure Code, 1882. The arrangement of 1842 cannot be treated as merely a provision out of the King's private estate for the maintenance of members of his family, there having been in a State like that of Oudh no distinction between State property and private property vested in the sovereign.—18 Cal. 216.

Act X of 1877, sec. 266, proviso c, does not prohibit the sale (in execution of decree) of property specifically mortgaged, albeit the property be materials of a house belonging to or occupied by an agriculturist.—4 Bom. 25.

A decree being attached as directed by section 273 of the Civil Procedure Code, its adjustment subsequent to such attachment cannot be recognized by the Court.—16 Bom. 522.

Held that secs. 266 and 295 must be read together, and that an ordinary judgment-creditor is not entitled, under sec. 295, to a rateable proportion of the assets realized by the sale of such house or building under a decree obtained by another creditor for rent due to him in respect of the said house or building.—4 Bom. 429.

The right to sue for mesne-profits is a "right to sue for damages" within the meaning of sec. 266, cl. (e) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, therefore, cannot be sold in execution of decree. Where, therefore, the plaintiff purchased the right to sue for mesne-profits at a sale in execution of a decree, held that a suit by him to enforce the right was not maintainable.—9 Cal. 695; 12 C. L. R., 440.

Persons who agree to spin cotton belonging to a spinning and weaving company, and to receive a certain amount of money for a certain quantity of cotton spun by them, are labourers within the meaning of sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), and therefore their remuneration is wages, which, under clause j of the section, cannot be attached in execution of a decree.—5 Bom. 132.

The right or interest which the vendor of immoveable property has in the purchase-money, where it has been agreed that the same shall be paid on the execution of the conveyance, is not, so long as the conveyance has not been executed, a debt, but a merely possible right or interest, and as such, under sec. 266 of Act X. of 1877, is not liable to attachment and sale in the execution of a decree. The person who purchases such a right or interest at a sale in the execution of a decree takes nothing by his purchase.—3 Al. 12.

Debts due to a British subject by the Gaikwar Government, or by a subject of that Government or of a State in the Province of Kathiawar, are not debts which, under sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), are liable to attachment in execution of a decree. Claims over which no Court in British India has jurisdiction are not debts liable to be attached under sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). The mere circumstance that the garnishee is, at the time of the application for attachment, beyond the limits of British India, would not of itself render the debts not liable to be attached.—5 Bom. 249.

The expression, "materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by, agriculturists," used in sec. 266, cl. c, of the Code of Civil Procedure, is intended to exempt from attachment and sale the house dwelt in by an agriculturist as such, and the farm-buildings appended to such dwelling. The exemption does not extend to other houses not in the physical occupation of an agriculturist owner as a dwelling appropriate or convenient for his calling. The exemption extends, after the death of an agriculturist debtor, to his representative who occupies the house in good faith as an agriculturist, and who does not take it up merely with the view of defrauding his creditor.—7 Bom. 530.

A heritable right to receive a certain monthly allowance originally assigned in lien of a share of landed property is not a mere right to maintenance on anything else exempted by the proviso to sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code, and is saleable in execution of a decree.—10 Cal. 521.

Before property of a judgment-debtor can be exempted from execution as falling under the head of the property described in sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is necessary that the Court should first express its opinion that such property is necessary to enable the execution-debtor to earn his livelihood, and the Court which must decide this point is the Court which issues the execution. Sec. 14 (a), part II, chapter V. of the general rules and Circular Orders of the High Court, commented on.—10 Cal. 29.

The bar in sec. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code to the attachment of gratuities allowed by Government to its ex-servants, military and civil, is not limited to such gratuities as are allowed to "pensioners," but applies to gratuity granted in consideration of past services.—6 Al. 173.

K, a servant in the employment of the East India Railway Company, was recommended, by the Traffic Manager, a bonus in consideration of long and good services. This recommendation was sanctioned, and the amount of the bonus was received by the District Paymaster. Before payment to K, the money was attached in execution of a decree obtained against him by J. Held that, inasmuch as the bestowal of the money was a gift of moveable property of date subsequent to the 1st July 1882, and was not evidenced by a registered instrument, it could only be effected by actual delivery; that, as there had been no such delivery as completed the transfer (sec. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, and sec. 90 of the Contract Act), the money was not at K's disposal, and he could not have enforced payment; and that the money was therefore not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against him.—6 Al. 634.

See I. L. R., 4 Bom. 163, noted under sec. 1; 14 Cal. 241, noted under sec. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act.

267. The Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of the decree-holder, summon any person whom it thinks necessary and examine him in respect to any property liable to be seized in satisfaction of the decree, and may require the person summoned to produce any document in his possession or power relating to such property, and, before issuing the summons of its own motion, shall declare the person on whose behalf the summons is so issued.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When a debt alleged to be due by a third party to a judgment-debtor has been attached by the judgment-creditor, the Court may, under sec. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), make an order upon the garnishee for the payment of such debt to the judgment-creditor in case the former admits it to be due, or for so much as he admits to be due, to the judgment-debtor. Where however, the garnishee denies the debt, there is no other course open to the judgment-creditor than to have it sold, or to have a receiver appointed under sec. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—I. L. R., 11 Bom. 448.

268. In the case of (a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument, (b) a share in the capital of any public Company or Corporation, (c) other moveable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in, or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

Attachment of debt, share, and other property not in possession of judgment-debtor.

(a) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court ;

(b) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing, from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon ;

(c) in the case of the other moveable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

A copy of such order shall be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the Court-house, and another copy of the same shall be sent, in the case of the debt, to the debtor ; in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the Company or Corporation ; and in the case of the other moveable property except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same.

A debtor prohibited under clause (a) of this section may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

In the case of the salary of a public officer or the servant of a Railway Company, the attachment shall be made by a written order, requiring the officer whose duty it is to disburse the salary to withhold, every month, such portion as the Court may direct, until the further orders of the Court.

A copy of every such order shall be fixed up in a conspicuous part of the Court-house, and shall be served on the officer so required.

Every such officer may, from time to time, pay into Court any portion so withheld, and such payment shall discharge the Government or the Railway Company, as the case may be, as effectually as payment to the judgment-debtor.

S got a decree against V for money, and having attached a bond hypothecating certain land as security for a debt, executed in favour of V, under sec. 269 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, purchased the same. S then sued on the bond. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the attachment had not been made by obtaining an order under sec. 268. S then attached the bond as immoveable property under sec. 274, and purchased it and the mortgagee's interest therein. S again sued to recover the amount due by sale of the land hypothecated. The defendants contended that S had no title, because there had been no attachment under sec. 268. Held that the objection was bad, and that S was entitled to the relief claimed.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 403.

The interest of the obligee in a bond hypothecating certain land as security for a debt having been attached under sec. 274 of the Code of Civil Procedure and sold, a suit was brought by the purchaser upon the said bond. It was objected that the suit was not maintainable, because the bond had not been also attached as a debt under sec. 268 :—Held that the fact of the bond not having been attached as a debt under sec. 268 did not affect the right of the purchaser to realize the amount due under it.—10 Madr. 169.

A decree-holder by a prohibitory order made under sec. 268 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code attached a debt due to his judgment-debtor. The debt was not paid into Court :—Held, that the Court cannot, under sec. 268 of the Code of Civil Procedure, call on a person subject to a prohibitory order to pay or show cause why he should not pay his debt into Court. The Court is bound to satisfy itself that a debt is due, the debt must then be sold and delivery made under secs. 284 and 301 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—10 Madr. 194.

Where money deposited with a railway company by one of its servants as a guarantee for the due performance of his duties was attached by a judgment-creditor of such servant under sec. 268 :—Held, that the creditor was not entitled to have his decree satisfied out of the deposit, but was entitled to a stop order under cl. (c) of sec. 268, and also to payment of the interest (if any) due by the company on such deposit to the servant.—9 Madr. 203.

In execution of a decree obtained by them against J and M, the plaintiffs attached a decree obtained by J and M against D, and on the allegation that J and M, in order to avoid the consequence of this attachment, executed a benami conveyance of their interest under the attached decree to B and P, and afterwards with the same object took in adjustment and satisfaction of that decree two bonds in favour of R and I respectively, by which immoveable property was pledged as collateral security, the plaintiffs attached these two bonds by prohibitory order, under sec. 268, and purchased them at the sale in execution of their decree. In a suit on the bonds against D as the principal defendant with J, M, B, P, R, and I joined as parties, held that the plaintiffs were entitled to enforce the lien created by the bonds against the immoveable property specified in them, notwithstanding that no attachment had been made in accordance with the provisions of sec. 274 of the Code ; a debt secured by a mortgage-lien on immoveable property not being " immoveable property " within the meaning of that section.—12 Cal. 546.

Under the provisions of sec. 268 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), bonds cannot be sold till the end of the six months from the date of attachment. A Court of Small Causes cannot appoint a receiver. Bonds, therefore, on which recovery will be time-barred before the date on which a sale can legally be made, cannot be made available for satisfaction of the judgment-creditor's debt.—2 Bom. 558.

A decree-holder, by a prohibitory order issued under Act X of 1877, sec. 268, attached a debt due to his judgment-debtor. The person served with the order applied, under sec. 278, to have the attachment removed. Held that the application could not be entertained under sec. 278, that section having no application to the case; but that, before issuing a proclamation of sale, in execution of a decree, of the debt so attached, it is the duty of the Court, under sec. 287, to ascertain all the Court considers it material for the intending purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property proclaimed for sale. If the property, of which sale is sought, is a debt, and the Court receives notice from the alleged debtor that no debt exists, the Court should satisfy itself as to the existence, or otherwise, of the debt, and, if it comes to the conclusion that no debt exists, should abstain from proceeding to sale.—4 Bom. 323.

Sec. 268, clause (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, does not mean that, while a debt is under attachment, the person to whom the debt was originally owing, should be barred from bringing a suit in respect of it. What it prohibits is the recovery of the debt, and the payment of it by the debtor to the creditor. Semble—An order of attachment under sec. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code is not an injunction or order staying a suit within the meaning of sec. 15 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877.—13 Al. 76.

An attachment before judgment under sec. 485 read with sec. 486 and sec. 268 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, of a debt secured by a bond; or an injunction obtained by a third party and restraining the attaching creditor from subsequently bringing the bond to sale in execution of his decree: is not an injunction or order staying the institution of a suit upon the bond by the obligee, within the meaning of sec. 15 of the Limitation Act. Shib Singh v. Sita Ram followed.—14 Al. 162.

See 1 B. L. R., S. N., 15, 10 W. R., 149, 2 B. L. R., 109 and 10 W. R., 447, noted under sec. 266; I. L. R., 6 Al. 243, noted under sec. 223; 3 Al. 12, noted under sec. 266; 11 Bom. 448, noted under sec. 267; 16 Bom. 91, noted under sec. 295.

269. If the property be moveable property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, other than the property mentioned in the first proviso to section 266, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Attachment of moveable property in possession of judgment-debtor.

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody will exceed its value, the proper officer may sell it at once.

Proviso.

The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules for the maintenance and custody, while under attachment, of live-stock and other moveable property, and the officer attaching property under this section shall, notwithstanding the provisions of the former part of this section, set in accordance with such rules.

Power to make rules for maintenance of attached live-stock.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under sec. 233, Act VIII of 1859, a nazir, authorized to execute a warrant by attachment of moveable property, has power to remove locks put by the judgment-debtor on the doors of godowns, or other places where his property is stored, and put his own locks thereon, for the purpose of attachment and safe custody of the property.—5 B. L. R., App. 27; 13 W. R., 339.

See I. L. R., 11 Madr. 403, noted under sec. 268.

270. If the property be a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody, of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court, and held subject to the further orders of the Court.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

271. No person executing any process under this Code, directing or authorizing seizure of moveable property, shall enter any dwelling-house after sunset and before sunrise, or shall break open any outer door of a dwelling-house. But, when any such person has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may unfasten and open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe any such property to be :

Provided that, if the room be in the actual occupancy of a woman who, according to the customs of the country, does not appear in public, the person executing the process shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw; and, after allowing a reasonable time for such woman to withdraw, and giving her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, he may enter such room for the purpose of seizing the property, using at the same time every precaution, consistent with these provisions, to prevent its clandestine removal.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

It is not necessary that a special order of Court should be made, empowering an officer authorized to arrest a parda-nashin lady to enter the zanana of the house in which she resides. Under sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code, if the officer is able to enter the house, he may break into any room in the house, including the zanana, in order to effect the arrest.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 19.

A bailiff or nazir has authority to break open the door of a shop in order to execute a writ of attachment, the previously existing law on the subject not being altered by Act X of 1877, sec. 271.—3 Bom. 89.

See 5 B. L. R., App. 27 & 15 W. R., 339, noted under sec. 289.

272. If the property be deposited in, or be in the custody of, any Court or public officer, the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice issues :

Attachment of property deposited in Court or with Government officer.

Provided that, if such property is deposited in, or is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment, attachment, or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court.

Proviso.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An attachment was placed under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 272, on letters in the post office addressed to certain judgment-debtors. The day before the attachment the senders of the letters had applied to have the letters returned to them :—Held, that the postmaster held the letters in trust for, or on behalf of the judgment-debtors, and they were accordingly liable to attachment on the application of the decree-holder.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 242.

A suit will lie to set aside an order such as is contemplated by the proviso to sec. 272 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that is, an order determining any question of title or priority as between the decree-holder and any other person in respect of money in deposit in a Court of justice. The mode of investigation and the nature of the order to be made under sec. 272, and the extent to which such an order is final, are provided for in secs. 278—283 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—19 Cal. 286.

Held that attachment under sec. 237 of Act VIII of 1859 was not applicable to a right to receive money for ever ; that such an attachment is only good so far as it relates to any specific amount, which may be set forth in the request to the officer in whose hands the monies are, as being then payable or likely to become payable.—3 Cal. 414.

In execution of a decree of a Munsif's Court, the plaintiff attached certain money, the proceeds of decrees which her judgment-debtor had obtained against third parties, then lying in a Small Cause Court to her credit, and subsequently obtained an order from the Munsif directing the same to be paid to her in satisfaction of her decree, which order was duly communicated to the Small Cause Court Judge. Subsequently, the defendant, who held another decree against the same judgment-debtor, attached the same sale-proceeds. The Small Cause Court Judge then proceeded, under sec. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, to inquire whether the plaintiff was entitled to any priority over the second attaching creditor, and, having decided that question in the negative, divided the sale-proceeds rateably between them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff, under the above circumstances, to recover from the defendant the portion of the sale-proceeds so paid to him, held that sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not applied to the Small Cause Court Judge to execute her decree, and it had never been transferred to the Court for execution; and that the provision in sec. 272 is merely intended to mean that any question of title or priority to be determined by the Court in which or in whose custody the property is, and not by the Court which made the order of attachment. Held also that, previous to the order by the Munsif directing the payment to be made to the plaintiff, the Small Cause Court Judge would have had jurisdiction to deal with the question he had tried; but, as that order was made prior to the attachment by the defendant, the judgment-debtor had no interest in the money which could be so attached, the effect of that order being to vest the property in the money in the plaintiff, and to take it out of the disposal of the Small Cause Court Judge, and consequently the order for distribution was wrong, and the plaintiff was entitled to the decree she sought. Quære.—Whether an order made by a Court under sec. 272 was intended by the Legislature to be a final order? —7 Cal. 553.

273. If the property be a decree for money passed by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, the attachment shall be made by an order of the Court directing the proceeds of the former decree to be applied in satisfaction of the latter decree.

If the property be a decree for money passed by any other Court, the attachment shall be made by a notice in writing to such Court under the hand of the Judge of the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, requesting the former Court to stay the execution of its decree until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent. The Court receiving such notice shall stay execution accordingly, unless and until

(a) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or

(b) the holder of the decree sought to be executed applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree.

On receiving such application, the Court shall proceed to execute the decree, and apply the proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed.

In the case of all other decrees the attachment shall be made by a notice in writing, under the hand of the Judge of the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached, prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way; and, when such decree has been passed by any other Court, also by sending to such Court a like notice in writing to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent. Every Court receiving such notice shall give effect to the same until it is so cancelled.

The holder of any decree attached under this section shall be bound to give the Court executing the same such information and aid as may reasonably be required.

Decree-holders to give information.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts, (so far as it relates to decrees for moveable property).

Sec. 273 having expressly provided a mode for the attachment of decrees, the procedure laid down in sec. 274 relating to immoveable property has no application to the attachment of a decree for redemption.—I. L. R., 10 Bom. 444.

A decree being attached as directed by section 273 of the Civil Procedure Code, its adjustment subsequent to such attachment cannot be recognized by the Court.—16 Bom. 522.

A decree for money obtained by a judgment-debtor is not a debt, which, by virtue of sec. 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, can be attached and sold. Where a decree-holder desires to render a decree obtained by his judgment-debtor available for the satisfaction of his own decree, the procedure laid down by sec. 273 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be followed.—6 Madr. 418.

Held that Act X of 1877 does not contemplate the sale of a decree for money as the result of its attachment in the execution of a decree, and the attachment of a decree for money in the mode ordained in sec. 273 cannot lead to its sale. Held also that the last clause but one of sec. 273 applies to other than money-decrees. Where two decrees for money, although they were not passed by the same Court, were being executed by the same Court, held that the provisions of the first clause of sec. 273 of Act X of 1877 were applicable on principal.—2 Al. 290.

274. If the property be immoveable, the attachment shall be made by an order prohibiting the judgment-debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from receiving the same from him by purchase, gift, or otherwise.

Attachment or immoveable property.

The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be fixed up in a conspicuous part of the property and of the Court-house.

When the property is land paying revenue to Government, a copy of the order shall also be fixed up in the office of the Collector of the District in which land is situate.

Notes.

In execution of a money-decree, an order was issued under sec. 274 for the attachment of property which was the joint ancestral estate of the judgment-debtor and his father. A copy of this order was not fixed up in the office of the Collector of the district in which the land was situate, as required by sec. 274. The sale was ordered and a day fixed for sale, but in consequence of postponements made at the judgment-debtor's request, no sale took place. In the meantime the judgment-debtor died, and the decree-holder applied for execution against the father as representative of the judgment-debtor, whose interest had survived to him:—Held that the decree-holder had, by the proceedings taken in execution during the son's lifetime, obtained rights over his interest which could not be defeated by his death before sale. Suraj Bansi Koer v. Shoe Persad Singh (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 148; L. R., 6 Ind. App. 108) followed:—Held also that, though the defect in the manner in which the attachment was made might render the attachment ineffectual for the purpose of voiding alienations made, the attachment was effectual against the judgment-debtor, and the defect did not afford a ground for declaring the execution-proceedings ineffectual.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 731.

Held that the fact of a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree having taken place before thirty days from the proclamation of sale being made on the property had expired was not a material irregularity in the publication of the sale. Mohunt Megh Lall Pooree v. Shib Pershad Madi (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 34) dissented from.—4 Al. 300.

In execution of a simple money decree against the holders of a muafi interest in a certain village, who did not possess any zemindari interest in that village, an attachment was obtained by the decree-holder in 1884 of "an eight biswas zemindari share of mauza D," and under that attachment a sale took place in January 1886. Meanwhile in December 1885, a decree for pre-emption in respect of a sale by the judgment-debtors in 1881 of their muafi interests in the village, was decreed in favour of persons who were not parties to the litigation in which the attachment of 1884 was effected. The plaintiffs (who were in possession) sued for a declaration of their right to the muafi interests as against the auction-purchaser under the sale of January 1886. Held that the attachment in 1884 was not a good attachment of the muafi interests of the judgment-debtors, and the auction purchaser could not be held to have purchased those muafi interests, and the title of the plaintiffs under their pre-emptive decree of December 1885 must prevail.—13 Al. 119.

A suit on a mortgage foreclosed under Reg. XVII of 1806, sec. 8, comprising property attached before the date of the mortgage under sec. 81 and the following sections of Act VIII of 1859, was brought against the purchaser of the attached property, which had been sold under the decree obtained by the attaching creditor. The defence was, that the mortgage, falling within the provisions of sec. 240 of the Act, was void as against the attaching creditor and those claiming under him. For the mortgagee it was contended that the attachment could not prevail, it not having been proved affirmatively that the requirements of sec. 239, relating to the intimation of the attachment, had been complied with. Held that this objection to the validity of the attachment could not be raised for the first time on this appeal, even if it was not rather for the mortgagee, seeking to deprive the attaching creditor of his possession, to prove the non-observance of the formalities in question. Semble.—A re-attachment of property after decree does not imply an abandonment of an attachment obtained before decree.—6 Cal. 129.

The defendant obtained a decree against D, father of the plaintiffs, for satisfaction of his debt by the sale of a moiety of a village mortgaged to him by D. In execution of it he attached the mortgaged property, the attachment being made, under Act X of 1877, sec. 274, by an order prohibiting D from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from receiving it from him by purchase, gift, or otherwise. The plaintiffs thereupon applied for the removal of the attachment, but their application was rejected. They then sued for a declaration of their right to two-thirds of the property. The District Judge, who tried the suit, rejected it on the ground that it, was barred by Act I of 1877, sec. 42, because the plaintiffs might have sought further relief than a mere declaration of title, and omitted to do so. He was of opinion that the attachment constituted a dispossession, and that the plaintiffs might have asked to be replaced in possession, or, at any rate, for the removal of the attachment. Held by the High Court on appeal that the plaint was not open to objection, on the ground that it only asked for a declaratory decree, without any consequential relief; that the prohibitory order to D did not constitute a dispossession of D, and still less of the plaintiffs; and that they could not have properly asked for removal of the attachment by a cancellation of the prohibitory order to D so long as they admitted that D had an interest in the attached property; and also that the plaintiffs could not have properly asked for any consequential relief in their suit, but that, when they instituted it, they were entitled, and, indeed, bound to ask for a declaration of their right, if only to prevent a purchaser at the sale, under the defendant's decree against D, from afterwards alleging that he had purchased without notice of the plaintiff's claim.—4 Bom. 529.

The proclamation of sale required by sec. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, to be made at some place adjacent to the property to be sold, and the fixing up of a copy of the order in a conspicuous part of the property, are acts which must precede the posting of the notices in the Court-house as required by sec. 290. Where the sale-proceeds of a portion of several parcels of property are sufficient to satisfy the decree of a judgment-creditor who has attached the property, another judgment-creditor, although he has not attached the property, is still entitled to have the remainder of the property sold to satisfy his decree under the provisions of sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code. Three mauzas were attached in execution of decrees obtained by A and B. Prior to the sale, C, who had also obtained a decree against the owner of the land, applied for leave to execute his decree, in order that he might participate in the sale-proceeds under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code. Upon the day fixed for the sale, the Deputy Commissioner was unable, through illness, to attend; and he postponed the sale for three days. Two of the mauzas were sold, and realized more than enough to satisfy the decrees of A and B. The third was then sold in satisfaction of C's decree. Upon an application by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity, it appeared that notice of the sale had been posted in the Court-house more than thirty days before the date fixed for the sale, but had only been published on the properties to be sold five days before that date; that notice of the existence of a mortgage on the properties, but no further particulars, was given, and the mortgagee was allowed to purchase; and the Deputy Commissioner had accepted the reports of the Nazir and Court-peon as to the proclamation of sale, and had refused to allow the judgment-debtor to give evidence of its insufficiency. Held that the proclamation of sale on the property having taken place only five days prior to the date of sale, and the particulars of the mortgage not having been given, there had been such material irregularities in the publication as to entitle the judgment-debtor to give evidence of them and the other allegations made by him, in order to show that he had suffered material injury by reason of such irregularities. Held also that the Deputy Commissioner was not entitled to proceed upon the reports of the Nazir and Court-peon, but was bound to hear the evidence tendered by the judgment-debtor, though he was justified, under sec. 291, in postponing the sale as he had done. Held, further, that the third judgment creditor, who had not attached the property, was still entitled to have the sale proceeded, with and his decree satisfied under the provisions of sec. 295.—7 Cal. 34.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 466, noted under sec. 278; 3 Al. 698, noted under sec. 237; 10 Madr. 169 & 11 Madr. 403, noted under sec. 268; 17 Cal. 769. noted under sec. 244.

275. If the amount decreed with costs, and all charges and expenses resulting from the attachment of any property, be paid into Court, or if satisfaction of the decree be otherwise made through the Court, or if the decree is set aside or reversed, an order shall be issued, on the application of any person interested in the property, for the withdrawal of the attachment.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

276. When an attachment has been made by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in manner aforesaid, any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, mortgage, or otherwise, and any payment of the debt or dividend, or a delivery of the share, to the judgment-debtor during the continuance of the attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Held (MARKBY, J., dissenting) that a private bona fide alienation for value of property attached under Act VIII of 1859, made during the continuance of the attachment, is, by sec. 240 of that Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, and not as against the whole world.—Anandal Das v. Radhamohan Shawa, 2 B. L. R., (F. B.) 49; 11 W. R., (O. C.) 1. Same case affirmed in the Privy Council.—10 B. L. R., 134; 17 W. R., 313; 14 Moore's I. A., 543; 12 B. L. R., 413 note; 14 W. R., 25; 13 W. R., 134.

A obtained a decree against B for a sum payable by instalments. B made default in payment of an instalment, so A attached certain immoveable property belonging to B. While under attachment, B sold the property to C, and out of the proceeds paid into Court the full amount of the debt then due, and for which the property had been attached. A took out the money, but applied for and obtained an order from the Munsif that the property should remain under attachment, in order to satisfy any future sum which should fall due under the decree, and in payment of which B should make default. B failed to pay a further instalment when due, and A obtained an order for sale of the property. A himself became the purchaser, and was put in possession by the Court, notwithstanding the claim of C, who had been in possession ever since his purchase. In a suit by C to recover possession, held the Court had no power to make the order continuing the attachment, the right of attachment being only for sums actually due, and the whole amount for which execution issued being satisfied, out of the proceeds, the alienation of the property to C was not void as against A.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 20; 12 W. R., 457.

In execution of a decree, A, the judgment-creditor, obtained an order for the attachment of certain property of B, the judgment-debtor, but it was not executed as required by Act VIII of 1859. The property was, however, advertised for sale, and A obtained an order staying the sale, on a petition alleging that A had agreed to give him time on condition that the attachment should remain good, and declaring that he (B) would not alienate the property until the whole of the decree was satisfied. Subsequently B mortgaged a portion of this property to C. A signed his decree to D, upon whose application the property was attached and sold, and E became the purchaser. C having taken steps to foreclose the mortgage E, to prevent such foreclosure, paid the amount into Court. Held that E could not maintain a suit against C to recover the amount so paid by him. The mortgage by B was not an alienation null and void under sec. 240, Act VIII of 1859. B's petition did not create a charge upon the property in favour of A.—4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 24; S. C. 12 W. R., 491.

The purchaser of the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in certain immoveable property at an auction-sale, which took place at the instance of a second attaching creditor, was held to take the property subject to an incumbrance created by the judgment-debtor pending the first, but prior to the second, attachment, although the first attaching creditor was first paid out of the proceeds of the sale. Whether the sale ought not to have been under the first attachment, as against which the incumbrance would have been void?—9 B. L. R., 180; 18 W. R., 279.

Alienation of property while under attachment is null and void; and the removal of the attachment will not render such alienation valid.—12 B. L. R., 414 note; 15 W. R., 222.

The plaintiff sued to recover certain land which had been hypothecated to him in 1843, and subsequently sold to him in 1868, while under attachment in execution of a decree in a suit brought by the plaintiff to establish his hypothecatory claim. The third defendant claimed under a mortgage prior in date to the hypothecation to the plaintiff, and under a sale, prior in date to the sale to the plaintiff, made to the third defendant whilst the land was under attachment in execution of the decree to the plaintiff. Held that the sale to the third defendant, which was made, not under any agreement with the plaintiff, for the satisfaction of the decree through the Court, was invalid by reason of sec. 240 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that the alienation to the plaintiff, the decree-holder, during the attachment to satisfy the decree, which was duly sanctioned by the approval of the Court which issued the process of attachment, was valid.—6 M. H. C. R., 65.

A private alienation of property, while under attachment, is null and void only as regards the attaching creditor and those who claim under or through the attachment. Anund Lal Doss v. Jullodhur Shaw (17 Cal. W. R., Civ. Rul., 313) followed. The fact that a puisne attaching creditor mentioned in his application for attachment and sale of certain property of his judgment-debtor that the same property had already been attached at the instance of another execution-creditor does not render the puisne creditor a claimant through the first attaching creditor. A puisne attaching creditor cannot be regarded as claiming through a prior attaching creditor, though the assignee of an attaching creditor's rights, or the next-of-kin of a deceased attaching creditor, may be said to claim under or through him. Act VIII of 1859, sec. 240, is for the benefit of an attaching creditor (subsequent to, and in defiance of, whose attachment, the private alienation, thereby declared void, has been made), and of those claiming under or through him, and not for the benefit of puisne attaching creditors, whose attachment is laid later than such private alienation. Secs. 270 and 271 of the Civil Procedure Code apply only to cases where there has been a sale under the first attachment.—11 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 159.

An alienation of property attached in execution of a decree, made for the bona fide purpose of satisfying the decree in respect of which the attachment has been made, and where the consideration for the alienation is applied to, and is found to be sufficient for, satisfaction of the decree, is not invalid under sec. 240 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 60; Ed. 1873, 214.

A judgment-debtor satisfied a decree under which attachment of his property had been made. He reported the satisfaction to the Court, and on the following day he executed a mortgage of his property. The day after the execution of the mortgage, the attachment was removed by the Court. Held that the mortgage, if bona fide, was not null and void under sec. 240 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 71; Ed. 1873, 125.

The Official Assignee of the Insolvent Court is entitled, under the vesting order, to possession of the insolvent's estate, even when that estate has been attached in execution of a decree, and an order directing the sale of it has been passed. But if a sale has taken place before the vesting order, the property in the subject of the attachment has passed from the judgment-debtor to the auction-purchaser, and the proceeds of the sale are primarily charged with the satisfaction of the decree or decrees in execution of which the sale has been made. The expression "private alienation" in sec. 240 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not refer to an alienation effected by a vesting order of the Insolvent Court under sec. 7 of the Indian Insolvent Act; such an alienation is rather an alienation by operation of law than one by the judgment-debtor. Semble, that sec. 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure was introduced, not for the purpose of restraining the ordinary effect of attachment, but for the purpose of preventing the same view being taken of attachments before judgment as had been taken by the Indian Courts of the writ or sequestration. When attachment of property has preceded decree, no fresh attachment is necessary subsequent to decree.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., Pt. 6, p. 81; Ed. 1873, 172.

Although, under the provisions of sec. 240 of Act VIII of 1859, a private alienation by sale of property after attachment can be impugned by the holder of the decree in execution of which it was attached, if obstructive of the execution, yet such alienation cannot be impugned by the holder of the decree, under those provisions, because it obstructs the execution of another decree obtained by him subsequently to the date of alienation.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 217.

While certain immoveable property was under attachment, the judgment-debtor mortgaged it for value to the Mussoorie Savings' Bank, with the knowledge of the attaching creditor, the Delhi Bank, which acquiesced in, and benefited by, the mortgage. The property was subsequently released from attachment, but was again attached, and was brought to sale in execution of the decree held by the Delhi Bank, and purchased by the defendants. The Mussoorie Savings' Bank sued the auction-purchasers, claiming the right to bring the property to sale on the ground of its being under mortgage to the Bank prior to its purchase by the defendants. It was held that, under the circumstances, the defendants must take the consequences of having purchased the property without having satisfied themselves as to its condition. Had it not been for the conduct of the Dehli Bank, however, the rule that a private bona fide alienation for value of property attached under Act VIII of 1859 is, by virtue of sec. 240 of the Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, would have saved the defendants, and it would have done so notwithstanding that the sale took place in pursuance of a second attachment.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 296.

Any alienation of property after attachment is illegal under sec. 240, Act VIII of 1859.—7 W. R., 511 ; 9 W. R., 167 ; 9 W. R., 307.

Held by LOCH and E. JACKSON, JJ., that a mortgage of any kind made after attachment is such an alienation as is contemplated by sec. 240, Act VIII of 1859, and is null and void.—9 W. R., 544.

Before an attachment can be relied on under sec. 240, Code of Civil Procedure, for the purpose of invalidating any subsequent alienation, it must be shown to have been duly made by a written order issued and published, viz., the prohibitory notice prescribed by law.—13 W. R., 136.

Where landed property is attached in execution of a decree, the party attaching is bound by a lease obtained for it prior to his attachment.—15 W. R., 75.

A judgment-debtor, whose property had been attached in execution of a money-decree, sold the property, and out of the price paid into Court the amount of the decree, and prayed that the attachment might be removed. While the attachment was subsisting, and prior to the sale, the holders of other money-decrees against the same judgment-debtor preferred applications, purporting to be made under sec. 295 and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditors. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bona fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration :—Held that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in manner provided by sec. 274, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by sec. 276 against private alienations of property under attachment ; that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made ; that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid ; and that execution of the decrees could not take place. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That sec. 276 being a restriction of private rights of alienation, should be strictly construed ; that before property can be subjected to such restriction, there must be a perfected attachment ; that the orders passed under sec. 295 did not amount to such attachment ; and that, even assuming them to amount to such attachment, they not having been duly intimated and notified could not make the prohibition of sec. 276 applicable to the case. Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit (I. L. R., 5 Al. 86), Anand Lall Dass v. Jallothur Shaw (14 Moore's I. A. 543), Rameswar Singh v. Ramtanu Ghose (4 B. L. R., (A. C.) 24), Indro Chunder Baboo v. Dunlop (10 W. R., 264), Gobind Singh v. Zalim Singh (I. L. R., 6 Al. 33), and Gumani v. Hardwar Pandey (I. L. R., 3 Al. 698), referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—While sec. 295 of the Code gives a special right to judgment-creditors as distinguished from simple creditors, it is an essential condition precedent to the exercise of that right that there should be a sale in execution, and that its result should appear in assets realized by the sale, and therefore, until the sale takes place, no such right can be enforced. Bishen Chunder Surma Chowdhry v. Mun Mohinee Dabee (8 W. R., 501), referred to.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 702.

The interest of a tenant in certain land having been attached by his creditor in execution of a decree for money, the landlord attached the same land for arrears of rent, brought it to sale, and purchased it under the provisions of the Rent Recovery Act. The creditor subsequently purchased the interest of the tenant, which was sold in execution of his decree. In a suit by the landlord to have the sale to the creditor declared invalid, held that the landlord's purchase was subject to the creditor's attachment.—8 Madr. 573.

An attaching creditor has not, as such, any right to redeem a mortgage subsisting prior to his attachment.—6 Cal. 663.

A renewal of mortgage already existing on the property prior to attachment, which does not enhance the charge, is not an alienation within the meaning of sec. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—4 Madr. 417.

Where, certain immovable property having been attached, the execution-case was subsequently struck off the file, and the judgment-debtor applied again for attachment of the same property, held, looking to the particular circumstances of the case, that a private alienation of the property, after the date of such application, but before attachment, was not void under the provisions of sec. 240 of Act VIII of 1859. The principle of the High Court's decision in Ahmed Hossain Khan v. Muhammad Azeem Khan (H. C. R., N.-W. P., 1869, p. 51) followed.—1 Al. 616.

By agreement between L and Q, the parties to a suit, the matters in difference between them were referred to arbitration. An award was made directing that L should transfer certain property to Q by way of sale. Between the day the award was made and the day a decree was made in accordance with the award such property was attached in execution of a decree against L. After the attachment, L, in compliance with the decree made in accordance with the award, executed a conveyance of such property to Q. Held by the Full Bench (affirming the decision of STRAIGHT, J., and reversing that of SPANKIE, J.) that such conveyance was not a "private alienation" in the sense of sec. 276 of Act X of 1877, and was therefore not void under that section as against a claim enforceable under such attachment.—4 Al. 219.

Certain land was attached in the execution of a decree in the manner required by sec. 235 of Act VIII of 1859, but a copy of the order of attachment was not, as required by sec. 239 of that Act, fixed up in a conspicuous part, or in any part at all, of the Court-house of the Court executing the decree; nor was it sent to, or fixed up in, the office of the Collector of the District in which the land was situated. Subsequently to the attachment of the land, the judgment-debtor privately alienated it by sale. Held that, as the attachment had not been made known as prescribed by law, the provisions of sec. 240 of Act VIII of 1859 did not apply, and the sale was not null and void. Indarchander v. Agra and Masterman's Bank (10 W. R., 264; 1 B. L. R., S. N., 20) followed.—2 Al. 58.

The title obtained by the purchaser on a private sale of property in satisfaction of a decree differs from that acquired upon a sale in execution. Under a private sale, the purchaser derives title through the vendor, and cannot acquire a title better than his. Under an execution-sale, the purchaser, notwithstanding that he acquires merely the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, acquires that title, by operation of law, adversely to the judgment-debtor, and freed from all alienations and incumbrances effected by him after the attachment of the property sold. In 1858, the respondent obtained a decree against B. In 1863, in satisfaction thereof, he caused to be attached a decree for mesne-profits made in favour of B against the appellants in 1860. In May 1865, the respondent obtained an order for the sale thereof; but, instead of proceeding to execution-sale, he purchased, in 1866, the whole of the mesne-profits due under the decree of 1860, by private sale from B. Meanwhile, in September 1865, an order of Court had been made, between B and the appellants, on their consent (but without the respondent being a party to it), whereby the decree for mesne-profits was set off, pro tanto, against a prior decree for a larger amount, which the appellants had obtained against B. Held that the sale of 1866, having been a private one, and not in process of execution, the respondent only obtained such title as B had in the decree of 1860—viz., a title subject to the effect of the order of September 1865.—7 Cal. 107; L. R., 8 I. A. 65; 10 C. L. R., 281.

A private alienation of property under attachment is void under sec. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code, "as against all claims enforceable under the attachment" only. Held, therefore, where property attached in execution of a decree was alienated, and was, after such alienation, again attached, the first attachment having expired, and was brought to sale in pursuance of the second attachment, and the purchaser sued for possession of the property, claiming on the ground that the alienation of the property was void under the provisions of sec. 276, that, as no claim was enforced or was enforceable under the first attachment, under which the property was alienated, but the purchaser was claiming under the second attachment, such alienation could not be assailed under the provisions of sec. 276.—6 Al. 33.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 129, noted under sec. 274; 3 Al. 698, noted under sec. 237; 15 Cal. 202, noted under sec. 213; 12 Al. 440, noted under sec. 234; 16 Bom. 91, noted under sec. 295.

277. If the property attached is coin or currency-notes, the Court may, at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

Court may direct coin or currency-notes attached to be paid to party entitled.

Sec. 237 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, gave no authority to a Civil Court to dispose of claims to money in deposit with a Collector, nor did sec. 242 give such a Court authority to dispose of claims to money under attachment.—13 W. R., 301.

278. If any claim be preferred to, or any objection be made to the attachment of, any property attached in execution of a decree, on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim or objection with the like power as regards the examination of the claimant or objector, and in all other respects, as if he was a party to the suit:

Investigation of claims to, and objections to attachment of, attached property.

Provided that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objection was designedly or unnecessarily delayed.

If the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection.

Postponement of sale.

Certain lands were attached under a decree against the ancestor of the plaintiff, but on the intervention of the defendant under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, they were released to him. Held that was not an order made between plaintiffs and defendant, such as to make it necessary for the former to sue for declaration of title within one year.—2 B. L. R., App. 49.

Where a claim was made under sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, by a third party, to some timber which had been attached by a prohibitory order under sec. 234, held per PEACOCK, C. J., L. S. JACKSON, PHEAR, and MACPHERSON, JJ. (MITTER, J., dissenting), the claimant must begin. The onus is on him to prove that the goods attached were his property, or in his possession, and therefore not in the possession of the judgment-debtor. His evidence must be confined to proving his own claim, and he cannot be allowed to shew a title in a third person with whom he has no connection. Held (per MITTER, J.) that on the proper construction of the words, "proceed to investigate the same with like powers as if the claimant had been originally made a defendant," the onus of proof as against the claimant is on the decree-holder. Nito Kali Debi v. Kripanath Roy (8 W. R., 358) overruled.—2 B. L. R., (F. B.) 91; 11 W. R., (F. B.) 8.

An Appellate Court is competent at any stage to allow objections to be taken to an apparent defect in the plaint. Held that a party against whom an order has been obtained under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, must, if he sue for its reversal, assert substantially the same right as that which has been contended for in the execution. Held by JACKSON, J., that, in a suit for declaration of title, defendants must have given a cause of action by impugning it antecedently to plaint filed, even though their written statement be hostile.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 212; S. C. 11 W. R., 40.

An objection not taken in cross-appeal before the lower Appellate Court cannot be taken in special appeal. But if the case be remanded for new trial, such objection may then be taken before the Court of first instance. On attachment of certain property, plaintiff and defendants preferred their respective claims thereto. The plaintiff's claim was disallowed; but the defendant's claim was allowed. The plaintiff, after the lapse of a year from the date of the order disallowing his claim, sued to recover possession of the said property. The defence was that the suit was barred by lapse of time under cl. 5, sec. 1, Act XIV of 1859, and sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859. Held cl. 5, sec. 1, Act XIV of 1859, and sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, do not apply to such a suit.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 254; S. C. 11 W. R., 134.

A decree-holder caused the right, title, and interest of his debtor in certain land to be attached in execution. A claim was preferred under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, against the attachment by a previous purchaser, but was rejected. The claimant then instituted the present suit for confirmation of his possession upon reversal of the said order. The defence set up was that the purchase was merely benami. Held that the onus was upon the plaintiff to make out his title.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 70; 11 W. R., 422; 25 W. R., 79.

In a suit brought under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, for establishment of right, held that the plaintiff's failure to prove his possession at the time of the institution of the suit is not sufficient for its dismissal. The question of title should be tried according to the meaning of that section. Sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, distinguished from sec. 15. It is often the case that fraud cannot be established by positive proofs, and on the other hand it is not to be presumed from circumstances of mere suspicion. It is generally shewn by such circumstantial evidence as overcomes the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing, and satisfies a reasonable mind that such presumption has been displaced. The investigation of a case upon a portion of the evidence, excluding the other portion under a mistaken impression that it was not legal evidence but conjecture, is an investigation erroneous in law, and is likely to produce an error in the decision of the case on its merits. The mode in which evidence is to be dealt with discussed.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 108; 11 W. R. 482.

Two several judgment-creditors attached certain property, which was released upon the claim of a third party, under sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. One of them sued the successful claimant, and obtained a decree declaring the property in dispute to belong to the judgment-debtor, and thereupon caused the property to be sold, and became the purchaser thereof. Thereupon, an assignee of the other judgment-creditor sued him, alleging an earlier lien, and praying a sale in satisfaction thereof. The defence set up was that, as the plaintiff did not come into Court to set aside the order under sec. 246 within a year from the date thereof, he was barred from bringing the present suit. Held that the omission to bring a separate suit for that purpose did not bar him from obtaining a declaration of his prior lien.—3 B. L. R., App. 122; S. C. 12 W. R., 221.

In execution of a decree against A, "the moiety or half share of A" in certain lands is attached. M files a petition under sec. 246 of Act VII. of 1859, in which he admits that A has a one-eighth share in the lands, but alleges that A has only a one eighth share, and that a two-eighths share belongs to himself, M. Held that this was a claim to property attached in execution under sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, which the Court under that section is bound to investigate and adjudicate upon. In execution of a decree against A, "the right, title, and interest of A" in certain lands are attached. M files a petition under sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859, in which he admits that A was a one-twentieth share, but alleges that A is entitled to no more than a one-twentieth share, and that he, M, has a two-twentieths share. Held that, assuming the attachment of A's right, title, and interest to be an irregular attachment under sec. 213, M, whose lands were included within such attachment, was entitled to come in, and claim his own two-twentieths share, and the Court was bound to investigate his claim under sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859. Held also, in both cases, that M was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as his share was concerned. Held also (per PHEAR, J.) that in the first case M was entitled to have the attachment removed, so far as regards the margin in excess of A's actual share; and that in the second case he was entitled to have the whole attachment discharged.—4 B. L. R., (F. B.) 175; S. C. 13 W. R., (F. B.) 63.

A obtained a money-decree upon a bond in a Small Cause Court against B, by which it was declared that certain landed property hypothecated by the bond was to be primarily liable for the debt. The decree was transferred to the Court of the Sadr Amin of the same district; the property was put up for sale, and it was purchased by C. Prior to sale, B alienated the property to D, who after sale preferred his claim to it under sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859, which was disallowed. More than a year after this, D brought his suit against C to recover possession. In special appeal, it was held that, the decree of the Small Cause Court being on the face of it without jurisdiction, the suit was not barred, and the case was remanded to be tried on the merits.—7 B. L. R., 235; 7 B. L. R., 238 note; 15 W. R., 311; S. C. 14 W. R., 367.

Property attached was, on the claim of a third party, released by the Court without proceeding under the provisions of sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859. The attaching creditor sued more than a year afterwards for a declaration that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. Held that the suit was not barred.—8 B. L. R., App. 39; 16 W. R., 22.

Plaintiff stated in his plaint that he was proprietor of certain land which was let to M, and that, whilst M was in possession, and whilst there were still some few months to run before his tenancy expired, a creditor took out execution against him, and put up for sale the future profits of the property (wasilat) which would come into the hands of M, alleging that M's interest was not that of tenant, but that of a usufructuary mortgagee. Upon this the plaintiff put in a claim under sec. 246, but his claim was rejected. Thereupon he brought a suit under that section to establish the fact that M's interest in the property was that of a tenant only, and not that of a usufructuary mortgagee. It was stated by the plaintiff that, on the expiration of M's settlement, he re-let it to a fresh tenant. Held that the suit would not lie, as no real cause of action, or specific subject-matter of injury, had been shown. What was sought was a vague declaration of right, the actual destruction or injury of which was not shown.—9 B. L. R., App. 28; 17 W. R., 304.

Where it was sought to execute a decree, obtained against a person who had died since the date of the decree, by attaching certain immoveable property in the possession of the personal representative of the deceased judgment debtor, and such personal representative claimed to hold the property, not in her representative character, but in her own right, held that her claim was not a claim under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, but that the case came under secs. 210 and 211. It was a matter between the parties to the suit relating to the execution of the decree, and, as such, was, under sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not to form the subject of a regular suit. The order rejecting the claim was therefore open to appeal.—12 B. L. R., 65 ; 12 B. L. R., 66 note ; 10 W. R., 199.

A suit brought under the provisions of sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859 to set aside an order allowing a claim to attached property and releasing the property from attachment is a suit to try the title and establish the right of the person who brings the suit ; and such a suit must be valued according to the value of the property, and cannot be brought upon a stamp of Rs. 10, under art. 17 of sch. 2 of the Court Fees Act,—15 B. L. R., App. 1 : 22 W. R., 422.

A summary order under Act XIX of 1841, for possession of property left by a deceased person, is no bar to a regular suit to try the title to such property and to obtain possession under that title ; it is, therefore, unnecessary to set aside the order before granting relief in the suit. Hence the period of limitation for such regular suit is that provided by cl. 12, sec. 1, Act XIV. of 1859, namely, twelve years, and not one year, as provided by cl. 5 of the same section.—B. L. R., Sap. Vol., 633 ; S. C. 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 191 ; 7 W. R., 199.

Certain property was sold in 1858 in execution of a decree as the property of the present second defendant's brother. Plaintiffs presented petitions claiming a right in the property, and protesting against the sale. Their petitions were rejected, and they were referred to a regular suit, which they brought in 1861. Under the old law, the time within which a suit might be brought on such a cause of action was twelve years. Sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859 shortened the period to one year. Held, reversing the decision of the Civil Judge, that the plaintiff's action was not barred. The period of limitation contained in sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, is applicable only to a case in which the procedure prescribed by that section has been adopted.—3 M. H. C. R., 139.

The effect of the last sentence of sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, is to exclude a party to an investigation under that section from any other remedy than that expressly provided for him by that section, viz., a regular suit to be brought within one year from the date of the order made against him, and such party cannot wait till the sale of the attached property has taken place and been confirmed, and then bring his suit within one year from the last date.—3 M. H. C. R., 220.

The plaintiff sued to obtain a decree declaring that the ancestral land possessed by the family of the plaintiff was not liable to seizure and sale in satisfaction of an ex-parte decree obtained by the defendant in a suit against the yejaman of the plaintiff's family, on the ground that the decree had been obtained collusively and fraudulently for a debt alleged to have been contracted for the benefit of the family. The decree against the yejaman was passed on the 22nd June 1857, and upon attachment of the family property the plaintiffs made a claim under sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, alleging their independent right to the property, and resisting a sale. The claim was disallowed on the 18th October 1861, and an appeal from that decision was dismissed on the 15th November 1861. The present suit was instituted on the 2nd February 1864. Held that this was not a suit to which the limitation provided by sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, or by cl. 5, sec. 1 of Act XIV. of 1859, was applicable, and that the suit was not barred.—4 M. H. C. R., 263.

In a suit for a partition of family property in the possession of the plaintiff and defendants, part of the property was attached at the instance of one of the defendants in 1852, and the remainder of the property in 1864, Nothing was done with respect to the first attachment, but in 1865 a petition was presented by the plaintiff praying for the removal of the attachments. The petition was rejected, and the plaintiff brought his suit within one year from the date of rejection of his petition. The plaintiff and defendants remained in possession notwithstanding the attachments. Held that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by the Act for the limitation of suits.—4 M. H. C. R., 281.

The plaintiff was, by an order of the Civil Court in execution of a decree to which the plaintiff was no party, ejected from the possession of a mutta. He brought a suit more than three years afterwards to eject the legal representative of the person who was so put in possession. Held (reversing the decree of the Civil Court) that the order of the Civil Court was not a summary decision within the meaning of cl. 5, sec. 1, Act XIV of 1859, and that the suit was not barred. That clause is only applicable to orders which the Civil Courts are empowered to pass deciding matters of disputed property raised for hearing and determination by a summary proceeding between the parties disputing.—4 M. H. C. R., 297.

The plaintiff brought a suit to establish his right to certain property as against the claim which the defendant had successfully made under sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code in execution of a decree obtained against the plaintiff. The order of the Court directed the release of the property from attachment. The present suit was brought more than one year from the date of the order. Held, per SCOTLAND, C. J., BITTLESTON and COLLETT, JJ. (INNES, J. doubting), that the plaintiff was a party against whom the order was "given" within the meaning of the section, and that the suit was barred by the section.—4 M. H. C. R., 472.

Suit for redemption of an otti by an alleged purchaser of the same, and for recovery of land on which he had purchased a kanam. The defence that the purchase was made by the father of the 1st defendant, and that the plaintiff was, constructively, a mere trustee. The Munsif decreed for the plaintiff, and the Principal Sadr Amin reversed his decree, because the suit was not brought within a year of a release of the property from attachment under a claim of the defendants, which attachment was made in execution of two decrees for money against the present plaintiff. It appeared that in the proceedings had, releasing the property from attachment, no notice was issued to the judgment-debtor (present plaintiff). Held that the decision of the Principal Sadr Amin was wrong. In the present case, the claimants in possession were not so according to any of the modes of derivation which sec. 246 enumerates as authorizing the continuance of the possession and the dismissal of the claim. The possession was in the claimants, and there was nothing in the rights of the judgment-debtor which could make such possession his possession. This being so, even assuming that he was a party to the order made, such order could not be said to be against him, because his claim was one which could not have been determined by any order made under sec. 246. The order so made was perfectly consistent with his present contention. Special Appeal No. 541 of 1868 (4 M. H. C. R., 472, distinguished).—6 M. H. C. R., 416.

Where the plaintiff filed a suit to set aside a sale of land after he had been unsuccessful in an application made under sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code to raise an attachment that had been laid on such land, held, that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove his title, and not on the purchaser to prove that of the judgment-debtor.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 76.

A mortgagee in possession of mortgaged premises that have been attached by prohibitory order under sec. 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure in execution of a decree obtained against his mortgagor is entitled to come in under sec. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, and have the attachment raised.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 100.

An order of the Court of the Mamlatdar under the last clause of sec. 1 of Bom. Act V. of 1864, recognizing the possession of a party, and enjoining others from disturbing that possession, is not an order under Act XVI. of 1838; and the limitation of three years, prescribed in art. 7 of sec. 1 of Act XIV of 1859, does not apply to a suit brought to establish a right against the operation of such an order in the regular Civil Court. Although such an order of the Mamlatdar is a summary decision, the suit in the Civil Court is not a suit to set aside the order itself, but for possession in opposition to that recognized by the Mamlatdar's injunction, and is not, therefore, within the limitation of one year prescribed by art. 5 of sec. 1 of Act XIV. of 1859.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 479.

N caused certain property to be attached as the property of his judgment-debtor. M preferred a claim to the property, and objected to its sale. The Munsif, without an investigation in conformity with the provisions of sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, released the property from attachment, and directed N to bring a regular suit. N sued to establish his right to bring the property to sale, alleging that his cause of action arose on the day the order was passed releasing it from attachment. Held that the suit was not barred by reason of not having been instituted within one year from the date of the order.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 185.

M, to whom C, his judgment-debtor, had made over certain goods, attached the same in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment debtor, but on a claim being preferred to the goods by D and B under sec. 246 of Act VIII, of 1859, they were ordered to be released from attachment; they remained, however, in the possession of M. D and B having sued M to recover the value of the goods, the lower Court held that, inasmuch as M failed to sue within a year to set aside the order of the miscellaneous department, and to establish his right to take the property in satisfaction of his decree as belonging to his judgment-debtor, the plaintiff's right to it must be admitted without further enquiry or proof, and decreed the claim on the basis of that order alone. It was held in special appeal that the defendant was not debarred by that order or by the law of limitation from disputing the plaintiff's right to the goods, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their right to entitle themselves to a decree, and that the miscellaneous order was not conclusive proof of their right, and still less such an adjudication on the question as precluded a re-adjudication of it.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 85.

It was held that the mere fact that the plaintiff sued to recover possession, by virtue of inheritance, of one-fourth only of certain immoveable property, to which he had laid claim, when attached in execution of decree, on the ground that it belonged to the common ancestor of himself and the judgment-debtor, and there had been a partition of the ancestral estate, and the property attached had fallen by the partition to his lot, and was in his exclusive possession, did not relieve him from the necessity of bringing a suit within one year from the date of the order, passed by the Court executing the decree under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, to the effect that the partition had not been established, nor had he proved that he held exclusive possession of the property attached.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 113.

A suit to recover money paid by the defendant into Court, which was payable to the plaintiff, and which was afterwards recovered by the defendant in the execution of a decree against a third person, under an order of the Court executing the decree, was not barred by limitation, under the provisions of Act IX. of 1871, sch. ii, art. 15, by reason of not having been instituted within one year from the date of the order. The suit was substantially one for damages, to which art. 26, sch. ii. of the same enactment applied, and was barred as not having been brought within a year from the date of the taking by the defendant of the money claimed.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 174.

Certain property having been attached in execution of a decree, the plaintiff intervened claiming the property, and was directed to adduce evidence, which, however, he failed to do, and the case was struck off Held that the order striking off the case must be taken as an order disallowing the claim, and that the plaintiff was bound to bring his suit to establish his claim within one year from the date of the order.—12 C. L. R., 43.

A claim to property under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, is virtually a suit for land.—1 Hyde's Rep., 136.

Property being attached under a decree obtained before Act VIII. of 1859, a third party claimed to be entitled as against the judgment creditor under a bill of sale. The Judge enquired into his claim, found that the assignment was fraudulent, and ordered that the property should be sold under the decree. Held that the order of the Judge was a summary decision of a Civil Court within sec. 1, cl. 5, and that a suit by the claimant for the recovery of the property instituted after the expiration of a year from the date of the order was barred by that clause.—Marsh. Rep., 520.

Held that the Judge's order relating to the landed property of a person dying intestate, being apparently an order made without jurisdiction, had no legal operation, and was not a summary order within the meaning of the 5th clause of sec. I, Act XIV. of 1859.—1 Agra H. C. R., 241.

Where an order is passed in the miscellaneous department without enquiry in conformity with the provisions of sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, it is not to be regarded as an order within the terms of that section, and a suit to set aside such order would not necessarily be barred if not instituted within a year.—3 Agra H. C. R., 397.

Money paid to release an attachment in execution of a decree cannot be made the subject of a claim under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 246.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 248.

Certain property had been attached in execution of a decree under the 235th section of Act VIII. of 1859, which was specified in the schedule annexed to the order of attachment as "the right, title, and interest of R H, deceased, in the hands of B D and W D, his widows." M D claimed the property under the 246th section of Act VIII. of 1859, and proved that the property was in his possession, and not in the possession of B D or W D. Held that the property must be released from the attachment.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 339.

When intervenors claim a share of attached property, the Court should define the respective shares of the debtor and the intervenors, and sell the debtor's definite share only. If the Court omits to do so, and sells the undefined rights and interests, there is no decision under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, of which the purchaser, by lying in wait without possession for one year, can take advantage.—4 W. R., 35.

Sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, made no distinction in favour of cases not decided on the merits, but made it imperative on the party whose claim to attached property had been rejected, under any circumstances, to sue within one year.—5 W. R., 214.

Whether, with reference to cl. 5, sec. 1, a suit will lie to set aside a summary order after the expiration of one year.—6 W. R., 21.

Where property is seized as belonging to A as representative of B, deceased, and A claims the property as his own, and denies that it ever belonged to B or B's estate, A's claim is properly dealt with under sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859.—6 W. R., Mis., 61.

There is nothing in sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, which restricts claims under it to titles derived from the judgment-debtor, or out of the estate. It comprises all claims or objections to the sale of lands in execution of decrees.—6 W. R., 164.

Sec. 269, Act VIII. of 1859, does not contemplate that the party in actual possession must sue regularly to get possession within one year, but that the person who is not in actual possession shall do so.—7 W. R., 87.

The final decision, award, or order contemplated by cl. 5, sec. 1, was a final decision of the Court which had competent jurisdiction to determine the case finally, and not the order of a Court superior to such Court dismissing an appeal from the decision of such Court for want of jurisdiction.—7 W. R., 151.

A party failing to establish his claim to attached property under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, on the point of possession, is not debarred from afterwards bringing a suit to establish title within the period allowed by law for bringing such suit.—8 W. R., 73.

In disposing of a claim under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, if the Court be of opinion that the property attached ought not to be sold, the proper order for the Court to make is a simple order to release the property from attachment.—8 W. R., 93.

A suit brought, not to set aside an order of release under sec. 246 of Act VIII. of 1859, but to recover possession from the successful claimant of the property released, was not governed by the limitation prescribed by cl. 5, sec. 1.—8 W. R., 93.

The provisions of this section were prospective, and did not apply to proceedings in execution under the old procedure.—9 W. R., 292.

The limitation of one year, in sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, did not apply to a suit for declaration of right and confirmation of possession.—12 W. R., 33.

In a suit for possession after rejection of a claim under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, there was nothing in that section to prevent a defendant from pleading that, whatever title plaintiff might have had at some previous time, it was extinguished by his having had no possession for twelve years preceding the suit.—13 W. R., 78.

In a suit to set aside a summary award under sec. 246, Civil Procedure Code, a Judge is bound to find facts upon the evidence tendered and taken in the case, and not upon any evidence taken in the summary cause.—14 W. R., 95.

A judge has no jurisdiction to try the same objector's claim, under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, a second time as against the same attachment, or to re-open a question finally decided on the former occasion. The title of the objector, as compared with that of the debtor in possession, is not a point for adjudication under sec. 246.—14 W. R., 144.

The law of limitation, under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, could not apply to a person whom the Court had refused to make a party to the proceedings under that section, because he came in too late to be made such a party.—14 W. R., 364.

Where an unsuccessful claimant, under sec. 246, Code of Civil Procedure, sues for confirmation of alleged possession and adjudication of title, the onus in the first instance is on plaintiff, and an important question in the case is, who was in possession at the time of the attachment.—15 W. R., 202.

The only question proper to be decided under sec. 246, Act VIII. of 1859, is whether the property attached is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or some person in trust for him, or whether it is in the possession of a third party not in trust for the judgment-debtor.—16 W. R., 119.

Whether a person holding by purchase from the judgment-debtor is in a position to succeed under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 246.—17 W. R., 480.

Certain property having been mortgaged by B D to L, the mortgagee obtained a decree for its sale, had it sold in execution, and purchased it himself, subject to any right which certain parties (B and G) who had objected under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 246, might be able to establish. After this L sold the property to the plaintiff, who, not being able to get possession, brought a suit against the defendants in whose hands some or all of the property seemed to be, and who set up that they had purchased it from B G and B D. Held that the suit was not barred, because it had not been instituted within twelve months of the date when the objections of B and G were allowed.—20 W. R., 393.

A decree-holder in execution having attached certain lands, the judgment-debtors objected that the lands were not their property, but held by them as shebais of a religious endowment. The Munsif found that, although the land formed part of some which had been released by Government as appropriated to religious purposes, they were held by the defendants entirely to their own use, and overruled the objection. Held that the order was one under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 246, and that no appeal lay to the Judge.—21 W. R., 365.

Where a person whose property has been attached in execution of a decree against another person, and whose claim, under sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 has been rejected, brings a suit under the provisions of sec. 247 of Act VIII of 1859, it is no objection to that suit that, previously to the filing thereof, the decree (in execution of which the property had been attached) was satisfied by the judgment-debtor, and the property released from attachment.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 10.

Certain property was attached in the hands of the petitioner (who had preferred a claim under section 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure), on the ground that he had become a trustee for the judgment-debtor by virtue of an alleged agreement on his part to discharge the decree-holder's debt contained in a hibanama by which the judgment-debtor had transferred the property to him. The petitioner having obtained a rule under section 622 of the Code, held, that the property having been transferred to the petitioner and being now admittedly his property, the lower Court had acted without jurisdiction in directing execution to issue against the property. Per AMEER ALI, J.—When a claim is preferred under section 278, what the Court has to see is whether the property, though standing in the name of the claimant or of some other person is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not. The mere fact that the judgment-debtor has some beneficial interest in the income would not render the property liable under section 281. If the claimant satisfies the Court that he has some interest in, or is possessed of, the property attached, and it does not appear that the possession of the claimant was in reality that of the judgment-debtor, the claim must be allowed.—18 Cal 290.

An order made upon a claim to attached property filed in the Small Cause Court of Calcutta under section 278 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is an order in the suit within the meaning of the Presidency Small Cause Courts' Act, 1882, section 37, and is final, subject only to the right to apply for a new trial. Where such a claim has been disallowed, a suit brought under section 283 of the Civil Procedure Code by the person against whom that order has been passed to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute is not maintainable in any Court. The exclusion by the Small Cause Court, under the powers conferred on it by section 23 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts' Act, 1882, of section 283 of the Civil Procedure Code, has not been effected by Act X of 1888.—18 Cal 296.

Under secs. 289 and 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is necessary that a Copy of the sale-proclamation should be affixed to some conspicuous place on the property attached; and the omission to do so is a material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If it is proved that the price obtained for property sold at an execution-sale is greatly inadequate, and if it be also proved that there has been a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, the Court will presume that the irregularity was the cause of the inadequacy of price, until proof is given to the contrary.—7 Cal. 466.

An objection was made to the attachment of certain property in the execution of a decree by the judgment-debtor, on the ground that such property was in his possession, not as his own property, but on account of an endowment. This objection was one of the nature to be dealt with under Act X of 1877, sec. 278 and the following sections. The court executing the decree made an order against the decree-holder releasing the property from attachment. Held that such order was not appealable, the fact that the objection was made by the judgment-debtor notwithstanding, and the decree-holder's proper remedy was to institute a suit under Act X of 1877, sec. 283.—2 Al. 752.

The holders of a taluk hypothecated certain other property belonging to them as security for the rent. A decree for rent was obtained against them. Prior to attachment, the taluqdars assigned their interest in eight annas of the hypothecated property to A, and made a mourosi lease of the remaining eight annas to them. The decree-holder then obtained an order for summary sale for the rent due for 1876-77. She then attempted to sell the property hypothecated to her. An objection by A was allowed. A regular suit was then instituted by the decree-holder against A, and it was declared that she was, after selling the taluq, entitled to sell the hypothecated property. The decree-holder again attempted to execute her rent-decree by attaching and selling the hypothecated property, and an objection by A was disallowed. Held that no appeal lay from the order disallowing the objection, as A could not be considered to be a 'representative' of the taluqdars within the meaning of cl. 244, cl. c, of the Civil Procedure Code, and was, therefore, debarred from appealing under secs. 278 and 283.—7 Cal. 403.

A and B attached, in execution of their decree, property of C and his two brothers, their judgment-debtors. Subsequently D obtained a decree against C alone, and, on the 11th January 1884, applied for attachment of the one-third share of C in the property attached by A and B, which belonged to C and his two brothers jointly. No order was on that date passed on the application. On the 14th January 1884, E purchased from C his one-third share in the attached properties, and the purchase-money was, by arrangement between the brothers, applied in satisfying the debt due to A and B. On the 28th January 1884, an order was passed on the application of the 11th January 1884, granting the attachment asked for by D. And on the 23rd April 1884, E preferred his claim to the one-third share purchased by him, and which had been since the purchase attached by D. The claim was disallowed on the ground that E had no title to the property ~~h~~ having purchased whilst the property was under attachment. Held on appeal that the Judge should have, in accordance with sec. 280 of the Code of Civil Procedure, confined himself to determining whether or not the property was in the possession of E on his own account at the time that D attached the property.—10 Cal. 1057.

A decree-holder, having attached the property of his judgment-debtors in execution of the decree, obtained an order for sale of the attached property. Prior to sale, the judgment-debtors made an application to be declared insolvents, and obtained an order under Stat. 11 and 12 Vic, cl. 21, sec. 7, by which their property was vested in the Official Assignee. An application was then made by the Official Assignee to the Court in which the execution of the decree was pending, for the release of the property from attachment, and that the property might be made over to him. The Court dismissed the application. On appeal, the District Judge reversed the first Court's order:—Held that the Court of first instance had only jurisdiction in the matter under sec. 278 of the Code, and disposed of it under that section, and that the Districts Judge had no Jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.—7 Al. 752.

Suits under sec. 283 of the Code, although they are brought for the purpose of establishing rights which have been negatived in execution-proceedings, are neither described in the Code nor dealt within practice, as appeals from the orders of lower Courts; they are substantive suits to all intents and purposes, and must be tried like any other suits subject to the ordinary rules of procedure and evidence. There is nothing in the provisions of secs. 278 to 283 of the Code limiting in a suit under, sec. 283 a plaintiff's right to compensation for his loss, or the defendant's responsibility for his wrongful act; and if the existence of the summary procedure (in secs. 278 to 282) leads to delay, and that delay to further loss, the consequences must fall upon the defendant.—12 Cal. 966.

An attachment of a tenure or holding in execution of a decree obtained by a fractional co-sharer for arrears of the rent of his separate share, is not such an attachment as is contemplated by sec. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.—17 Cal. 390.

Orders for attachment in security under sec. 483 of the Civil Procedure Code being issued on the ex-parte application of the creditor, who is bound to specify the property which he desires to have attached and its estimated value, it follows that the attachment is the direct act of the creditor, for which he is immediately responsible. Should the goods be proved not to belong to the debtor, the litigation and delay, and also any depreciation of the goods by an intermediate fall in the market, between attachment and sale, are the natural and necessary consequences of the creditor's unlawful act. The plaintiff having taken, without success, the summary proceeding under sec. 278, to get the release of goods attached under sec. 487, in a suit to which he was not a party, afterwards, in a suit brought by him in accordance with sec. 283, established his right of property in the goods: Held, that (a), in order to entitle him to the full indemnity for the wrongful attachment he was not bound to allege and prove that the defendants had resisted his previous application under sec. 278 maliciously, or without probable cause; and that (b), the goods having been sold under the Court's order, the difference in market value of the goods at the time of their attachment (November 1883) and their price when they were sold (June 1884), the selling prices having fallen immediately, must be added to the damages. Held, also that, without bringing under review the judgment under sec. 278, the effect of the judgment in the suit brought in accordance with sec. 283 was to supersede the order under sec. 278, and to render it inconclusive. The procedure on attachment not being the same in India as in England, where a judgment-creditor is not responsible for the consequences of a sale, under a judicial order, of goods taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt, that proposition does not hold good under the Indian procedure; and Walker v. Olding 1 H. & C., 621; 9 Jur. N. S., 53; 32 L. J., Exch., 142; is inapplicable to the latter.—17 Cal. 436.

A judgment-creditor of the plaintiff, having obtained a decree against the plaintiff, attached the house in dispute. The defendant intervened in 1878, and set up a previous purchase of the house by himself from the plaintiff. The attachment was removed. The judgment-creditor brought a suit against the defendant for declaration that the property belonged to the plaintiff, and, as such, was liable to be attached and sold in execution. At the hearing of this suit the judgment-creditor did not appear. The defendant appeared, and produced a sale-deed, which the Court found proved, and dismissed the judgment-creditor's suit. The plaintiff now brought the present suit against the defendant to recover possession of the house. The defendant contended (inter alia) that the dismissal of the former suit, brought by the plaintiff's judgment-creditor, operated as res judicata under sec. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Both the lower Courts disallowed the defendant's contention, holding that the suit was not barred. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court, held, confirming the lower Court's decree, that the dismissal of the former suit did not operate as res judicata in the absence of any evidence to show that the judgment-creditor, in point of fact, represented the plaintiff so as to constitute him a party to the suit. It was contended for the defendant that the plaintiff, as the judgment-debtor, might, at any rate, be regarded as a party against whom the order in the execution-proceedings in 1878 was made, and that the present suit was, therefore, barred by limitation. Held that the plaintiff could not be regarded as a party to those proceedings. Whether a judgment-debtor is to be regarded as a party to an investigation under sec. 278 of the Code, must depend upon the facts of each case. As the question of limitation was raised for the first time in second appeal, it could not be decided against the plaintiff.—11 Bom. 114.

Where property has been made the subject of attachment under Chapter XIX of the Civil Procedure Code, the right of an objector to assert his claim to be the true owner of the property under sec. 278, and the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the objection, are not ousted by the mere circumstances that the judgment-debtor has been declared an insolvent, and his property vested in a Receiver under Chapter XX. It is the judgment-debtor's property only, not that of the objector, that is thus vested.—9 Al. 232.

Proceedings by way of claim under sec. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code are applicable only to cases of money-decrees where property has been attached, and not to claims preferred to properties directed to be sold under mortgage-decrees.—14 Cal. 631.

See I. L. R., 4 Bom. 323, noted under sec. 268 ; 14 Al. 417, noted under sec. 13 ; 10 Al. 80, noted under sec. 492 ; 7 Madr. 255 & 12 Al. 313, noted under sec. 234 ; 17 Cal. 260, noted under sec. 281 ; 17 Cal. 711, noted under sec. 244 ; 19 Cal. 286, noted under sec. 272.

279. The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached.

Evidence to be adduced by claimant.

An order striking off an objection to the attachment of property attached in execution of decree for default of prosecution is not "conclusive" as regards the right which the objector claimed to the property, within the meaning of sec. 283 of Act X of 1877. Held, therefore, where a person objected to the attachment of certain moveable property attached in execution of a decree, claiming it as his own, and his objection was struck off for default of prosecution, that such person might sue for damages for the wrongful attachment of such property without suing to establish the right which he claimed thereto.—I. L. R., 3 Al. 504.

See I. L. R., 18 Cal. 290, noted under sec. 278 ; 15 Madr. 477, noted sec. 13.

280. If, upon the said investigation, the Court is satisfied that, for the reason stated in the claim or objection, such property was not, when attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, or that, being in the possession of the judgment-debtor at such time, it was so in his possession, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of or in trust for some other person, or partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person, the Court shall pass an order for releasing the property, wholly or to such extent as it thinks fit, from attachment.

Release of property from attachment.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A suit to establish the plaintiff's right to the exclusive possession of personal property of which the plaintiff and her husband had been dispossessed by actual seizure in execution of a decree against the plaintiff's husband is cognizable by a Small Cause Court.—5 M. H. C. R., 191.

Where plaintiffs' sheep had been attached in satisfaction of a decree against a third party, and the second defendant had purchased the property at the Court-sale, held that a suit merely to recover the sheep or their value is cognizable by a Small Cause Court.—8 M. H. C. R., 36.

A Suit brought by a decree-holder to decide whether moveable property taken in execution is or is not the property of his judgment-debtor, is not a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 27.

A suit brought by an owner to recover moveable property, of which he has been dispossessed by an attachment-order, may, when the value of the property is less than Rs. 500, be maintained in a Court of Small Causes, it being a suit for personal property. A suit "to have sold by auction certain property in respect of which the plaintiff obtained a decree for a right of lien," and also to set aside the miscellaneous "order passed by the Munsiff," is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 155 ; 3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., App. 156.

The question to be determined under sec. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code is the question of possession ; the words "possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him" refer to cases in which the possession of a claimant as a trustee is of such a character as to be really the possession of the debtor, and not to cases in which very intricate questions of law may arise as to whether or not valid trusts may result in particular instances.—14 Cal. 617.

Sec. 283 does not constitute an exception to the procedure laid down by sec. 545. Where property has been released from attachment under sec. 280, and subsequently declared liable to attachment by a decree against which an appeal is pending, as sale of such property before the final result of the appeal is not illegal by virtue of the provisions of sec. 283.—6 Madr. 98.

On the 7th April, 1877, one Nusserwanji Ardasir Santook executed a trust-deed whereby certain immoveable property belonging to him was conveyed to trustees in trust for himself for life or until he became insolvent, or attempted to alienate, assign or incumber the same, and then for his wife and children. At the date of the deed, Nusserwanji was largely indebted, and two or three months prior to the date of the deed he had deposited bulk of his moveable property with a friend, who endeavoured to compromise with his (Nusserwanji's) creditors, and who applied the said property in paying off a portion of his debts. About a fortnight after the trust-deed was executed, Nusserwanji filed a suit against one Hormasji Ardasir Santook and others. That suit was dismissed, and Nusserwanji was ordered to pay Hormasji's costs. In execution of that decree for costs Hormasji, in July, 1882, attached a house which was part of the property settled by the trust-deed of April, 1877. Thereupon the trustee of the deed claimed to have the attachment removed, alleging that he was in possession as trustee. He took out a summons for that purpose, which was dismissed on the 19th December, 1882, without prejudice to the rights of the parties to file a suit in respect of the subject-matter thereof. No suit, however, was filed by any of the parties, and the house was sold in execution. Hormasji, the execution-creditor, bought it at the sale, and was put into possession, which he retained until his death in December, 1888. After his death his executors took possession. They desired to sell it, but were unable to do so, in consequence of the claim put forward by Nusserwanji's wife and children (defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4) under the trust-deed of 1877. They accordingly filed this suit against Nusserwanji's wife and children (defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4), and the surviving trustee of the trust (defendant No. 2), praying for a declaration that the defendants had no right or interest, present or future or contingent, in the said property; that they (the plaintiffs) as executors of Hormasji were absolutely entitled to it, and that the trust deed was fraudulent and void against the plaintiffs and other creditors of Nusserwanji. It was contended that the suit was barred under article 95 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act, XV of 1877, having been filed more than three years after 1882, at which date the fraud was alleged by Hormasji himself and relied on by him in the attachment proceedings. Held, that the suit did not fall within article 95 and was not barred. The substantial prayer of the plaint was declaration that the plaintiffs were absolute owners of the property in suit, and the basis on which that prayer was rested was the sale to Hormasji in 1883. The "relief" asked for was the declaration of the plaintiffs' absolute title: the "ground" of the relief was the acquisition of that title by virtue of the certificate of sale coupled with a denial of it by the defendants. Such a case did not come within the purview of article 95. It was further contended that the effect of the order in December, 1882, dismissing the summons which had been taken out by the trustees to have the attachment removed, was to declare the trust settlement invalid, and that as no steps had been taken by the trustee against whom that order was made to establish the validity of the trust within a year from the date of that order, the defendants could not now rely on their rights as cestuis que trust under that deed. It was argued that the Judge in dismissing the summons must have intended to pronounce the whole settlement invalid, having regard to section 280 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), because otherwise he ought, according to that section, to have ordered, in express terms, the removal of the attachment from the reversionary estate of wife and children. Held, that the portion of section 280 relied on only applies where the property is in the possession of the judgment debtor "partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person." Here the property was, at the time of the attachment and had been for some months previously, in the sole possession of the trustee, and neither wholly nor partly in the possession of the judgment-debtor. The conditions under which the latter part of section 280 becomes applicable were not present in the present case, and the Judge in dealing with the summons was not, therefore, called on to make any declaration as to the precise limits of the interest in the property upon which he held the attachment to be maintainable. Held, that there was no such order passed against the interests represented by the first, third and fourth defendants as to come under the terms of section 283 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, on the evidence, that the deed of settlement was fraudulent and void as against creditors. It was proved that at or before the date of the settlement, Nusserwanji was largely indebted. Nearly the whole of his moveable property had been deposited with a friend, in order that the creditors might be compromised with and a portion of his debts paid off, and under those circumstances he made a settlement of this immoveable property, which was all that could really be said to have then belonged to him on the eve of the litigation which was about to commence. But held, also, dismissing the suit, that the plaintiffs were only entitled to an estate for the life of Nusserwanji. They were the representatives of Hormasji and his claim, upon which this suit was founded, arose by virtue of his having purchased the right title and interest of Nusserwanji the settlor, and the right so purchased did not include the right to set aside his own deed. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to succeed inasmuch as this suit was not filed by them on behalf of and for the benefit of all the creditors of Nusserwanji. Semble, a claim to set aside a deed of settlement as fraudulent and void as against creditors can only be made by creditors whose claims are not barred by limitation. Quære, whether the existence of creditors who were creditors at the date of the deed of settlement is necessary.—16 Bom. 1.

Sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code enables a party, against whom an order has been made in execution-proceedings, to bring a suit to establish his rights, whatever they may be ; but it says nothing as to the nature of the suit, or the Court in which it is to be brought. Whether the party is to sue in the Civil Court, or in the Small Cause Court, depends entirely upon the nature of the claim and the right which is sought to be enforced. A person whose goods are illegally sold under an execution does not lose his right to them, although he may have claimed them unsuccessfully in the execution-proceedings. He may follow them into the hands of the purchaser or of any other person, and sue for them or their value without reference to anything which has taken place in the execution-proceedings, except that, under art. 11. sch, ii., Act XV of 1877, he must bring his suit within one year from the time when the adverse order in the execution-proceedings was made. Where goods have been illegally seized and sold in execution, a suit by the owner thereof against the purchaser, for the goods of their value, will lie in a Small Cause Court, if the value of the goods is within the amount limited by law for the jurisdiction of such Court ; but if the plaintiff makes the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor parties to the suit, and requires a declaration of his right to the property, such a suit will not lie in the Small Cause Court. A suit for a declaration of right by a person against whom an order has been passed under sec. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code will not lie in the Small Cause Court. Ram Dhun Biswas v. Kefal Biswas (10 W. R., 141), Moozdeen Gazeer v. Dinobundhoo Gossamee (13 W. R., 99), and Womesh Chander Bose v. Muddun Mohan Sircar (2 W. R., 44), discussed and explained.—7 Cal. 608.

281. If the Court is satisfied that the property was, at the time it was attached, in possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, the Court shall dis allow the claim.

Disallowance of claim to release of property attached.

The effect of an order made under sec. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code disallowing a claim to attached property, is to give the auction purchaser a title as against the claimant unless the order is set aside by a suit ; and a suit for that purpose can only be brought within a year from the date of the order. Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 521 ; I. L. R., 15 I. A., 123, referred to.—I. L. R., 17 Cal. 260.

A suit under sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code by a party against whom an order under sec. 281 has been passed to establish his right to moveable property, attached in execution of a decree passed by a Civil Court, and for such property, the same being less than Rs. 500 in value, is not a suit cognizable in a Court of Small Causes.—5 Al. 462.

The heirs of the deceased obligor of a bond were sued thereon, on the ground that they were in possession of the property of the deceased, and a decree was made in this suit for the recovery of the amount claimed "from the property of the deceased." In execution of this decree the plaintiff caused certain property to be attached as belonging to the deceased. The defendants objected to the attachment, on the ground that the property belonged to them. The Court executing the decree proceeded to investigate this objection, and, finding that the property did not belong to the defendants, but to the deceased, disallowed it. Held that the proceedings upon such objection were taken under sec. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the order disallowing it was therefore not appealable.—6 Al. 109.

282. If the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or lien in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or lien.

A Munsif has jurisdiction to try a suit brought under sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code to test the question whether a property which has been attached in execution is liable to pay the claim of the creditor, the value of the property being over one thousand rupees, but the amount of the debt being less than that sum. In such suits the amount which is to settle the jurisdiction of the Court is the amount which is in dispute, and which the creditor would recover if successful, viz., the amount due to him, and not the value of the property attached, unless the two amounts happen to be identical. Janki Das v. Bardi Nath (I. L. R., 2 Al. 698), Gulzari Lal v. Jadaun Rai (I. L. R., 2 Al. 799), Krishnama Chariar v. Srinvasa Ayyangar (I. L. R., 4 Madr. 339), and Dayachand Nemchand v. Hemchand Dharamchand (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 515), followed.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 104.

An order passed under sec. 246 of the Code 1859, rejecting a claim after investigation, will, if not contested by suit by the claimant, estop him afterwards from pleading adverse possession at the date of the order in a suit brought to eject him by the decree-holder.—8 Madr. 506.

A suit brought by a defeated claimant, under Act X of 1877, sec. 283, to establish his right to, and to recover possession of, certain moveable property attached in execution of a decree of a Small Cause Court, is within the jurisdiction of, and must therefore, under Act XI of 1865, sec. 12, be instituted in, a Small Cause Court.—3 Bom. 179.

When a party prefers a claim or makes any objection to the attachment of any property in execution of a decree, but fails to establish it, and bring a suit under sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) to establish his right to the property attached, is to be treated as falling under art. 17, cl. 1, of sch. 2 of the Court Fees Act VII of 1870, and is chargeable with only a ten-rupee stamp, notwithstanding that the plaintiff may pray in such a suit to be awarded possession.—9 Bom. 20.

In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court. A purchaser or mortgagee of a co-parcener's share in the joint property is a proper, and even necessary, party to a suit for partition. There is nothing in the words of section 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) to limit the party unsuccessful in the attachment proceedings to a suit for a mere declaration of his alleged right. He is at liberty to pray, in the same suit, for any consequential relief to which he may be entitled. A., B. and C. were members of a joint Hindu family. In execution of a decree against B., a portion of the family property was attached. Thereupon A. intervened, and objected to the attachment so far as his own share was concerned. The objection was disallowed, and the property was brought to sale and purchased by D. A. then filed a suit (1) to set aside the order in the miscellaneous proceedings disallowing his objection to the attachment, and (2) for a partition of the whole family property. In this suit he impleaded not only his co-sharers B. and C., but also D., the auction-purchaser, and E., a mortgagee of B.'s share in the joint property. The Subordinate Judge, holding that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties as well as of causes of action, returned the plaint for amendment by striking out the prayers for partition. On appeal, this order was confirmed by the District Judge. On A.'s application to the High Court, under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that the suit was not bad either for misjoinder of parties or for misjoinder of causes of action. Treating the suit as one for partition, the auction-purchaser D. and the mortgagee E. were proper, and even necessary, parties. If A. established his right to partition, he would be entitled to have the order in the miscellaneous proceedings set aside in the same suit. Held, also, that section 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) did not prevent A. from claiming partition in the present suit. Held, further, that even if the Subordinate Judge's view were right that the two prayers could not be joined in one suit, his proper course was to have left it to the plaintiff to elect which of the two prayers he wished should be adjudicated upon by the Court.—16 Bom. 608.

In certain execution-proceedings land was attached, but before the sale the judgment-debtors, with the permission of the Court, sold the land to the plaintiffs. Previous to this sale, certain persons had come forward in the execution-proceedings, and had claimed the land as having been sold to them by the father of the judgment-debtors; this claim was disallowed in November 1876. In 1881 the plaintiffs, alleging that they had been dispossessed by certain persons, amongst whom were the claimants in the execution-proceedings, brought a suit to recover possession of this land against these persons. This suit was decided against the plaintiffs in the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that they had failed to prove that they had been in possession of the land 12 years before suit. On appeal to the High Court the plaintiffs, appellants, contended that the claim of the defendants in the execution proceedings having been rejected, and they not having brought a regular suit within one year from the order of rejection to establish their right to possession, the defendants were prevented by that order from contending that the plaintiffs had not been in possession at the time of that order:—Held that the order did not operate as an estoppel against the defendants; and even if it could so operate, it would not do so until the time had run out, within which they could have brought a suit to establish their right to possession, and that such time had not expired —11 Cal. 673.

A person who had claimed moveable property attached in execution of a decree as his own, and whose claim had been investigated and disallowed, under secs. 271 to 281, sued, the property being under attachment the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in a Court of Small Causes for the property or its value:—Held that the suit could not properly be regarded as a suit "for personal property or for the value of such property," within the meaning of sec. 6 of Act XI of 1865, but must be regarded as a suit to establish the plaintiff's right, in the sense of sec. 283, inasmuch as the plaintiff could not recover the property without clearing out of his way the order of attachment, which he could only do by establishing his right in the sense of sec. 283, and therefore the suit was not one cognizable in a Court of Small Causes. Janakiammal v. Vithenadien, (5 M. H. C. R., 191), Kundeme Naine Booche Naidoo v. Ravoo Lutchmeepaty Naidoo (8 M. H. C. R., 36), Gordhan Pema v. Kasandas Balmukundas (I. L. R., 1817, p. 155), dissented from.—7 Al. 152.

The decree-holders in execution of a simple money-decree passed against the legal representatives of their debtor, and which provided that it was to be enforced against the debtor's property, attached and sought to bring to sale a house as coming within the scope of the decree. The judgment-debtors objected to the attachment and proposed sale, on the ground that the house was their own private property, and not the property of the debtor within the meaning of the decree, having been validly transferred to them during the debtor's life-time. The objection was disallowed by the Court of first instance. Held that sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, that the case fell within sec. 244, and that an appeal would lie from the first Court's order. Ram Ghulam v. Hazaru Kuar, (I. L. R., 7 Al. 547) and Sita Ram v. Bhagwan Das (I. L. R., 7 Al. 733) followed. Shankar Dial v. Amir Haidar (I. L. R., 2 Al. 752), Abdul Rahmun v. Muhammad Yar, (I. L. R., 280), and Kuriyali v. Mayan (I. L. L., 7 Madr. 255), referred to.—9 Al. 605.

In a suit under Act X of 1877, sec. 283, for a declaration of the proprietary right to certain immovable property attached in the execution of a decree, the plaintiff asked that the property might be "protected from sale." Held that consequential relief was claimed in the suit, and court-fees were therefore leviable under Act VII of 1870, sec. 7, cl. 4 (c), and not under sch. 2, art. 17 (iii).—2 Al. (F. B.) 720.

The L Bank advanced money to C, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara school of law, upon mortgage of ancestral property. S, who was stated to be C's only son, joined in the mortgage. Subsequently the Bank obtained a decree against C and S for the amount due on the mortgage. On attempting to sell the mortgaged property, other sons of C objected. This objection was allowed, and the mortgagees referred to a regular suit. They then sued all the sons of C to establish their lien on the mortgaged property. Held that the suit was maintainable under sec. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code. Muthoo Lall Chowdhry v. Shoukee Lall (10 B. L. R., 200), and Mussamut Dhasee v. Hurry Prosad (unreported) distinguished.—9 Cal. 888.

In order to enforce a decree which establishes a mortgage, and directs a sale of the mortgaged premises in satisfaction of the mortgage, it is not necessary to issue an attachment. If the decree contains, as it ought to contain, a direction for sale of the mortgaged premises, the proceeding under such a decree by attachment is unnecessary as well as expensive and dilatory. The direction for sale in the decree is in itself sufficient authority for the sale. That direction is founded on the specific lien or charge on the mortgaged premises created by the contract of mortgage, and not on the execution-clauses in the Code of Civil Procedure.—4 Bom. 515.

284. Any Court may order that any property which has been attached, or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree, shall be sold, and that the proceeds of such sale, or a sufficient portion thereof, shall be paid to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

Power to order property attached to be sold, and proceeds to be paid to person entitled.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

A sale having duly taken place in execution of a decree in force at the time cannot afterwards be set aside as against a bona fide purchaser, not a party to the decree, on the ground that, on further proceedings, the decree has been, subsequently to the sale, reversed by an Appellate Court. A suit was brought by a judgment-debtor to set aside sales of his property in execution of the decree against him in force at the time of the sales, but afterwards so modified, as the result of an appeal to Her Majesty in Council, that, as it finally stood, it would have been satisfied without the sales in question having taken place. He sued both those who were purchasers at some of the sales, being also holders of the decree to satisfy which the sales took place, and those who were bona fide purchasers at other sales, under the same decree, who were no parties to it. Held that, as against the latter purchasers, whose position was different from that of the decree-holding purchasers, the suit must be dismissed.—10 Al. 166.

When a property is sold in execution of a decree, it cannot be sold again at the instance of another decree-holder, who may have attached it before the attachment effected by the decree-holder under whose decree it is actually sold ; and when a judicial sale takes place, all previous attachments effected upon the property sold fall to the ground.—12 Cal. 317.

In execution of a decree, property situate in three Munsiffs, viz. Serajgunge, Pubna, and Nattore, all three being at that time portions of the District and subordinate to the Court of the Rajshaye, was attached and sold by order of the Court of the Munsiff of Serajgunge :—Held, by analogy to the principle on which the case of Kally Prosunno Bose v. Dinonath Mullick, 11 B. L. R., 56 ; 19 W. R., 434, was decided, that the sale was not necessarily limited only to the portion of the property situate in the Munsiff of Serajgunge, but that that Court might have jurisdiction to make a valid sale of the whole estate, although it might be more convenient in such a case that the sale should be held by superior Court having jurisdiction over the entire District.—12 Cal. 307.

285. Where property not in the custody of any Court has been attached in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, the Court which shall receive or realize such property, and shall determine any claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof, shall be the Court of highest grade, or, where there is no difference in grade between such Courts, the Court under whose decree the property was first attached.

At an execution-sale held by an inferior Court at the instance of the decree-holder (the Court itself, the decree-holder, and the auction purchaser being unaware of any objection to the exercise of a jurisdiction which the Court would ordinarily be competent to exercise), A purchased certain property, and his sale was confirmed. It appeared subsequently that this same property had, two years previous to the sale, been attached by a superior Court. On a sale of this property being advertized by the superior Court, A objected on the ground that he had already purchased it. This objection was overruled, and a sale was held by the superior Court, at which A again became the purchaser. A then brought a suit against the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in the inferior Court to recover as damages the sum paid by him at the sale. The suit was dismissed :—Held that, although the superior Court had been wrong in insisting on the second sale, and in not requiring the amount received by the inferior Court to have been deposited in the superior Court, and then rateably distributed amongst the creditors of the judgment-debtors, yet the sale by inferior Court was a good and valid sale ; and A's suit was therefore rightly dismissed. Obhoy Churn Coondoo v. Golam Ali (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 410) adopted.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 333.

X on the 3rd November 1884 obtained a decree in the Court of the Second Munsiff of Bagirhat against A, and on the 6th August 1887 sold such decree to the plaintiff, who on the 8th August 1887 applied in that Court for execution, and on the 5th September 1887 attached the share of A in a certain jama. The share was subsequently sold in execution of the plaintiff's decree on the 20th October 1887 and purchased by the plaintiff himself. Y having obtained another decree against A in the Court of the First Munsiff of Bagirhat on the 6th May 1875, sold his decree in the month of January or February 1887 to the defendant, who on the 10th February 1887 commenced execution proceedings in the First Munsiff's Court against A, and on the 16th July applied for attachment of A's share in the jama. A filed an objection which was disallowed, and the share was attached at the defendant's instance on the 28th July 1887, and the attachment was confirmed on appeal on the 26th November 1887. The plaintiff, on the strength of his purchase of the 20th October 1887, put in a claim in the month of April 1888 in the defendant's execution proceedings in the Court of the First Munsiff, which was, however, disallowed. He then filed a suit to set aside the order disallowing his claim, and for a declaration that the right, title and interest of A passed to him under the sale of the 20th Oct. 1887. Held, that though the property had been first attached in the Court of the First Munsiff, that Court was not a Court of a higher grade than that of the Second Munsiff within the meaning of section 285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the sale to the plaintiff was valid, and that he was entitled to the decree he prayed for. Bykant Nath Shaha v. Rajendro Narain Rai followed; Badri Prasad v. Saran Lal, Aghore Nath v. Shama Sundari dissented from, and Muttukaruppan Chetti v. Mutturamalinga Chetti referred to.—19 Cal. 651.

Where certain immoveable property which had been attached in execution of two decrees, one made by a Munsif, and the other by the District Court to which such Munsif was subordinate, was sold under the order of the Munsif, held (following In the matter of the petition of Badri Prasad; Bardi Prasad v. Saran Lal, I. L. R., 4 Al. (359) that the sale was bad by reason of the Munsif's want of jurisdiction to order it.—5 Al. 615.

Where property attached in execution of a decree of a Munsif's Court is, or becomes, subject to an attachment issued from a Subordinate Judge's Court, the holder of the decree in the Munsif's Court in order to share rateably in the assets under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must apply to the District Court to transfer his application to the Subordinate Court Gopeenath Acharje v. Achcha Bibee (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 553) and Jetha Madhavji v. Najeralli Abhramji (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 472) approved.—6 Madr. 357.

A, who had obtained a decree in the Court of the Second Munsif of B in September 1877, attached certain property within the jurisdiction which had been assigned to the Munsif by the District Judge under sec. 18 of Act VI of 1871. In the previous month C, who had obtained a decree in the Court of the Additional Munsif of B (to whom jurisdiction had similarly been assigned), had attached the same property. The sale in execution of A's decree took place first, and A became the purchaser. A then objected in the Court of the Additional Munsif that the property could not again be sold; but his objection was over-ruled, and two days subsequently the property was again put up for sale in execution of C's decree, and he became the purchaser. A brought various suits against the tenants for arrears of rent, in which C intervened. Held that the jurisdictions of the Munsifs were confined to the particular limits assigned to them, and that, as the property was situate within the limits assigned to the Second Munsif, the Additional Munsif had no jurisdiction to attach or sell it, and that the Attachment by C was made improperly and without jurisdiction. Quære.—Whether sec. 285 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to immoveable property.—7 Cal. 410.

Certain immoveable property was attached in execution of a decree made by a Subordinate judge, and also in execution of a decree made by a Munsif. These decrees were held by the same person, and the judgmentdebtor was the same person. Such property was sold in execution of both decrees. On the application of the judgment-debtor, who brought into Court the amount due on the decree made by the Subordinate Judge, and with the consent of the decree-holder and the auction purchaser, the Subordinate Judge made an illegal order setting aside such sale. Subsequently, on the application of the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser, the Munsif made an order confirming such sale. Per SPANKIE, J.—That the Subordinate Judge had not any jurisdiction under sec. 285 of the Civil Procedure Code to deal with such sale as regards the decree made by the Munsif, and the Munsif was not precluded by that section from confirming such sale as regards the decree made by him by reason that the Subordinate Judge, a Court of a higher grade, had made an order setting it aside. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That, having regard to the provisions of that section, it was doubtful whether the Munsif was competent to confirm such sale; but, inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge only intended to set it aside as regards the decree made by him, and his order was illegal, and the Munsif's order had done substantial justice, there was no reason to interfere.—3 Al. 356.

The provisions of sec- 285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, apply to immoveable property. Where a house, while under an attachment issued by a Subordinate Judge's Court in execution of a decree, was sold in execution of another decree against the same judgment-debtor by the District Munsif's Court, and was then sold by the Subordinate Judge's Court:—Held, that the sale by the District Munsif's Court was invalid by reason of the provisions of sec. 285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.—7 Madr. 47.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 255, noted under sec. 234.

G.—Of Sale and Delivery of Property.

(a) General Rules.

286. Sales in execution of decrees shall be conducted by an officer of the Court or by any other person whom the Court may appoint, and, except as provided in section 296, shall be made by public auction in manner hereinafter mentioned.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Civil Court, having power to issue execution on a decree, is competent, notwithstanding the absence of special provision in the Code, to refuse to confirm a sale in favour of a purchaser, who has, by the exercise of fraud and collusion with the execution-creditor, succeeded in being declared such purchaser at a depreciated value, although such sale may be without any material irregularity within the meaning of the Code. An order confirming a Court-sale is not appealable under the Code.—4 Ind. Jur. N. S., 505.

Where a judgment-debtor died after his land had been attached, and the creditor brought the land to sale without making the representatives of the deceased parties to the proceedings, held that the sale was illegal, and must be set aside.—I. L. R., 6 Madr. 180.

287. When any property is ordered to be sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made in the language of such Court. Such proclamation shall state the time and place of sale, and shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible—

Proclamation of sales by Public auction.

- (a) the property to be sold ;
- (b) the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate, when the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or a part of an estate paying revenue to Government ;
- (c) any incumbrance to which the property is liable ;
- (d) the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered ; and
- (e) every other thing which the Court considers material for the purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property.

For the purpose of ascertaining the matters so to be specified, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary, and examine him in respect to any such matters, and require him to produce any document in his possession or power relating thereto.

The High Court shall, as soon as may be after this Code comes into force, make rules for the guidance of the Courts in exercise of their duties under this section. The High Court may, from time to time, alter any rules so made. All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law. As regards his own Court and the Court of Small Causes at Rangoon, the Recorder of Rangoon shall be deemed to be a "High Court" within the meaning of this paragraph.

Nothing in this section shall apply to cases in which the execution of the decree has been transferred to the Collector.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Judge cannot order a Subordinate Judge to postpone a sale in a case pending before the Court of the latter officer. An application by a Collector under sec. 249 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the postponement of a sale in the execution of a decree of land paying revenue to Government should not be granted, where it is not alleged that satisfaction of the decree might be made within a reasonable period by a temporary alienation of the land.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 177.

The object of the proclamation under sec. 249 is to give notice to intending purchasers, not to the judgment-debtors.—12 W. R., 488.

Under sec. 287 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) and the Rules of the High Court made thereunder a Court cannot refuse to execute its own decree ordering the sale of immoveable property in the possession of a third party under a valid title. Rule I of the High Court Rules under that section permits inquiry into the title of the judgment-debtor in respect of moveable property only. Nor can a claim set up in an investigation held under sec. 287 be treated as a claim under sec. 278, the latter section having reference to claims to, and objections to attachment of property under attachment.—14 Bom. 369.

Where a sale in execution of a decree is postponed, whether indefinitely or to a fixed date, it is necessary, in the absence of an express arrangement between all the parties, that a fresh proclamation should be made giving notice of the day to which the sale has been postponed. It may be presumed, when the notice is wanting, that there has been an absence of bidders, from which alone substantial injury must probably have arisen to the judgment-debtor. Shib Prokash Singh v. Sardar Doyal Singh (I. L. R., 3 Cal. 544) and Okhoy Chunder Dutt v. Erskine (3 W. R., Mis. 11) followed.—I. L. R., 3 Cal. 542.

Upon an application to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground of material irregularities in publishing and conducting it, it appeared that the sale-notification had not been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by sec. 289 of Act X of 1877; that no affidavit as to search having been made in the Registry Office with regard to incumbrances as required by sec. 287 of the Act had been filed; and that the sale took place on, and not after, the thirtieth day from the publication of the notice; but it also appeared that the applicant had himself been present at the sale and had purchased the property, and it was not shown that any substantial injury had resulted from the irregularities. Held that there was no ground for setting aside the sale.—8 Cal. 932.

Certain immoveable property was put up for sale, under the provisions of Act X. of 1877, in execution of a decree for money, and was purchased by C, with notice that L held a decree enforcing a lien on such property. Subsequently L applied for the sale of such property in execution of his decree, and such property was put up for sale in execution of that decree, and was purchased by S. S sued, by virtue of such purchase, to recover possession of such property from C. Held that, inasmuch as under Act X of 1877 what is sold in execution of a decree purports to be the specific property, and as C had purchased the property in suit with notice of the existing lien on it, and subject to its re-sale in execution of the decree in execution of which S had purchased it, what actually was sold in execution of that decree to S was such property, and S was entitled to possession of such property under such sale. Sales under Act VIII. of 1859 and Act X. of 1877 distinguished.—3 Al. 647.

In the execution of a decree ordering the sale of immoveable property it is not competent for the Court to refuse to sell it, because a stranger to the suit in which such decree was obtained, who is in possession of such property, impeaches the decree as having been obtained by fraud; the course open to him, if he wishes the stay of execution, being to file a suit obtain an injunction for the purpose.—8 Bom. 582.

A creditor obtained two decrees against his debtor, one being a mortgage-decree to enforce his lien on certain property, and in other a simple money-decree. In execution of the second decree, the property over which the judgment-creditor had a lien was sold, and was purchased by a third person. Subsequently, in execution of the first decree, at the instance of the judgment-creditor, this same property was advertised for sale, but on the auction-purchaser objecting, the judgment-creditor brought a suit against him to enforce his lien on the property in the hands of the auction-purchaser. Held that it lay on the plaintiff, in order to entitle him to recover in the suit, to show that the defendants purchased with notice of the lien. Held further that the fact that for some purpose at some time or other the judgment-creditor informed the Court of the mortgage is not evidence of notice on the auction purchaser.—10 Cal. 609.

See I. L. R., 4 Bom. 323, noted under sec. 268 ; 10 Madr. 194, noted under sec. 268 ; 7 Cal. 34, noted under sec. 274 ; 17 Cal. 769, noted under sec. 244.

288. No Judge or other public officer shall be answerable for any error, mis-statement, or omission in any proclamation under section 287, unless the same has been committed or made dishonestly.

Indemnity of Judges, &c.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

289. The proclamation shall be made in manner prescribed by section 274, “on the spot where the property is attached,”* and a copy thereof shall then be fixed up in the court-house and, in the case of land paying revenue to Government, also in the Collector’s office.

Mode of making proclamation.

If the Court so direct, such proclamation shall also be published in the local official Gazette and in some local newspaper, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where property intended to be sold in execution of a decree is divided into a number of small lots, as a means of obtaining a better aggregate price, the law does not require that a separate proclamation of sale should be made on each lot into which the property is so divided. A mere breaking up of a property into lots does not necessarily make it several properties for the purposes of a proclamation of attachment or sale. Where estates, though embraced in the same process, are really at such a distance that there is no moral certainty of communication to persons on, or interested in, the one of what is publicly done on the other, there should, no doubt, be a separate proclamation on each, in order that full intimation may be given of what is to be done.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 368.

The words “on the spot where the property is attached” in sec. 289 refer to each property attached, and not to a group of separate properties attached under one proceeding or order in one execution case, and therefore, when distinct properties are proclaimed for sale in one execution, the omission to affix a copy of the proclamation in each of such properties amounts to an irregularity in the publication of the sale :—Held also that, where there is no evidence to connect the two elements of irregularity and injury under sec. 311, it must appear, before a Court can set aside an execution-sale, that the injury complained of is the reasonable and natural consequence of the irregularity, and attributable to it alone.—11 Cal. 74.

* See Act No. XII of 1891. (Repealing and Amending Act.)

A certificate of title under Act XI of 1859, sec. 28 and Bengal Act VII of 1868, sec. 11, issued before the expiry of the period of sixty days required by sec. 27 of Act XI of 1859 from the date of sale, is not a certificate duly issued under the provisions of these Acts, and cannot cure defects in the service of notice or in the proclamation of sale. The certificate in execution of which the plaintiff's estate was sold was not made or signed by the Collector of the district, but by a Deputy Collector: Held, that under sec. 7 of the Public Demands Recovery Act (VII of 1880) a certificate under the Act must be made and filed by the Collector of the district, and not by any officer gazetted to perform the functions of a Collector under Act VII of 1880.—18 Cal. 125.

A sale of revenue-paying land is not ipso facto void by reason of a copy of the sale proclamation not having been fixed up in the Collector's office as required by sec. 289 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An omission so to fix up such notice is an irregularity the remedy for which can only be by an application under sec. 311.—18 Cal. 422.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 300 and 7 Cal. 34, noted under sec. 274; 7 Cal. 466, noted under sec. 278; 8 Cal. 932, noted under sec. 287; 17 Cal. 769, noted under sec. 244.

290. Except in the case of property mentioned in the proviso to section 269, no sale under this chapter shall, without the consent in writing of the judgment-debtor, take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immoveable property, and of at least fifteen days in the case of moveable property, calculated from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been fixed up in the Court-house of the Judge ordering the sale.

Time of sale.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

It is competent to a bidder at a Court auction-sale to withdraw his bid.—I. L. R., 14 Madr. 235.

An infringement of the rule contained in sec. 290 is an irregularity vitiating a sale in execution of decree, and is something more than a material irregularity in publishing a sale to which sec. 311 refers.—7 Al. 289.

Neither the provisions of sec. 33 of Act XI of 1859, nor those of sec. 2, Bengal Act VII of 1868, affect the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain a suit to set aside a sale under a certificate on any of the following grounds, namely, that no arrears were due at all, that no notice was served in accordance with the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1880, or that the provisions of sec. 290 of the Civil Procedure Code were infringed. The words "in respect of sales in execution of decrees" in sec. 19 of Bengal Act VII of 1880 do not include any proceedings instituted after the sale for setting it aside. Secs. 311 and 312 of the Civil Procedure Code therefore do not apply to sales under a certificate. The infringement of the provisions of sec. 290 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a mere irregularity, but it vitiates the sale—Bakshi Nand Kishore v. Malak Chand, I. L. R., 7 Al. 289. The provision in sec. 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1880, as to the certificate becoming absolute and acquiring the force and effect of a final decree, does not come into operation unless the notice required by sec. 10 is actually served. The only remedy of a judgment where property has been sold in execution of a certificate issued under Bengal Act VII of 1880, and who has sustained substantial injury by reason of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, is by way of an appeal under sec. 2 of Bengal Act VII of 1868. The effect of sec. 2 of Bengal Act VII of 1880 is that Act of XI of 1859, and Bengal Acts VII of 1868, VII of 1880 are to be considered as if the provisions contained in them were contained in one Act so far as such construction is consistent with the tenor of the last mentioned Act. By the force therefore of sec. 2 of the Act of 1880, the provisions of sec. 2 of the Act of 1868 became applicable to a sale under an execution issued upon a certificate made under the Act of 1880, Bengal Act VII of 1880 is an Act for the recovery of all kinds of public demands, and therefore applies to cases of road or other public cesses.—14 Cal. 1.

Where a sale in execution of decree was adjourned on the application of one of two judgment-debtors, who waived the issue of a fresh proclamation of sale, and the interests of both were sold, held, on the application of the other judgment-debtor to set aside the sale, that the omission to issue a fresh proclamation of sale under sec. 291 of the Civil Procedure Code amounted only to an irregularity, and did not vitiate the sale. Held further, that the District Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal from an order passed after the 1st of July 1888, under the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act of 1888, although the execution proceedings were commenced before that date. Rameshur Singh v. Sheodin Singh, I. L. R., 12 Al. 510: Sotish Chunder Rai Chowdhuri v. Thomas, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 658. followed in principle.—18 Cal. 496.

An application made on the day of sale by the judgment-debtor, that a part only of his property may be sold instead of the entirety, cannot be considered such a "consent" as, by virtue of sec. 290 of Act X of 1877, would do away with the necessity of a proclamation for sale being issued thirty days before the day fixed for sale. Where successive postponements of the day of sale have been made, but the last of these is made by the Court on its own motion, without any application for postponement of sale being made on the part of the judgment-debtor (although such postponement might be for his benefit), a strict compliance with the rule that thirty days must elapse between the proclamation and the actual day of sale is requisite. Ray Ganri Nath Sahay v. Shah Fukeer Chand (18 W. R., 347) distinguished. Where a decree for sale of certain property was obtained under Act VIII of 1859, and the property was sold, but an order was passed after the new Code of Procedure (Act X of 1887), had come into force setting aside such sale, held, that an appeal would lie from such an order under Act X of 1877. Runjit Singh v. Meherban Koer (I. L. R., 3 Cal. 662) followed.—5 Cal. 259.

Certain immoveable property was, on the 15th February 1879, notified for sale under a decree of a Civil Court on 15th March following, so that only 29, instead of 30, days elapsed between the day of the sale and the notification. The sale having taken place, the execution-debtor applied to the Deputy Commissioner to set it aside upon the ground that the sale was illegal, the requirements of Act X of 1877, sec. 290, being essential to its validity. Upon that ground the sale was set aside as illegal by the Deputy Commissioner. On appeal, the Judicial Commissioner reversed this decision, on the ground that the fact of the sale having taken place 29 instead of 30 days after the notification was merely an irregularity, and that, as the execution-debtor had not shown that he had suffered any damage from the irregularity, the sale ought to be confirmed. An application was then made to a Division Bench of the High Court to set aside the order of the Judicial Commissioner confirming the sale, upon the ground that it was manifestly erroneous; and the Division Bench referred the question to a Full Bench. Whether, assuming the requirements of sec. 290 to be essential to the validity of a sale, the High Court had any power, either under 24 and 25 Vic., cl., 105, sec. 15, or Act X of 1877, sec. 622, as amended, to set aside the Judicial Commissioner's order? Held by the Full Bench, without answering the question referred, that, assuming the requirements of sec. 290 to be essential, the High Court had a right, under its summary powers, to set aside the sale itself, notwithstanding (and apart from the question whether it would set aside) the order of the Judicial Commissioner.—5 Cal. 878.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 300, noted under sec. 274.

291. The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn any sale under this chapter (other than a sale by the Collector) to a specified day and hour, and the officer conducting any such sale may, in his discretion, adjourn the sale, recording his reasons for such adjournment: Provided that, when the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the Court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court. Whenever a sale is adjourned under this section for a longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation under section 289 shall be made, unless the judgment debtor consents to waive it. Every such sale shall be stopped if, before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to such officer, or proof is given to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court that ordered the sale.

Power to adjourn sale.

Stoppage of sale on tender of debt and costs, or on proof of payment.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 34, noted under sec. 274; 17 Cal. 152, noted under sec. 311; 18 Cal. 496, noted under sec. 290; 10 Al. 1, noted under sec. 244.

292. No officer having any duty to perform in connection with any sale under this chapter shall, either directly or indirectly, bid for, acquire, or attempt to acquire, any interest in any property sold at such sale.

Officers concerned in execution-sales not to bid for or buy property sold.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Pleaders of parties to a suit are not debarred by sec. 292 of the Code of Civil Procedure from purchasing property sold in execution of the decree.—I. L. R., 10 Madr. 111.

See I. L. R., 15 Madr. 389, noted under sec. 311.

293. The deficiency of price (if any) which may happen on a re-sale under this Code by reason of the purchaser's default, and all expenses attending such re-sale, shall be certified to the Court by the officer holding the sale, and shall, at the instance of either the judgment-creditor or the judgment-debtor, be recoverable from the defaulter under the rules contained in this chapter for the execution of a decree for money.

Defaulting purchaser answerable for loss by resale.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to re sales under sec. 297.)

In execution of a decree, certain property of the judgment-debtor was attached and put up for sale, and a portion thereof was knocked down to a purchaser for a sum sufficient to satisfy the decree. The purchaser, however, having made default in payment of the purchase-money, the property was again put up for sale, and the portion previously sold was purchased by the decree-holder at a price less than the amount bid for it at the former sale. Held that the decree-holder was not debarred by what took place at the former sale from proceeding to satisfy his decree by sale of other portions of the attached property than that originally sold.—13 B. L. R., 114; 21 W. R., 149.

The provisions of sec. 251 of the Civil Procedure Code give the officer conducting a sale of moveable property a discretion to allow the purchase-money to be paid at a reasonable time after the sale has been made.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 37.

In computing the fifteen days allowed for payment of the balance of the purchase-money under sec. 254, Act VIII. of 1859, the day of sale was excluded.—3 Agra H. C. R., 204.

The provisions of sec. 293, Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code), for making a defaulting purchaser at a sale liable for any deficiency on a re-sale, extend to all sales, whether of moveable or immoveable property, and also to re-sales held under secs. 297, 306, & 308.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 337.

At a sale in execution of a decree the property was knocked down to a bidder at Rs. 260. The bidder was unable to make a deposit, and the property was immediately put up for sale and re-sold for Rs. 50. Held that the judgment-debtor had sustained such substantial injury as would justify the Court in setting aside the sale, notwithstanding that the judgment-debtor might, under sec. 293 of the Civil Procedure Code, have issued to recover the difference between the original bid and the price at which the property was sold.—9 Cal. 98.

No appeal lies from an order under sec. 293 of the Code of Civil Procedure directing a defaulting purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree to make good the loss happening on a re-sale occasioned by his default. Ram Dayal v. Ram Das, and Baijnath Sahai v. Maheep Narain Singh dissented from. Soudagar Mal v. Abdul Rahman Khan, Bahim Baksh v. Dhuri followed. So held by EDGE, C. J., MAHMOOD and KNOX, JJ., STRAIGHT, J., dissenting.—14 Al. 201.

Where property has been sold under a decree, and the purchaser at the execution-sale has made default in paying the purchase-money, the remedy of the judgment-creditor is not limited by sec. 254 of Act VIII of 1859 to a suit against the defaulting purchaser. He is entitled to recover the balance of his debt from his judgment-debtor, who may, perhaps, have his remedy against the defaulting purchaser. Joobraji Singh v. Gaur Buksh Lal (7 Cal. W. R., Civ. Rul., 110) dissented from.—2 Bom. 562.

A purchaser of property at a Court-sale who fails to pay the deposit (25 per cent. on the purchase-money) directed to be paid by sec. 306 of the Civil Procedure Code is a defaulting purchaser within the meaning of sec. 293 of that Code, and liable, as such, to make good any deficiency of price which may happen on a re-sale, and all expenses attending the same. A sale in which a decree-holder himself, or some other person for him, without the permission of the Court first obtained, becomes the purchaser, is not, ipso facto, void; it is a good sale unless and until set aside by the Court under the provisions of sec. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code.—5 Bom. 575.

No appeal lies from an order under sec. 293 of the Code of Civil Procedure directing a defaulting purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree to make good the loss happening on a re-sale in execution of a decree to make good the loss happening on a re-sale occasioned by his default. Sou-dagar Mal v. Abdul Rahman Khan and Tapesri Lal v. Deokinandan Rai followed.—13 Al. 569.

See I. L. R., 12 Madr. 454, noted under sec. 244.

294. No holder of a decree in execution of which property is sold shall, without the express permission of the Court, bid for or purchase the property.

Decree-holder not to bid for or buy property without permission.

When a decree-holder purchases with such permission, the purchase-money and the amount due on the decree may, if he so desires, be set-off against one another, and the Court executing the decree shall enter up satisfaction of the decree in whole or in part accordingly.

If decree-holder purchase, amount of decree may be taken as payment.

When a decree-holder purchases, by himself or through another person, without such permission, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of the judgment-debtor or any other person interested in the sale, by order set aside the sale; and the costs of such application and order, and any deficiency of price which may happen on the re-sale, and all expenses attending it, shall be paid by the decree-holder.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A mortgagee who has obtained a mortgage-decree, and after obtaining permission to bid at the sale held in execution of such decree has become the purchaser, does not stand in a fiduciary position towards his mortgagor. Hart v. Tara Prasanna Mukerji (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 718) distinguished. A mortgagee in such position, therefore, is at liberty to take out further execution for any balance of the amount decreed that may be left after deducting the price for which the mortgaged property was sold, and is not bound to credit the judgment-debtor with the real value of the property to be ascer-ained by the Court. The permission to a mortgagee to bid, should be very cautiously granted, and only when it is found, after proceeding with a sale, that no purchaser at an adequate price can be found, and even then, only after some enquiry as to whether the sale-proclamation has been duly published.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 132.

A decree-holder (a mortgagee) who has, after obtaining leave to bid at a sale, purchased the mortgaged premises, is in the same position as an independent purchaser, and is only bound to give credit to the mortgagor for the actual amount of his bid.—19 Cal. 4.

No appeal lies from an order passed under sec. 294 refusing permission to a decree-holder to bid at a sale in execution of his decree.—13 Cal. 174.

Under the terms of sec. 294, it is discretionary with the Court to set aside an execution-sale at which the decree-holder has bid and purchased without first obtaining permission from the Court so to do; and in dealing with such a case, the Courts, although considering the matter as an irregularity in the conduct of the sale, will not interfere with the sale, unless it can be shown that the judgment-debtor has suffered some substantial injury arising from such irregularity.—11 Cal. 731.

In 1884 the plaintiff brought the present suit against the defendant to recover possession of a certain house which he had purchased at a sale held on the 15th March 1880, in execution of a money-decree obtained against one Chintaman Damodar. He obtained a certificate of sale on the 3rd January 1880, which was registered on the 13th of the same month. The defendant had previously purchased the same property at a sale held on the 22nd November 1875, in execution of a decree obtained by him as mortgagee against the said Chintaman. The defendant had obtained a certificate of sale, and was put into possession, but had not then registered the certificate. He subsequently obtained another certificate, which was registered in June 1882. In a suit by the plaintiff for possession. Held that the plaintiff could not recover. The defendant had acquired, under the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), by the sale and the confirmation of it, a beneficial interest, and the plaintiff by his subsequent purchase in execution of a money-decree against Chintaman took subject to that interest. The grant to the defendant of the second certificate, which was registered, sufficiently proved that the sale to him had been confirmed. It was contended that, under sec. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), the defendant took nothing by his purchase, as he was the holder of the decree in execution of which the property was sold. Held, that this objection could not now be made, as the right of the judgment-debtor (Chintaman) and of the plaintiff, as purchaser of his rights, to have the defendant's purchase set aside on this ground, had been barred by limitation long before this suit was brought. The purchase by the defendant was not void ab initio, but only voidable "on the application of the judgment-debtor or other person interested in the sale." Further, such an application was a matter in execution falling under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and therefore, even if not barred before the passing of the Limitation Act, XV of 1877, would be barred by article 178 of that Act not later than the 1st October 1880.—11 Bom. 588.

A obtained a money-decree against B and others jointly for Rs. 112, and, in consideration of a payment of Rs. 25 made by B, agreed to release B from all liability under the decree. This payment was not certified to the Court, and A afterwards, in execution of the decree, had certain immoveable property belonging to B put up for sale, and this property he purchased himself. Held that a suit would lie by B to set aside the sale and to recover the property from A.—9 Cal. 788.

A purchase by the son of a decree-holder, undivided in interest from his father, is a purchase by the decree-holder within the meaning of sec. 294 of Act X of 1877 as it stood previously to its amendment by Act XII of 1879, and is absolutely void, if the purchase were made with funds which were the joint property of the father and son. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the legal presumption would be that the funds were joint property.—5 Bom. 130.

Where there are competing decree holders, who have applied for execution of their decrees, sec. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) must be taken as subject to the provisions of sec. 295, so that the decree-holder, who has been permitted under the former section to purchase the property in execution of his own decree, must share the proceeds of the sale rateably with such competing decree-holders, and will not be allowed to set off the purchase-money against the amount due to him on his decree.—6 Bom. 570.

The holder of a decree, in execution of which property is sold, is absolutely bound under Act X of 1877, sec. 294, to have express permission from the Court before he can purchase the property ; and whether this objection is taken and pressed or otherwise, a sale to him is invalid, unless he has got explicit permission. The use, at a sale, of language by an intending bidder in disparagement of the property for the purpose of influencing by standers, and deterring them from bidding for the property, is a " material irregularity," sufficient to render the sale invalid, under sec. 311 of the same Act.—5 Cal. 308.

The holder of a decree for unascertained mesne-profits, who has applied to the Court to ascertain the amount thereof, and to attach immoveable property under sec. 255 of the Code of Civil Procedure, comes within the purview of sec. 295, and is entitled to share rateably with the attaching creditor in the assets realized. Sec. 294 must be read with sec. 295, and to give effect to both sections the receipt to be given by the decree-holder, who has obtained leave to bid from the Court, and has purchased the property sold, can only be accepted for so much of the judgment-debt as the assets applicable to its discharge may suffice to satisfy.—5 Madr. 123.

There is no appeal to the High Court from an order refusing to set aside a sale unless such order is made under secs. 294, 312, or 313 of the Civil Procedure Code.—10 Cal. 368.

A mortgagee having obtained a decree, declaring his lien on certain property, put up for sale, in execution of this decree, the mortgaged property. The decree-holder asked for, but was refused, leave to bid at the sale, but, notwithstanding such refusal, purchased the property in the name of a third person. Possession under the sale was opposed, and the decree-holder as purchaser brought a suit for possession of the property. The defendants contended that, inasmuch as the plaintiff (decree-holder) had been refused leave to bid at the sale, his purchase could not be enforced. Held that the plaintiff had been guilty of an abuse of the process of the Court in bidding at the sale and buying the property benami, and that the sale, therefore, ought not to be enforced.—10 Cal. 757.

295. Whenever assets are realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree, and more persons than one have, prior to the realization, applied to the Court by which such assets are held for execution of decrees for money against the same judgment-debtor, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of the realization, shall be divided rateably among all such persons :

Provided as follows :—

(a) when any property is sold subject to a mortgage or charge, the mortgagee or incumbrancer shall not as such be entitled to share in any surplus arising from such sale :

Proceeds of execution-sale to be divided rateably among decree-holders.
Proviso where property is sold subject to mortgage.

(b) when any property liable to be sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage or charge, the Court may, with the assent of the mortgagee or incumbrancer, order that the property be sold free from the mortgage or charge, giving to the mortgagee or incumbrancer the same right against the proceeds of the sale as he had against the property sold :

(c) when immoveable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance thereon, the proceeds of sale shall be applied—first, in defraying the expenses of the sale ;

secondly, in discharging the interest and principal-money due on the incumbrance ;

thirdly, in discharging the interest and principal-money due on subsequent incumbrances (if any) ; and fourthly, rateably among the holders of decrees for money against the judgment-debtor, who have, prior to the sale of the said property, applied to the Court which made the decree ordering such sale for execution of such decrees, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof.

If all or any of such assets be paid to a person not entitled to receive the same, any person so entitled may sue such person to compel him to refund the assets.

Nothing in this section affects any right of the Government.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In order to obtain relief under sec. 28 of Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must prove that the tenant holds under a grant made since 1st December 1790. By the word "decision" in sec. 372 of Act VIII. of 1859 is meant the decree and judgment taken together, and not simply the decree unexplained by the judgment.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1.

Sec. 270 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to a case in which property has not been sold in execution of a decree.—8 W. R., 501; 11 Bom. H. C. R., 159.

Sec. 270, Act VIII. of 1859, applied only to rival decree-holders claiming under different decrees, and not to persons claiming under the same decree.—2 Agra H. C. R., 183.

An order by a Principal Sadr Amin made on the application of a third party, that certain sale-proceeds which he had already directed to be rateably distributed among certain decree-holders should be withheld from one of them, was held to have been made without jurisdiction.—11 W. R., 54. S. C., 2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 217.

The Court having jurisdiction to adjudicate the conflicting claims of attaching creditors is the Court in which the attached money is deposited.—16 W. R., 11.

A mortgaged certain property to B in July 1874, to C in March 1877, and again to B in November 1877. B obtained a decree directing the sale of the property in satisfaction of his two mortgages, and it was sold accordingly. Subsequent to the sale, C obtained a similar decree upon his mortgage, and having unsuccessfully applied in his own suit to have his decree satisfied out of the sale proceeds after payment of B's first mortgage of July 1874, brought a suit under the last paragraph but one of sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code to recover the amount received by B in respect of B's mortgage of November 1877. Held that to read the words "an incumbrance" in sec. 295, proviso (c) of the Civil Procedure Code as "an incumbrance or incumbrances," so as to give priority to B's mortgage of November 1877, over C's earlier mortgage of March 1877, would be to defeat the intention of the Legislature as expressed in that section and also in sec. 80 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882); and that C was entitled to maintain the suit.—I. L. R., 12 Al. 546.

In distributing the proceeds of execution under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882), the Court has power to inquire into the bona fides of the several decree-holders that apply for rateable distribution, if the same has been called in question, and to decide it in the same manner as all other questions that arise in execution. The party aggrieved by such a decision is entitled, under the last clause of the section, to bring a regular suit to compel the successful judgment-debtor in execution to refund.—13 Bom. 154.

An order under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) refusing a decree-holder's application for a rateable distribution of the assets realized by a sale or otherwise in execution of a decree, is not an order "in a proceeding other than a suit" within the meaning of article 13 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). On the 21st August, 1885, the defendant attached, in execution of a money decree, certain immoveable property belonging to his judgment-debtor. On the 18th January, 1886, plaintiff, who held another decree against the same judgment-debtor, applied, under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), for a rateable distribution of the assets to be realized by the sale of the property attached. On the 19th March, 1886, the attached property was put up for sale in execution of the defendants decree. The defendant was allowed to buy the property at the sale and set off the purchase-money against the amount due to him under the decree under section 294, and no money was, therefore, paid into Court. On the 14th June, 1886, the Court held that as no money had been paid into Court on account of the sale, no further proceedings could be taken on the plaintiff's application for a rateable share of the assets, and his application was accordingly rejected. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the defendant to compel him to refund the assets wrongly paid to him. The Court of first instance decided in plaintiff's favour. The lower appellate Court rejected the plaintiff's claim as barred by article 13, Schedule II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), on the ground that the suit was not brought within one year from the date of the Court's order refusing the plaintiff's application under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the suit was not governed by article 13 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The order made under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code was no bar to the suit, and a suit to set it aside was unnecessary. Gowri Prasad Kundu v. Ram Ratan Sircar (I. L. R., 13 Cal., 159) dissented from.—15 Bom. 438.

Hurgovandas Kuber was the holder of a decree in Suit No. 657 of 1869 for Rs. 69,467 against the firm of Hirji, Bhimji & Co., and in execution thereof he attached a certain house belonging to the estate of one Hirji Dossa, deceased, who had been a partner in that firm. Vizbai (the respondent) was the legal representative of Hirji Dossa. On the 9th November 1886, Vizbai purchased the decree from Hurgovandas Kuber for Rs. 18,000, which sum she obtained for the purpose as a loan from Canji Parbut & Co. As a security for this loan she gave Canji Parbut & Co. a letter, dated the 9th November 1886, whereby she agreed to repay the loan out of the proceeds of the sale of the house which had been attached in execution of the decree which she had purchased. In the meantime another decree, viz., in Suit No. 8 of 1870, had been obtained against the firm of Hirji, Bhimji & Co., and had been, prior to the 9th November 1886, purchased by the appellant Munmohandas, who had also, prior to the 9th November 1886, applied for execution. On the 6th April 1887, the attached house was sold by the Sheriff, and realized Rs. 45,000. On the 5th September 1887, an order was made in chambers that the Sheriff should divide rateably the moneys in his hands in Suit No. 657 of 1869 between Munmohandas and Vizbai. Munmohandas appealed, and contended that by the transaction between Vizbai and Hurgovandas Kuber the decree in Suit No. 657 of 1869 had been extinguished as against the estate of Hirji Dossa, and that the said transaction amounted, in law and fact, to a purchase, on behalf of the estate of Hirji Dossa, of the properties attached in the said suit, or the proceeds thereof. Held, confirming the order appealed from, that Vizbai was entitled to a rateable proportion of the moneys in question. She was only liable under the decree held by the appellant Munmohandas as the representative of Hirji Dossa. So far as she might have had property of her own, not derived from Hirji Dossa's estate, available for the purchase of Hurgovandas's decree, she stood in the same position as a third party who might have purchased Hurgovandas's share of the proceeds before they were realized. The purchase of Hurgovandas's share with her own money could not prejudice Munmohandas any more than if an entire stranger had purchased. The fact that she borrowed the money and gave the share as a security to the lender did not affect the question. If the money did not come from Hirji Dossa's estate, it could not matter whether it came directly from Vizbai's pocket or from another person at her request. If the money was derived from a source having no connexion, directly or indirectly, with the estate indebted, there is no distinction, in principle, between the representative of the indebted estate and a stranger.—13 Bom. 171.

The plaintiffs in this suit obtained a decree against all three defendants A, B and C. In execution of such decree they attached two sets of securities, (i) municipal bonds, the joint property of B and C; and (ii) Government loan notes, the property of C alone. These were sold by the Sheriff, but before they were so sold, the holders of decree in two other High Court suits came in and applied to the High Court for execution of their decrees, which decrees were against C alone. These last-mentioned decree-holders now claimed to participate rateably with the plaintiffs in this suit in the realized proceeds of both the above-mentioned securities. The plaintiffs in this suit contended that such decree-holders, having decrees only against C, were not claiming against "the same judgment-debtors" as themselves within the meaning of section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882). Held, that as regards the proceeds of the Government loan notes, the sole property of C, the plaintiffs' decree and the other two decrees were all decrees "against the same judgment-debtor," and that, therefore, as regards that fund, all three sets of decree-holders were equally entitled and must share therein rateably. Held, further, that as regards the other fund, the proceeds of the property of B and C, only the plaintiffs in this suit were entitled thereto, since the other decree-holders had no decrees against B and C, and, therefore, not "against the same judgment-debtors" as was the decree of the plaintiffs. Held, further, that the plaintiffs having two funds to proceed against, whilst the other decree-holders had but one of these two, the equitable principle of marshalling should be applied and the plaintiffs required to satisfy themselves as far as possible out of the fund not available to the other decree-holders, before they had recourse to the other fund common to all, and as regards the latter fund the plaintiffs should claim against the same only as creditors for the then unsatisfied balance of their debt rateably with such other decree-holders. Shumbhu Nath Poddar v. Luckynath Dey (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 920) and Deboki Nundun Sen v. Hart (I. L. R., 12 Cal. 294) considered and followed. Another holder of a decree—a Small Cause Court decree passed against all three debtors A, B and C—had previously to the said attachments by the Sheriff in this suit himself attached the same securities through the Small Cause Court. He did not, however, at any time get his decree transferred to the High Court. He now came in in these execution proceedings and claimed to share rateably in both funds on the same footing as the plaintiffs in this suit. Held, that, not having had his Small Cause Court decree transferred to the High Court before the realization of the said securities, or indeed at any time, he was not entitled to share in either fund.—Mattalgiri v. Muttayyar (I. L. R., 6 Madr. 357) followed.—16 Bom. 683.

U held a money-decree against B. P. and R., in execution whereof he caused to be attached and sold certain property belonging to B. D held a decree against B. P. R. and S. which, so far as P. R. and S. were concerned, was a decree for enforcement of hypothecation by sale of the judgment-debtor's property, but which did not direct the sale of specific property belonging to B. An application by D, under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, for an order enabling him to share rateably in the proceeds of U's execution, was rejected. Held that, there being no question of fraud in the case, D was entitled to enforce his decree in the first instance against the property of B; that his decree against B did not lose the character of a decree for money under sec. 295 of the Code, because it directed a sale of the property of the other judgment-debtors; and that the fact that there were four judgment-debtors in D's decree and only three in U's would not deprive D of the right to share rateably. Shumbhu Nath Poddar v. Lucky Nath Dey (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 920) referred to. Deboki Nundun Sen v. Hart (I. L. R., 12 Cal. 298), Gagat Narain Pal v. Dhundhey Rai (I. L. R., 5 Al. 566), and Hart v. Tara Prasanna Mukerji (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 718), distinguished.—10 Al. 35.

No appeal will lie from an order under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure dismissing, on the ground that the decree was barred by limitation, a decree-holder's application to share in the assets realized under another decree against the same judgment-debtor. Such an order cannot be regarded as a decree under sec. 244 read with sec. 2 of the said Code.—14 Al. 210.

Certain land was mortgaged to A with possession to secure the repayment of a loan of Rs. 2,000 and interest. It was stipulated in the deed that the interest on the debt should be paid out of the profits, and the balance paid to the mortgagors. By an agreement subsequently made, it was arranged that the mortgagors should remain in possession and pay rent to A. A obtained a decree for Rs. 2,000 and arrears of rent and costs, and for the sale of the land in satisfaction of the amount decreed. The land was sold for Rs. 2,855 in March 1881. In May 1881 B, a puisne mortgagee, applied to the Court for payment to him of Rs. 500 of this sum, alleging that A was entitled only to Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 280 costs, but not to arrears of rent, in preference to his claim as second mortgagee. The claim of B was rejected on the 27th May 1881, and the whole amount paid out to A. In February 1882 B (who had filed a suit on the 23rd March 1881) obtained a decree upon his mortgage. On the 23rd May 1884, B sued to recover Rs. 510 paid to A on account of rent on the 27th May 1881. The lower Courts dismissed the suit on the grounds (1) that A was entitled to treat the arrears of rent as interest; (2) that the suit was barred by limitation:—Held, on second appeal, that B was entitled to recover the sum claimed.—9 Madr. 57.

A debtor against whom several decrees had been passed, filed his petition in the Insolvent Court at Madras, and the usual vesting order was made. One of the decree-holders had already attached property of the insolvent and had obtained an order for sale in a District Court, and now another decree-holder applied to the same Court in execution of his decrees for the attachment of the property, and for rateable distribution of the proceeds of the sale to be held in execution of the attachment already made. The District Judge held that the vesting order was a bar to both of these applications:—Held, (1) that the order rejecting the application for fresh attachments was right; (2) that the order rejecting the application for rateable distribution was wrong, and that the High Court had power to set it aside on revision under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 622.—15 Madr. 372.

G and C held decrees against B, and took out execution of them; and the judgment-debtor's property was attached, but no sale took place. The judgment-debtor paid into Court the sum of Rs. 1,200 on account of G's decree:—Held that G was entitled to the sum of Rs. 1,200 paid into Court by the judgment-debtor, and it could not be regarded as assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree, so as to be rateably divisible between the decree-holders under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as it could not be said that there was a realization from the property of the judgment-debtor.—8 Al. 67.

Where an auction purchaser seeks to have refunded the price paid by him for property sold in execution of a decree, on the ground that at the time of sale the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest therein, it is competent to him to proceed by way of a regular suit against the person into whose hands such price has come as such person's rateable share of the assets of the judgment-debtor under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure. He is not limited to the procedure in the execution department mentioned in sec. 315 of the said Code. Munna Singh v. Gajadhar Singh followed.—13 Al. 383.

Where a judgment-creditor has obtained a decree against two judgment-debtors A and B, and in execution of that decree has attached and caused to be sold joint property belonging to such judgment-debtors, another judgment creditor holding a decree against A alone, who was also applied for execution, is not entitled to claim, under the provisions of sec. 295 to share rateably in the sale-proceeds, the decree not being against the same judgment-debtor, and a Court having no power in execution proceedings to ascertain the respective shares of joint judgment-debtors. In Shumbhoo Nath Poddar v. Luckynath Dey, (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 920), it was not intended to lay down that a person who has obtained a decree for money against a single judgment-debtor is entitled to come in and share rateably with a person who has obtained a decree against the same judgment-debtor and other persons.—12 Cal. 294.

The words "decree-holders" or "persons holding decrees for money against the same judgment-debtor," in sec. 295 signify bona fide decree-holders. A Court is bound, in cases falling within this section, to satisfy itself whether the claimants are bona fide decree-holders within the meaning of the section, and where it is unable to satisfy itself as to the bona fides of the claim, the Court should exclude such claimant from the distribution of assets.—11 Cal. 42.

The cause of action given by the last para. but one of sec. 295 does not arise until the money has been actually paid over to the person who is alleged not to be entitled to receive the same, and a suit brought by a person claiming to be entitled to be paid a share of sale-proceeds under that section, and to recover the same from another to whom such sale-proceeds have been ordered to be paid, if brought before they have been actually paid to such other person, is premature, and should be dismissed. Every decree, by virtue of which money is payable, is, to that extent, a "decree for money" within the meaning of that term as used in sec. 295, even though other relief may be granted by the decree; and the holder of such decree is entitled to claim rateable distribution of sale-proceeds with holders of decrees for money only under that section. There is nothing in sec. 295 which takes away the right from a mortgagee who has obtained a decree upon his mortgage to proceed against the property of his mortgagor other than that subject to his mortgage. Thus, the holder of a mortgage-decree, which directs that the amount be realized from the mortgaged property, and from the mortgagor personally, is entitled to claim rateable distribution under that section, and is not, in the first instance bound to proceed against his mortgage-security and exhaust that. A mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage is not restricted to proceedings in the first instance against his mortgage-security before proceeding against other property of his mortgagor, but when he sells any portion of the property, the subject of his mortgage, and purchases it himself, he is bound, before he can proceed further against the mortgagor, or claim rateable distribution under sec. 295 to prove that there is still a balance due to him, and that the property sold and purchased by him realized a fair amount, the mere fact of the property having been sold at auction not being alone sufficient to prove its value, and this ought to be enquired into most carefully by the Court to which an application is made to further execute the decree, or to share rateably under sec. 295.—11 Cal. 718.

Certain moveable property was at first attached in execution of a money decree passed by a Subordinate Judge in his Small Cause jurisdiction, of which a part was afterwards sold. In execution of a money-decree passed by the same Subordinate Judge in his ordinary jurisdiction the remaining property was attached and sold. Prior to the date of this sale the applicant applied for execution of a money-decree passed in his favour by the same Subordinate Judge in his Small Cause jurisdiction, and prayed for rateable distribution of the proceeds along with other decree-holders :—Held that the application must be allowed. Although a Subordinate Judge, invested under Act XIV of 1869, sec. 28, with small Cause powers, acquires the jurisdiction of two Courts, he does not become the Judge of two Courts, but remains the Judge of a Subordinate Court.—9 Bom. 174.

S and L held mortgage-bonds executed in their favour by the same person. S's bond was dated the 16th June 1882, and was registered, the registration being compulsory. L's bond was of prior date, the 30th December 1880, and was not registered, the registration being optional. Both instituted suits on their bonds against the obligor, and obtained decrees for sale of the property, the decrees being passed on the same day. The property was attached in execution of both decrees on the 14th August 1882. The sale-proceeds were divided by the Court executing the decrees equally between the parties by an order dated the 1st May 1883, notwithstanding that S claimed the whole on the ground that he was an incumbrancer under a decree passed on a registered instrument, and therefore entitled to priority. S, being dissatisfied with this order, brought a suit to recover from L the moiety of the sale-proceeds paid to him :—Held that the suit being one to compel the defendant to refund assets of an execution-sale which he was not entitled to receive, and to set aside the order of the Court executing the decree, which directed the payment of the assets to him, was expressly allowed to be brought under the provisions of the penultimate paragraph of sec. 295 and could not be regarded as a suit of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes. Held also that the registered bond of the plaintiff took effect as regards the property comprised in it against the defendant's unregistered bond under sec. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), which gave priority to the incumbrance created by the former bond over the incumbrance created by the latter, and this priority was not affected by the subsequent decrees obtained on the bonds, which only gave effect to the respective rights under the bond. The meaning of sec. 295 is that, when immoveable property is sold in execution of decrees ordering its sale for the discharge of incumbrances, the sale-proceeds are to be applied in satisfaction of incumbrances according to their priority.—7 Al. 378.

In execution of a decree against M the plaintiff attached and advertised for sale certain property in mouza A. At that time there were pending proceedings in execution of two other decrees obtained against M by the first and second defendants respectively. These two decrees were obtained on a bond executed by M, by which an eight-anna share of mouza A was hypothecated as collateral security; and in execution of those decrees the defendants brought to sale, and themselves purchased, not an eight-anna share only, but the whole of mouza A, and were allowed by the Court to set off the purchase-money against the amounts due to them under their decrees. At the same time the plaintiff's execution-case was struck off on 30th June 1880. In a suit brought by the plaintiff under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code for his share of the sale-proceeds of mouza A, in which the plaintiff alleged fraud on the part of the defendant in selling the whole mouza under their decrees, of which he only became aware in July 1882, from which time he dated his cause of action, the defendants denied the fraud, and contended that the suit should have been brought within a year of the order of the 30th June 1880; that a set-off having been allowed to the defendants, the plaintiff was not entitled to any rateable distribution; and that, if any rateable distribution were allowed, they were entitled to have an allowance made in respect of a Mortgage which the plaintiff held in a two-anna share of mouza A, which they had paid off subsequently to the transactions now in question:—Held that the existence of the order of the 30th June 1880 was not inconsistent with the plaintiff's right, and the suit was therefore not barred as not having been brought within one year of that order:—Held also that the fact of the set-off being allowed in exercise of the power given in sec. 294 of the Code, instead of actual payment into Court, did not alter the substantial nature of the transaction, so as to render the purchase-money less applicable to the satisfaction of the debts of other attaching creditors:—Held, further, that the defendants were not entitled to deduct the sum paid by them to clear off the plaintiff's mortgage, from the amount of the purchase-money, before the Court could determine the amount rateably distributable among the parties concerned. Quære.—Whether they were even entitled to reckon the amount so paid as one of the claims in respect of which, with others, a rateable distribution should be made?—12 Cal. 499.

The words of sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, "assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree," provide only for a case where, by the process of the Court in execution of a decree, property has become available for distribution amongst judgment-creditors. The words "by sale or otherwise" should be construed as meaning by sale or by other process of execution provided for by the Civil Procedure Code.—13 Cal. 225.

Where property belonging to A has been attached under a decree, and other decree-holders than the attaching creditor have applied before realization of assets to participate in the sale-proceeds, and amongst them a creditor who has obtained a decree against A and B, such latter creditor is entitled, under sec. 295, to share in the proceeds of the sale of A's property.—9 Cal. 920.

Moneys paid into Court by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree are assets from the moment of their payment into Court, and are available, under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), for rateable distribution only amongst decree-holders who have applied for execution prior to that time.—6 Bom. 16.

Money paid by a judgment-debtor under arrest, in satisfaction of the decree against him, are not assets realized by sale or otherwise, under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) must be read as if the words "from the property of the judgment-debtor" were inserted after the word "realized".—6 Bom. 588.

Application was made for execution of a decree for money against R, and also for execution of a decree against R and another person jointly and severally. Certain immoveable property belonging to R was sold in execution of the first decree, the assets which were realized by such sale being sufficient to satisfy the amounts of both decrees. Such property was then sold a second time in execution of the second decree. Held, under these circumstances, that the second sale should be set aside, not being allowed with reference to the provisions of sec. 295 of Act X 1877.—3 Al. 579.

An application for execution must not only have been made before the assets came into the hands of the Court, but must also be on the file, and undisposed of, to entitle a decree-holder under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure to share rateably in the assets realized by another decree-holder in execution of his decree against the same judgment-debtor. Where a rateable distribution was ordered among decree-holders whose applications had been struck off the file prior to realization of assets: Held that it was open to the party injured to apply to the High Court under sec. 622 to reverse the order.—4 Madr. 383.

The judge of a Court of Small Causes sitting in the exercise of his powers as such, and in the exercise of his powers as a Subordinate Judge, is not one and the same Court, but two different Courts. Held, therefore, that the holder of a decree made by the Judge of a Small Cause Court in the capacity of Subordinate Judge, who had applied to such Judge acting in that capacity for execution of his decree, was not thereby entitled to share rateably, under sec. 225 of Act X of 1877, in assets subsequently realized by sale in execution of a decree made by such Judge in the capacity of Judge of such Small Cause Court.—3 Al. 710.

A judgment-creditor in execution of his decree attached certain property belonging to his judgment-debtor while Act VIII of 1859 was in force. This property was ultimately sold on the 9th January 1879, i.e., after Act X of 1877 came into operation. Two days before the sale, another judgment-creditor applied to have his decree satisfied out of the same property by a rateable distribution of the proceeds which might be realized. Held that the prior attaching creditor, by his attachment under Act VIII of 1859, acquired, under sec. 270 of that Act, a right to have his decree first satisfied in full, and that he was not deprived of this right by the change in the law introduced by Act X of 1877, sec. 295.—3 Bom. 217.

On the 8th July, 1890, the plaintiff Warden sued (Suit No. 382 of 1890) Govind Ramji for Rs. 2,237, and on the 18th idem obtained an attachment before judgment of certain money belonging to Govind Ramji in the hands of the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company. On the 5th August, 1890, Warden got a decree in the suit for Rs. 2,008, with interest and costs, and on the 13th August, 1890, applied for execution. On the 24th September, 1890, Govind Ramji made an assignment in favour of his attorneys, Messrs. Wadia and Ghandy, of the fund belonging to him (expressed to be Rs. 7,818) in the hands of the Railway Company, subject to the attachment levied on the same by Warden. This assignment was intended to secure costs incurred by Messrs. Wadia and Ghandy as attorneys for the defendant. Notice of this assignment was at once given to the Railway Company. In February, 1891, the Bank of Bengal attached the sum of Rs. 7,818 in the hands of the Railway Company, in execution of a decree, obtained by the Bank against Govind Ramji in Suit No. 190 of 1890, and subsequently other creditors of Govind Ramji, who had obtained judgment against him, applied for execution and obtained attachments on the sum in question. On the 26th May, 1891, under a consent order in Suit No. 382 of 1890, the Railway Company paid over, to the Sheriff of Bombay, the sum of Rs. 8,084-1-0, which was the amount admitted by the Company to be due to Govind Ramji after making all just deductions. It was contended by Messrs.

Wadia and Ghandy that, under the above assignment, they were entitled to the fund assigned to them, subject only to the claim of Warden, who had, at the date of assignment, already attached the said fund, and that subsequent attaching creditors had no claim to the said fund. Held, that the fund in question must be regarded as "assets realized by sale, or otherwise, in execution of a decree," within the meaning of sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882). Held, also, that under the provision of sec. 295 the claims of the subsequent execution creditors were "claims enforceable under the attachment of S. E. Warden, within the meaning of sec. 276 of Civil Procedure Code," and that the assignment to Messrs. Wadia and Ghandy was void, as well against the claims of the creditors of Govind Ramaji, who applied for execution, before the 26th May, 1891, as against those of Warden, to the funds in the hands of the Sheriff of Bombay. Held, further, that the attachment was not limited merely to such portion of the fund as covered the amount of the decree, but was a valid attachment in the form in which it was made, namely, on the whole fund in the hands of the Railway Company. It was argued that the attachment was actually made only on Rs. 6,000, and that it did not therefore include the whole fund, which was of larger amount. Held, that the misdescription in the order of attachment was a mere falsa demonstratio and that the entire sum in the hands of the Railway Company was attached. The description of the property must be reasonably accurate, under the circumstances, and such, as with reasonable certainty, identifies the property. If it is such it ought be held sufficient.—16 Bom. 91.

The fact that a money-decree has been obtained on a bond by which property has been mortgaged does not destroy the lien on that property. It is open to a plaintiff to establish his right on the bond, as well as on the decree. The purport of secs. 270 and 271 of Act VIII of 1859 (with which sec. 295 of Act X of 1877 corresponds) is not to alter or limit the rights of parties arising out of a contract, but simply to determine questions between rival decree-holders standing on the same footing, and in respect of whom there is no rule for otherwise determining the mode in which proceeds of property sold in execution shall be distributed.—4 Cal. 29; 22 W. R., 98.

Certain moveable property was attached in execution of decrees of the Small Cause Court at Ahmedabad. After the attachment, but before the sale of the attached property, other creditors of the same judgment-debtor obtained decrees against him in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at the same place, and applied to it for the attachment of the same property in execution of their decrees. The Subordinate Judge, accordingly, attached it by prohibitory orders issued to the Judge of the Small Cause Court. After the sale, the holders of the decrees obtained in the Subordinate Judge's Courts claimed a rateable share in the assets realized by the Small Cause Court, under Act X of 1877, sec. 295. Held that they were not entitled to any share in the assets until after satisfaction of the decrees of the Small Cause Court.—4 Bom. 472.

On the 22nd March 1878, the first mortgagee of certain property obtained a decree enforcing his mortgage. On the 25th March 1878, the second mortgagee obtained a decree enforcing his mortgage. Both decrees were made by the same Court. On the 20th June 1878, the property was put up for sale in execution of the second mortgagee's decree. The first mortgagee subsequently brought a suit for a re-sale of the property in satisfaction of his decree. Held that this was the only course open to him, and he could not have enforced satisfaction of his decree in accordance with the provisions of sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the provisions of the first and second provisoes to that section refer only to sales in execution of simple money-decrees, whereas the property in question had been sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale, and the provisions of the third proviso relate to subsequent and not prior incumbrances.—5 Al. 566.

One Maniklal obtained a decree against L and M for rent due from them, and, in execution thereof, applied for the attachment and sale of two houses, with their compounds and the grounds underneath them (in respect of which property the said rent had fallen due), belonging respectively, one to each of his judgment-debtors. The properties were, accordingly, sold on 23rd July 1879, and the sale-proceeds handed over to Maniklal. In the meantime, on the 18th February 1879, D, a judgment creditor of M under a money-decree, applied for the attachment and sale of the same immoveable property (excepting the houses) of his judgment-debtor, which had been previously attached under Maniklal's decree for rent. On the realization of the sale-proceeds, D applied, under Act X of 1877, sec. 295, for a rateable proportion of the assets realized by the sale of M's property in execution of Maniklal's decree. Held that D was not entitled to such rateable proportion of the assets.—4 Bom. 429.

The salary of a karkun, who was employed in the Second-class Subordinate Judge's Court of Anklesvar, was attached, in execution of a decree of the First-class Subordinate Judge's Court of Surat, by an order issued by the Surat Court, directing the Anklesvar Court to stop and remit, every month, a moiety of the said karkun's salary to itself (the Surat Court) until satisfaction of the decree. While the decree of the Surat Court was thus in course of execution, another judgment-creditor of the karkun, who had obtained a decree in the Anklesvar Court, applied to it for a rateable distribution of the moiety between himself and the Surat decree-holder, under sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877. Held that the application was not sustainable, inasmuch as the decree of the Surat Court was being executed by itself, and not by the Anklesvar Court, to which the order of the attachment was sent as the head of a department, or as "the officer whose duty it was to disburse the salary," and not as the Court executing the decree of another Court. Jetha Madhavji v. Najeralli Abhrahmji (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 472) followed.—5 Bom. 198.

Where two mortgagees, in execution of their several decrees, attached the same property, of which a moiety, without further specification, was respectively mortgaged to each of them, and subsequent to the attachments the property was sold in execution of one of the decrees: Held, that notwithstanding the whole interest of the mortgagor was intended to be sold, the purchaser took one of the moieties subject to the lien of the unsatisfied mortgagee, and that omission or neglect on the part of the Court executing the decree to give specific direction as provided by clause (b) of sec. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code did not prejudice the rights of the unsatisfied mortgagee or discharge his encumbrance.—10 Cal. 567.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 663, noted under sec. 276; 4 Bom. 429, noted under sec. 266; 7 Cal. 553, noted under sec. 272; 7 Cal. 34, noted under sec. 274; 6 Al. 255, noted under sec. 234; 6 Bom. 570, noted under sec. 294; 5 Madr. 123, noted under sec. 294; 15 Cal. 202, noted under sec. 213; 10 Madr. 57, noted under sec. 311; 15 Madr. 345, noted under sec. 223.

(b) Rules as to Moveable Property.

296. If the property to be sold a negotiable instrument or a share in any public Company or Corporation, the Court may, instead of directing the sale to be made by public auction, authorize the sale of such instrument or share through a broker at the market-rate of the day.

Rules as to negotiable instruments and shares in public Companies.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

297. In the case of other moveable property, the price of each lot shall be paid for at the time of sale, or as soon after as the officer holding the sale directs, and, in default of payment, the property shall forthwith be again put up and sold.

Payment for other moveable property sold.

On payment of the purchase money, the officer holding the sale shall grant a receipt for the same, and the sale shall become absolute.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) it is intended that a sale of moveable property attached in execution of a decree should ordinarily be held in some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale. Good and sufficient reasons must be shown for directing otherwise. Where the only ground urged for directing a sale outside the Court's jurisdiction was that the property would probably fetch a better price, and it was found by the Court that a fair sale could be had on the spot, held that no sufficient reason was shown for departing from the usual practice. A judgment-debtor died. His widow was thereupon placed on the record as his legal representative. In the execution-proceedings which followed, the widow made an appeal to the High Court against a certain order passed by the Court executing the decree. To this appeal, a person alleging himself to be the adopted son of the deceased judgment-debtor applied to be made a party. The widow opposed the application, denying the fact of the adoption. Held that, whether the applicant was or was not the adopted son of the deceased judgment-debtor, there was no objection to entering his name on the record if the decree-holder consented, as it tended to his security that this should be done. The applicant was accordingly made a co-appellant with the widow.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 22.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 337, noted under sec. 293.

298. No irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of moveable property shall vitiate the sale; but any person sustaining any injury by reason of such irregularity at the hand of any other person may institute a suit against him for compensation, or (if such other person be the purchaser) for the recovery of the specific property, and for compensation in default of such recovery.

Irregularity not to vitiate sale of moveable property, but any person injured may sue.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A sale in execution of decree transfers to the purchaser nothing more than the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor at the time of attachment and sale; and sec. 252 of Act VIII. of 1859 does not prohibit an enquiry into the extent of those rights, or declare the owner of property, attached in execution of a decree passed against a third party, incompetent to assert his claim by suit. The sale of moveable property, belonging to a third party, in execution of a decree, is not a mere irregularity within the meaning of sec. 252, and the owner of the property so sold is entitled to sue for its restoration or for damages.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 252.

299. When the property sold is a negotiable instrument or other moveable property of which actual seizure has been made, the property shall be delivered to the purchaser.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

300. When the property sold is any moveable property to which the judgment-debtor is entitled subject to the possession of some other person, the delivery thereof to the purchaser shall be made by giving notice to the person in possession, prohibiting him from delivering possession of the property to any person except the purchaser.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

301. When the property sold is a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument, or is a share in any public Company, the delivery thereof shall be made by a written order of the Court prohibiting the creditor from receiving the debt or any interest thereon, and the debtor from making payment thereof to any person except the purchaser, or prohibiting the person in whose name the share may be standing from making any transfer of the share to any person except the purchaser, or receiving payment of any dividend or interest thereon, and the manager, secretary, or other proper officer of the Company from permitting any such transfer or making any such payment to any person except the purchaser.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 10 Madr. 194, noted under sec. 268.

302. If the endorsement or conveyance of the party in whose name a negotiable instrument or a share in any public Company is standing is required to transfer such instrument or share, the Judge may endorse the instrument or the certificate of the share, or may execute such other document as may be necessary.

The endorsement or execution shall be in the following form or to the like effect:—"A. B., by C. D., Judge of the Court of (or as the case may be); in a suit by E F against A. B."

Until the transfer of such instrument or share, the Court may, by order, appoint some person to receive any interest or dividend due thereon, and to sign a receipt for the same; and any endorsement made, or document executed, or receipt signed, as aforesaid, shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as if the same had been made or executed or signed by the party himself.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

303. In the case of any moveable property not herein-
Vesting order in case of other property. before provided for, the Court may make an order vesting such property in the purchaser or as he may direct; and such property shall vest accordingly.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

(c) Rules as to Immoveable Property.

304. Sales of immoveable property in execution of a
What Courts may order of land. decree may be ordered by any Court other than a Court of Small Causes.

Note.

A shikmi ghatwali tenure, held under the superior ghatwal, is not liable to be sold in execution, nor are its proceeds liable to attachment for satisfaction of the debt due from its holder.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 388.

305. When an order for the sale of immoveable pro-
Postponement of sale of land to enable defendant to raise amount of decree. perty has been made, if the judgment-debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale of property comprised in the order for sale, for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount.

In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the Certificate to judgment-debtor. judgment-debtor authorizing him, within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 276, to make the proposed mortgage, lease, or sale: provided that all moneys le under such mortgage, lease, or sale, shall be paid into Court, and not to the judgment-debtor :

Provided also that no mortgage, lease, to sale under this section, shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court.

Note.

The sale of immoveable property to the highest bidder for a price which subsequently appears to be too low is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. A decree-holder or a judgment-debtor cannot apply to set aside a sale on the ground of the price realized being too low. Under sec. 314 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882) the Civil Court cannot, upon or without application, refuse to confirm a sale on the ground that the price bid is too low.—I. L. R., 8 Bom. 424.

306. On every sale of immoveable property under this chapter, the person declared to be the purchaser shall pay, immediately after such declaration, a deposit of twenty-five per centum on the amount of his purchase-money to the officer conducting the sale, and, in default of such deposit, the property shall forthwith be put up again and sold.

Notes.

We do not consider that the commencement of a Court-sale, prior to the expiry of the thirtieth day or any delay in making the deposit required by sec. 306 or the adjournment of the sale from time to time without sufficient ground, is more than a mere irregularity.—I. L. R., 14 Madr. 227.

The person declared to be the purchaser of property put up for sale in execution of a decree did not, as required by sec. 306 of the Civil Procedure Code, pay a deposit of twenty-five per centum on the amount of his purchase immediately after such declaration, but on a date subsequent to the date on which the property was put up for sale. Held that there was no sale at all of the property.—5 Al. 316.

A co-sharer in undivided immoveable property, of which a share is sold in execution of a decree, does not, under Act X of 1877, sec. 310, acquire the right of pre-emption as against a stranger to whom such share has been knocked down, by merely asserting such right at the time of sale, and fulfilling the conditions of sale required by secs. 306 and 307 of that Act. He must bid at the sale, and as high as the stranger, before he can acquire a right of pre-emption under that section.—2 Al. 850.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 337, noted under sec. 293 ; 12 Madr. 454, noted under sec. 244.

307. The full amount of purchase-money shall be paid by the purchaser before the Court closes on the fifteenth day after the sale of the property, exclusive of such day, or if the fifteenth day be a Sunday or other holiday, then on the first office-day after the day.

—See I. L. R., 2 Al. 850, noted under sec. 306.

308. In default of payment within the period mentioned in the last preceding section, the deposit, after defraying the expenses of the sale, shall be forfeited to Government, and the property shall be re-sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property, or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold.

Notes.

Under the rules of the High Court, dated 21st June 1882, a payment into the Government treasury is equivalent to a payment into Court for the purposes of sec. 308 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.—I. L. R., 7 Madr. 211.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 337, noted under sec. 293.

309. Every re-sale of immoveable property, in default of payment of the purchase-money within the period allowed for such payment, shall be made after the issue of a fresh notification in the manner and for the period hereinbefore prescribed for the sale.

Note.—See I. L. R., 12 Madr. 454, noted under sec. 244.

310. When the property sold in execution of a decree is a share of undivided immoveable property, and two or more persons, of whom one is a co-sharer, respectively advance the same sum at any bidding at such sale, such bidding shall be deemed to be the bidding of the co-sharer.

Co-sharer of share of undivided estate sold in execution to have preference in bidding.

Notes.

Sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861 is not applicable to permanently settled estates in Sylhet, nor to estates in any district of Bengal, unless extended thereto. When property is sold by public auction at a sale in execution of a decree, and the neighbour or partner has the same opportunity to bid for the property as other parties present in Court, the law of pre-emption does not apply.—I. B. L. R., (A. C.) 105; 11 W. R., 165.

A pre-emption suit is not barred by the fact that the property in suit had been the subject of confiscation.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., Pt. II., p. 35; Ed. 1873, 93.

Where the rights of a judgment-debtor in a putteedaree estate were sold at auction in execution of decree, and bid for by the son of the judgment-debtor who gave the name of his father-in-law, to whom the property was knocked down (and who was not a co-parcener in the estate), as the actual purchaser, such father-in-law subsequently waiving his claim as auction-purchaser in favour of the judgment-debtor, held under sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861 that the property had been knocked down to a stranger, and that the right of pre-emption attached in favour of the person entitled thereto on such sale, he having done all that was necessary to assert his claim.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 200.

It is the practice of the Courts to allow claims to pre-emption to be asserted on the grounds both of contract and custom in one and the same suit. N.-W. P.

Where two co-sharers entitled to pre-emption in certain villages associated strangers with them in the purchase of such villages and other landed property, held that they must be regarded in the light of total strangers in respect of the whole of the property included in the sale-deed, and that a note at the foot of the sale-deed, mentioning the interest severally purchased by each of the vendees, will not entitle them to retain the shares respectively purchased by them.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 343.

Where a Hindu father made a partition of his property among his sons, reserving to himself an interest in one village, which, upon his death, was to be divided among his sons, held that during the father's lifetime no son could claim a right of pre-emption in respect of the village so reserved by the father.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 434.

Where the terms of the wajib-ul-urz are that the property before sale to a stranger must be offered to the co-sharers, such offer must be made to each and every one of such co-sharers.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 42.

A claim for pre-emption under sec. 2 of Act I of 1841 is sustainable in respect of an imperfect putteedaree tenure.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 125.

When, by the express terms of a wajib-ul-urz, its operation is limited to the period of the settlement, a right of pre-emption created by it cannot be enforced after the expiry of that period, unless a provision has been made for that purpose, or the operation of the wajib-ul-urz has been extended by the agreement of the parties.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 13.

It appeared from the settlement wajib-ul-urz that the lands in a certain mouzah were held in the following manner: that is to say, the co-sharers had divided them into puttees, and each putteedar realized the rent of proceeds of his own separate holding, and his share of the rent of the common lands, and paid his own quota of revenue separately. Held that the tenure came within the definition of a putteedaree estate contained in sec. 2 of Act I of 1841. A share in the mouzah having been put up for sale in the execution of a decree, and knocked down to the defendant, a stranger, the plaintiff, a co-sharer of a share, was held to be entitled, under the provisions of sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861, to take the share.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 243.

It is incumbent on an officer conducting a sale, in execution of decree, of land, which is a share of a putteedaree estate paying revenue to Government, as defined in sec. 2 of Act I. of 1841, to take notice of a claim made by a person under the provisions of sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861, and to receive the purchase-money as a fulfilment of the conditions of the sale, subject to any question which may be raised by any party interested in the sale as to the claimant's title to advance the claim. When the whole of the purchase-money has been paid by the claimant within due time, the Court executing the decree, unless it is satisfied that he has no right to advance the claim, cannot treat the payment by him as a nullity, but must accept it as a fulfilment of the conditions of the sale respecting the purchase-money, and the sale is not defeasible by the failure of the bidder to complete the deposit of the purchase-money. The sale to the claimant cannot become absolute until it has been confirmed, and until it has become absolute he cannot maintain a suit for possession. If the claimant has fulfilled the conditions of sale, and his right is clear, the Court executing the decree is bound to give effect to that right.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 272.

If a person claiming pre-emption under the provisions of sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861 fulfils the conditions of sale respecting the deposit of the purchase-money, the sale cannot be held void merely by the failure of the person to whose bid the property was knocked down also to complete the deposit. All that the claimant is bound to do is to establish that he is a putteedar within the meaning of the section in the estate of which the property sold forms part, and that he has fulfilled the conditions of sale. If he establishes this, the sale must be confirmed in his favour, unless some irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale is shown which would justify the setting aside of the sale. The conditions of pre-emption under the Mahomedan Law do not apply to a claim brought under the section.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 289.

The wajib-ul-urz of a village contained this clause regarding the transfer of shares by sale or mortgage, viz.: “Whenever a shareholder intends to transfer his rights, his nearest co sharer shall be first entitled to purchase the same, and on his refusal the other sharers in the thoke, and on their refusal, sharers in other thokes will be entitled.” S, the proprietor of a 4-pies share in one thoke, and of a 9-pies share in another thoke, sold both shares, together with a bungalow, garden, and factory, situated on the land comprised in the 4-pies share, for Rs. 10,000 to T and others, shareholders in the thoke containing the 9-pies share. D and others, shareholders in the thoke containing the 4-pies share, sued to obtain possession of that share and the bungalow, garden, and factory, claiming the right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz, on payment of a proportionate part of the purchase-money, which they estimated at 4-13ths of that sum, calculating the numbers of pies sold. It was held (in accordance with the opinion of the Full Bench) that the plaintiffs were entitled to claim the right of pre-emption in respect of the 4-pies share to the exclusion of the 9-pies. It was also held that the right of pre-emption did not extend to the bungalow, garden, and factory. The fact that S, the vendor, acquired the bungalow, garden, and factory under a claim of pre-emption, did not estop him from pleading that the right of pre-emption did not extend to such property. Instead of adopting the plaintiff's mode of calculating the price payable for the property claimed, the lower Courts should have ascertained separately the value of the several properties sold.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 38.

A suit by a person claiming possession by right of pre-emption, under the provisions of sec. 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, of a share sold in the execution of a decree, was held to be premature and unmaintainable. The claimant should have sued to set aside the order of the Court confirming the sale in favour of the auction-purchaser, and to have himself declared entitled to the pre-emption of the property, and to be substituted for the auction-purchaser as its purchaser.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 97.

A person holding a share in a putteedaree estate as mortgagee is not in a position which gives him a right of pre-emption, under the provisions of sec. 14 of Act XXIII. of 1861, in respect of a share in the estate sold in execution of a decree; nor does he obtain such a position because a share in the estate has been put up for sale and knocked down to him.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 281.

Held by a Full Bench, in concurrence with the lower Court, that the proper construction of the words “Shikmi Showkayan” used in a clause of the administration-paper was that they gave a preference to shares in the thoke over those who were merely sharers in the village.—Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) 171; Ed. 1874, 128.

Where Government confiscates the share of a convict, and sells it for valuable consideration, the co-sharers have a right to claim such share by right of pre-emption on such sale, and the condition in the wajib-ul-urz is binding on Government as much as it was on the original owner, Government acquiring the share subject to the same condition as the former held it.—1 Agra H. C. R., 88.

Where the wajib-ul-urz provided that, in cases of transfer by "sale, &c.," the co-sharers would have a preferential right to the same, held that the co-sharers were entitled to claim by right of pre-emption to take over an usufructuary lease which was made for the term of eight years.—1 Agra H. C. R., 101.

A share in a-mouzah together with the dwelling-house of the proprietor, was exchanged for a share and dwelling-house in another mouzah. Held that the transaction being an exchange of property for property was a sale, and that the right to purchase the land, but not the house, was claimable by a co-sharer by right of pre-emption. The consideration payable by the pre-emptor is the estimated value of the property given in exchange, and not that of the property claimed.—1 Agra H. C. R., 144.

Held that the plaintiff, having refused to purchase at the sum actually given, could not come into Court and ask for a conditional decree, which is given in cases where a higher price than was actually paid has been allged to have been paid to the prejudice of the pre-emptor.—1 Agra H. C. R., 265.

Held that the plaintiff, who had a preferential right to purchase, and had no opportunity offered him, had a right to enforce those conditions, a compliance with which was essential before alienation to others.—1 Agra H. C. R., 274.

Held that the person in whose favour a preferential right of purchase is stipulated for by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz is entitled to a decree if he comes forward and claims his right, without unreasonable delay, after he hears that a sale has been made without any tender to him, although he may not have proved especially that he has fulfilled all the conditions required in the case of a claim of pre-emption under the Mahomedan Law of Shuffa.—1 Agra H. C. R., 278.

Where the decree-holder purchased the rights of his judgment debtors sold at auction in satisfaction of his own decree, but, having received the amount of the decree, re-sold the property to the judgment-debtors before the confirmation of the sale, held that the transaction did not amount to an alienation such as would give a right to the co-sharers of the debtors to exercise the right of pre-emption under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz.—2 Agra H. C. R., 1.

Where the wajib-ul-urz provided that alienation should be first made to brethren of common ancestor, and then to the other sharers of the putti, held that the brethren in whose favour the first right of pre-emption was secured must be construed to be brethren who were sharers in the putti.—2 Agra H. C. R., 31.

Where a resumed maafee "chuck" was alienated by the holder thereof, and a preferential right to take it was claimed by a sharer in the zemindari under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz agreed to by the co-sharers at the time of settlement, and to which the holder of the "chuck" was no party, held that such alienation was not an alienation of a share within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz; that the holder of the "chuck" could neither confer on its possessor a right of pre-emption, nor subject his estate to such right in the event of alienation.—2 Agra H. C. R., 35.

Held, on the construction of the wajib-ul-urz, that the stipulating that alienations should be made with the consent of all the sharers did not stipulate for the existence of pre-emption, and that the claim based on that was untenable.—2 Agra H. C. R., 37 and 74.

Held that the conditions of the wajib-ul-urz do in no way confer on any person under disability a right of alienation which he does not otherwise enjoy.—2 Agra H. C. R., 85.

Held that a provision in the wajib-ul-urz securing a right of pre-emption to the sharers in cases of sale or mortgage was not applicable to transfer by lease, which was not such an alienation as was contemplated by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz, viz., alienation or transfer of proprietary right.—2 Agra H. C. R., 99.

Where there is imperfect partition, viz., where the land is divided, but the joint liability to the Government remains, and the property is not made into separate mehals, the right of pre-emption is not lost.—2 Agra H. C. R., 252.

Where a plot of land formerly held rent-free situate in a pure zemindari estate is sold, at auction, held that the claim of preferential purchase under sec. 14, Act XXIII of 1861 would not lie, as the estate was not a puttidari estate within the meaning of sec. 2, Act I of 1841.—2 Agra H. C. R., 280.

Where shares in a mouzah were by arrangement between the parties made over to a manager upon trust to pay part of the profits to the debtors of the transferors, and the residue of the profits to the transferors, who bound themselves not to alienate until the debts were paid, held that it was not such alienation as would confer on the plaintiff a right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz.—2 Agra H. C. R., 328.

Held that a pre-emptor is not precluded from claiming the property by right of pre-emption because he opposed the mutation of names only on the ground that the vendor was not in possession.—2 Agra H. C. R., 348.

Where the terms of the wajib-ul-urz recognize the right of each sharer to sell without the consent of the others, but limit that right so far as to give preference or right of refusal to the co-sharers, the sale to a stranger can only be good and valid on proof of offer being made and refused by the co-sharers.—3 Agra H. C. R., 3.

Held that a preferential right to purchase is not lost merely by the inclusion of the names of the sons of the purchaser in the sale-deed, if it be proved that the actual purchaser was the father, and the names of the sons were included in accordance with the prevailing usage, without any intention to defraud the other co-sharers.—3 Agra H. C. R., 25.

Held that a claim for pre-emption would not lie against the purchaser of a confiscated property sold by the revenue authorities.—3 Agra H. C. R., 70.

Exercise of right of pre-emption allowed in respect of a kotee and golah, as it was proved that according to local usage and custom such properties were subject to pre-emption.—3 Agra H. C. R., 179.

Held on the construction of a wajib-ul-urz that the word "intiquah," not only signifies an absolute transfer, but also applies to conditional sales and usufructuary mortgages.—3 Agra H. C. R., 396.

In a puttidari village the sharers in each putti have a preferential claim to the right of pre-emption in that putti.—1 W. R., 233.

A party alleging a right of pre-emption in respect of property which is the subject of a conditional sale is bound to make his claim immediate—ly on the expiry of the year of grace mentioned in the notice of foreclosure.—6 W. R., 116.

A claim to mesne-profits due before the date on which a right to pre-emption arose cannot form the subject of pre-emption.—7 W. R., 117.

A re-sale cannot destroy the right of pre-emption in a property, the sale of which is admitted by the vendor.—7 W. R., 206.

A person claiming to exercise his right of pre-emption must take the bargain as it was made. Any apportionment of the purchase-money is altogether illegal.—7 W. R., 210.

Pre-emption applies only to sales. A lease in perpetuity, with a rent (however small) reserved, is not a sale, and cannot therefore be the subject of pre-emption.—8 W. R., 106.

Properties bearing separate numbers in the Collector's rent-roll are separate estates in the legal sense of the word "estate" implying such a separation as bars a claim to pre-emption on the ground of coparcenary.—14 W. R., 476.

The provisions of sec. 310 of Act X of 1877 are not applicable in a case where the property sold, is not a share of undivided immoveable property, but the rights and interests of a mortgagee in such a share.—I. L. R., 3 Al. 15.

A share of undivided immoveable property was put up for sale in execution of a decree, and was knocked down to M. Before it was knocked down to him, A, the decree-holder, who had obtained permission to bid for and purchase such share, and who was a co-sharer of such share, bid the same sum as that for which it was knocked down to M, claiming the right of pre-emption. The Court executing such decree subsequently made an order confirming the sale of such share in favour of A. M appealed, impugning the propriety of the confirmation of the sale in favour of A. Held that such appeal would not lie.—3 Al. 674.

A person claiming to be a co-sharer in certain undivided immoveable property, a share of which had been sold in execution of a decree, objected to the confirmation of the sale in favour of the person recorded as the auction-purchaser, and prayed that it might be confirmed in his favour, with reference to the provisions of sec. 310 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Court disallowed the objection, and confirmed the sale in favour of the auction-purchaser. The objector thereupon applied to the High Court for revision of the order of the lower Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, having been allowed to object to the confirmation of the sale, and treated as a party to the proceeding held therein, it was competent for him to make such application, notwithstanding that he was not one of the persons mentioned in sec. 311 of the Code; that there being no appeal in the case, so far as he was concerned, the High Court was competent to entertain the application under sec. 622 of the Code; but that, as he was not one of the persons who was competent to avail himself of the provisions of sec. 311, he had no locus standi to justify his application to the lower Court, and the application for revision must therefore be dismissed.—5 Al. 42.

See I. L. R., 2 Al. 850, noted under sec. 306.

Application to set aside sale of land on ground of irregularity.

311. The decree-holder, or any person whose immoveable property has been sold under this chapter, may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting it;

but no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity.

Notes.

In execution of a decree, the defendant caused a decree of the plaintiff awarding him Rs. 925 to be attached, and under sec. 236, Act VIII. of 1859, caused the prohibitory order to be fixed in a conspicuous part of the Court-house, and copies thereof to be delivered to the judgment-debtors. The decree was subsequently sold by auction, and the defendant purchased it for Rs. 20. On special appeal by the plaintiff, upon the ground that the sale was irregular, as the prohibitory order had not been served upon him, held that the prohibitory order having been, in accordance with the provisions of sec. 236, Act VIII. of 1859, was legal and regular. Held that the Court executing the defendant's decree ought not to have sold the plaintiff's decree, but should have, under sec. 243, appointed a manager to enforce the plaintiff's decree. That a decree-holder ought not to be allowed to bid and purchase at a sale in execution of his decree without an order of Court previously obtained upon notice to the judgment debtor. Practice of English Courts regarding sale in execution of decrees discussed.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 320 ; 14 W. R., 406 note.

The plaintiff, as manager of the estate of her husband, a lunatic, obtained a decree, and attached and became the purchaser of the lands of the defendants in execution of the decree. The Judge required her to give security for the proceeds of the sale before he would allow actual possession to be given to her. The sale was confirmed, but several months elapsed before she found security, and meanwhile the same lands, were attached and purchased by other creditors under another decree against the said debtor, and possession was given to them. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) the title of the plaintiff must prevail. The security was ordered for the protection of the lunatic against misappropriation by his manager; it was not a proceeding affecting the judgment-debtor. The second sale ought not to have been ordered or confirmed. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, property may be attached without view to immediate sale. A Court has power to send its decree for concurrent execution into several places, although in its discretion it may refuse to exercise such power.—10 B. L. R., 214; 17 W. R., 289 ; 14 Moore's I. A. 529.

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition of law that under no circumstances can a sale in execution of a decree be set aside as against a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration and without notice. In a suit brought to set aside such a sale, it is for the Court to determine whether it will be in accordance with the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience, that the sale ought to be set aside or not.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 911 ; S. C. 9 W. R., 196.

On application by the judgment-debtor to the Principal Sadr Amin to set aside the sale by auction of a house, in execution of a decree, on the grounds of material irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale, from which the applicant sustained substantial injury, the objections were disallowed as untenable, and the sale confirmed. But the District Judge, on appeal, set aside the sale for a ground on which he had no authority to interfere. On petition to the High Court by the purchaser of the house, held that the order of the Judge must be set aside as illegal, and the original order confirming the sale allowed to stand.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 110.

The inam village of Chandanpuri was sold by auction under a decree. The notice of sale stated that the sale would begin either at Maligam or at Chandanpuri, and be completed at Maligam. Held that the notice of sale was sufficiently certain. An auctioneer who sells under a decree has power to adjourn the sale from time to time (upon giving proper notice), but whether he does so or not is a matter in his own discretion. The practice of karkuns reading aloud notices of liens on property about to be sold by auction is objectionable, but, in the absence of proof that the value of the property has been thereby deteriorated, it is not such an irregularity as will vitiate the sale.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 164.

A sale in execution of a decree is not invalidated by the fact that the balance really due is overstated, there being no other irregularity in the publication and conduct of the sale.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., Pt. II., p. 1; Ed. 1873, 61.

Where objections to sale-proceedings are presented by judgment-debtors, the Court ought to make a careful investigation into the circumstances attending such sale, and not rely on the mere report of a nazir. Each objection should be taken up separately and determined specifically, and the reasons for the finding duly recorded.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 142.

An auction-sale under a decree can only be set aside for some material irregularity by which substantial injury has been sustained. Where a sale was fixed for the 20th November, but delayed until the 22nd without any order of postponement, or any fresh proclamation of the day of sale, there is a prima facie case of injury to the party whose property was sold. Such a postponement is in contravention of the provisions of sec. 249 of Act VIII of 1859, as, when a sale is postponed, there must be fresh proclamation of the sale and date when it is to take place.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 143.

The High Court passed an order postponing a sale in execution of a decree, which order arrived at the Collector's office the day after the sale. Held that the publication of the sale was irregular, as the order of postponement invalidated the notification of sale.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 135.

The circumstance that property was sold in execution of a decree below its proper value, and that few persons attended the sale, is not sufficient to vitiate the sale.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 19.

The High Court has no power to entertain a special appeal from an order passed in regular appeal by a Judge setting aside a sale in execution and reversing the order of a Munsif confirming such a sale.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 19.

A Judge cannot order a Subordinate Judge to postpone a sale in a case pending before the Court of the latter officer. An application by a Collector under sec. 249 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the postponement of a sale in the execution of a decree of land paying revenue to Government should not be granted, where it is not alleged that satisfaction of the decree might be made within a reasonable period by a temporary alienation of the land.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 177.

A sale in execution of decree transfers to the purchaser nothing more than the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor at the time of attachment and sale; and sec. 252 of Act VIII. of 1859 does not prohibit an enquiry into the extent of those rights, or declare the owner of property, attached in execution of a decree passed against a third party, incompetent to assert his claim by suit. The sale of moveable property, belonging to a third party, in execution of a decree, is not a mere irregularity within the meaning of sec. 252, and the owner of the property so sold is entitled to sue for its restoration or for damages.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 252 ; 9 W. R., 118.

When a Court executing a decree passes an order postponing a sale, and the sale takes place notwithstanding, in consequence of the order arriving too late, the Court is justified in setting aside the sale on the ground of irregularity, and its order doing so is not appealable.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 354.

Where portion of the property of a judgment-debtor has been sold in execution for a sum sufficient to satisfy the decree, the Court is not justified, on default being made by the purchaser, in directing the sale of any further portion of the debtor's property, it being open either to the judgment-creditor or the judgment-debtor to apply that the balance due upon the decree after re-sale of the portion already sold, should be realised from the defaulter.—8 C. L. R., 41.

When property has been put up for sale at auction in execution of a decree, and bids have been bona fide made for it, the Court is not competent to postpone the sale, or to decline to conclude it, and order another auction, merely on the representation of the judgment-debtor that he can obtain a higher price by private transfer, there being shown no ground to believe that the amount of the judgment-debt would have been thus realized.—1 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 11.

Three attempts to sell land taken in execution under a decree had been rendered abortive by the acts of the judgment-debtor, and a delay of seven years occasioned, during which, by his conduct, he defeated the execution of the decree. When the property was put up for sale for the fourth time, the Collector rejected the two highest bids, on the ground that neither of the bidders could produce a mooktearnamah from the persons for whom respectively they professed to act as agents, nor produce the required deposit, and he declared the third highest bidder the purchaser of the land. Held that under the circumstances the conduct of the Collector was justifiable, and the sale valid.—Marshall's Rep., 592 ; 2 Ind. Jur., O. S., 1 ; 5 W. R., P. C., 7 ; 9 Moore's. I. A. 324.

A suit was brought in 1852 to set aside an execution-sale made in 1841 on the ground of irregularity in not complying with the provisions of Beng. Reg. XLV., sec. 12, of 1793, for the due publication of the sale. A summary suit under Beng. Reg. VII. of 1825, sec. 5, had been brought shortly after the date of the sale by the judgment-debtor to set it aside on the ground of inadequacy of the purchase-money, which suit was dismissed. There was no allegation in that suit of any irregularity in the publication of sale. It appeared from the evidence in the suit of 1852 that the notice of sale was affixed at the dwelling house of the judgment-debtor, the place where his rents were paid, but which was not part of the estate sold. It was not pleaded in the suit of 1852 that there was a town or village where the notification could be fixed as required by sec. 12 Beng. Reg. XLV. of 1793. The Sadr Court held that there had been an irregularity in the publication of the notice of sale, as it was not made within the ambit of the estate sold, and set the sale aside on that ground. On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee reversing such decree, first, that as it did not appear that there was any town or village within the Pergunnah at which the notifiation required by the provisions of Beng. Reg. XLV. of 1793, sec. 12, could be affixed, there had been no irregularity in posting the notice at the house of the judgment-debtor, so as to vitiate the sale ; and, secondly, that even if there had been an informality in that respect, it ought to have been objected to in the summary suit brought in 1841, and could not be opened eleven years afterwards.—8 Moore's L. A. 427.

At a sale in execution of a decree, when the sale of any lot is completed, the purchaser should then and there be required to make the deposit prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code, failing which the lot should at once be put up to sale at the risk of the first purchaser. The decree-holder, if the lot is knocked down to him, is as much bound to make the prescribed deposit as any other auction-purchaser.—W. R., 1864, Mis., 30.

After the striking off of an execution-case, the omission to re-issue the processes required by law on the admission of a third party as decree-holder, is not a material irregularity in the case.—W. R., 1864, 359.

In a re-sale for default under sec. 253, Act [VIII. of 1859, the officer conducting the sale was not bound to commence from the next highest bid below that made by the defaulter, instead of commencing the sale de novo.—1 W. R., Mis. 11.

A sale in execution of a decree is illegal if made on a holiday, whether it is a fixed holiday or only a day on which the Courts are closed by order of the High Court.—3 W. R., Mis., 24.

In the case of moveable property process of attachment and sale may be issued successively or simultaneously ; but in regard to immoveable property, process of attachment and sale should be issued successively ; but if issued simultaneously, and the attachment has been made bona fide, and the sale-proclamation issued as required by law, with an interval of thirty days between it and the sale, such irregularity is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the sale, as no material injury would accrue to the debtor thereby.—4 W. R., Mis., 12.

The affixing, in the Principal Sadr. Amin's Court, of a notification of sale in execution of a decree of the Small Cause Court, was held to be no irregularity in the sale by reason of which damages could be recovered under sec. 252, Code of Civil Procedure, 1859 ; the law making no provision for the service of the notification of sale on the judgment-debtor in person, or in the village in which he lives.—6 W. R., Civ. Ref., 14.

Directions as to the payment of the purchase-money at sales in execution of decree, arising under sec. 254, Act VIII. of 1859, were to be dealt with as provided by that section, and did not fall under secs. 256 and 257. A default under sec. 254 was not an "irregularity in conducting the sale," under sec. 256.—6 W. R., Mis., 82.

Where a sale is postponed, a fresh notice and proclamation ought to issue.—6 W. R., Mis., 84.

On an application to set aside a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree under sec. 256, Act VIII. of 1859, before ascertaining whether any substantial injury has accrued to the debtor, it was held that the Court must come to a distinct finding that there has been an irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.—6 W. R., Mis., 125.

A sale in execution of a decree was set aside by a subsequent decree of 9th March 1861, but was afterwards allowed to stand by an order of 7th May 1862. As no suit was brought to set aside the latter order, it was held to be a final judicial proceeding, and the sale declared to be good and valid.—7 W. R., 116.

It was doubted at one time whether a sale could be set aside by reason of an omission to attach the property.—11 W. R., 226.

Where property is advertised to be sold in execution, a change in the specified order of sale or other sudden alteration of programme, without notice to intending bidders, or the express consent of the judgment-debtor, was an irregularity under sec. 256, Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, vitiating the sale.—12 W. R., 281.

Where the Sadr cutchery of the zemindar was beyond the jurisdiction of the District Court, the publication of the notice of sale at one of the inferior cutcheries was held to be legal and sufficient.—14 W. R., 44.

Where an irregularity in an execution sale (e. g., a misstatement in the notification), produces a mistake, and the property is consequently sold at an inadequate price, the judgment-debtor is entitled to have the sale reversed.—14 W. R., 320.

Held that the judgment-debtor could not complain of the order of the Subordinate Judge postponing a sale in execution of decree from the 25th to the 26th, unless he could show that he had suffered substantially by the postponement. But the attention of the Court was called to the importance of abiding by the date fixed in the proclamations of sale as far as possible, and not postponing sales without good reason.—17 W. R., 278.

The market value of a property is not the value which ought to be taken as the standard at an auction-sale in execution of a decree where the purchaser ordinarily gets neither a title nor the title deeds as in a private sale, but only the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor at the time of sale.—18 W. R., 197.

Where a sale was notified to take place on the 8th, and on that day the order for the postponement of the sale to the 9th was made in open Court, held that that was a sufficient notification of the sale being held on the 9th, and that a fresh notice was not necessary.—18 W. R., 347.

The issue of a notice of sale after the death of the original decree-holder, and before any person had applied to be registered as the substituted decree-holder, is not an irregularity which would warrant the setting aside of a sale under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 256.—22 W. R., 481.

An execution-sale properly notified may be adjourned with the consent of the parties.—22 W. R., 481.

Where a judgment-debtor objects to the sale of attached property, it, is the duty of the Court executing the decree to try the validity of the objections.—24 W. R., 85.

Where, in an execution-sale, there had been some irregularity which left it doubtful whether the judgment-debtor had been duly appraised of the sale of his dwelling-house, held that the irregularity had caused material injury to the judgment-debtor, and that the sale must be set-aside.—25 W. R., 183.

The affixing of a notice of sale in a not very conspicuous part of the land, when the judgment-debtor resides in a different district, is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of justice.—25 W. R., 364.

The plaintiff instituted a suit against defendant for recovery of money, and previous to judgment, that is, on the 8th of January 1885, applied for, and on the 11th obtained, order for attachment of several houses and premises belonging to defendant, and such attachment was made. The suit was dismissed, but eventually on appeal it was decreed : but the attachment was never withdrawn. Plaintiff then applied for execution of his decree, and his application was granted by an order directing that the property of the judgment-debtor should be notified for sale on the 1st February 1887, and accordingly, on the 21st December 1880, a sale-notification was issued. Judgment-debtor twice applied for postponement of sale, but his applications were refused, and the sale took place on the date fixed. Judgment-debtor then objected to the confirmation of the sale, urging that the property sold was never attached in execution of the decree, and the attachment previous to judgment was infructuous, because afterwards the claim was dismissed by the Court of first instance ; that there had been several other irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale ; and that, owing to the irregularities, property had been sold at a grossly inadequate price, causing substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge, overruling the objections, confirmed the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, held, following Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit (I. L. R., 5 Al. 86), that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of decrees for money ; and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable but de facto void, and may be set aside without any inquiry as to substantial injury being sustained by the judgment-debtor for want of a valid attachment, and that an attachment before judgment, like a temporary injunction, becomes functus officio as soon as the suit terminates. Further, that the phrase “ a material irregularity in publishing or conducting ” in the first paragraph of sec. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed, and that absence of attachment of property at the time of sale thereof is “ a material irregularity,” attachment being the first step which a Court in executing a simple money-decree has to take to assert its authority to bring property to compulsory sale. The following cases were referred to in the course of argument : Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit (I. L. R., 5 Al. 86) ; Chunni Kuar v. Dwarka Prasad (Weekly Notes, 1877, p. 297) ; Mohee-ooddeen v. Ahmed Hossain (14 W. R. 384) ; Gangathara Pandita v. Rathaboi Ammal (I. L. R. 6 Madr. 237) ; Imamunissa Bibi v. Leakat Hossain (I. L. R., 3 Al. 424) ; Rameshwari Dasse v. Doorgadas Chatterjee (I. L. R., 6 Cal. 103) ; Bakhshi Nand Kishore v. Malak Chand (I. L. R., 7 Al. 289) ; Jasoda v. Mathura Das (I. L. R., 9 Al. 511) ; Girdhari Sing v. Hardeo Narain Sing (L. R., 3 I. A. 230) ; Macnaghten v. Mahabir Purshad Sing (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 656).—I. L. R., 10 Al. 506.

Held by the Full Bench that an application to set aside, on the ground of material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, a sale held by the Collector in execution of a decree transferred to him for execution under sec. 320, cannot be entertained by a Civil Court. Madho Prashad v. Hansa Kuar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 314) followed. Nathu Mal. v. Lachmi Narain (I. L. R., 9 Al. 43) distinguished. Per EDGE C. J.—The intention of the Legislature as expressed in sec. 320 and the following sections of the Civil Procedure Code was not to allow any delegation to the Collector of power to adjudicate upon questions of title, but, in other matters, to hand over all the proceedings to the Collector, and to withdraw the matters so handed over from the purview of the Civil Courts to that extent, but not questions of title or the other questions, if in dispute, referred to in sec. 322B, 322C, or 322D.—11 Al. 94.

Where a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree took place before the expiration of the thirty days required by sec. 290 of the Civil Procedure Code, and without the consent of the judgment-debtor. Held by EDGE, C. J. (BRODHURST, J., dissenting), that the holding of the sale under these circumstances was not merely an irregularity, within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Code, but was an illegality, and that it was open to the judgment-debtor to object to the sale and to apply to have it set aside on the ground of such illegality, without proving that he had sustained any substantial injury. Held by BRODHURST, J., contra, that infringement of the rule contained in sec. 200 of the Code does not of itself vitiate a sale in execution of decree, but is a "material irregularity" within the meaning of sec. 311—that expression being wide enough to include illegalities—and that, before such a sale can be set aside, the judgment-debtor must prove that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity. Olpherts v. Mahabir Pershad Singh (I. L. R., 10 I. A. 25), Mohunt Meg Lall Pooree v. Ship Pershad Madi (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 34), Kalytara Chowdhrair v. Ramcoomar Goopta (I. L. R. 7 Cal. 466), Tripura Sundari v. Durga Churn Pal (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 74), Bonomali Mozumdar v. Woomesh Chunder Bundopadhyaya (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 730), Bandy Ali v. Madhub Chunder Nag (I. L. R., 8 Cal. 932), Nathu v. Harbhuj (Weekly Notes, 1885, p. 304), Jasoda v. Mathura Das (I. L. R., 9 Al. 511), and Bakshi Nand Kishore v. Malak Chand (I. L. R., 7 Al. 289), referred to.—11 Al. 333.

A suit will lie in a Civil Court to set aside a sale held under Bengal Act VII of 1880, where the sale proclamation is issued against the whole sixteen annas of the estate, but a sale held only of a portion thereof. The effect of sec. 19 of that Act is, that it relates to the practice and procedure in respect of sales, that is to the practice and procedure of executing Courts in the carrying out of sales.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 9.

The words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold," in sec. 311, are sufficiently wide to include a person who is neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor nor the auction-purchaser, but who alleges that the property sold in execution is his.—14 Cal. 240.

An application under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside a sale cannot be made after the expiry of thirty days from the date of such sale and after such sale has been confirmed, even though it be alleged that the sale was fraudulently kept from the knowledge of the applicant until after such confirmation. Semble, that if, before such sale had been confirmed, an application had been made, although after thirty days from the date of the sale, the Court would possibly have been justified in granting the application and extending the period of limitation if sufficient cause under sec. 18 of the Limitation Act were made out.—14 Cal. 679.

Where one decree-holder had attached certain land, and another decree-holder against the same debtor had entitled himself to rateable distribution of the assets under sec. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, held that the latter was entitled to apply, under sec. 311 of the Code, to set aside the sale on the ground of material irregularity.—10 Madr. 57.

A hereditary dharmakarata of a temple, who had assigned his office to a Zemindar and consented to a decree being passed on the footing of such assignment, is competent nevertheless to bring a suit to set aside a Court sale of temple lands, treating such assignment as a nullity. A mortgagee, having obtained a decree on her mortgage, brought the mortgage property to sale; and her vakil bid through an agent at the Court sale and became the purchaser. It appeared that the vakil had not informed his client that he intended to bid nor obtained the sanction of the Court but he had been instructed by his client and had obtained the permission of the Court to bid on her account, and he was found to have acted in an underhand manner towards her. In a suit to set aside the sale, brought by the mortgagor, who had sought unsuccessfully to obtain the same relief by means of a petition under section 311 in which fraud was not alleged against the purchaser:—Held, (on its appearing that the vakil had not discharged the burden which lay on him of proving that the transaction was free from suspicion), that the sale should be set aside.—15 Madr. 389.

Although sec. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that objections to a sale under sec. 311 shall be filed before an order for confirmation is passed, if the precipitate action of the Court has led to the confirmation of a sale before the time allowed for filing objections to the sale has expired, whether or not that Court could entertain such objections after confirming the sale, the High Court on appeal is bound to interfere and to see that objections which by law the appellant is empowered to make are heard and determined before a sale of his property is confirmed or becomes absolute. An application under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, on behalf of a judgment debtor who was a minor, was rejected on the ground that the applicant did not legally represent the minor, and the Court thereupon confirmed the sale. A second application to the same effect was then filed on behalf of the minor by his guardian, and was rejected on the ground that the Court had already confirmed the sale, and was precluded from entertaining objections after such confirmation, prior to which no proper application of objection had been filed. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed. Held that the appeal must be considered to be one from an order under the first paragraph of sec. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, confirming the sale after disallowing the appellant's objection, and that it would, therefore, lie. Held that, assuming the first application on the minor's behalf to have been rightly rejected, the second was made by a duly authorized guardian, and, with regard to sec. 7 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), was not barred by limitation; and the judgment-debtor had, therefore, a right to make it, and the Court should have entertained and dealt with it before proceeding to confirm the sale or grant a sale-certificate. The order disallowing the application and the order confirming the sale, were set aside, and the case remanded for disposal of the appellant's objections. Phoolbas Koonwur v. Jogeshur Sahoy (I. L. R., 1 Cal. 226) referred to.—9 Al. 411.

Where a sale in execution took place under an order obtained, notwithstanding a consent, on the part of the decree-holder's pleader, to a petition by the judgment-debtor for a postponement, the petition, so consented to, having been, by mistake, afterwards presented to, and filed by the judgment-debtor in, the wrong court, held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to a decree in a suit brought to have the sale set aside, no title having passed thereby.—11 Cal. 136; L. R., 11 I. A. 234.

An objection by a judgment-debtor to a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that the property which was the subject of sale was not legally saleable, is not a matter which can be entertained by the Court under sec. 311, so as to afford a ground for setting aside the sale on account of material irregularity in publishing or conducting it. Ram Gopal v. Khi-ali Ram (I. L. R., 6 Al. 448) and Janki Singh v. Ablakh Singh (I. L. R., 6 Al. 393) distinguished. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The scope of sec. 244 is limited to matters connected with the execution of the decree between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and covers all the questions which may arise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor relating to execution, &c., of the decree. Questions that may arise after the sale are not, strictly speaking, questions relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, within the meaning of clause (3), sec. 244; but as soon as there has been a sale, the execution of the decree, so far as the decree-holder is concerned, is over, and the question whether the purchaser has purchased anything by the sale is not a question as to the execution of the decree-holder's decree.—Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The expression “conducting the sale,” as used in sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not include any proceedings unconnected with the actual carrying out of the sale, but refers to the action of the officer who makes the sale, and not to anything done antecedent to the order of sale. Olpherts v. Mahabir Pershad (L. R., 10 Ind. Ap. 25) referred to.—7 Al. 641.

One Shidapa Bapu died indebted to the second defendant Malkhana. On his death his widow Tayawa became his heir, as he left neither son nor brother surviving. In 1878 Malkhana brought a suit to enforce payment of the debt due by the deceased Shidapa Bapu, and he made Baslingawa, the mother of Shidapa, defendant in the suit, omitting Tayawa altogether. On 30th August, 1878, Malkhana obtained an ex-parte decree, and on the 26th July, 1880, the house of Shidapa, then in the possession of Baslingawa, was sold in execution, and the first defendant, Ranu, purchased it. On 6th September, 1880, the sale was confirmed, and on 26th November, 1880, Ranu was put into possession. On the 10th of December 1880, one Shidapa Basapa presented a petition on behalf, as he alleged, of the plaintiff Tayawa, the widow of Shidapa Bapu, to set aside the sale. He did not produce any authority from her, and his application was rejected on the 14th June 1881. On the 31st October 1878, Tayawa adopted the plaintiff Baswantapa under an authority, as she alleged, of her deceased husband Shidapa Bapu. In 1881 Tayawa filed the present suit on behalf of her adopted son Baswantapa to set aside the sale and to recover the house:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the sale set aside, and to recover possession of the house. The estate was vested in Tayawa as legal representative of her deceased husband. Had Tayawa wilfully put forward Baslingawa as the representative of Shidapa Bapu so as to deceive and mislead Malkhana, then, no doubt, she might be held bound by the decree obtained by the latter against Baslingawa. Her mere quiescence while Malkhana wilfully sued the wrong person could not affect her legal rights, or deprive her adopted son, the plaintiff Baswantapa, of his rights. He could not be bound by a suit and sale to which he was not a party either in person or by representation:—Held, also, that Tayawa was not bound to come forward to assert her ownership when the property was attached and sold under Malkhana's decree. The rule—that one who, knowing his own title, stands by and encourages a purchase of property of another's will not be allowed to dispute the validity of the sale—implies a wilful misleading of the purchaser by some breach of duty on the owner's part. In this case there was nothing more than mere quiescence on the part of Tayawa.—9 Bom. 86.

A sale by public auction in execution of a decree, which is conducted at a time and place other than those properly notified, is not a sale at all within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code.

The time to be notified for a sale by public auction in execution of a decree must be the time of the commencement of the sale, in order that all intending purchasers may be enabled to be present during the whole of the proceedings, and that all who are interested in the property sold may see that there is a fair competition and a good sale. Where property which was advertised for sale by public auction in execution of a decree at 11 A. M., was sold at 7 A. M., :—Held, that the mistake was more than a mere irregularity in conducting the sale, and that the whole of the proceedings were invalid.—7 Al. 676.

The Court executing a decree passed an order postponing a sale in execution, but the order failed to reach the officer conducting the sale, and the sale was consequently held. The judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside as void. Held that the effect of the Court's order for postponement of the sale was to deprive the officer of all legal authority to hold it on the date previously fixed ; that his not being aware of the order was not material ; that the defect in the sale amounted to an illegality and not merely to an irregularity within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code ; that consequently it was not necessary to show that the defect had caused substantial loss to the judgment-debtor ; and that the Court could not confirm the illegal sale, but must hold it to be void. Sukhdeo Rai v. Sheo Ghulam, Ram Dial v. Mahtab Singh and Ganga Prasad v. Jag Lal Rai, referred to.—12 Al. 96.

Where an application is made to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground of irregularity, it is not to be presumed from the proved existence of irregularity and injury that the latter occurred by reason of the former, in the absence of evidence to show that the injury is the result of the irregularity. Macnaghten v. Mahabir Pershad Singh, (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 656) and Lala Mobaruk Lal v. Secretary of State for India in Council, (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 200) discussed.—11 Cal. 658.

The mortgagees of a certain tenure obtained, on 11th September 1884, under sec. 86 of the Transfer of property Act, a decree for foreclosure, which declared that, on failure to pay the amount found due, the mortgagor's right of redemption should be barred on 11th March 1885 ; this time was subsequently extended on the application of the mortgagor to 30th April 1885. On the 6th April 1885, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained by the superior holder of the tenure against the mortgagor, the tenure was sold free from incumbrances. The mortgagees applied under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to have the sale set aside for material irregularity :—Held, that under sec. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagees had such an interest in the property as brought them within the words of sec. 311, " person whose property has been sold," and entitled them to make the application.—13 Cal. 346.

The word " disallowed " in sec. 312 has no reference to an order passed on an appeal, but refers to the disallowance of the objection by the Court before which the proceedings under sec. 311 are taken.—11 Cal. 287.

An order passed under the first clause of sec. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, after an objection made under the provisions of sec. 311 had been disallowed, is appealable under art. (16) of sec. 588. Per MAHMOOD J.—An application made under sec. 311 can be disposed of only under sec. 312, and if the Court rejects the objection to the sale, the order must be regarded as an order " refusing to set aside a sale of immoveable property " under the first paragraph of sec. 312, and therefore appealable as falling under the purview of art. (16) of sec. 588. Laman v. Rassa Lal and Rajan Kura v. Lalla Prasad dissented from by MAHMOOD J. Tota Ram v. Khub Chand.—12 Cal. 253.

Execution of a decree on a mortgage-bond, for the sale of the mortgaged property and for the costs of the suit, amounting to Rs. 1,000, certain houses were attached on the 30th September 1881, which were not part of the mortgaged property. On an objection raised by the judgment-debtors that the decree was by its terms executable only against the mortgaged property, the High Court in appeal decided, on the 6th September 1882, that the houses were not liable to attachment and sale under the decree. In the meantime, on the 15th June 1882, the houses had been put up for sale and purchased for Rs. 500, and the sale had been confirmed on the 16th August 1882. The judgment-debtors brought a suit against the purchaser to set aside the sale, on the ground that the houses were not saleable under the decree. Held that the decree, in regard to costs, was a decree made personal against the judgment-debtor, and conferred a right upon the decree-holder to take out execution for the recovery of those costs, not only against the property mortgaged in the bond, but also against the person and other property of the judgment-debtor. Per OLDFIELD, J. (MAHMOOD, J., doubting).—That the attachment and sale in execution of the decree were valid, inasmuch as they were made in respect of the costs as well of the principal and interest decreed. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the suit was maintainable, and was not barred by any plea in limine. Abdul Haya v. Nawab Raj (B. L. R., Sup. Vol. 911) referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—That inasmuch as the adjudication of the 6th September 1882 was one between the judgment-debtors on the one hand and the decree-holder on the other, and subsequent, not only to the sale, but to the confirmation of the sale, and inasmuch as the Court was not then called upon to decide anything in relation to the nature of the decree as to costs, the order then passed could not be used against the purchaser. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—That it was doubtful whether, the attachment having been made for the whole amount of the decree and not for costs, and no separate proceedings having taken place in respect of the personal decree against the judgment-debtor, the attachment, the notification of sale, and the sale itself, were valid; but that everything that was said against these proceedings constituted matters falling under sec. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, which enables parties to object to confirmation of sale; and that therefore, even assuming that the sale and confirmation of sale were subject to the objection of “material irregularity in publishing or conducting” the sale, within the meaning of sec. 311, a suit like the present, upon that ground alone, was prohibited by the last part of sec. 312.—7 Al. 450.

In a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree, the proclamation of sale notified that the decree-holder held two charges on the property, aggregating about Rs. 1,000. There was, in fact, one charge only, amounting to about Rs. 800. Held that the error in the proclamation of sale amounted to such an irregularity in publishing the sale and putting up the property to the biddings of the public as must have materially marred the fairness of the auction and affected the price, and that the sale must therefore be set aside, on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting it.—8 Al. 116.

An execution-sale of the right, title, and interest in land was set aside by the Court, on the ground that the warrant for the execution of the decree and order of attachment of the property sold had not been signed by the Judge, but by the Munsarim of the Court; and at a second sale the property was sold to other purchasers, who, as well as the judgment-debtor, were sued by the purchaser at the first sale for a declaration of his right to have the first sale confirmed. The High Court having held that with reference to sec. 222 of Act VIII of 1859, the first sale had been rightly set aside, an appeal to the Judicial Committee was dismissed with costs.—7 Al. 506.

Disparaging remarks made by bystanders or by purchasers at an exeuction-sale other than the decree-holder do not constitute such an irregularity as is contemplated by sec. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Gunga Narain Gupta v. Annunda Moyee Burroanec, 12 C. L. R., 404, followed; Woopendro Nath Sircar v. Brojendro Nath Mundle, I. L. R., 7 Cal. 346, 90 L. R., 263, and Rukhinee Bullubh v. Brojonath Sircar, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 308, distinguished. It is the practice of the Courts under the Rules of the High Court, which have the force of law, to place all properties intended for sale in execution of decrees on a list, and to proceed with the sales from day to day, commencing on an appointed day. As each property is taken up in its turn, an adjournment of the sale of a particular property, which is the consequence of such procedure, is not an adjournment within the meaning of sec. 291 of the Civil Procedure Code.—17. Cal. 152.

The sale of immoveable property by an amin on a close holiday is not illegal, nor is it an irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.—3 Al. 333.

The provisions of sec. 13 of Act XV of 1877 are not applicable to proceedings in the execution of a decree.—3 Al. 185.

Where, after a judgment-debtor has applied, under Act X of 1877, sec. 311, to have a sale set aside, the auction-purchaser is made a party to the proceedings, and the sale is set aside, the auction-purchaser can appeal against the order setting aside the sale.—2 Al. 352.

Although the auction-purchaser may not apply under Act X of 1877, sec. 311, to have a sale set aside, he may be a party to the proceedings after an application has been made under that section, and then, if an order is made against him, he can appeal from such an order under sec. 588.—2 Al. 396.

Sec. 311 does not apply only to sales made under chap. xix of the Code, and the sale of an under-tenure may be set aside upon any of the grounds mentioned in that section.—7 Cal. 163.

The words "any person whose immoveable property has been sold," in sec. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, do not include a person who has purchased the same property at a prior execution-sale, such prior sale not having been confirmed.—8 Cal. 367; S. C. 10 C. L. R., 44.

When a judgment-debtor has died after decree, but before application has been made to execute the decree, the Court, before directing the attachment and sale of any property to proceed, must issue a notice to the party against whom the execution is applied for to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him, and its omission to do so will invalidate the entire subsequent proceedings.—6 Cal. 103; 7 C. L. R., 85; 2 W. R., 74.

A Subordinate Judge made an order for the sale, in execution of a decree of certain immoveable property, which was "ancestral," within the meaning of the notification by the Local Government, No. 671, dated the 30th August 1880, under which execution of such decree should have been transferred to the Collector; and such property was sold accordingly. Held that, the order for the sale of such property having been made without jurisdiction, the sale was void, and should be set aside.—4 Al. 382.

The property of a judgment-debtor was proclaimed and advertized for sale in execution of a decree on a certain day. The proclamation set out particulars of the property, but subsequent to such proclamation a portion of the property was released to a third party. Notwithstanding this fact, no fresh proclamation was made, and the sale took place on the day originally fixed. Held that the omission to issue a fresh proclamation was a material irregularity, inasmuch as the judgment-debtor was entitled to have a proclamation issued accurately describing the property to be sold, and that such proclamation should be published thirty days before the sale. See also Gopeenath Dobey v. Roy Luchmееput Singh Bahadur (L. L. R., 3 Cal. 542).—3 Cal. 544; 2 C. L. R., 260.

When liberty is given to a decree-holder to bid at the sale of the judgment-debtor's property, he is bound to exercise the most scrupulous fairness in purchasing that property, and if he or his agent dissuades others from purchasing at the sale, that of itself is a sufficient ground why the purchase should be set aside. Where a decree-holder was joint in family with the manager of an infant defendant, and the defendant's property was to be sold in execution of the decree:—Held that the decree-holder ought not to be granted leave to purchase at the sale, because any purchase made by him would be for the benefit of the family of which the manager of the infant defendant was one of the members; and it would, in fact, be a purchase by an agent of the property of his principal.—7 Cal. 346; 9 C. L. R., 263.

On the day fixed for the sale of certain immoveable property in the execution of a decree the Court made an order postponing the sale, but the sale had been effected before such order reached the officer conducting it. The Court, on application having been made to set aside the sale, passed an order confirming it. Subsequently, an application by the decree holder for a review of this order having been granted, the Court passed an order setting aside the sale as illegal. Held that, the sanction to the sale originally given having been withdrawn, the sale could not legally be held, and the sale which was effected, the order of postponement notwithstanding, was unlawful and invalid, and in reviewing its first order, and in setting aside the sale as illegal, the Court executing the decree had not acted ultra vires, and its action was not otherwise illegal. (H. C. R., N.-W. P. 1874, p. 354).—2 Al. 686.

An objection to the validity of a sale of revenue-paying land, on the ground that the revenue assessed upon it had not been stated in the proclamation of the intended sale in accordance with sec 287 of Act X of 1877, was taken, for the first time, in the Court of appeal; an application to set aside the sale, on the ground that it had taken place without proclamation made, having been rejected by the Court of first instance, which found that proclamation had been made. Held that the objection was taken too late, although, if properly taken in the Court of first instance, it would have been good to the extent that not stating the amount of the revenue was an irregularity; substantial damage, resulting from it, remaining to be proved as required by sec. 311 of Act X of 1877. Held also that inadequacy of price having been alleged as substantial damage, without having been proved to be the effect of the non-statement of the revenue, the applicant had not (as required by sec. 311) proved, to the satisfaction of the Court, that he had sustained substantial damage by reason of such irregularity.—9 Cal. 656. S. C. 11 C. L. R., 494; L. R., 10 I. A. 25.

An application under sec. 311 of Act X of 1877 to set aside a sale in execution of a decree having been made by the judgment-debtor, the Court executing the decree (Subordinate Judge) disallowed the objections, and passed an order confirming such sale. The judgment-debtor subsequently applied to the Subordinate Judge for a review of judgment. The Subordinate Judge, without recording his reasons for granting such application, irregularly proceeded at once to pass an order setting aside such sale, with.

out cancelling the previous order confirming it. The auction-purchaser appealed to the District Judge. That officer, treating the appeal as one from an order granting an application for review of judgment, entertained it, and set aside the Subordinate Judge's second order. Held that the District Judge was not justified in entertaining such appeal, such order not being one granting an application for review, but one setting aside a sale, and as such not appealable. Before a review of judgment is granted, an order granting the application for review, and the reason for granting the same should be regarded.—3 Al. 316.

On an application under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, (Act X of 1877) to set aside a sale, it appeared that there had been a material irregularity in publishing the sale; but no witnesses were called to prove that substantial injury had been caused thereby. It also appeared that seventeen days after the applicant had applied for proclamations to be issued to his witnesses, he deposited the requisite fees; and that, subsequently there was a delay of seven days in the office in issuing such proclamations, which were ultimately issued only three days prior to the day fixed for the hearing. On the applicant alleging that, in consequence of such delay, he had not been allowed a fair opportunity to produce his witnesses, held that the Court cannot presume that substantial injury has been caused from the mere fact of there having been a material irregularity in publishing a sale; but when both a material irregularity and substantial injury have been proved, the Court may reasonably presume that the substantial injury is due to such irregularity. Held also that the applicant, having been guilty of laches himself, could not be allowed to set up the delay in the office as a ground for the non-production of his witnesses.—7 Cal. 730.

The mere fact that the amount of rent payable in respect of a tenure brought to sale in execution of a decree is not stated in the sale-proclamation is not a material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), though, if the amount of rent payable were stated to be more than it actually was, that might constitute such an irregularity as tending to lessen the price at which purchasers might be willing to buy. Where decrees for arrears of rent had been obtained by fractional share-holders in a tenure, and in execution thereof a moiety of the tenure had been sold, it appeared that the other moiety had been sold, at the same time in execution of a mortgage-decree against some of the judgment-debtors in the rent suits, on an objection being taken to the confirmation of such sale, on the ground that the whole tenure should have been sold in execution of the rent decrees: Held that, all that the decree-holders were entitled to have sold was the right, title, and interest of their judgment-debtors, and that they were in position of ordinary creditors having no lien on the tenure; and that, consequently, the mortgagor being entitled to enforce his lien against the moiety covered by his mortgage, the sale of the remaining moiety in satisfaction of the rent-decrees was a good sale, and could not be set aside.—7 Cal. 723.

The plaintiff purchased under a private conveyance from the registered tenant of a permanent transferable interest in land such as is described in sec. 26 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, but no notice of the transfer was given to the zemindar. The zemindar subsequently brought a suit against the tenant for arrears of rent, and obtained a decree, in execution of which he caused the tenure to be sold, and himself became the purchaser. The plaintiff took proceedings under sec. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale, but his application was rejected on the ground, an erroneous one, that he was not a proper party to take such proceedings, and he did not appeal against the order rejecting it. Held, in a suit brought against the zemindar and the tenant to set aside the sale, that in the absence of fraud the suit was not maintainable. The plaintiff might have satisfied the rent-decree, and so prevented the sale, or he might have appealed against the order rejecting his application to set it aside; but having done neither, and the zemindar having had no notice of the transfer, the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the proceedings in the rent-suit as a nullity, on the ground that he was not a party to that suit.—10 Cal. 496.

Under Act XII of 1879, Form 149 of Schedule IV of the Code of Civil Procedure provided that sixty days should elapse between a sale in execution of a decree and its confirmation. A sale having been confirmed before the expiry of sixty days :—Held, that the sale was not rendered inoperative, and that its effect was not postponed by reason of the provision in Form No. 149. Where a suit was brought to recover money from the defendant, who was the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, and it was not alleged in the plaint that the defendant was sued as karnavan, or that the debt was binding on the tarwad : Held, that a sale of tarwad property in execution of the decree was not binding on the members of the tarwad, and therefore that Article 12 of Schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, did not apply to a suit brought by other members of the tarwad to recover the land sold in execution of the decree.—7 Madr. 512.

312. If no such application as is mentioned in the last preceding section be made, or if such application be made and the objection be disallowed, the Court shall pass an order confirming the sale as regards the parties to the suit and the purchaser.

If such application be made, and if the objection be allowed, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale.
 of its being allowed.

No suit to set aside, on the ground of such irregularity, an order passed under this section, shall be brought by the party against whom such order has been made.

Notes.

It is a general principle of law that an appeal newly given by law is made applicable to proceedings instituted before that change in procedure is made. Held, accordingly, that an appeal from an order under the second paragraph of sec. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, although made before Act VII. of 1838 came into force, would, upon the operation of that Act, lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit in relation to which such order was made. Hurrosundari Dabi v. Bhojohari Das Manji (I. L. R., 13 Cal. 86) explained and distinguished.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 429.

An order of an Appellate Court under section 312 confirming a sale cannot be the subject of a second appeal.—18 Cal. 422.

Where a sale in execution of a decree has taken place pending an appeal, and the decree has subsequently been reversed, the Court executing the decree cannot, after such reversal, grant confirmation of the sale. Basappa bin Malappa Aki v. Dundaya bin Shivlingaya (I. L. R., 2 Bom. 540) referred to.—10 Al. 83.

An appeal does not lie from an order, setting aside a sale, passed under section 312, paragraph 2, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—11 Bom. 603.

A suit lies in a Civil Court for confirmation of a sale held in execution of a decree by the Collector under sec. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code, and to set aside an order passed by the Collector cancelling the sale. Madho Prasad v. Hansa Kuar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 314) referred to. Azim-ud-din v. Baldeo (I. L. R., 3 Al. 554) followed. In such a suit, where it is pleaded in defence that the property was sold for an inadequate price, it lies on the defendant to show that there has been a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.—9 Al. 602.

A sale was held in execution of a decree when an appeal was pending. Before the sale became absolute and before it was confirmed the decree was reversed by the appellate Court. After the reversal of the decree the purchaser applied for confirmation of sale and the lower Court granted the application. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the lower Court was not competent to confirm the sale, inasmuch as, at the date of the application for confirmation, there was no decree subsisting.—10 Al. 83.

Held (OLDFIELD, J., dissenting) that a suit by the purchaser at a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree, which has been set aside under secs. 311 and 312 of Act X of 1877, to have such sale confirmed, on the ground that there was no irregularity in the publication or conduct thereof, is not barred by the last clause of sec. 312 or by the last clause of sec. 588, but is maintainable.—3 Al. 554.

Proceedings to execute a decree commenced when the former Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) was in force; but property belonging to the judgment-debtor was sold in pursuance of those proceedings on the 14th November 1877, after the new Code (Act X of 1877) came into operation. Subsequently, at the instance of the applicant, the Court made an order, setting aside the sale on ground of irregularity.—Held that this order was governed by the former Code, and was consequently not subject to appeal.—3 Bom. 214.

The Court executing a decree having made an order setting aside a sale under Act VIII of 1859 of immoveable property in the execution of the decree, the purchaser at such sale sued the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor to have such order set aside, and to have such sale confirmed in his favour. Held (OLDFIELD, J., dissenting) that the suit was maintainable, the provision of sec. 257 precluding an appeal from an order setting aside a sale, and not a suit to contest the validity of such an order, and that, the order setting aside the sale in this case being ultra vires, the auction-purchaser was entitled to the relief he claimed.—3 Al. 206.

Certain immoveable property was put up for sale in the execution of B's decree, and was purchased by him. Subsequently, on the same day, such property was put up for sale in the execution of S's decree, and was purchased by him. B objected to the confirmation of the sale to S on the ground that S's decree had been satisfied previously to such sale, and the Court executing the decrees made an order setting aside such sale on that ground. S thereupon sued B to have such order set aside, and to have such sale confirmed, and to obtain possession of such property. Held that, inasmuch as such order had not been made under sec. 257 of Act VIII. of 1859, but had been made at the instance of a purchaser under another decree, and B's decree, as a matter of fact, had not been satisfied, S's suit to have such order set aside was maintainable.—3 Al. 112.

An appellate Court has a discretionary power to substitute or order a new appellant or respondent after the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal. The right, title, and interest of G in certain immoveable property was attached and notified for sale in the execution of a money-decree held by T. It was also attached and notified for sale in the execution of a money-decree held by S and R. The same date was fixed for both sales. The officer conducting sales first sold the property in execution of T's decree, and T purchased the property. He then sold the property in execution of the decree held by S and R, and K purchased the property. The Court executing the decrees confirmed the sale to Y, granting him a sale-certificate, and disallowing K's objection to the confirmation. It also confirmed the sale to K ordering the purchase-money to be paid to S and R, and disallowing K's objection to the confirmation; but it refused to grant K a sale-certificate, on the ground that, as the sale to T had been confirmed, and a sale-certificate granted to him, it could not give K possession of the property. In a suit by K against S and R to recover his purchase-money, held (distinguishing the suit from the cases in which it had been held that, when the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in a particular property is sold, there is no warranty that he has any right, title, or interest, and therefore the auction-purchaser cannot recover his purchase-money if it turns out that the judgment-debtor had no interest in the property) that the rule of caveat emptor did not apply, and the suit was maintainable. The provisions of sec. 257 of Act VIII of 1859 apply to applications made under sec. 256 of that Act, and to those only. Held, therefore, that, inasmuch as K objected to the confirmation of the sale to him on the ground that the Court was not competent to confirm a sale which had by its previous order been nullified, and not on any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, K was not precluded by the terms of sec. 257 of that Act from maintaining his suit. Where the Court executing two decrees made separate orders directing the sale on the same date of certain immoveable property in execution of such decrees, the officer conducting sales was not bound to sell such property once for all in execution of both decrees, and his selling such property separately was, therefore, not an irregularity in the conduct of the sales.—2 Al. 107.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 512, noted under sec. 311; 10 Cal. 368, noted under sec. 294; 3 Al. 356, noted under sec. 285; 9 Al. 411, 14 Cal. 9 & 14 Cal. 679, noted under sec. 311; 14 Cal. 1, noted under sec. 290; 17 Cal. 769, noted under sec. 244; 12 Al. 440, noted under sec. 234.

313. The purchaser at any such sale may apply to the Application to set aside sale on ground of judgment-debtor having no saleable interest.

Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the person whose property purported to be sold had no saleable interest therein, and the Court may make such order as it thinks fit: Provided that no order to set aside a sale shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder have had opportunity of being heard against such order.

Notes.

In execution of a decree obtained on the 5th August 1876, the property of the judgment-debtor was attached on the 17th August 1877. The sale of the attached property was postponed pending a suit instituted under the direction of the Court by a claimant to the attached property. This suit having been dismissed on the 13th September 1878, the decree-holder, on the 25th September, applied for a sale of the property, and the 16th December was fixed for the sale. Meanwhile, on the 13th December 1877, a decree had been obtained by another party against the judgment-debtor, and in execution of this decree the same property was attached on the 13th September 1878, and under this attachment a sale took place on the 15th November following. On the 16th December, as fixed, the property was again sold under the first attachment. The auction-purchaser at that sale, on the 6th January 1879, applied, under sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Court) on the authority of the following cases—Gogaram v. Kartick Chander Singh (9 W. R., 514), Lala Joogul Lall v. Bhuka Chowdhary (9 W. R., 244), and Kartick Chander Singh v. Gogaram (2 W. R., Mis., 48), which the Court felt bound to follow, while it doubted the correctness—that the sale must be set aside.—6 C. L. R., 85.

In execution of a rent-decree, dated 26th May 1869, certain immovable property was sold in execution, and purchased by the appellant on the 21st February 1880, no mention having been made of any incumbrances. On the 9th May 1879, a decree was obtained upon a mortgage executed by the original judgment-debtor, and in execution of that decree the property which had already been sold was attached, and, on the 11th March, again sold in execution of the second decree, it being alleged that the property was covered by the mortgage which was prior in date to the former decree. The appellant thereupon applied that the sale of the 21st March should be set aside under sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code, and his purchase-money directed to be returned to him. Held that, if, as a fact, the property sold was covered by the mortgage, there was, under the circumstances, no such saleable interest in the judgment-debtor at the time of the sale on the 21st February 1880 as would prevent the operation of sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as under that sale the purchaser would be unable to get the particular property purchased by him; and that the sale must be set aside.—8 C. L. R., 468.

Under sec. 313 a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree may resist the confirmation of the sale and prevent its conclusion, while under sec. 315 he may apply, after the confirmation of the sale, for a refund of the purchase-money on the ground that nothing passed by the sale. To entitle a purchaser, under para. 2 of sec. 315, to a refund of purchase-money, it is not necessary that a Court should have decided in other proceedings that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold, or that the purchaser should have obtained actual possession and have been deprived thereof.—8 Madr. 99.

Held that an application under sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code by the purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, which had been transferred for execution to the Collector, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the Local Government, was entertainable by the Civil Courts, and the Collector had no jurisdiction, under the Code or under Notification No. 671 of 1880, to entertain it. Madho Prasad v. Hansa Kuar (I. L. R., 5 Al. 314) referred to.—9 Al. 43.

The fact that property sold in execution of a decree is incumbered, even when the incumbrance covers the probable value of the property, is not sufficient to sustain a plea that the person whose property is sold had no saleable interest therein. Sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that either the judgment-debtor had no interest at all, or that the interest was not one he could sell; and the fact that the property may fetch little or nothing if sold does not affect the question. Naharmal v. Sadut Ali (8 C. L. R., 468) distinguished. Protap Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Panioty (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 506) referred to.—9 Al. 167.

In the event of the death of the judgment-debtor, notice must issue to his representative before the sale of immoveable property can be set aside under sec. 313 of the Code of Civil Procedure, albeit that the section makes no express provision for the appearance of the representative.—7 Bom. 424.

Sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code only applies to cases in which the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold. It does not apply to cases where the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in a portion only of the property.—9 Cal. 626.

A person who purchases immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree, knowing that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest therein, is not entitled to the benefit of the provisions of sec. 313 of Act X of 1877, which were designed for the protection of persons who innocently and ignorantly purchase valueless property.—3 Al. 527.

Where in execution of a decree passed against a person who had previously been adjudicated an insolvent, portions of his property (then vested in the Official Assignee) are attached and sold, the purchaser is entitled to have the sale set aside under sec. 313 of the Code of Civil Procedure, notwithstanding that the Official Assignee acquiesces in the sale, and is content to receive the sale-proceeds.—9 Cal. 217.

The fact that property sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage upon which a decree has been obtained—which fact is not disclosed prior to the proclamation of sale—is not sufficient to enable an auction-purchaser to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had “no saleable interest” in the property, within the meaning of sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code. Naharmul Marwari v. Sadut Ali (8 C. L. R., 468) distinguished.—9 Cal. 506.

A misrepresentation or concealment in the sale-notification, which induces a purchaser to buy a property for much more than it is really worth—although that misrepresentation or concealment may be fraudulent—is no ground for setting aside a sale under sec. 313 of the Civil Procedure Code. The meaning of sec. 313 is that, when a purchaser under an execution-sale buys a property which turns out to have no existence at all, or to be of no saleable value whatever, the Court may then set aside the sale under sec. 313.—10 Cal. 368.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 512 & 11 Al. 94, noted sec. 311; 10 Cal. 368, noted under sec. 294. See I. L. R., 11 Madr. 269.

314. No sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court.

Confirmation of sale.

Note.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 424, noted under section 305 ; 17 Cal. 769, noted under sec. 244 ; 18 Cal. 125, noted under sec. 289.

315. When a sale of immoveable property is set aside under section 312 or 313,

If sale set aside, price to be returned to purchaser.

or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold, and the purchaser is, for that reason, deprived of it, the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase-money has been paid.

The repayment of the said purchase-money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided by this Code for the execution of a decree for money.

Notes.

The plaintiff purchased at an auction-sale, in execution of a decree, the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in certain property. The sale was confirmed on 30th November 1866. On proceeding to take possession, he was opposed by the defendant, who asserted that he was in possession of the property, and that it was his. In a suit under sec. 258, Act VIII of 1859, for a refund of the purchase-money, the sale still remaining uncanceled, held that the suit must be dismissed ; that sec. 258 of Act VIII of 1859 only applied to cases where the auction-sale had been cancelled ; that the proper course for the plaintiff to have pursued was to have brought a suit under sec. 269 of Act VIII of 1859 for a declaration of the judgment-debtor's right, title and interest in the property.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 301 ; 12 W. R., 176.

When an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree buys the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property sold in execution, and it is subsequently found that the judgment-debtor had no right, title, or interest whatever in the property, no suit will lie against the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to recover back the money which the auction-purchaser has paid. Although a purchaser may, under sec. 258 of Act VIII of 1859, recover his purchase-money, it is only when the sale is set aside for irregularity under sec. 257.—4 B. L. R., (F. B.) 11 ; 12 W. R., (F. B.) 8.

Under sec. 258, Act VIII. of 1859, when a sale of immoveable property is set aside, the purchaser is entitled to recover back his purchase-money. If the Court, reversing the sale, omit to make such order, the purchaser can sue to recover the money from the person who has received it.—1 W. R., 55 ; 2 Agra H. C. R., 50.

No appeal lies from an order refusing a refund of price to a purchaser the sale to whom has been set aside under sec. 315 of the Civil Procedure Code. Soudagar Mal v. Abdul Rahman Khan, Tapesri Lal v. Deoki Nandan Ria and Ram Dial v. Ram Das referred to. Baijnath Sahai v. Moheep Narain Singh dissented from.—I. L. R., 12 Al. 397.

Upon an application for refund of purchase-money under sec. 315 the Munsif, being of opinion that the purchaser had, in collusion with the judgment-debtor, run up the price of the land at auction far beyond its value with a view to prevent other property attached from being sold to satisfy the decree, rejected the application, except as to a sum of Rs. 50, which represented the alleged value of the judgment-debtor's interest in the land brought to sale by the decree-holder. Held that, as the judgment-debtor was found to have no interest in the land, the purchaser was entitled to a refund of the money paid to the decree-holder.—8 Madr. 101.

Although there is no express provision in the Code laying down that a decree-holder may take out of Court the proceeds of an execution-sale before the date on which the sale is confirmed, yet sec. 315 of the Code implies that this may be done. The Court, however, under special circumstances, may refuse to pay over to the decree-holder the purchase-money until the sale is confirmed, but in such case it should provide for due payment of interest on the money detained. Held that, under the special circumstances of this case, the decree-holder was not entitled to receive interest from his judgment-debtor from the date of the sale to the date on which the sale was confirmed.—12 Cal. 252.

Where an order was passed under sec. 315 directing refund to a purchaser in execution of a decree in a suit in which a second appeal lay to the High Court, held that, under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the High Court could set aside the order, because the judgment-debtor having been found to have a saleable interest, the lower Court had no power to order a refund.—9 Madr 437.

Where immoveable property was sold in the execution of a decree under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, and the auction-purchaser, having been subsequently deprived of such property on the ground that the Judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in it, applied under Act X of 1877, sec. 315, to the Court executing such decree for the return of the purchase-money. Held that the Court could entertain the application.—In the matter of the petition of Mulo, I. L. R., 2 Al. 299. This is dissented from in a subsequent case where it was held that Act X of 1877, sec. 315, cannot have retrospective effect so as to apply to a sale which had taken place before the Act came into operation.—2 Al. 780, 2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 83; 10 W. R., 365 followed.

Per STRAIGHT, OLDFIELD, and TYRRELL, JJ.—That the words in sec. 315 of the Civil Procedure Code, “no saleable interest,” mean “nothing to sell,” and are not intended to confine the cases in which a purchaser at an execution-sale shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money to those in which the judgment-debtor, though having an interest, such interest is, by prohibition of law or for some other reason, unsaleable. Held by the Full Bench that a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree can maintain a suit against the decree-holder for recovery of his purchase-money when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, and he is not limited to the special procedure in the execution department mentioned in sec. 315.—5 Al. 577.

A judgment-debtor, whose property had been sold in execution of the decree under Act VIII of 1859, appealed from the order disallowing his application to set aside the sale, after Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code) came into force. The Appellate Court set aside the sale. The purchaser sued the decree-holder for interest on the purchase-money and the expenses of the sale, the purchase-money having been returned to him under the order of the Court executing the decree, without interest and less such expenses. Held by the Full Bench that the provisions of Act X of 1877, and not of Act VIII of 1859, were applicable to the determination of the matter in dispute in the suit. Held by the Divisional Bench (STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ.) that, with reference to the ruling of the Full Bench, the suit was maintainable. Held also by the Divisional Bench that, under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff ought not to be granted the relief sought.—5 Al. 364.

See I. L. R., 11 Madr. 269, noted under sec. 313; 13 Al. 383, noted under sec. 295.

316. When a sale of immovable property has become absolute in manner aforesaid, the Court Certificate to purchaser of immoveable property. shall grant a certificate stating the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser. Such certificate shall bear the date of the confirmation of the sale; and, so far as regards the parties to the suit and persons claiming through or under them, the title to the property sold shall vest in the purchaser from the date of such certificate, and not before: Provided that the decree under which the sale took place was still subsisting at that date.

Notes.

The plaintiff, as purchaser at a Court's sale, sued in 1871 for possession of certain immoveable property, and tendered in evidence a sale-certificate, dated 20th September 1865. The first Court decided against the plaintiff on the ground, among others, that the certificate was not registered, though registration of it was compulsory. On the 9th February 1875, the plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court against that decree, and, on the 26th July 1875, applied to that Court for permission to give in evidence a new certificate of sale, issued on the 1st February 1875, regarding the same property as that to which the certificate of the 20th September 1865 related. Held by the High Court that, as the new certificate was issued after the first Court had made its decree, the High Court ought not to receive it, or to suggest or facilitate any application to the lower Court for a review of its decree on documentary evidence, which had no existence when that Court made such decree. (Distinction pointed out between this case and Mohidin v. Mahadaji, S. A. 437 of 1872.) Quære.—Whether, under the circumstances of this case, the Subordinate Judge, who issued the new certificate of sale on the 1st February 1875, ought to have so issued it, in order that the plaintiff might register it, the plaintiff having already lost, by his own laches, the right to register the original certificate? Quære.—Whether the Court of first instance ought to have received the second certificate if it had been issued and tendered in evidence subsequently to the filing of the suit, but previously to the original hearing?—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 247.

K brought a suit against P to recover possession of certain land. Whilst that suit was pending in the Court of first instance, the right, title, and interest of P in the land were sold in execution of a decree against him at the instance of a judgment-creditor, and purchased by G. Subsequent to G's purchase K's suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance; but K appealed, and the Appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court below, and gave judgment in K's favour. G, who was not made a party to the appeal, thereupon instituted a suit against K to eject him and obtain possession of the land. Held that the doctrine of lis pendens applied, and that G was not entitled to maintain the suit. Held, further, that it made no difference to the application of the doctrine that the decree of the Court of first instance was in favour of G's predecessor in title, for that decree was open to appeal, and the decree in the suit was that passed by the Appellate Court, the proceedings in the Appeal Court being merely a continuation of those in the suit ; and as G's purchase was made whilst that suit was pending, G was still bound by the decree of the Appellate Court. Anundo Moyee Dossee v. Dhonendro Chunder Mookerjee (14 Moore's L. A. 101 ; 8 B. L. R. , 122 ; 16 W. R., (P. C.) 19) distinguished.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 94.

An application by an auction-purchaser for a certificate of sale needs bear no stamp, since by sec. 316 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) it is not even required to be in writing.—13 Bom. 670. -

In execution of a decree for sale passed on a hypothecation bond, all the land comprised in the security was attached. The judgment-debtor was a member of an undivided family ; his son put in no claim in execution, but on a claim put in by his nephew it was ordered that the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor be sold. The decree-holder became the purchaser, and having obtained a sale certificate which recited that " all the interest of the judgment-debtor " was sold, he was put in possession of all the land, part of which he leased to the son. Subsequently the nephew obtained a decree for his share against the decree-holder and then purchased the rest of the land from him. In a suit by the son against the nephew to recover his share, the plaintiff having failed to prove that the judgment debt had been incurred for purposes not binding on him :—Held, that the entire estate less the interest of the nephew was sold to the decree-holder and consequently the son's interest had passed to him. The question what is actually bargained and paid for at an execution sale is a mixed question of law and fact, and the High Court on second appeal is not bound by the finding of the Court of first appeal with regard to it.—13 Madr. 47.

The words " subsisting decree ", in the proviso to sec. 316 refer to a decree which is unreversed and in full force, and not to a decree the execution of which is not barred by limitation. Where a decree under which a sale takes place remains, unreversed, and the sale under it has been confirmed, a sale certificate will operate as a valid transfer of the property sold, notwithstanding that the sale has actually taken place at a time when execution of the decree is barred by limitation.—11 Cal. 376.

A Court having once granted a certificate of sale to an auction-purchaser is under no obligation to give him another, in order that he may escape the penalty which he has incurred by reason of the certificate being insufficiently stamped.—9 Bom. 526.

The title of a purchaser at a Court sale becomes complete upon his payment of the purchase-money and confirmation of the sale by the Court. When the sale is admitted, production of a certificate is not necessary to prove that fact.—10 Bom. 444.

Claims on property admitted by the parties or established by a decree of a Court should be entered in the certificate of sale and be computed as part of the purchase money in ascertaining the amount of the stamp duty leviable on the certificate of sale. Other claims should neither be entered in the certificate of sale nor computed as part of the purchase money. It is the duty of the purchaser to provide the stamp.—9 Bom. 47.

Held that a sale-certificate granted under sec. 316 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a document, the registration of which is compulsory under the Registration Act, 1877, sec. 17 (b).—5 Al. 568.

Under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 259, and Act XX of 1866, secs. 17 and 42, it was necessary to register the certificate of sale itself, and not merely the memorandum of the certificate of sale.—3 Madr. 41.

A purchaser of immoveable property at a Court-sale under the Civil Procedure Code, Act VIII of 1859, who has been put into possession by the Court, has thereupon a complete title against all persons bound by the decree, notwithstanding that he has no certificate of sale, or one only which has not been registered. Rajkishan Mookerjee v. Radha Madhab (21 W. R., 349) followed. Quære.—How far the above ruling will be affected by the language of sec. 316 of Act XIV of 1882?—7 Bom. 254.

Clause 178, sch. ii. of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), is not applicable to applications for certificates of sale. Re Khaja Pattahnjee (I. L. R., 5 Bom 202) dissented from. The provisions of the Indian Limitation Act (No. XV of 1877) do not apply to applications to a Court to do what it has no direction to refuse, nor to applications for the exercise of functions of a ministerial character. Kylasa Goundan v. Ramasami Ayyan (I. L. R., 4 Madr. 172) followed.—6 Bom. 586.

The applicant purchased certain land at a Court-sale on the 17th February, 1876. The sale was confirmed on the 20th March of the same year. The purchaser did not apply for a certificate of sale until the 10th March 1880. Held that the application was barred by the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) sch. i., art. 178. Held also that the purchaser's right to a certificate of sale accrued to him under secs. 256, 257, and 259 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) on the 20th March, 1875, when the sale was confirmed.—5 Bom. 202.

A person purchased certain property at a sale in execution of a decree in November 1878; his purchase was confirmed, and he obtained a certificate of sale on the 23rd May, 1879, from which date he remained in possession. The judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside for irregularity, but his application was dismissed both at the hearing and on the appeal. He had applied, before the sale took place, to stay the sale, on the ground that the right to apply for execution was barred. This application was dismissed, but was allowed on appeal. It did not appear that the auction-purchaser was a party to the proceeding, or that he was cognizant of the application. Two years from the date of the sale, and one and-a-half year from its confirmation, the judgment-debtor, on a summary application, obtained an order setting aside the sale, and putting the auction-purchaser out of possession. Held that the order was erroneous, the Subordinate Judge having no power, after the sale had been confirmed, to set aside the sale by a summary order; and that, under art. 165, sch. ii. of Act XV of 1877, the application for such an order was barred. The words, "subsisting decree," in sec. 316 of Act X of 1877, as amended by Act XII of 1879, mean a decree unreversed and in full force, and not merely one upon which execution cannot be issued.—7 Cal. 91.

Where land subject to an unregistered mortgage, the registration of which was optional, was attached and sold in execution of a money-decree obtained against the mortgagor, and the purchaser registered his certificate of sale and obtained possession of the land, held that no question of priority under sec. 60 of the Registration Act could arise, inasmuch as the purchaser acquired only the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor subject to the mortgage.—7 Madr. 248.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 647, noted under sec. 287 ; 17 Cal. 769, noted under sec. 244.

317. No suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of any other person, or on behalf of some one through whom such other person claims.

Bar to suit against purchaser buying benami.

Nothing in this section shall bar a suit to obtain a declaration that the name of the certified purchaser was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser.

Notes.

Sec. 260, Act VIII of 1859, is no bar to a suit for a declaration that the name of the certified purchaser was inserted in the certificate of sale fraudulently and without the consent of the real purchaser.—4 B. L. R., Ap. 32.

In a suit by a member of a joint Hindu family to recover possession of certain property alleged to belong to the joint estate, but which had been purchased by the defendant at a sale in execution of a decree passed against the estate of R, one member of the family, for his separate debt, the defendants sought to rebut the presumption that the property in dispute was part of the joint estate by showing that, though the members of the family were joint in food, and at particular seasons of the year lived together in the family dwelling-house, they also had separate dealings and funds of their own ; and that, while the family had some ancestral estate, several members of the family had acquired separate property from their own funds, and dealt with it as their own without reference to the other members of the family. They also relied on the following facts as showing that the property in dispute was the separate property of R, viz., that during R's lifetime the other members of the family allowed him to appear to the world as the sole owner thereof, and on one occasion when R, B the kurta, and a third member of the family, entered into a security-bond with the Collector, whereby R pledged this property, and the two others pledged other properties, each of them described the property pledged by him as being in his possession "without the right of any co-sharers" On the other hand, the plaintiff, in addition to oral evidence to show that the property in dispute had been purchased out of the joint family funds, although the purchase was made in the name of R alone, filed the family account-books and the private account-books of R for the same purpose, as well as certain letters which passed between B and R relative to the purchase of the property. Held, 1st, that the evidence as to the separate trading, funds, and property of the several members of joint-family, and their independent dealing with such property, disclosed such a state of things as might be fairly held to weaken, if not altogether to rebut, the ordinary presumption of Hindu law as to property in the name of one member of a joint-family and to throw upon the plaintiff the onus of establishing the joint nature of the property claimed by clear and cogent evidence, 2ndly, that the provisions of sec. 260, Act VIII 1859, apply to ordinary benami purchases at execution-sales, but do not affect purchases of property by one member of a joint Hindu family in his own name, but with the joint funds ; 3rdly, that the mere fact that R, while trading on his separate account, was permitted by the other members of the joint family to appear to the world as the sole owner of family estates, did not disentitle those members to recover from the defendant, the purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree against R, their own share of such estates ; 4thly, that the misrepresentation as to his separate ownership made by R in the security-bond given to the Collector could not be regarded in the present suit as more than an admission inconsistent with the title now asserted by the plaintiff, the defendant not having purchased on the faith of such misrepresentation ; 5thly, that the letters between B and R relative to the purchase by the latter of the estate in dispute were admissible as against the defendant.—12 B. L. R., 317 ; 19 W. R., 356.

The provisions of sec. 260, Act VIII of 1859, apply to ordinary benami purchases at execution-sales, but do not affect purchases of property by one member of a joint Hindu family in his own name, but with the joint funds.—12 B. L. R., (P. C.) 317 ; 19 W. R., 356.

The immoveable property of A at a Court's sale was purchased by B with the money, and on behalf of A. B subsequently conveyed the property to C for the benefit of A. Held that the property could be taken in execution by the creditors of A. Quoere.—Whether, but for the subsequent conveyance, B, under the operation of secs. 259 and 260 of the Civil Procedure Code, would not have had a good title against the creditors of A ?—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 21.

A's property is sold under a decree to B, a bona fide purchaser, who offers to A to reconvey to him on being repaid the purchase-money. Held that, if A accepts the proposal, sec. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code does not preclude a contract from arising.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 344.

The certified purchaser of property which had been a second time attached and sold in the execution of a decree, as the property of the judgment-debtors, sued to be confirmed in possession of the property by virtue of his certificate of sale, and to obtain the cancelment of the second sale, and the order disallowing his objections to that sale. Held that the provisions of sec. 260 of Act VIII. of 1859 did not prohibit the consideration of the circumstances of the first sale, when the question for determination was whether, at the time of the second attachment, the judgment-debtors were in possession as owners of the property, or merely as lessees of the certified purchaser.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 197.

Sec. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude the Courts from entertaining a suit brought by a decree-holder against the certified purchaser of property to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor, on the allegation that the certified purchaser had purchased the property benami for the judgment-debtor, who had remained in possession as owner from the date of the purchase, and was in possession as such at the time of the attachment.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 265.

In a suit to obtain possession of certain property purchased at an execution-sale, the plaintiff, who alleged that the purchase had been made for his benefit, and that the certified purchaser was his benamidar, made the certified purchaser, who admitted his allegation, a defendant along with the person in possession. Held that the case came within the rule laid down in Buhuns Koowar v. Lalla Buhoree Lall, 14 Moore's I. A. 496 ; 10 B. L. R., 159 ; and that the suit was not barred by sec. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code.—9 C. L. R., 295.

Sec. 260 of Act VIII. of 1859 does not preclude a person purchasing benami from setting up his title against a person not being the certified purchaser, or claiming through him.—Marshall's Rep., 423 ; 2 Hay's Rep., 512.

The correct interpretation of sec. 260, Act VIII. of 1859, is to the effect that a suit by a party claiming to be the real purchaser of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree cannot be brought against the certified auction-purchaser, even though the claimant has had previous possession.—9 W. R., 360.

Sec. 260, Act VIII. of 1859, does not apply when the name of the certified purchaser has been inserted by fraud and contrary to the wishes of the purchaser.—13 W. R., 85.

In a suit for possession of a tank, on the allegation that plaintiff purchased it in execution of a decree against one S D, and that, after being put in possession, she was subsequently ousted, defendant's plea being possession after prior purchase at an execution-sale under a decree against the same S D ; the lower Court found that the defendant's purchase was a fictitious transaction, being in reality for the benefit of S D, who was in actual possession and enjoyment of the property at the time of the plaintiff's purchase. Held that the case did not come under the purview of sec. 260, Act VIII. of 1859.—14 W. R., 111.

Sec. 260 of Act VIII. of 1859 must be construed strictly and literally, and is applicable only to a suit brought against a certified purchaser to assert a benami title against him. Where the certified purchaser is a plaintiff, the real owner, if in possession, and if that possession has been honestly obtained, may show in defence that the holder of the certificate is a mere trustee.—L. R., 2 I. A. 154 ; 23 W. R., 358.

If, after obtaining a certificate of sale in execution of a decree, the purchaser acknowledges that his purchase is benami and gives up possession, or does some act which clearly indicates an intention to waive his right, or restores the property to the real owner, such act may, by reason of the antecedent relation of the parties, operate as a valid transfer of property. Defendant acted benami in buying certain land at a Court-sale for plaintiff, paid part of the purchase-money for plaintiff, and allowed plaintiff to remain in possession, on the understanding that defendant was to transfer the property on repayment of the balance of the purchase-money. Defendant having ejected plaintiff, plaintiff sued to recover the land. Held that sec. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure was no bar to plaintiff's suit.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 234.

In a suit by A against B and C to recover land, A alleged that B brought the land at a Court-sale on his behalf. B did not contest the suit. C, who did not claim under B, pleaded that A could not recover by reason of the provisions of sec. 317 of the Civil Procedure. Held that sec. 317 only enabled the certified purchaser and those claiming under him to avoid arrangements made with him in the nature of a trust, and was no bar to the suit.—8 Madr. 511.

Certain property belonging to a judgment-debtor was brought to sale and purchased by a person in the benami name of her daughter, then an infant ; and the sale certificate was made out in the name of the latter. Subsequently the mother mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit, obtained a decree, and had the property sold, and purchased it himself. Upon his being resisted by the daughter in attempts to get his name registered as proprietor, he instituted a suit against both mother and daughter to establish his rights to the property. The daughter thereupon objected that the suit would not lie by reason of the provisions of sec. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the provisions of that section, which were intended to prevent fraud, were inapplicable to the facts of the case, and that suit was maintainable.—12 Cal. 204.

At a sale in execution of a decree, in February 1875, the plaintiff purchased certain property in the name of M, who was recorded as the purchaser. In 1886, eleven years after the execution sale, M sold the property to H, whose name was subsequently registered as owner, notwithstanding the plaintiff's objections. The plaintiff thereupon, in 1888, brought a suit against H for a declaration of his title to the property, on the grounds that it had originally been purchased on his behalf at the execution sale, and that he had been in possession for more than 12 years. Held, that the suit did not fall within sec. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall relied on.—19 Cal. 198.

A, the certified purchaser of a taluk at a sale held under the provisions of Act XI of 1859 for arrears of revenue, and who had obtained symbolical possession, has at the time of the sale agreed with B, the former owner of the taluk, to reconvey to him (B) after the sale had been completed. In a suit by B to compel specific performance of the contract, alleging that he had never quitted actual possession of the taluk, objection was taken that the suit was not maintainable under sec. 36 of Act XI of 1859 and sec. 317 of Act XIV of 1882. Held that the suit, not being one to oust the certified purchaser from possession, was not barred by sec. 36; and that neither was it barred by sec. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code, that section applying only to sales in execution of decrees of Civil Courts held under the Procedure Code.—14 Cal. 583.

The provisions of sec. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure are no bar to a suit for partition brought by a Hindu son against his father, and a certified purchaser of family property, who has bought benami for the father with the family-funds at a sale in execution of a decree against the father.—6 Madr. 135.

A sued K, the purchaser of certain immoveable property sold in execution of a decree under Act VIII of 1859, for a declaration that K had purchased such property on her behalf. The suit was instituted after Act VIII of 1859 was repealed, and Act X of 1877 came into force. When the suit was instituted, K did not hold a sale-certificate. After it was instituted, he applied for and obtained a sale certificate under sec. 317 of Act X of 1877. Held that, when the suit was instituted, it was maintainable, as the defendant not being a certified purchaser under sec. 260 of Act VIII of 1859, that section did not apply; and that, when the defendant obtained a certificate under sec. 317 of Act X of 1877, he became a certified purchaser, and the suit would only be maintainable if the plaintiff made out a case falling within the provisions of the last part of sec. 317.—5 Al. 478.

318. When the property sold is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor or of some person on his behalf, or of some person claiming under a title created by the judgment-debtor subsequently to the attachment of such property, and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under sec. 316, the Court shall, on application by the purchaser, order delivery to be made by putting the purchaser or any person whom he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf in possession of the property, and, if need be, by removing any person who refuses to vacate the same.

Notes.

A suit by an auction-purchaser to obtain possession of land, the subject-matter of his purchase, will lie when it is shown that an attempt has been made to obtain possession in execution proceedings, and that such attempt has been unsuccessful. In the case of Lolit Coomar Bose v. Ishan Chunder Chuckerbutty (10 C. L. R., 258) it was not intended to hold that under no circumstances would such a suit lie, but that, so long as the means provided by sec. 318 are open to a purchaser, he is bound to have recourse to that section rather than to bring a fresh suit.—I. L. R., 12 Cal 169.

On the 18th January 1877, the father of the plaintiffs purchased the interest of M in two houses at a sale in execution of a money decree against M. The purchaser however, never obtained possession and he did not obtain the certificate of sale until the 31st July 1878. Subsequently to the sale of the 18th January 1877, two suits were filed against M on mortgages executed prior to that date and decrees in both were obtained against M. In execution of these decrees both the houses were sold and respective purchasers were represented by two of the defendants. The purchasers got possession and both obtained sale-certificates, one prior to the father of the plaintiffs, viz., on the 5th February 1878, and the other subsequently, viz, 1st November, 1878. The plaintiffs now sued to recover the houses:—Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover as against the defendants. The plaintiffs not having either got possession or obtained a certificate of sale at the date of the sale in execution of the decrees on the mortgages had only an inchoate title. The purchasers in execution had no notice of the plaintiff's incipient right and having been left to buy what, so far as they knew, was a complete title, they ought not to be disturbed at the instance of the plaintiff's who failed to assert their dominant right. Had the plaintiffs got into possession or obtained a certificate and registered, there would have been notice sufficient to put all persons interested in inquiry as to their rights; but while they chose to keep their rights wholly in the dark they invited others to act as if those rights were not in existence, and they could not look to the Courts to extend and complete such rights in a way which would render the defendants victims not of their own negligence but of the negligence of those who would gain by it.—9 Bom. 16.

On the 9th December 1876, the plaintiff purchased a house at an auction sale in execution of a decree against the owner, one Sultan Saheb. The sale was confirmed on the 9th January 1877, but the certificate of sale was not issued until the 16th June 1880. On the 20th January 1880, the defendant purchased the same house at a sale in execution of a money decree against Sultan Saheb. The sale was confirmed on the 28th February 1880, and a certificate was issued on the 20th March 1880. The defendant got possession from the judgment-debtor in April 1880. The plaintiff now sued for possession. It was contended for the defendant that, having completed his title under the auction sale and obtained possession before the plaintiff had taken out his certificate he had acquired a better title than the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By his prior purchase he had obtained an equitable interest in the property, although he had not obtained a sale certificate. The defendant, therefore, purchased subject to the plaintiff's equitable interest; and that title having subsequently been perfected by the issue of the certificate, the plaintiff's were in a position to sue for possession.—10 Bom. 453.

S attached certain land and a house in execution of a decree against R. M put in a claim, under sec. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, alleging that he was in possession as purchaser from R. The claim was rejected. No suit was brought by M to contest this order. S purchased the said land and house in execution, and obtained a sale-certificate. In 1884 S sued M to recover possession of the land and house, alleging that in execution proceedings in 1882 he had been put into possession of the land, but not of the house, which was found locked up by the Court amin, and that M prevented him from enjoying both the land and house. M pleaded that S had never been put into possession and again set up his title as purchaser from R, and possession under such title. The Munsif found that S had been put into formal or constructive possession of the land, but not of the house, and decreed the claim. On appeal the district Judge held that S was bound to proceed according to the provisions of sec. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover possession, and could not bring a separate suit. Held that, whether there had been legal delivery or not, the suit was not barred.—10 Madr. 53.

An application by a purchaser at a Court sale to be put into possession is barred under article 178, schedule 2 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), if made more than three years after the grant of the certificate of sale.—8 Bom. 257.

See I. L. R., 6 Bom. 586, noted under sec. 316; 3 Bom. 433, noted under sec. 319; 15 Madr. 203, noted under sec. 211.

319. When the property sold is in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under section 316, the Court shall order delivery thereof to be made by affixing a copy of the certificate of sale in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant, by beat of drum, or in such other mode as may be customary, at some convenient place, that the interest of the judgment-debtor has been transferred to the purchaser.

Delivery of immoveable property in occupancy of tenant.

Notes.

Quære.—Whether the one year's limitation (of suits to set aside sales in execution of decrees) under cl. 3, sec. 1, applied to a suit brought against a person who had obtained possession of property by delivery under sec. 264, Act VIII. of 1859.—2 W. R., 55.

No appeal lay from an order of a Court giving possession under sec. 264, Act VIII. of 1859, to a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree.—17 W. R., 395.

Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 230, did not limit the applicant to any particular manner of obtaining possession; and sec. 264 contained nothing to prevent the purchaser at an execution sale from obtaining possession if he could without the assistance of the Court.—22 W. R., 406.

A obtained a money-decree against B on the 25th January 1872, in execution of which property belonging to B was sold on the 9th September 1874, A himself becoming the purchaser. The sale was confirmed on the 9th October 1874, but the certificate of sale was not issued till the 23rd January 1878. A applied for possession on the 2nd April 1879. Held that the right to apply for possession contemplated in Act VIII. of 1859, secs. 263 and 264 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, secs. 318 and 319), accrued on the date the certificate of sale was issued, and not on that on which the sale was confirmed, and that, therefore, the period of limitation under Act XV of 1877, sch. 2, art. 178, against the purchaser, counted from the former date.—3 Bom. 433.

See I. L. R., 6 Bom. 586, noted under sec. 316.

320. The Local Government may, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, declare, by notification in the official Gazette, that in any local area the execution of decrees in cases in which a Court has ordered any immoveable property to be sold, or the execution of any particular kind of such decrees, or the execution of decrees ordering the sale of any particular kind of, or interest in, immoveable property, shall be transferred to the Collector, and rescind or modify any such declaration.

The Local Government may also, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, from time to time prescribe rules for the transmission of the decree from the Court to the Collector, and for regulating the procedure of the Collector and his subordinates in executing the same, and for re-transmitting the decree from the Collector to the Court.

Rules under this section may confer upon the Collector or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector all or any of the powers which the Court might exercise in the execution of the decree if the execution thereof had not been transferred to the Collector, including the powers of the Court under sections 294 and 312, and may provide for orders passed by the Collector or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector, or orders passed on appeal with respect to such orders, being subject to appeal to, and revision by, superior Revenue-authorities as nearly as may be as the orders passed by the Court, or orders passed on appeal with respect to such orders, would be subject to appeal to, and revision by, appellate or revisional Courts under this Code or other law for the time being in force if the decree had not been transferred to the Collector.*

* These three paragraphs have been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 30.

A power conferred by the rules upon the Collector or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector, or upon any appellate or revisional authority, shall not be exerciseable by the Court or by any Court in exercise of any appellate or revisional Jurisdiction which it has with respect to decrees or orders of the Court.*

In executing a decree transferred to the Collector under this section, the Collector and his subordinates shall be deemed to be acting judicially within the meaning of Act No. XVIII of 1850 (an Act for the protection of Judicial Officers).*

Notes.

A decree was transferred to the Collector for execution. The Mamlatdar, under the orders of the Collector, put up for sale certain immoveable property belonging to the Judgment-debtors. The sale was confirmed by the Mamlatdar with the sanction of the Collector. Sometime afterwards the auction-purchaser applied to the Collector for a certificate of sale, but the Collector refused the certificate, and set aside the sale, on the ground that the purchaser was a relative of the decree-holder, and had really purchased the property on his behalf without the permission of the Court. Against this proceeding of the Collector, the purchaser made an application, first to the Subordinate Judge, who had transferred the decree to the Collector for execution, and then to the District Court. But both Courts declined to entertain his application, on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Held, on an application to the High Court, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to deal with the application, and to revise the Collector's proceedings in execution. Held, also, that the Collector having through his subordinate put up for sale the judgment-debtor's property, and confirmed the sale, had in that way completely executed the decree so far as he could, and was so far functus officio. His duty was to make a return to the Court of what he had done. After confirmation of the sale he could not set it aside. Per WEST, J.—The Collector, like the Nazir in India, is a ministerial officer when he executes a decree. He, like the Nazir, must carry out the decree of a Civil Court in general subjection to the judicial direction of the Court, on whose authority the coercive power exercised by him rests, and which alone can deal judicially with the questions that arise in execution. His proceedings and orders are subject, accordingly, to revision and correction on the application of a party aggrieved, whenever he misconceives the decree or acts illegally in giving effect to it. He is limited strictly to the precise line of activity laid down for him in the Code and the orders under it; and in cases of error or doubt it is the Court that must determine whether, he, as its ministerial officer, has or has not transgressed his powers. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—A sale made by a Collector under Chapter 19 of the Civil Procedure Code is subject to confirmation by the Civil Court under sec. 312. As soon as the Collector has exercised or performed the powers or duties conferred or imposed upon him by secs. 321 to 325 of the Code, he is functus officio. If he has sold the property or re-sold it under the power given by clause (c) of sec. 325, he has completed the execution of the decree so far as he can legally complete it and it is then his duty to re-transmit the decree to the Court, under rules prescribed in that behalf by Government under the second paragraph of sec. 320. Where the property has been sold or re-sold, the sale or re-sale cannot be set aside by the Collector. Any application for setting it aside must be made to the Civil Court under sec. 311, and dealt with by it under sec. 312 ; and if no application is made to the Court, the sale must be confirmed by it under that section. —I. L. R., 11 Bom. 478.

The rules framed by the Local Government in 1890 in exercise of the powers conferred by section 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by section 30 of Act VII of 1888, are not retrospective in their operation so as to give the Collector the power to confirm a sale held before the date of issue of the rules. Nor do the rules authorize the Collector to set aside a sale. On 27th July, 1889, the property in dispute was sold by the Collector in execution of a decree which was referred to him under section 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882.) On 23rd September, 1889, the Collector set aside the sale, on the ground that the auction-purchaser had purchased the property for and on behalf of the decree-holder. Thereupon the auction-purchaser applied to the Court which had passed the decree, complaining of the Collector's proceeding, and praying for a confirmation of the sale. The Court asked the Collector to return the record of the case, but this he refused to do, on the ground that he had extended the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. In January, 1890, the Local Government framed new rules in exercise of the powers conferred by section 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure as amended by section 30 of Act VII of 1888. One of these rules empowered the Collector to confirm a sale held in execution of a decree transferred to him. In April, 1890, the auction-purchaser again applied to the Court for a confirmation of the sale. This application was rejected, on the ground that under the new rules framed by Government the Collector alone had the power to confirm the sale. Held, that the rules in question had no application to the present case, the sale having been held before the rules were promulgated. The Civil Court was, therefore, competent to confirm the sale. Held, further that even if the rules did apply, they did not empower the Collector to set aside, the sale, or extend the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. —15 Bom. 322.

A decree passed by a Subordinate Judge upon a bond, in which certain immoveable property was mortgaged, was, in accordance with the rules made by the Local Government under sec. 320 transferred to the Collector for execution. A sale in execution took place, and the Collector gave the purchaser a certificate of the sale. Upon this certificate the purchaser applied to the Subordinate Judge to give him possession of a larger amount of property than that specified in the certificate, and upon the refusal of the Court to do so, applied to the Collector to amend the certificate. The amendment having been made as desired, the purchaser again applied to the Subordinate Judge for possession of the amount claimed by him, and the Subordinate Judge again rejected the application, holding that only the lesser amount had been sold in execution of the decree. Held that, with reference to the second paragraph of rule 19 of the Rules framed by the Local Government under sec. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code, regarding the transmission, execution, and retransmission of decrees, and published in the N.-W. P. and Oudh Gazette of the 4th September 1880, the matter of delivery to the purchaser was within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, notwithstanding the terms of sec. 320, and notwithstanding the ruling of the Full Bench in Madho Prasad v. Hansa Kaur (I. L. R., 5 Al. 314). Held also that, inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to decide the question, and inasmuch as, even if his decision was wrong, the purchaser had a remedy by bringing a regular suit, the matter did not fall within sec. 622 so as to call for the interference of the High Court in revision. Sivanathaji v. Joma Kashinath. (I. L. R., 7 Bom. 341) and Amir Hasan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) referred to.—7 Al. 407.

The authority conferred upon the Local Government by sec. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code prior to the amendment of that section by sec. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), to make rules for regulating the procedure of the Collector in executing decree transmitted to him, included power to make a rule providing for an appeal from the Collector's orders. Clause XIX of Rule 17 which was added to the Rules (No. 671 of 30th August 1880) published in the N.-W. P. and Oudh Gazette of the 14th September 1880, by a notification in the Gazette of the 17th November 1883, and which made the order of a Collector confirming a sale appealable to the Commissioner of the Division, was therefore not ultra vires of the Local Government. Madho Prasad v. Hansa Kuar referred to. Sec. 243 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) does not apply to such orders passed by a Collector.—12 Al. 564.

Held that effect cannot be given to the rules prescribed by the Local Government under sec. 320 of Act X of 1877, unless an order for sale has been made on or after the 1st October 1880.—4 Al. 116.

Held that a decree for the sale of ancestral land, or of an interest in such land, in enforcement of an hypothecation on such land, is a "decree for money" within the meaning of the rules prescribed by the Local Government under sec. 320 of Act X of 1877.—4 Al. 115.

Orders passed by a Collector in the exercise of the powers conferred on him under sec. 320 and the following secs. of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to the execution of a decree of a Civil Court, after transfer of the decree to him under sec. 320, are not appealable to the High Court, Held, therefore, that the order of a Collector, disallowing an application by the judgment-debtor that the amount of the decree might be satisfied by the temporary transfer of his immoveable property, and ordering the sale of such property, and the order of a Collector confirming a sale, were not appealable to the High Court.—5 Al. 314.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 382 & 11 Al. 94, noted under sec. 311; 7 Bom. 332, noted under sec. 210; 9 Al. 43, noted under sec. 313.

Power of Collector when execution of decree is so transferred.

321. When the execution of a decree has been so transferred, the Collector may—

(a) proceed as the Court would proceed under section 305; or

(b) raise the amount of the decree by letting in perpetuity, or for a term, on payment of a premium, or by mortgaging, the whole or any part of the property ordered to be sold; or

(c) sell the property ordered to be sold, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

322. When the execution of a decree, not being a decree ordering the sale of immoveable property in pursuance of contract specifically affecting the same, but being a decree for money in satisfaction of which to Court has ordered the sale of immoveable property has been so transferred, the Collector, if, after such enquiry as he thinks necessary, he has reason to believe that all the liabilities of the judgment-debtor can be discharged without a sale of the whole of his available immoveable property, may proceed as hereinafter provided.

Notice to be given to decree-holders and to persons having claims on property.

322A. In the case mentioned in section 322, the Collector shall publish a notice calling upon—

(a) every person holding a decree for money against the judgment-debtor capable of execution by sale of his immoveable property, and which such decree-holder desires to have so executed, and every holder of a decree for money in execution of which proceedings for the sale of such property are pending, to produce before the Collector a copy of the decree, and a certificate from the Court which passed or is executing the same, declaring the amount recoverable thereunder ;

(b) every person having any claim on the said property, to submit to the Collector a statement of such claim, and to produce the documents (if any) by which it is evidenced.

Such notice shall be in the language of the district, and shall allow a period of sixty days from the date of its publication for compliance therewith. It shall be published by being posted in the Court-house of the Court which made the original order under sec. 304, and at such other places (if any) as the Collector thinks fit. Where the address of any such decree-holder or claimant is known, a copy of the notice shall be sent to him by post or otherwise.

322B. Upon the expiration of the said period, the Colmoveable property avail-

lector shall appoint a day for hearing any representations which the judgment-debtor and the decree-holders or claimants (if any) may desire to make, and for holding such enquiry as he may deem necessary for informing himself as to the nature and extent of such decrees and claims and of the judgment-debtor's immoveable property, and may, from time to time, adjourn such hearing and enquiry.

If there be no dispute as to the fact or extent of the liability of the judgment-debtor to any of the decrees or claims of which the Collector is informed, or as to the relative priorities of such decrees or claims, or as to the liability of any such property for the satisfaction of such decrees or claims, the Collector shall draw up a statement, specifying the amount to be recovered for the discharge of such decrees, the order in which such decrees and claims are to be satisfied and the immoveable property available for that purpose.

If any such dispute arises, the Collector shall refer the same, with a statement thereof and his own opinion thereon, to the Court which made the original order under sec. 304, and shall, pending the reference, stay proceedings relating to the subject thereof. The Court shall dispose of the dispute if the matter thereof be within its jurisdiction, or transmit the case to a competent Court for disposal, and the final decision shall be communicated to the Collector. The Collector shall then draw up a statement as above provided in accordance with such decision.

Notes.

An appeal from the decision of a dispute under sec. 322B falls directly within the exception of art. 11, sch. ii of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), and the memorandum of appeal should therefore be presented as for a decree in a suit, upon an ad valorem stamp. Srinivasa Ayangar v. Peria Tambi Nayakar dissented from.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 565.

See I. L. R., 11 Al. 94, noted under sec. 311.

322C. The Collector may, instead of himself issuing the notices and holding the enquiry required by sections 322A and 322B, draw up a statement specifying the circumstances of the judgment-debtor and of his immoveable property so far as they are known to the Collector or appear in the records of his office, and forward such statement to the District Court; and such Court shall thereupon issue the notice, hold the inquiry, and draw up the statement required by sections 322A and 322B and transmit such statement to the Collector.

Note.—See I. L. R., 11 Al. 94, noted under sec. 311.

322D. The decision by the Court of any dispute arising under section 322B or section 322C shall, as between the parties thereto, have the force of, and be appealable as, a decree.

Note.—See I. L. R., 11 Al. 94, noted under sec. 311.

323. Whenever the amount to be recovered and the property available have been determined as provided in section 322B or 322C, the Collector may—

Scheme for liquidation of money-decrees.

(1) if it appears that the amount cannot be recovered without the sale of the whole of the property available, proceed to sell such property ; or if it appears that the amount with interest (if any) in accordance with the decree and, when not decreed, with interest (if any) at such rate as he thinks reasonable, may be recovered without such sale ;

(2) raise such amount and interest (notwithstanding any order under section 304)—

(a) by letting in perpetuity or for a term, on payment of premium, the whole or any part of the said property ; or

(b) by mortgaging the whole or any part of such property ; or

(c) by selling part of such property ; or

(d) by letting on farm, or managing by himself or another, the whole or any part of such property for any term not exceeding twenty years from the date of the order of sale ; or

(e) partly by one of such modes, and partly by another or others of such modes.

(3) For the purpose of managing, under this section, the whole or any part of such property, the Collector may exercise all the powers of its owner.

For the purpose of improving the saleable value of the property available or any part thereof, or rendering it more suitable for letting or managing, or for preserving the property from sale in satisfaction of an incumbrance, the Collector may discharge the claim of any incumbrancer which has become payable, or compound the claim of any incumbrancer whether it has become payable or not, and, for the purpose of providing funds to effect such discharge or composition, may mortgage, let, or sell any portion of the property which he deems sufficient. If any dispute arises as to the amount due on any incumbrance with which the Collector proposes to deal under this paragraph, he may institute a suit in the proper Court, either in his own name or the name of the judgment-debtor, to have an account taken, or he may agree to refer such dispute to the decision of two arbitrators, one to be chosen by each party, or of an umpire to be named by such arbitrators.

In proceeding under paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this section, the Collector shall be subject to such rules, consistent with this Act, as may, from time to time, be made in this behalf by the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority.

324. If, on the expiration of the letting or management under section 323, the amount to be recovered has not been realised, the Collector shall notify the fact in writing to the judgment-debtor or his representative in interest, stating at the same time that, if the balance necessary to make up the said amount is not paid to the Collector within six weeks of the date of such notice, he will proceed to sell the whole or a sufficient part of the said property; and if, on the expiration of the said six weeks, the said balance is not so paid the Collector shall sell such property or part accordingly.

324A. The Collector shall, from time to time, render to the Court which made the original order under section 304 an account of all moneys which come to his hands, and of all charges incurred by him in the exercise and performance of the powers and duties conferred and imposed on him under the provisions of this chapter, and shall hold the balance at the disposal of the Court.

Such charges shall include all debts and liabilities from time to time due to the Government in respect of the property or any part thereof, the rent (if any) from time to time due to a superior holder in respect of such property or part, and (if the Collector so directs) the expenses of witnesses summoned by him.

Such balance shall be applied by the Court as follows:—

firstly, in providing for the maintenance of such members of the judgment-debtor's family (if any) as are entitled to be maintained out of the income of the property, to such amount in the case of each member as the Court thinks fit; and secondly, where the Collector has proceeded under section 321, in satisfaction of the original decree in execution of which the Court ordered the sale of immoveable property, or otherwise as the Court may under section 295 direct; or thirdly, where the Collector has proceeded under section 322, in keeping down the interest on incumbrances on the property, and (when the judgment-debtor has no other sufficient means of subsistence) in providing for his subsistence to such amount as the Court thinks fit; and in discharging rateably the claims of the original decree-holder and any other decree-holders who have complied with the said notice, and whose claims were included in the amount ordered to be recovered; and no other holder of a decree for money shall be entitled to be paid out of such property or balance until the decree-holders who have obtained such order have been satisfied; and the residue (if any) shall be paid to the judgment-debtor or such other person (if any) as the Court directs.

325. When the Collector sells any property under this chapter, he shall put it up to public auction, in one or more lots as he thinks fit, and may—

Sales how to be conducted.

(a) fix a reasonable reserved price for each lot;

(b) adjourn the sale for a reasonable time, whenever he deems the adjournment necessary for the purpose of obtaining a fair price for the property, recording his reasons for such adjournment;

(c) buy in the property offered for sale, and re-sell the same by public auction or private contract, as he thinks fit.

Note.—See I. L. R., 11 Bom. 478, noted under sec. 320.

325A. So long as the Collector can exercise or perform in respect of the judgment-debtors' immoveable property, or any part thereof, any of the powers or duties conferred or imposed on him by sections 322 to 325 (both inclusive,) the judgment-debtor or his representative in interest shall be incompetent to mortgage, charge, lease, or alienate such property or part except with the written permission of the Collector, nor shall any Civil Court issue any process against such property or part in execution of a decree for money.

Restrictions as to alienation by judgment-debtor or his representative, and prosecution of remedies by decree-holders.

During the same period no Civil Court shall issue any process of execution either against the judgment-debtor or his property in respect of any decree for the satisfaction whereof provision has been made by the Collector under section 323.

The same period shall be excluded in calculating the period of limitation applicable to the execution of any decree affected by the provisions of this section in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder has thereby been temporarily deprived.

325B. When the property of which the sale has been ordered is situate in more districts than one, the powers and duties conferred and imposed on the Collector by sections 321 to 325 (both inclusive) shall, from time to time, be exercised and performed by such one of the Collectors of the said districts as the Local Government may, by general rule or special order, direct.

Provision where property is in several districts.

325C. In exercising the powers conferred on him by sections 322 to 325 (both inclusive), the Collector shall have the powers of a Civil Court to compel the attendance of parties and witnesses and the production of documents.

Powers of Collector to compel attendance of parties and witnesses and productions of documents.

326. When, in any local area in which no declaration under section 320 is in force, the property attached consists of land or of a share in land, and the Collector represents to the Court that the public sale of the land or share is objectionable, and that satisfaction of the decree may be made within a reasonable period by a temporary alienation or management of the land or share, the Court may authorize the Collector to provide for such satisfaction in the manner recommended by him, instead of proceeding to a sale of the land or share. In such case the provisions of sections 320, paragraph two, to 325C (both inclusive), shall apply, as far as they are applicable.

When Court may authorize Collector to stay public sale of land.

Notes.

Sec. 244 of Act VIII of 1859 admits only of a temporary alienation of land, and not of an arrangement by which possession is left with the judgment-debtor subject to a payment by yearly instalments.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 347.

Where a Collector recommended that the lands of a judgment-debtor should be exempted from auction-sale, and that the judgment-debt should be satisfied by money-instalments extending over a period of twelve years, and the Judge, on the matter being referred to the Civil Courts for sanction and approval, in sending the proceedings to the Munsif, intimated that the arrangement was a proper one, and the Munsif in his order referred to this opinion of the Judge, held that the recommendation of the Collector should have been dealt with by the Court executing the decree in the exercise of its own judgment, and not in deference to the opinion expressed by the Judge, who exceeded his jurisdiction in interfering in the matter. The arrangement proposed by the Collector was not one which could be proposed or accepted under the terms of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 39.

Act X of 1877, sec. 326, does not apply to a decree which directs the sale of land or of a share in land in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting the same. The Court, therefore, cannot authorize the Collector to stay the sale in such a case under sec. 326.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 856.

Where the Collector has applied to the Court under sec. 326 of the Civil Procedure Code, proposing a scheme for the payment of decretal money in order to avoid a sale of attached property, it is in the discretion of the Court to authorize the Collector or not, as it thinks fit, to provide for the satisfaction of the decree in the manner proposed; and the Court is bound to hear any objections which may be made by the decree-holder to the feasibility of the proposed scheme, and any evidence that may be offered in support of those objections; and if, after hearing the decree-holder's objections, and the evidence which may be offered in support of them, the Court is not fully satisfied that the proposal is feasible, or that it can, in all reasonable probability, be carried out within the specified period, the Court ought, in the exercise of its discretion, to refuse its sanction.—9 Cal. 290.

327. The Local Government may, from time to time, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, make special rules for any local area, imposing conditions in respect of sale of any class of interests in land in execution of decrees for money, where such interests are so uncertain or undetermined as, in the opinion of the Local Government to make it impossible to fix their value; and if, when this Code comes into operation in any local area, any special rules as to sale of land in execution of decrees are in force therein, the Local Government may continue such rules in force, or may, from time to time, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, modify the same.

All rules so made or continued, and all such modifications of the same, shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

H.—Of Resistance to Execution.

328. If, in the execution of a decree for the possession of property, the officer charged with the execution of the warrant is resisted or obstructed by any person, the decree-holder may complain to the Court at any time within one month from the time of such resistance or obstruction.

Procedure in case of obstruction to execution of decree.

The Court shall fix a day for investigating the complaint, and shall summon the party against whom the complaint is made to answer the same.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

The word "month" in sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure means a month according to the English calendar. An applicant under that section has a clear calendar month, exclusive of the day of dispossession within which to prefer his application.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 39.

The Court could not be put in motion under sec. 226 of the Code of Civil Procedure without an application from the decree-holder under that section.—19 W. R., 62.

In order to bring a case under secs. 226 and 227 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, it was necessary to show that obstruction had been offered arising from the circumstance that lands had been taken which were not included in the decree.—8 W. R., 398.

Where a warrant for possession of land in execution of a decree was not executed owing to the resistance of the judgment-debtors in September 1880, and no complaint was made under sec. 328 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, but a fresh warrant for possession was applied for by and granted to the decree-holders, and resistance was again made in January 1881, held that a complaint by the decree-holders as to the second obstruction made within thirty days of the second obstruction was not barred by reason of art. 167 of sch. ii of the Limitation Act.—I. L. R., 5 Madr. 113.

Section 328 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) does not make it obligatory on a decree-holder, who is obstructed in execution of the decree, to pursue his remedies under that section. Accordingly the failure on the part of the plaintiff to avail himself of the remedy under that section did not prevent him from proceeding against the defendant by a regular suit.—8 Bom. 602.

See I. L. R., 8 Bom. 481, noted under sec. 334.

329. If the Court is satisfied that the obstruction or resistance was occasioned by the judgment-debtor, or by some person at his instigation, the Court shall inquire into the matter of the complaint, and pass such order as it thinks fit.

Procedure in case of obstruction by judgment-debtor or at his instigation.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

The power given by sec. 329 of the Civil Procedure Code to make such order as the Court shall see fit must be construed with regard to the circumstances in respect of which the power is to be exercised. An order under sec. 329 should be the result of the fact that the defendant in the suit, who is precluded by the decree from disputing plaintiff's right, unjustly instigates a third party who has no real interest in the property, to prevent the plaintiff from getting the benefit of his execution. A Court has no power under this section to determine, as between the judgment-creditor and a third party obstructing the execution of the decree, important questions on the merits which are wholly unconnected with, and cannot be affected by, the fact that the obstruction is made at the instigation of the defendant.—I. L. R., 3 Madr. 81.

330. If the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, and that the complainant is still resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some other person at his instigation, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder and without prejudice to any penalty to which such judgment-debtor or other person may be liable under the Indian Penal Code or any other law for such resistance or obstruction, commit the judgment-debtor or such other person to jail for a term which may extend to thirty days, and direct that the decree-holder be put into the possession of the property.

Procedure when obstruction continues.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

331. If the resistance or obstruction has been occasioned by any person other than the judgment-debtor claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the claim shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff and the claimant as defendant;

Procedure in case of obstruction by claimant in good faith, other than judgment-debtor.

and the Court shall, without prejudice to any proceedings to which the claimant may be liable under the Indian Penal Code or any other law for the punishment of such resistance or obstruction, proceed to investigate the claim in the same manner and with the like power as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant under the provisions of Chapter V., and shall pass such order as it thinks fit for executing or staying execution of the decree.

Every such order shall have the same force as a decree, and shall be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

Held per JACKSON, J.—That as the decree-holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant, the case did not fall within sec. 229 of Act VIII of 1859; and, therefore, the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. Per MITTER, J.—This objection, taken for the first time on special appeal, did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 206.

The provisions of sec. 229 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not applicable to the case of a person put in possession of land under a decree in the manner prescribed by sec. 224 of the same Code.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 134; Ed. 1873, 218.

In claims arising under sec. 229 of Act VIII of 1859, there was nothing to prevent the "claimants" from questioning the legality of the decree obtained by the decree-holder against the judgment-debtor.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 81.

Possession by receipt and enjoyment of rent is as good in law as actual occupation, and sec. 230, Act VIII. of 1859, was not restricted to cases of personal occupation.—15 W. R., 70.

When an application is made by a party on the ground that he was in possession, and that he has been dispossessed in execution of a decree in a suit in which he was not a party, the proper order to be made under sec. 230, Act VIII. of 1859, is in the first instance to examine the applicant.—16 W. R., 288.

The plaintiff being the holder of a decree of a Subordinate Court for more Rs. 5,000 was obstructed in execution by the present defendants. He applied to the Court for the removal of the obstruction, the property, which was the subject of the application, being valued at less than Rs. 5,000 and the Subordinate Judge directed that the application be registered as a regular suit under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 331, and ultimately passed a decree in favor of the plaintiff:—Held, that the appeal against this decree did not lie to the High Court.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 520.

The investigation of claims under sec. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) is not limited to the fact of possession. Any question of title arising between the contending parties in connection with their right of possession may be finally determined in such investigation as in an ordinary action of ejectment. A obtained a decree in the Court of a First Class Subordinate Judge for possession of property worth more than Rs. 5,000. In executing this decree against a portion of the property awarded, which was worth Rs. 420, A was resisted by B, who claimed to hold the property under a title adverse to the judgment-debtors. B's claim was thereupon numbered and registered as a suit under sec. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The First Class Subordinate Judge, who investigated the claim, ordered B's obstruction to be removed and the property to be put into A's possession. B appealed against this order. Held, that the appeal lay to the District Judge under Act XIV of 1869, the subject-matter of the claim being less than Rs. 5,000.—14 Bom. 627.

A Court executing a decree obtains, by virtue of sec. 331 a special jurisdiction which enables it to try a claim, of which the value of the subject-matter falls below the pecuniary limit of its ordinary jurisdiction. By virtue of sec. 647 a superior Court may, for sufficient cause, transfer a claim registered under sec. 331, to a Subordinate Court for trial.—8 Madr. 548.

An application in furtherance of execution of a decree for possession against a person who resists execution, claiming the property as his own, is an application within sec. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code, and should be treated as a plaint.—14 Cal. 234.

Appeals from orders under sec. 331 of Act X of 1877, as amended by sec. 52 of Act XII of 1879, are chargeable with the same court-fee as is required in the case of appeals from decrees.—8 Cal 720.

An investigation under sec. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code (prior to the Amendment Act of 1879) is limited to the fact of possession, and is no bar to a subsequent suit brought to try the title to the land in dispute.—3 Madr. 104.

The plaintiff obtained a decree against T, A, and J in a suit, the subject-matter of which exceeded Rs. 5,000, and, in part-execution thereof, attached property worth less than that amount. D having resisted the execution of the decree, the plaintiff's claim was numbered and registered as a suit under sec. 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Upon investigation the First Class Subordinate Judge made an order staying execution of the decree. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who held that no appeal lay to him, as the subject-matter of the original suit, out of which the execution-suit arose, exceeded Rs. 5,000. The plaintiff appealed against this decision to the High Court. Held that the investigation of a claim under sec. 229 of Act VIII of 1859 is not to be regarded as a fresh suit, but is merely a continuation of the original suit, and that there was, therefore, no appeal against the order in question to the District Judge.—4 Bom. 123.

In a suit under sec. 229 of Act VIII of 1859 (sec. 331 of Acts X of 1877 and XIV of 1882), the onus is on the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case of possession, and it is then incumbent on the claimant to answer that case and show, if possible, a better title.—10 Cal. 50.

See I. L. R., 3 Madr. 81, noted under sec. 329 ; 8 Bom. 602, noted under sec. 328 ; 10 Al. 411 and 14 Al. 417, noted under sec. 13.

332. If any person other than the judgment-debtor

Procedure in case of person dispossessed of property disputing right of decree-holder to be put into possession.

dispossessed of any property in execution of a decree, and such person disputes the right of the decree-holder to dispossess him of such property under the decree, on the ground that the property was bona fide in his possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, and that it was not comprised in the decree, or that, if it was comprised in the decree, he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, he may apply to the Court.

If, after examining the applicant, it appears to the Court that there is probable cause for making the application, the Court shall proceed to investigate the matter in dispute ; and, if it finds that the ground mentioned in the first paragraph of this section exists, it shall make an order that the applicant recover possession of the property, and, if it does not find as aforesaid, it shall dismiss the application.

In hearing applications under this section, the Court shall confine itself to the grounds of dispute above specified.

The party against whom an order is passed under this section may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property ; but, subject to the result of such suit (if any), the order shall be final.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

In a suit by A against B for recovery of ancestral jamma lands, of which he alleged that he had been dispossessed by B, B stated in his written statement that A's ancestor having relinquished the land the zemindar had leased the same to him, B, and he had been in possession since. He also stated how A's ancestor relinquished, and that he, B, had thereupon obtained a patta. He denied that he had dispossessed. Held that, B having admitted the possession of A's ancestor, it lay upon B to prove his title. Per MACPHERSON, J.—The opinion of the Full Bench in Pulin Behari Sen v. Watson (B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 904) was that, if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from the qualification; not that, if a man makes a series of independent unqualified statements, those statements cannot be used against him. That case goes no further than to lay down that an unfair use is not to be made of a man's written statement by trying to convert into an admission by him that which he never intended to be an admission.—1. B. L. R., (A. C.) 133; 10 W. R., 190.

In a suit to recover possession of certain property, on proof that the plaintiff had been dispossessed by a benamidar, in whose favour a conveyance had been executed by the plaintiff's father, held that the presumption arising from the defendant's recent and unexplained possession being rebutted by the plaintiff's prior, continuous, and peaceful possession, the defendant must shew affirmatively that his title was a valid one, and could not raise the defence that the plaintiff was prevented from showing it to be invalid.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 274; 11 W. R., 185.

Whether or not an appeal lies from the decision of a lower Court, rejecting an application by a party other than a defendant, under sec. 230 of Act VIII of 1859, disputing the right of the decree-holder to dispossess him, the High Court may, under the 15th section of the Charter, compel the lower Court to exercise its jurisdiction. Golucknarain Dutt v. Bistooprea Dossee (1 W. R., 140) referred to and questioned. Planting a bamboo, and making proclamation to the occupants of an estate that it has been adjudged to some other, is sufficient dispossession of a landlord to warrant him in applying to the Court under sec. 230.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 301

One share-holder, being dispossessed by the other of a certain jalkar in execution of his decree, brought a suit under sec. 230, Act VIII of 1859, alleging that the jalkar had been a part of their joint mehal, and that, on partition thereof, the jalkar was left ijmal. The decree-holder set up that the jalkar had been formed after the partition, and by diluvion of one of his own villages. Held that the onus was upon the claimant to prove his case.—3 B. L. R., Ap. 90; S. C., 12 W. R., 16.

In a suit to recover possession of land and wasilat under a gantijamma, which had originally belonged to the defendants, the main question was as to 10 katas, of which possession by receipt of rent only was claimed from the defendants, whose dwelling-house was thereon. The defendants alleged that the 10 katas were not included in the ganti jamma under which plaintiffs claimed. Held that the onus was on the plaintiffs to prove that the 10 katas were included in the ganti jamma under which they claimed. It was not on the defendants to show the extent of that tenure while it was in their possession and when it was transferred to the plaintiffs, although the fact was one peculiarly within their knowledge.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 161; 11 W. R., 501.

A had been dispossessed of certain land in execution of a decree, which B had obtained in a suit against C, under sec. 15, Act XIV. of 1859. A applied under sec. 230, Act VIII. of 1859, to recover the land. Held the decree obtained by B was a decree within the meaning of sec. 230 of Act VIII of 1859, and, therefore, A had rightly applied under that section. No stamp was necessary on A's application.—4 B. L. R., (F. B) 94.

The plaintiffs were in possession of certain immoveable property, when the Joint-Magistrate, under sec 319 of the Criminal Procedure Code, placed the 1st defendant in possession until the rights of the parties should be determined by a competent Civil Court. Held, in a suit to recover possession of the property instituted more than six months after the plaintiffs were dispossessed, that the plaintiffs could not recover without showing title.—4 M. H. C. R., 478; 7 W. R., 212; 17 W. R., 181.

Where an application was made to the Civil Court under sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code by the petitioner disputing the right of a decreed holder to dispossess him of certain immoveable property, and the Civil Judge rejected the application, held that sec 231 of the Civil Procedure Code did not give the petitioner a right of appeal to the High Court.—5 M. H. C. R., 183.

In a suit to prevent the defendants from obstructing the plaintiff in his enjoyment of the fruits of certain trees which he claimed as heir of a person who purchased that right, the defendants denied the existence of the right, and alleged possession and enjoyment in themselves. Held that the District Judge in appeal, having found the possession and enjoyment to be in the defendants, was right in throwing upon the plaintiff the burden of proving his title to the trees or their produce. Rule of evidence with reference to ancient documents stated.—4 Bom. H. C. R. (A. C.) 60.

A donee, under a deed of gift, brought a suit to recover a piece of land which he alleged his donors had given for a temporary purpose to the defendant in possession six years before, and the Munsif found that it was so, and allowed the claim. But the District Judge, on appeal, considering that the plaintiff had failed to prove his donors' title to the land, reversed the Munsif's decree. Held that the Judge was in error in requiring the plaintiff to establish the title of the donors, without inquiring whether the defendant had obtained possession merely by their permission; and that the suit must be remanded for a finding by the District Judge on that point.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 70.

On the 28th August 1857, the plaintiff passed a kabuliat to Government, and took possession of certain miras land, abandoned by the mirasdar for four or five years previous to that date. The plaintiff continued in possession of his land, and paid the Government assessment from 1864 till 1872. In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of the land, he alleged in the plaint that he had taken the defendants as partners in the cultivation of the land, and had been dispossessed by them. Both the lower Courts rejected the claim. The lower Appellate Court based its decision on the ground that, as the plaintiff failed to prove the fact of his alleged partnership with the defendants, he could not succeed, notwithstanding that Court found in the plaintiff's favour the other facts stated above. Held in special appeal that, as the suit was one to establish title and recover possession, the Judge should, on the facts found, and having regard to Reg. XVII of 1827, sec. 7, cls. 1 and 2, and Bom. Act I of 1865, have called upon the defendants to prove their claim to hold possession as against the plaintiff's right of occupation.—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 144.

Where a person is alleged to be in possession, not as owner of the full proprietary right, but as mortgagee, the burden of proof of such qualified ownership lies on the party asserting it. Such a case falls within the scope of sec. 110, Act I of 1872.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 26.

A, being in possession of lands, as purchaser under deeds of sale from B, the person last seized, was forcibly ousted from possession by C and D, who set up a title to the lands under an alleged deed of gift from B. A made a complaint to the Criminal Court, and under an order of that Court was again put into possession; C and D being directed to institute a suit in the Civil Court to establish their claim, which they accordingly did, relying upon their title, and impeaching deeds of sale. In such circumstances, held by the Judicial Committee, reversing the decree of the Court at Calcutta (without prejudice, however, to any question which might arise between A and any other party claiming under B), that it was incumbent on C and D to prove some title to the lands claimed before they could put A to proof of his title.—4 Moore's I. A. 233.

Suit by A to recover immoveable property in the possession of B and his predecessors, whose title had been unchallenged for forty-four years, on the ground that the estate was mortgaged only by A's ancestors, and that B and those claiming under him were only usufructuary mortgagees in possession. Held that the onus probandi was on A, who could only succeed by the strength of his own title, and not by reason of the weakness of B's title.—10 Moore's I. A., 151.

A person claiming under Act X of 1877, sec. 332, need not prove his title, but only the fact of possession.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 94.

A mortgagee who is in possession of the mortgaged property under the mortgage is in possession "on his own account" within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 230, and Act X of 1877, sec. 332.—2 Al. 94.

Where, in pursuance of an order made in the execution of a decree while Act VIII of 1859 was in force, certain persons were dispossessed of certain property after that Act was repealed and Act X of 1877 came into force, and such persons applied under Act X of 1877, sec. 332, to be restored to the possession of such property on certain of the grounds specified in that section. Held that such persons were entitled to the benefit of that section.—2 Al. 94.

When a person making a claim to certain property under sec. 230 of Act VIII of 1859 has been allowed to bring a suit under that section to try his right to the property, it is sufficient, in the first instance, for him to prove his possession, without proof of his title; but if he takes this course, it is open to the defendant to show that, although possession may be in the plaintiff, yet he has no good title to the property, and that he (the defendant) has a better title.—5 Cal. 278.

See I. L. R., 3 Madr. 104, noted under sec. 331; 12 Madr. 211, noted under sec. 234.

333. Nothing in section 331 or 332 applies to a person to whom the judgment-debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in

Transfer of property by judgment-debtor after institution of suit.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (so far as relates to moveable property).

334. If the purchaser of any immoveable property sold in execution of a decree be resisted or obstructed by the judgment-debtor or any one on his behalf in obtaining possession of the property, the provisions of this chapter relating to resistance or obstruction to a decree-holder in obtaining possession of the property adjudged to him shall be applicable.

Resisting or obstructing purchaser in obtaining possession of immoveable property.

Notes.

A purchaser of immoveable property at a Court-sale, having been obstructed by the defendant, made an application to the Court, under sec. 268 of Act VIII of 1859, for the removal of the obstruction, but subsequently withdrew his application. The Court thereupon made an endorsement upon the application to the effect that, as the applicant did not wish to proceed further, no investigation was made. Held that no such order had been made as was contemplated by sec. 269 of Act VIII of 1859, that section contemplating, at least an order against one party or the other; and that, therefore, the provisions contained in the same section, as to the time within which a suit must be brought, did not apply to the case of the plaintiff.—I. L. R., 5 Bom. 440.

D, the father of the defendants, by a mortgage dated October, 1869, mortgaged a house together with other property to B, the father of the plaintiff. B sued D upon the mortgage, and obtained a decree directing the sale of the mortgaged property. The execution sale took place in July 1877, and the plaintiff (the mortgagee's son) became the purchaser of the house. On attempting to take possession he was resisted by the defendants (sons of the mortgagor), who alleged the house to be ancestral property, and denied the plaintiff's right to more than the third share to which the father had been entitled. Held by the High Court, on appeal, upon the authority of Girdharilal v. Kantoo Lal, as explained in Suraj Bunssee Koer v. Sheo Prasad, that the shares of the defendants were validly bound by their father's mortgage, as it had been found by the lower Court that the debt, in respect of which the mortgage had been executed, had not been contracted by their father for improper or immoral purposes; but that as the purchaser at the execution sale (the plaintiff) was the mortgagee's son, the question arose whether he could be held to be a stranger to his father's suit on the mortgage, and, as such, not bound to go behind the decree and make inquiry as to whether the debt had been improperly incurred. This would depend on the circumstances under which he and his father were living and the relation existing between them. The case was, accordingly remanded for a determination of the question whether the plaintiff was a stranger to his father's suit. Held that the defendants, not being joint with their father at the date of the suit, were not represented by him, and would be entitled to redeem, but only on condition, if the plaintiff insisted on it, of their redeeming the whole of the house. Unless the mortgage-deed expressly provided for the redemption of the sons' interests on payment of a proportionate part of the debt, the mortgage should be treated as one and entire; the father's authority, according to Girdharilal's case, being to apply or charge the whole property to or with the payment of his debts not improperly incurred. Where a decree passed in a suit upon a mortgage directs the mortgaged property to be sold, the decision in Deendyal's case, which limited the "right, title and interest" which passed under the auction sale to the father's share, does not apply.—8 Bom. 481.

335. If the purchaser of any such property is resisted or obstructed by any person other than the judgment-debtor claiming in good faith a right to the present possession thereof, or if, in delivering possession thereof, any such person is dispossessed, the Court, on the complaint of the purchaser or the person so dispossessed, shall inquire into the matter of the resistance, obstruction, or dispossession, as the case may be, and pass such order thereon as it thinks fit.

The party against whom such order is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property ; but, subject to the result of such suit (if any), the order shall be final.

Notes.

Where a review of judgment was applied for on the ground of the subsequent publication of the report of a High Court decision on a point of law which governed the case, but which had not been urged at the previous hearing, it was considered that the applicant was not to blame for his omission to bring the decision to the notice of the Court at the first hearing, and the application for review of judgment was granted. A sued for possession of certain shops belonging to a Malabar tarwad, which had been attached in execution of a personal decree passed against a karnavan in a suit on a private debt. In the execution proceedings, an objection petition was put in, stating that the shops were sridhanam and was rejected ; and the order of rejection was not appealed against for one year. Respondents Nos. 1 to 4, the husbands of the persons who put in the objection petition, were in possession, and were now sued for possession. The plaintiff was assignee of the purchaser at the execution sale. Held, that upon the facts found the plaintiff acquired nothing under the Court-sale. Per cur.—An order rejecting a claim-petition under sec. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code, not being appealed against within one year, acquires the force of a decree. Velayuthan v. Lakshmana (I. L. R., 8 Madr. 506,) followed.—I. L. R., 10 Madr. 357.

When the defendant is in possession by virtue of an order under sec. 269 Act VIII of 1859, the plaintiff can only succeed on the strength of his own title. K and R, two out of five undivided Hindu brothers, sued V (a purchaser at an execution-sale of the interest of one of the brothers other than K and R) for the recovery of certain land of which V had obtained possession under sec. 269 of Act VIII of 1859. The lower Courts awarded two-fifths of the land to K and R as being the amount of their share in the land. Held by the High Court that the decree could not be maintained, as K and R, being two of several co-parceners in undivided property, could not say that they were entitled to a specific share in any portion of that property. They might have sued for general partition, or for a decree declaring them entitled to joint possession with V. Babaji v. Vasudeo (I. L. R., 1 Bom. 95) followed. A purchaser at a Court's sale ought not to be put in exclusive possession of the whole undivided land by virtue of a decree against one co-parcener only.—2 Bom. 676.

An order under sec. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code is subject to revision by the High Court under sec. 622 of that Code. Shiva Nathaji v. Joma Kashinath (I. L. R., 7 Bom. 340) followed.—6 Al. 172.

See I. L. R., 10 Madr. 53, noted under sec. 318.

I.—Of Arrest and Imprisonment.

336. A judgment-debtor may be arrested in execution of a decree at any hour and on any day, and shall, as soon as practicable, be brought before the Court, and his imprisonment may be in the civil jail of the district in which the Court ordering the imprisonment is situate, or, when such jail does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the Local Government may appoint for the confinement of persons ordered by the Courts of such district to be imprisoned :—

Provided as follows :—

(a) for the purpose of making an arrest under this section, no dwelling house shall be entered after sunset or before sunrise, and no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open. But, when the officer authorized to make the arrest has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may unfasten and open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe the judgment-debtor is to be found: Provided that, if, the room be in the actual occupancy of a woman who is not the judgment-debtor, and who, according to the customs of the country, does not appear in public, the officer shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw; and, after allowing a reasonable time for her to withdraw, and giving her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, he may enter such room for the purpose of making the arrest:

when the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested is a decree for money, and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

The Local Government may, by notification published in the official Gazette, direct that, whenever a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for money, and brought before the Court under this section, the Court shall inform him that he may apply under Chapter XX to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of his application, and if he places all his property in possession of a receiver appointed by the Court.

If, after such publication, the judgment-debtor express his intention so to apply, and if he furnish sufficient security that he will appear when called upon, and that he will, within one month, apply under section 344 to be declared an insolvent, the Court shall release him from arrest:

But if he fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realized, or commit him to jail in execution of the decree.

In the case of a surety such security may be realized in manner provided by section 253.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A person, who has taken the benefit of the insolvent sections of the Civil Procedure Code, and who is undischarged, but has not inserted in his schedule a debt for which a decree is subsequently obtained, is not protected from arrest in execution of such decree, merely because his property is in the hands of the Receiver in insolvency. Such a person is liable to arrest under the circumstances and in accordance with the procedure provided for by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888).—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 85.

Married women, against whom personal decrees for debt have been made, are not exempt from arrest or imprisonment in execution of such decrees under the Code of Civil Procedure.—9 Madr. 99.

A Sheriff's officer, of his own motion, delivered over to the officer in charge of the Alipore Jail a Judgment-debtor who had been duly committed to the Presidency Jail. Held, that the imprisonment was unlawful; that the delivery over to the officer in charge of the Alipore Jail amounted to a release; and that the prisoner was entitled, therefore, to be discharged.—11 Cal. 527.

A judgment-debtor arrested in execution of a decree for money, who has not, on his committal to jail expressed his intention of applying to be declared an insolvent under Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure, is nevertheless entitled during his imprisonment to make an application for that purpose; and the Court may, under sec. 349, pending the hearing of such application, release him on his finding security to appear when called upon. The word "arrest" in sec. 349 should be read as meaning "under detention" or "detained in custody." In deciding whether or not a payment made to a particular creditor amounts to an unfair preference within the meaning of section 351 of the Code, the Courts may fairly (where there is no other reason for impeaching the transaction as an unfair preference apart from the provisions of the Insolvent Act) refer to, and be guided by, the provisions of the Insolvent Act, which treats a transaction as an unfair preference only when it has occurred within a limited time before the insolvency proceedings. Where the Legislature has provided two methods by which a debtor can obtain protection from arrest or other serious consequences, and if one of those methods, in any particular case, turns out to be more favourable to the debtor than the other, the Courts will not deprive him of that advantage.—11 Cal. 451.

Secs. 336 and 349 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, are applicable to judgment debtors under arrest, but not committed to jail. A judgment-debtor committed to jail can only be discharged under sec. 341—8 Madr. 503.

A judgment-debtor, having been arrested in execution of a decree of the High Court in its Original Civil Jurisdiction, and brought before the Court under the provisions of sec. 336 of the Code of Civil Procedure, claimed to be discharged on the ground that he intended to apply to the Court to be declared an insolvent either under the provisions of ch. XX of the Code or of 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21. Held that the judgment-debtor, on expressing his intention to file a petition and schedule under 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, and complying with the conditions of sec. 336 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was entitled to be discharged.—8 Madr. 276.

S, on the 16th January 1886, obtained a decree for a certain sum of money against C. In execution of that decree C was arrested on the 28th January, and upon his being brought before the Court he expressed his intention of applying to be declared an insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure, and he was thereupon released upon furnishing security under the provisions of sec. 336 of the Code. K became surety for C, and executed a bond undertaking to produce C at any time when the Court should direct him so to do, and in default of so producing him to pay the amount of the decree, and standing security for C's applying to be declared insolvent. On the 19th February C filed his petition to be declared an insolvent before the District Judge under sec. 344 of the Code, and on the 14th May 1886 his petition was dismissed owing to his non-appearance. S thereupon applied for execution of the decree against K. Held that K was released from his obligation under the bond executed.—15 Cal. 171.

The liability of a surety under sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code ceases when the proceeding taken in execution of a decree wherein the security was furnished comes to an end. D, a judgment-debtor, was committed to jail on the 8th of August 1884, and he applied under sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code to be released. On the 16th of November 1884, B and C stood security for him under the provisions of sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code, that he would appear when called on, and that he would, within one month, apply under sec. 344 to be declared an insolvent, and D was thereupon released. Instead of applying under sec. 344 to be declared an insolvent, he applied to have the decree, which had been obtained ex parte, set aside. This application was disallowed, and the decree-holder was directed to take further steps. On the 21st of February 1885, the application for execution of the decree was struck off. The decree-holder on the 20th of July made a fresh application to execute the decree against the sureties, unless they should produce the judgment-debtor in Court. Held, that the power reserved to the Court, under sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code, to realise the security in execution of the decree, could not be exercised when the execution-proceeding wherein the security was furnished was no longer in existence.—14 Cal. 757.

A person who executes a bond undertaking to produce a judgment-debtor at any time when the Court should direct him to do so, and standing security under sec. 336 of the Civil Procedure Code for the judgment-debtor's applying to be declared insolvent, is released from his obligation under the bond when the judgment-debtor files his petition under sec. 344 to be declared insolvent. Koylash Chandra Shaha v. Christophoridi (1) approved.—13 Al. 100.

Act X of 1877, sec. 336, cl. 5, applies to Small Cause Court debtors, and such persons can obtain the benefit of chap. XX of that Act by applying to a Court which has jurisdiction under that chapter.—2 Madr. 9.

Warrant of arrest directed, notwithstanding previous proceedings in attachment, the Court being satisfied that the judgment-debtor was determined to evade, if possible, the payment of his debt.—7 Bom. 301.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 19, noted under sec. 271.

337. Every warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor shall direct the officer entrusted with its execution to bring him before the Court with all convenient speed, unless the amount which he has been ordered to pay, together with the interest thereon and the costs (if any) to which he is liable, be sooner paid.

Note.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 16 Cal. 85, noted under section 336.

337A.* (1) When a judgment-debtor appears before the Court in obedience to a notice issued under section 245B, or is brought before the Court after being arrested in execution of a decree for money, and it appears to the Court that the judgment-debtor is unable from poverty or other sufficient cause to pay the amount of the decree or, if that amount is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalment thereof, the Court may, upon such terms, (if any) as it thinks fit, make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and imprisonment, or directing his release, as the case may be.

(2) Before making an order under sub-section (1), the Court may take into consideration any allegation of the decree-holder touching any of the following matters, namely:—

(a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound as a trustee or as acting in any other fiduciary capacity to account ;

(b) the transfer, concealment, or removal by the judgment-debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree was made, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree ;

* This section has been inserted by the Debtor's Act (VI of 1888), sec. 4.

(c) any undue or unreasonable preference given by the judgment-debtor to any of his other creditors ;

(d) his refusal or neglect to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has or since the date of the decree has had the means of paying it ;

(e) the likelihood of his absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect mentioned in clause (b) of this sub-section.

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub-section (2) are being considered, the Court may in its discretion order the judgment-debtor to be imprisoned, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing sufficient security for his appearance on the requisition of the Court.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this section may be re-arrested.

(5) If the court does not make such an order as his mentioned in sub-section (1), it shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested, and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to jail.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

338. The Local Government may, from time to time, prescribe scales, graduated according to rank, race, and nationality, of monthly allowances payable for the subsistence of judgment-debtors.

Note —This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

339. No judgment-debtor shall be arrested in execution of a decree, unless and until the decree-holder pays into Court such sum as, having regard to the scales so fixed, the Judge thinks sufficient for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor from his arrest until he can be brought before the Court.

When a judgment-debtor is committed to jail in execution of a decree, the Court shall fix for his subsistence such monthly allowance as he may be entitled to according to the said scales, or, where no such scales have been fixed, as it considers sufficient with reference to the class to which he belongs.

The monthly allowance fixed by the Court shall be supplied by the party on whose application the decree has been executed by monthly payments in advance before the first day of each month.

The first payment shall be made to the proper officer of the Court for such portion of the current month as remains unexpired before the judgment-debtor is committed to jail, and the subsequent payments (if any) shall be made to the officer in charge of the jail.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The monthly subsistence-money under sec. 276 of Act VIII. of 1859 must be paid in advance; therefore, where a debtor was arrested and subsistence-money paid for January, but no further deposit was made till 4th February, the prisoner was held entitled to his discharge.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 51

Unless subsistence-money is paid before the commitment, the commitment is illegal. The jailor is bound by the words of the Act. It is for him, and not for the prisoner, to see that the money is paid.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 421.

Where a defendant is arrested prior to decree under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 78, and a decree is afterwards obtained against him in the suit, the plaintiff, if he wishes to detain the defendant in prison, must have him brought before the Court, and his subsistence-money fixed, in the same way as in the case of an arrest in execution of a decree; and, if he fails to do so, the defendant is entitled to his discharge from prison.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 327; S. C. Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 423.

340. Sums disbursed by the decree-holder for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor in jail shall be deemed to be costs in the suit:

Provided that the judgment-debtor shall not be detained in jail or arrested on account of any sum so disbursed.

Note—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

341. The judgment-debtor shall be discharged from jail—

(a) on the amount mentioned in the warrant of committal being paid to the officer in charge of the jail; or

(b) on the decree being otherwise fully satisfied; or

(c) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned; or

(d) on such person omitting to pay the allowance as hereinbefore directed; or

(e) if the judgment-debtor be declared an insolvent, as hereinafter provided; or

(f) when the term of his imprisonment, as limited by section 342, is fulfilled:

Provided that, in the second, third, and fifth cases mentioned in this section, the Judgment-debtor shall not be discharged without the order of the Court.

A Judgment-debtor discharged under this section is not thereby discharged from his debt; but he cannot be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was imprisoned.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The discharge of a judgment-debtor before imprisonment on account of the non-payment of the subsistence-money for the debtor is no bar to the debtor being re-arrested.—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 21.

A judgment-debtor once arrested and imprisoned in execution of a decree cannot under the Code be again arrested under a fresh writ of attachment on the same decree.—12 Cal. 652.

In the execution of a decree payable by instalments, the judgment-debtor cannot be arrested and imprisoned separately for default in the payment of each instalment.—7 Bom. 106.

The decree in an administration-suit directed A, a party to the suit, to pay over a sum of money, which she admitted was in her hands, to her own attorney in the suit, to be applied by him as directed by the decree. A refused to pay over the money, and she was imprisoned for disobedience to the Court's order. After she had been in prison for six months, she applied to the Judge of the Court below, under Act X of 1877, sec. 341, to be discharged. This order was refused. Held, on appeal, that the proceeding under which A had been imprisoned was not in execution of a decree, but that she was imprisoned under process of contempt, and that the provisions of secs. 341 and 342 did not apply to the case.—4 Cal. 655.

Imprisonment not to exceed six months.

342. No person shall be imprisoned in execution of a decree for a longer period than six months; or for a longer period than six weeks if the decree be

When not to exceed six-weeks.

for the payment of a sum of money not exceeding fifty rupees.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Court cannot fix any period for the imprisonment of a judgment-debtor under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 342.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 141.

Held by a majority of the Full Bench (SARGENT and BAYLEY, JJ., dissenting) that a judgment-debtor, imprisoned in satisfaction of the decree against him under Act VIII of 1859, is not entitled, under Act X of 1877, to be released on the coming into operation of the latter Act, if he have then been imprisoned for more than six months but less than two years.—2 Bom. 148.

The defendant was arrested before judgment, and, on the 5th February 1883, committed to jail under sec. 481 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the 6th March following, a decree in the suit was passed against him. On the 28th July, the defendant being then still in jail under the order of the 5th February, the plaintiff took out a fresh warrant of arrest in execution of the decree, and sought to have the defendant further imprisoned for the full period of six months limited by sec. 342 of the Code. Held that the defendant could be re-committed to jail, in execution of the decree, only for such a period as, together with the period of imprisonment that had elapsed since the passing of the decree, would complete a period of six months, and that, consequently, he would be entitled to be liberated on the 5th September 1883. Imprisonment under sec. 581 becomes, after decree, imprisonment in execution of the decree, and the imprisonment suffered after that date must consequently be taken into consideration in calculating the period of six months, which, by sec. 342 of the Code, is the limit allowed for an imprisonment in execution of a decree.—7 Bom. 431.

See I. L. R., 4 Cal. 655, noted under sec. 341.

343. The officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant shall endorse thereupon the day on, and the manner in, which it was executed, and, if the latest day specified in the warrant for the return thereof has been exceeded, the reason of the delay, or if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the warrant with such endorsement to the Court.

If the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the warrant, the Court shall examine him on oath touching his alleged inability, and may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability, and shall record the result.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a warrant issued by a Subordinate Court, directing the nazir to arrest a judgment-debtor, in execution of a decree, was entrusted by the nazir to a subordinate for execution by endorsing his name upon it, held that there is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code to prohibit a nazir from authorizing a deputy to execute a warrant of arrest for him, and that his endorsement must be regarded as prima facie evidence of the authority of the person to whom the warrant is delivered to execute it. Held that it is most desirable, when the nazirs of the Subordinate Courts delegate the duty of executing warrants of arrest, that they should confer the authority in more clear and explicit terms than are expressed by a mere indorsement, and that they should be careful in selecting proper persons to discharge that duty, bearing in mind, as far as circumstances permit, the position and caste of the party to be arrested, so as to avoid, through the medium of Court process, subjecting any such party to personal indignity or offence. Further, that it is important that the person chosen should be made acquainted with the contents of the warrant, in order that he may be able to inform the judgment-debtor at whose suit and for what amount he is being taken into custody. Where a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor had been executed, and an indorsement thereon, professedly under sec. 343 of the Civil Procedure Code, was irregularly made by the naib nazir, he not having been "the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant," held that such irregularity had not invalidated the arrest.—I. L. R., 6 Al. 385.

CHAPTER XX.

OF INSOLVENT JUDGMENT-DEBTORS.

344. Any judgment-debtor arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money, or against whose property an order of attachment has been made in execution of such a decree, may apply in writing to be declared an insolvent.

Any holder of a decree for money may apply in writing that the judgment-debtor may be declared an insolvent.

Every such application shall be made to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the judgment-debtor resides or is in custody.

Notes.

Sec. 8 of Act XXIII of 1861 applies only to applications made under sec. 273 of Act VIII of 1859, not to applications made under sec. 280.—5 B. L. R., App. 21.

Bad faith in sec. 281, Act VIII. of 1859, means bad faith, not only in respect of the application, but includes bad faith on previous occasions.—5 B. L. R., App. 22.

A judgment-debtor, in receipt of a monthly stipend, is not entitled to obtain a discharge under sec. 273 of Act VIII. of 1859, unless he submits to place that stipend at the disposal of the Court, that provision may be made for satisfaction of the debt.—6 B. L. R., 575 ; 15 W. R., 204. But see 13 B. L. R., 268 ; 22 W. R., 257.

"Bad faith," in sec. 281 of Act VIII. of 1859, refers only to bad faith in respect of an application under that section.—7 B. L. R., App. 23.

A surety-bond taken by the Court under sec. 8 of Act XXIII. of 1861, after judgment has been pronounced, can be enforced under sec. 204 of Act VIII. of 1859.—8 B. L. R., 205 ; 15 W. R., 21.

The fact that a judgment-debtor, who has been arrested in execution of a money-decree, is in receipt of a salary, is not sufficient cause to show against his discharge under sec. 8 of Act. XXIII. of 1861.—13 B. L. R., 268 ; 22 W. R., 257.

The discretionary power of a Judge to detain a defendant in custody, otherwise than by committing him to prison in execution of a decree, is confined to the case provided for in Act XXIII. of 1861, sec. 8.—1 M. H. C. R., 441.

Held that an order discharging a judgment-debtor under sec. 8, Act XXIII. of 1861, being illegal on account of non-compliance with the procedure prescribed by law, might be quashed, and afterwards treated as a nullity, so as not to bar any subsequent application for arrest.—1 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 4.

C D repaired P's ship on his express representation that the repairs would be paid for by a letter of credit which the owners had sent for that purpose. P applied the funds to the payment of other creditors. C D sued him for the amount of the repairs, and obtained a decree, in execution of which P was imprisoned. The Court having refused to give him his discharge under sec. 273 of Act VIII. of 1859, he appealed. Held, on appeal, that a person who gets work done on the representation that it is to be paid for out of certain specific funds, which funds he afterwards applies in paying sums due to other creditors, is guilty of mala fides and of giving undue preference, and is therefore not entitled to his discharge under sec. 273 of Act VIII. of 1859.—Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 74.

Where the judgment-debtor applied for his discharge under sec. 273 of Act VIII. of 1859, and the Court not being satisfied of his inability to pay, and that he was honest and bona fide in dealing with his property, refused the application. Held that a prisoner for debt, if he be perfectly honest, without present means of payment, and has given every facility in his power to his creditors taking possession of his property, is entitled to release: that nothing short of this will entitle him to it.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 101.

A person in custody who had been guilty of bad faith in the transactions relative to which he was detained, but not with regard to his application under sec. 280 of Act VIII. of 1859, was entitled to his discharge.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 8.

Secs. 273 and 280 of Act VIII. 1859 did not apply to cases of insolvency where the whole of the debtor's property is vested in the Official Assignee, and cannot be handed over to the Court in the manner contemplated by those sections.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 247.

Where a lower Appellate Court, from the replies of a judgment-debtor whom it examined, and from the circumstances of the case as set forth in the evidence, came to the conclusion that the judgment-debtor had not proved that he was not possessed of property, so as to be entitled to the benefit of sec. 273, Act VIII. of 1859, and sec. 8, Act XXIII. of 1861, held that there was no error of law in this finding.—12 W. R., 125.

The question of the sufficiency of the security tendered by the judgment-debtor is one entirely for the lower Court to determine.—15 W. R., 571.

The function of the Court, acting under Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure, is to compel insolvent-debtors to pay their debts if it can, either by its compulsory process, or, where that cannot be used, by withholding from them, when it has the power of doing so, the relief to which they might otherwise be considered entitled. The granting of an order of discharge under that chapter is to a certain extent discretionary with the Court, and if the Court be of opinion that an insolvent may reasonably be expected to possess an income accruing during the time of his insolvency and likely to continue, even if such income be from sources such that it could not be attached, it ought very seriously to consider whether under such circumstances it ought to exercise its power to discharge the insolvent, and not rather stay its hands and require him as a condition of such discharge to satisfy it by payments on account of his debts, that he really desires, so far as he can, honestly to discharge the debt that he owes. A Gyawal who was in receipt of a very considerable income, derived from offerings made by pilgrims, applied to be declared an insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure. He was opposed by a judgment-creditor, who, inter alia, contended that the insolvent should be compelled to contribute out of his income towards the payment of his debts. The Court finding that there were no assets, and holding that such income was not property capable of being attached, and that it had no power to order an insolvent to pay anything out of future earnings towards the discharge of his debts, declared the applicant an insolvent and granted him his discharge. Held, that the Court had power to withhold the discharge until the insolvent had satisfied it, by payments on account of his debts, that he really desired to discharge his debts and that, under the circumstances of the case, both having regard to the fact that the inquiry into the estate of the insolvent had been insufficient, and to the fact that he was in a position to contribute out of his income towards the payment of his debts, the order was wrong and should be set aside.—I. L. R., 19 Cal. 730.

The plaintiff Gangadhar obtained a decree against the defendant. In execution of that decree, certain property was attached on 5th March 1881. Although the judgment-debtor was not arrested in execution of that decree, nevertheless he, on the 18th October 1882, applied to the Court of the Subordinate Judge to be declared an insolvent under sec. 344 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). He was declared an insolvent under that section, and the nazir of the Court was appointed a receiver on 22nd December 1883. The receiver proceeded, under the direction of the Court, to convert the property of the insolvent into money under sec. 356 (a) of the Code. Certain immoveable property was purchased by the petitioner Tukaram for Rs. 1,032 on 4th December 1884. Tukaram, after some time, presented an application, in which he stated that, inasmuch as the insolvent had not been arrested in execution of the decree obtained by Gangadhar the Court had no jurisdiction; and he prayed that, if such was the case, the sale should be set aside, and the money returned to him. No appeal was preferred by the judgment-creditor, or other creditors of the insolvent, against the order of insolvency made under sec. 351 of the Code. The Subordinate Judge referred the following question to the High Court, viz., "whether a Court, which has declared the insolvency of a judgment-debtor, can direct the receiver to proceed under sec. 356 of the Code and complete any sale, though the purchaser objects to the direction on the ground of want of jurisdiction in the Court, which objection seems to the Court to be valid, but too late." Held that, as the declaration of insolvency was ultra vires, the Subordinate Judge should take no further steps to give effect to it, but leave the parties concerned to take such measures as they may be advised.—9 Bom. 368.

A person applying under this section must satisfy the Court that his case comes within sec. 351, and the burden of proof lies on him.—4 Cal.

A judgment-debtor, having been arrested in 1871, offered to place his estate at the disposal of the Court, and was examined on oath as to the particulars of the estate, and discharged from custody. His estate was never taken possession of, and part of it was subsequently disposed of by him to a stranger. Held that he was not liable to be arrested again in execution of the decree.—6 Madr. 170.

A District Munsif's Court, invested with insolvency jurisdiction by the Local Government under sec. 360 of the Code of Civil Procedure, cannot entertain an application made by a judgment-debtor, whose property has been attached, to be declared an insolvent, except where such application is transferred to it by the District Court.—7 Madr. 510.

When an application to be declared an insolvent, under sec. 344 of the Civil Procedure Code, was preferred, the requirements of that section had not been fulfilled, as the applicant had not been arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money, nor had his property been attached in execution of such a decree. Eleven days after the application had been preferred, the applicant's property was attached in execution of such a decree. One of the creditors subsequently objected to the application on the ground that when it was preferred the requirements of sec. 344 had not been fulfilled. Held that the application should not on that ground have been dismissed.—6 AL. 289.

See I. L. R., 4 Cal. 94, noted under sec. 6; 2 Bom. 641, noted under sec. 5; 15 Cal. 171 & 13 AL. 100, noted under sec. 336.

345. The application, when made
Contents of application. by the judgment-debtor, shall set forth—

(a) the fact of his arrest or imprisonment, or that an order for the attachment of his property has been made, the Court by whose order he was arrested or imprisoned, or by which the order of attachment was made, and, where he has been arrested or imprisoned, the place in which he is in custody ;

(b) the amount, kind, and particulars of his property, and the value of any such property not consisting of money ;

(c) the place or places in which such property is to be found ;

(d) his willingness to put it at the disposal of the Court ;

(e) the amount and particulars of all pecuniary claims against him ; and

(f) the names and residences of his creditors, so far as they are known to, or can be ascertained by, him.

The application, when made by the holder of a decree for money, shall set forth the date of the decree, the Court by which it was passed, the amount remaining due thereunder, and the place where the judgment-debtor resides or is in custody.

346. The application shall be signed and verified by the Subscription and verification of application. applicant in manner hereinbefore prescribed for signing and verifying plaints.

347. The Court shall fix a day for hearing the application, and shall cause a copy thereof,
Service of copy of application and notice. with a notice in writing of the time and place at which it will be heard, to be struck up in Court, and served at the applicant's expense—

Where the applicant is the judgment-debtor—on the holder of the decree in execution of which he was arrested or imprisoned or the order of attachment was made, or on the pleader of such decree-holder and on the other creditors (if any) mentioned in the application :

Where the applicant is the decree-holder—on the judgment-debtor or his pleader.

The Court may, if it thinks fit, publish, at the applicant's expense, the application in such official Gazettes and public newspapers as it thinks fit.

Where the applicant is the judgment-debtor, the Court may exempt him from any payments under this section if satisfied that he is unable to make them.

348. The Court may also, if it thinks fit, cause a like copy and notice to be served on any other person alleging himself to be a creditor of the applicant, and applying for leave to be heard on the application.

349. Where the judgment-debtor "is in custody under the foregoing provisions of this Code,"* the Court may, pending the hearing under section 350, order him to be immediately committed to jail, or leave him in the custody of the officer to whom the service of the warrant was entrusted, or release him on his furnishing sufficient security that he will appear when called upon.

Notes.

"Arrest," as used in sec. 349 of the Civil Procedure Code, (Act XIV.) of 1882, does not include "imprisonment." Therefore the power conferred on the Court, under that section, to release a judgment-debtor arrested in execution of a decree on security being given by him, ceases after he has been imprisoned or put into jail.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 46.

A security-bond given under the provisions of sec. 349 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, for the production of a judgment-debtor when called upon, cannot be enforced summarily.—7 Madr. 273.

350. On the day so fixed, or on any subsequent day to which the Court may adjourn the hearing, the Court shall examine the judgment-debtor, in the presence of the persons on whom such notice has been served or their pleaders, as to his then circumstances and as to his future means of payment, and shall hear the said decree-holder, the other creditors mentioned in the application, and the other persons, (if any) alleging themselves to be creditors, in opposition to the judgment-debtor's discharge; and may, if it thinks fit, grant time to the said decree-holder and other creditors or persons to adduce evidence showing that the judgment-debtor is not entitled to be declared an insolvent.

* The words quoted have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 81, for the words, "is under arrest," as originally enacted.

Notes.

A Court is competent to take action under sec. 359 of the Civil Procedure Code at the instance of a creditor, after the hearing under sec. 350 has determined. Per STRAIGHT, J —It is desirable that an application under sec. 359 should be made immediately, or as soon as possible, after the hearing under sec. 350, but a delay of some months will not make the application unentertainable. When once any of the frauds referred to in clauses (a), (b) or (c) of sec. 359 have been proved at a hearing under sec. 350, the Court must under sec. 359 either itself pass sentence on the applicant who has committed such frauds, or must send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law. The Court has no option to decline to adopt either of these courses. In acting under sec. 359, the Court does not retry the questions of fact decided by it at the hearing under sec. 350, but has to proceed upon the findings come to at that hearing. An applicant for a declaration of insolvency who does not avail himself of his right of appeal from the order rejecting his application, is concluded by the findings of fact at the hearing under sec. 350, and cannot afterwards question them.—14 Al. 145.

Declaration of insolvency and appointment of Receiver.

351. If the Court is satisfied—

(a) that the statements in the application are substantially true;

(b) that the judgment-debtor has not, with intent to defraud his creditors, concealed, transferred, or removed any part of his property since the institution of the suit in which was passed the decree in execution of which he was arrested or imprisoned, or the order of attachment was made, or at any subsequent time ;

(c) that he has not, knowing himself to be unable to pay his debts in full, recklessly contracted debts, or given an unfair preference to any of his creditors by any payment or disposition of his property ;

(d) that he has not committed any other act of bad faith regarding the matter of the application, the Court may declare him to be an insolvent, and may also, if it thinks fit, make an order appointing a Receiver of his property, or, if it does not appoint such Receiver, may discharge the insolvent.

If the Court is not so satisfied, it shall make an order rejecting the application.

Notes.

Before rejecting an application by a judgment-debtor for a declaration of insolvency with reference to the provisions of sec. 251 (a), it is necessary that the Court should be satisfied that the applicant has wilfully made false statements.. unintentional inaccuracies are not sufficient grounds for rejection.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 295.

A decree-holder in respect of whose judgment-debtor an order declaring him insolvent and appointing a receiver has been passed under sec. 351 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and whose decree has been placed on the list of the judgment-debtor's scheduled debts, cannot pari passu, with the proceedings in insolvency, go on executing his decree in the ordinary way against that judgment-debtor. Badal Singh v. Birch and Abdul Rahman v. Behari Puri distinguished.—14 Al. 358.

Sec. 351 (b) contemplates a case of active concealment, transfer, or removal of substantive property since the institution of the suit in which was passed the decree in execution of which the judgment-debtor was arrested or imprisoned, with intent to deprive the creditor or creditors of available assets for division; and it does not cover an omission by the judgment-debtor, in his application for a declaration of insolvency, of a statement as to his right to demand partition of ancestral estate in which he is a sharer, especially where there is no evidence of any intent to defraud.—7 Al. 445.

A Court cannot refuse the application of a judgment-debtor seeking to be declared an insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX of the the Civil Procedure Code unless it finds affirmatively that the applicant has brought himself within clause (a), (b), (c) or (d) of sec. 351 of the Code; and the fact that his schedule assets exceed his liabilities does not disentitle him to such relief. A judgment-debtor applied to be declared an insolvent under the provisions of chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge refused the application on the ground that the assets were admittedly in excess of the liabilities, and that he had made no effort for a period of two years to realise his property for the benefit of his creditors. Held that the District Judge was bound to grant the application, as the applicant had not brought himself within clause (a), (b), (c), or (d) of sec. 351, in which cases alone he had a right to refuse the application.—14 Cal. 691.

A person applying under Act X of 1877, sec. 344, must satisfy the Court that his case comes within the provisions of sec. 351, and the burden of proof lies upon him.—4 Cal. 888.

J, in pursuance of a previous agreement with B, and on being pressed by B, who had a pecuniary claim against him, assigned to B the whole of his property by way of sale, in consideration in part of B's pecuniary claim against him. Held that by such assignment J did not give B an "undue preference" to his other creditors, within the meaning of sec. 351 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 530.

An appeal lies against an order passed under sec. 351 of Act X of 1877, although it was an order refusing to declare petitioner an insolvent. The words used in cl. d of sec. 351, "the matter of the application," embrace the insolvency, and all the facts and circumstances material to explain the insolvency. Acts of bad faith towards creditors just at the period at which the applicant was contemplating insolvency may be held to be part of the matter of the application. A Judge would not be exercising a right discretion under sec. 351 if he refused relief in the case of persons who, although knowing that they had not the means of paying at the time the debt was contracted, yet honestly believed upon reasonable grounds that they would have the means of paying eventually.—2 Madr. 219.

A judgment-debtor having applied to be declared an insolvent under sec. 344 of the Code of Civil Procedure, entered the name of A in the list of his creditors together with the amount of the debt. No creditors appearing to oppose the application or prove their debts, the Court, without framing a schedule as required by sec. 352, declared the judgment-debtor an insolvent under sec. 351. In a suit brought by A to recover the debt:—Held, that as the provisions of sec. 352 had not been followed, the declaration under sec. 351 could not operate as a decree between the insolvent and A, and that A was entitled to a decree.—7 Madr. 318.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 232, noted under sec. 278.

352. The creditors mentioned in the application, and the other persons (if any) alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent, shall then produce evidence of the amount and particulars of their respective pecuniary claims against him ; and the Court shall, by order, determine the persons who have proved themselves to be the insolvent's creditors and their respective debts ; and shall frame a schedule of such persons and debts ; and the declaration under section 351 shall be deemed to be a decree in favour of each of the said creditors for their said respective debts.

A copy of every such schedule shall be struck up in the Court-house.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle a partner in an insolvent-firm, or, when he has died before the insolvency, his legal representative, to prove in competition with the creditors of the firm.

Notes.

It is open to a creditor, at any time while the assets of an insolvent are undistributed, to produce evidence of his debt, and to apply to be admitted on the schedule under sec. 352 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 1.

A suit to establish a right to bring to sale certain moveable property in execution of a decree for enforcement of hypothecation was brought against persons who were not parties to that decree, and had purchased in execution of a prior decree. Pending the suit, one of the judgment-debtors under the hypothecation-decree was declared an insolvent, and the plaintiff scheduled his decree as a claim under sec. 352 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the scheduling of the decree had not the effect of superseding it or creating another decretal right in addition to and independent of it, and did not make the suit, which was founded on a new and different cause of action against persons who were not parties to the decree, unmaintainable.—10 Al. 194.

In July 1878, a person was declared an insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX of the Civil Procedure Code. Only one creditor then proved his debt, and no schedule was framed. This creditor having applied for the sale of property belonging to the insolvent, another creditor, in May 1883, applied to prove his debt, and to have his name inserted in the schedule which the Court then ordered to be framed. Held that such application could not be treated as made under sec. 353, as no schedule had been framed, but must be regarded as in the nature of a tender of proof of debt under sec. 352 ; that it was governed by art. 178 of the Limitation Act, 1877 ; and that, the right to apply having accrued at the date of the declaration of insolvency, the application was beyond time.—6 Al. 142.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 318, noted under sec. 351.

353. Any creditor of the insolvent who is not mentioned in such schedule may apply to the Court for permission to produce evidence of the amount and particulars of his pecuniary claims against the insolvent, and, in case the applicant proves himself to be a creditor of the insolvent, for an order directing his name to be inserted in the schedule as a creditor for the debt so proved.

Any creditor mentioned in the schedule may apply to the Court for an order altering the schedule so far as regards the amount, nature, or particulars of his own debt, or to strike out the name of another creditor, or to alter the schedule so far as regards the amount, nature, or particulars of the debt of another creditor.

In the case of any application under this section, the Court, after causing such notices as it thinks fit to be served, at the applicant's expense, on the insolvent and the other creditors, and hearing their objections (if any), may comply with or reject the application.

Notes.

A judgment-debtor was declared an insolvent and a receiver of his property appointed under sec. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code, and his creditors were ordered to come forward and prove their claims within a certain time. No creditor came forward, for that purpose within such time, and in consequence the case was struck off the file, and the order appointing a receiver cancelled, and no schedule was framed under sec. 352. Subsequently a creditor applied to have his name entered in such schedule. Held that the applicant, notwithstanding no schedule had been framed, was an "un-scheduled" creditor, and was therefore entitled, under sec. 353 of the Civil Procedure Code, to make the application.—I. L. R., 5 Al. 268.

See I. L. R., 6 Al. 142, noted under sec. 352.

354. Every order under section 351 shall be published in the local official Gazette, and "every order under that section appointing a Receiver" shall operate to vest in the Receiver all the insolvent's property (except the particulars specified in the first proviso to section 266), whether set forth in his application or not.

Notes.

By an order dated the 9th July 1879, A was declared an insolvent under sec. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and his property vested in the receiver, who was ordered to convert it into money. Nine fields, which were part of A's property, had been mortgaged to the plaintiff, who was duly cited to appear and prove his debt. The plaintiff, however failed to appear, and he was consequently omitted from the schedule of A's creditors. The receiver sold one of the fields, which was purchased by A's undivided son G. At the sale the plaintiff gave notice of his claim as mortgagee. After paying off the debts of the scheduled creditors the receiver made over to A the residue of the purchase money, and the eight unsold fields. In 1881 the plaintiff sued A for possession of the mortgaged property, and on appeal obtained a decree. While that suit was pending, G sold to the defendant the field which he had purchased. In execution of his decree the plaintiff recovered possession of the eight fields, but on attempting to get possession of the ninth field, he was obstructed by the defendant, who was in possession, and he consequently brought this suit to recover it. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover it from the defendant. The only interest the insolvent had in the mortgaged premises was the equity of redemption, and this having vested in the receiver under sec. 354, he, under sec. 356, was directed to convert it into money. G, therefore, at the sale only purchased the equity of redemption in the one field; and the defendant, who now stood in G's shoes with notice of the plaintiff's claim, although he might possibly be entitled to redeem the whole nine fields comprised in the mortgage, was bound to deliver possession to the plaintiff (the mortgagee) until that was done. The mortgaged property could not be sold by the receiver without the consent of the plaintiff (the mortgagee), or paying him off. Sec. 356 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) no doubt contemplates the payment of debts secured by mortgage out of the proceeds of the conversion of the insolvent's property in priority to the general creditors; but this must be taken in connection with sec. 354, and must be understood as referring to those cases in which the mortgaged premises have been sold after coming to an understanding with the mortgagee.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 272.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 232, noted under sec. 278.

355. The Receiver so appointed shall give such security

Receiver to give security
as the Court may direct, and shall possess himself of all such property, except as aforesaid;

as the Court may direct, and shall possess himself of all such property, except
as aforesaid;

Discharge of insolvent. and on his certifying that the insolvent has placed him in possession thereof, or has done everything in his power for that purpose, the Court may discharge the insolvent upon such conditions (if any) as the Court thinks fit.

Notes.

A judgment-debtor, arrested and imprisoned in execution, applied to be declared an insolvent, and included a mortgage-debt in his application. Notice was issued to the mortgagee, who failed to appear and prove his claim, and was consequently omitted from the schedule prepared under sec. 352 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A receiver was appointed under sec. 354; the whole of the property, of the insolvent was made over to the receiver, including the nine fields mortgaged, which the insolvent held as tenant of the mortgagee. The receiver sold one out of the nine fields to satisfy the creditors entered in the schedule, and ultimately restored the remaining eight fields to the judgment-debtor. The mortgagee then sued to eject the judgment-debtor for default in payment of rent. The latter pleaded his discharge under sec. 355. Held that the discharge did not affect the mortgage-debt, and that a receiver is bound, as a condition of dealing with mortgagee property, in every case to pay off the mortgage, even when the mortgagee has not sought to be placed in the schedule,—the position of the mortgagee being essentially different from that of the unsecured creditor. Case of Chotalal v. Nahansa (printed Judgments for 1882, p. 80) distinguished.—I. L. R., 7 Bom. 455.

See I. L. R., 12 Bom. 272, noted under sec. 354.

356. The Receiver shall proceed
 Duty of Receiver. under the direction of the Court—

- (a) to convert the property into money ;
- (b) to pay thereout debts, fines, and penalties (if any) due by the insolvent to Government ;
- (c) to pay the said decree-holder's costs ;
- (d) to discharge, according to their respective priorities, all debts secured by mortgage of the insolvent's property :
- (e) to distribute the balance among the scheduled creditors rateably according to the amounts of their respective debts and without any preference ;

and such Receiver may retain, as a remuneration for the performance of his duties, a commission, to be fixed by the Court, not exceeding the rate of five per centum upon the amount of the balance so distributed (the amount of the commission so retained being deemed a distribution), and shall deliver the surplus (if any) to the insolvent or his legal representative :

His right to remuner.
 ation

Delivery of surplus.

Provided that, in any local area in which a declaration has been made under section 320 and is in force, no sale of immoveable property paying revenue to Government, or held or let for agricultural purposes, shall be made by the Receiver ; but, after he has sold the other property of the insolvent, the Court shall ascertain (a) the amount required to satisfy the claims of the scheduled creditors after deducting the moneys already received, (b) the immoveable property of the insolvent remaining unsold, and (c) the incumbrances (if any) existing thereon, and shall forward a statement to the Collector containing the particulars aforesaid ; and thereupon the Collector shall proceed to raise the amount so required by the exercise of such of the powers conferred on him by sections 322 to 325 (both inclusive) as he thinks fit, and subject to the provisions of those sections, so far as they may be applicable, and shall hold at the disposal of the Court all sums that may come to his hands by such exercise.

Notes.

A receiver appointed in insolvency proceedings under the Civil Procedure Code is entitled to a lien for the amount of his commission on the net assets remaining after payment of the charges specified in Civil Procedure Code, sec. 356 (b), and (d).—I. L. R., 15 Madr. 233.

See I. L. R., 12 Bom. 278, noted under section 354.

357. An insolvent discharged under section 351 or 355 shall not be arrested or imprisoned on account of any of the schedule-debts. But (subject to the provisions of section 358) his property, whether previously or subsequently acquired (except the particulars specified in the first proviso to section 266, and except the property vested in the Receiver), shall, by order of the Court, be liable to attachment and sale until the debts due to the scheduled creditors are satisfied to the extent of one-third, or until the expiry of twelve years from the date of the order of discharge under section 351 or 355.

Effect of discharge.

358. If the aggregate amount of the scheduled debts is two hundred rupees or a less sum, the Court may, and in any case after the scheduled debts have been satisfied to the extent of one-third, or after the expiry of twelve years from the order of discharge, the Court shall declare the insolvent, discharged as aforesaid, absolved from further liability in respect of such debts.

Declaration that insolvent is discharged from liability.

Notes

An insolvent, who had procured, and taken, and acted on an insolvency order, which had been granted to him because of the withdrawal of the opposition of his creditors, by reason solely of his engagement to pay a certain sum monthly until the whole of his debts should be discharged, after his scheduled debts had been satisfied to the extent of one-third, applied under sec. 358 of the Civil Procedure Code to be declared discharged from further liability in respect of his debts. Held that under the circumstances, his application had been properly refused.—I. L. R., 5 Al. 258.

Procedure in case of dishonest applicant;

359. Whenever, at the hearing under section 350, it is proved that the applicant has—

(a) been guilty, in his application, of any concealment or of wilfully making any false statement as to the debts due by him, or respecting the property belonging to him, whether in possession or in expectancy, or held for him in trust ;

(b) fraudulently concealed, transferred, or removed any property ; or

(c) committed any other act of bad faith regarding the matter of the application, the Court shall, at the instance of any of his creditors, sentence him by order in writing, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year from the date of committal ;

or the Court may, if it think fit, send him to the Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

Note.—See I. L. R., 14 Al. 145, noted under sec. 350.

360. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any Court other than a District Court with the powers conferred on District Courts by sections 344 to 359 (both inclusive), and the District Judge may transfer to any Court situate in his district, and so invested, any case instituted under section 344.

Courts.
Transfer of cases.

A Court so invested may entertain an application under section 344 by any person who has been arrested or imprisoned, or against whose property an order of attachment has been made, in execution of a decree for money passed by that Court.

Nothing in this chapter shall apply to any Court having jurisdiction in the towns of Rangoon, Moulmain, Akyab, and Bassein, where the property of the judgment-debtor exceeds in value two thousand five hundred rupees, or the amount of the pecuniary claims against him exceeds five thousand rupees, or such property, or any part thereof, is situate outside British Burma.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

360A* Nothing in this Chapter shall apply to any Court having jurisdiction within the limits of the town of Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay.

Inapplicability of this Chapter to Presidency towns.

Note.—See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 510, noted under sec. 344.

PART II. OF INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE DEATH, MARRIAGE, AND INSOLVENCY OF PARTIES.

361. The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the right to sue survives.

Illustrations.

(a.) A covenants with B and C to pay an annuity to B during C's life. B and C sue A to compel payment. B dies before the decree. The right to sue survives to C, and the suit does not abate.

(b.) In the same case, all the parties die before decree. The right to sue survives to the representative of the survivor of B and C, and he may continue the suit against A's representative.

(c.) A sues B for libel. A dies. The right to sue does not survive, and the suit abates.

(d.) A, a member of a Hindu joint family under the Mitakshara law, institutes a suit for partition of the family-property. A dies leaving B, a minor son, his heir. The right to sue survives to B, and the suit does not abate.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff sued to recover damages from the defendant's father, Ramdas, for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution. During the pendency of the suit Ramdas died, and the plaintiff substituted the defendant as his heir and representative. The defendant contended that the suit abated. Both the lower Courts disallowed the defendant's contention, and awarded damages to the plaintiff, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court, held, reversing the decision of the lower Courts, that the suit abated on the death of Ramdas, his estate having derived no benefit, but, on the other hand, suffered loss, in consequence of his wrong-doing. It was contended for the plaintiff that Act XII. of 1855 gave the plaintiff a right to continue his suit against the heir of Ramdas. Held that Act XII. of 1855 did not apply to a suit, such as this, brought originally against the wrong-doer himself, and only subsequently sought to be continued against his heir.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 677.

362. If there be more plaintiffs or defendants than one, and any of them dies, and if the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

Procedure in case of death of one of several plaintiffs or defendants, if right to sue survives.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

363.* If there are more plaintiffs than one, and any of them dies, and if the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiffs alone, but survives to him or them and the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff jointly, the Court may cause the legal representative (if any) of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party, and shall thereupon cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and proceed with the suit.

364. [Repealed by Act VII of 1888.]

* In case of the death of a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff, the legal representative of the deceased may, where the right to sue survives, apply to the Court to have his name entered on the record in place of the deceased plaintiff, and the Court shall thereupon enter his name and proceed with the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the special appellant died after the High Court had referred for trial, to the Court below, an issue based upon objections taken by the respondent under sec. 348 of Act VIII. of 1859, held that the appeal must abate, in accordance with sec. 102 of Act VIII of 1859 and sec. 37 of Act XXIII. of 1861 ; and that the respondent cannot require that it should proceed, in order that he may have an opportunity of taking objections to the decree of the Court below. If the respondent desires to secure the right of asking for a decision on his objections, he must file a separate appeal.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 81.

A sole plaintiff having died after decree, an application was made more than 60 days after his death, by his legal representative, for an order that his name might be substituted on the record for that of the original plaintiff, and that a sum of money to which the original plaintiff, if alive, would have been entitled, might be paid to him, as the legal representative. Held that sec. 372 of the Civil Pro. Code did not apply to the case, the section contemplating a proceeding before the determination of the suit ; and, further, that the application was barred by Act XV. of 1877, sch. 2, art. 171. Held also that sec. 232 had no application. Sec. 365 of the Civil Procedure Code (amended by Act XII. of 1879, sec. 61) does not apply to the case of a sole plaintiff dying after decree, the right to sue being merged in the decree.—5 C. L. R., 108.

The plaintiff died on the 28th August 1883, and in December 1884, letters of administration to his estate were granted to the Administrator-General. The defendant died in June 1884, leaving a widow and one son surviving him. By his will he appointed two executors. On the 3rd February 1885, the Administrator-General took out a summons to revive the suit. Held that, notwithstanding the provisions of sec. 365 of the Civil

* Sec. 363 or 365 has been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 32

Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) and of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), it was competent for a Judge in chambers to revive the suit by making an order for abatement under sec. 366 of the Code, coupled with an order under sec. 371 setting aside the order for abatement.—I. L. R., 9 Bom. 275.

Under sec. 368 a plaintiff may have the representatives of a deceased sole defendant placed on the record so that he may continue his suit against them, but there is no section which allows the representatives of sole defendant who has died to be placed on the record at their own request. Consequently sec. 582 gives no authority to a Civil Court to place on the record at their own request the representatives of a deceased sole respondent. Such an application cannot be entertained.—9 Bom. 56.

An order made under sec. 366 that a suit do abate, being virtually a decree within the meaning of sec. 2, is appealable. The appellant's father having died during the pendency of an appeal lodged by him, a notice was served upon the appellant's two adult brothers; but they having failed to apply within sixty days, the appellant, who was a minor applied several months afterwards to be put on the record in his deceased father's place as his legal representative, which was done. The Assistant Judge, who heard the appeal, was of opinion that, in consequence of the omission on the part of the brothers of the appellant to apply, the appeal abated, and he passed an order accordingly :—Held, that the application having been made by the minor son within the time limited by law, the order of abatement made by the Judge was wrong. Although the complete legal representation vested in the minor son and his two brothers, sec. 366 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) only required an application to be made by a person claiming to be the legal representative, in order to prevent an order of abatement being made. If neither of the brothers was willing to have his name placed on the record, the respondent was entitled to have them made defendants, so that they might be bound by the decree. The minor son could then proceed alone with the appeal.—10 Bom. 220.

If a plaintiff dies after decree, his representatives are not bound to apply within 60 days to be made parties to the suit, but have the same time to file an appeal as the plaintiff would have had. The Civil Procedure Code, secs. 363, 365, and the Limitation Act, sch. ii., art. 171, do not apply to the case of a plaintiff dying after decree.—3 Madr. 236.

A judgment-debtor applied that an execution-sale of property belonging to him should be set aside, as the decree-holder was dead when such sale took place, and such sale was in consequence invalid. This application was disposed of by the Court executing the decree in the presence of the judgment-debtor and purchaser. The Court held that the fact of such sale having taken place after the decree-holder's death was no ground for setting it aside, and disallowed such application, and made an order confirming such sale. Held per PEARSON, J., that the application for the execution of the decree abated on the death of the decree-holder, not having been prosecuted by his legal representative, and such sale was, under the circumstances, improper and invalid, and the order confirming it should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that such sale was not invalid by reason of the decree-holder's death before it took place. The order confirming it, however, was improper, and should be reversed, and the case should be remanded to be dealt with under the provisions of secs. 365 and 366 of Act X of 1877, as the Court executing the decree should have proceeded under those sections. Per OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J., that the death of the decree-holder prior to such sale did not render it void. The provisions of secs. 365 and 366 of Act X of 1877 could not be adopted to execution-proceedings. As such sale had been published and conducted according to law, it had properly been confirmed.—3 Al. 759.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 440, noted under sec. 582; 9 Al. 447, noted under sec. 32.

366. If, within the time limited by law, no such application be made to the Court by any person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate, and shall, on the application of the defendant, award to the defendant the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff ; or the Court may, if it think proper, on the application of the defendant, and upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, pass such other order as it thinks fit for bringing in the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, or for proceeding with the suit in order to a final determination of the matter in dispute, or for both those purposes.

Explanation.—A certificate of heirship, or a certificate to collect debts, does not of itself constitute the person holding it the legal representative of the deceased. But when the person holding any such certificate obtains thereby property belonging to the deceased, he may be treated as a legal representative liable in respect of such property.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 440, noted under sec. 582; 3 Al. 844, noted under sec. 2; 3 Al. 759, noted under sec. 365; 9 Bom. 275, 9 Bom. 56 and 10 Bom. 220, noted under sec. 365.

367. If any dispute arise as to who is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, the Court may either stay the suit until the fact has been determined in another suit or decide at or before the hearing of the suit who shall be admitted to be such legal representative for the purpose of prosecuting the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Pending a suit for redemption, one of the plaintiffs died. Thereupon A., claiming as the adopted son, and B., as the daughter of the deceased, made separate applications, under sec. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure, (Act XIV of 1882), to be placed on the record. The Subordinate Judge ordered both claimants to be entered on the record as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff, and proceeded with the suit. At the hearing he found that A.'s adoption was proved, and that B. was not the legal heir of the deceased. He, therefore passed a decree for redemption in A.'s favour. Against this decree B. appealed, making A. alone the respondent in the appeal. The Appellate Court held that B., and not A., was the heir of the deceased. It, therefore, passed a decree in B.'s favour and against A. On second appeal to the High Court, held, that the Subordinate Judge could not, under section 367 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), admit on the record both the rival claimants as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff, or adjudicate by his decree between their rival claims. Held, also, that the Appellate Court ought not to have allowed one plaintiff to appeal against the other, or to have decided the rights of different plaintiffs inter se.—15 Bom. 145.

See 1. L. R., 9 Al. 447, noted under sec. 32.

368. If there be more defendants than one, and any of them die before decree, and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, and also in case of the death of a sole defendant, or sole surviving defendant, where the right to sue survives, the plaintiff may make an application to the Court, specifying the name, description, and place of abode of any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant, and whom he desires to be made the defendant in his stead.

The Court shall thereupon enter the name of such representative on the record in the place of such defendant, and shall issue a summons to such representative to appear on a day to be therein mentioned to defend the suit ;

and the case shall thereupon proceed in the same manner as if such representative had originally been made a defendant, and had been a party to the former proceedings in the suit :

Provided that the person so made defendant may object that he is not the legal representative of the deceased defendant, or may make any defence appropriate to his character as such representative.

When the plaintiff fails to make such application within the period prescribed therefor, the suit shall abate, unless he satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within such period.

The legal representative of a deceased defendant may apply to have himself made a defendant in place of the deceased defendant, and the provisions of this section, so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the application and to the proceedings and consequences ensuing thereon.*

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff-respondent in an appeal pending before the High Court died on the 17th September 1885. Subsequently D applied to the High Court to be brought on the records as legal representative of the deceased; on the 15th April 1886, he was referred to a regular suit to establish his title as such representative, and on the 25th February 1887, such suit was dismissed. On the 8th February 1886, the defendants-appellants applied to the High Court for judgment; but the application was dismissed under the decision of the Full Bench in Chajmal Das v. Jagdamba Prasad (I. L. R., 10 Al. 260). On 24th July 1888, they applied to the High Court to bring certain persons upon the record as the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. Held that the application having been made subsequent to the 1st July 1888, when the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888) came into force, and being an entirely fresh application not in continuation of any former proceedings between the same parties, must be dealt with under that Act and not under the Civil Procedure Code as it stood before the amendment; and that, as it was made more than six months after the death of the deceased plaintiff-respondent, the appeal abated, with reference to sec. 368 of the Code and art. 175C of the Limitation Act (XV. of 1877). Held also that the petitioners had not shown "sufficient cause" within the meaning of sec. 368 of the Code for not making the application within the prescribed period. Ram Jiwan Mal v. Chand Mal (I. L. R., 10 Al. 587) referred to.—I. L. R., 11 Al. 408.

At an auction-sale held in execution of a decree passed against one Ganpat Anandray, certain property put up for sale was purchased by one Khan Mahomed, the husband of the opponent.

Subsequently Krishnarav Anandray, the brother of Ganpat Anandray, brought a suit against the opponent to establish his right to the property purchased by the opponent's husband. On the 17th February 1882, he obtained a decree declaring that he (Krishnarav Anandray) was entitled to a half-share of the property in dispute, and an order was made that he should have joint possession with the opponent of one moiety of the property.

On the termination of the above suit, which had been brought by Krishnarav in forma pauperis, he was required to pay the court-fees. For that purpose he procured an advance of Rs. 290 from the applicant on the security of the moiety of the property which was awarded to him by the decree. He passed a deed of sale to the applicant on the understanding that the property should be re-conveyed to him by the applicant on the re-payment of the advance with interest. In the meantime cross appeals were filed against the above-mentioned decree passed in favour of Krishnarav, and at the hearing of the appeal the lower Appellate Court varied the decree of the Subordinate Judge, holding that Krishnarav Anandray was entitled to the possession of the property so sought for. From this decree the opponent preferred a second appeal to the High Court, which, at the time of this application, was still pending.

Before the hearing of the appeal, Krishnarav Anandray died, and the applicant thereupon applied to have his name placed on the record as respondent. Held that the applicant was entitled to be made a party. The analogy of sec. 368 is to be extended generally to appeals, and the party appealing may choose his own respondent as representative of deceased. The more specific rule prescribed in that section must prevail, in the cases to which it is exactly applicable, over the more general rule in sec. 372. But the rule in section. 368 may well be intended for the case in which the death, and the death only, of the defendant constitutes the change of circumstances for which it was thought necessary to provide; but where there has been, not only the death of the respondent, but an alleged prior conveyance to him of the property awarded by the decree appealed against, there is a fact in addition to the fact contemplated by sec. 368, and the rule in sec. 372, being alone sufficiently inclusive, must apply.

An appellant may determine who shall be respondent, but not that any particular person shall not be a respondent. The choice of respondents, made by the appellant may be defective through ignorance or fraud, and the real representative of the decree-holder cannot justly be refused an opportunity of maintaining the decision which it is sought to upset.—9 Bom. 151.

After the institution of a suit for dissolution of a partnership, two of the defendants died. More than a year after their death the plaintiffs applied to have the legal representatives of the deceased entered on the record. The Subordinate Judge granted this application, holding that the case was governed by sec. 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and that the application was, therefore, within time under article 178 of the Limitation Act XV of 1877. Held, that the case was governed by sec. 368, and not 372 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The application for substitution of the heirs of the deceased defendants ought to have been made within six months, as provided by article 175 C of the Limitation Act XV of 1877, and was barred, unless the delay were sufficiently explained.—16 Bom. 27.

Although a Court is bound by sec. 368 to place on the record the name of the person alleged by the appellant to be the legal representative of a deceased respondent, nevertheless, where a person, other than the person alleged by the appellant to be such representative, claims, on good prima facie grounds, to be the representative of the deceased respondent, and the interests of the person entitled to the estate of the deceased may be prejudiced, the Court should, under sec. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure, proceed to make such claimant also a party to the appeal.—8 Madr. 300.

Procedure analogous to that laid down in Act X of 1877, sec. 368, in respect to the death of a defendant, must be applied in the case of the death of a respondent. Where, therefore, a respondent dies during the pendency of an appeal, it is for the appellant to take the initiative, and he is at liberty to select one or more persons to defend the appeal; and no person, other than the person so selected, has a right to force himself into the proceedings, and to claim to have his name entered as representative of the deceased respondent against the appellant's consent. Persons so introduced on the record may or may not be the real representatives of the deceased respondent, but the merits of their claim to be such, on the ground of any right or status, such as that of adoption, is immaterial to the determination of the appeal.—4 Bom. 654.

In a suit for the recovery of land against a sole defendant, the latter died before the hearing. Sixty-three days after the death of the defendant, the plaintiff applied to the Court to enter on the record as the legal representative of the deceased defendant. On the 22nd of November 1880, the Court rejected the application under the provisions of Act XV of 1877, sch. ii., cl. 171B, and ordered the suit to abate. On the same day the plaintiff applied to the Court to set aside the order directing the suit to abate, but this application was also rejected on the 20th of September 1881. On appeal to the High Court, held that no appeal lay against the order of the 20th of September 1881, and that an appeal against the order of the 22nd of November 1880, was out of time; but that the High Court would take cognizance of the case under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held also that the application which was rejected on the 22nd of November 1880 was an application under sec. 372, and not under sec. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the applicant was entitled to make the application within three years, as allowed by Act XV of 1877, sch. ii., cl. 178. Gocool Chunder Gossamee v. Administrator-General of Bengal (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 726; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 108) referred to.—8 Cal. 837; 10 C. L. R., 449.

An appeal having been declared to have abated on the 12th December 1881 under sec. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, because the appellant had not applied within sixty days of the date of the death of the respondent to bring in his representative, an application was made in January 1882 to set aside the order, and was heard after the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 came into force. Held, that the application must be disposed of under the Code of Civil Procedure as it stood at the date of the application, and, therefore that it was not open to the appellant to satisfy the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within the prescribed period. Section 371 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply to the case in which a defendant or respondent dies.—7 Madr 195.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 440, noted under sec. 582; 6 Al. 225 and 15 Madr. 399, noted under sec. 234; 9 Al. 447 and 10 Al. 223, noted under sec. 32; 10 Al. 260 and 10 Al. 204, noted under sec. 3.

369. The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may, notwithstanding, be proceeded with to judgment, and, where the decree is against a female defendant, it may thereupon be executed against her alone.

If the case is one in which the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife, the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also; and, in case of judgment for the wife, execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband where the husband is by law entitled to the subject-matter of the decree.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A party having died while a suit against him was pending, his widow was brought upon the record as defendant, and judgment was given against her, which was subsequently affirmed on appeal. The original decree embraced an award of certain wasilat (accruing after the husband's death) for which the widow was personally liable. Between the original and final judgments she married again, and execution of the decree was accordingly sought against her second husband. Held that he was not liable to summary proceedings in execution, and that the term "judgment" in sec. 105, Act VIII. of 1859, did not include the judgment in appeal.—9 W. R., 442.

370. The bankruptcy or insolvency of a plaintiff in any suit which his assignee or the receiver appointed under section 351 might maintain for the benefit of his creditors shall not bar the suit, unless such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit and to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may order.

When plaintiff's bankruptcy or insolvency bars suit.

If the assignee or receiver neglect or refuse to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's bankruptcy or insolvency, and the Court may dismiss the suit and award to the defendant the costs which he has incurred in defending the same, to be proved as a debt against the plaintiff's estate.

Procedure when assignee fails to continue suit or give security.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

If an assignee, who has been substituted for the plaintiff under sec. 106, Act VIII of 1859, declines to furnish security for costs within such reasonable time as the Court may order, the defendant may, within eight days after such neglect and refusal, plead the bankruptcy or insolvency of the plaintiff as a reason for abating the suit.—13 W. R., 431.

Sec. 106 of the Civil Procedure Code means that a suit abates by the insolvency of the plaintiff, but that the defendant shall not plead the abatement without giving the Official Assignee an opportunity of prosecuting the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff, after the institution of a suit, became insolvent, and the defendant thereupon obtained an order that the Official Assignee should give security for the costs of the defendant within fourteen days, and should be made a party to the suit within one month, and that, in default of such security, the suit should be set down for dismissal within eight days after the expiration of the time so limited, held that such order was irregular. Held also that the Official Assignee, having notice of the order, was not entitled to further notice of the setting down of the suit for dismissal, he not having given the security required, and that the giving for such security was a condition precedent to his being made a party to the suit. Where the suit was dismissed in accordance with the terms of the order mentioned above, and the Official Assignee did not apply, within thirty days of the passing of the order of dismissal, either to the Court making the order or to the Appellate Court, for its reversal, held that an application to the Appellate Court for the reversal of an order discharging a rule nisi for the reversal of the order of dismissal, and for the restoration of the suit to the board for hearing, was barred.—12 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 257.

On the 3rd of August a case came on for hearing. Prior to that date the plaintiff in this suit had been adjudicated an insolvent and did not appear, but the Official Assignee appeared and applied for a postponement. The Court accordingly made the following order :—" It is ordered that the be dismissed under section 370 of the Civil Procedure, unless the Official Assignee elects on or before the fifth day of October next to continue the suit and give security for the defendant's costs." The time for complying with the order was subsequently extended, and the plaintiff in the meanwhile obtained an order allowing the insolvency proceedings to be withdrawn. The defendant now applied that the suit should be dismissed pursuant to the terms of the above order. The plaintiff objected, as he was now no longer an adjudged insolvent, and was ready to prosecute the suit. Held, that the order had been made in an improper form, in as much as section 370 gives the Court no power to order the dismissal of the suit. This part of the order, therefore, was wrong, and the Court could now rectify it by cancelling that portion of the order, and as a consequence, refusing the defendant's application.—16 Bom 404.

371. When a suit abates or is dismissed under this chapter, no fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action.

Effect of abatement or dismissal.

But the person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased or bankrupt or insolvent plaintiff may apply for an order to set aside the order for abatement or dismissal; and, if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, the Court shall set aside the abatement or dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Application to set aside abatement or dismissal.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a suit was declared abated in 1868 under sec. 102 of Act VIII of 1859 for non-prosecution by the representative of a deceased plaintiff, held that the Civil Procedure Code, sec. 271, was no bar to a fresh suit instituted in 1880 on the same cause of action.—I. L. R., 3 Madr. 31.

Upon the death of a sole plaintiff, if no application to revive is made within sixty days from the date of the plaintiff's death, the suit abates. But the Court may, under Act X of 1877, sec. 371, revive the suit on the application of the legal representative of the plaintiff within three years from the time when the right to apply accrues, if he can shew that he was prevented by sufficient cause from continuing the suit—5 Cal. 139; 4 C. L. R., 374.

The defendants attached certain property, which, the plaintiffs alleged, belonged to them. The plaintiffs preferred a claim to the property under sec. 246 of Act VIII of 1859; this claim was disallowed on the 15th August 1877. In June 1878, the plaintiffs brought a suit to establish their title to the property attached, and for confirmation of possession. Pending this suit, the principal defendant died, and the plaintiff's applied for an order to substitute certain persons as defendants. The Court thereupon directed the issue of a summons on the defendants proposed by the plaintiffs to appear and defend the suit; but the plaintiffs failing to pay the costs of the service of this summons, the suit was dismissed on the 14th March 1879. On the 4th March 1880, the plaintiffs again brought a suit to establish their title to the same property, and for confirmation of possession. Held that the order of the 15th August 1877, not being an order passed under sec. 283 of Act X of 1877, art. 11 of sch. ii. of Act

XV of 1877 did not apply, but that art. 120 of sch. ii. was applicable; and that, as the first suit had not been dismissed upon the merits, the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the second suit.—9 Cal. 163.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 195, noted under sec. 368.

372. In other cases of assignment, creation, or devolution of any interest pending the suit, the suit may, with the leave of the Court, given either with the consent of all parties or after service of notice in writing upon them, and hearing their objection, (if any), be continued by or against the person to whom such interest has come, either in addition to, or in substitution for, the person from whom it has passed, as the case may require.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be applied to the assignment, creation, or devolution of an interest subsequent to the decree in a suit. The section has no application to proceedings in execution of decree; and a Court has no jurisdiction, reading sec. 372 with sec. 647, to bring in a party after decree, and make him a judgment-debtor for the purposes of execution. Gocool Chander Gossammee v. The Administrator-General of Bengal (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 726; 5 Cal. L. R., 108) and Attorney-General v. Corporation of Birmingham (L. R., 15 Ch. D. 423) referred to. Where a Court had so acted, by an order which might have been, but was not, made the subject of appeal under sec. 588 of the Court, held that, as there was no jurisdiction to make such an order, the party aggrieved was competent to object thereto on appeal from a subsequent order enforcing execution against him as a judgment debtor—I. L. R., 10 Al. 97.

The words "pending the suit," in Act X of 1877, sec. 372, relate to a suit in which no final order has been made.—5 Cal. 726; 5 C. L. R., 569.

The "cases of assignment, creation, or devolution" of any interest pending a suit contemplated by sec. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code, are those in which "the person to whom such interest has come" is arrayed on the same side in the suit as "the person from whom it has passed." Held, therefore, that a compromise in a suit for land between the plaintiff and one of the defendants, whereby the latter consented to a decree being given to the former for half the land, was not a "case of assignment" of an interest in such land within the meaning of that section.—5 Al. 209.

After a decree had been made in a suit, the case was, in 1875, struck out of the board for want of prosecution. No steps were taken to have it restored. In 1879, both the plaintiff and the defendant died. In the same year the heirs of the plaintiff instituted a suit against the administrator of the defendant for the purpose of having the decree in the original suit carried out. This suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance under Act X of 1877, sec. 13; but the Appellate Court, holding that the original suit was subsisting, and might be re-constituted, directed that the plaintiffs should be allowed to amend their plaint by putting it into the form of a petition under sec. 372 of the same Act. On a petition by the plaintiffs praying that the original suit might be revived and restored to the board, held that the application was not barred under sch. 2, art. 178. Even if art. 178 was applicable, the application would not be barred, limitation running from the time when the suit was allowed to be re-constituted.—6 Cal. 60.

A suit was instituted by the trustee appointed under a will against the executrix for the purpose of having the trusts of the will carried into execution. A decree was made and certain directions were given for the purpose of having a scheme settled by which the trusts were to be carried out; but before the scheme was finally settled and approved, and while the proceedings were pending, the case was struck out of the board for want of prosecution. Subsequently both the plaintiff and defendant died. The heirs of the plaintiff then instituted a suit against the Administrator-General as representing the estate of the defendant for carrying the trusts into execution, and prayed that their suit might be considered as supplemental to the original one. Held that the original suit, though no longer upon the board, was capable of revival, and that, if no person were living whose consent might be obtained, or to whom notice might be given, the Court might give leave without any such consent or notice, and that the proper course to pursue was to allow the plaintiffs to amend their plaint by putting it in the form of a petition under Act X of 1877, sec. 372, the defendant being at liberty to put in any answer which he might have done, if the proceeding had been by petition in the first instance.—5 Cal. 726.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 837, noted under sec. 368; 8 Bom. 323, noted under sec. 32.

Power for Court to extend period of limitation prescribed for certain applications.

372A* The provisions of section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, applicable to appeals, shall apply to applications under sections 365, 366, 368, and 371.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF THE WITHDRAWAL AND ADJUSTMENT OF SUITS.

373. If, at any time after the institution of the suit, the Court is satisfied, on the application of the plaintiff, (a) that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or (b) that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit, or to abandon part of his claim with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the subject-matter of the suit or in respect of the part so abandoned, the Court may grant such permission on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

If the plaintiff withdraw from the suit, or abandon part of his claim, without such permission, he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award, and shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit for the same matter or in respect of the same part.

* Section, 372A has been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 32

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the plaintiff applied under sec. 97, Act VIII. of 1859, to be allowed to withdraw from the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter, the Court refused the application. Another application for leave simply to withdraw from the suit was granted, the Court dismissing the suit with costs. Brass v. Tiruvengada Pillai (1 M. H. C. R., 247) dissented from.—1 B. L. R., (O. C.) 45.

The High Court has no power under the Civil Procedure Code to award costs to the defendant when the plaintiff withdraws, not having asked leave to do so with liberty to bring another suit for the same matter.—1 M. H. C. R., 247.

A Small Cause Court is not bound to allow a plaintiff to withdraw a suit on the ground that he had received payment from one of the defendants in the suit, that attempt to withdraw having been made after the plaintiff had succeeded in getting a judgment against two defendants which had been set aside by the Court on various grounds, and a new trial ordered. In such a case the Court may permit the withdrawal of the suit upon the terms of plaintiff paying the first defendant's costs.—3 M. H. C. R., 27.

An appellant has no right to withdraw an appeal which has been regularly registered without the permission of the Court. Where the appellant had given notice of the withdrawal of the appeal before the day of hearing, and notice of withdrawal had been given to the respondent, but not until costs had been incurred, held that the appellant was not at liberty to withdraw the appeal, and the Court ordered that the appeal be set down for hearing.—3 M. H. C. R., 368.

In a suit to recover the possession of land, of which the plaintiff had been dispossessed in execution of a decree against the 1st defendant it appeared that the plaintiff had applied within one month from the date of his dispossession to the Court from which the process of execution had issued under sec. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, setting up his title, and it was numbered and registered as a suit under the section. Before the claim came on for hearing, the plaintiff was allowed by the Court to withdraw the proceeding, with liberty to bring a fresh suit upon the claim set up. The plaintiff subsequently brought the present suit. Held that the former proceeding was a suit within the meaning of sec. 97 of the Code, and liberty having been given on its withdrawal, before decree, to bring another suit, the present suit was well brought.—5 M. H. C. R., 298.

A plaintiff without leave of the Court withdrew from a suit in 1853. He filed a fresh suit on the same cause of action in 1866. Held that he was not debarred from doing so, as the provisions of sec. 97 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 23.

A plaintiff who has withdrawn from his suit is at liberty to rescind the act of withdrawal at any time before final judgment. Sec. 97 of the Civil Procedure Code is inapplicable to a case like the present, when the plaintiff rescinded after two days a petition he had presented of withdrawal from his claim. The last clause of that section contemplates cases in which the withdrawal is not revoked.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 66.

The proviso in the 3rd clause of sec. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not deprive the Court of power to permit one of several co-plaintiffs to withdraw unconditionally from a suit, even though his co-plaintiffs do not consent to his withdrawal.—9 C. L. R., 332.

A, having brought an action against B, was allowed to withdraw, with leave to bring a fresh suit, and was also ordered to pay the costs. Held that, the payment of the costs not having in terms been made a condition precedent to bringing a fresh suit, the Court had no power to stay proceedings in the fresh suit, on the ground that the costs had not been paid.—2 Hyde's Rep., 212.

Where a plaintiff filed a petition withdrawing his claim unconditionally, the suit should be at once struck off the file. If the defendant had entered into some private agreement and did not fulfil the same, it might give a new right of action to the plaintiff for enforcing that agreement, but was no reason for setting aside the petition for withdrawal of the suit as null and void.—2 Agra H. C. R., 158.

A suit founded on a compromise, which was entered into when special appeal was withdrawn, was not barred by sec. 97, Act VIII. of 1859, as it was not a suit for the same matter within the meaning of that section; but if the compromise was duly made by the parties thereto, and if its terms have been broken, a party to it is entitled to maintain a suit to enforce it.—3 Agra H. C. R., 135.

Where application was made for leave to withdraw a suit, with leave to bring a fresh one, it being contended that the fact of a notarial protest on inland bills, and of their being in the hands of the holder without signature, was proof of dishonour; and further that, defendant being a Hindu, there was no necessity for notice of dishonour, the Appellate Court, reversing the decision of the Court below, granted the application under the power given by sec. 37, Act XXIII. of 1861.—Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 99.

Where, on appeal from a decree dismissing a suit, the Appellate Court, being of opinion that the plaint was informally drawn, and its allegations regarding the cause of action not sufficiently specific, gave the plaintiff permission, under sec. 373, to withdraw the suit, with leave to institute a fresh one, held that the order of the Appellate Court was a "decree," and afforded a proper ground of appeal to the High Court. Per STRAIGHT, J.—That, with reference to the terms of sec. 582, the Appellate Court had power to avail itself of the provisions of sec. 373, and, therefore, had a discretion to make the order allowing the plaintiff to withdraw the suit and institute a fresh one. Gregory v. Doole Chand Kandary Mull (14 W. R., O. J., 17) and Khatoon Koonwar v. Hurdoot Narain Singh (20 W. R., 163) referred to. Also per STRAIGHT, J., that it could not be said that the Appellate Court in this case had exercised its discretion so unreasonably or erroneously as to compel the interference of the High Court with it in appeal. Per TYRRELL, J., that it might be taken that the Appellate Court, though not so stating in express terms, meant to set aside, and did set aside the decree of the Court of first instance, regarding it as a decree which could not have been rightly made, and must be set aside, by reason of the radical defect in the plaint, the basis of the suit and the decree; and that, in this view, there was no legal objection to the exercise by the Appellate Court of the discretionary power of Chapter XXII of the Code.—I. L. R., 8 Al. 82.

The ruling in Sarju Prasad v. Sita Ram, only decided that where the circumstances in regard to an application for execution of decree show that it was withdrawn at the instance of the pleader of the decree-holder, and that no sanction was given to its withdrawal with liberty to present a fresh application, any subsequent application made by that decree-holder for execution is prohibited by sec. 373 read with sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code. But where a Court of its own motion, and without being moved either by the decree-holder or by his pleader, takes upon itself to strike off an application for execution for the mere purpose of clearing its file, that is not a proceeding under any provision of the Code which could bar a decree-holder from making a fresh application for execution. A first application for execution of a decree was ordered by the Court to be struck off for want of prosecution, and upon the statement of the decree-holder's pleader that at present the case may be struck off". No permission was given to the decree-holder to withdraw the application with leave to take fresh proceedings. Held that a subsequent application for execution of the decree was barred by sec. 373 read with sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code. Sarju Prasad v. Sita Ram explained and followed. Ram Rup v. Lalji, Mahtab Kuar v. Sham Sundar Lal and Hira Singh v. Joti Prasad distinguished. Observations as to the necessity of conducting the proceedings in execution of decree with as much care and regularity as proceedings in suits. Under sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code, the provisions relating to proceedings in suits are to be followed and adopted in execution proceedings, so far as they may be fairly and properly applicable thereto.—12 Al. 179.

Where a judgment-debtor, being entitled and having an opportunity to plead sec. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure as a bar to execution of the decree against him neglects to do so, and the application in respect of which such objection might have been taken is entertained by the Court and orders passed thereon, the principle of res-judicata will apply to such proceedings, and the judgment-debtor cannot at a subsequent stage of the same execution proceedings object that such previous application for execution ought, in fact, to have been held to be barred by the operation of sec. 373 abovementioned.—13 Al. 564.

Sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code makes sec. 373 applicable to proceedings in execution of decree. The words "suit" and "appeal" in sec. 647 apply to suits and appeals in the strict sense of those terms, and were not intended to cover proceedings for the enforcement of rights decreed in a suit or appeal. An application for execution of decree by arrest of the judgment-debtor was ordered by the Court to be struck off, upon the statement of the decree-holder's pleader that the judgment-debtor was in hiding, and that the decree-holder did not desire to prosecute the application further. At that time an order for a warrant of arrest had been issued subject to the payment of fees, but those fees had not been paid nor had the diet money been deposited, and no steps were taken to proceed with the application. No permission was given to the decree-holder to withdraw the application with leave to take fresh proceedings. Held by the Full Bench that a subsequent application for execution of the decree was barred by sec. 373 read with sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code. Sarju Prasad v. Sita Ram and Fakir-ullah v. Thakur Prasad approved and followed. Bijai Singh v. Haiyat Begum distinguished.—12 Al. 392.

In a suit brought in a District Munsif's Court to declare certain land liable to be sold in execution of a decree for more than Rs. 2,500, the defendants pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction. The Munsif allowed the plaintiff to amend the plaint by stating that he abandoned his claim to execute the decree against the land for more than Rs. 2,500. On appeal, the District Judge held that the plaint could not be amended after the first hearing. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the claim was not one which could be amended so as to bring the suit within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the District Munsif.—10 Madr. 152.

A decree-holder having applied for execution of his decree, notice issued to the judgment-debtors, and their property was attached, but the applicant failed to pay the process fees, and the application was struck off, and no leave to make a fresh application was obtained under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 373 :—Held, that the decree-holder was entitled to apply again for execution of his decree.—15 Madr. 240.

The plea that the plaintiff had improperly been permitted to withdraw from a former suit with liberty to bring the present one, which had not been taken in the lower Courts, and was not taken in the memorandum of second appeal, was not permitted to be urged, at the hearing of the second appeal.—3 Al. 528.

The Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) does not allow of a plaint or memorandum of appeal being returned to the plaintiff or appellant after a case has been heard on its merits, and just as the plaintiff or appellant discovers that the Court is about to pronounce an adverse decision. There is no provision in the Code for the return of a plaint to a plaintiff after it has been admitted, and the Court-fee stamps thereon cancelled. Even if the Code allowed the High Court to return a plaint after the Court-fee stamps have been cancelled, the plaint could not be again legally presented in any Court without new stamps being affixed to it. The Executive Government alone have power to remit Court-fees, and no Court or Judge has legal authority to admit a plaint which bears only cancelled stamps, or to direct a subordinate Court to admit such a document.—7 Bom. 487.

The plaintiffs, obtained a decree on 12th November, 1886, allowing them to redeem on payment of Rs. 168 8 0 within six months. In default of payment within the prescribed time they were to stand for ever foreclosed. Against this decree the defendant appealed to the High Court. On the 10th September, 1888, the High Court passed an order allowing the defendant to withdraw the appeal. On the 17th December, 1888, plaintiffs applied for execution of the decree of the 12th November, 1886. The lower Court, regarding the withdrawal of the second appeal as practically a confirmation of the decree of the 12th November, 1886, computed the six months allowed for redemption from the date of the order of withdrawal (10th September, 1888) and granted the plaintiff's application. On appeal to the High Court, held, reversing the lower Court, that the application was time barred and that the plaintiff was foreclosed. The time allowed for redemption was to be computed, not from the date of the High Court's order permitting the withdrawal of the appeal, but from the date of the decree appealed from (i. e., 12th November, 1886). The order of withdrawal was not a decree. The only decree which could be executed was that of the 12th November 1886. The redemption money not having been paid within six months from that date, the plaintiffs were foreclosed. The Court could not, in execution proceedings, enlarge the time fixed for redemption. Mahant Ishwargar v. Chudasama Manabhai (I. L. R., 13 Bom. 106) followed. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—It was open to the plaintiffs to apply, if so advised, to the High Court for a review of the order of withdrawal of the 10th September, 1888, with a view to the enlargement of the time of redemption as a condition which might equitably have been permitted when the defendant was allowed to withdraw the second appeal.—15 Bom. 370.

When a plaintiff sues to recover possession of property on the allegation that he had purchased it with his own money, and the suit is dismissed in the Court of first instance, the Court of Appeal is not justified in giving the plaintiff a decree for a portion of the property, on the ground that the whole was the property of a joint Hindu family in which the plaintiff was a co-sharer. A claim to attached property made under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 246, was dismissed, and the claimant, in the year 1875, instituted a regular suit against the decree-holder under the provisions of that section. The decree holder then released the property from attachment, and the plaintiff withdrew his suit. The same property was afterwards, in the year 1878, attached again, and sold in execution of the same decree. Held that a subsequent suit for possession of the property against the purchaser at the execution-sale was not barred under sec. 97 of Act VIII of 1859. Eshen Chunder Singh v. Shama Churn Bhutto (11 Moore's I. A. 7) cited.—8 Cal. 871.

Sec. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to applications for execution of decree. Tarachand Magraj r. Kashi Nath Trimbak, I. L. R., 10 Bom., 62, followed. Radha Charan v. Man Singh, I. L. R., 12 All., 392, dissented from.—18 Cal. 462.

See I. L. R., 18 Cal. 515, 10 Madr. 160, and 5 Al. 406, noted under sec. 43; 15 Bom. 160, noted under sec. 97; 6 Al. 211, noted under sec. 2; 10 Al. 71, noted under Art. 179, Sch. II. of Act XV of 1877.

374. In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding section, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been brought.

Limitation-law not affected by first suits.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law seeks to set aside his father's alienations of ancestral property, if the alienees are purchasers at Court sales held in execution of decrees against the father, it is not enough for him to show that the debts, for which the decrees were passed, were contracted by the father for immoral purposes; it must also be shown that the auction-purchasers had notice that the debts were so contracted. The points to be determined in such cases are: (1) What was the interest that was bargained for and paid for by the purchaser? Was it the father's interest only, or was it the interest of the entire family? (2) Were the debts, for which the decrees were obtained under which the property was sold, contracted for immoral purposes? and (3) had the purchaser notice that the debts were so contracted? The plaintiff sued in 1883 for partition of ancestral property consisting (inter alia) of certain thikans which had been sold in execution of decrees passed against his father. The plaintiff, though an adult at the time, was not a party to the suits in which the decrees were passed against the father, nor to the execution-proceedings. In the certificates of sales granted to the different purchasers, the property sold was described as being a four-anna share, which would be equal to the shares of the father and the son together, but this description was qualified by the statement that "the right, title, and interest in the above mentioned property of the said Ravji (i. e., the father) was sold." There was nothing to show that the purchasers bargained for and paid for the entire family estate. Moreover, the plaintiff's possession and enjoyment of the thikans in question was never disturbed, though the sharers had each a separate possession of distinct portions of the ancestral property. Held that under the circumstances the father's interest alone passed to the auction-purchasers. Held further that the plaintiff's claim with regard to eight other thikans in dispute was time-barred. On the sale of those thikans in execution of decrees against his father, the plaintiff intervened, and obstructed the auction-purchasers in obtaining possession. His obstruction was, however, removed by an order of the Court, dated 23rd October 1873. The present suit, which was filed in 1883, not having been brought within one year from the date of that order, as required by the law then in force, the claim was clearly time-barred. The plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the time taken up in prosecuting a former suit, which was filed up in 1872, and disposed of in 1883; as that suit did not fail for want of jurisdiction or any defect of a like nature such as is contemplated by sec. 14 of the Limitation Act, XV. of 1877, but was withdrawn by the plaintiff himself for want of parties, with liberty to bring a fresh suit. Sec. 374 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882), therefore, applied to the present case.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 625.

The rule laid down in sec. 374 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877), that, where a suit is withdrawn with leave to bring a fresh suit, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been brought, applies to applications for execution; and, therefore, in counting the time of three years prescribed by the Limitation Act XV of 1877, sch. ii. art. 179, cl. 4, an application allowed to be withdrawn must be discarded as if it had never been presented. The bar created by sec. 374 of the Code of Civil Procedure is, in such a case, not removed by sec. 14 of the Limitation Act as causes for which the withdrawal of a suit or application may be permitted, are not causes "of a like nature" with defect of jurisdiction.—6 Bom 681.

See I. L. R., 10 Al. 71, noted under Art. 179, Sch. II of Act XV of 1877; 18 Cal. 515, noted under sec. 43.

375. If a suit be adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or if the defendant satisfy the plaintiff in respect to the whole or any part of the matter of the suit, such agreement, compromise, or satisfaction, shall be recorded, and the Court shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit, and such decree shall be final, so far as relates to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement, compromise, or satisfaction.

Compromise of suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

On the day fixed for the hearing of a suit in a Court of Small Causes, the plaintiff's vakil appeared, and stated on behalf of his client that the defendant had satisfied him in respect of the matter of the suit, which he prayed might be dismissed. The defendant did not appear. Held that the Judge was right in dismissing the suit, but that he should have recorded an order under the first provision in sec. 98 of Act VIII. of 1859. Held also that, in such a case, when the plaintiff applies for a return of a stamp-duty, he must strictly bring himself within the subsequent part of the same section as modified by sec. 26 of Act X of 1862.—1 M. H. C. R., 127.

After service of the summons, and on the day the defendant was required to appear, the parties filed in Court deeds containing terms of compromise. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a return of the entire amount of the stamp-duty, there having been no settlement of issues—Marshall's Rep., 274 ; 2 Hay's Rep., 213.

According to the practice of the High Court, a consent decree upon a compromise will not be granted, unless the suit be entered in the cause list of the Court.—5 C. L. R., 464.

A sum of money having been deposited in Court under Transfer of Property Act, sec. 83, by a vendee of the mortgagor, the mortgagee refused to accept it in discharge of his mortgage except on the terms that the depositor should convey to him part of the mortgage premises, which he consented to do. This agreement was not communicated to the Court and the depositor refused to carry it out when the mortgagee had withdrawn the money as above:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to a decree for specific performance of the agreement to convey.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 316.

Under section 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) an application to record an agreement adjusting a suit may be made, although, at the time of such application, one of the parties either denies that it was made, or wishes to withdraw from it, or otherwise objects to its enforcement. The Court, being already seized of the suit which is adjusted, the application to record the alleged agreement is a proceeding in that suit, and the Court, in connection with that proceeding, necessarily has all the powers and has thrown upon it all the duties which appertain to it in regard to any other questions arising in any suit upon its file—Ruttonsey Lalji v. Pooribai (I. L. R., 7 Bom., 304) approved and followed ; Hara Sundari Debi v. Kumar Dukhinessur (I. L. R., 11 Cal., 250) dissented from.—16 Bom. 202.

By an agreement made in writing before the hearing, the parties to a suit entered into a compromise by which the plaintiff agreed, for consideration, to withdraw the suit. When the case came on for hearing, plaintiff refused to fulfil his promise. The defendant having produced the agreement, the Munsif held that it must be enforced, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge held that the agreement could not be treated as a compromise, as the plaintiff did not consent, and remanded the suit. Held that the agreement could be enforced. Ruttensey Lalji v. Pooribai (I. L. R., 7 Bom. 304) approved.—8 Madr. 482.

After suit filed by the plaintiff against several defendants, one of whom was an infant, a petition of compromise, entered into between the adult parties, was filed in Court. The petition stated the terms of arrangement, and also that an application would be made by the guardian of the minor praying the Court to allow the compromise to be carried out on his behalf. Ten days after the petition of compromise was filed, the first defendant and the plaintiff presented petitions to the Court withdrawing from the compromise, and praying that the suit should proceed. The second defendant presented a petition praying that the compromise should be recorded, and a decree passed according to its terms. The Court made a decree in accordance with the prayer of the second defendant's petition. The first defendant appealed. Held, that an appeal lay, and that the lower Court was wrong in enforcing the compromise at the instance of the second defendant.

Semble, that sec. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely covers cases in which all parties consent to have the terms entered into carried out, and judgment entered up. Ruttonsey Lalji v. Pooribai, (I. L. R., 7 Bom. 340) questioned.—11 Cal. 250.

The question in a suit was whether the purchase money for a house, which had been paid by the defendant, had been paid out of his own funds or out of monies belonging to the plaintiff. A witness for the defence having made statements apparently favourable to the plaintiff's case, the pleaders for both parties signed and presented to the Court a petition that if upon a particular bond in the witness' possession it should be stated that the money was received through the defendant, the Court should decree the suit, otherwise the suit should be dismissed. Held that this arrangement was not an adjustment or compromise of the suit within the meaning of sec. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to determine the jurisdiction of the Court and necessitate its passing a decree according to the arrangement. The Oaths Act (X of 1873) does not constrain a Court to pass a decision in favour of a particular party. If a party to a suit says he will be bound by the oath of a particular person, sec. 11 of the Act only means that pro tanto will be bound, i. e., so far as the matter of that evidence is concerned, and that evidence will be conclusive as to its truth as against him throughout the whole of the litigation. But it in no way compels the Court trying the case to accept it as conclusive. Vasudeva Shanbog v. Naraina Pai (1) approved.—14 Al. 141.

The parties to an appeal, in which an issue had been remitted for trial to the Lower Court, having presented a petition to the Lower Court, stating that the suit had been compromised and the terms of the compromise, requested the Lower Court to move the Appellate Court to pass a decree in accordance with such terms. Before a decree was passed, one of the parties objected to the compromise being accepted :—Held, that it was open to the Court, such objection notwithstanding, to pass a decree in accordance with the agreement—Ruttonsey Lalji v. Pooribai (I. L. R., 7 C., 304) and Karuppan v. Ramasami (I. L. R., 8 M. 482) followed ; Hara Sundari Debi v. Kumar Dukhinessur Malia (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 250) observed upon. An oral agreement by the parties to a suit that a decree be passed creating a charge on immoveable property above Rs. 100 in value, is not rendered inoperative by sec. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. The parties to an appeal applied to the Court to pass a decree in accordance with the terms of a compromise, and, before decree was passed, one of the parties objected to such decree being passed on the ground that certain condition precedent to be performed by the other party had not been performed. The Court (this being denied by the other party) called for affidavits in proof of the terms of the agreement of compromise, and, these being found not to be sufficiently conclusive, directed the Lower Court to take evidence on the point.—9 Madr. 103.

The only compromise with a Court can in any case be bound under sec. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure to enforce, is one which adjusts, wholly or in part, the suit ; matters going beyond the suit cannot, if included in a compromise, be so enforced. A Court refusing to grant a decree on a compromise going beyond the suit, cannot however grant a decree modifying the terms of the proposed compromise, but must leave the parties to proceed with the suit as they may be advised. Fajaleh Miah v. Kamaruddin Bhuya.—13 Cal. 170.

After the hearing of the suit had begun, the plaintiffs and defendants came to an agreement, by which they settled all the matters in dispute between them in the suit. The agreement was in writing, and dealt in one clause with the dispute, the subject-matter of the suit, and in a second clause with another dispute of long standing between the parties, with which the suit had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement, the defendants took out a rule nisi, calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court, and why the Court should not pass a decree in accordance therewith, under the provisions of sec. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The rule was argued on affidavits on either side, the plaintiffs objecting that the above section did not apply to such a case as this, and that, in any case, the matter could not be decided on affidavits, but evidence must be gone into. Held that sec. 375 gave the Court the power to deal with such a case as this in the manner required, and that this was a proper case in which to exercise such a power; and that, in the circumstances of this case, no definite procedure having been enjoined by the Code, the matter might properly be decided on affidavits. Rule made absolute accordingly.—7 Bom. 304

See I. L. R., 11 Al. 228, noted under sec. 257A.

Applications for execution of decrees not affected.

“375A. Nothing in this Chapter shall apply to any application or other proceeding in any suit subsequent to the decree.

“Explanation.—An application to the Appellate Court pending an appeal is not an application subsequent to the decree appealed from within the meaning of this section.”*

CHAPTER XXIII. OF PAYMENT INTO COURT.

376. The defendant in any suit to recover a debt or damages may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the claim.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

377. Notice in writing of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application.

378. No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited be in full of the claim or fall short thereof.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

* This section has been added by Act VI of 1892.

379. If the plaintiff accept such amount only as satisfaction in part of his claim, he may prosecute his suit for the balance; and, if the Court decides that the deposit by the defendant was a full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit incurred after the deposit, and the costs incurred previous thereto, so far as they were caused by excess in the plaintiff's claim.

If the plaintiff accept such amount as satisfaction in full of his claim, he shall present to the Court a statement to that effect, and such statement shall be filed, and the Court shall pass judgment accordingly, and, in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation.

Illustrations.

(a) A owes B Rupees 100. B sues A for the amount, having made no demand for payment, and having no reason to believe that the delay caused by making a demand would place him at a disadvantage. On the plaint being filed, A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim, but the Court should not allow him any costs, the litigation being presumably groundless on his part.

(b.) B sues A under the circumstances mentioned in illustration. (a). On the plaint being filed, A disputes the claim. Afterwards A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should also give B his costs of suit, A's conduct having shown that the litigation was necessary.

(c.) A owes B Rupees 100, and is willing to pay him that sum without suit. B claims Rupees 150, and sues A for that amount. On the plaint being filed, A pays Rupees 100 into Court, and disputes only his liability to pay the remaining Rupees 50. B accepts the Rupees 100 in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XXIV.

OF REQUIRING SECURITY FOR COSTS.

380. If, at the institution or at any subsequent stage of a suit, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are, residing out of British India, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiffs does, possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India independent of the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time to be fixed by the order, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant.

On the application of any defendant in a suit for money in which the plaintiff is a woman, the Court may at any stage of the suit make a like order if it is satisfied that such plaintiff does not possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India independent of the property in suit.*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A leasehold is immoveable property within sec. 34 of Act VIII. of 1859.—7 B. L. R., App. 60.

In a suit for the administration of the estate of a deceased Hindu, the defendants admitted that the plaintiffs had an interest in the property, but disputed the extent of such interest. The defendants applied that the plaintiffs be directed to furnish security for costs under sec. 34 of Act VIII. of 1859. Held that the section did not apply.—10 B. L. R., App. 25.

Held, that a plaintiff, being resident in Wadhwan, in Kathiwar, and possessed of immoveable property in the cantonment there, could not be required to give security for costs under sec. 380 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), the cantonment of Wadhwan being within the limits of British India.—I. L. R., 9 Bom. 244.

A suit to recover certain specified articles and money alleged to have been wrongfully seized and taken possession of by the defendant, or to recover the value thereof, is a suit for money within the terms of the second paragraph of sec. 380 of the Civil Procedure Code, the term "suit for money" as there used being wider than a suit for debts. Circumstances under which the Court will order security for costs to be given by a female plaintiff in such a suit.—17 Cal. 610.

The meaning to be given to the word "residence" in legislative enactments depends upon the intention of the Legislature in framing the particular provision in which the word is used. The 'residence' intended in sec. 380, Act X of 1877, is residence under such circumstances as will afford a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will be forthcoming when the suit is decided.—3 Bom. 227.

381. In the event of such security not being furnished

Effect of failure to furnish security. within the time so fixed, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless the plaintiff or plaintiffs be permitted to withdraw therefrom under the provisions of section 373,

"or show good cause why such time should be extended in which case the Court may extend it.

"Where a suit is dismissed under this section, the plaintiff may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from furnishing the security within the time allowed, the Court shall set aside the dismissal upon such terms as to security, costs, or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

* This clause has been added by the Debtors Act (VI of 1888), sec. 5.

“The dismissal shall not be set aside unless the plaintiff has served the defendant with notice in writing of his application.

“The provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, with respect to an application under sec. 103, and of this Code with respect to an appeal from an order rejecting such an application, shall apply, so far as they can be made applicable, to an application under this section for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit, and to an appeal from an order rejecting such an application, respectively.”*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 8 Al. 108, noted under sec. 2.

382. Whoever leaves British India under such circumstances as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of British India within the meaning of section 380.

—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF COMMISSIONS.

A.—Commissions to examine Witnesses.

383. Any Court may, in any suit, issue a commission for the examination, on interrogatories or otherwise, of persons resident within the local limits of its jurisdiction, who are exempted under this Code from attending the Court, or who are, from sickness or infirmity, unable to attend it.

Cases in which Court may issue commission to examine witness.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

384. Such order may be made by the Court either of its own motion, or on the application, supported by affidavit or otherwise, of any party to the suit, or of the witness to be examined.

Order for commission.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

* The clauses quoted have been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 33.

385. The commission for the examination of a person who resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same may be issued to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute the same.

When witness resides within Court's jurisdiction.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

386. Any Court may, in any suit, issue a commission for the examination of—

Persons for whose examination commission may issue.

(a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction ;

(b) persons who are about to leave such limits before the date on which they are required to be examined in Court ; and

(c) civil and military officers of Government, who cannot, in the opinion of the Judge, attend the Court without detriment to the public service.

Such commission may be issued to any Court, not being a High Court or the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, “ or to any pleader or other person whom the Court issuing the commission may, subject to any rules of the High Court in this behalf, thinks fit to appoint.”*

The Court, on issuing any commission under this section, shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The issue of a commission for the examination of an absent witness, without notice to the opposite party, even if not illegal, is objectionable.—3 W. R., 147.

Subsequently to the institution of the plaintiffs' suit, one of the defendants died, and his son, as his legal representative, was made a defendant in his stead. The new defendant (inter alia) objected that his father had been dead more than six months before the application of the plaintiffs to make him a defendant, and that, therefore, the suit should abate, as provided by the last clause of sec. 368 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877 (introduced by the amending Act, XII of 1879), and art. 171B of the Limitation Act, XV of 1877, which prescribes a period of sixty days within which an application should be made to have the representative of a deceased defendant made a defendant to a suit. When the amending Act, XII of 1879, was passed—that is, on the 29th of July, 1879,—the original defendant had been dead more than six months ; but the plaintiff made an application to have the representative of the deceased defendant made a defendant before the publication of the Act in the Local Gazette. Held that the provisions of art. 171B of the Limitation Act should not be given retrospective effect, and that the plaintiff's application was not time-barred. The general rule as laid down in Reg. v. Dorabji (11 Bom. H. C. R., 117)—that "an Act of limitation, being a law of procedure, governs all proceedings, to which its terms are applicable, from the moment of its enactment, except so far as its operation is expressly excluded or postponed"—admits of the qualification that, when the retrospective application of a statute of limitation would destroy vested rights, or inflict such hardship or injustice as could not have been within the contemplation of the Legislature, then the statute is not, any more than any other law, to be construed retrospectively. —I. L. R., 6 Bom. 26.

*The words quoted have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 34, for the words, “ or to any pleader of a High Court whom the Court issuing the commission thinks fit to appoint,” as originally enacted.

387. When any Court to which application is made for the issue of a commission for the examination of a person residing at any place not within British India is satisfied that his evidence is necessary, the Court may issue such commission.

Commission to examine witness not within British India.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Kingdom of Ava is not the territory of a Native Prince or State in alliance with the British Government within the meaning of sec. 177 of Act VIII. of 1859. A commission for the examination of a witness at Mandalay can only issue from the High Court. The consent of parties is not requisite to the admissibility of evidence taken under such commission, if the examination have been upon oath or affirmation.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 73; 10 W. R., 385.

Court to examine witness pursuant to commission.

388. Every Court receiving a Commission for the examination of any person shall examine him pursuant thereto.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

389. After the commission has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the evidence taken under it, to the Court out of which it issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case the commission shall be returned in terms of such order; and the commission and the return thereto, and the evidence taken under it, shall (subject to the provisions of the next following section) form part of the record of the suit.

Return of commission with depositions of witnesses.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A de bene esse examination of a witness about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court must be taken by the Court, unless the parties consent to the evidence being taken under a commission.—5 B. L. R., 252.

The evidence of a defendant, taken under a commission, may be read on behalf of the plaintiff, without the deposition being put in as part of his case. Having been put in, the deposition, under sec. 179, became part of the record.—8 B. L. R., App. 102.

390. Evidence taken under a commission shall not be read as evidence in the suit without the consent of the party against whom the same is offered, unless

When depositions may be read in evidence.

(a) the person who gave the evidence is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead, or unable, from sickness or infirmity, to attend to be personally examined, or exempted from personal appearance in Court, or

(b) the Court, in its discretion, dispenses with the proof of any of the circumstances mentioned in the last preceding clause, and authorizes the evidence of any person being read as evidence in the suit, notwithstanding proof that the cause for taking such evidence by commission has ceased at the time of reading the same.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Documents attached to the return of a commission, and identified with the documents referred to in the evidence, may be read at the hearing of the suit in which the commission issued, unless they have been objected to on being tendered in evidence before the commission. Objections to the admissibility of such documents cannot be taken at the hearing of the suit.—6 C. L. R., 109.

Provisions as to execution and return of commissions to apply to commissions issued by foreign Courts.

391. The provisions hereinbefore contained as to the execution and return of commissions shall apply to commissions issued by

(a) Courts situate beyond the limits of British India and established by the authority of Her Majesty or of the Governor-General in Council, or

(b) Courts situate in any part of the British Empire other than British India, or

(c) Courts of any foreign country for the time being in alliance with Her Majesty.

B.—Commissions for local Investigations.

392. In any suit or proceeding in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute, or of ascertaining the market-value of any property, or the amount of any mesne-profits or damages or annual nett-profits, and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the judge in person, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit, directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court:

Commission to make local investigations.

Provided that, when the Local Government has made rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such rules.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Local investigations are had recours to, not so much for the purpose of collecting evidence which could be taken in Court, as to obtain evidence which from its peculiar nature can only be obtained on the spot.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 196.

It was never intended that Revenue Courts should delegate their functions entirely to subordinate officers. The law contemplates a careful investigation and trial in the Revenue Court. Counting the heads of the witnesses without making any attempt to weigh their evidence, or ascertain their credibility, is not such a careful investigation.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 196.

An application under sec. 180, Act VIII. of 1859, should be made at the hearing of the suit, and not previously.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 243.

Evidence taken by an amin is not admissible.—19 W. R., 14.

Reasonable notice must be given of the time fixed for hearing objections to an amin's report.—21 W. R., 2.

The deputation of an amin to ascertain the respective liability of several judgment-creditors is not an improper course for a Court to pursue, and at all events is not a ground for interfering in special appeal with the concurrent judgment of two Courts.—22 W. R., 183.

When an enquiry has been made by a commissioner under the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court to which it is reported ought not, unless it annuls the proceedings of the first enquiry, to order another on the same matter.—23 W. R., 93.

Held that a local inquiry ought not to have been ordered in this case, where the question to be decided was one of disputed boundary, which turned chiefly on possession before the date of suit, and that the Subordinate Judge would have been justified in disregarding the amin's report, and trying the appeal on the recorded evidence.—17 W. R., 472. See 4 B. L. R., App. 33; S. C., 17 W. R., 473 note.

In a suit for land where the question was as to whether the land lay within the boundaries of the plaintiff's or the defendant's land, the Court of first instance suggested to the parties that the proper mode of determining the case was in the first instance to hold a local investigation, and that such local investigation should be applied for by one or other of the parties. Both parties resolutely refused to make such application and the Court thereupon dealt with the case upon the materials before it, and passed a decree. Upon appeal the lower Appellate Court remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost of the plaintiff in the first instance. Held, that inasmuch as neither of the parties desired to have a local investigation, the Court was wrong in remanding the case, and that it was bound to decide it upon the evidence before it.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 45.

393. The Commissioner, after such local inspection as he deems necessary, and after reducing to writing the evidence taken by him, shall return such evidence together with his report in writing, signed with his name, to the Court.

The report of the Commissioner and the evidence taken by him (but not the evidence without the report) shall be evidence in the suit, and shall form part of the record; but the Court, or, with the permission of the Court, any of the parties to the suit, may examine the Commissioner personally in open Court touching any of the matters referred to him or mentioned in his report, or as to the manner in which he has made the investigation.

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

C.—Commissions to examine Accounts.

394. In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit, directing him to make such examination or adjustment.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a Commissioner, appointed under sec. 181 of Act VIII. of 1859 to investigate the state of accounts between a debtor and a creditor, made his report, on which the judgment appealed against was founded, the High Court, on a regular appeal, refused to take a fresh account.—1 M. H. C. R., 1.

The Appellate Court will not enter into the details of the account of a Commissioner appointed under sec. 181 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A party cannot be heard in the Appellate Court upon items to which he took no objection in the Court below. But where there has been error in the principal upon which such account has been taken, the Appellate Court will correct such error if excepted to in the Court below. Regular Appeal No. 54 of 1861 (1 Madr. 1) concurred in.—1 M. H. C. R., 418.

An error in the principle on which an account is taken is not the only ground on which a Court should inquire into the correctness of the report of a Commissioner appointed under sec. 181 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is competent to an Appellate Court, under the powers conferred by sec. 37 of Act XXIII. of 1861, to examine the accounts, even if no exception has been taken to them in the Court appointing the Commissioner. Madras rulings dissented from.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 149.

Separate property may be acquired by a member of an undivided family by gift, and the character of impartibility attaches to gifts made by a father to his unseparated sons. What is acquired by the father's favour will subsequently be declared exempt from partition. Separate property may be acquired by the exertions of a member of the family without detriment to the family funds. It may be acquired with money borrowed on the sole credit of the borrower, and it may be acquired by the mutual agreement of the members of the family. It is not necessary for the preservation of the joint nature of family property that the members of the family should live in commensality; they may dwell and mess apart, and yet remain joint in property. Arrangements relating to the enjoyment of joint family property, and acknowledgments of the right of the several members of the family to acquire separate property made by the adult members of the family, are to be held binding on the minor members of the family, if they are not detrimental to their interest; and such arrangements, consented to by a father, should be held binding on his minor child. The several members of a family may agree to take loans from the common fund, and treat the profits on such loans as the separate property of the several members by whom the loans have been respectively taken.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 217.

The 180th section of the Civil Procedure Code, under which commissions to examine account-books are issued, contains no direction that the Commissioners are to be sworn or affirmed.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 217.

Where a Commissioner was appointed by a Court under sec. 180 of Act VIII of 1859 to take accounts at the request of the plaintiffs, and his costs were not prepaid under sec. 182, and the defendant was by the decree ordered to pay the costs of the suit, but the costs of the Commissioner were not entered in the decree: Held in a suit by the Commissioner against the plaintiffs for remuneration for his labour that the plaintiffs were liable.—I. L. R., 4 Madr. 399.

In a suit for an account against an agent, the plaint stated that the defendant had not submitted proper accounts of his agency, and prayed that the defendant might be ordered to produce certain papers, and that, on failure to submit the accounts, he might be decreed to pay the plaintiff Rs. 1,200 by way of damages. The plaint also alleged that, in consequence of the defendant's negligence and mismanagement, the plaintiff believed that he had sustained a loss of Rs. 5,000, and prayed for a decree for this sum. Held that no decree could be made for the sums mentioned, or any other sum, until an account had been taken, and the amount due from the defendant ascertained. Per FIELD, J.—It is the duty of an agent to render proper account to his employer irrespective of any contract to that effect. And he does not discharge that duty by merely delivering to his employer a set of written accounts without attending to explain them, and produce the vouchers by which the items of disbursements are supported. Method to be followed on taking accounts in the mufassal stated. If the taking of accounts by the Judge would occasion a waste of public time, he should resort to the provisions of secs. 394 and 395 of the Civil Procedure Code, and furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as may appear necessary. In order to enable an agent to prepare accounts to be furnished to his principal, he should be allowed to have reasonable access, at proper times and in the presence of responsible persons, to such books and papers in the principal's possession as may be necessary for the preparation of the accounts.—6 Cal. 754.

See I. L. R., 3 Madr. 259, noted under sec. 158; 3 Bom. 161, noted under sec. 3.

Court to give Commissioner necessary instructions.

395. The Court shall furnish Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as appear necessary, and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the enquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his examination.

The proceedings of the Commissioner shall be received in evidence in the suit, unless the Court has reason to be dissatisfied with them, in which case the Court shall direct such further inquiry as is requisite.

Court to receive Commissioner's proceedings or direct further inquiry.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 654, noted under sec. 250 ; 6 Cal. 754, noted under sec. 394.

D.—Commission to make Partition.

396. In any suit in which the partition of immoveable property not paying revenue to Government appears to the Court to be necessary, the Court, after ascertaining the several parties interested in such property and their several rights therein, may issue a commission to such persons as it thinks fit to make a partition according to such rights.

The Commissioners shall ascertain and inspect the property, and shall divide the same into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission issues, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares.

The Commissioners shall then prepare and sign a report, or (if they cannot agree) separate reports, appointing the share of each party, and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds. Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission, and transmitted to the Court ; and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall either quash the same and issue a new commission, or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith.

Procedure of Commissioners.

to make partition of non-revenue-paying immoveable property.

Notes.

In a suit for partition, the Subordinate Judge appointed an amin under sec. 396 of the Civil Procedure Code to effect a partition. The amin made his report, which was objected to on the merits by the defendant, but ultimately the report was confirmed, the defendant having acquiesced in the proceedings. On appeal to the District Judge, the defendant took an objection that the appointment of the amin was irregular. Held that, having acquiesced in the proceedings so far, it was too late for the defendant to take the objection. Per PONTIFEX, J. (FIELD, J., doubting).—In a suit for partition, it is competent to the Court in its preliminary decree, to appoint any one person whom it thinks fit to be a Commissioner to make the partition under sec. 396 of the Civil Procedure Code. The section uses the word 'Commissioner,' but it is not necessary for the purposes of partition that there should be more than one Commissioner, and by force of the General Clauses Act, the word 'Commissioners,' may be read in the singular number. The intention of sec. 396 is that, upon the first hearing of a suit, the Court shall determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to a partition, and shall ascertain who the several persons entitled to the property are, and shall direct by a preliminary decree or order that Commissioners be appointed to make the partition.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 318.

Where in a suit for partition possession was sought, of a definite share of a property consisting of a number of houses, held that the principle in such cases is that, if a property can be partitioned without destroying the intrinsic value of the whole property or of the shares, such partition ought to be made; but where partition cannot be made without destroying the intrinsic value of the property, then a money-compensation should be given.—10 Cal. 675.

See 7 Cal. 654, noted under sec. 250; 19 Cal. 463, noted under sec. 2.

E.—General Provisions.

397. Before issuing any commission under this chapter,
Expenses of commission to be paid into Court. the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed by the Court, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

398. Any Commissioner appointed under this chapter
Powers of Commissioners. may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,

(a) examine the parties themselves and any witness whom they or any of them may produce, and any other person whom the Commissioner thinks proper to call upon to give evidence in the matter referred to him;

(b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of enquiry;

(c) at any reasonable time enter upon or into any land or building mentioned in the order.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

399. The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance, and examination of witnesses, and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon, witnesses, shall apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this chapter, whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within, or by a Court situate beyond, the limits of British India.

For the purposes of this section, the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Court of Civil Judicature.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

400. Whenever a commission is issued under this chapter, the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders.

If the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed ex parte.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

PART III. OF SUITS IN PARTICULAR CASES.

CHAPTER XXVI.

SUITS BY PAUPERS.

Suits may be brought in forma pauperis.

401. Subject to the following rules, any suit may be brought by a pauper.

Explanation.—A person is a “pauper” when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A claim for fees would be looked upon as a public claim, and is not subject to the ordinary rules for limitation in execution of decrees under Act XIV of 1859.—2 B. L. R., App. 22; 8 M. H. C. R., 40; 22 W. R., 512.

A next friend, who is a pauper, can bring a suit on behalf of a pauper minor.—11 B. L. R., 373.

The Judge must himself examine.—1 Bom. H. C. R., 102.

Where the pauper is not exempted from appearing in Court, it is imperative that he should present his application in person.—4 Bom. H. C. R., 91.

When a pauper petition comes on for hearing under sec. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Judge has no power to inquire into any other circumstance than the pauperism of the petitioner.—5 Bom. H. C. R. (A. C.) 59.

The plaintiff applied by petition on 20th February 1873 to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut for leave to sue in forma pauperis. The petition contained a statement of the claim and such particulars as are required in a plaint, and a prayer that, as part of the immoveable property claimed was situated in the Punjab, the Subordinate Judge would seek the necessary sanction to give him jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge, considering that the suit should be instituted in the Delhi district, rejected the application. On 3rd March the plaintiff presented the petition to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, and was admitted by that officer to sue as a pauper. The Deputy Commissioner having applied for sanction to try the suit, the High Court, N.-W. Provinces, and the Chief Court of the Punjab, considered it advisable that the suit should be tried at Meerut, and on 10th June 1873, the Deputy Commissioner returned the petition for presentation in the proper Court in the N.-W. Provinces. On 19th July the plaintiff presented it to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut, who received and registered it as a plaint. On 10th November the defendants filed written statements, wherein they urged that the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis until he had proved his pauperism in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Upon this the Subordinate Judge threw out the suit, holding that he had no jurisdiction to admit it. Held that the Subordinate Judge, if he regarded as ineffectual the order of the Deputy Commissioner admitting plaintiff to sue as a pauper, should himself have entered into an inquiry into the plaintiff's pauperism, and not have thrown out the suit. Held also that the provisions of sec. 310 of Act VIII. of 1859 were not applicable to the order of the Subordinate Judge, refusing to allow the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, as he pronounced no opinion on the point. Held also, with reference to the question of limitation, that the time during which the suit was pending in the Delhi Court should be deducted in computing the period of limitation. Semble.—That the order admitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, which was made by the Delhi Court, became ineffectual when the plaint was returned by that Court, and that it became the duty of the Meerut Court, when the petition was again presented to it, to pass orders de novo on the subject.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 225.

Where no day was fixed, and the Judge, on default by non-appearance, struck off the application "for the present," it was held that, as there had been no refusal to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper, he might renew his application.—3 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 1.

Where a day was fixed, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 305, for receiving evidence of the pauperism of the plaintiff, the Court refused, under sec. 306, to entertain any objection of the defendant other than on the single question of the pauperism of the plaintiff.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 121.

An unsuccessful application of a wife to sue for dower in forma pauperis, though opposed by her husband in a counter-petition denying his liability, is not such a demand and refusal of the dower as to constitute a cause of action. The application merely expresses an intention to demand (if allowed to do so) in a particular way.—L. R., 2 Ind. App., 235.

Where a party successfully opposed an application to sue as a pauper in a Subordinate Judge's Court on the ground of over-valuation, it was held that he could not afterwards object to the Munsif's jurisdiction.—22 W. R., 120.

The Judge was held not to have been justified in finding on evidence other than that of the petitioner that the claim was barred by limitation.—25 W. R., 74.

On an application to sue in forma pauperis the Court is required to deal with the question of the applicant's pauperism with reference to the definition of that word as given in the explanation to sec. 401 of the Code, of Civil Procedure, and in deciding it to ascertain the exact property, its market value, and the title thereto, and then to deal with the case under sec. 407 of the Code, irrespective of any surmises as to the reason why the applicant has valued his claim at a high figure. All orders passed under sec. 407 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not excluded from the exercise of revisional powers of the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code, Chatterpal Singh v. Raja Ram (I. L. R., 7 Al. 661) notwithstanding. In the exercise of revisional powers it is not the duty of the High Court to enter into the merits of the evidence; it has only to see whether the requirements of the law have been duly and properly obeyed by the Court whose order is the subject of revision, and whether the irregularity as to failure or exercise of jurisdiction is such as to justify interference with the order.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 467.

The petitioners prayed to be allowed as paupers to sue the respondent for certain property specified in the schedule annexed to their petition. At the hearing of the petition under secs. 408 and 409 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882) the respondent appeared and deposited in Court some of the articles claimed by the petitioners, to which, he admitted, they were entitled. The value of the articles deposited was Rs. 100. The petitioners, acknowledged that the articles were their property, but declined to take possession of them:—Held that the petitioners were not paupers as defined by sec. 401, (Act XIV. of 1882), being possessed of property worth Rs. 100 other than the subject-matter of the suit, and that they could not, therefore, be allowed to sue as paupers. The inquiry into pauperism under secs. 408 and 409 takes place before any suit is in existence, for, until an application to sue as a pauper is granted, there is no plaint and, consequently, no suit (see sec. 410). Any property, therefore, found at such inquiry not be really in dispute cannot be regarded as part of the "subject-matter of the suit," although it may be entered in the particulars of the application for leave to sue as a pauper. The ground for excluding the "subject-matter of the suit" under sec. 401 is because such property is presumably out of the petitioner's reach, and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation. In the present case the articles deposited in Court were freely at the disposal of the petitioners, and could not, therefore, be excluded from consideration.—10 Bom. 207.

Where a suit was brought on behalf of a pauper minor by a next friend who was also a pauper, it was held that the failure of such suit was no ground for saddling the costs on the next friend.—25 W. R., 316.

Although Chapter XXIV. of the Civil Procedure Code only provides for suits to be brought by a pauper, the Court has power to allow a defendant to defend in forma pauperis.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 819; 6 C. L. R., 120.

Where the representative of a pauper applies to bring a suit in forma pauperis, there is no necessity for the Court to inquire whether such repre-representative is also a pauper, but if the Court, is satisfied that he is the legal representative, should allow him to carry on the suit.—3 W. R., 20.

The rule of English practice which prevents a minor from instituting a suit in forma pauperis through his next friend, unless he gives proof, not only that he is himself a pauper, but that the next friend is a pauper, and that he cannot get any substantial person to act as his next friend, is not to be found in, are deduced from the provisions of, the Civil Procedure Code.—3 Madr. 3.

The administrator of the estate of a deceased person may apply to sue in forma pauperis under the provisions of Chapter XXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.—7 Madr. 390.

402. No suit shall be brought by a pauper to recover compensation for loss of caste, libel, slander, abusive language, or assault.

What suits excepted.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

403. The application for permission to sue by a pauper shall be in writing, and shall contain the particulars required by section 50 in regard to complaints in suits: a schedule of any moveable or immovable property belonging to the petitioner, with the estimated value thereof, shall be annexed thereto; and it shall be signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the signing and verification of complaints.

Application to be in writing.
Contents of application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the rejection of an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis for want of merits when the applicant is found to be a pauper and his allegations disclose a right to sue. When an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is made, the Court should not go into evidence as to the merits of the claim.—I. L. R., 4 Madr. 323.

404. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 36, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court under section 640 or section 641, in which case the application may be presented by a duly authorized agent, who can answer all material questions relating to the application, and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person.

Presentation of applica-

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The mere fact that several persons jointly present an application for permission to sue as paupers does not authorize the Court to entertain it on behalf of applicants who do not appear in person.—I. L. R., 10 Madr. 193.

Where the pauper is exempted from appearing in Court, it is imperative that he should present his application in person.—4 Bom. 91.

Where the pauper is exempted from appearing in Court under secs. 640 and 641, and the application is presented by a duly authorized agent, it is not necessary that such agent should also be a pauper.—3 W. R., 20. But such agent may be a pleader.—15 W. R., 198. And such pleader must have a special power-of-attorney, not an ordinary vakalatnama.—21 W. R., 308.

No judgment or order passed in a suit to which a minor subject to the provisions of Act XL of 1858 is a party will bind him on his attaining majority, unless he is represented in the suit by some person who has either taken out a certificate, or has obtained the permission of the Court to sue or defend on his behalf without a certificate. Permission granted to sue or defend on behalf of a minor under sec. 3 of Act XL of 1858 should be formally placed on the record. Chapter xxxi. of the Civil Procedure Code lays down the form in which a minor should appear as a party, and this form should be strictly followed.—5 Cal. 450.

405. If the application be not framed or presented in the manner prescribed by sections 403 and 404, the Court shall reject it.

Rejection of application.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

406. If the application be in proper form and duly presented, the Judge may, if he thinks fit, examine the petitioner, or his agent, when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant.

Examination of applicant.

When the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken under the provisions of this Code.

If presented by agent, Court may order applicant to be examined by commission.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 10 Madr. 193, noted under section 404.

Rejection of application.

407. If it appear to the Court—
(a) that the applicant is not a pauper, or
(b) that he has, within the two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or with a view to obtain the benefit of this chapter, or

(c) that his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court, or

(d) that he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter, the Court shall reject the application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff applied for leave to sue as a pauper. She stated as her cause of action that a young girl had been left in her charge, and had been maintained by her for a number of years; that in January 1888, arrangements had been made with a Bhatia to get this girl married, and that she (the plaintiff) was to receive Rs. 2,500 on the marriage; that the defendant had also agreed to pay her (the plaintiff) Rs. 2,000 if she would give the girl to him in marriage; that before the marriage ceremony could be performed, the defendant had induced the girl to quit the plaintiff's house for immoral purposes. She claimed Rs. 2,500 as damages, and prayed leave to sue as a pauper. Held that, the facts being clear, and the law evident, the case might be finally disposed of on the plaintiff's application to sue as a pauper. Held, also, that the alleged agreement on which the suit was brought was immoral and against public policy, and that the action was not maintainable.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 126.

Two persons, being about to sue to redeem a certain Jaghir village which they had mortgaged applied for permission to sue as paupers. It appeared that they had entered into an agreement with a vakil to pay him, as remuneration for his services as vakil in the case, a lump sum of Rs. 1,500 as soon as the case was decided. In default of payment the vakil was authorized to recover the money out of the revenue of the said village.—Held that such an agreement was within the scope of clause (d) of sec. 407 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and their application to sue as paupers were rejected.—9 Bom. 371.

Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper was rejected with reference to sec. 407 (c), on the ground that the claim was barred by limitation, and therefore the applicant had no right to sue, held by the Full Bench that the Court had acted within its powers, and that its jurisdiction not having been exercised illegally or with material irregularity, the High Court had no power of interference in revision under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) referred to.

The terms of sec. 407 (c) of the Code must not be read as limiting the Court's discretion to merely ascertaining whether the "right to sue" arose within its jurisdiction, but have a more extended meaning, namely that an applicant must make out that he has a good subsisting cause of action, capable of enforcement in Court, and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of Limitation or any other law.

Per MAHMOOD, J.—The word "case" as used in sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code should be understood in its broadest and most ordinary sense, including all adjudications which might constitute the subject of appeal subject to the rules governing the exercise of the appellate and revisional jurisdictions respectively; and it comprehends adjudications under sec. 407, which fall under the same general category of adjudications as the rejection of an ordinary plaint under sec. 53 or sec. 54. Phul Singh v. Jagan Nath, (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 39), Bhulneshir Dut v. Bidiadhis, (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 69), and Sital Sahu v. Bachu Ram, (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 92), referred to.

Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The provisions of sec. 407 must be interpreted strictly, inasmuch as they operate in derogation of the right possessed by every litigant to seek the aid of the Courts of justice; and an exercise of jurisdiction under that section, when such exercise of jurisdiction is open to the objection of illegality, or material irregularity, would form a proper subject of revision by the High Court. Har Prasad v. Jafar Ali (I. L. R., 7 Al. 345) and Ammal v. Nayudu (I. L. R., 4 Madr. 323) referred to.—7 Al. 661.

It is only the petitioner or his agent who is to be examined under this section, and not his witnesses.—25 W. R., 74.

See I. L. R., 4 Madr. 323, noted under sec. 403; 10 Al. 467, noted under section 401.

408. If the Court sees no reason to refuse the application on any of the grounds stated in section 407, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten day's previous notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government Pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

409. On the day so fixed, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may cross-examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of their evidence.

The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in section 407.

The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper.

Neither sec. 441 nor 442 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882) gives any authority to a Court to make a minor's estate liable for costs. A applied for leave to file a suit in forma pauperis against B. B resisted the application, on the ground that A was a minor. The Government pleader also resisted, on the ground that A was not a pauper. The Court without inquiring into A's pauperism rejected the application solely on the ground that A was a minor, and that he was not properly represented by a next friend or guardian. The Court ordered all costs to be paid out of the minor's estate. The minor died soon afterwards. The Collector then applied to the Court to attach certain property in B's hands which was alleged to form a part of the minor's estate. B objected, but the attachment was allowed. Held that the order for costs, as well as the attachment that followed thereon, were illegal and ultra vires. The order was clearly opposed to the provisions of sec. 444 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), under which no order affecting a minor can legally be made without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian ad litem. Held also that, no inquiry having been made into A's pauperism, and no order passed such as is contemplated in sec. 409 or 412 of the Code, the Collector was not entitled to costs.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 234.

The Judge must himself examine.—1 Bom. 102.

An order made under Act X of 1877, sec. 409, refusing leave to sue as a pauper, is subject to review under sec. 638. The provisions of sec. 413 do not affect the right of a person against whom such order has been made to obtain a review. A petitioner applying for such review must file a copy of the order of which he seeks a review, together with a memorandum of objections (secs. 541 and 625).—4 Bom. 414.

410. If the application be granted, it shall be numbered and registered, and shall be deemed the Procedure if application admitted. plaint in the suit, and the suit, shall proceed in all other respects as a suit instituted under Chapter V., except that the plaintiff shall not be liable to any Court-fee (other than fees payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader, or other proceeding connected with the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A suit was instituted in a Mofussil Court against two defendants, one of them being a minor. Before a guardian ad litem has been appointed for the minor defendant, an application was made to the High Court to transfer the case from the Mofussil Court to the High Court in its Ordinary Original Civil jurisdiction by the minor defendant through a next friend. It was contended that the application was informal, and could not be granted, and that no such application could be made on behalf of the infant defendant until a guardian ad litem had been appointed, and then it should be made by him. Held that the objection should not prevail, and that this application could be made through the next friend.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 771.

411. If the plaintiff succeed in the suit, the Court shall when pauper suc- calculate the amount of Court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper; and such amount shall be a first charge on the subject-matter of the Recovery of Court-fees. suit, and shall also be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, in the same manner as costs of suit are recoverable under this Code.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Held that a Collector applying on behalf of Government, under sec. 411 of the Civil Procedure Code, for recovery of Court-fees by attachment of a sum of money payable under a decree to a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis, pay the same was subject to the provisions of art. 178 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.—4 Madr. 155.

A pauper sued his sister for the partition of property valued at a large sum. The parties belonged to the bogam caste, residing in the Godavari District. The defendant pleaded that the property had been acquired by her as a prostitute, and denied the plaintiff's claim to it. The plaintiff obtained a decree for Rs. 100, being a moiety of the property found to have been left by their mother:—Held, (1) on the evidence as to the local custom of the caste that the decree was right; (2) that the defendant was liable to pay Court-fees only on the sum decreed.—14 Madr. 163.

N was allowed to bring a suit as a pauper. His suit was dismissed, the decree directing that he should pay the costs of the defendants. On the defendant's application certain immoveable property belonging to N was attached in execution of this decree, and was sold. Held that the Crown was entitled to be paid first out of the proceeds of such sale the amount of the Court-fees N would have had to pay if he had not been allowed to sue as a pauper. The principle of the ruling in Ganpat Putaya v. The Collector of Canara (I. L. R., 1 Bom. 7) followed.—1 Al. 596.

With a view to recover the amount of Court-fees which J would have had to pay had he not been permitted to bring a suit as pauper, the Government caused certain property belonging to B, the defendant in such suit, who had been ordered by the decree in such suit to pay such amount, to be attached. This property was subsequently attached by the holder of a decree against B, which declared a lien on the property created by a bond. The property was sold in the execution of this decree. Held that the Government was entitled to be paid first out of the proceeds of such sale the amount of the Court-fees J would have had to pay had he not been allowed to sue as a pauper, the principle that the Government takes precedence of all other creditors not being liable to an exception in the case of lien-holders. The decision in the Ganpat Putaya v. The Collector of Canara (I. L. R., 1 Bom. 7) applied in this case.—2 Al. 196.

412. If the plaintiff fails in the suit, or if he is ^{pauper} paupered, or if the suit is dismissed under section 97 or 98, the Court shall order the plaintiff, or any person made, under section 32, co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the Court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper; and, if it find that the suit was frivolous, or vexatious, it may also punish the plaintiff with fine not exceeding one-hundred rupees, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to a month, or with both.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 412 and chapter xxvi of the Code of Civil Procedure, of which sec. 2 forms a part, do not deal with the costs of a successful defendant in a pauper's suit. The costs of a defendant in such a case are to be dealt with under sec. 220 of the Code, and the Court of Original or Appellate jurisdiction has full power to give and apportion costs in any manner if it thinks fit.—I. L. R., 8 Bom. 577.

The plaintiff, after having filed his suit in forma pauperis, came to an amicable arrangement with the defendants, and asked the Court that the suit should be dismissed. The Court granted this application, but made no order as to the payment of Court fees. Thereupon the Collector applied to the High Court, under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to direct the lower Court to make an order for the payment of Court fees under section 412 of the Code. Held, that the Collector, though not a party to the suit, was entitled to move the High Court under section 622 of the Code. Held, also, that section 412 had no application to the present case, as there was no adjudication of the rights of the parties and the plaintiff could not, therefore be said to have failed in the suit. The Subordinate Judge, had therefore, no jurisdiction to make the order desired by the Collector. Section 412 of the Code applies only to cases of adjudicated failure and to the other cases specified, as where the plaintiff has been dispaupered, or where the suit has been dismissed under section 97 or 98.—15 Bom. 77.

See I. L. R., 6 Bom. 590, noted under sec. 244; 13 Bom. 234, noted under sec. 409; 13 Al. 328, noted under sec. 411.

413. An order of refusal made under section 409 to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue; but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by Government in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper.

Refusal to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 4 Bom. 414, noted under sec. 409.

414. The Court may, on motion by the defendant, or by the Government Pleader, of which one week's notice in writing has been given to the plaintiff, order the plaintiff to be dispaupered—

Dispaupering.

(a) if he is guilty of vexatious or improper conduct in the course of the suit;

(b) if it appears that his means are such that he ought not to continue to sue as a pauper; or

(c) if he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the suit, under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

415. The costs of an application for permission to sue as a pauper and of an inquiry into pauperism are costs in the suit.

CHAPTER XXVII.

SUITS BY OR AGAINST GOVERNMENT OR PUBLIC OFFICERS.

416. Suits by or against the Government shall be instituted by or against (as the case may be) the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Suits by or against Secretary of State in Council.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A suit will lie against Government for damages for wrongful dismissal of a servant.—7 B. L. R., 688.

Where damages were sustained by reason of negligence in the carriage of goods by the Government Bullock Train, the Secretary of State was held liable.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 195.

Under sec. 9, Act I, 1877, no suit will lie against Government for possession of immoveable property without proof of title. Where certain Government coolies let fall an iron funnel while carrying it from the Kidderpur Dockyard to a steamer in the river, and the noise startled a horse, which rushed over it, and injured itself, it was held that the Secretary of State was liable.—Bourke's Rep., 167.

The acts of a Government officer bind the Government only when he is acting in the discharge of a certain duty within the limits of his authority, or, if he exceed that authority, when the Government in fact or in law, directly or by implication, ratifies the excess.—2 W. R., (P. C.) 61.

No suit will lie against Government for damages sustained by reason of a public ferry being taken up by a Magistrate.—7 W. R., 191.

Where damages were sustained by reason of negligence in the carriage of goods by the Government Bullock Train, the Secretary of State was held liable.—I. L. R., 3 Al. 195.

A suit will not lie in the High Court against the Collector of Madras, residing and carrying on business at Sydapet, in respect of matters arising in Chingleput, though his Deputy Collector carried on business within the local limits, and the orders and proceedings in reference to the matters in question were in his name of office as Collector of Madras.—6 Al. 46.

Under sec. 521 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), a First-class Magistrate in charge of a taluka made an order, declaring certain land to be part of a public thoroughfare, and directing the plaintiff to remove the obstruction caused by him to it. The plaintiff sued the Magistrate to establish his right to the land, alleging that it was his property, and that the Magistrate's order was wrong. The Assistant Judge, who tried the suit, dismissed it, holding that it did not lie against the Magistrate. On appeal to the High Court, it was held that the Assistant Judge might have properly permitted the plaintiff to amend the suit by striking out the name of the First-class Magistrate as defendant, and substituting in that capacity the Secretary of State for India in Council. The High Court, accordingly, reversed the decree of the Assistant Judge, and remanded the suit for re-trial on the merits, after making the amendment directed.—6 Bom. 670.

On the 11th August 1879, the defendant, as a Magistrate in charge of a taluka, made an order under secs. 523 and 526 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), directing the plaintiff to remove a certain ota, on the ground that it had been built upon a public thoroughfare. The plaintiff thereupon sued the Magistrate for a declaration that the ota and site belonged to him, and prayed for a reversal of the Magistrate's order. The Assistant Judge who tried the suit dismissed it, holding that it did not lie against the defendant. On appeal, the High Court, following the decision in Nilkanthapa Malkapa v. The Magistrate (First-class) in charge of Sholapur Taluka (I. L. R., 6 Bom. 670), reversed the decree of the Assistant Judge, remanded the case, in order that the plaintiff might amend his suit by striking out the name of the First-class Magistrate as defendant, and substituting in that capacity the Secretary of State for India in Council, and directing the lower Court to determine the suit upon its merits after the above amendment and due service of process.—6 Bom. 672.

Persons being, ex officio or otherwise, authorized to act for Government, authorized to act for Government. judicial proceeding, shall be deemed to be the recognized agents by whom appearances, acts, and applications under this Code, may be made or done on behalf of Government.

Notes

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A recognized agent, under cl. 2, sec. 17, Act VIII of 1859, cannot prosecute or defend a suit in his own name. A gumasta of a firm ceases to be a recognized agent under cl. 2, sec. 17, Act VIII of 1859, when the business of the firm has ceased before the institution of the suit.—5 B. L. R., App. 11; 13 W. R., 344.

Held that, where one of several representatives of a deceased judgment-creditor applies for the execution of a decree, the general powers of attorney contemplated by sec. 17, cl. 1, of Act VIII. of 1859, are not necessary; but it is sufficient if the applicant is authorized under sec. 115 to act for the other representatives. Held also that, in executing a decree of a Court of competent jurisdiction, the Court executing it cannot question the validity of any portion of it. Its duties are only of a ministerial character.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 109; 2nd Ed. 103.

The partners not so joining is not a ground on which an Appellate Court should reverse the decree of a lower Court, unless the irregularity affects the merits of the jurisdiction of the Court.—6 Bom. The plaintiff sued, as purchaser at a Court-sale of the interest of defendant No. 1, to redeem and recover possession of the land in dispute, alleging that it had been mortgaged by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 denied the mortgage, and that he had any title to the land, which he said belonged to R, and formed a part of R's deshmukhi vatan. R having died, leaving a minor widow sued as defendant No. 4 in the suit, the estate was administered by the Collector. On the application of the minor's personal guardians, the Collector was joined as a party. The Collector contended on the minor's behalf that, the suit having been brought without notice to him as required by sec. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882); it was not maintainable. The Collector had also certified to the Court, under sec. 10 of the Vatan Act, III. of 1874, that the land formed part of a vatan. The District Judge was of opinion that notice was necessary. He therefore, rejected the plaintiff's claim, and ordered the sale to be set aside. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court, held that notice under sec. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882) was not necessary. The Collector was made a party, not in respect of any alleged illegal act by him, but on the application of the minor's personal guardians, in order to protect the minor's title as set up by the first defendant. Held, also, following Shanker v. Babaji (I. L. R., 12 Bom. 550), that the Judge ought not to have acted on the certificate by setting the sale aside. Secs. 9 and 10 of the Vatan Act, III. of 1874, were not applicable to the case, as the first defendant whose interest was purchased by the plaintiff, was not a vatandar.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 343.

The Official Trustee is a public officer within the definition given in sec. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. The cases in which a public officer is entitled to notice of suit under sec. 424 of the Code are those in which he is sued for damages for some wrong inadvertently committed by him in the discharge of his official duties, and the object of giving notice is that, if a public body or officer entrusted with powers happens to commit an inadvertence, irregularity, or wrong before any one has a right to require payment in respect of that wrong, he shall have an opportunity of setting himself right, making amends, restoring what he has taken, or paying for the damages Application where Government undertakes defence.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

427. If such application is not made by the Government Pleader on or before the day fixed in the notice for the defendant to appear and answer to the plaint, the case shall proceed as in a suit between private parties, except that the defendant shall not be liable to arrest, nor his property to attachment, otherwise than in execution of a decree.

Procedure where no such application made.

Defendant not liable to arrest before judgment.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

429. When the decree is against the said Secretary of State in Council or against a public officer in respect of such act as aforesaid, a time shall be specified in the decree within which it shall be satisfied ; and, if the decree is not satisfied within the time so specified, the Court shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government.

Procedure where decree against Government or public officer.

Execution shall not issue on any such decree unless it remains unsatisfied for the period of three months computed from the date of the report.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SUITS BY ALIENS AND BY OR AGAINST FOREIGN AND NATIVE RULERS.

430. Alien enemies residing in British India with the permission of the Governor-General in Council, and alien friends, may sue in the Courts of British India as if they were subjects of Her Majesty.

When aliens may sue.

No alien enemy residing in British India without such permission, or residing in a foreign country, shall sue in any of such Courts.

Explanation.—Every person residing in a foreign country, the Government of which is at war with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and carrying on business in that country without a license in that behalf under the hand of one of Her Majesty's Secretaries of State or of a Secretary to the Government of India, shall, for the purpose of the second paragraph of this section, be deemed to be an alien enemy residing in a foreign country.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

431. A foreign State may sue in the Courts of British India, provided that—

When foreign State may sue.

(a) it has been recognized by Her Majesty or the Governor-General in Council, and

(b) the object of the suit is to enforce the private rights of the head or of the subjects of the foreign State.

The Court shall take judicial notice of the fact that a foreign State has not been recognized by Her Majesty or by the Governor-General in Council.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The "private rights" spoken of in sec. 431 (cl. b) of the Code of Civil Procedure do not mean individual rights as opposed to those of the body politic or State, but those private rights of the State which must be enforced in a Court of Justice, as distinguished from its political or territorial rights, which must, from their very nature, be made the subject of arrangement between one State and another. They are rights which may be enforced by a foreign State against private individuals as distinguished from rights which one State in its political capacity may have as against another State in its political capacity. The Emperor of Austria v. Day, (30 L. J. Ch. 690 ; 2 Giff., 628), United States of America v. Wagner, (L. R., 2 Ch. App. 582), approved of. There is nothing to prevent a foreign or feudatory State from holding immoveable property in British India, and to such property the rule of intestate succession laid down in sec. 5 of the Succession Act (X of 1865) does not apply. The State must be regarded as a quasi corporation which continues to exist as a State so long as it is recognized as such by Her Majesty, whatever the rule of succession to it may be, and whatever may be its form of Government. Case in which it was found on the facts that certain immoveable property situated in British India, which had formerly belonged to the State of Cherrapoonjee, having been granted by a former Raja of that State to the defendant, was still the property of the State, on the ground that the Raja was not competent to alienate it, and that the defendant's plea of adverse possession and limitation was not supported by the evidence. —I. L. R., 11 Cal. 17.

432. Persons specially appointed by order of Government at the request of any Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief, whether in subordinate alliance with the British Government or otherwise, and whether residing within or without British India “ or at the request of any person competent in the opinion of the Government to act on behalf of such Prince or Chief,”* to prosecute or defend any suit on his behalf, shall be deemed to be the recognized agents by whom appearances, acts, and applications under this Code, may be made or done on behalf of such Prince or Chief.

An appointment under this section may be made for the purpose of a specified suit or of several specified suits, or for the purpose of all such suits as it may from time to time be necessary to prosecute or defend on behalf of the Prince or Chief.*

A person appointed under this section may authorise or appoint persons to make and do appearances, applications, and acts in any such suit or suits as if he were himself a party to the suit or suits.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 432 of the Civil Procedure Code does not prevent the institution by an independent Prince of a suit in a Court in British India in his own name, and through a recognized agent other than one appointed under that section.—I. L. R., 10 Cal. 136.

The Desai of Patadi, a talukdar of the fifth class in the Province of Kathiawar, in virtue of his being the proprietor of seven villages within the British Political Agency of Kathiawar, is a ruling chief within the meaning of secs. 432 and 433 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and can only be sued with the consent of the Government in a competent Court not subordinate to the District Court.—8 Bom. 415.

433.* (1) Any such Prince or Chief, and any Ambassador or Envoy of a Foreign State, may, with the consent of the Governor-General in Council, certified by the signature of one of the Secretaries to the Government of India (but not without such consent), be sued in any competent Court.

(2) Such consent may be given with respect to a specified suit or to several specified suits, or with respect to all suits of any specified class or classes, and may specify, in the case of any suit or class of suits, the Court in which the Prince, Chief, Ambassador, or Envoy may be sued; but it shall not be given unless the Prince, Chief, Ambassador, or Envoy—

(a) has instituted a suit in the Court against the person desiring to sue him, or

(b) by himself or another trades within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) is in possession of immoveable property situate within those limits, and is to be sued with reference to such possession or of money charged on that property.

(3) No such Prince, Chief, Ambassador, or Envoy, shall be arrested under this Code, and, except with the consent of the Governor-General in Council certified as aforesaid, no decree shall be executed against the property of any such Prince, Chief, Ambassador, or Envoy.

(4) The Governor-General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, authorize a Local Government and any Secretary to that Government to exercise, with respect to any Prince, Chief, Ambassador or Envoy named in the notification, the functions assigned by the foregoing subsections to the Governor-General in Council and a Secretary to the Government of India respectively.

(5) A person may, as a tenant of immoveable property, sue, without such consent as is mentioned in this section, a Prince, Chief, Ambassador, or Envoy from whom he holds, or claims to hold, the property.

In a suit against the Maharajah of Hill Tipperah, which is an independent Sovereign State, for maintenance, it appeared that, in a former suit tried in British India in respect of the same claim, the Court had ordered the amount of the maintenance for which he gave a decree to be paid by the defendant Maharajah and from his estate of R which was in British India. Held that the suit not being a suit for immoveable property would not lie, and, further, that the decree in the former suit was not res-judicata to show that the maintenance claimed in the present suit was a charge upon the zemindari of R so as to give the Court jurisdiction under cl. c. of sec. 433 of the Civil Procedure Code.—12 C. L. R., 473.

The Rajah of Hill Tipperah is a Sovereign Prince within the meaning of Chapter XXVIII of Act X of 1877, and cannot be sued personally in the Courts of British India except under the conditions specified in sec. 433 of that Act.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 535.

The fact of a defendant not subject to the jurisdiction of a Court having waived his privilege in previous suits brought against him does not give the Court jurisdiction to entertain a suit against him in which he pleads that he is not subject to such jurisdiction.—9 Cal. 535.

A suit for maintenance which seeks to have the maintenance made a charge on immoveable property is not a suit for immoveable property within the meaning of clause (c), sec. 433, Act X of 1877.—9 Cal. 535.

A claim for maintenance is not a charge upon immoveable property. A member of the royal family of Hill Tipperah brought a suit against the Rajah to have it declared that with respect to certain land situate within British India, and forming portion of the possessions of the Rajah, he was entitled to the post of jubraj, and to succeed to such land on the death of the Rajah, and also claimed maintenance, and sought to have it declared that such maintenance should be a charge on the revenue of the land situate in British India. Held that the British Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it not being one for immoveable property.—9 Cal. 535.

Style of Princes and Chiefs as parties to suits.

434.* A Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief may sue, and shall be sued, in the name of his State :

Provide pthat, in giving the consent referred to in the last foregoing section, the Governor-General in Council or Local Government, as the case may be, may direct that any such Prince or Chief shall be sued in the name of an agent or in any other name.

The law of limitation applicable to the execution of a decree of the Civil Court of Cooch Behar, for rent for a sum under Rs. 500 in a suit not brought under the Rent Act, is, by sec. 434 of the Civil Procedure Code, which gives the Courts in British India power to execute decrees passed by the Courts of a foreign State, sec. 58 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. That section is not confined to suits brought under that Act.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 576.

* This is a new section, substituted for the original by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 40. The original section (434) has been transposed as sec. 229B by sec. 39 of the same Amendment Act. Any reference made before the commencement of Act VII. of 1888 in any notification or other document to sec. 434 shall be read as a reference to sec. 229B.—See sec. 39 of Act VII. of 1888.

A decree of the Court of the Civil Judge of Cooch Behar was sent for execution to the Court of the District Judge of Rungpore. The copy of the record was signed by the Sheristadar instead of by the Judge himself. Upon receipt of the decree by the Subordinate Judge, a notice, under sec. 248 of the Civil Procedure Code, was served on the Judgment-debtor, calling on him to show cause why the decree should not be executed, and an order was forthwith issued for the attachment of his property. The judgment-debtor appeared and objected that the copy of the record was not properly certified, and, therefore, that the whole of the execution-proceedings were bad. The Subordinate Judge ordered that the record be sent back to the Cooch Behar Court through the District Judge, in order that a certificate might be given in proper form, and directed that the other points raised should be decided after the return of the papers. On appeal it was urged that the order of the Subordinate Judge was made without jurisdiction, but the District Judge rejected the appeal. The judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court. Held that the Subordinate Judge acted properly in sending the record back to the Cooch Behar Court to be properly certified, and also that he should have set aside the execution-proceedings as being altogether void, but, as that formed no portion of the grounds of appeal urged in the lower Appellate Court, the appeal should be dismissed. Per NORRIS, J.—Quære.—Whether the notification published in the Calcutta Gazette of 8th April 1879, signed by the then Deputy Commissioner of Cooch Behar, and stating the mode in which copies of judicial records of the Courts of Cooch Behar are certified as correct copies, and which notification was published after a notification had been published by the Governor-General of India in Council under the provisions of sec. 434 of the Civil Procedure Code to the effect that the decrees of the Civil and Revenue Courts of Cooch Behar may be executed in British India as if they had been made by the Courts of British India, was a compliance with the provision of sec. 86 of the Indian Evidence Act at a time when there was a representative of the Government of India Resident in Cooch Behar? Per NORRIS, J.—The notification of the 8th April 1879 is now of no use, as there is no representative of Her Majesty or the Government of India residing in Cooch Behar, and consequently certified copies of judicial records of that State cannot now be received in evidence in the Courts of British India under the provisions of sec. 86 of the Evidence Act.—14 Cal. 546.

No suit is maintainable in any Court in British India founded upon the judgment of a Court situate in a Native State. The Courts of British India cannot enforce the decrees of any Native Courts, except as provided by sec. 434 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Under that section the decrees of certain Native Courts may be executed in British India, as if they had been made by the Courts of British India. A suit will not lie in the Courts of India upon the judgment of any Court in British India. The only exception to this rule is in the case of judgments of a Court of Small Causes on which suits are permitted to be brought in the High Court in order to obtain execution against immoveable property. A foreign judgment creates an obligation belonging to the class of implied contracts. A Court which entertains a suit on a foreign judgment cannot institute an inquiry into the merits of the original action or the propriety of the decision. Quære.—Whether suits on foreign judgments are maintainable in the Civil Courts of India?—6 Bom. 292.

A suit cannot generally be maintained in any British Court upon the judgment of a Native Court. Quære.—Whether it could where there had been a notification by the Governor-General of India under sec. 434 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) ?—8 Bom. 593.

CHAPTER XXIX.

SUITS BY AND AGAINST CORPORATIONS AND COMPANIES.

435. In suits by a Corporation or by a Company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, the plaintiff may be subscribed and verified on behalf of the Corporation or Company, by any director, secretary, or other principal officer of the Corporation or Company, who is able to depose to the facts of the case.

Subscription and verification of plaintiff.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A plaint was filed in which the plaintiff was described as Mr. J. Manager of the X Company, Limited, and in the body of the plaint several allusions were made to the "plaintiff-Company," and the claim made in the plaint was a claim made on behalf of the Company. It was not suggested that the X Company was a Company authorized to sue or be sued in the name of an officer or trustee, nor was it shown that it was registered as a corporation under sec. 41 of the Indian Companies Act :—Held that the suit was badly framed, and that it should be dismissed.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 41.

436. When the suit is against a Corporation or against a Company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, the summons may be served—

(a) by leaving it at the registered office (if any) of the Corporation or Company, or

(b) by sending it by post in a letter addressed to such officer or trustee at the office (or, if there be more officers than one, at the principal office in British India) of the Corporation or Company, or

(c) by giving it to any director, secretary, or other principal officer of the Corporation or Company ; and the Court may require the personal appearance of any director, secretary, or other principal officer of the Corporation or Company who may be able to answer material questions relating to the suit.

Notes.

For the purposes of summons, a Railway Company must be deemed to dwell at its principal office. An executive engineer of such a Company is not an officer on whom service may be made under cl. c of the above section.—1 Hyde's Rep., 197.

CHAPTER XXX.

SUITS BY AND AGAINST TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS, AND ADMINISTRATORS.

437. In all suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor, or administrator, when the contention is between the persons beneficially interested in such property and a third person, the trustee, executor, or administrator shall represent the persons so interested, and it shall not ordinarily be necessary to make them parties to the suit. But the Court may, if it thinks fit, order them or any of them to be made such parties.

The holder of an impartible zemindari, governed by the law of primogeniture, having a son, executed a mining lease of part of the zemindari for a period of twenty years, by which no benefit was to accrue to the grantor unless mining operations were carried on with success, and the commencement of mining operations was left optional with the lessee. On the death of the grantor, his minor son and successor, by the Collector of the district as his next friend, (authorized in that behalf by the Court of Wards), now sued the assignee of the lessee to have the lease set aside. The second plaintiff was the grantee from the Court of Wards (acting on behalf of the minor zemindar) of certain mining rights on the same land. The defendant had executed a declaration of trust in respect of his interest in favour of certain persons who were not joined :—Held (1) per Parker, J., that the first plaintiff could sue by the Collector of North Arcot as his next friend, since the Court of Wards had authorized the latter to conduct the suit; (2) per Muttusami Ayyar and Wilkinson, JJ. (affirming the judgment of Parker, J.) (1) that the interests of the first and second plaintiffs not being inconsistent with each other, the suit was not bad for misjoinder; (2) that the defendant's interests not having been shown to be hostile to those of the persons entitled under the declaration of trust, the suit was not bad for non-joinder; (3) that the lease was not one which a managing member of an ordinary joint family governed by Mitakshara law could providently enter into: (3) per Muttusawmi Ayyer and Wilkinson JJ., (reversing the judgment of Parker, J.) that in the absence of evidence of any family custom rendering the zemindari inalienable by the zemindar for the time being for purposes other than those warranted by the Mitakshara law the lease was not invalid as against the plaintiffs. Sartaj Kuari v. Deorai Kuari (I. L. R., 10 Al. 272) discussed and followed.—I. L. R., 13 Madr. 197.

438. When there are several executors or administrators, they shall all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them :

Joinder of executors and administrators.

Provided that executors who have not proved their testator's will, and executors and administrators beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, need not be made parties.

CHAPTER XXXI.

SUITS BY AND AGAINST MINORS, AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND.

440. Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by an adult person, who, in such suit, shall be called the next friend of the minor, and may be ordered to pay any costs in the suit as if he were the plaintiff.

must sue by next

Costs.

“If a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, a suit shall not be instituted on behalf of the minor by any person other than such guardian except with the leave of the Court granted after notice to such guardian and after hearing any objections which he may desire to make with respect to the institution of the suit, and the Court shall not grant such leave unless it is of opinion that it is for the welfare of the minor that the person proposing to institute the suit in the name of the minor should be permitted to do so.”*

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A stated that he was born in 1848; that his great-grandfather was, according to the tradition of the family, a European (but of what country in Europe he did not know) residing at Madras, and his great-grandmother a native Hindu or Mahomedan; that he did not know whether his great-grandfather and great-grandmother were married, or whether his grandfather was married; that his father married a lady bearing an English name; that he himself and all his relations were Christians; that he was born in Calcutta, and knew of no relatives in Europe. Held that he was the legitimate descendant of a European British subject, and therefore his age of majority was 21 years. Plaintiff being a minor, his suit was not dismissed, but he was directed to appoint a next friend to sue for him.—1 B. L. R., (O. C.) 10.

A suit can be prosecuted or defended by a relative, on behalf of a minor, without a certificate under Act XL. of 1858, when the subject-matter of the suit is of a small value. A suit to recover real and personal property of the value of Rs. 7,260 was allowed to be prosecuted by the brother of a minor, on behalf of himself and his minor brother, under sec. 3, Act XL. of 1858. When a suit is dismissed for default of the plaintiff, and no appearance has been entered by the defendant, the plaintiff can, under sec. 110, Act VIII. of 1859, bring a fresh suit after a lapse of 30 days, if it be not otherwise barred by lapse of time.—3 B. L. R., App. 130.

The acts of a minor are only avoidable, and not absolutely void. The purchasers of the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor sued to obtain immediate possession of the property purchased at a sale held in execution of a decree, after setting aside an usufructuary mortgage executed by the judgment-debtor while a minor. Held that the sale in execution merely transferred to the purchaser the reversionary right of the judgment-debtor in the property, after the satisfaction of the usufructuary mortgage, and not the right to set aside an act done during minority. Held that, until a transaction by a minor was avoided by some distinct act on attaining majority, it must be considered valid.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 426; 12 W. R., 378.

An application was made to a Munsif for the custody of a minor daughter, which, on appeal to the Civil Judge, was dismissed. On appeal to the High Court, held that all the proceedings must be quashed. The application should have been made in the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction in the district.—4 B. L. R., App. 36; S. C. 13 W. R., 112; 23 W. R., 340.

An infant cannot sue except by a next friend, and when an objection is made on the ground of the disability of the plaintiff, the suit ought to be dismissed.—5 M. H. C. R., 435.

A suit against a minor whose estate exceeds Rs. 250 in value cannot be proceeded with unless he be represented by a person holding a certificate of administration under Act XX of 1864. The plaintiff may apply to the District Judge to appoint an administrator, if none such has been appointed.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 219.

Where a priest wrongfully officiates for another, and receives fees, he is bound to account for them to the rightful priest, where such fees are by custom attached to the office. The sale of an hereditary priestly office will be upheld where the purchasers are the next in succession from the vendor to such office. Semble.—That an hereditary priestly office descends in default of males through females. A father suing on behalf of his minor son, entitled to property in his own right, must obtain a certificate of administration under sec. 2 of Act XX. of 1864.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 250.

The Bombay Minors' Act (XX. of 1864) does not apply to minors who are not resident within the Presidency of Bombay. A foreign guardian will not be recognized in the Courts in this country in a suit brought by such guardian to recover, on account of a minor, profits arising from immoveable property. Where a suit was brought by the agent of a minor's guardian appointed by H. H. the Gaikwar of Baroda, it was ordered that the proceedings should be amended by describing such agent as the next friend of the minor, in which capacity he was then permitted to sue.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 7.

As proceedings taken to file and enforce an award under se 327 of the Civil Procedure Code are of the nature of a suit within of sec. 2 of Act XX. of 1864, a minor must be represented in such proceedings by a person holding a certificate of administration.—9 Bom. H. C. R. (A. C.) 289.

There is nothing in the Minors' Act (XX. of 1864) to prevent the institution of a suit by the next friend of a minor who has not obtained a certificate of administration to the minor's estate, but who claims no right to have charge of the minor's property, asking for a declaration of the minor's rights, and for an order directing the defendant to pay money he owes to the minor into the principal Civil Court of the district. As the right, however, of a friend to institute a suit on behalf of a minor is under the control of the Court, and as the Minors' Act, by sec. 3—7, enables a friend of the minor to protect his interests by applying for the appointment of a fit person to have charge of the property of the minor, and to protect his estate, the proper course for a Court, to which a plaint on behalf of a minor is presented by his friend, is either to refuse to accept the plaint when there is no pressing necessity for its acceptance, or in case such pressing necessity exists, to accept the plaint, and stay proceedings until the plaintiff has duly obtained a certificate under the Act.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 310.

Sec. 2 of Act XX of 1864 does not prohibit a person having a claim against a minor from bringing a suit until a certificate of administration has been granted. He may properly bring his suit, but immediately after his doing so, he should apply to the District Judge for the appointment of an administrator, and it is competent to the District Judge under sec. 8 of the Act to make that appointment.—11 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 21.

Appellant having presented a petition to a Zillah Judge under Act IX of 1861, claiming the possession and custody of his two minor children alleged to be detained by their mother, the parties being European British subjects, held that such Judge had no power to entertain the application.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 79.

Guardians of a minor cannot be held personally liable for torts committed by such minor.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 191.

The rule of Mahomedan law, that an uncle cannot be the guardian of the property of a minor, does not prevent an uncle representing his infant nephew under the Code of Civil Procedure as next friend in a suit.—6 C. L. R., 413.

In Act IX. of 1861, "the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction in the district" means the principal Court of ordinary original civil jurisdiction.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 193; S. C., 7 W. R., 321.

The plea of minority should be decided on positive evidence, and not merely on the appearance of the alleged minor.—W. R., 1864, 304; W. R., 1864, 356.

Act IX. of 1861 applied to Pegu, and also to minors the lawful children of European natural-born British subjects.—3 W. R., Rec. Ref., 5.

A purchase from a minor is not ipso facto invalid.—3 W. R., 10.

A minor when he comes of age is not precluded from suing in his own name for anything that his guardian, either through ignorance or negligence, has omitted to prosecute.—3 W. R., 43.

Minors have a qualified power of contracting, and an implied or express contract for necessaries is binding absolutely on a minor. As a minor cannot himself, by reason of insufficient capacity for business, state and settle an account so as to be bound thereby, so neither can he authorise another party to do for him that which he cannot do himself.—5 W. R., 2.

A statement in a decree that a vakil had appeared and was present in Court for a minor when the decree was made, was held, in a suit to set the decree aside as being made behind his back, to be notice to the minor of the decree having been made.—25 W. R., 280.

In 1862 Rajkaran and his son Amra mortgaged the property in dispute to Bezanji. In 1863, Rajkaran died, leaving a widow, Shivba, and two sons, vis., Amra and Parbhu, a minor. In 1866, Amra and Shivba, the latter of whom acted for herself and as guardian of her minor son Parbhu, settled the account with Bezanji, the mortgagee, obtained a fresh advance, and passed a fresh mortgage-bond to him. In 1868 Amra died. In 1869 Bezanji's assignee filed a suit upon the mortgage, and obtained a decree against the mortgaged property against Shivba both as guardian of the minor Parbhu, and also against her in her individual capacity. At the Court-sale held in execution of this decree, Daji purchased the property in dispute in 1870. In 1881 Parbhu filed the present suit to recover possession of the property, alleging that Daji's purchase was invalid as against him, he having been a minor at the time of the Court-sale. He subsequently assigned his interest to the respondent (second plaintiff). It was contended on behalf of the defendant, Daji, that the suit, not having been brought within one year after Parbhu had attained majority, was barred by limitation under art. 12, sch. 2 of Act XV. of 1877. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation. Parbhu had not been properly represented by Shivba in the suit of 1869, as she had not obtained a certificate under the Minors' Act (XX. of 1864). Parbhu was, therefore, not bound by the decree in that suit, or by the sale in execution, and art. 12, sch. 2 of Act XV. of 1877 did not apply. Held, also, upon the merits, that the debt for which the decree was passed, being a family and ancestral debt, was binding upon the whole family, including the plaintiff, who was, therefore, not entitled to disturb the execution purchaser.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 18.

Sec. 440 read with sec. 3 of Act XL of 1858, does not make the receipt from the Court of a written permission to sue compulsory upon the next friend of an infant plaintiff.—12 Cal. 131.

Although the proper and regular manner of giving permission to sue on behalf of a minor is by an order recorded in the order-sheet, there is, nevertheless, nothing in the nature of the sanction provided by sec. 3 of Act XL of 1858 which takes it out of the general rule of evidence, that sanction may be proved by express words or by implication. Where on a construction of the plaint and the pleadings it is found that the minor is the real plaintiff, the mere fact of his not having been properly described in accordance with sec. 440 of the Civil Procedure Code is no ground for setting aside a decree passed in the suit.—14 Cal. 159.

Act XX of 1864 is not superseded by Act X of 1877. Where, therefore, a widow claimed to have charge of property in trust for her minor sons, it was held necessary, under sec. 2 of Act XX of 1864, that she should obtain a certificate of administration if the whole estate was of greater value than Rs. 250, and that it was competent to the Court, if there was any pressing necessity (owing to the operation of the law of limitation) that a suit should be brought at once, to accept the plaint and stay proceedings until the mother had obtained a certificate under Act XX. of 1864. Vijker v. Zilibhai (9 Bom H. C. R. 310) followed.—3 Bom. 149.

A volunteer guardian has no right to sue on behalf of a minor ; the accord or refusal of permission to sue is a matter in the discretion of the Court. Where a suit is brought in violation of sec. 440 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or of the provisions of Act XL of 1858, the proper course for a Court to pursue is to return the plaint, in order that the error may be rectified.—10 Cal. 102 ; 12 C. L. R., 405.

441. Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor (other than an application under section 449) shall be made by his next friend, or his guardian for the suit.

Application to be made by next friend or guardian ad litem.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

See I. L. R., 13 Bom. 234, noted under sec. 409 ; 16 Cal ; 771, noted under sec. 410.

442. If a plaint be filed by or on behalf of a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other person by whom it was presented. Notice of such application shall be given to such person by the defendant; and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit.

Plaint filed without next friend to be taken off the file. Costs.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The plaintiff was a widow, and sued for the administration of her deceased husband's estate. The suit was filed on the 5th April 1885. On the 2nd May the defendants' attorneys gave notice to the plaintiff's attorney that the plaintiff was a minor suing without a next friend, and that the plaint must be struck off the file in consequence. The plaintiff's attorney replied that, if the plaintiff was really a minor, he would at once take steps to have her father appointed her next friend, and the plaint and proceedings amended. On 7th May, inspection was given to the plaintiff's attorney of the plaintiff's horoscope, and after that inspection the plaintiff's attorney proposed that the proceedings should be amended by making the plaintiff's father her next friend. It appeared that the plaintiff was sixteen months under age. Nothing was done by either party for some weeks. On the 6th June the defendants' attorneys gave notice that they would apply for an order that the plaint should be taken off the file under sec. 442 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882). On hearing the application the Court refused to make the order asked for. The suit did not appear to be a vexatious one, and the plaintiff's age did not appear to have been fraudulently concealed, her father having stated on oath that he believed her to be of age, and expressing his willingness at once to be placed on the record as her next friend. The Courts, as a rule, only strike the plaint off the file where it appears, on the face of the plaint, that it was filed by a person who was a minor, or when it is proved that it was filed with the knowledge that the plaintiff was a minor, and with the intention of deceiving the Court and evading the payment of costs in case the plaintiff fails in the claim. When the fact of minority is a bona fide question of evidence, and the defendant's allegation is found correct, then the usual course is to suspend all proceedings, and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor to have himself properly represented in the suit by a next friend.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 7.

See I. L. R., 13 Bom 234, noted under sec. 409.

443. Where the defendant to a suit is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor, to put in the defence for such minor, and generally to act on his behalf in the conduct of the case.

“Where an authority competent in this behalf has appointed or declared a guardian or guardians of the person or property, or both, of the minor, the Court shall appoint him or one of them, as the case may be, to be the guardian for the suit under this section unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that some other person ought to be so appointed.”*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

In a suit intended to be brought against some minors the defendants were set out in the heading of the plaint as “Sharoda Sunderi Debya, widow of Chundra Kanta Ohuckerbutty, deceased, mother and guardian of the minors” (setting out their names). At the filing of the plaint, the plaintiff applied for and obtained an order, making Sharoda guardian of the minors for the purposes of the suit. She was not, however, guardian of the property and persons of the minors under Act XL of 1858. Held that the minors were not parties to the suit; that the order making Sharoda guardian ad litem was not made in a suit in which the minors were defendants; and that the suit must be dismissed as against the minors. Held also that neither the Code of Civil Procedure nor the proviso of sec. 3 of Act XL of 1858, gives a plaintiff any power to institute a suit against a person named by himself as guardian ad litem on behalf of a minor, nor do they give to the Court the power of transferring, by a mere order made ex parte, an irregular proceeding, such as the one above-mentioned, into a suit against the minor.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 402.

A suit was brought against a mother “for self and as guardian of A and B, minor sons of C, deceased,” at a period when Act VIII of 1859 was in force. The mother had not taken out a certificate under Act XL. of 1858, and no permission was recorded by the Court allowing the mother to defend on behalf of the infants under the provisions of sec. 3 of that Act. A decree was made in the suit, and in execution thereof certain property belonging to A and B was sold and purchased by X, the decree-holder. Subsequently, on A's coming of age, A and B, by A as his next friend, instituted a suit against X and their mother to recover the property so purchased by X.—Held that under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, it was not necessary to formally record sanction to the mother to defend under sec. 1 of Act XL of 1858; and that the fact of sanction having been given might be presumed by the Court, and that on the facts of the case such presumption was warranted:—Held also that, though A and B were not properly described in the previous suit, it was a mere defect in form, and did not affect the merits of the case, being in accordance with the prevailing practice at the time when the suit was brought, and that there is no authority for saying that, when minors have been really sued, though in a wrong form, a decree against them would not be valid.—11 Cal. 509.

Where a guardian ad litem of a lunatic defendant was made a party defendant for purposes of discovery:—Held, that the discovery was not intended to include the right to administer interrogatories to him.—10 Bom. 167.

Although section 443 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) read with section 463 does not oblige a Court to appoint a guardian ad litem for a defendant of unsound mind, except where he has been adjudged to be of unsound mind under Act XXV of 1858; still upon general principles and in conformity with the practice of the Court of Chancery, the Court should assign a guardian ad litem for the defendant if it finds, on inquiry, that he is of unsound mind so as to be unfit to defend the suit.—16 Bom. 132.

Where no administrator of the estate of a minor is appointed under Act XX of 1864, there is no objection to the appointment of a guardian ad litem under sec. 443 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as amended by Act XII of 1879 for the purpose of defending a suit against a minor. Act XX of 1864, sec. 2 has no bearing on the case of a next friend or guardian ad litem not claiming charge of the minor's estate. Neither Act XX of 1864, nor the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as amended by Act XII of 1879, empowers any Court to appoint a person, against his or her will, to be a next friend, guardian ad litem, administrator of the estate, or guardian of the person of the minor. Sec. 458 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) is not, so far as regards payment or costs, applicable to any person appointed to act as guardian ad litem without his previous assent. Sec. 3, cl. b, of Act XV of 1880, preserves jurisdiction to a Court to try suit against a minor, notwithstanding the appointment of one of its officers to be the minor's guardian ad litem. The decision in Mohan Ishwar v. Kaku Rupa (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 738) is superseded by Act XV of 1880, sec. 3 cl. b. in so far as that decision affected officers of the Court appointed guardians ad litem under sec. 456 of Act X of 1877 as amended by Act XII of 1879. Inconvenience pointed out, of introducing into Acts relating, and instituted as relating, to special jurisdiction only, provisions affecting Civil Procedure generally—5 Bom. 306.

A married woman may act as the next friend of an infant plaintiff. Guru Pershad Sing v. Gossain Munraj Puri, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 733, overruled.—17 Cal. 488.

446. If the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of such minor, or if he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or if he does not do his duty, or, pending the suit, ceases to reside within British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal; and the Court (if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned) may order the next friend to be removed accordingly.

Removal of next friend.

“If the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor.”*

Note.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

447. Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, a next friend shall not retire at his own request without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place, and giving security for the costs already incurred.

Retirement of next friend.

The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed, and also that he has no interest adverse to the minor.

Notice of the application shall be served on the next friend, as well as on the defendant; and it must be proved by affidavit that the late minor has attained his full age. The costs of all parties of such application, and of all or any proceedings theretofore had in the suit, shall be paid by such persons as the Court directs.

If the late minor be a necessary party to the suit, the Court may direct him to be made a defendant.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

455. If any minor, or attaining majority, can prove, to the satisfaction of the Court, that a suit instituted in his name by a next friend was unreasonable or improper, he may if a sole plaintiff, apply to have the suit dismissed.

Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned; and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety, may grant the application, and order the next friend to pay the costs of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a decree has been made against an infant duly represented by his guardian, and the infant on attaining his majority seeks to set that decree aside by a separate suit, he can succeed only on proof of fraud or collusion on the part of his guardian. If the infant desire to have the decree set aside, because any available good ground of defence was not put forward at the hearing by his guardian, he should apply for a review. If the decree when an ex-parte one, the procedure adopted should be that given in the Code for setting aside ex parte decrees.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 69.

456. An order for the appointment of a guardian for the suit may be obtained upon application in the name, and on behalf, of the minor or by the plaintiff. Such application must be supported by an affidavit verifying the fact that the proposed guardian has no interest in the matters in question in the suit adverse to that of the minor, and that he is a fit person to be so appointed.

When there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian : Provided that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor.

There is no power in the Court to order a plaintiff to pay a fee for the purpose of enabling the nazir, who has been appointed guardian ad litem, to put himself in communication with the natural guardians and other friends, but the Court may refuse to go on with the suit if it should be of opinion that the nazir has been unavoidably prevented from making himself acquainted with the case against the minor. In a suit against a minor residing in a Native State at a distance from the nazir of the Court, who was appointed guardian ad litem, and the nazir was prevented from conducting the minor's defence without incurring expense which the plaintiff refused to pay, held that the Court, if it chose, might cancel the appointment of the nazir as guardian ad litem under sec. 458 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 553.

The plaintiff, who was a minor, sued by her next friend (her husband) for the administration of her father Purshotam Ramji's estate. The defendants in the suit were the plaintiff's mother, Nanbai, who was the widow and executrix of Purshotam Ramji, and one Burjorji, who had been appointed by Nanbai to act for her during her absence on pilgrimage. The plaintiff alleged that Nanbai was insane and unfit to manage the estate, and tha Burjorji was mismanaging and wasting it. A receiver was appointed shortly after the filing of the suit. At the hearing the suit was dismissed as against Burjorji, and the Court ordered that his costs should be paid by the plaintiff's next friend, being of opinion that he was the real actor in the suit, and that it would be unfair to make the plaintiff's estate bear the costs of proceedings in which she had no real voice. The Court was further of opinion that at the time the suit was filed, Nanbai was not of unsound mind, but that she had subsequently become insane. The usual accounts were ordered to be taken as against Nanbai. The result of taking these accounts was that her administration of the estate as executrix was found to be unimpeachable, and in December, 1883, the Court made an order directing that the next friend should pay the costs of the infant plaintiff. The next friend became insolvent, and his solicitors (the respondents) obtained an order from the Judge in chambers that the receiver should pay their costs out of the estate in his hands. The plaintiff appealed. The respondents contended that the plaintiff had adopted the suit, and that they had a lien for their costs—at any rate so far as they were incurred for the recovery and preservation of the estate:—Held, that the respondents were not entitled to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff had done no overt act signifying her adoption of the suit, and the fact that she remained passive was consistent with her disapproval of it, as the decree did not immediately affect her, or require her to take action until the death of her mother Nanbai:—Held, also, that the property in the hands of the receiver could not be held to have been recovered by means of the suit, as it appeared that the investments were of a perfectly legitimate nature; that there was no cause for alarm with respect to the safety of the property, and that the suit, so far as it was based on alleged danger to the estate, was quite uncalled for. It was argued for the respondents that the appointment of a receiver preserved the estate from future risk arising from the fact that the executrix Nanbai was of unsound mind:—Held, that the mere fact that the appointment of a receiver would preserve the estate from a possible danger in the future, could not bring the case within the ordinary rule as to solicitor's lien.—10 Bom. 248.

It was agreed by the defendants, who were majors, and by the father and guardian of a minor defendant on his behalf, that one of the issues in a suit should be determined under the Oaths Act, sec. 9, by the oath of the plaintiff. The oath was taken, and a decree was passed accordingly. Held that the minor defendant was bound by the consent of his guardian, since there was no evidence of fraud or gross negligence on the part of the latter, although the Court had not sanctioned the agreement under sec. 462, Civil Procedure Code.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 483.

An application to stay execution of and to set aside a decree, passed with the consent of the guardian of a minor defendant, for want of sanction of the Court under sec. 462, Civil Procedure Code, was rejected. Held no appeal lay against the order of rejection.—12 Madr. 503.

Sec. 18 of the Minors' Act, XX. of 1864, applies only to persons to whom a certificate has been granted under that Act. An assignment of a mortgage, therefore, by a widow, acting as natural guardian of her minor son, but who has not obtained a certificate under the Act (XX. of 1864), is not invalid because effected without the sanction of the Court. Where a widow acting as natural guardian of her minor son assigned a mortgage which had been executed to her deceased husband for a consideration, a part of which was a sum due under a decree to the assignee, held that such an assignment was not invalid under sec. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X. of 1877). Assuming that section to be applicable to the compromise of a decree, the circumstance that the compromise was voidable would only affect the consideration for the assignment by reducing its amount. The plaintiff sued, as assignee of a mortgage, to recover the debt due from the mortgagors personally and from the property mortgaged. The assignor was a Hindu widow, acting as natural guardian of her minor son. The consideration for the assignment was a sum of Rs. 68-9-0 due to the plaintiff under a decree obtained by him and Rs. 30-7-0 cash paid. The lower Courts held that, as to the Rs. 68-9-0, the transaction really amounted to a satisfaction or adjustment of the decree under which it was due, and that as such adjustment had not been certified to the Court it was invalid; they further held that, the consideration for the assignment of the mortgage having so far failed, the assignment was without adequate consideration, and, therefore, they dismissed the suit. On appeal to the High Court, held that, although in ordinary cases it is the rule that where an assignee sues on his assignment and proves it, an adverse party cannot take the objection that there was no consideration, yet that under the peculiar circumstances of this case that rule did not apply. The mortgage-deed was assigned by a widow acting as the natural guardian of a minor, and a great part of the consideration for the assignment had admittedly failed, confirmation of the decree which formed part of the consideration not having been certified to the Court. There was on the record no admission of the assignment by the assignor. It might be that the minor in a suit by his next friend or guardian appointed under Act XX of 1864 might dispute the assignment. The defendants in order to protect themselves had a right to call on the plaintiff to prove the assignment, and a Court ought in the interests of justice to see that they were so protected. The assignment was on behalf of a minor, and the person acting as his guardian had not admitted it, and it might be that even her admission would not be binding on him, since he was not a party to the suit. It was necessary that the point should be so tried and determined as to bind the minor, and to do that it was essential that he should be made a party to the suit. The Court, therefore, reversed the decree of the lower Court, and remanded the case.—12 Bom. 686.

The conditions of section 462 of the Civil Procedure Code, requiring the sanction of the Court to compromises entered into by the guardian ad litem of an infant suitor, are not sufficiently complied with by the Court passing a decree in the terms of a compromise presented by the guardian ad litem. A decree passed under such circumstances should be set aside.—3 Madr. 103.

See. I. L. R., 15 Bom. 594, noted under sec. 11.

463. The provisions contained in sections 440 to 462 (both inclusive) shall, mutatis mutandis, apply in the case of persons of unsound mind, adjudged to be so under Act No. XXXV of 1858, or under any other law for the time being in force.

A Jain, who was subject to the Aliyasantana law, made a will, whereby he disposed of the property of his family in favour of certain persons, and died. The plaintiff, a female, was the sole surviving member of the testator's family, but it was admitted that she was, and for more than fifty years had been, a lunatic, though she had not been declared to be so under Act XXXV of 1858; it appeared that her lunacy was not congenital. She sued, by the Collector of South Canara, the agent for the Court of Wards:—Held, (1) that the plaintiff was not excluded from inheritance by reason of lunacy under Aliyasantana law, and the will, in favour of the defendants, was invalid; (2) that the Court of Wards had power to take cognizance of the plaintiff's case under Regulation V of 1804; (3) that although the Court of Wards should ordinarily obtain a declaration under Act XXXV of 1858 in cases where the lunacy of a ward is open to question their failure to do so in the present case was not fatal to the suit; (4) that Civil Procedure Code, sec. 464, was accordingly applicable to the case; (5) that the appointment of the Collector, as guardian to the plaintiff, was legal and valid. In deciding what was the extent of the property which the plaintiff was entitled to inherit under the above rulings, certain documents adduced as evidencing partition of the family property were held to evidence merely arrangements for separate enjoyment.—14 Madr. 289.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

INTERPLEADER.

470. When two or more persons claim adversely to one another the same payment or property from another person, whose only interest therein is that of a mere stakeholder, and who is ready to render it to the right owner, such stakeholder may institute a suit of interpleader against all the claimants for the purpose of obtaining a decision as to whom the payment or property should be made or delivered, and of obtaining indemnity for himself :

Provided that, if any suit is pending in which the rights of all parties can properly be decided, the stakeholder shall not institute a suit of interpleader.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

471. In every suit of interpleader the plaintiff must, in addition to the other statements necessary for complaints, state—

- (a) that the plaintiff has no interest in the thing claimed otherwise than as a mere stakeholder ;
- (b) the claims made by the defendants severally ; and
- (c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

472. When the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff must so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

473. At the first hearing the Court may—

(a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit ; or, if it thinks that justice or convenience so require,

(b) retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit ;

and, if it finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it,

(c) adjudicate the title to the thing claimed : or else it may

(d) direct the defendants to interplead one another by filing statements and entering into evidence for the purpose of bringing their respective claims before the Court, and shall adjudicate on such claims.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

474. Nothing in this chapter shall be taken to enable

CHAPTER XXXIV.

OF ARREST AND ATTACHMENT BEFORE JUDGMENT.

A.—Arrest before Judgment.

477. If at any stage of any suit, other than a suit for the possession of immoveable property, the plaintiff satisfies the Court by affidavit or otherwise—that the defendant, with intent to avoid or delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court, or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,

(a) has absconded or left the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(b) is about to abscond or to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) has disposed of or removed from the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the plaintiff may apply to the Court that security be taken for the appearance of the defendant to answer any decree that may be passed against him in the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

A suit was instituted against the master of a vessel for repairs done to his vessel and for hire of a dock in which the vessel had been. The master being about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court with his vessel, the plaintiffs, under sec. 477 of the Code of Civil Procedure, applied for an order that the defendant should give security for his appearance to answer any decree that might be passed against him, and a rule was issued calling on him to show cause why such security should not be furnished. The defendant showed cause, and alleged that the amount claimed for the repairs was excessive, that the repairs were badly done, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to dock-hire, and that some of the repairs charged for had not been executed. He further counter-claimed for a large sum for demurrage wing to the detention of his vessel and damages caused to it by the wrongful act of the plaintiffs. It was contended that, as the claim was on a contested account which on the face of it was stated, but unsettled, on the principle of the English authorities, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the order asked for. It was further contended that the suit was not a bona fide one, but brought merely to harass the defendant, and that for this reason security should not be ordered to be given. It was not disputed that the defendant had no domicile in this country, and that he was shortly leaving in his vessel in the ordinary course of his business. The Court found the plaintiffs were undoubtedly entitled to recover some amount on account of repairs, and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs added on to such a claim one of a disputable character did not go to show that the suit was not a bona fide one. Held that there is no authority for saying that the principles applied in England to the granting of writs ne exeat regno should be applied in this country; and that the Court can only look to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure; that when a person comes on business to this country in which he has no property or domicile, and enters into a contract with a person to do work in connection with that business, and which must be done before he leaves the country, and it is known he intends to leave as soon as the work is completed, there is an implied understanding, if the work was done on his credit, that it should be paid for before he leaves. Held, also, that the case fell within the provisions of sec. 477 of the Code, and that the defendant should furnish security for his appearance while the suit was pending within a week in terms of sec. 479, such security to be for the amount of the claim—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 695.

See I. L. R., 15 Bom. 160, noted under sec. 97.

Order to bring up defendant to show cause why he should not give security.

478. If the Court, after examining the applicant, and making such further investigation as it thinks fit, is satisfied—that the defendant, with any such intent as aforesaid,

(a) has absconded or left the jurisdiction of the Court, or
(b) is about to abscond or to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) has disposed of or removed from the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or that the defendant is about to leave British India under the circumstances last aforesaid, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not give security for his appearance.

NOTE.—This section applies, to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

479. If the defendant fail to show such cause, the Court

If defendant fail to show cause, Court may order him to make or deposit or give security.

shall order him either to deposit money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to give security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit pending, and until execution or satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit.

The surety shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

See I. L. R., 14 Cal. 695, noted under sec. 477.

480. The surety for the appearance of the defendant may at any time apply to the Court in which he became such surety to be discharged from his obligation.

Procedure in case of application by surety to be

On such application being made, the Court shall summon the defendant to appear, or, if it thinks fit, may issue a warrant for his arrest in the first instance.

On the appearance of the defendant pursuant to the summons or warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Court shall direct the surety to be discharged from his obligation, and shall call upon the defendant to find fresh security.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

481. If the defendant fail to comply with any order under section 479 or section 480, the Court may commit him to jail until the decision of the suit, or, if judgment be given against the defendant, until the execution of the decree: Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees:

Procedure where defendant fails to give security or find fresh security.

Provided that no person shall be detained in prison under this section after he has complied with such order.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

A Judge of a Small Cause Court in the mofussil can direct the Jailor to bring up before the Court, at the hearing of the suit, a defendant committed to custody, under sec. 78 of Act VIII. of 1859, without having recourse to the Procedure under Act XV of 1869.—5 B. L. R., 215; 13 W. R., 278.

Subsistence of defendants arrested.

tence of judgment-debtors shall apply to all defendants arrested under this chapter.

B.—Attachment before Judgment.

483. If at any stage of any suit, the plaintiff satisfies the Court by affidavit or otherwise that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,

Application before judgment for security from defendant to satisfy decree, and, in default, or attachment of property.

(a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or to remove the same from the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending, or

(b) has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court, leaving therein property belonging to him, the plaintiff may apply to the Court to call upon the defendant to furnish security to satisfy any decree that may be passed against him in such suit, and, on his failing to give such security, to direct that any portion of his property within the jurisdiction of the Court shall be attached until the further order of the Court.

The application shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached, and the estimated value thereof.

Contents of application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

The words in sec. 81 of Act VIII. of 1859, "where the defendant is about to dispose of his property or any part thereof" &c., refer only to property within the jurisdiction of the Court where the suit is pending; therefore, where an order under that section by the first Subordinate Judge of the 24-Pergunnas in respect of property in Calcutta

it. In

A and B obtained a decree for possession of land against C. On their proceeding to execute their decree, D, who was in possession, presented a petition to the Munsif, complaining that they were thereby attempting unlawfully to interfere with his possession. The case was tried, on remand from the Judge as a suit under the provisions of sec. 229 being made on the 17th idem. P and Co. were, on the 20th idem, adjudicated insolvents on the petition of the Agra Bank, and on the same day a vesting order was made vesting the estate and effects of the insolvents in the Official Assignee. An application was made on behalf of the Official Assignee for an order directing the release of the attached property on the ground that the Official Assignee's claim under the vesting order was entitled to priority. The High Court ordered the prohibitory order to be set aside, and the property thereunder to be released.—12 B. L. R., App. 1.

The words "any portion of his property" in the latter part of sec. 483 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, mean any portion of the property of the defendant which is within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending.—1 C. L. R., 336.

Before proceeding under sec. 483 of the Civil Procedure Code to attach property, the Court should be thoroughly satisfied that the defendant is really disposing of his property with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him.—13 C. L. R., 356.

Under the provisions of secs. 483 and 484 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, property of the defendant, which is not within the jurisdiction of the Court, cannot be attached before judgment.—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 20.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 436, noted under sec. 278; 10 Al. 506, noted under sec. 311.

484. If the Court, after examining the applicant, and making any further investigation which it thinks fit, is satisfied that the defendant is about to dispose of or remove his property with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or that he has, with such intent, quitted the jurisdiction of the Court, leaving therein property belonging to him, the Court may require him, within a time to be fixed by the Court, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security.

The Court may also, in the order, direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property specified in the application.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

The title of the official assignee of an insolvent debtor under Act 11 and 12 Vic., c. 21 (the Indian Insolvent Act), is preferable to that of a creditor of the insolvent who before the vesting order has obtained an order for attachment before judgment under secs. 83 and 84 of the Civil Procedure Code in respect of the property comprised in such attachment. The effect of attachment before judgment is to secure that the property attached shall be forthcoming at the time of pronouncing the decree, to abide whatever order the Court shall make upon it.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 224.

The defendants were, on the 10th of March 1881, called upon, under sec. 484 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), to furnish security for the satisfaction of a decree that the plaintiff might obtain against them, or to show cause, on the 23rd March 1881, why security should not be furnished. To this direction the order was appointed, which is provided by the form at the end of the Code of Civil Procedure, for a provisional attachment under sec. 484. The defendants, to avoid the attachment, gave security on the 12th March 1881 for satisfaction of the decree, and the attachment was not carried out. On the 28th March 1881, they showed cause why security should not be furnished; but the Subordinate Judge, as security had been furnished, thought the matter was at an end, and that he could not cancel the security-bond. Held that the Subordinate Judge was wrong; the security so given was really not the security expressly provided under sec. 484, and did not preclude the defendants from showing cause why no security should be furnished.—I. L. R., 5 Bom. 643.

485. If the defendant fail to show cause why he should not furnish security, or fail to furnish the security required, within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may order that the property specified in the application, or such portion thereof as appears sufficient to satisfy any decree which may be passed in the suit, shall be attached.

If the defendant show such cause or furnish the required security, and the property specified in the application or any portion of it has been attached, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

See I. L. R., 14 Al. 162, noted under sec. 268.

486. The attachment shall be made in the manner herein provided for the attachment of property in execution of a decree for money.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 14 Al. 162, noted under sec. 268.

487. If any claim be preferred to the property attached before judgment, such claim shall be investigated in the manner hereinbefore provided for the investigation of claims to property attached in execution of a decree for money.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

488. When an order of attachment before judgment is passed, the Court which passed the order shall remove the attachment whenever the defendant furnishes the security required, together with security for the costs of the attachment, or when the suit is dismissed.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

489. Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree.

Attachment not to affect rights of strangers, or bar decree-holder from applying for sale.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

Sec. 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure renders an attachment before judgment ineffectual as a bar to process of execution against the property attached in satisfaction of a decree in another suit, whether obtained before or after the attachment.—6 M. H. C. R., 135.

490. Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this chapter, and a decree is given in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary to re-attach the property in execution of such decree.

Property attached under chapter not to be re-attached in execution of decree.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property.)

C.—Compensation for improper Arrests or Attachments.

491. If, in any suit in which an arrest or attachment has been effected, it appears to the Court that such arrest or attachment was applied for an insufficient grounds, Compensation for obtaining arrest or attachment on insufficient grounds.

or if the suit of the plaintiff fails, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such amount, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him by the arrest or attachment:

Provided that the Court shall not award under this section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

Proviso.

An award under this section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of such arrest or attachment.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts (except as regards immoveable property).

The omission to apply for compensation under sec. 88, Act VIII. of 1859 (assuming that section to be applicable to the present case), does not bar a regular suit for compensation for illegal attachment; and the fact that security was not given, by which release of the property might have been obtained, does not affect the right of suit for the improper attachment. Further that, under the circumstances, the attachment being needless and unjustifiable, and without due authority of law, the award of damages was fair and unquestionable.—1 Agra H. C. R., 104.

See I. L. R., 15 Bom. 160, noted under sec. 97.

CHAPTER XXXV.

OF TEMPORARY INJUNCTIONS AND INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS.

A.—Temporary Injunctions.

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted.

492. If in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—

(a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged, or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or

(b) that the defendant threatens, or is about, to remove or dispose of his property with intent to defraud his creditors.

the Court may, by order, grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or give such other order, for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal, or disposition of the property, as the Court thinks fit, or refuse such injunction or other order.

Notes.

An appeal was preferred against an order granting an injunction under sec. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the purpose of stopping the execution-proceedings in respect of certain immoveable property which had been attached with a view to sale in execution of a decree obtained by R against N. Upon the attachment of the property, S put forward a claim. That claim was refused, and, as provided by sec. 246, S immediately brought a suit against R to establish his right, and it was in this suit that the order now complained of was made. The injunction was one restraining the defendant, R, from executing his decree. N was subsequently made a party to the suit. R appealed to the High Court against the order granting the injunction. Held that the provisions of sec. 92 did not justify the issue of the injunction. It could not be said that the property was in danger of being wasted, damaged, or alienated by R, nor has the property been in his possession. The proper course should have been for S to present a petition to the lower Court for a postponement of the sale, the attachment continuing. The High Court therefore ordered that the injunction be dissolved, and that the application should be dealt with as if it were made in the execution-proceedings, and that an order should be entered on those proceedings staying the sale pending the suit which had been commenced, provided always that it should be competent to R, in case of any under delay in prosecuting the suit, to make a further application to the Court for an immediate sale.—11 B. L. R., App. 27; 20 W. R., 11; 24 W. R., 70.

The plaintiffs being in possession of a certain mud-dock used for docking and repairing vessels, and being threatened by the defendants with a suit to eject them therefrom, sued for specific performance of an alleged agreement between themselves and the defendants, under which they were, on certain terms, entitled to the use and occupation of the dock until the repairs of two of their vessels were completed; and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from ejecting them until the completion of the repairs. In support of an application for an interim injunction to restrain the defendants from taking proceedings to eject the plaintiffs until their suit had been heard, the affidavits of the plaintiffs stated that on the faith of the agreement one of their steamers had been docked and taken to pieces; that the repairs could not be finished for a considerable time, and that the vessel could not be removed from the dock without great loss and irreparable injury to them. The affidavits of the defendants denied the making of the agreement alleged by the plaintiffs, and set forth another agreement, under which they alleged the plaintiffs had been in possession of the dock, and which agreement having come to an end they were entitled to eject the plaintiffs; they did not deny the loss to the plaintiffs which would be the result of moving the vessel before the repairs were completed, nor did they allege any delay in making the repairs, but they submitted that such loss would be the consequence of the plaintiffs' own act in docking their vessel without any final agreement having been come to between the parties. The dock was situated in the district of Hooghly, and the defendants' suit for possession, unless transferred to the High Court, would be tried in the Hooghly Court. There were facts which in the opinion of the Court went to show that the plaintiffs' had acted bona fide. Held (per MARKBY. J.), on the above facts, that inasmuch as the plaintiff's statements, if true, raised a fair and substantial question for decision as to the rights of the parties, and looking to the inconvenience of allowing the same matter to be litigated simultaneously in different Courts between the same parties, the plaintiffs were entitled to an interim injunction restraining the defendants from bringing their suit until the plaintiffs' suit was heard. Semble.—An interim injunction may issue, although there is a contradiction on the facts. On appeal the Court was of opinion that, under the circumstances, there was an equity which entitled the plaintiffs to be kept quiet and undisturbed possession of the dock until the repairs were completed; and confirmed the order for an interim injunction, but modified it by restraining the defendants, not from bringing their suit, but merely from executing any decree they might obtain therein until the plaintiffs should have had a reasonable time to complete the repairs of their vessel. Although, by the Letters Patent of 1865, the provisions of Act VIII. of 1859 were not expressly made applicable to the High Court, as was done by the Letters Patent of 1862—semble, the order granting the injunction was an order under sec. 92, Act VIII of 1859, and therefore an appeal lay under sec. 94.—14 B. L. R., 352.

An appeal will not lie against an order refusing to appoint a receiver under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 92.—1 M. H. C. R., 129.

Where a plaintiff has not brought his suit or applied for an injunction at the earliest opportunity, but has waited till the building complained of by him has been completed, and then asks the Court to have it removed, a mandatory injunction will not generally be granted, although there might be cases where it would be granted. Mere notice not to continue building so as to obstruct a plaintiff's rights is not, when not followed by legal proceedings, a sufficiently special circumstance for granting such relief. Jamnadas Shankarlal v. Atmaram Harjivan (I. L. R., 2 Bom. 138) referred to. The law regarding relief by mandatory injunction explained.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 252.

An objection made under sec. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code to the attachment in execution of a decree of a mortgage-bond of which the objector claimed to be the assignee from the judgment-debtors under an instrument dated prior to the attachment was disallowed; and the objector then brought two suits against the decree-holder and the judgment-debtors, in which he claimed (a) a declaration of his right to the bond, and (b) to recover a sum of money from the judgment-debtors on the basis of the assignment. The first Court dismissed both suits, on the ground that the alleged assignment was a collusive transaction entered into after the attachment between the objector and the judgment-debtors for the purpose of defeating the attachment. Pending an appeal to the High Court, the objector applied to that Court for a temporary injunction under sec. 492 of the Code, restraining the decree-holder from bringing the bond to sale in execution of the decree. Held that, although in such cases the provisions of sec. 492 should be applied with the greatest care, one of the objects of the Legislature in passing that section was to guard as far as possible against multiplicity of suits, and as many complications probably resulting in further litigation were likely to arise if the decree-holder were allowed to proceed with the execution-sale, and no practical injury to any one would be caused by restraining her from so doing until the decision of the appeal, a temporary injunction should be granted, subject to security being given by the appellant.—10 Al. 80.

A claim by R to certain property which had been attached by B in the course of execution-proceedings in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Dacca having been rejected, R instituted a suit in the Court of the Second Subordinate Judge to establish his title to the property. In that suit he applied to the Court in which his suit was brought for an injunction under sec. 492 to stay the sale of the property attached by B in the execution proceedings; but that application was rejected, and R thereupon applied for and obtained from the Court of the First Subordinate Judge an order staying the sale of the attached property until the hearing of the suit brought by him to establish his right to it:—Held, in an application under sec. 622 of the Code, to set the latter order aside, that sec. 492 of the Code of 1882 has, and was intended to have, a wider application than sec. 92 of Act VIII of 1859 had, and provides a remedy where property is “in danger of being wrongfully sold”; if the circumstances justified it, an order could have been obtained under that section from the Court of the Second Subordinate Judge to stay the sale. There being this alteration in the law, and such a remedy provided and no express provision in the Code for stay of execution by a Court executing a decree on the application of a third party, the order of the First Subordinate Judge was made without jurisdiction, and should be set aside.—12 Cal. 515.

Where a Court made an order granting a temporary injunction under sec. 492, without directing notice of the application for injunction to be issued to the other side, and its order directing stay of sale of property in execution was passed ex-parte, without the other side being given an opportunity to show cause, held that the order was irregular. Where ancestral property was attached in execution of a decree, and a son of the judgment-debtor instituted a suit to establish his right to the property, and made an application for a temporary injunction directing stay of sale pending the decision of the suit, held that, inasmuch as what was advertised to be sold was the rights and interests of the plaintiff's father in the property, and it could not be said that the property was being “wrongfully sold in execution of a decree,” and the application on the face of it disclosed no sufficient ground to warrant an order under sec. 492 of the Civil Procedure Code being made as prayed, the temporary injunction ought not to have been granted.—7 Al. 550.

Notes.

The effect of a temporary injunction granted under sec. 492 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code is not to make a subsequent mortgage of the property in question illegal and void, within the meaning of sec. 23 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872). Such a penalty must not be read into sec. 493, which provides otherwise for the breach of an injunction granted under sec. 492.—9 Al. 497.

493. In any suit for restraining the defendant from committing a breach of contract or other injury, whether compensation be claimed in the suit or not, the plaintiff may, at any time after the commencement of the suit, and either before or after judgment, apply to the Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right.

Injunction to restrain repetition or continuance of breach.

The Court may, by order, grant such injunction on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit, or refuse the same.

In case of disobedience, an injunction granted under this section or section 492 may be enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant for a term not exceeding six months, or the attachment of his property, or both.

No attachment under this section shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the defendant has not obeyed the injunction, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the plaintiff such compensation as it thinks fit, and may pay the balance (if any) to the defendant.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 9 Al. 497, noted under sec. 492.

494. The Court shall in all cases, except where it appears that the object of granting the injunction would be defeated by the delay, before granting an injunction, direct notice of the application for the same to be given to the opposite party.

Before granting injunction, Court to direct notice to opposite party.

Notes.

A petition praying for a temporary injunction in a suit was presented by the plaintiff in a Subordinate Court. The Judge refused to pass orders on it without hearing the defendants, and ordered notice to issue to them. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge who granted the injunction prayed for. Held that no appeal lay from the Subordinate Court, and that the District Judge had purported to exercise a jurisdiction not vested in him by law.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 186.

495. An injunction directed to a Corporation or public Company is binding, not only on the Corporation or Company itself, but also on all members and officers of the Corporation or Company whose personal action it seeks to restrain.

Injunction to Corporation binding on its members and officers.

496. Any order for an injunction may be discharged, or varied, or set aside by the Court, on application made thereto by any party dissatisfied with such order.

Order for injunction may be discharged, varied, or set aside.

497. If it appears to the Court that an injunction which it has granted was applied for on insufficient grounds, or Compensation to defendant for issue of injunction on insufficient grounds.

if, after the issue of the injunction, the suit is dismissed, or judgment is given against the plaintiff by default or otherwise, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such sum, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant, for the expense or injury caused to him by the issue of the injunction :

Provided that the Court shall not award under this section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

Proviso.

An award under this section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of the issue of the injunction.

B.—Interlocutory Orders.

498. The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, order the sale, by any person named in such order, and in such manner, and on such terms as it thinks fit, of any moveable property being the subject of such suit, which is subject to speedy and natural decay.

Power to order interim sale of perishable articles.

Power to make order for detention, &c., of subject-matter, and to authorize entry, taking of samples, and experiments.

499. The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, and on such terms as it thinks fit,

(a) make an order for the detention, preservation, or inspection of any property being the subject of such suit ;

(b) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid, authorize any person to enter upon or into any land or building in the possession of any other party to such suit ; and

(c) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid, authorized any samples to be taken, or any observation to be made, or experiment to be tried, which may seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of obtaining full information or evidence.

The provisions hereinbefore contained as to execution of process shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to persons authorized to enter under this section.

Note.

An application for an order under sec. 499 of the Code of Civil Procedure can only be made by a plaintiff after summons has been served, and after reasonable notice of the intention to apply for the order has been given in writing to the defendant.—I. L. R., 7 Madr. 231.

500. An application by the plaintiff for an order under section 498 or section 499 may be made after notice in writing to the defendant at any time after service of the summons.

An application by the defendant for a like order may be made after notice in writing to the plaintiff, and at any time after the applicant has appeared.

501. When land paying revenue to Government, or a tenure liable to sale, is the subject of a suit, if the party in possession of such land or tenure neglects to pay the Government-revenue or the rent due to the proprietor of the tenure, as the case may be, and such land or tenure is consequently ordered to be sold, any other party to the suit claiming to have an interest in such land or tenure may, upon payment of the revenue or rent due previously to the sale (and with or without security at the discretion of the Court), be put in immediate possession of the land or tenure ; and the Court in its decree may award against the defaulter the amount so paid, with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court thinks fit, or may charge the amount so paid, with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court orders, in any adjustment of accounts which may be directed in the decree passed in the suit.

502. When the subject-matter of a suit is money or some other thing capable of delivery, and any party thereto admits that he holds such money or other thing as a trustee for another party, or that it belongs or is due to another party, the Court may order the same to be deposited in Court or delivered to such last-named party, with or without security, subject to the further direction of the Court.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVERS.

503. Whenever it appears to the Court to be necessary for the realization, preservation, or better custody or management of any property, moveable or immovable, the subject of a suit, or under attachment, the Court may, by order—

(a) appoint a Receiver of such property, and, if need be,

(b) remove the person in whose possession or custody the property may be from the possession or custody thereof;

(c) commit the same to the custody or management of such Receiver; and

(d) grant to such Receiver such fee or commission on the rents and profits of the property by way of remuneration “as the Court thinks fit,”* and all such powers as to bringing and defending suits, and for the realization, management, protection, preservation, and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of instruments in writing, as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit.

Receiver's liabilities.

Every Receiver so appointed shall—

(e) give such security (if any) as the Court thinks fit duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property;

(f) pass his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs;

(g) pay the balance due from him thereon as the Court directs; and

(h) be responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

* The words quoted have been inserted by Act VII of 1888, sec. 42.

Nothing in the section authorizes the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property under attachment any person whom the parties to the suit, or some or one of them, have or has not a present right so to remove.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An appeal lies from an order passed under sec. 243 of Act VIII of 1859, postponing the sale of the property attached in order to enable the judgment-debtor to raise the amount of the decree against him (JACKSON, J., dissenting).—1 B. L. R., (F. B.) 7; 10 W. R., (F. B.) 5.

The fact of the judgment-debtor's possessing properties other than the one attached is no ground for rejecting an application, under sec. 243, Act, VIII of 1859, for the appointment of a manager. To save a particular property from sale, a judgment-debtor must shew the value and condition of other properties in her possession, and the Judge must consider how and by what arrangement such a disposal of different portions of such property may be made, so as to avoid the sale of the property already attached.—3 B. L. R., App. 107; 12 W. R., 66.

The receiver in a suit is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court, in order to preserve the subject-matter of the suit pendente lite; and the possession of the receiver is simply the possession of the Court. He has no personal rights in the property, nor can he take any steps with regard to it without the sanction of the Court. If it is necessary for him to take action of any sort, he should be put in motion by the Court on the application of the parties to the suit; and whatever he rightly does with regard to the property, he does simply as the agent of the owners of the property. Where the receiver in a suit had, by order of Court, sold certain property in the suit, and had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a plaint praying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract was admitted with the receiver as co-plaintiff, he having obtained leave to sue.—6 B. L. R., 486.

Where a duly appointed manager is in charge of property belonging to a judgment-debtor, and the judgment-debtor applies that other properties should also be placed in the manager's charge, it is necessary that the property already in the manager's charge should be attached before he is appointed to take charge of the other properties. The rule of Court of 11th July 1871 does not limit to two years the time for which a manager should be appointed; but the Judge should exercise a proper discretion in the matter.—8. B. L. R., App. 23; 16 W. R., 275; 17 W. R., 101.

The plaintiff, resident in Calcutta, sued H, resident in Bombay, but carrying on business by his gomasta in Calcutta, and others resident in Bombay, to set aside a release, executed in Calcutta, of his interest in certain property situate in Bombay, on the allegation that it had been obtained from him by false representations made by H. The plaint prayed that the release might be declared void, and cancelled; that a certain inventory and account relating to the said property, which the plaintiff alleged he had been induced to file in Bombay by the false representations of H, might be declared not binding on the plaintiff; for an account; and for the appointment of a receiver. Held that the whole cause of action did not arise in Calcutta so as to enable the plaintiff to sue in Calcutta without leave of the Court under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. The word "defendant" in that clause means all the defendants, if there are several defendants to a suit. It is not sufficient that one of the defendants should dwell or carry on business within the jurisdiction. An appeal lies from an order granting leave to the plaintiff to institute a suit under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Quære.—Whether the High Court at Calcutta can appoint a receiver of property situate at Bombay?—13 B. L. R., 91; 21 W. R., 303.

Numerous decrees had been obtained against the defendants, part of whose property consisted of a village which was attached in 1859. The village was under the management of the Collector, whom the Courts below treated as a manager put in under sec. 243 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decree-holders received rateable shares in the net income of the village in liquidation of their respective decrees. It appeared that it would take fifteen years to pay off the various decree-holders. The petitioner applied to the Civil Court for an attachment of the village in execution of his decree. The application was refused on the ground that the village was already under attachment in satisfaction of other decrees. Upon appeal the High Court ordered a sale of the village; the sale-proceeds to be dealt with in accordance with the proper provisions of the Code on the ground that it could never have been intended to give the Civil Courts for an indefinite length of time the management of the encumbered estates of the country, or to compel decree-holders to submit to such an unreasonable delay as fifteen or twenty years before obtaining satisfaction of their decree. Quære.—Whether sec. 243 was intended to be applied to the case of more than a single decree-holder.—5 M. H. C. R., 272.

Sec. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code does not authorize an order in the execution-department having the effect of staying the sale of certain property for one year.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 1.

A manager may be appointed by the Court under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 243, without the consent of the decree-holder.—Marshall's Rep., 261; 2 Hay's Rep., 112.

The Court has no power to order that the manager should, out of the proceeds of the estate, satisfy the claims of persons other than decree-holders.—Marshall's Rep., 261; 2 Hay's Rep., 112.

A receiver appointed by order of the Supreme Court can only sue for possession, and has no right to question the title of a third party in a suit with respect to the property put under his management.—2 Hay's Rep., 395.

The appointment of a receiver is a matter resting in the discretion of the Court. The powers of appointing a receiver conferred by sec. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be exercised with a sound discretion; upon a view of the whole circumstances of the case, not merely the circumstances which might make the appointment expedient for the protection of the property, but all the circumstances connected with the right which is asserted, and has to be established. The Court will not interfere by appointing a receiver where a right is asserted to property in the possession of a defendant claiming to hold it under a legal title, unless a strong case is made out. Owen v. Homan (4 H. L. C., 997, 1032) Clayton v. Attorney-General (Cooper's cases, Vol. 1., p. 97) referred to.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 818.

In a suit brought in 1880 by the widow of a deceased partner, to wind up a partnership, the surviving partner was prohibited by the Court, at the instance of the plaintiff, from collecting debts due to the firm; but leave was given to apply for the recovery of debts which might become barred by limitation. After decree, on the application of the plaintiff, a receiver was appointed under sec. 503 to collect outstanding debts for the purpose of executing the decree. The receiver having sued in 1883 to recover a debt which was due to the firm in 1879, the suit was dismissed (1) on the ground that the appointment of a receiver after decree was ultra vires; (2) because the debt was barred by limitation:—Held (1) that the appointment of the receiver was valid; (2) that under sec. 15 of the Limitation Act the suit was not barred.—8 Madr. 229.

In 1879 a zemindar granted a lease of part of the zemindari for twenty years, reserving a rent of 18,000 rupees per annum. In 1881, the zemindari having been attached by a creditor, the zamindar granted a new lease, in perpetuity in lieu of the former lease, reserving a rent of Rs. 12,000 a year. A receiver of the zemindari, having subsequently been appointed with full powers under the provisions of sec. 503, sued the lessee to recover rent at the rate reserved in the first lease from 1881. Held that the receiver was entitled to recover the rent claimed. The provisions of sec. 503 were intended to declare that the receiver, in respect of all property which was or could be attached, had the powers of the owner as they existed at the time the property was brought under the orders of the Court by attachment, provided that they have not ceased by operation of law.—8 Madr. 418.

A zemindari was attached in execution of certain decrees against the zemindar, and the plaintiff was appointed receiver with full powers, under sec. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to manage the zemindari. Before the appointment of the receiver, the zemindar had expended certain sums at the defendants' request to repair a tank for the irrigation of lands held by them in common with him. This suit was brought to recover the sums so expended. It was objected that the receiver could not maintain the suit on the ground that the sum sued for was neither the subject of a suit against the zemindar, nor property attached in execution of a decree against him:—Held that the receiver could maintain the suit. It was also contended that the suit, whether viewed as one for contribution or upon a contract, was barred by limitation in respect of all payments made by the zemindar more than three years before the suit; and, further, that the receiver could only sue the defendants severally for their proportionate shares of the sum claimed:—Held that the suit being for work and labour done at their request was not barred by limitation, and that the defendants were jointly and severally liable for the sum sued for.—9 Madr. 334.

An order rejecting an application to appoint a receiver is an order passed under sec. 503, and is therefore appealable under sec. 588, cl. 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Subramanya v. Appasami, (I. L. R., 6 Madr. 355,) overruled.—10 Madr. 179.

In a suit for partition of a joint estate the words "property the subject of a suit" in sec. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code mean the whole joint estate. In such a case "the owner" in sec. 503 (d) means the whole body of owners to whom the joint estate belongs. The Court has jurisdiction to place the whole of a joint estate out of which a plaintiff seeks to have his share partitioned in the hands of a receiver, and to order that a receiver so appointed shall be at liberty to raise money on the security of the whole of such joint estate.—17 Cal. 614.

An order refusing to appoint a receiver under sec. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not appealable.—6 Madr. 355.

A servant of a firm, the business of which is being managed by a receiver appointed under sec. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, has no preferential claim over the attaching creditor, on the assets of the firm for wages due before the appointment of the receiver.—6 Madr. 138.

A manager appointed under sec. 243 of Act VIII of 1859 is appointed merely to collect rent and other receipts and profits of the land, to carry on the existing state of affairs as the proprietor himself had been doing, and he has no power to issue notice of enhancement.—8 Cal. 719; 11 C. L. R., 13.

No appeal lies from an order passed under sec. 505 of the Civil Procedure Code by a Court subordinate to a District Court, submitting the name of a person sought to be appointed a receiver, together with the grounds for the nomination, such being only a preliminary order or expression of opinion, and not an order under sec. 503. Nor does an appeal lie from the order of the District Court confirming such nomination, but the District Court ought, when the question is raised, to decide on the necessity for the appointment of a receiver, the words "or pass such other order as it thinks fit" in sec. 505 being sufficient to include that question, and not merely to decide the fitness or otherwise of the person nominated to the office of receiver.—7 Cal. 719.

The powers conferred by sec. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code are not to be exercised as a matter of course, and it is not a reason for allowing an application for the appointment of a receiver, that it can do no harm to appoint one. The discretion given by that section is one that should be used with the greatest care and caution. Because a plaintiff in his plaint makes violent and wholesale charges of waste and malversation against a defendant in possession of property as executor under a will or as the tenant for life, and upon this basis applies for a receiver to be appointed, it is not a necessary consequence that such appointment should be made. Held in this case, where the sons of a Hindu widow, in possession of her husband's estate under a will, sued their mother, as reversioners under the will, for possession of the estate, on the ground of mismanagement and waste, and on the same grounds applied for the appointment of a receiver under sec. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code, that a receiver had been appointed on insufficient grounds.—5 Al. 556.

See I. L. R., 5 Bom. 45, noted under sec. 244; 11 Bom. 448, noted under section 267.

504. Where the property is land paying revenue to Government, or land of which the revenue has been assigned or redeemed, and the Court considers that the interests of those concerned will be promoted by the management of the Collector, "the Court may, with the consent of the Collector, appoint him"* to be receiver of such property.

* The words quoted have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 43, for the words, "the Court may appoint the Collector".

505. The powers conferred by this chapter shall be exercised only by High Courts and District Courts : Provided that, whenever the Judge of a Court subordinate to a District Court considers it expedient that a Receiver should be appointed in any suit before him, he shall nominate such person as he considers fit for such appointment, and submit such person's name, with the grounds for the nomination, to the District Court, and the District Court shall authorize such Judge to appoint the person so nominated, or pass such other order as it thinks fit.

PART V. OF SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION.

506. If all the parties to a suit desire that any matter in difference between them in the suit be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply in person, or by their respective pleaders specially authorized in writing in this behalf, to the Court for an order of reference.

Every such application shall be in writing, and shall state the particular matter sought to be referred.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The subject of the suit before the Munsif was referred to arbitration. The Munsif set aside the award given by the arbitrators ; but, on appeal, the Judge reversed that decision, and gave judgment in accordance with the award. In special appeal, held " it is unnecessary to enter into the grounds set forth in the petition of special appeal against the Judge's decision, because it is manifest that the order of reference to arbitration is void. It appears that the application for this purpose was not concurred in by all the defendants, inasmuch as one defendant, who had substantial interest in the suit, did not apply. We think that there can be no doubt that an application for arbitration, as provided by sec. 313 of Act VIII of 1859, must be made by all the parties who are materially interested ; and in this case, the reference, having been made to arbitration upon an application, not by all the parties, was wholly invalid, and must be set aside."—Per L. S. JACKSON and GLOVER, JJ.—Special Appeal, No. 371 of 1868, from Manbhoom, 16th July 1868, 1 B. L. R., (S. N.) 10 ; 10 W. R., 71.

It appears to me that the case of Nusserwanji Pestanji v. Meer Mynuddin Khan, Wullud Mher Sodrudin Khan, Bahadoor, is binding upon us; and that, in consequence of no time having been fixed, in the order directing the award, for sending in the award, the award itself falls to the ground. We do not think that this is a mere technical objection. Sec. 318 of Act VIII. of 1859 provides that "an award shall not be liable to be set aside, only by reason of its not having been completed within the period allowed by the Court, unless," &c. But the award could not be set aside even if any of the excepted reasons existed, unless a time for making the award was fixed in the order referring the case to arbitration.—Per PEACOCK, C.J., and MITIER, J.—Miscellaneous Regular Appeals, Nos. 253 and 254 of 1868, from Beerbhoom, 27th July 1868, 1 B. L. R., S. N., 12; 10 W. R., 206.

An Appellate Court can ipso motu raise the question of limitation for the first time where it appears on the face of the plaint that the suit is barred. When A sued for reversal of a survey-award, and for recovery of possession, alleging dispossession subsequent to the date of the award, held that his suit was not barred by reason of its being brought beyond three years from the date of the award.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 25; 10 W. R., 71.

The property of several co-sharers, some of whom were minors, was sold to a single purchaser, under a deed of sale, which contained a covenant by the vendors, who professed to act on behalf of themselves and the minors, that they would compensate the vendee for any loss he might incur, should the minors, when they come of age, not ratify the sale. A sued to enforce her right of pre-emption in respect of the lands sold. The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that A could not enforce her claim of pre-emption in respect of the shares of the minors, and on the Court's suggestion the plaint was amended so as to ask only for enforcement of her claim in respect only of the shares of the vendors of full age. Held that A was bound to claim her right against all the shares, and could not enforce it in respect of some only. Semble.—A plaint cannot be amended in an Appellate Court.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 78; 10 W. R., 111.

Where all matters in difference between the parties in the suit were referred to arbitration under an order of Court, held that the arbitrators had power to award interest after the date of the submission, and to deal with the costs of the reference and award.—1 B. L. R., (O. C.) 144.

Where, in a case referred to arbitration, no provision was made in the order of reference for any difference of opinion as laid down in sec. 316 of Act VIII of 1859, held that the first Court should have, when the case came before it, and objection was taken to the award, ordered that the arbitrators should appoint an umpire, or should have declared that the decision should be with the majority, or should have appointed an umpire, or should have made such other arrangement as might have been agreed upon by the parties, or, if they could not agree, such as the Court might think proper. This not having been done, the High Court in special appeal, ordered that the case should be remitted through the lower Appellate Court to the first Court, and the case again submitted by it to the arbitrators for decision by them, with a distinct order in the terms of sec. 316.—2 B. L. R., (S. N.) 14; 10 W. R., 398.

Arbitrators ought only to take such evidence as is required by the terms of the agreement referring the question in dispute to arbitration.—2 B. L. R., App. 25.

An Appellate Court is competent at any stage to allow objections to be taken to an apparent defect in the plaint. Held that a party against whom an order has been obtained under sec. 246, Act VIII of 1859, must, if sue for its reversal, assert substantially the same right as that which has been contended for in the execution. Held by JACKSON, J., that in a suit for declaration of title, defendants must have given a cause of action by impugning it antecedently to plaint filed, even though their written statement be hostile.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 212 ; 11 W. R., 40.

When a person goes away from this country, and remains away, and there is no evidence to show an intention to return, that person becomes incapable of acting as umpire within the meaning of sec. 319 of Act VIII of 1859.—4 B. L. R., (O. C.) 89.

Two out of three arbitrators appointed in the case submitted their award before the Munsif. The defendant, against whom the award had been made, applied to the Munsif to set aside the award, on the grounds of corruption and misconduct, and that the award was a nullity, inasmuch as only two out of three arbitrators had made the award. The Munsif overruled the objections, and passed a decree in terms of the award. On appeal to the Judge, the order of the Munsif was set aside, on the ground that the award was illegal, as two only of the three arbitrators originally appointed had made the award, and that the evidence did not prove the plaintiff's case. On an application to the High Court to set aside the order of the Judge, held that, under sec. 325, Act VIII. of 1859, the Judge had no jurisdiction to set aside the award when the Court of first instance had passed judgment according to the award.—5 B. L. R., App. 57 ; S. C. 14 W. R., 38.

By an order of Court, of January 17th, 1867, a suit was referred to two arbitrators, under sec. 312, Act VIII. of 1859, who were to make their award in writing, and submit the same to the Court within three months. No order for enlarging that time was made. The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on May 22nd, 1867, and four subsequent meetings were held, at which all the parties attended, and evidence was taken ; at the last of which meetings, namely, on 27th July, an objection for the first time was taken on behalf of the defendant that the time limited by the order of reference had expired, but the arbitrators proceeded with the reference. The award was made on 12th August 1867, and remained with one of the arbitrators until his death in August 1868. Subsequently it was produced by the other arbitrator on the application of the parties to the suit, and delivered to the successful party, by whom it was brought into Court on the 10th May 1870, and judgment was moved for in accordance therewith. Held that the arbitrators had authority to make the award. The award was properly submitted to the Court. Sec. 320, Act VIII. of 1859, does not make it necessary for the arbitrators to submit the award to the Court personally. Submission to the Court, under sec. 320, is not necessary to the completion of an award under secs. 315 and 318. Although an arbitrator may deliver his award to one of the parties, he ought not to hand over with it the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits.—5 B. L. R., 357.

A suit was, by order of Court, referred to three specified arbitrators, who were to make an award within six months, and, in case of difference of opinion, all matters in dispute were to be referred to the decision of an umpire. The arbitrators had only one meeting, at which an agreement was come to by the parties to settle all matters in dispute among themselves, and withdraw the matters from arbitration, which was accordingly done, but nothing appeared to have been afterwards done. No award was made by the original arbitrators within six months from the reference. On application by the plaintiff to have the suit restored to the file of the Court, held that the suit was still pending, the arbitrators not having determined it while they had jurisdiction to do so, and it was ordered that it should be brought again before the Court.—6 B. L. R., App. 74.

Where parties had executed a deed, agreeing to refer all matters in dispute to the arbitration of three persons, and one of the arbitrators refused to continue to act, and the other two consequently refused to proceed with the reference, the Court refused to order the agreement to be filed in Court.—2 B. L. R., App. 13.

Where, in a suit to recover a sum of money on an award, the five arbitrators came to a decision, and made, dated, and signed a rough draft of their award, and the defendant then withdrew from the submission, and a fair copy was then made, bearing the same date as that of the rough draft, but signed by only four of the arbitrators, held that the award was complete at the date of the rough draft, and that its validity was not affected by the subsequent occurrences. The validity of an award cannot be impeached, because the arbitrators afterwards do an act required neither by the law nor the terms of the submission.—1 M. H. C. R., 178.

Either of the parties in a reference to arbitration may withdraw from the proceedings at any time previous to the making of the award, unless the submission to arbitration has been made a rule of Court under sec. 526 of the Civil Procedure Code. If a revocation by deed can set aside a deed by which a person binds himself to abide by the decision of arbitrators, revocation by parol may set aside a parol agreement. Notice is not necessary. 3 M. H. C. R., 82. But see 8 M. H. C. R., 46.

No appeal lies from an order directing that an agreement to submit matters in dispute to arbitration should be filed under the provisions of sec. 326 of Procedure Code. The fact of one of the parties to the agreement revoking his submission is not a "sufficient cause" within the meaning of that section. The English cases on the subject considered.—3 M. H. C. R., 183. S. C. on appeal, 12 Moore's L. A., 112; 10 W. R., (P. C.) 51; 7 M. H. C. R., 257.

A suit lies to enforce an award made without the intervention of a Court of Justice. The procedure provided in sec. 327 of the Civil Procedure Code is not imperative upon a plaintiff who seeks to enforce an award so made.—4 M. H. C. R., 119; 8 M. H. C. R., 81.

B submitted to arbitration the matters in dispute between himself and the other parties to a suit, on the terms that an umpire should be selected from seven persons whom he named. Those terms were not objected to by the other side. Arbitrators were agreed upon, and R, one of the seven persons named in the submission, was appointed an umpire. But R and some of the arbitrators declined to act. Fresh arbitrators were then chosen, but no umpire, and the arbitrators being equally divided in their opinion on the case, the Court of its own motion appointed as umpire L, who was not one of the seven persons named in the submission. B objected to L's appointment, but the Judge overruled the objection, and passed judgment in accordance with the umpire's award. Held, on appeal, that, as it was stipulated as an essential part of the submission that an umpire should be chosen from seven persons named, the power of the Court to appoint an umpire, under sec. 319 of the Civil Procedure Code, was controlled and limited by that stipulation; and that the umpire not being one of the seven persons named in the submission there was no valid award.—7 M. H. C. R., 72.

Plaintiff brought this suit to obtain a decree dismissing defendants—committee and manager of a certain pagoda—from their offices on the ground of malversation. The Court made an order expressed to be by consent of the parties concerned, and in exercise of the Court's discretionary power under sec. 16 of Act XX. of 1863, referring the matters in difference to three arbitrators for final determination, said arbitrators "to make their award in writing, and submit the same" within a certain period. Each arbitrator delivered a separate award in writing, two arbitrators finding for the plaintiff. The Civil Judge made a decree in accordance with the award of the majority of the arbitrators. The first defendant appealed on the grounds (1) that he had not consented to the arbitration; and (2) that, there being no provision in the order of reference to the effect that the finding of a majority of the arbitrators should prevail, there was no valid award. Held that in this case the order of the Judge was valid without the assent of the persons to be bound. That he might, when he made the order, have inserted as a provision that the decision of the majority should be that of the body, and that there was no reason why his ratification of that mode of decision wholly within his discretion should not be equivalent to a previous command.—7 M. H. C. R., 173.

An agreement to refer an existing dispute to arbitration is as binding and capable of enforcement as any other lawful contract; and a submission of such a dispute to arbitration once made is not, without just and sufficient cause, revocable.—8 M. H. C. R., 46.

In an application to set aside an order made by a Judge in chambers, extending the time (of ten days) for making an application, under sec. 324 of Act VIII. of 1859, to set aside an award, on the ground of misconduct of one of the arbitrators and of the umpire, held the words of the section being in their ordinary import obligatory, and there being nothing in the other parts of the Code to show that such construction was at variance with the intention of the Legislature, and a similar provision having been held by the Courts in England to be imperative, that the application, to set aside the award must be made within the ten days, provided the Court be then sitting, and if not, on the first day of its sitting after that time; and that there is no power to enlarge the time to make such application.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 285; 2nd Ed. 270; S. C., 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 234.

In determining the stamp required for any particular instrument, regard must be had to the real nature of the instrument, and not to the title which may have been given to it by the parties, if the contents of the instrument show that the title is a misnomer. The discretion vested in a Court of Justice must be exercised in a sound and reasonable manner, and a capricious and unreasonable exercise of discretion on the part of a Court of first instance is an error in law, which it is the duty of an Appellate Court to correct.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 94.

By a Government notification of the 3rd of June 1863, published in the Gazette, it was declared, under the provisions of Act VI. of 1857, that a certain strip of land, passing by the mill of the defendants, was required for a public purpose—the B., B., & C. I. Railway, a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office. On the 4th of November following, the Secretary of the defendant's Company received a notice, signed by the Collector, requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required. The Secretary went to the Collector's office, and there saw a plan, from which it appeared that an adjoining well, from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water, was intended to be taken, but no compensation for the well or land required was then agreed upon. On the 28th of November, a notice was served upon the defendants, signed by the Collector, stating, that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint a second arbitrator to determine the amount of compensation for the land (describing it) required by the B., B., & C. I. Railway Co. The defendant's Secretary wrote, in reply, that the defendants had appointed an arbitrator on their behalf to determine the amount of compensation for their land required for the B., B., & C. I. Railway Co. Semble, that a contract was entered into by the last-mentioned notice, and letter of reply to it, of which specific performance could be enforced. Held that the defendants had, by appointing their arbitrator to determine the compensation for the land required, waived any irregularity in the previous proceedings, and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufactory taken under sec. 32 of Act VI. of 1857, though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently, and the defendants had shortly before such proceeding made such a claim. A well in a mill-compound, from which the mill's engine is by means of pipe supplied with water, is part of a manufactory within the meaning of Act VI. of 1857, sec. 32.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 27.

The separately recorded opinions of different dates of arbitrators (appointed under Act VI. of 1857 to assess the value of land taken for a public purpose), who have never met or consulted together, do not constitute an award under the Act. An award to be good must contain the joint judgment of the arbitrators up to the latest period previous to the execution of the award. Where a suit for the recovery of land taken, or compensation for being deprived of it, was filed after the expiration of three months from the date of an award, and the Court held the award to be null, the Court, following the procedure laid down in sec. 31 of Act VI of 1857, referred the parties to a fresh arbitration.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 79.

Where one of two arbitrators, appointed under sec. 10 of Act VI. of 1857, by a letter and also verbally authorized his co-arbitrator to appoint a certain person as third arbitrator, and the co-arbitrator wrote to the proposed third arbitrator informing him that he had been so appointed, semble that there was a good appointment "by writing" of the third arbitrator within the meaning of sec. 12 of Act VI of 1857. Where a third arbitrator appointed under sec. 12 of Act IV of 1857, considering that his services were required merely as an umpire, though he had due notice of the first meeting, neglected to attend that or any subsequent meeting of the arbitrators, and took no part in the making of the award, it was held that such non-attendance of the third arbitrator did not render the award a nullity but was only a ground for setting it aside on the ground of irregularity. Where an officer, appointed under Act VI. of 1857 to conduct arbitration-proceedings on behalf of Government, attended the first two meetings of the arbitrators, and did not object to two of the arbitrators proceeding with the reference in the absence of the third arbitrator, and did not attend the subsequent meetings of the arbitrators, it was held that Government had thereby waived their right to insist on the non-attendance of the third arbitrator as a ground for setting aside the award.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 177.

Upon a motion to amend an award filed under sec. 327 of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground of obvious errors contained in it, it was held that the Court had no power under sec. 327 to amend an award, or remit it for the reconsideration of the arbitrators, but has only the power to file and enforce the award, or reject it.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 391.

Where nine months were allowed to elapse without either party taking action to carry out an agreement to refer a dispute to arbitration, plaintiff was held not to be debarred from prosecuting his suit.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., Ed. 1873, 252.

All matters in difference in the suit, including all dealings and transactions between the parties, having been referred to the arbitration and award of certain persons, the arbitrators should ascertain upon what points the parties are at issue, and upon each of these points come to a finding. If a Court regards an award as not open to objection, such Court must deliver judgment in accordance with the terms of such award, and not modify the same. An award, defective and illegal on the face of it, should be at once remitted to the arbitrators under sec. 323 of ch. 6 of Act VIII. of 1859.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 150.

A judgment given according to an award under sec. 325 of Act VIII. of 1859, without waiting the ten days prescribed by sec. 324 of that Act, is illegal, and will be set aside. After passing judgment according to an award, such award cannot be re-submitted to the arbitrator for re-consideration and correction.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 235.

A Court should make full enquiry into the objections made to an award before setting it aside, and should not hastily assume that the mere circumstance of the arbitrator having some interest in the matter at issue would necessarily bring the award within the provisions of sec. 324 of Act VIII. of 1859, and render it liable to be set aside.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 241.

Where the lower Appellate Court omitted in its order referring the case to arbitration to fix a time for the delivery of the award, as directed by sec. 315 of Act VIII. of 1859, but both the parties permitted the reference to proceed, and took part in the proceedings, without making any objection until after the award was delivered, and when the omission in the order of reference could work no injury to either party, the High Court saw no reason why the omission should be held to avoid the award.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 351.

An appeal will lie from a decree which varies an award by containing a direction for payment by instalments which is not contained in the award. The plaintiff in the suit, which was one on accounts stated, agreed to refer to arbitration the question whether the accounts were correct or not. It was unnecessary for the arbitrators to determine whether the account stated was proved. The decree was passed on the very day the award was filed. The plaintiff was not estopped from taking objections to the award by reason of his silence when the decree was pronounced. The award was held invalid, among other reasons, because it purported to be the award of four persons, whereas the order of reference was addressed only to three.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 367.

It was decided by the Full Bench in Lala Ishuri Pershad v. Hur Bhunjun Tewaree (15 W. R., F. B., 9) that the question of the existence of a legal award is one which is open to appeal, but that, when the existence of the award has been finally determined, and judgment is given in accordance with the award, then there is no appeal.—2 C. L. R., 362.

Where the partners of a firm in their partnership-deed agreed to refer their disputes to arbitration, and the reference made in pursuance of this agreement gave the arbitrators a power to make partition, but omitted a power to sell, held, on the award being made a rule of Court, that the Court had no power, under sec. 326, Act VIII. of 1859, to order the sale of certain property of which the arbitrators were unable to make partition, and the sale of which they recommended on that ground.—3 C. L. R., 357.

Where an arbitration-bond provides that the matters in dispute referred to the arbitrators may be taken up and dealt with seriatim and the award delivered bit by bit (khund-khund), it is not necessary under sec. 327 of Act VIII. of 1859 (corresponding with secs. 525, 526, Act XIV., 1882) that all the matters referred to should have been decided before the first portion of the award dealing with some only of the subjects in dispute can be filed.—4 C. L. R., 92.

Where the house and lands of a joint Hindu family were partitioned by the Court according to an award made by an arbitrator to whom the parties had agreed to refer the matter, held, in a subsequent suit, that the Court could not go behind the award and allow one of the members of the family to claim a right of way from the family house to a public road, through the lands allotted by the award to another member, such right of way not having been granted by the award, and there being no such right of way of necessity.—5 C. L. R., 338.

The Court has no power under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to sanction an order passed by the arbitrators to whom a matter has been referred, making the payment of their fees a condition precedent to their hearing the reference.—8 C. L. R., 439.

Refusal by an arbitrator to call witnesses produced by either party amounts to judicial misconduct within the meaning of sec. 521 of the Civil Procedure Code.—12 C. L. R., 564.

When complaint has been preferred to a Criminal Court, and the Magistrate has directed that the subject-matter of the complaint be referred to arbitration, if the parties consent, and proceed to such reference, the award may be enforced under the provisions of sec. 327, Act VIII. of 1859.—1 Agra H. C. R., 45.

When an award has been made, no plea of jurisdiction or limitation can be raised before the Court, which is to pass its decree according to the award.—1 Agra H. C. R., Rev., 53.

An award made by the consent of the parties cannot be set aside merely by reason of its having been sent in a week later than the date appointed, when such delay is not owing to misconduct or corruption.—1 Agra H. C. R., Rev. 53.

Held that the parties, having signed the award of arbitration, must be bound by that until it is legally set aside, and until it is set aside a suit to enforce rights irrespective of the award is not maintainable.—2 Agra H. C. R., 224.

Held that an award made by one of the arbitrators and the umpire in the absence of the second arbitrator, who declined to attend, was not a valid award.—3 Agra H. C. R., 93.

The Judge intimated that he should refer the suit to arbitration, and allowed a certain time to the parties to object to that course. No objection was made within such time, and thereupon the Judge referred the cause to arbitrators named by him. After the day fixed the defendants objected. Held that the reference was not warranted, there having been no express consent by the parties.—Marshall's Rep., 517; 2 Hay's Rep., 583.

Where an award was held to be bad on the ground that the deed of submission to arbitration did not contain all the conditions required by the law (Bom. Reg. VII of 1827), as it made no provision as to the "time within which the award was to be given," held that the parol consent of the parties to the deed of submission before the arbitrator to waive such omission will not cure the defect.—6 Moore's I. A., 134.

An award directed that the defendant should pay the costs of the suit, and of the reference, and of the award, without fixing the scale. On application to the Court to do so, the case was sent back to the arbitrator for that purpose. Held that, when the order of reference gives the arbitrator full discretion over costs, he alone can fix the scale.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 7; Cor. 150.

Where one of the arbitrators had been ill, and the time for sending it in elapsed before they could make their award, the Court superseded the arbitration, and recalled the suit.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 359.

To set aside an award, there must have been some fraudulent suppression of evidence or other mal-practice of the successful party, which should be definitely stated in the plaint.—1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 12.

Sec. 326 of the Civil Procedure Code made all submission to arbitration by an instrument in writing practically a rule of Court.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 69.

Where by the terms of a reference to arbitration all matter in difference are referred to the arbitrator, the Court will not modify (sec. 322), remit (sec. 323), or set aside (sec. 324) the award, on the ground that the arbitrator in his discretion has awarded damages to the plaintiff, and at the same time make him pay all the costs, when it is not shown that he exercised the discretion given him improperly.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 224.

Where by an order of reference made pending a suit, all matters in difference between the parties are referred to an arbitrator by the Court under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 317 et seq., the arbitrator has power to deal with the costs of the suit.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 12.

An application that an award be remitted to the arbitrators, in order that the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits in the suit which have not been submitted with it to the Court under Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 320, should be so submitted, ought to be made within 10 days after the award has been originally submitted; otherwise, if the award be good on the face of it, the Court will give judgment upon it.—2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 16.

There is no appeal from an order refusing to file an award under this section.—4 Ind. Jur., 392.

Except in the cases mentioned in the Act, there is no appeal from a decree which is passed in terms of an award.—4 Ind. Jur., 396.

There is nothing in Act VIII. of 1859 to prevent parties, who have a suit pending in Court, to submit the subject-matter of that suit and other matters in dispute to arbitration under this section.—W. R., Sp. Mis. 21.

Application for reference to arbitration must be made to the Court in writing by parties in person or by pleaders specially authorized.—W. R., Sp. 41.

An award of arbitrators cannot be set aside on the ground of its being inconsistent, because the plea of the defendant was proved as to part of the case, and not as to the other.—W. R. 1864, 153.

Arbitrators are not bound by the technical rules of Court.—1 W. R., 12.

An award is not reversible, unless the provisions of sec. 324, Act VIII. of 1859, apply.—1 W. R., 12.

A plaintiff must show special authority to assent to an arbitration on behalf of another plaintiff.—1 W. R., 80.

The Court cannot legally allow a case, as regards an absent plaintiff, to be decided by reference to arbitration.—1 W. R., 80.

Award should be filed in Court. Effect of not filing as laid down in sec. 327, Act VIII. of 1859 (corresponding with secs. 525, 226 Act XIV of 1882).—1 W. R., 163. See also 25 W. R., 152.

A partial disagreement of two arbitrators does not nullify their award as a whole.—2 W. R., 32.

Arbitrators should give separate awards in a case referred to them by the judge, and on other matters referred to them by the parties, instead of mixing them all up and giving a general award.—3 W. R., Mis., 27.

The refusal of arbitrators to amend a clearly bad award is misconduct under sec. 324, Act VIII. of 1859.—3 W. R., 168.

Where an order of reference to arbitration does not provide for difference of opinion among the arbitrators, and for authorizing a majority to decide the case, the award will, on objection taken, be set aside.—4 W. R., 4.

An Appellate Court has jurisdiction under sec. 37, Act XXIII. of 1861, to separate misjoined suits, and to try them separately.—4 W. R., 109.

In appealing to set aside an award as not binding upon the appellant, he is not bound to appeal against every interlocutory order.—5 W. R., P, C, 21 (P. C. R., 616).

The benefit of this section will be lost if the application for enforcement of an award of private arbitration be not made within six months.—5 W. R., 123.

In a suit pending before arbitrators, a person who is made a co-plaintiff on application, and makes no objection to the arbitration, is bound by the award.—5 W. R., 130.

A plaintiff's allegation in a former suit having been overruled in arbitration, he is not estopped from bringing a fresh suit on the finding of the arbitrators.—6 W. R., 68.

Possession under a private award of arbitration would suffice to make the award valid under cl. 3 sec. 3, Reg. VI. of 1813, without the intervention of the Court.—6 W. R., 94.

When a case which has been referred in the Principal Sadr Amin's Court to arbitration is withdrawn by the Judge for trial in his own Court, the Judge is not bound to refer it to arbitration.—6 W. R., 290.

Where both parties could not agree in nominating an arbitrator, and the Judge nominated one under sec. 314, Act VIII. of 1859, and one of the parties, six weeks after the nomination, objected to the Judge's nominee, but could not show on appeal that he did not request the Judge to nominate some one, the appointment was held good and binding upon the both parties.—7 W. R., 13.

It is no ground to set aside an award of arbitrators, under sec. 324, Act VIII. of 1859, that the arbitrators decided the case against the written statement of the defendant.—7 W. R., 28.

A judgment of a Court, given in accordance with an award of arbitration, is final under sec. 325, Act VIII., 1859 (corresponding with secs. 522, 588, Act XIV., 1882), even if there has been corruption and misconduct on the part of the arbitrators.—7 W. R., 205; 8 W. R., 171.

Sec. 323, Act VIII. of 1859, authorizes a Court which refers a case to arbitrators to remand it to them for re-consideration when their award contains mistakes, omissions, or defects which cannot be amended by the Court under sec. 322. Such award, on the refusal of the arbitrators to reconsider it, becomes null and void, without proof of corruption or misconduct under sec. 324.—7 W. R., 406.

The neglect of some of the arbitrators to attend meetings of the arbitrators is misconduct within the meaning of sec. 324, justifying the setting aside of the award by the Court which appointed the arbitrators, but not by a Court of Appeal.—8 W. R., 171.

Where the reference fixes no time for the award to be made, either party may hasten the proceeding by giving notice to the arbitrators that the award must be made, and an umpire appointed, within a reasonable time; but when the time elapsing after the notice has been actively employed by the arbitrators, and the delay has been owing to necessity which they could not control, the parties cannot recede from their submission by reason of the notice.—10 W. R., (P. C.) 51.

Under this section all parties materially interested must concur in the reference to arbitration.—10 W. R., 171.

Where a reference to arbitration fixes no time for the arbitrators to make the award, the award itself falls to the ground.—10 W. R., 206.

Quære, per Jackson, J.—What is the effect of an award arrived at in a pending suit which was referred to arbitration by an order of Court otherwise than by consent of all the parties?—10 W. R., 463.

Although no appeal will lie under this section against a judgment passed according to the award as prescribed in sec. 327 (corresponding with sec. 525), an appeal will lie, under sec. 11, Act XXIII. of 1861, against an order made in execution-proceedings taken upon that judgment.—13 W. R., 62.

An Appellate Court has under this section power to allow a suit to be withdrawn.—14 W. R., (O. C.) 17.

Where matters in dispute are referred to arbitration, and it is found that one question at issue is omitted from the reference, and that the award returned by the arbitrators contains no decision thereon, the party interested should bring the omission to the notice of the Court. If he fails to do so, the Court is not wrong in not passing any order, or coming to any decision on that point.—14 W. R., 247.

Any application to enforce an arbitration-award under this section may be made without any valuation of the suit.—14 W. R., 255.

On questions of caste a lower Appellate Court has a right to come to a finding based on history or the custom of the country.—14 W. R., 364.

Whatever matters parties to a suit may agree to refer to arbitration, they can refer such matters, or any of such matters as are in difference between them in the suit.—14 W. R., 469.

The decision of arbitrators in a matter not in difference between the parties, nor referred to them, is null and void for want of jurisdiction.—15 W. R., 172.

A Judge should not, without the consent of the parties, allow his judgment in one case to govern his decision in another, even if the subject of dispute is of a similar nature, and the evidence similar in character, when the parties are not the same, and the subject-matter of the suit is different.—15 W. R., 342.

An arbitration-award, not being one which has been made upon a reference by all the parties to the suit, is not capable of being converted into a final decree under the provisions of ch. 6, Act VIII. of 1859, though it is evidence against any party who agreed to the reference.—15 W. R., 427.

It is very doubtful whether a Judge has power, under Act X. of 1859, to refer a case to arbitration.—16 W. R., 160.

The mere absence of a clause in the order of reference providing for a difference of opinion between the arbitrators cannot vitiate the award where there is no such difference of opinion.—17 W. R., 30.

A reference to arbitration made under an order of Court cannot be revoked at the instance of a party.—17 W. R., 516.

An Appellate Court ought not reverse the decision of a first Court based upon very careful inspection of the land in dispute, except upon a very clear and strong opinion upon the evidence, and upon recording sufficient and satisfactory reasons for such opinion.—18 W. R., 452.

In arbitrations not started with the sanction of the Court, it is not necessary that the agreement should be reduced to writing before it can be binding.—18 W. R., 533.

Where the terms of a submission to arbitration give no authority for the majority of the arbitrators to make the award, it should be made by the whole of the arbitrators. An award made by the majority only would not be a valid award.—19 W. R., 47.

No presumption can be raised against a party to a suit from his refusal to withdraw from the determination and submit to arbitration.—20 W. R., 172.

An Appellate Court has no power to refer a case to arbitration, ever on consent of the parties.—21 W. R., 210.

The above section incorporates the provision of sec. 522 as to the finality of the judgment given according to the award, and puts the award filed under sec. 525 in the same position as the award filed under sec. 522. Where a Court files an arbitration-award, and passes a decree, that decree is final.—21 W. R., 248.

Nor can the first Court, by consent of parties, refer so much of the matter in dispute which it has already determined, and which is pending in appeal.—22 W. R., 207.

An Appellate Court, in remanding a case, cannot direct the first Court to call upon the parties to agree to arbitration, or, on their failing to do so, to appoint arbitrators.—22 W. R., 396.

Where an Appellate Court directed the first Court to call upon the parties to agree to arbitration, and the parties waived the irregularity, and consented to the matter being tried by arbitrators, held that they could not afterwards, on special appeal, object to the proceedings.—22 W. R., 396.

But where the decree is appealed from, the Appeal Court has power to take cognizance of the question of misconduct of arbitrators. See sec. 363, Act VIII of 1859.—22 W. R., 420 ; 22 W. R., 418.

The Court can only give judgment in accordance with the award, and cannot add an order for interest to it, if interest has not been given.—23 W. R., 105.

Secs. 312 and 325 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII. of 1859) were enabling, and were not intended to be restrictive or exclusive. Parties who are sui juris are competent, before decree, to make any agreement as to the settlement of the suit.—24 W. R., 41.

Where an arbitrator imported into his proceedings a previous enquiry alleged to have been made by him, and relied upon admissions made in the former proceedings, his award was held to be bad, and the decision based upon it was set aside.—24 W. R., 81.

In a case in which, although the plaint mentioned no overt act justifying the plaintiff's request for a declaration of title, and still it appeared on the admitted facts of the case that there was a cause of action, and the Court of first instance adjudicated on the merits and passed a decree in favour of plaintiffs, held that it was too late for the lower Appellate Court to dismiss the claim on the ground of the above defect in the plaint.—24 W. R., 242.

On an application under this section to have an award filed in Court, it was held that the word "award" as sued in the plaint must be taken to include the whole document which is scheduled to the plaint, i. e., the formal judgment as well as the decree.—26 W. R., P. C., 10 ; L. R., 3 I. A. 209.

R. M, party to a suit, having authorized his agent to conduct the suit, the agent consented to the case being referred to arbitration by the court. The arbitration was carried on to the knowledge and with the assent of R. M. On an application by R. M., under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside the award made by the arbitrators on the ground (1) that his pleader had not been authorized in writing, as required by sec. 506 of the Code, to apply for arbitration; and (2) that he himself had not consented to the reference:—Held, that, under the circumstances, R. M. was not entitled to relief.—I. L. R., 9 Madr. 451.

On 19th June 1884, on application for an order of reference was made, under sec. 506 by both parties to a suit. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiff's pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been "specially authorized in writing," to join in the application, the Court postponed making any order of the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court, but the plaintiff's pleader produced the requisite authority, and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On the 27th June, the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator, and appoint a new arbitrator in his place, on the ground that, after signing the application of the 19th, he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award, when it was rejected, on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out:—Held, first, that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884, when the order of reference was made, must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court, and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award, and then only to the extent permitted by sec. 521. When once a matter is referred to arbitration, it is not competent to the Court, under the second paragraph of sec. 608, to "deal with" the matter in difference between the parties, except as provided in Chapter XXXVII of the Code. There is no section of that chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator, and to appoint a new one, except in cases falling strictly within the purview of sec. 510 of the Codes where "the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed." It is only in those cases, apparently, that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked "for good cause," the cause being such as is contemplated in that section, as where "an arbitrator refuses or neglects, or become incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date." The enactment of the second paragraph of sec. 508, which does not occur in the corresponding sec. (315) of Act VIII of 1859, has the effect to rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary.—10 Bom. 381.

Under secs. 523 & 525, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), parties to a suit as well as persons not engaged in litigation may agree to refer matters in dispute between them to private arbitration without the intervention of the Court, and may apply to have the agreement filed ; and the mere fact that a suit is pending with respect of the matters in dispute, is not of itself a sufficient reason to induce the Court to refuse to file the agreement —4 Bom. 1.

Notwithstanding that chap. xxxvii of Act X of 1877 (in reference to arbitration) does not refer specially to suits brought under Act X of 1859, yet if both parties to a suit for a kabuliyat brought under the latter Act agrees to refer the matters in dispute between them to certain arbitrators named by them, and file a joint petition in the Court of the Deputy Collector, stating that they had so agreed, and praying that the case may be referred to such arbitrators, neither of them will be afterwards at liberty to object to a decree made, embodying the award of the arbitrators, on the ground that the reference to arbitration was irregular, and not warranted by any of the provisions of Act X of 1877. When a case has been so referred, the arbitrators are at liberty to determine what appears to them to be a fair and equitable rate of rent, and notwithstanding the amount so found is less than that demanded by the plaintiff in his plaint, the Court out of which the reference issued is not at liberty on that ground to dismiss the suit but is bound to order the defendant (with the alternative of eviction) to execute a kabuliyat in favour of the plaintiff at the rate determined by the arbitrators to be fair and equitable.—6 Cal. 251 ; 7 C. L. R., 92.

Where the parties agreed to refer a suit to arbitration, but no provision was made that a decision by the majority of arbitrators should be binding, and two of five arbitrators withdrew :—Held, that a decision by the majority was invalid.—7 Madr. 174.

507. The arbitrator shall be nominated by the parties in such manner as may be agreed upon between them.

Nomination of arbitrator. If the parties cannot agree with respect to such nomination, or if the person whom they nominate refuses to accept the arbitration, and the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court, the Court shall nominate the arbitrator.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Section 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, which provides that no appeal shall lie from a decree upon an award, except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award, assumes that the award has been regularly and properly passed by arbitrators duly appointed. Where two of five arbitrators nominated by the parties to a suit, and appointment by the Court, had not consented before, and, after appointment, declined to act, and the Court appointed two arbitrators in their place against the consent of one of the parties to the suit, held that, under the circumstances, the appointment of the new arbitrators was not warranted by the provisions of sec. 510 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the order of reference to such arbitrators, the award made by them, and the decree passed upon the award were illegal, held, also, that the High Court could set aside the decree under the powers given by sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 6 Madr. 414.

508. The Court shall, by order, refer to the arbitrator the matter in difference which he is required to determine, and shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the delivery of the award, and specify such time in the order.

Order of reference.

When once a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not deal with it in the same suit, except as hereinafter provided.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The provision contained in sec. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the delivery of the award, is not imperative but directory, and non-compliance with it does not make the order of reference abortive, and any subsequent arbitration-proceedings ineffectual and bad. Under sec. 514 of the Code, the Court may extend the time for making the award after the time fixed therefor has expired. The last paragraph of sec. 521 does not imply that an omission by the Court to fix a positive date within which the award is to be filed is fatal to the validity of the award. Where an order extending the time for delivery of an award was made after the time fixed therefor had expired, and did not fix any positive date for the filing of the award, held that the adoption of the award by the Court amounted to an enlargement of the time for delivery of the award to the date on which it was in fact delivered, and to a ratification of what had been done by the arbitrators and that the parties, having made no objection to the action of the Court, must be taken to have waived any objection to the award. The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not formally divest him of his character as arbitrator. Maharajah Joymungul Singh Bahadoor v. Mohun Ram Marwaree (23 W. R., (P. C.) 429) referred to.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 137.

An award cannot be set aside by the Court on the mere surmise that the arbitrator has been partial. After the parties to a suit have agreed to refer to arbitration and the order of reference has been made by the Court under sec. 508 neither of them can arbitrarily and on no sufficient ground withdraw from the agreement. Pestonjee Nussurwanjee v. Maneckjee & Co. followed.—7 Al. 273.

The law contained in secs. 508 and 514 requires that there shall be an express order of the Court fixing the time for delivery of the award or for extending or enlarging such time; and the mere fact the Court has passed a decree in accordance with the award cannot be taken as affording a presumption that an extension of time was given. An award which is invalid under sec. 521 because not made within the period allowed by the Court, is not an award upon which the Court can make a decree, and a decree passed in accordance with such an award is not a decree in accordance with an award from which no appeal lies with reference to the ruling of the Full Bench in Lachman Das v. Brijpal. Where objection to the validity of the award on the ground that it was made beyond the time allowed was not taken by the defendant in the first Court :—Held that he was not thereby estopped from raising the objection for the first time in appeal, inasmuch as it was not shown that in the first Court he was aware of the defect, or had done anything to imply consent to extension of the time.—8 Al. 548.

In an agreement to refer certain matters to arbitration, which was filed in Court under sec. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code and on which an order of reference was made by the Court, no provision was made for difference of opinion between the arbitrators, by appointing an umpire or otherwise. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the Court on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire, and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator without the concurrence of the other arbitrator, and submitted to the Court, which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. On appeal by the defendant in the case, the District Judge reversed the decree :—Held that an appeal would lie to the Judge from the decree of the first Court, where there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated. Lachman Das v. Brijpal (I. L. R., 6. Al. 174) referred to :—Held that, in the present case, there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated, inasmuch as the agreement to refer gave the Court no power to appoint, an umpire, and required that the award should be made by the arbitrators named by the parties. Held, that sec. 509 and the other sections preceding sec. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to the power of the Court to provide for difference of opinion among the arbitrators, were only made applicable to cases coming under sec. 523, so far as their provisions were consistent with the agreement filed under that section. Held also that the defendant was not precluded from appealing to the Judge from the first Court's decree because he had not applied to set aside the award within the ten days allowed by art. 158, sch. ii of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as that article applied to applications referred to in sec. 522 of the Civil Procedure Code, i. e., applications to set aside an award on any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 521, and the defendant did not contest the award on any of those grounds.—8 Al. 64.

When once an award has been delivered it is no longer competent to the Court to grant further time, or to enlarge the period for the delivery of this award under sec. 514 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Where an award was not made within the period fixed by the Court's order but was made after the date given in the last order extending the time for its delivery, held, that the award was invalid. The decree of the Court dealing with the award as if duly made within the time, could not be treated as enlarging it. The judgment in Ohuha Mal v. Hari Ram approved. Order to be that the suit should proceed. Neither party to be entitled to costs in either Court below after the first judgment with regard to the stage at which the objection was taken; and the costs prior to that to abide the issue.—13 Al. 300.

An order of reference to arbitration was made on 21st January. Six weeks time was allowed for the return of the award. No application was made for extension of time. The award having been returned on 8th May the Court refused to give judgment in accordance with it under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that it was not valid. The plaintiffs now petitioned High Court under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—Held, that the award was invalid and the Court had not failed to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—9 Madr. 475.

When a Court has referred a suit to arbitration it has jurisdiction over the arbitrators to compel them to give up documents filed before them as exhibits during the course of the arbitration, and to return the original records of the suit which may have been handed to them. Such jurisdiction can be exercised by an application made in the suit on notice to the arbitrators.—17 Cal. 832.

When reference is to two or more, order to provide for difference of opinion.

509. If the reference be to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators,

- (a) by the appointment of an umpire, or
- (b) by declaring that the decision shall be with the majority, if the major part of the arbitrators agree, or
- (c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire, or
- (d) otherwise, as may be agreed between the parties; or, if they cannot agree, as the Court determines.

If an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the delivery of his award in case he is required to act.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A case cannot, in special appeal, be sent back to the arbitrators with a provision for difference of opinion, where the arbitrators having given in different awards, the case was tried anew by the first Court, whose decision has been affirmed by the lower Appellate Court.—14 W. R., 150.

The mere absence of a clause in the order of reference to arbitration, providing for a difference of opinion between the arbitrators, cannot vitiate the award where there is no such difference of opinion.—17 W. R., 30.

See. I. L. R., 7 Madr. 174, noted under sec. 506.

510. If the arbitrator, or, where there are more arbitrators than one, any of the arbitrators, or the umpire, dies, or refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, the Court may, in its discretion, either appoint a new arbitrator or umpire in the place of the person so dying, or refusing, or neglecting, or becoming incapable to act, or leaving British India, or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Death, incapacity, &c., of arbitrators or umpire.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

It is an essential principle of the law of arbitration that the adjudication of disputes by arbitration should be the result of the free consent of the arbitrators to act; and the finality of the award is based entirely upon the principle that the arbitrators are judges chosen by the parties themselves, and that such judges are willing to settle the disputes referred to them. Where certain matters were referred to arbitrators who refused to act, and the Court of first instance passed an order directing them to proceed and to make an award, and they, on the passing of such order, made an award, held that all proceedings taken by the arbitrators in obedience to the order of the Court directing them to arbitrate against their will were null and void.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 20.

See. I. L. R., 6 Madr. 414, noted under sec. 507; 7 Madr. 174, noted under sec. 506.

511. Where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire, and fail to do so, any of the parties may serve the arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an umpire; and if, within seven days after such notice has been served, or such further time as the Court may in each case allow no umpire be appointed, the Court, upon the application of the party who has served such notice as aforesaid, may appoint an umpire.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The appointment, of an umpire under this section is required, where there are two or more arbitrators, to provide for any difference of opinion amongst them; but not where, with the consent of the court, only one arbitrator has been appointed.—25 W. R., 11.

512. Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under section 509, section 510, or section 511, shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference.

Powers of arbitrator or umpire appointed under sections 509, 510, and 511.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

513. The Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrators or umpire desire or desires to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it.

Summoning witnesses.

Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpire during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages.

Punishment for default, &c.

tages, penalties, and punishments, by order of the Court, on the representation of the arbitrator or umpire, as they would incur for the like offences in suits tried before the Court.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

514. If, from the want of the necessary evidence or information, or from any other cause, the arbitrators cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it thinks fit, either grant a further time, and from time to time, enlarge the period for the delivery of the award, or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under this section the time for delivery of an award may be extended at the discretion of the Court without the consent of the parties.—2 W. R., 297.

The present suit for dissolution of partnership and all matters in dispute between the parties thereto were by judge's order, dated 18th July 1887, referred to the arbitration of A and B. The time for making and filing the award was by subsequent orders extended to the 18th May 1888. The award was made on that day, but was not filed until the 18th June 1888. The second defendant obtained a rule calling on the other parties to show cause (inter alia) why the award should not be set aside by reason of its not having been filed in time. Held that the omission to file the award on or before the 18th May 1888 did not render it invalid. The word "made" in secs. 514 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1832) does not include the filing of the award.—I. L. R., 13 Bom. 119.

A Court has power to act under sec. 514 of the Code Civil Procedure at any time before the award is actually made, whether the time previously limited for making the award has expired or not. Raja Har Narain Singh v. Chaudhrain Bhagwant Kuar referred to.—14 Al. 343.

Where a decree purports to have been made in terms of an award under sec. 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an appeal lies against it if there was no award in fact or in law. An order extending the time for the presentation of an award upon an application presented within time is not bad in law by reason of its having been made after the expiry of the term which it purports to extend. It is not a valid objection to an award that the arbitrators have not acted in strict conformity with the rules of evidence.—11 Madr. 85.

A suit was referred to an arbitrator, who did not make his award within the period limited for that purpose. After that period had expired, an application was made for its extension, both parties consenting; the application was granted and the award was made within the time so extended, and a decree was passed in its terms:—Held, that the order extending the time was not illegal, and the party dissatisfied with the decree was not entitled to have the award and the decree made upon it set aside.—15 Madr. 384.

Application for the extensions of the period for the submission of an award and orders thereon should be made in writing and recorded. When a party has been prejudiced by having the time allowed for taking objections to an award curtailed by the Court, no appeal lies, but a review should be granted by the Court of first instance.—3 Madr. 59.

See I. L. R., 13 Al. 300, noted under sec. 503.

515. When an umpire has been appointed, he may enter on the reference in the place of the arbitrators,
When umpire may arbitrate in lieu of arbitrators.

(a) if they have allowed the appointed time to expire without making an award, or

(b) when they have delivered to the Court or to the umpire a notice in writing, stating that they cannot agree.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

As in the case of an arbitrator, so in the case of an umpire a Court has power to extend the period within which the award is to be submitted. Where the parties prayed the Court to appoint two arbitrators and an umpire and to refer the case to them for decision, and undertook to abide by such decision as might be passed by them unanimously or by the majority of them, held that an award by the umpire alone, the arbitrators being unable to decide was valid. Held also that the plaintiff, having appeared before the umpire, and taken no objection to the procedure of the umpire from March to August, was estopped from raising the objection that an award of the umpire alone was invalid. The Court can extend the time allowed to an umpire under sec. 509 of the Code.—I. L. R., 4 Madr. 311.

516. When an award in a suit has been made, the persons who made it shall sign it, and cause it to be filed in Court, together with any depositions and documents which have been taken and proved before them ; and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties.
Award to be signed and filed.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A Civil Court's judgment cannot affect the rights of parties as declared in an award.—2 W. R., 297.

Where an arbitrator imported into his proceedings a previous inquiry alleged to have been made by him, and relied upon admissions made in the former proceedings, his award was held to be bad, and the decision based thereon set aside.—24 W. R., 81.

A District Munsiff passed a decree in the terms of an award without giving notice of the filing of the award under sec. 516 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the District Munsiff acted with material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 144.

The act of an arbitrator, in handing in an award to the proper officer of the Court, for the purpose of the award being filed, cannot be considered as an 'application' within the meaning of the Limitation Act.—7 Cal. 333.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 832, noted under sec. 508.

517. Upon any reference by an order of the Court, the arbitrators or umpire may, with the consent of the Court, state the award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court; and the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon; and such opinion shall be added to, and form part of, the award.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Court may, on application, modify or correct award in certain cases.

518. The Court may, by order, modify or correct an award—

(a) where it appears that a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration, provided such part can be separated from the other part, and does not affect the decision on the matter referred, or

(b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The arbitrators to whom the matters in difference in two suits for money were referred to arbitration made an award for payment to the plaintiff of certain sums by the defendant, and further directed that these sums should be paid by certain instalments. The plaintiff preferred objections to the award, in so far as it directed payment by instalments, and the Court, holding that the arbitrators had no power to make such a direction, modified the award to that extent, under sec. 518 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the District Judge, while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments, reduced the number of instalments which had been fixed. Held that the decree of the first Court not being in accordance with the award, an appeal lay to the Judge, with reference to sec. 522 of the Code. Held also that, as it was clear that the reference to arbitration gave the arbitrators full powers, not only as to the amount to be paid, but also as to the manner of payment, the lower Appellate Court was wrong in reducing the number of instalments which had been fixed. Per MAHMOOD, J. —The word "award" used in the last sentence of sec. 522 of the Code must be understood to mean an award as given by the arbitrators, and not as amended by the Court under sec. 518. The words "in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award," used in sec. 522, were intended to enable the Court of appeal to check the improper use of the power conferred by sec. 518.—I. L. R., 8 Al. 449.

519. The Court may also make such order as it thinks fit respecting the costs of the arbitration, if any question arise respecting such costs, and the award contain no sufficient provision concerning them.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

520. The Court may remit the award or any matter referred to arbitration to the re-consideration of the same arbitrators or umpire, upon such terms as it thinks fit,

When award or matter referred to arbitration may be remitted.

(a) where the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, or where it determines any matter not referred to arbitration ;

(b) where the award is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution ;

(c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent upon the face of it.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Sec. 323, Act VIII. 1859 (corresponding with sec. 520, Act XIV. 1882), authorizes a Court to remand a case to arbitrators for reconsideration when there are mistakes which it cannot amend ; and if the arbitrators refuse to reconsider their award, it becomes null and void without proof of corruption or misconduct.—7 W. R., 406.

This section does not authorize a Court to remit a case to the arbitrators except as to matters in difference between the parties.—14 W. R., 469.

Where, in a suit for the filing of an award made on a private reference to arbitration, the Court of first instance, holding that there was no reason to remit such award to the reconsideration of the arbitrator under the provisions of Act X of 1877, sec. 520, or to set it aside under sec. 521, did not proceed to give judgment according to such award followed by a decree, but merely directed that such award should be filed, held that its order was not appealable as a decree or as an order.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 471.

An award was remitted under sec. 520 of Act X of 1877. The arbitrators refused to reconsider it, and the Court thereupon proceeded with the suit, and gave the plaintiffs a decree. The defendants appealed from such decree on the ground, amongst others, that the award had been improperly remitted under sec. 520. Held that the question whether the award had been properly remitted under sec. 520 or not could be entertained in such appeal. The worshippers at a public mosque can maintain a suit to restrain the superintendents of such mosque from using it or its appurtenant rooms for purposes other than those for which they were intended to be used, and from doing acts which are likely to obstruct worshippers in entering or leaving such mosque.—3 Al. 636.

The plaintiff in a suit, which had been referred to arbitration, offered before the arbitrator to be bound by the evidence of the defendant given on a certain oath. With the arbitrator's consent the defendant accepted such offer, and gave evidence on such oath. The arbitrator made an award in accordance with the evidence so given. The plaintiff objected to the award, not on any of the grounds mentioned in secs. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, but on the ground that the procedure of the arbitrator had been illegal. The Court disallowed this objection, and gave a judgment and decree in accordance with the award. Held by Straight, J., that such decree, being in accordance with the award, was not appealable. Held by Stuart, C. J., that the award not being open to objection on any of the grounds mentioned in secs. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the decree being in accordance with the award, the decree was not appealable. Held by Oldfield, J., that the procedure adopted by the arbitrator being illegal, not being warranted by the Oaths Act, and there being in reality no award within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, the decree therefore was appealable. Per Stuart, C. J., that the procedure of the arbitrator did not require to be warranted by the Oaths Act, as he was entitled by virtue of his office to proceed as he did.—4 Al. 283.

The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage, which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys, but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they, the plaintiff, and the plaintiff's father were jointly interested, against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the moneys he sued for, and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner, as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinions of certain pandits to the effect that, under Hindu Law, gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions, and prayed that the Munsiff would remit the award with these opinions to the arbitrator. The Munsiff remitted the award with the opinions, requesting the arbitrator to consider them, and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further, the Munsiff proceeded to determine the suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that, in a joint Hindu family, presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (Pearson, J., dissenting) that, there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award, the Munsiff was not justified in remitting the award, or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself, but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award.—2 Al. 181.

When an application is made to a Court to file an award under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and an objection is made to the filing of it upon any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 520 or 521, the proper course for the Court to pursue is to dismiss the application, and to leave the applicant to bring a regular suit to enforce the award in which all the objections as to its validity may be properly tried and determined. Where no such ground of objection is made to the filing of the award, and the Court consequently orders it to be filed, no appeal lies against that order.—10 Cal. 74.

See I. L. R., 6 Bom. 663, noted under sec. 526 ; 3 Al. 541, noted under sec. 525 ; 3 Al. 286, noted under sec. 2.

521. An award remitted under section 520 becomes void on the refusal of the arbitrators or umpire to reconsider it. But no award shall be set aside except on one of the following grounds (namely) :—

- (a) corruption or misconduct of the arbitrator or umpire ;
- (b) either party having been guilty of fraudulent concealment of any matter which he ought to have disclosed, or of wilfully misleading or deceiving the arbitrator or umpire ;

(c) the award having been made after the issue of an order by the Court superseding the arbitration and restoring the suit ;

and no award shall be valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

An award of arbitration can only be set aside for corruption or partiality, but not on the ground of inconsistency.—W. R., Sp. 153.

An award is not reversible except under this section. An arbitrator is not bound by technical rules of Court. He is appointed to give an equitable award, and can decide a case upon a document whether stamped or unstamped.—1 W. R., 12.

An arbitration-award as to division of property left to minor sons, though assented to by their guardian, was set aside so far as regarded those sons on proof that the partition was injurious to them.—1 W. R., 280.

Where a suit was referred to arbitration, and objection was taken to the award on the ground that one of the arbitrators had not attended a meeting when witnesses examined by the other arbitrators, held that the award was invalid by reason of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators within the meaning of sec. 521 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 113.

By reason of sec. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, where a Court of first instance wrongly sets aside an arbitration-award and passes a decree against the terms thereof, and a Court of first appeal, holding that the award was not open to objection upon the grounds mentioned in sec. 521, passes a decree strictly in accordance with the award, such appellate decree is entitled to the same finality as the first Court's decree would have been under the last paragraph of sec. 522, and cannot be made the subject of second appeal. Pureshnath Dey v. Nobin Chunder Dutt (12 W. R., 93) and Rughoober Dyal v. Maina Koer (12 C. L. R., 564) dissented from.—10 Al. 8.

The principle of the ruling of the Privy Council in Raja Har Narain Singh v. Chaudhrain Bhagwant Kuar is application also to arbitrations under sec. 221 of Act No. XIX of 1873.—14 Al. 347.

All matters in dispute in a suit were referred to arbitration. An award was duly made and filed, and a decree passed in accordance with the terms thereof. Subsequently on the application of the plaintiff in the suit, the Court passed an order setting aside the decree and the award, and ordering the case to be set down for hearing upon the ground that the proceedings in connection with the arbitration had been taken, and the award had been filed, without notice to the plaintiff, and that, although the award was alleged to have been made with the consent of the parties, the plaintiff had not consented to it. Held, that no appeal lay from such order. Howard v. Wilson, (I. L. R., 4 Cal. 231), dissented from ; Mothooranauth Tewaree v. Brindabun Tewaree, 14 W. R., 327, followed.—11 Cal. 172.

The rule that no award shall be valid unless "made" within period fixed by the Court, is equivalent to a rule that the award must be "delivered" within that period. Upon a reference to the arbitration of three persons, the Court ordered that the award made by them should be filed on the 19th September, 1885. The award was not filed on that date, but was signed by two of the arbitrators on that date, and by the third arbitrator on the 20th September, on which day it was filed. It had been agreed that the opinion of the majority should carry the decision :—Held that the award was not “made within the period fixed by the Court” within the meaning of sec. 521 of the Civil Procedure Code.—8 Al. 543 ; 12 Cal. 173.

The word “misconduct” as used in sec. 521 cl. (a) of the Civil Procedure Code should be interpreted in the sense in which it is used in English law with reference to arbitration-proceedings. It does not necessarily imply moral turpitude, but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and of what Courts of justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. An arbitrator to whom the matters in difference in a suit were referred under sec. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, and who was directed by the order of reference to deliver his award by the 22nd September, applied on the 17th September for an extension of time, on the ground that a very full investigation was necessary, which it was not possible to make within the prescribed period. On the 20th Sept. without waiting for the order of the Court, he notified to the parties that he proposed to hold an inquiry in the case on the 24th, and it appeared that he did not expect this intimation to reach them before the 21st or 22nd. On the 23rd, he informed the plaintiff’s pleader that a new date would be fixed for the inquiry, of which notice would be given to the parties. Notwithstanding this, on the 23rd, the arbitrator took evidence for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. All these proceedings were held before the arbitrator received an order of the Court extending the time for delivery of the award up to the 26th October. On the 27th September he directed the parties to be informed that the investigation would be held on the 5th October. On the 4th October the plaintiff presented a petition, praying the arbitrator to summon witnesses and to take documentary evidence, and upon this nothing definite was settled at the time ; but, after the pleaders had left, the arbitrator passed an order rejecting the petition, on the ground that the evidence sought to be produced was unnecessary. On the same date, and on the 5th and 6th October, he took evidence for the defence in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. On the 10th he rejected a petition by the plaintiff, praying for further time to produce evidence, and complaining of his having taken evidence in the plaintiff’s absence, and having received in evidence a fabricated document. On the 25th October, the arbitrator delivered his award in favour of the defendant. Subsequently, upon objections made by the plaintiff, the Court set aside the award, and directed that the trial of the suit should proceed. Held that, although no case of “corruption” within the meaning of sec. 521 (cl. a) of the Civil Procedure Code had been made out against the arbitrator, the circumstances above stated amounted to “misconduct,” and the award was therefore bad in law, and had rightly been set aside. Soobul Thakur Opadatah v. Punchunund Tikha (S. D. A., L. P., 1848, p. 115), Reedoy Kristo Mujoomdar v. Paddo Lochun Mujoomdar (1 W. R., 12), Sada Ram v. Beharee (S. D. A. N. W. P., 1864, vol. 2, p. 399), Parns Dass v. Khoobee (S. D. A., N. W. P., 1861, vol. 2, p. 199), Howard v. Wilson (I. L. R., 4 Cal 231), Bhagiruth v. Ram Ghulam (I. L. R., 4 Al. 283), Wazir Mahton v. Lulit Singh (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 166), Nainsukh Rai v. Umadai (I. L. R., 7 Al. 273), and Pestonjee Nursurwanjee v. Manockjee, (12 Moors I. A. 112), distinguished. —9 Al. 253.

An order under sec. 251 of the Civil Procedure Code, setting aside an award, made a on reference to arbitration in the course of a suit, under chapter XXXVII of the Code, on the ground of the arbitrator's misconduct, is not subject to revision by the High Court in the exercise of the powers conferred on it by sec. 622 of the Code.—5 Al. 293.

A case was referred by consent to arbitration and after having been recalled into Court was again referred. An award was made by the arbitrator, and filed in Court. The defendants then objected, on the ground that they had no notice after the second reference, and that they were not heard, and that the arbitrator had otherwise misconducted himself. These objections were disallowed by the Subordinate Judge, who gave a decree in the terms of the award. This decree was upheld by the Judge on appeal, who, however, found that the arbitrator has been guilty of misconduct. Held that, if the decree of the first Court was not final under sec. 325, Act VIII of 1859, all that the lower Appellate Court could do was to remand the case to be dealt with on its merits; but, inasmuch as there had been an award and a decree thereon, which was final within the terms of that section, the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, or to express any opinion on what had passed in the first Court.—7 Cal. 166.

See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 74, noted under sec. 520; 3 Al. 636, noted under sec. 520; 11 Madr. 85; 15 Madr. 384, 13 Bom. 119, noted under sec. 514, 13 Al. 300, noted under sec. 508.

522. If the Court sees no cause to remit the award or Judgment to be accord- any of the matters referred to arbitration ing to award. for reconsideration in manner aforesaid, and if no application has been made to set aside the award, or if the Court has refused such application, the Court shall, after the time for making such application has expired, proceed to give judgment according to the award, or if the award has been submitted to it in the form of a special case, according to its own opinion on such case.

Upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow, and shall be enforced in manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees Decree to follow. No appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

No appeal lies against an order disallowing an application to file an award under sec. 327 of Act VIII of 1859.—I. L. R., (A. C.) 184.

An application was made under sec. 327 of Act VIII of 1859 to file an arbitration-award; and the Court, after calling on the opposite party to show cause why it should not be filed, rejected the application. Held that the case did not come within the meaning of sec. 325, and that the order, being simply one "rejecting an application to file an award." was final.—2 B. L. R., App. 20; 11 W. R., 57.

No appeal lies from an order rejecting an application to file an award (Mitter, J. dubitante). Where the application was considered as a regular, suit, the Judge was right in decreeing costs as in a regular suit.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 249 ; S. C. 11 W. R., 104 ; B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 505 ; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 1 ; 6 W. R., Mis., 83.

In an arbitration-case between a mahajan and his gomasta, an award was made to the effect that Rs. 725 were outstanding and due to the kuti, of which Rs. 483 were due to the mahajan, and Rs. 241 to the gomasta ; that the gomasta should point out the persons owing the Rs. 483, or in default make good the amount. The mahajan applied to the Subordinate Judge of Bhagulpore, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 327, to file the award. The Subordinate Judge held that it was not proved that the gomasta had done as required by the award, and ordered him to pay the deficit. The gomasta appealed to the Judge, who held that no appeal lay from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge enforcing the award. Held on special appeal that the Subordinate Judge's judgment decided a question of fact not determined by the award, and that an appeal would lie.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 260 ; 11 W. R., 140.

On the application of one party to a reference to arbitration, without the intervention of a Court, to have the award filed, and for judgment thereon, an objection of the other party, that the award had been come to after the arbitrators' authority had been repudiated, was over-ruled, and judgment was passed by the Munsif in accordance with the award. Held (PAUL, J., dissenting) an appeal lay from the decision of the Munsif. In another case the question was referred to a Full Bench whether, when an award has been ordered to be filed, and judgment has been given in accordance with it under sec. 327 of Act VIII of 1859, is such judgment open to appeal ? The answer given (PAUL, J., dissenting) was : It is open to an appellant to show that the paper which has been filed is not an award. If it is an award, and judgment is given in accordance with such award, such judgment is final. Per PAUL, J., the judgment is final.—8 B. L. R., 315 ; 15 W. R., (F. B.) 9 ; 2 C. L. R., 362.

Plaintiff sued for confirmation of an award delivered by arbitrators appointed by agreement of parties to decide upon his claim to a share of ancestral property. Defendant objected that the award was illegal principally upon the grounds that he had cancelled his submission some time before the award was passed. The District Judge ordered the award to be filed on the authority of Pestonjee v. Maneckjee (3 M. H. C. R., 183, affirmed in 12 Moo. 112). The defendant appealed. Held that no appeal lay.—7 M. H. C. R., 257.

An appeal lies from an order made in execution of an arbitration-award filed under the provisions of sec. 327 of the Civil Procedure Code.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 129 ; 13 W. R., 62.

An order disallowing an application under sec. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure is unappealable.—5 N. W. P. H. C. R., 179.

An appeal will lie from a decree which varies an award by containing a direction for payment by instalments which is not contained in the award. The plaintiff in the suit, which was one on accounts stated, agreed to refer to arbitration the question whether the accounts were correct or not. It was unnecessary for the arbitrators to determine whether the account stated was proved. The decree was passed on the very day the award was filed. The plaintiff was not estopped from taking objections to the award by reason of his silence when the decree was pronounced. The award was held invalid, among other reasons, because it purported to be the award of four persons, whereas the order of reference was addressed only to three.—7 N. W. P. H. C. R., 367.

On appeal from a decree setting aside an award, the District Judge reversed the decree of the first Court, and made a decree in accordance with the award. Held that sec. 522 of the Civil Procedure Code did not take away the right of second appeal against the latter decree.—12 C. L. R., 564.

Held by the majority of the Court (PEARSON, J., dissentiente) that no appeal lies from an order passed under sec. 327, Act VIII of 1859, whether granting or refusing the application.—3 Agra H. C. R., 353; S. C. Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 156.

An appeal lies from a judgment given on an arbitration-award, on the ground that the judgment is contrary to the award.—3. W. R., 168.

An appeal, on the allegation of want of consent of parties, lies from the order of a lower Court, under sec. 327, Code of Civil Procedure, directing a private award of arbitration to be filed and enforced.—6 W. R., 60.

An order refusing to enforce an obviously illegal award of arbitrators under sec. 327, Act VIII of 1859, is not a decree, and therefore not appealable.—7 W. R., 401.

The question whether, under sec. 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an appeal will lie against a decree given in accordance with an award, depends upon whether the award upon which the decree is based is a valid and legal award. A plaintiff and some of the defendants to a suit applied to refer the suit to arbitration (certain other of the defendants not having joined in the application); an award was passed and a decree made in accordance with such award. The plaintiffs objected the validity of the award on the ground that all the parties to the suit had not joined in referring the suit to arbitration; the objection was dismissed, and judgment given in accordance with the award. Held that an appeal would lie from a decree dismissing the objection and confirming the award; but that under the special circumstances of the case justice was so clearly in favour of the view that the award was good, that the Court, although not entirely approving of certain decisions of the High Court (Shitianah Bisvas v. Kishen Mohun Mookerjee, (5 W. R., 120); Ram Soonder Mookerjee v. Ram Shurun Mookerjee (6 W. R., 25); Doorga Churn Thakoor v. Kally Doss Hazrah (10 W. R., 463); Bishoka Dasia v. Aunnto Lall Pain (4 C. L. R., 65), which laid down that such an award is good, notwithstanding that some of the parties to the suit may not have joined in the reference to arbitration, did not think fit to differ from those decisions on that occasion.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 37.

An award upon a question referred to arbitrators, on whose part no misconduct or mistake appears, concludes the parties who have submitted to the reference from afterwards contesting in a suit the question so referred and disposed of by the award. Two widows of a deceased Hindu referred generally to arbitrators the question of their rights, respectively, in the estate of their deceased husband, including the matter whether there was, or was not, any cause disentitling the widow, who afterwards brought this suit for her share in the estate against the other who had obtained possession of the whole. The arbitrators declared her to be disentitled to succeed to any portion of the estate, and awarded her maintenance only:—Held, that, in the absence of mistake, or misconduct, on the part of the arbitrators, the award was binding on the parties.—11 Cal. 386.

The power to file an award includes the power to inquire if there was a submission to arbitration, and this question is concluded by the decree, which is final under secs. 522 & 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—4 Madr. 319.

After issues had been framed in a suit to wind up a partnership, the matter was referred to an arbitrator, who made his award, and with regard to certain property, not part of the partnership property, he referred the parties to a separate suit. A decree was passed in accordance with the award:—Held, that an appeal lies against a decree passed on an award, on the ground that the award was not legal; but that the award was not illegal by reason of its comprising the reference of the parties to a separate suit.—15 Madr. 348.

A case was referred to the arbitration of five persons, with a proviso that, in the event of any two of the arbitrators being absent, the arbitration should be continued by the other three. Two of the arbitrators named were the pleaders on either side, and these two, with the consent of the parties, ceased to act as arbitrators, but argued the matter before the other arbitrators. Held that the award made by the other three arbitrators named was a valid award.—9 Cal. 905; 12 C. L. R., 525.

Held that an appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award, when such decree is impugned on the ground that there is no award in law or in fact, upon which judgment and decree could follow under sec. 522, Civil Procedure Code. Joymungal Singh v. Mohun Ram (23 W.R., 429) and Bhagirath v. Ram Ghulam (I. L. R., 4 Al. 283) observed on.—6 Al. 174.

When an award has been filed in Court, as provided by sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the judgment and decree based thereon must be drawn up specifically in terms of the award. If the decree merely decrees in general terms the claim of one party or of the other, it cannot be said that such decree is in accordance with the award, and being "not in accordance with the award" an appeal will lie therefrom.—13 Al. 366.

See I. L. R., 2 Bom. 553, noted under sec. 2; 6 Madr. 414, noted under sec. 507; 3 Al. 286, noted under sec. 2; 11 Madr. 85, noted under sec. 514; 10 Al. 8, noted under sec. 521.

523. When any persons agree in writing that any difference between them shall be referred to the arbitration of any person named in the agreement or to be appointed by any Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the agreement relates, the parties thereto, or any of them, may apply that the agreement be filed in Court.

The application shall be in writing, and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant, if the application have been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all the parties to the agreement other than applicants, requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice, why the agreement should not be filed.

If no sufficient cause be shown, the Court may cause the agreement to be filed, and shall make an order of reference thereon, and may also nominate the arbitrator, when he is not named therein, and the parties cannot agree as to the nomination.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

A submission to arbitration can only be revoked on good grounds. The claimant, in a reference to arbitration, is the person on whom, cæteris paribus, it is incumbent to promote the conduct of the proceedings; and when, therefore, there is a long and unreasonable delay unexplained by any act of the other party, either conducing to it or consenting to it or waiving it, the latter is, prima facie, entitled to decline to go on with the reference, and to revoke the agreement for submission. Where an agreement to refer has been duly revoked, the Court is incompetent to order it to be filed under sec. 523 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Semble:—Where no arbitrator has been named in an agreement, and the aid of the Court in the appointment of an arbitrator is invoked, the parties ought to have an opportunity of being heard upon the selection to be made. Pestonjee Nusserwanjee v. Manockjee, 12 Moore's I. A., 112, referred to.—I. L. R., 17 Cal. 200.

In an agreement to submit to arbitration, which was filed in Court under the provisions of sec. 523 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was stipulated that the decision of the arbitrator should be accepted as final, and that no appeal therefrom should be made by either party. Held that this stipulation did not prevent the Court from setting aside the award on the ground of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator.—6 Madr. 368.

Held by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD, J., dissenting).—That an order refusing to file in Court an agreement to refer to arbitration is not appealable. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That such an order is appealable, and the Court-fee payable on the memorandum of appeal is an ad-valorem fee computed on the value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal. Janki Tewari v. Gayan Tewari (I. L. R., 3 Al. 427) distinguished by STUART, C. J., and followed by OLDFIELD, J.—5 Al. 333.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 251, noted under sec. 506; 3 Al. 286, noted under sec. 2.

524. The foregoing provisions of this chapter, so far as they are consistent with any agreement so filed, shall be applicable to all proceedings under an order of reference made by the Court under section 523, and to the award of arbitration and to the enforcement of the decree founded thereupon.

Provisions of chapter applicable of proceedings under order of reference.

Where the partner of a firm in their partnership-deed agreed to refer their disputes to arbitration, and the reference made in pursuance of this agreement gave the arbitrators a power to make partition, but omitted a power to sell, held, on the award being made a rule of Court, that the Court had no power, under sec. 326, Act VIII of 1859, to order the sale of certain property of which the arbitrators were unable to make partition, and the sale of which they recommended on that ground.— 3 C.L. The application shall be in writing, and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

The Court shall direct notice to be given to the parties to the arbitration, other than the applicant, requiring them to show cause, within a time specified, why the award should not be filed.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

When a matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of any Court, a Small Cause Court in the mofussil has jurisdiction to entertain an application under sec. 327 of Act VIII of 1859 to file the award, provided it relates to a debt not exceeding the amount cognizable by such Court, and that the defendant resides within its jurisdiction.—1 B. L. R., (A. C.) 43 ; 10 W. R., 85 ; 10 Bom. 54 ; 5 M. H. C. R., 128.

As proceedings taken to file and enforce an award under sec. 327 of the Civil Procedure Code are of the nature of a suit within the meaning of sec. 2 of Act XX of 1864, a minor must be represented in such proceedings by a person holding a certificate of administration.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 289.

Where an application was made to a Subordinate Judge to file an award, and an objection was taken that the arbitrators had made their award several months before the date of the one sought to be filed, thus impeaching the identity of the award, and the Subordinate Judge after an inquiry with regard to the several objections ordered the award to be filed :—Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge should be set aside, or the award be deemed not to have been filed. The only objections which the Court can inquire into under secs. 525 & 526 are those which are specified in secs. 520 and 521, and those relate to cases in which the reference and the award are accepted facts ; but where the objection denies the factum of the particular award sought to be filed, and the objection does not seem to be frivolous, but one giving rise to inquiry into difficult questions of law and fact, it is not competent for the Court to deal with that objection under secs. 525 and 526. In such a case the Court should leave the applicant to a regular suit on the award as the basis of his cause of action wherein the party urging the objection will have the advantage of being a defendant rather than a plaintiff, and of having an appeal open to him in the event of an unfavourable decision.—I. L. R., 9 Bom. 254.

The three parties to a deed of partnership agreed that in case of any dispute or difference, the matter should be referred to the arbitration of persons chosen by each party to such dispute, and that in case any such party should refuse or fail to nominate an arbitrator, then the one named by the other party should nominate another arbitrator, and should nominate a third person as umpire. Certain difference arisen among the three partners, two of them called upon the executors or the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed, but they verified petitions disclosing grounds of objection under sec. 520 or sec. 521 of the Code:—Held that the word “parties” as used in sec. 525 should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators; that if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that, in the event of a certain state of things happening, a particular procedure shall be followed which, under one state of circumstances, may be adopted in invitum, they should, for the purposes of sec. 525, be regarded as parties to that arbitration; and that there was sufficient reason to show that the defendants in the present case were prima facie bound by the arbitration so as to bring them within the terms of sec. 525 as parties to the arbitration. is open to any of the objections mentioned in sec. 520 or sec. 521, and it is not sufficient, when it is sought to make the award a rule of Court, for the defeated party to come and merely say upon a verified petition that this or that ground referred to in secs. 520 and 521 existed against the filing. Sree Ram Chowdhry v. Denobundhoo Chowdhry and Ichemoyee Chowdhranee Chowdhry dissented from Dutto Singh v. Dosad Bahadur Chowdhry Murlaza Hossein v. Bechunnissa, referred to.—8 Al. 340.

A document, although headed as an “award,” and signed by the arbitrator, which merely recommends a solution of the questions referred to arbitration, will not be treated by the Court as an award on an application made under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—11 Cal. 356.

was decided by the Full Bench in Lala Ishuri Pershad v. Her Bhanjan (15 W. R., 9 F. B.) that the question of the existence of a legal award, when the award is not a rule of Court, is a question of fact, and the existence of the award, when the award is a rule of Court, is a question of law.

Matters in dispute were referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. An award was made, and upon an application under sec. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to file the award, one of the parties showed cause why the award should not be filed, and the Subordinate Judge held the objection to be good. Held that no appeal lay.—7 Cal. 490.

A Subordinate Judge, although invested with the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court Judge, does not, on that account, become a Small Cause Court Judge, nor his Court such a Court within the meaning of Act X of 1877. He therefore, has power, within the limits of his ordinary pecuniary jurisdiction, to receive and file awards of arbitrators under sec. 525 of that Act.—3 Bom. 219.

By the amendment of the plaintiff, a case under sec. 525 of Act X of 1877 was taken out of the scope of ch. XXXVII of that Act. Held that, this being so, the decree of the Court of first instance was appealable. Held also, where a private award determined a matter not referred to arbitration, that a claim under sec. 525 of Act X of 1877, that such award should be filed in Court, was properly dismissed.—3 Al. 541.

Where an arbitration-bond provides that the matters in dispute referred to the arbitrators may be taken up and dealt with seriatim, and the award delivered bit by bit (khurd khurd), it is not necessary under sec. 327 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with secs. 525, 526, Act XIV of 1882) that all the matters referred to should have been decided before the first portion of the award dealing with some only of the subjects in dispute can be filed.—4 Cal. 92.

Where an application is made under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have an award filed in Court, and it appears to the Court, on cause shown why the award should not be filed, that there is a reasonable dispute between the parties on any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 520 or 521, the application should be dismissed. Under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, sufficient cause may be shown by affidavit or verified petition, Sree Ram Chowdhry v. Denobundhoo Chowdhry (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 490); and Sashti Charan Chatterjee v. Tarak Chandra Chatterjee (8 B. L. R., 315) referred to.—9 Cal. 557.

When a Court has refused to file an award upon an application under sec. 525, Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies against such decision, which is an order, and not a decree; but the High Court can interfere under sec. 622. An award made under sec. 525, which is partly within and partly exceeds the terms of the submission to arbitration, cannot be enforced by summary procedure under sec. 526 as to such portion as does not exceed those terms. To refer to arbitration questions arising on the construction of the award and questions left undecided by it is a matter beyond the scope of an agreement to submit to a scheme for the future management of a devasam as regards conduct of suits, granting of demises, custody of property, collection of rents, appointment and removal of servants, and defrayment of current expenditure.—3 Madr. 68.

Where an award was made and signed by the arbitrators on the 5th of August 1881, but was not delivered to the parties till the 13th of September following, semble, that an application to file the award, made on the 25th February 1882, under the provisions of sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was not barred by limitation. It is clearly the intention of the Legislature that a party to an arbitration should have six months to enforce the award, under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, from the time when he is in a position to enforce it. Under secs. 525 and 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court has full power to enter into the question of the sufficiency of the cause shown against the filing in Court of an award. Dandekar v. Dandekars (I. L. R., 6 Bom. 663) followed; Ichamoyee Chowdhranee v. Prosunno Nath Chowdhri (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 557), dissented from. After an award has been made and handed to the parties the functions of the arbitrators cease. They have no power afterwards to deal with an application for review of their decision.—9 Cal. 575.

Where an award cannot be filed and a decree obtained upon it under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 525, a party is not precluded from suing upon it. Secondary evidence of the contents of the award is admissible on proof of its being lost.—15 Madr. 99.

The plaintiff lent money to two of the defendants, who were partners with the third defendant, for the purposes of the partnership and obtained promissory notes from them. Disputes which arose between them, were referred to arbitrators, who made an award. An application by the plaintiff to have the award made a rule of Court was opposed by defendant No. 1, and the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. He now brought his suit in the alternative on the award and on the promissory notes. The award was found to be unenforceable. The plaintiff then declared himself satisfied to withdraw his suit as far as the award was concerned, and the Court passed a decree for plaintiff on the merits. Defendant No. 3 alone having appealed, the Court of first appeal held that the plaintiff must succeed or fail on the award, and that the withdrawal of the prayer for a decree on the award altered the nature of the suit; and finding that there was no evidence of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, he passed a decree in the terms of the award. On a second appeal preferred by defendant No. 1:—Held, that this procedure was right.—15 Madr. 474.

Where a matter has been referred to arbitration, without the intervention of a Court of justice, by parties one of whom is an agriculturist, and an award has been made thereon, any person interested in the award may, without obtaining the conciliator's certificate, apply for the filing of the award under sec. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the provisions of which are not superseded by sec. 47 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879.—8 Bom. 20.

Held (Oldfield, J., dissenting) that an appeal does not lie from an order disallowing an application to file an award under sec. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code. Janki Tewari v. Gayan Tewari distinguished by Stuart, C. J. The same case followed by Oldfield, J.—6 Al. 186.

No appeal lies from an order upon an application to file an award under sec. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code. Upon an application to file an award under sec. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court to which the application is made has no jurisdiction to enquire whether the defendant has agreed to the terms of the instrument referring the matter to arbitration, or whether the terms were obtained by fraud. When such objections are made, it is the duty of the Court to reject the application under sec. 525, and refer the parties to a regular suit. The proper Court-fee upon an application to file an award under sec. 525 is the Court-fee prescribed for applications, and not the Court-fee upon a plaint.—10 Cal. 11.

See I. L. R., 18 Cal. 414, noted under sec. 13; 10 Cal. 74, noted under sec. 520; 3 Al. 427, noted under sec. 2; 6 Cal. 251, noted under sec. 506; 13 Al. 366, noted under sec. 522.

526. If no ground, such as is mentioned or referred to in section 520 or section 521, be shown against the award, the Court shall order it to be filed, and such award shall then take effect as an award made under the provisions of this chapter.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

No appeal lies from an order rejecting an application to file an award (Mitter, J., dubitante). Where the application was considered as a regular suit, the Judge was right in decreeing costs as in a regular suit.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 249.

Held by Melvill and Pinhey, JJ.—Before effect can be given to an award by execution-proceedings, there must be judgment according to the award, and a decree following thereon. A judgment-debt or, against whom an order for execution has been obtained behind his back, is not estopped from afterwards contending that there exists no decree which can be executed.—I. L. R., 7 Bom. 316.

The term “to show cause” in secs. 525 and 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act X of 1877, does not mean merely to allege cause, nor even to make out that there is room for argument, but both to allege cause and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court. Matters in dispute between the parties were referred to seven arbitrators without the intervention of a Court. The arbitrators, or so many of them as could be got together, held sittings extending over some months, and at each sitting they came to a decision, either unanimously, or by a majority, on different questions submitted to them. These decisions were entered on the minutes of their proceedings; and, at their last sitting, the arbitrators all agreed, and informed the parties, that the decisions so arrived at constituted the final award, and gave directions for embodying those decisions in the shape of a formal document, which was drawn up on a subsequent day, but was signed by four only out of the seven arbitrators. The remaining arbitrators not being asked to sign it, they never did sign it. Held that the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting, and the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. The omission to take the signatures of the minority of the arbitrators to the document which formed the record of the award was not fatal to the award. Amongst other matters, the arbitrators were asked to make a division of certain fields to which the parties were equally entitled. The arbitrators decided the other matters but, as regards the fields, said that it was inconvenient to do so in consequence of the rains, and ordered the parties “to receive the profits half and half, and to pay the assessment half and half.” Held that the award left undetermined one of the principal subjects of dispute; and, as the Court had no power to remit the award to the arbitrators, the applicant was entitled to a judgment, setting aside the order for filing the award.—6 Bom. 663.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 427; 2 Bom. 553, noted under sec. 2; 9 Cal. 557; 3 Madr. Cal. 68 & 9 Cal. 575, noted under sec. 525; 4 Madr. 319, noted under sec. 522.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

OF PROCEEDINGS ON AGREEMENT OF PARTIES.

527. Parties claiming to be interested in the decision of any question of fact or law may enter into an agreement in writing, stating such question in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court, and providing that, upon the finding of the Court with respect to such question,

(a) a sum of money fixed by the parties, or to be determined by the Court, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them ; or

(b) some property, moveable or immoveable, specified in the agreement, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them ; or

(c) one or more of the parties shall do, or refrain from doing, some other particular act specified in the agreement.

Every case stated under this section shall be divided into consecutively numbered paragraphs, and shall concisely state such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the question raised thereby.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

528. If the agreement is for the delivery of any property, or for the doing, or the refraining from doing, any particular act, the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or to which the act specified has reference, shall be stated in the agreement.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

529. The agreement, if framed in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, may be filed in the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the amount or value of the subject-matter of which is the same as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the agreement.

The agreement, when so filed, shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties claiming to be interested, as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the other or others of them as defendant or defendants ; and notice shall be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the party or parties by whom it was presented.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

530. When the agreement has been filed, the parties to Parties to be subject to its jurisdiction. it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and shall be bound by the statements contained therein.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

531. The case shall be set down for hearing as a suit Hearing and disposal of case. instituted under Chapter V., the provisions of which shall apply to such suit so far as the same are applicable.

If the Court is satisfied, after an examination of the parties, or after taking such evidence as it thinks fit,

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by them, and
(b) that they have a bona fide interest in the question stated therein, and

(c) that the same is fit to be decided, it shall proceed to pronounce judgment thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit, and upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow, and shall be enforced in the manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees.

CHAPTER XXXXI.

OF SUMMARY PROCEDURE ON NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

532. In any Court to which this section applies, all Institution of summary suits upon bills of exchange, &c. suits upon bills of exchange, or promissory notes, may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed under this chapter, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed by this Code ; but the summons shall be in the form contained in the fourth schedule hereto annexed, No. 172, or in such other form as the High Court may, from time to time, prescribe.

In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit, unless he obtains leave from a Judge, as hereinafter mentioned, so to appear and defend ;

and in default of his obtaining such leave, or of appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree, and a sum for costs to be fixed by a rule of the High Court, unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be enforced forthwith.

The defendant shall not be required to pay into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or to give security therefor, unless the Court thinks his defence not to be prima facie sustainable, or feels reasonable doubt as to its good faith.

Payment into Court of sum mentioned in summons.

Explanation.—This section is not confined to cases in which the bill, hundi, or note sued upon, together with mere lapse of time, is sufficient to establish a prima facie right to recover.

Notes.

Where, in a suit under Act V. of 1867, the defendant is at such a distance as would make it impossible for him to put in an appearance within the seven days allowed by the Act, the Court will stay execution for a time long enough to allow him to appear. Suits can be brought under this Act against persons resident out of the jurisdiction.—3 B. L. R., (O. C.) 83.

In a suit under the Bills of Exchange Act, to recover Rs. 1,200 on a promissory note the Court gave a decree for Rs. 700 only, that being shown to have been the full consideration received for the note. There is nothing illegal in the true holder of a promissory note endorsing it to another person, with the express object of allowing him to sue upon it. Held, by PEACOCK, C. J., that the suit, being between two Hindus, must be decided by Hindu law. By Hindu law, a promissory note does not import consideration, and therefore, where it was proved that the defendant actually received only Rs. 700, that sum was all the plaintiff was allowed to recover. Act XXVIII of 1855 did not repeal the Hindu laws as to the rate of interest. Such rate is governed by the strict rules of Hindu law as originally laid down by Menu and other law-givers.—3 B. L. R., (O. C.) 130; 12 W. R., (O. C.) 9.

A plaint was presented by the endorsees of a promissory note in a suit under Act V of 1866. The note was endorsed as follows: "Received for the Chartered Mercantile Bank, J. M. Reid, Agent;" but the note had not been paid when it was presented, and the endorsement was struck out. PHEAR J.: "I cannot admit the plaint, unless evidence is given that the bill has not been paid, and to explain why the endorsement has been struck out. As under Act V. of 1866 evidence cannot be taken, the plaint cannot be admitted."—3 B. L. R., (O. C.) 146.

The Court will give leave to a defendant to appear and defend in suit under Act V of 1866, where he shows a defence apparently real; but if there is a doubt as to the bona fides of the defence, payment of money into Court will be ordered, or security directed to be given. The Court has, in giving leave to defend, a discretion to order security for costs, not only where it doubts the bona fides of the defence, but also if it considers the matter of defence raised is unnecessary, though allowable. If the plaintiff has not been heard at first against the defendant's application, the Court will always allow him to come in afterwards, and show that the leave ought not to have been granted, or, if granted at all, on more stringent terms.—6 B. L. R., App. 64.

In an undefended suit under Act V of 1866 on a promissory note for Rs. 342-15-6, which did not bear interest, the petition did not show that the suit could not have been brought in the Small Cause Court. The Court gave a decree for the amount sued for with costs on scale No. 1.—8 B. L. R., App. 10.

The defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take the plaintiff's mare "Bridesmaid" on "racing terms"—all winnings to be divided equally between them, and the plaintiff to have the option of claiming a one-fourth share of any lottery in which she might be brought by or on account of the defendant; the plaintiff to keep and train "Bridesmaid" for Rs. 60 a month. Subsequently the plaintiff agreed to keep and train, for a like sum for each horse, five horses belonging to the defendant. The defendant having been posted as a defaulter, the plaintiff at the defendant's request advanced certain sums to the Secretary of the Calcutta Races to enable the defendant's horses to run. As security for the repayment of such advances, and of a sum of Rs. 4,456-6 which had become due to the plaintiff, and which included an item of Rs. 1,149 for "balance of bets and lotteries" and a smaller sum in respect of certain tickets in the "Secundra Raffle," the defendant gave to the plaintiff a letter of hypothecation of his five horses, whereby it was agreed that, in case of the defendant's default, the plaintiff should be at liberty to sell the horses. The defendant made default, and the plaintiff advertised the horses for sale. On the same day the defendant wrote and gave to the plaintiff a letter, stating that, in consideration of the plaintiff's withdrawing the advertisement, and withdrawing the sale for a certain period, he would give the plaintiff a promissory note for the balance of his claim. A note for Rs. 7,000 was accordingly given by the defendant to the plaintiff. In the account delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, he had by mistake over-credited the defendant with Rs. 744 in an item headed "cash received from the Secretary of the Calcutta Races, balance of racing account," and under which was included the following item: "I. O. U., deducted from lottery account, Rs. 480." On receiving information of the error, the defendant gave the plaintiff another promissory note for Rs. 744. In an action on the notes brought under Act V of 1866, the plaintiff obtained a decree, which was set aside on the defendant's application, and leave was given to him to appear and defend. Written statements were then filed on the plaintiff's application. Held by MACPHERSON, J., that the two promissory notes were given as a security for the whole of the plaintiff's claim; that the items for "balance of bets and lotteries" and for the "Secundra Raffle" being rendered illegal by the Lottery Act (V of 1844), part of the consideration for the notes was illegal, and no action was maintainable upon them. His Lordship, therefore, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, held by COUCH, C. J., that the promissory note for Rs. 7,000 was not vitiated by the Rs. 1,149 being part of the consideration for it: although that portion of the latter sum which was won by lotteries was obtained by an illegal transaction, it was not illegal for the defendant to receive the money, and, having done so, to pay the plaintiff his share, or to promise to do so. But the money paid in respect of the "Secundra Raffle," being money paid in execution of an illegal purpose, was an illegal consideration, which disentitled the plaintiff to recover on the note. Held further that the note for Rs. 744 was given upon good consideration. All the facts of the case being stated in the plaintiff's written statement, the Court might allow the plaint to be amended, and framed an issue as to what amount was due to the plaintiff in respect of the consideration for the note for Rs. 7,000. Held by MARKBY, J., that both notes were good, inasmuch as the promise contained in them did not spring from, nor was it the creature of, the original illegal agreement, but was a separate agreement.—9 B. L. R., 441 ; 18 W. R., 424.

Under the summary procedure in Bills of Exchange Act (V of 1866), the plaintiff is entitled to claim by his summons, and obtain by his decree, whatever sum, principal, and interest, is, on the legal construction of the instrument, demandable.—6. M. H. C. R., 257.

In a suit under Act V of 1866, the summons should be returned in the usual way ; and after the expiration of the required time, an order of the Court or a decree should be obtained.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 283.

Although Act V of 1866, sec. 3, only gives the defendant seven days to get leave to come in and defend an action on a bill, note, &c., the Court must be satisfied before granting a decree that the defendant has had a full opportunity to obtain leave to defend.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 395.

The High Court has power to extend the time within which a defendant in a suit brought under chap. xxxix, (summary procedure on negotiable instruments) of the Civil Procedure Code can come in and obtain leave to defend : therefore, in a suit in which it appeared that the defendant resided at Peshawar, the time for the defendant to obtain leave from the Court to appear and defend was extended to 28 days.—I. L. R., 3 Cal. 539.

See I. L. R., 16 Cal. 804, noted under sec. 35 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

533. The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit, upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or upon affidavits satisfactory to the Court, which disclose a defence or such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application, and on such terms as to security, framing and recording issues, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit.

534. After decree, the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and, if necessary, stay or set aside execution, and may give leave to appear to the summons and to defend the suit, if it seem reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

Note.

No appeal lies under Act X of 1877 from an order made under that Act rejecting an application for an order setting aside a decree made ex parte against a defendant.—I. L. R., 1 Al. (F. B.) 748.

535. In any proceeding under this chapter the Court may order the bill, hundi, or note on which the suit is founded, to be forthwith deposited with an officer of the Court, and may further order that all proceedings shall be stayed until the plaintiff gives security for the costs thereof.

Power to order bill, &c., to be deposited with officer of Court.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 6 Al. 284, noted under sec. 30.

536. The holder of every dishonoured bill of exchange or promissory note shall have the same remedies for the recovery of the expenses incurred in noting the same for non-acceptance or non-payment, or otherwise, by reason of such dishonour, as he has under this chapter for the recovery of the amount of such bill or note.

Recovery of cost of noting non-acceptance of dis-honoured bill or note.

537. Except as provided by sections 532 to 536 (both inclusive), the procedure in suits under this chapter shall be the same as the procedure in suits instituted under Chapter V.

Procedure in suits under chapter.

538. Sections 532 to 537 (both inclusive) apply only to—

Application of chapter.

(a) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, and Bombay ;

(b) the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon ;

(c) the Courts of Small Cause in Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay ;

(d) the Court of the Judge of Karachi ; and

(e) any other Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction, to which the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, apply them.

In case of such application the Local Government may direct by whom any of the powers and duties incident to the provisions so applied shall be exercised and performed, and make any rules which it thinks requisite for carrying into operation the provisions so applied.

Within one month after such notification has been published, such provisions shall apply accordingly, and the rules so made shall have the force of law.

The Local Government may, from time to time, alter or cancel any such notification.

Note.

A plaintiff suing on a bill of exchange the drawer, acceptor, and endorser, where the endorsement has been made before maturity and without restriction, is entitled to a decree against all three defendants; a decree containing a condition exempting the endorser from liability until the plaintiff has exhausted his remedies against the drawer and acceptor is therefore illegal.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 804.

CHAPTER XL.OF SUITS RELATING TO PUBLIC CHARITIES.

539. In case of any alleged breach of any express or constructive trusts created for public charitable or religious purposes, or whenever the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust, the Advocate-General acting ex officio, or two more persons "having an interest"* in the trust, and having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate-General, may institute a suit in the High Court or the District Court within the local limits of whose civil jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, to obtain a decree—

When suits relating to public charities may be brought.

(a) appointing new trustees under the trust ;
 (b) vesting any property in the trustees under the trust ;
 (c) declaring the proportions in which its objects are entitled ;
 (d) authorizing the whole or any part of its property to be let, sold, mortgaged, or exchanged ;
 (e) settling a scheme for its management ;
 or granting such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require.

The powers conferred by this section on the Advocate-General may, outside the Presidency-towns, be, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, exercised also by the Collector or by such officer as the Local Government may appointed in this behalf.

Notes.

The plaintiffs, having an interest as the managers of a temple in seeing to the due performance of the religious part of the administration of a certain charity endowed for the sustenance of Brahmans and connected with the temple, and being further interested in its administration as Brahmans entitled under certain circumstances to share in the benefits of the charity, sued under sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure to remove defendant from the trusteeship of the charity on the ground of fraudulent mismanagement. Held that the plaintiffs' interest did not support the suit. Quære.—Whether a suit for the removal of a trustee will lie under the above section. I. L. R., 12 Madr. 157.

In a suit under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 539, in the District Court to remove the hereditary trustee of a public trust for breach of trust, the District Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to pass the decree prayed for. The plaintiff appealed and the appeal came on before two Judges, who differed in opinion. The appeal was thereupon referred under Civil Pro. Code, sec. 575, and was heard by a Bench of three Judges, including the Judges who first heard the appeal:—Held, by BEST and WEIR, J.J. (MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J., dissentiente) that the District Judge had jurisdiction to remove the trustee hostilely for breach of trust in a suit under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 539. Narasimha v. Ayyan (I. L. R., 12 Madr. 157) considered.—14 Madr. 186.

A trust for a Hindu idol and temple is to be regarded in India as one created "for public charitable purposes" within the meaning of sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). The Hindu law recognizes, not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation apart from its individual members, but also the juridical persons or subjects called foundations. A Hindu who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution may, according to his law, express his purpose and endow it, and the ruler will give effect to the bounty, or at least protect it. A trust is not required for this purpose as it is by English law. Those who take charge of gifts made to a religious or charitable institution—whether such gifts consists of cash, jewels, or land—incur thereby a responsibility for their due application to the purposes of the institution. They are answerable as trustees would be, even though they have not consciously accepted a trust; and a remedy may be sought against them for maladministration by a suit open to any one interested as under the Roman system in a like case by means of a popularies actio. The plaintiffs, as relators, filed this suit, under sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X. of 1877), against the defendants as trustees of the temple of Shri Ranchhod Raiji at Dakor. The plaintiffs were five in number. The first plaintiff was the hereditary manager of the temple and its appendant villages. The other plaintiffs were priests residing at Dakor, who ordinarily took charge of pilgrims visiting the shrine, and performed worship of the idol on their behalf. The defendants were the shevaks or ministers of the idol—about one hundred and fifty in number—who took office by hereditary descent. The remained in constant attendance on the idol, performed the daily services at the temple, collected all the offerings made at the shrine, and kept them in a bhandar or store-room. The god Shri Ranchhod Raiji was held in great veneration by the followers of the Vaishnava religion throughout Western India. Every full moon, thousands of pilgrims resorted to the shrine, and made offerings to the deity, of cash, ornaments, clothes, and other articles, amounting in value to about a lakh of rupees in the course of a year. Besides these offerings the temple enjoyed a grant, in perpetuity, of the revenues of several inam villages, of which Dakor and Kanjri yielded the largest income. The plaintiffs sued as persons interested in the maintenance of this public religious and charitable institution, and prayed that the Court would make the defendants, as recipients of the offerings at the idol's shrine, accountable, as trustees, for the right disposal of the property thus acquired. The plaintiffs alleged that the income of the temple had largely increased, and had been wrongly appropriated by the defendants to their personal purposes. They, therefore, prayed for an account, for the appointment of a receiver, for the removal of the shevaks from their office, and for the settlement of a scheme of future management. The defendants answered (inter alia) that the plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the institution as to entitle them to sue under sec. 539 of Act X of 1877; that they themselves were owners of the idol and of the idol's property, and that, as such, they were not liable to render an account of the offerings they had collected at the shrine. They also contended that they were not liable to be removed from their offices, which they and their ancestors had held for several centuries past. The District Judge dismissed the suit, on the preliminary ground that, except the first plaintiff, who was a hereditary manager of the temple, the other plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the charity as to entitle them to sue under sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). Held, reversing the decision of the District Judge, the plaintiffs Nos. 2—5, as priests residing at Dakor, and taking part in the worship of the idol, were directly interested in its due performance and its maintenance. Though they might not be trustees, they were clearly among those who, in practice, benefited by the execution of the trust. They had thus an undeniable locus standi as relators, and the suit could proceed at their instance. Held, further, that the sevaks were not the owners of the offerings made to the idol. As recipients of those offerings they were responsible for their due application to the purposes of the foundation. They were liable, as trustees, to render an account of their management. The Court accordingly directed the District Judge (1) to take steps either by appointing a receiver, or otherwise, in his discretion, for guarding the property of the temple; (2) to take an account of the property and of the receipts and disbursements of the temple; (3) to make the requisite orders for recovering property appropriated by the shevaks; and (4) to draw up a scheme for the future management of the temple and its funds, regard being had to the established practice of the institution and to the position of the shevaks and of other persons connected with it. The jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in matters of this kind discussed. The plaintiffs had applied, during the hearing of the case in the Court of first instance, for the production of certain books of account of the defendants. The defendants resisted the application, and the Court refused to order the books to be produced. The suit having been dismissed, the plaintiffs appealed, and in the Court of appeal the defendants applied to be permitted to put in evidence the books which they had refused to produce. Held that the evidence could not be admitted.—12 Bom. 247.

Sec. 539 of the Code Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) has no application to a suit brought by the trustees of a religious endowment to eject persons in wrongful possession of the trust property. The plaintiffs sued, as trustees of a temple, to recover certain trust property from defendants, who were alleged to be in wrongful possession. The defendants pleaded that they were owners of the property in dispute and applied the income thereof for the purposes of the temple. They disputed the plaintiffs' title to the management or possession of the same. The Subordinate Judge, who tried the case in the first instance, held that the defendants were trustees with respect to the property in their possession, and that the suit was one of the nature contemplated by sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). He, therefore, returned the plaint for presentation to the District Judge. This order was confirmed on appeal. Held, that Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Held, also, the High Court had power, under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to interfere in this case, the Subordinate Judge having failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law. Held, also, that the suit was not one falling under sec. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—15 Bom. 148.

R instituted a suit with the Collector's sanction to compel the performance of a charitable trust; D was subsequently joined as plaintiff, having also obtained the Collector's sanction to institute the suit:—Held, that the sanction obtained by D related back to the institution of the suit.—10 Madr. 185.

A church at Palayur and the property appertaining to it were in the possession of certain of the yogakars or parishioners, who had been elected kaikars or church-wardens, but whose election had since been superseded in favour of three other persons who now sued to recover possession. The plaintiffs were Roman Catholics; and with the three persons above referred to were joined as plaintiffs the Vicar Apostolic, the Vicar appointed to the church by him, and two other persons representing the Roman Catholic yogakars. The defendants were Syro-Chaldean Christians, and with the two persons above referred to were joined the Chor Equisopa, the Vicar appointed to the church by him, and four persons representing the other yogakars. The plaint was framed under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 539, and contained, besides a prayer for possession, prayers for a declaration that the church, &c., was held on trust for worship according to the faith and discipline of the Church of Rome, and for injunctions against the defendants. The suit was tried by the District Judge in whose Court it was instituted, although the defendants pleaded to his jurisdiction on the ground that Civil Procedure Code, sec. 539, was inapplicable. He passed a decree for the plaintiffs, holding that the church, &c., was dedicated to the trust above stated, although it had been diverted from the purposes of that trust for a time. In coming to this conclusion, he referred to a Portuguese work dated 1606, "India Orientalis Christiana" published in 1794, and Hough's "History of Christianity in India" published in 1839:—Held, (1) that the suit not being one brought by beneficiaries against trustees, or for any of the purposes mentioned in Civil Procedure Code, sec. 539, that section had no application; (2) that, although the suit should accordingly have been brought in the Subordinate Court, the District Judge had jurisdiction to try it; (3) that the District Judge was justified in referring to the books above mentioned; (4) that the decree was right, on its appearing that the church, &c., had been held on the above trust from 1599 to 1882 with a doubtful interruption for one year, although the original trust may have been different.—15 Madr. 241.

Sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, does not apply to the case of an endowment for purposes religious as well as charitable.—5 Madr. 383.

Two out of five trustees appointed by a will to administer a public charitable trust brought this suit against the remaining three trustees praying (i) that the first defendant might be ordered to account for a specific sum of money of which it was alleged he had committed a breach of trust, (ii) that the first defendant might be removed from the office of trustee and some other person appointed in his stead, and (iii) for such other or further relief as the nature of the case might require. The consent in writing of the Advocate-General to the institution of the suit under sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) had not been obtained. Held, that the suit was one which fell within the purview of sec. 539, and consequently, in the absence of such consent, was not maintainable.—16 Bom. 626.

Worshippers or devotees of an idol are entitled to bring a suit, com plaining of a breach of trust, with reference to the funds or property belonging to the idol or appendant to its temple. Quære.—Whether, if the suit had been brought after Act X of 1877 came into force, sec. 539 of that Act could be held applicable to the devasthan of an idol or temple, dedicated merely to the purposes of such idol or temple?—3 Bom. 27.

The plaintiffs sued as relators, under section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to have the defendants removed from the management of a religious endowment, called the “Chinchvad savasthan,” on the ground that they had mismanaged and misappropriated the trust funds in their hands. The plaintiffs also prayed for the appointment of new trustees, and for the settlement of a new scheme of management under the direction of the Court. The plaintiffs and defendant were the descendants of Shri Morya Gosavi, the original founder of the savasthan. Shri Morya Gosavi was a devotee of the deity Shri Mangal Murti. He dedicated a temple to the deity at the village of Chinchvad, and established an annachhatra and sadavart for feeding the poor and the destitute. He buried himself alive, and over his tomb a temple was built to perpetuate his memory. The Raja of Satara conferred on his descendants from time to time grants of lands, villages and varshasans for the maintenance of the shrine and of the charities connected with it. Votaries of the god Shri Mangal Murti visited the shrine in large numbers and took part in the annual festivals and celebrations held in honour of the founder of the savasthan. In course of time the Chinchvad savasthan became one of the most popular sacerdotal institutions of the Deccan. In 1744 the Peshwa made a tahinama (or award) by which he set apart one-half of the savasthan property exclusively for religious and charitable purposes, and distributed the other half among the descendants of the founder, to provide for their temporal wants. Subsequently to the date of this award, fresh grants were made to the manager of the savasthan by the ruling authorities of the day. In 1774 and 1776 A. D. the new acquisitions were divided on the principle adopted in the Peshwa’s award—one-half being reserved exclusively for the savasthan, the other half distributed among the heirs of the grantee. In 1874 the defendant No. 1 succeeded to the office of manager and trustee of the savasthan. Within a few years after entering upon his office, the defendant No. 1 in conjunction with his son, defendant No. 2, incurred heavy debts, mortgaged several villages belonging to the savasthan, and dealt with the savasthan income as if it was his own absolute property. The plaintiffs filed the present suit with the consent of the Advocate-General in 1883. The defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the property in suit was not burdened with a public religious or charitable trust; that they were not trustees, but owners, of the savasthan; and that the plaintiffs had not such direct interest in the property as to entitle them to sue under sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The district Judge, who tried the case, found that the savasthan was a public religious and charitable institution; that the defendants were trustees in charge of the savasthan property, and that they were guilty of such gross misconduct as to make them unfit to act as trustees in future. He, therefore, passed a decree, directing the defendants to be removed from their office as trustees, appointed a new trustee in their place and framed a scheme for the future management of the savasthan. Held, on the evidence, that the management of the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the sacred shrines at the villages of Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur and Sidhatek, with their endowments—constituted a public religious and charitable trust within the contemplation of section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the plaintiffs, being worshippers and devotees of the god Shri Mangal Murti, and being also descendants of the original founder of the endowment, had a direct interest in the trust, entitling them to sue under section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, further, that the defendants' assertion of their right to treat the trust property as their private estate, and to apply the trust funds to their private purposes, was sufficient to justify their removal from the trust. Held, further, upon the construction of the Peshwa's tahanama (or award), that it was the intention of the governing power in 1744 A. D. that thenceforth the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the shrines at Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur and Sidhatek—should constitute a public devasthan, and that in setting apart a moiety of the property for the savasthan, the object was to provide a fund for the support of the four shrines and the expenses of the customary festivals, as well as of the anna-chhatra established at Chinchvad.—15 Bom. 612.

Certain Mahomedans sued to set aside a mortgage of endowed property belonging to a mosque, the decree enforcing the mortgage, and the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of that decree, and for the demolition of buildings erected by the purchaser, and the ejectment of the purchaser. Held that the plaintiffs, as Mahomedans entitled to frequent the mosque and to use the other religious buildings connected with the endowment, could maintain the suit, and sec. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application to the case, the endowment being a religious institution, within the meaning of sec. 24 of Act VI of 1871, and therefore governed by Mahomedan Law.—5 Al. 497.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 32 & 11, Al. 18, noted under sec. 30 ; 14 Madr. 1, noted under sec. 14 of the Religious Endowments Act.

PART VI. OF APPEALS.

CHAPTER XLI.

OF APPEALS FROM ORIGINAL DECREES.

540. Unless when otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees, or from any part of the decrees, of the Courts exercising original jurisdiction to the Courts authorized to hear appeals from the decisions of those Courts.

Appeal to lie from all original decrees, except when expressly prohibited.

An appeal may lie under this section from an original decree passed ex parte.

Notes.

In this case the two following points were discussed : 1. What will be considered "sufficient cause" for delay in filing an appeal which is too late under sec. 333 of Act VIII. of 1859 ? What powers the Appellate Court has to reject an appeal as out of time after having already admitted it ?—4 B. L. R., App. 84 ; 13 W. R., 245.

In calculating the ninety days allowed for an appeal by Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 333, the period between the date on which judgment was pronounced and that on which the decree was signed by the Judge was allowed to be deducted, as coming within the words, "exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree" in that section.—18 W. R., 512.

An order made under sec. 37, Bengal Rent Act (Beng. Act VIII of 1869), is a decree within the meaning of the definition contained in the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), and an appeal lies therefrom under the provisions of sec. 540.—I. L. R., 7 Cal. 684.

An appellant, who has obtained a decree setting aside the decision of the Court of first instance, is not entitled to a further appeal to the High Court, on the ground that he is dissatisfied with some of the findings recorded in the judgment of the Lower Appellate Court, an appeal from an appellate decree under sec. 584 being strictly restricted to matters contained in the decree alone.—6 Cal. 206.

Applications for the extension of the period for the submission of an award and orders thereon should be made in writing and recorded. When a party has been prejudiced by having the time allowed for taking objections to an award curtailed by the Court, no appeal lies, but a review should be granted by the Court of first instance.—3 Madr. 59.

Nothing remained to be done in a suit except to her arguments, for which a time had been appointed. Neither the plaintiff nor his pleader appeared at the appointed time. The Court consequently dismissed the suit. Held that its decree was appealable under sec. 540 of Act X of 1877, and the lower Appellate Court should have entertained the appeal and disposed of it with reference to the provisions of sec. 565, and secs. 102 and 103 were not applicable to the circumstances.—3 Al. 292.

Where the Court of first instance held that the land sued for was not included in the defendant's garden, and they were not the owners of it; but that they could not be ejected from it, as they were in possession under a lease which had not expired, and that the question whether such land was included, in the defendant's garden, and that they were the owners of it, was not res-judicata; and the Court made a decree dismissing the suit in these terms, "Ordered that the plaintiff's claim as it stands at present be dismissed." Held that the defendants were entitled, under Act X of 1877, sec. 540, to appeal from such decree.—2 Al. (F. B.) 497.

Where a Judge, after the defendant's written statement was put in, framed certain preliminary issues, and decided them, directing part of plaintiff's claim to be dismissed, and part to be tried on the merits (which trial might necessitate the taking of an account from defendant). Held that no appeal lies from such an order either on the part of the plaintiff because the Civil Procedure Code only allows an appeal against a portion of the decision when there has been a decision relating to the disposal of the entire suit, or on the part of defendant inasmuch as there had been no final order to take an account.—3 Madr. 13.

At the hearing of a suit, a party, though he had sufficient warning of what was necessary, did not take the proper steps to cause the production of the documentary, and only admissible, evidence of a material fact which had to be proved by him; and the decision was against him. The record of another proceeding would, it was said, have supplied this evidence; and an application had been previously made on which the order of the Judge was that "the matter would be decided when the case was tried, and the record would be sent for, if necessary." No further application to the Court was made, and no attempt to supply this evidence. Held that if there had been, as there might have been, an oversight by the party in not calling the attention of the Judge to the above order, and in not tendering the evidence, there had been no omission on the Judge's part affording ground for appeal.—9 Cal. 260.

The plaintiffs, the widow and son respectively of N, deceased, claimed immoveable property inherited from his father by N, and also immoveable property which had devolved upon N from his brother, who had predeceased him, and mesne-profits of such properties. The Court of first instance, finding that the claim to the former property was admitted, and that to the latter was not denied, but resisted as barred by sec. 13 of Act X of 1877, and holding it not to be so barred, made a decree returning the plaint to the plaintiffs that they might, after correcting it, file it either in the Revenue Court in regard to the profits of the former property, or in the Civil Court for possession of the latter property. Held that, although the claim of the plaintiffs was not either decreed or dismissed, yet as the right and title asserted by them to such properties was implicitly recognised by such decree, the defendants were entitled to appeal from it.—3 Al. 75.

M sued K and J to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of property which he alleged K had sold to J. K denied that she had sold such property to J. J set up as a defence that M had waived his right of pre-emption. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the alleged sale had not taken place. J appealed, making M and K respondents. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the appeal, also holding that the alleged sale had not taken place. J then appealed to the High Court, making K the respondent. Held that neither the appeal from the original decree in suit, nor the appeal from the appellate decree therein, was admissible. Held also that the finding as to the alleged sale was one between the plaintiff and defendants in the suit, and not between the defendant-vendor and the defendant-vendee who were litigating, and would not bar adjudication of the matter in issue between them in a suit brought by the latter for the establishment of the sale.—3 Al. (F. B.) 152.

The lower Appellate Court (Subordinate Judge) decided on appeal by the defendant from the decree of the Court of first instance (Munsiff) that the Court of first instance had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, as the value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeded the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction; and ordered that "the appellant's appeal be decreed, the decision of the Munsif be reversed, and the record of the case be sent to the Munsif to return the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court." The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from such order as an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court. Held that such order could not be regarded as one to which art. 6 of sec. 588, Act X of 1877, was applicable. That relates to orders returning plaints for amendment or to be presented to the proper Court passed by a Court of first instance, and not to an order by an Appellate Court upon an appeal to it from the decree of a Court of first instance of general grounds. The plaintiffs proper course was to have preferred a second appeal.—3 Al. 456.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 382, 3 Al. 427 and 13 Al. 290, noted under sec. 2; 3 Madr. 264 and 4 Al. 387, noted under sec. 108; 16 Bom. 676, noted under sec. 220; 5 Bom. 45, noted under sec. 244; 13 Al. 569, noted under sec. 293; 16 Cal. 250, noted under Art. 179 of the Limitation Act.

541. The appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum in writing presented by the appellant, and shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against and (unless the Appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded.

Such memorandum shall set forth, concisely and under distinct heads, the grounds of objection to the decree appealed against, without any argument or narrative ; and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively.

Court, urge or be heard in support of any other ground of objection ; but the Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds set forth by the appellant :

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any ground not set forth by the appellant, unless the respondent has had sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

Notes

Held by PEARSON, J., and STRAIGHT, J. SPANKIE, J, dissenting), as follows : That, in disposing of a second appeal, the High Court is competent under sec. 542 of Act X of 1877, to consider the question whether the plaintiff has any cause of action or not, although such question has not been raised by the defendant-appellant in the Courts below or in his memorandum of second appeal, but is raised for the first time at the hearing of such appeal. That the cause of action of a person claiming the right of pre-emption in the case of a conditional sale arise, when the conditional sale takes place, and not when it becomes absolute ; and therefore, where a conditional sale took place in 1867, and after it had become absolute a person sued to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the property sold, basing his claim upon a special agreement made in the interval between the date of the conditional sale and the date that it became absolute, and alleging that his cause of action arose on the latter date, that the suit was not maintainable, the plaintiff having no right of pre-emption at the time of the conditional sale.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 884.

Section 542 of the Code of Civil Procedure was intended to confer upon the Court a power exerciseable by it alone ; it was not intended to enable an appellant to take the respondent by surprise by urging matter of which he had no notice.—13 Al. 381.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 69, noted under sec. 13.

543. If the memorandum of appeal be not drawn up in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, it may be rejected, or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court, or be amended then and there.

Rejection or amendment of memorandum.

When the Court rejects under this section any memorandum, it shall record the reasons for such rejection.

When a memorandum of appeal is amended under this section, the Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, shall attest the amendment by his signature.

Notes.

Whenever a memorandum of appeal is rejected under the discretionary power vested in the Court, a judicial order to that effect, and the reasons for the same, ought to be recorded.—1 Ind. Jur., (O. S.), 121.

An appeal is not admissible against an order passed under sec. 336, Act VIII. of 1859.—11 W. R., 556.

544. Where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit, and the decree appealed against proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and thereupon the Appellate Court may reverse or modify the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

Notes.

In a suit for recovery of Rs. 300 due on a bond, the defendants denied the execution of the bond and the receipt of the consideration. The Court of first instance decreed the suit, which, on appeal by one of the defendants, was dismissed. Held that, under sec. 337, Act VIII. of 1859, the Judge had no power on appeal by one defendant to set aside a decree against the other.—3 B. L. R., App. 41. ; 11 W. R., 449 ; Marshall's Rep., 106 ; 1 Hay's Rep., 183.

Power of the Court of Appeal, under sec. 337 of Act VIII. of 1859, to reverse the whole of the decree of the Court below upon the appeal of one only of the parties against whom the decree was passed.—7 B. L. R., App. 28 ; 9 W. R., 499.

D. C. S., the zemindar, brought a suit against B, a ryot, for recovery of arrears of rent valued below Rs. 100. B set up in defence that the rent was not payable to D. C. S., but to N. C. A., the mokurraridar. N. C. A., who claimed under a mokurrari title, and alleged that he was in receipt of the rents from the ryots, was made a party under sec. 73, Act VIII. of 1859. The Munsif passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by N. C. A., which was heard and decided by the Subordinate Judge on reference by the District Judge, the decree of the first Court was reversed, and the suit dismissed. On appeal to the High Court, held that N. C. A. was properly made a defendant to the suit, and that he could prefer an appeal from the decree of the Court of first instance, and that the Court of Appeal could, on his appeal, set aside the whole decree. A special appeal lay to the High Court ; the words " District Judge " in sec. 102 of Act VIII. of 1869 (B. G.) do not include a Subordinate Judge to whom, under Act XVI. of 1868, or Act VI. of 1871, the District Judge may make over appeals filed in his Court. The only issue to be tried was whether the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted between D. C. S. and B.—8 B. L. R., 180; 16 W. R., 235.

The plaintiff sued on a mortgage-bond executed by the first defendant. The second defendant, who claimed the property under a mortgage from the first defendant, was admitted a defendant on his own application, but afterwards excluded from the suit. Before this was done, he had incurred certain costs which, by the Munsif's decree, he was ordered to bear himself. Upon appeal by the first defendant, the Civil Judge found that the mortgage-bond sued upon was not proved, dismissed the suit, and ordered the plaintiff to pay all costs, those of the second defendant included. Held that, under sec. 337 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was competent to the Civil Judge so to modify the Munsif's decree, as the main ground of the whole decision, vis., the validity of the mortgage-bond, affected all the defendants in common, and the appeal of the first defendant, and the decision of the Appellate Court, had reference to that common ground.—4 M. H. C. R., 26.

Where a suit at the time of institution within the jurisdiction of the Court in which it is brought has undergone a substantial change, and become a suit which by law requires the order of a superior tribunal for its hearing in the original Court, and such order has not been obtained, plaintiff cannot subsequently on appeal be allowed to revert to the original form of the suit for the purpose of upholding the lower Court's judgment as far as regards the original defendants.—3 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 199.

N sued S and others for partition of a share of certain land and claimed mesne-profits from other defendants, who were tenants of the land. S obtained a decree by consent for her share, and a sum of 99 Rupees was decreed to her against the tenants for mesne profits. Against this decree the tenants appealed. The Subordinate Judge, finding that the subject matter of the suit, the land of which partition was claimed, exceeded the jurisdiction of the Munsif, reversed the decree of the Munsif, and directed the plaint to be returned for presentation in the proper Court. It was contended, on appeal to the High Court, that the Subordinate Judge could not set aside the decree against the tenants for mesne-profits. Held that, as the Munsif's Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for partition, it could make no decree for mesne-profits.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 197.

S, having mortgaged land to K as security for a debt, sold it to V, who undertook to pay the debt. K, alleging that C had undertaken either to make V pay the debt or to execute a mortgage of his own land to secure its repayment, and that V had dispossessed him, sued S, V, and C to recover the debt by sale of the land mortgaged, mesne-profits from V, and costs from S, V, and C. The district Munsif decreed payment against S; mesne-profits, and in default of payment by S, a sale of the land against V; and costs against S, V, and C. V, and C. appealed against this decree. The Subordinate Judge found that the debt had been paid, and held that, even if the debt had not been paid, K had no cause of action against V. or S, but, if at all, against C, and dismissed the suit as against V. The Subordinate Judge also held that he had no jurisdiction to interfere with the decree against S, and saw no reason to interfere with the decree against C. S. appealed against this decree:—Held that, even if S was not entitled to appeal in order to have the decree against him set aside, the error of the Subordinate Judge could be corrected under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure by a direction to exercise the discretionary power given by sec. 544 of the said Code.—8 Madr. 192.

A and B brought a suit against C, and obtained a decree awarding a part of their claim. B appealed, and the Appellate Court reversed the decree, and rejected the plaintiff's claim altogether. Subsequently A, who had not joined in the appeal, applied for execution of the original decree. Held, that although A had not been a party to the appeal, he was bound by the decision of the Appellate Court, and was not entitled to take out execution. —11 Bom. 596.

The Court of Appeal has power under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 337 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, sec. 544), to draw up what would be a fair decree as regards all the parties to a suit, although some of them may not have appealed.—3 Cal. 738. But see 2 P. C. R., 766 ; 11 B. L. R., 375 ; L. R., I. A. Sup., 135.

pealable decree before the expiry of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may, for sufficient cause, order the execution to be stayed :

Provided that no order shall be made under this section unless the Court making it is satisfied—

(a) that substantial loss may result to the party applying for stay of execution unless the order is made ;

(b) that the application has been made without unreasonable delay ; and

(c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him.

Notes.

A party applying to stay execution of a decree under sec. 338 on giving security is bound to show sufficient grounds to the Court for staying it, whether the decree is in respect of moveable or immoveable property.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1007 ; 9 W. R., 448.

When an appellate Court reverses a decree in favour of the plaintiff in a suit, it ought not to stay execution of its own decree under sec. 338 of Act VIII. of 1859. Order of District Court stying execution under such circumstances set aside.—10 Bom. H. C. R. (A. C.) 411.

The Court which passed a certain decree ordered execution thereof to be stayed pending appeal, on the debtor's furnishing security to the amount of Rs. 70,000, under the provisions of sec. 545 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The debtor objected to the amount of security required, and appealed to the High Court on that ground. The decree-holder contended that no appeal lay. Held that the order was appealable. Held also on the facts that the security required was excessive.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 624.

A brought a suit and obtained a decree against B on a mortgage bond in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, which decree was confirmed by the High Court on appeal. A then applied for execution. In the execution proceedings the sons of B intervened claiming a portion of the properties attached; this claim was dismissed, and the sons of B brought a regular suit before the same Subordinate Judge to have their rights to the property declared, and obtained an interim injunction restraining A from executing his decree pending the decision of their suit. This suit was dismissed, and the sons of B appealed to the High Court. A again applied for execution of his mortgage decree, whereupon the sons of B applied for a further injunction restraining A from executing his decree pending their appeal to the High Court, this application was granted :—Held, that the Subordinate Judge had no right to restrain the decree-holder from executing his decree, merely on the possibility of the appellate Court reversing his decision.—11 Cal. 146.

An order by a District Judge, under sec. 545 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), refusing to stay execution, is a decree as defined in sec. 2, and is therefore appealable.—12 Bom. 279.

A final order for staying the execution of a decree should not be made without giving the decree-holder notice of the judgment-debtor's application. The application should be supported by an affidavit.—15 Bom. 536.

The present applicant having taken out execution of a decree held by him, and the judgment-debtor having appealed to the District Court, the two opponents became sureties under sec. 338 of Act VIII of 1859, that the judgment-debtor would "obey and fulfil all such orders and decrees as should be given against him in appeal," and, in default of his so doing, they bound themselves, "to pay jointly and severally, at the order of the Court, all such sums as the Court should, to the extent of Rs. 812-8-0, adjudge." Held that the obligation of the sureties to fulfil the decree of the Appellate Court was not confined to the first decree of that Court, but extended to the final decree which it passed upon the case being remanded by the High Court in special appeal.—2 Bom. 654.

See I. L. R., 6 Madr. 98, noted under sec. 280.

546. If an order is made for the execution of a decree against which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be given for the restitution of any property which may be taken in execution of the decree, or for the payment of the value of such property, and for the due performance of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the Appellate Court may, for like cause, direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security.

And when an order has been passed for the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree for money, and an appeal is pending against such decree, the sale shall, on the application of the judgment-debtor, be stayed until the appeal is disposed of, on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court which passed the decree thinks fit.

Security in case of order for execution of decree appealed against.

Notes.

After property the subject of litigation has been given over in execution of a decree to the plaintiff, it is not within the scope of sec. 36 of Act XXIII. of 1861 to exact security from the plaintiff for the restitution of such property in the event of a successful appeal.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A.C.) 122.

A surety who executes a security-bond (in Form No. 82 of the High Court Circulars) under sec. 36 of Act XXIII. of 1861 is liable for the fulfilment of the decree, not only of the Court of regular, but also of that of the Court of special appeal.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 1.

See I. L. R., 8 Cal. 477, noted under section 2; 13 Madr. 1, noted under section 253.

547. No such security as is mentioned in sections 545 and 546 shall be required from the Secretary of State for India in Council, or (when Government has undertaken the defence of the suit) from any public officer sued in respect of an act alleged to be done by him in his official capacity.

No such security to be required from Government or public officers.

Of Procedure in Appeal from Decrees.

548. When a memorandum of appeal is admitted, the Appellate Court or the proper officer of that Court shall endorse thereon the date of presentation, and shall register the appeal in a book to be kept for the purpose.

Registry of memorandum of appeal.

Register of Appeals.

Such book shall be called the Register of Appeals.

Note.

The registration of a petition of appeal under sec. 341, Act VIII. of 1859, is a proceeding of a purely ministerial character. When a petition of appeal has been registered after lapse of the time allowed by law, the Judge has power, on discovery thereof, to reject or to remove it from his file.—4 B. L. R., App. 103; 13 W. R., 351.

549. The Appellate Court may, at its discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer, or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both :

Appellate Court may require appellant to give security for costs.

Provided that the Court shall demand such security in all cases in which the appellant is residing out of British India, and is not possessed of any sufficient immoveable property within British

When appellant resides out of British India.

India independent of the property (if any) to which the appeal relates.

If such security be not furnished within such time as the Court orders, the Court shall reject the appeal.

If such security be furnished, any costs for which a surety may have rendered himself liable may be recovered from him in execution of the decree of the Appellate Court in the same manner as if he were the appellant.*

Notes.

A plaintiff who resided out of India paid a sum of money into Court as security for costs under sec. 34 of Act VIII. of 1859. He subsequently obtained a decree against the defendant, and the defendant appealed against that decree. Held that the defendant was not entitled to an order detaining in Court, pending the appeal, the money which had been paid in under sec. 34.—B. L. R., (O. C.) 92. See 3 B. L. R., (F. B.) 45; S. C., 12 W. R., (F. B.) 16.

Sec 342 of Act VIII. of 1859 does not apply to appeals from the orders of a Judge sitting as a Commissioner of the Insolvent Court. The right of appeal is given by sec. 73 of the Indian Insolvent Act, and the Court cannot impose on the appellant a condition that he shall give security for the costs of such an appeal.—5 B. L. R., 179.

A single Judge has full power to make an order for security for the costs of an appeal.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 40. Affirmed on Appeal, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 119.

On a rule nisi for security for the costs of an appeal to be given by a defendant, five twenty-fourths of the property in dispute having been decreed to him, but subsequently attached under a prohibitory order, cause was shown that the Court had not jurisdiction, and that no reason for the application had been given. Held that a single Judge is vested with all the powers of an Appellate Court with reference to the costs of an appeal; that when an appellant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court he is amenable to its orders as to the costs of an appeal; and that an appellant who has no available property must, if required, give security for the costs of an appeal before proceeding with it.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 110.

Sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to all appeals, including appeals in forma pauperis.—4 Ind. Jur. 507.

Quære.—Whether in a case in which the appellant is not residing out of the British territories in India, the High Court has authority to demand security for costs from the appellant after the issue of summons.—i. e., notice of the appeal.—6 W. R., Mis., 123.

Under sec. 342, Act VIII. of 1859, the High Court had discretion to demand security for costs from an appellant, if it saw fit to do so, at any time before the hearing of the appeal. Where an assignee, who had been substituted for the plaintiff under sec. 106, declined to furnish security for the costs within such reasonable time as the Court ordered, it was held that the defendant might, within eight days after such neglect or refusal, plead the bankruptcy or insolvency of the plaintiff as a reason for abating the suit.—13 W. R., 431.

* This clause has been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 46.

Sec. 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure being imperative, the time cannot be extended after the expiry of the period fixed in the order directing the appellant to find security for the costs of an appeal. Haidri Bai v. East Indian Railway Company (I. L. R., 1 Al. 687) followed.—I. L. R., 11 Madr. 190.

An appeal, although it may have been rejected by the Appellate Court under sec. 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure, upon failure by the appellant to furnish security demanded under that section, may be restored, on sufficient grounds, at the Court's discretion. The High Court having apparently treated an appeal as though, after rejection of it under the above section, a petition tendering security to the amount demanded, and asking restoration of the appeal, was not entertainable, and could not be considered, held by the Judicial Committee that restoration was within the Court's discretion, and that there were grounds for it, upon the appellant's giving approved security within such time as the Court might fix.—8 Al. 315.

The proper construction of sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code is that, where an appellant has been ordered to furnish security within a certain time, and that order has not been complied with, and no application has been made to extend the time within the period allowed, the Court is bound to reject the appeal.—11 Cal. 716.

Sec. 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure was never intended by the Legislature to derogate from the right of appeal given by the law to every person who is defeated in a suit in the Court of first instance, and an application should not be granted under that section of which the only ground is a statement that the appellant is not pecuniarily in a position to pay the costs of the appeal, if it should be dismissed. Maneckri Limji Mancherji v. Goolbai followed. Ross v. Jaques, Seshayyengar v. Jainulavadin, and Jogendro Deb Roykut v. Funindro Deb Roykut referred to.—7 Al. 542.

A petition was made under sec. 549 praying that an appellant might be required to give security for the costs of the appeal. The ground upon which the petition was based was that the appellant was not pecuniarily in a position to pay the costs of the appeal if it should be dismissed. An order was passed directing the appellant to show cause why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. When the petition came on for hearing, no one appeared to support it or to show cause against it, and it was accordingly rejected. An application was subsequently made on behalf of the petitioner praying that the case might be restored to the register, on the ground that counsel for the petitioner was absent on the occasion of the hearing for fifteen minutes only, and that, as no one on behalf of the appellant had appeared to show cause, the petition should have been granted, and the absence of petitioner's counsel was immaterial. Held that the matter was dealt with by sec. 98, and that sec. 647 of the Code, prescribing that the procedure laid down for suits should be followed as far as it could be made applicable in proceedings other than suits, made sec. 99 the rule by which the Court was to be guided:—Held also that although on general rule could be laid down that the absence of counsel when a case has been called on, should be treated as by itself a sufficient reason for restoring to the register either a regular suit, or an appeal, or a miscellaneous application, but each case of the kind must be dealt with according to its own particular circumstances, in the present case, taking the circumstances into consideration, an absence of counsel for fifteen minutes was not enough to preclude the Court from restoring the petition to the register.—7 Al. 542.

Sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates an order by which some ascertained amount of security is required. The last paragraph of the section seems to contemplate that, on failure to furnish security within the time fixed, an order for rejecting the appeal should be obtained from the Court that gave the order to furnish security. Upon the application of the respondent in a second appeal pending before the High Court, an order was passed requiring the appellant to furnish security for the costs of the appeal, and to lodge a such security at any time before the hearing. This order purported to be made under sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code, but neither the application nor the order stated the amount of the security required. At the hearing of the appeal, no security having been lodged, the respondent objected that, with reference to the terms of sec. 549, the Court had no option but to dismiss the appeal. Held that the objection had no force, no such order as was contemplated by sec. 549 having been made. Held also that the proper course was to have applied to the Judge who passed the order for security, at any time before the case came on for hearing for the rejection of the appeal, and that it was too late at the hearing to ask the Court to reject the appeal.—9 Al. 164.

Where the High Court, under sec. 549, Civil Procedure Code, has demanded security from an appellant, it has power to extend the time for complying with this order on application made, as well after as before the time first fixed has expired; and may nevertheless reject the appeal, under that section, if the security is not in the end furnished. Haidri Bai v. The East Indian Railway Company, I. L. R., 1 Al. 687, overruled. In this case, the Registrar was directed to allow only the costs applicable to the question argued and decided.—17 Cal. 512.

The security for the respondents' costs which the High Court had demanded under sec. 549 not having been furnished within the time fixed, and the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, having refused to extend the time, the appeal was rejected under that section. Held, that this was not a case for interference.—17 Cal. 516.

An original Court rejected, as insufficient, security offered for the purpose of conforming to an order of the High Court under sec. 549, Civil Procedure Code; and refused to receive other security offered, in lieu, after the time fixed by the order had expired. This was affirmed by the High Court: Held, that as the High Court had a discretion to enlarge the time allowed for finding security, and to accept other security in lieu of that rejected, or to refuse to do either, it had, under the circumstances, judicially exercised that discretion in refusing.—17 Cal. 1.

Sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to all appeals, including appeals in forma pauperis.—4 Ind. Jur., 507.

Where the Appellate Court demands from an appellant security for costs, the Court may extend the time within which it orders such security to be furnished; but if no application is made for such extension of time, and such security is not paid within the time entered, it is imperative on the Court, under Act X of 1877, sec. 549, to reject the appeal.—1 Al. 687.

A suitor in forma pauperis may be called on to give security for costs under sec. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code, but very special grounds must be shown to support such an application.—Nusseeruddeen Bis was v. Ujjal Biswas (17 Suth. W. R., 68) dissented from.—3 Madr. 66.

See I. L. R., 5 Al. 380, noted under sec. 2.

550. When the memorandum of appeal is registered, the Appellate Court shall send notice of the appeal to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made.

Appellate Court to give notice to Court, whose decree appealed against.

If the appeal be from a Court the records of which are not deposited in the Appellate Court, the Court receiving such notice shall send, with all practicable despatch, all material papers in the suit, or such papers as may be specially called for by the Appellate Court.

Transmission of papers to Appellate Court.

Either party may apply in writing to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, specifying any of such papers in such Court of which he requires copies to be made; and copies of such papers shall be made at the expense of the applicant, and shall be deposited accordingly.

Copies of exhibits in Court whose decree appealed against.

551*. (1) The Appellate Court, if it thinks fit, may, after fixing a day for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and hearing him accordingly if he appears on that day, dismiss the appeal without sending notice of the appeal to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, and without serving notice on the respondent or his pleader.

Power to dismiss appeal without sending notice to lower Court.

(2) If on the day fixed under sub-section (1) or any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned the appellant does not attend in person or by his pleader, the appeal shall be dismissed for default.

(3) The dismissal of an appeal under this section shall be notified to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made.

Notes.

The order of adjudication made under sec. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code is a decree, and the procedure authorized under that section does not dispense with the necessity of drawing up a judgment.—I. L. R., 3 Madr. 1.

The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain immoveable property sold to him by the first defendant, a Hindu widow. The second defendant answered that his father and the first defendant's husband were undivided brothers, and that, as a childless widow, she has no right to sell the property. Both the lower Courts upheld the sale as absolute, on the ground that she was competent to make it as widow of a separate Hindu. The District Judge heard the appeal ex parte under Act X of 1877, sec. 551. Held that the decrees of the Lower Courts were unsustainable, as they did not contain the limitation pointed out above; and remanded the case for the trial of the issue whether there were any such special circumstances as would justify the absolute sale by the first defendant to the plaintiff; and that the District Judge ought not to have disposed of the appeal ex parte under Act X of 1877, sec. 551.—4 Bom. 462.

On an appeal from a decision, in a civil suit, of the Assistant Commissioner of Ajmere to the Commissioner of Ajmere, the latter, feeling doubtful on a question of the nature specified in sec. 17 of the Ajmere Court's Reg. I of 1877, referred such question, under sec. 36 of that Regulation, to the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Mairwara. The Chief Commissioner dealt with the case as prescribed in sec. 37 of that Regulation, and returned it to the Commissioner, who dismissed the suit in accordance with the Chief Commissioner's judgment. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Chief Commissioner from the Commissioner's decision. The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it, or directing that it should be registered, or that the respondent should be summoned, or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under sec. 551, Act X of 1877, but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day, and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under Act X of 1877, sec. 551. The appellant's Counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner, and was heard for some time, and then stopped, in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such a question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench, on a reference by a Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came, that such question arose "in the trial of an appeal" within the meaning of the Ajmere Court's Reg. I of 1877, sec. 21, and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay, in this particular case, not to the Chief Commissioner, but to Her Majesty in Council.—2 Al. (F. B.) 819.

Hearing appeal ex parte.

Notes.

A special appeal lies to the High Court from an order passed under sec. 346 of the Civil Procedure Code, dismissing the appellant's regular appeal for non-appearance of the appellant in person or his pleader. Devappa Setti v. Ramanadha Bhutt (3 M. H. C. R., 109) commented on.—6 M. H. C. R., 1.

Where both parties make default in appearing at the hearing of an appeal, the Court must dismiss the appeal and not go into the merits and reverse the decree.—Marshall's Rep., 5; 1 Ind. Jur., (O. S.) 36.

Where the appellant himself does not appear, and the pleader appears and states he is not instructed, a judgment of dismissal for default is a proper judgment.—21 W. R., 65.

Objections which might have been but were not made under sec. 567 of the Civil Procedure Code in a Lower Appellate Court to the findings on remand of the Court of first instance, cannot be raised for the first time as grounds of second appeal from the Lower Appellate Court's decree.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 28.

No appeal under sec. 10 of the Letters Patent will lie from an order under sec. 256 of the Code of Civil Procedure dismissing an appeal for default the appellant not having had recourse to the procedure provided by sec. 568 of the said Code.—14 Al. 361.

Where, when an appeal is called on, the pleader is not absent, but is unprepared to go on with the case, the dismissal is a dismissal for default within sec. 556 of Act XV of 1882, and the appeal can therefore be re-admitted under sec. 558. Baldeo Misser v. Ahmed Hossein, (15 W. R, 143, followed.—12 Cal. 605.

In an appeal before an Appellate Court, the appellant did not attend in person or by pleader, and the Court, instead of dismissing the appeal for default, tried and dismissed it upon the merits. Subsequently, the appellant applied to the Court, under sec. 558 of the Civil Procedure Code, to re-admit the appeal, explaining her absence when the appeal was called on for hearing. The Court rejected the application, on the ground that the appeal had been decided on the merits, and reasons had been recorded for its dismissal which there were no apparent grounds for setting aside:—Held that the Court should have dismissed the appeal for default, and it was illegal to try it on the merits, and the judgment was consequently a nullity, the existence of which was no bar to the re-admission of the appeal.—8 Al. 277.

When an appeal is dismissed, under Act X of 1877, sec. 556, for the appellant's default, the order dismissing it is not appealable.—2 Al. 216.

An Appellate Court, the appellant not attending in person or by his pleader, instead of dismissing the appeal for default, as provided by sec. 556 of Act X of 1877, proceeded, in contravention of the provisions of that law, to dispose of the appeal on the merits, and dismissed it. The appellant preferred a second appeal to the High Court, contending that the Appellate Court had acted contrary to law. Held that the Appellate Court had so acted, and its decision could only be treated as a dismissal for default and that, so treating it, the proper and only course open to the appellant was to have applied under sec. 558 for the re-admission of his appeal, and under these circumstances the second appeal would not lie. Nond Ram v. Muhammad Baksh (I. L. R., 2 Al. 616) followed.—3 Al. 519.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 382 and 16 Bom. 23, noted under sec. 2 ; 4 Cal. 825, noted under sec. 3.

557. If, on the day so fixed, or any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, it is found that the notice to the respondent has not been served in consequence of the failure of the appellant to deposit, within the period fixed by the Court, the sum required to defray the cost of issuing the notice, the Court may order that the appeal be dismissed :

Dismissal of appeal where notice not served in consequence of appellant's failure to deposit cost.

Provided that no such order shall be passed, although the notice has not been served upon the respondent, if on the day fixed for hearing the appeal the respondent appears in person, or by a pleader, or by a duly authorized agent.

Proviso.

558. If an appeal be dismissed under “section 551, sub-section (2),” * section 556, or section 557, the appellant may apply to the Appellate Court for the re-admission of the appeal; and, if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on for hearing or from depositing the sum so required, the Court may be re-admit the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit to impose upon him.

Notes.

On an application under sec. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the re-admission of an appeal which had been decided ex parte against the applicant, it appeared that he had been misled by reason of the appeal having been transferred from the file of one Court to another, no notice of the transfer having been given to him by the pleaders in the case. Held that, under the circumstances, the applicant was entitled to have the appeal re-admitted.—8 C. L. R., 350.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 382, noted under sec. 2; 4 Cal. 825, noted under sec. 3; 3 Al. 519 and 14 Al. 361, noted under sec. 556.

559. If it appear to the Court at the hearing that any person who was a party to the suit in the Court against whose decree the appeal party to the appeal, is interested in the result of the appeal, the Court may adjourn the hearing to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and direct that such person be made a respondent.

Notes.

The discretionary power of directing a person to be made a respondent, conferred on the Appellate Court by sec. 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not limited by any provision in the Limitation Act (XV of 1877).—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 355.

In 1877 the plaintiff executed a deed of hypothecation to one of two partners to secure a loan obtained from them jointly. In 1881 the plaintiff sold inter alia, the hypothecated property to defendants Nos. 2 to 4 and it was arranged that the secured debt should be paid off by the vendees. They failed to do this, but in 1882 they executed a mortgage for the amount due in favour of the other of the two partners, and he thereupon gave a written discharge to the plaintiff, who was found to have been acting in collusion with him to the disadvantage of his partner, the holder of the hypothecation bond. The latter brought a suit in 1885 upon the hypothecation bond and obtained a personal decree against the present plaintiff who was ex-parte, the amount of the decree being declared to be charged on the land in the possession of defendants Nos. 2 to 4. Meanwhile, defendant No. 1, who was the assignee of the mortgage of 1882, had obtained a decree upon it against defendant No. 4. This decree not having been executed, he subsequently sued upon the mortgage again and obtained a decree against defendants Nos. 2 to 4. The plaintiff now sued to have the last mentioned decree set aside and recover the balance of the purchase money from defendants Nos. 2 to 4. The Court of First Instance passed a decree for the amount claimed and declared it to be charged on the land. Defendant No. 1 preferred an appeal in which defendants Nos. 2 to 4 were joined by the Court of First Appeal. The decree of this Court dismissed the suit:—Held, (1) that defendants Nos. 2 to 4 were rightly joined as respondents by the Court under Civil Procedure Code sec. 559; (2) that plaintiff, having allowed a decree to be passed against him ex-parte in the suit of the holder of the hypothecation bond, and having obtained a collusive discharge from the other partner, was not entitled to recover against the defendants.—15 Madr. 362.

The Court of first instance gave the plaintiff in a suit for money a decree against the defendant B, exempting the defendants A and H. B appealed, making the plaintiff the respondent to the appeal. The plaintiff did not appeal from the decree of the Court of first instance in respect of the exemption of A and H. The Appellate Court made A a respondent to the appeal under sec. 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, exempting B, gave the plaintiff a decree against A. Held that, inasmuch as sec. 559 does not empower an Appellate Court virtually to make an appeal for an appellant, who has refrained from availing himself of his privileges under the law, by introducing for him other respondents than those he has included in his petition of appeal, and it could not be said that A was "interested in the result of the appeal," as, having the unappealed decree of the Court of first instance behind him, his position was secure, the Appellate Court had improperly made A a respondent to the appeal and given a decree against him.—5 Al. 266.

The power of an Appellate Court to make a person a respondent, under sec. 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not affected by the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). In exercising its powers under sec. 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, an appellate Court is competent to make a person a respondent who, in the original suit, was arrayed on the same side with the appellant.—13 Al. 78.

Held by the Full Bench that it is competent to a Court sitting under sec. 559 of the Code of Civil Procedure to add a person as respondent in an appeal, though the time within which an appeal might have been preferred as against such person has expired.—14 Al. 154

560. When an appeal is heard ex-parte in the absence of the respondent, and judgment is given against him, he may apply to the Appellate Court to re-hear the appeal; and, if he satisfies the Court that the notice was not duly served, or that he was prevented by sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on for hearing, the Court may re-hear the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit to impose upon him.

Re-hearing on application of respondent against whom ex-parte decree made.

Notes.

When an appeal has been heard ex parte, a re-hearing cannot be granted by the Court on an application under sec. 560 of the Civil Procedure Code, except upon legal evidence produced by the respondent of the facts necessary to entitle him to such re-hearing.—8 C. L. R., 112.

Sec. 560 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to a case in which the respondent has been prevented by sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on, whether appearance has been entered for him or not.—11 C. L. R., 164.

An applicant, presenting a petition for the re-hearing of an appeal, decided ex-parte, must, at the time of making such application, be prepared to satisfy the Court that the notice of appeal was not duly served upon him, or that he was prevented by sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on for hearing.—1. L. R., 6 Cal. 548.

An appeal was heard ex-parte in the absence of the respondent (defendant), and the judgment was given against him. He applied to the Appellate Court to re-hear the appeal, and the Appellate Court refused to re-hear it. He then appealed, not from the order refusing to re-hear the appeal, but from the decree of the Appellate Court. Held that he was not debarred, by reason that he had not appealed from the order refusing to re-hear the appeal, from appealing from the decree of the Appellate Court.—2 Al. 567.

The provisions of Chapter XLIV shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to an objection under this section.†

A respondent may file a notice with the Registrar, specifying therein the objections which he intends to take on the hearing of the appeal.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 587; 6 W. R., Mis., 102.

Suit by a widow to recover her husband's share, whom she alleged to be a divided member of a Hindu family, under an agreement to the following, effect: "When we lived together, a disagreement arising amongst females, we have divided. Thus, we shall from this date divide and enjoy the income of the lands. When the moiety of lands belonging to our uncle, S, in the said three villages, shall be equally divided, we shall also share our moiety equally, and obtain separate pattas. We hold no pecuniary concern." Held (following the judgment reported in 3 M. H. C. R., 40, and that of the Privy Council in Appu Ayyar v. Ramasubha Ayyar, 11 Moore's Ind. App. 75) that when the members of an undivided family agree among themselves with regard to particular property that it shall thenceforth be the subject of ownership in certain defined shares, each member has thenceforth a definite and certain share in the estate which he may claim the right to receive and to enjoy in severalty, although the property itself has not been actually divided.—3 M. H. C. R., 289.

Where, in the course of the hearing of an appeal, the appellant desired to withdraw in order to void the decision of a question raised by the respondent at the hearing, held that, under sec. 348 of the Civil Procedure Code, the respondent was entitled to have the question heard and determined.—3 M. H. C. R., 302.

A respondent, in taking advantage of the provisions of sec. 348 of the Civil Procedure Code, can only take such objections as have reference to the party appealing. If he wishes to raise objections against parties who do not appeal, he must do so by independent appeal.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 244.

Where, in the lower Appellate Court, no objection to the decree of the Court of first instance was urged by the plaintiff, it is not competent to such Court to disturb the decree, by giving plaintiff a larger sum than that awarded by the Court of first instance.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 44.

Held that objections under sec. 348, Act VIII of 1859, can only be heard when the opposite party being appellant prosecutes his appeal, and not when he withdraws from it.—1 Agra H. C. R., 23; 14 W. R., 210.

The word "objection" used in sec. 348 of Act VIII of 1859 was not limited to written objections simply, but comprehended also verbal objections.—2 Hay's Rep., 79.

Where a respondent in order to save the costs of copying the judgment of the Court below, the decree and other documents in the case, delayed sending instructions to counsel to draw objections to the decree until the paper books had been received from the appellant, at which date the period allowed for filing objections had expired, the Court refused to extend the time, or permit the objections to be filed.—1 L. R., 14 Bom. 111.

An appeal cannot definitely be posted until the Court has ascertained that notice of the appeal has been served on the respondent and a date must then be fixed not less than one month from the date of service.—13 Madr. 492.

The fact of a person's name being entered in the Collector's book as occupant of land does not necessarily of itself establish that person's title, or defeat the title of any other person. The Collector's book is kept for purposes of revenue, not for purposes of title. Where a decree is in favour of the respondent, the Appellate Court is not entitled to accept the facts found by the Court of first instance as incontestably proved, merely because the respondent has not filed any cross-objections to the decree under sec. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882)—13 Bom. 75.

The plaintiffs sued for the redemption of certain mortgaged property. On the 1st March 1886, a decree was passed declaring the plaintiffs entitled to redeem on payment by them to the defendants of Rs. 649-11-0 within three months from the date of the decree. Against this decree the defendants (the mortgagees) appealed on the ground that a much larger sum than Rs. 649-11-0 was due to them on the mortgage. The plaintiff also filed objections to this decree under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), on the ground that the mortgage-debt had been long ago paid off and that now a large sum was due to them from the mortgagees who had been in receipt of the profits of the property. Under these circumstances the plaintiffs did not pay the Rs. 649-11-0 within three months as ordered by the decree. On the 12th October 1886, they presented an application for execution, and paid into Court the Rs. 649 11-0. The lower Court granted their application, and ordered possession of the property to be given to them. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held, reversing the order of the Court below, that the Court in executing the decree had no power to alter the language of the decree, which it would virtually do if it enlarged the time mentioned in it by accepting the Rs. 649-11-0 paid into Court by the plaintiffs on the 12th October 1886. Held, also, that, even if the Court had power to enlarge time in the course of execution, the mere fact that the plaintiff had lodged an appeal would afford no special ground for enlarging the time.—13 Bom. 106.

The entertainment of objections under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code is contingent and dependent upon the hearing of the appeal in which such objections are taken, and when that appeal itself fails, is rejected, or dismissed without being disposed of upon the merits, the objections cannot be entertained either.—10 Al. 587.

Where an appeal was dismissed upon the application of the appellant himself made before the hearing :—Held that the respondents, who had filed objections to the decree of the Court of first instance under sec. 561, had no claim to have their objections heard, notwithstanding the dismissal of the appeal. Coomer Puresh Narain Roy v. Watson and Co., and Dhondi Juganath v. The Collector of Salt Revenue, referred to.—8 Al. 551.

A plaintiff who has obtained leave to sue in forma pauperis and has been successful in obtaining a decree for a portion of his claim, but has failed as to the other portion, is not entitled, on an appeal by the defendant, to be heard in forma pauperis on cross appeal as to the portion of his claim decided against him in the lower Court.—11 Cal. 735.

An appellant finding, after the hearing had commenced, that his appeal was hopeless claimed the right of withdrawing the appeal, in order to prevent the objections, filed, under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), by the respondent against the decree from being heard. Held that after the hearing of an appeal has commenced, the Appeal Court is seized of the respondent's objections and that the appeal cannot be withdrawn so as to prevent the objections from being heard and determined.—9 Bom. 28.

Whether under sec. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure objections to the decree by the respondent must necessarily be filed seven days before the date originally fixed for hearing the appeal, or whether it is not sufficient if they are filed seven days before the day on which the appeal is actually heard, and whether the decision of the Bombay High Court in Rangildas v. Bai Girja, I. L. R., 8 Bom., 559 to that effect is not correct, and the decisions of the Calcutta High Court to the contrary are not erroneous.—14 Cal. 610.

A filed a plaint on 28th June 1882 for a declaration of his title as karnam of a village and for arrears of dues payable to him as such, including those for fasli 1288, which accrued due on 1st July 1879. His family had held the office and discharged its duties for three generations, but there was no evidence of any formal appointment of A or his ancestors. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the dues as de facto karnam, and his claim was not barred in respect of any of the arrears claimed Per cur.—The preliminary objection taken by the respondent that no second appeal lies from so much of the decree of the Subordinate Judge as disallowed the objections filed by the appellant under sec. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure is without weight.—10 Madr. 292.

The expression “the day fixed for the hearing,” used in sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), means the day on which the hearing actually commences, and includes both that day and the day to which the hearing may be adjourned. The purpose of the section is to give the appellant timely intimation of the proposed objections. Accordingly a cross-objection filed by the respondent on the day mentioned as the day fixed for hearing the appeal in the notice to the respondent was held not too late.—11 Bom. 698.

The notice of objections referred to in sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code 1877, must be filed not less than seven days before the date (in any) fixed for the hearing in the summonses issued to the parties.—4 Also 9 Cal. 631.

The plaintiff sued the defendants for compensation for the wrongful taking of the fruit on a tree which he alleged belonged to him. The defendants set up as a defence that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, and that such tree belonged to them. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, but found incidentally that such tree belonged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance; and the defendants objected to the decree, contending that such tree belonged to them. Held that, inasmuch as the Court of first instance did not, in deciding that such tree belonged to the plaintiff, decide a question substantially in issue, it did not decide in this matter “against the defendants,” within the meaning of sec. 561, of the Civil Procedure Code, and, as the decree was limited to dismissing the suit, the defendants as respondents were not qualified to take an objection which they could not have taken by way of appeal, and therefore the Appellate Court was not warranted by law in entertaining the objection taken by the defendants.—4 Al. 421.

Where the time for filing objections under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code expired on a day when the Court was closed, and objections were filed on the day the Court re-opened, held that such objections were filed within time.—4 Al. 430.

On the 16th March 1874, L gave M a mortgage on certain land for Rs. 24,000 for a term of ten years, by which it was provided, inter alia, that the mortgagee should take the profits of the land in lieu of interest; that the mortgagee should grant a lease of the land to the mortgagor, the latter paying the former the profits of the land every harvest in lieu of interest; that, if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgagee the profits of the land by the end of any year, he should pay interest on the principal amount of the mortgage, at the rate of one per cent. calculated from the date of the mortgage, and in such case the mortgagee should have no claim to the profits; and that, if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgagee the profits by the end of any year, the mortgagee should be at liberty to cancel the lease, and to enter on the land, and collect the rents thereof, and apply the same to payment of interest. On the 21st March 1874, M gave L a lease of the land, under which Rs. 1,980 was the sum agreed to be payable annually as profits in lieu of interest. In 1879, M, who had not been paid any profits, sought to enforce in the Revenue Courts the condition as to entry on the land, but was successfully resisted by L's widow. On the 16th January 1880, M sued L's widow for interest on the principal amount of the mortgage at the rate of one per cent. calculated from the date of the mortgage to the date of the suit, claiming the same by virtue of the provisions of the mortgage, on the ground that he had not been paid any profits. Held that the mortgage and lease-transactions must be regarded as one and indivisible, and the questions at issue between the parties be dealt with qua mortgagor and mortgagee; that so regarding such transactions and dealing with such questions, M and L did not stand in the position of "land holder," and "tenant," and the proceedings of 1879 in the Revenue Courts were had without jurisdiction; also that, although, looking at the terms of the contract of mortgage, it was the intention of the parties that, on the mortgagor failing to pay the mortgagee the profits by the end of any year, the latter should, in the first place, seek possession of the land, yet as M had never obtained possession, but on the contrary had been resisted when he ought to obtain it, his present claim for interest was maintainable. The Court directed that so much of the interest as was due at L's death should be recoverable from such property of his as had come into his widow's hands; and as to the rest, which related to the period during which the widow had been in possession and in receipt of the profits, that it should be recoverable from her personally.—4 Al. 430.

A obtained a decree for possession of land against B and for costs against B, C, D, and others, defendants in the suit. C and other defendants appealed against this decree so far as it awarded costs against them, making A and D respondents to the appeal. Under section 561 D objected to that part of the decree which awarded possession of the land to A. Held, on appeal, that it was open to D although improperly made a party to the appeal by C against A, to take objection to the rest of the decree.—7 Madr. 215.

The Court of first instance found for the defendants on the merits, and passed a decree in their favour without costs. The defendants appealed against that part of the decree which disallowed them their costs. The plaintiff filed a notice of objections to the decree on the merits as required by section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The lower Court of Appeal varied the decree by allowing the defendants their costs of suit, and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to file any objections. Held that the Court of Appeal was in error in holding that the plaintiff's objections could not be entertained. Section 561 of the Code gives the respondent the power of taking any objection to the decree at the hearing of an appeal which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed a notice of his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal; and this power is independent of whether an appeal lies on a mere question of costs. Held also that a finding, unaccompanied by the reasons for it, as required by sec. 204 of the Code, is not a conclusive finding of fact binding on a Court of second appeal.—8 Bom. 368.

Objections to a decree under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) need not necessarily be filed seven days before the day originally fixed for hearing the appeal. When the hearing is postponed, it is sufficient if the objections are filed seven days before the day fixed for the postponed hearing, the object of section 561 being merely to give the appellant timely intimation of proposed objections.—8 Bom. 559.

See I. L. R., 10 Al. 162, noted under sec. 566.

562. If the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point, “so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties,”* and the decree upon such preliminary point is reversed in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, together with a copy of the order in appeal, to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, with directions to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register, and proceed to “determine” the suit on the merits.

The Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that issue or issues shall be tried in any case so remanded.

Notes.

The lower Appellate Court has no power to remand a case, which has come before it on appeal, to the Court of first instance for a second trial, except where the first Court has decided the case upon a preliminary issue in such a way as to cause an absence of material evidence bearing upon the issues on the merits between the parties.—20 W. R., 148.

Where a suit was remanded by the lower Appellate Court for a “re-trial,” the intention of the order of remand was held to be that the whole case was to be gone into de novo, the plaintiff being allowed to prove her case in any way she could.—21 W. R., 7.

Where a Court of first instance decided a case on the merits, and the Appellate Court did not find that the lower Court omitted to try an issue or to determine a question of fact which the Appellate Court thought essential to the right determination of the suit upon the merits, or that further evidence was necessary, it was held that the Appellate Court was wrong in remanding the case under sec. 552 for a fresh trial.—2 B. L. R., S. N., 14 ; 10 W. R., 388.

In a suit on a bond executed under a mukhtarnama, which was not produced, the Court of first instance admitted secondary evidence of it, and decreed the suit. In special appeal, the High Court was of opinion that the secondary evidence had been improperly admitted, and therefore the decree in the plaintiff’s favour could not stand. Upon this it was contended that the suit should be dismissed, as the Court, hearing a case in special appeal, had no power, under such circumstances, either to remand the case or to call for additional evidence. Held that, though the powers conferred by secs. 351, 354, and 355 of Act VIII of 1859 on the Court of regular appeal are not directly given to the Court of special appeal, yet the Court, when it found the order of a Lower Appellate Court was wrong, could point out the error, and direct the lower Appellate Court to make such order as would rectify the error.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 315.

* The word “determine” has been substituted for the word “investigate” by the same Act and section.

The question of jurisdiction cannot be raised in appeal for the first time, unless it appear upon the face of the pleadings or the admission of the parties, or upon the evidence, that the suit will not lie. Bastu land (land used for sites of houses) situated in a town cannot form the subject of suits under Act X. of 1859 for enhancement. Bastu land, which is the site of a house occupied by a ryot engaged in cultivating the surrounding lands, does fall under the provision of Act X. of 1859. When it did not appear on the face of the pleadings, or on the evidence, under what kind of bastu the land in dispute falls, and no plea to the jurisdiction of the Court under Act X. of 1859 had been taken in the Courts below, the High Court will not remand the case to enquire under which class of bastu land the subject-matter of suit falls, or entertain the point of jurisdiction in appeal.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 283; S. C. Nymooddee Joardar v. Moncrieff, 12 W. R. 140.

The grantor of a patni-tenure, who subsequently purchases the lands granted by him in patni at the sale of the patni-tenure, does not revert ipso facto to the position he formerly held as proprietor, and is not entitled to recover rent from the tenants at the rate he was receiving when he granted the patni, without reference to the rents realized by the patniholder in the interim. A lower Appellate Court is not competent to remand a case for a second decision except as provided by sec. 351, Act VIII. of 1859, and therefore has no power to remand a case when a Court of first instance has investigated the merits of the case, and passed its judgment upon the evidence. The objection, that a case has been improperly remanded by the lower Appellate Court, can be taken in special appeal from the decree passed upon the remand, although a special appeal might have been preferred from the order of remand, but the appellants were held not entitled to their costs.—13 B. L. R., 198; 21 W. R., 326; 13 B. L. R., 200 note; 13 W. R., 107.

The plaintiff sued to recover rent for several years for 13 bighas and 4 katas at rupees 29-11-5 a year on a jamabandi, which, he said, was signed by all the ryots on the estate when he came into possession. The defendant denied the Jamabandi. He admitted that he held some lands of the plaintiff, but said that it only amounted to 3 bighas and a fraction; with an annual rent of Rs. 4-13, and that the only balance due by him to the plaintiff was Rs. 5-15. The plaintiff could not prove the jamabandi. Held that the first Court should not have dismissed the suit altogether, but should have given the plaintiff a decree for the sum which was admitted to be due by the defendant, though that sum was due on a different cause of action than that set forth in the plaint. Where the defendant applied to the first Court that a witness should be examined, but the Court made no order on the subject, and the Appellate Court, on the case coming before it on appeal, remanded the case, on its being informed of the omission, to the lower Court to entertain the application, held that there was nothing irregular in such a course, although there was nothing which provided specially for it in the Code of Civil Procedure. In an application for the examination of a witness, sec. 162 does not require that any special formalities shall be observed; it simply directs that an application shall be made, and points out the proper manner of disposing of that application. Where a summons has not being legally served upon the plaintiff, a Court cannot take advantage of sec. 170, and, on the ground of that party's non-attendance alone, dismiss the suit against him; but where the Court is satisfied that the plaintiff must have known that his attendance in Court was desired, the Court is perfectly justified in taking the circumstance of his neglect into consideration when deciding the case upon the facts.—13 B. L. R., 247 note; 12 W. R., 317.

An appellate Court can remand a case a second time on account of error, defect, or irregularity of procedure in passing a decree or order, provided the error, defect, or irregularity, be such as to affect the merits of the case, or the jurisdiction of the Court. When a suit has been regularly heard and determined, and on appeal the decree is reversed, the Appellate Court has the discretionary power to remand the case only if the decree should have been upon a preliminary point, and have the effect of excluding the consideration of evidence essential to the rights of the parties.—5 M. H. C. R., 313.

In a suit to recover possession of miras land, the Court of original jurisdiction decreed for the plaintiff on the evidence, but on appeal its decision was reversed, on the ground that the claim had not been properly valued, and the plaintiff was permitted to bring a fresh action. At the trial of the second action, the Munsif recorded his previous decree, and some additional evidence, which the District Judge in appeal considered to be insufficient. Held that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the Judge, if not satisfied with the evidence taken at the second trial, should have allowed the plaintiff to give again the evidence adduced at the former trial. The Lower Court's decree was, therefore, reversed, and the suit remanded in order that this might be done.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 166.

The High Court will not, in a special appeal, remand the case where there has been a distinct finding by the District Judge on the only issue framed by him, although he may have omitted to find on another issue raised before the Munsif, but not called for by either party in appeal.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 34; 2nd Ed. 32.

The District Judge not having come to any positive finding on the point for decision laid down by himself in an appeal, the High Court reversed his decree, and remanded the suit for a re-trial on the merits.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 186; 2nd Ed. 178.

An Acting District Judge, having made a decree reversing the decree of the Munsif who threw out the plaintiff's claim, omitted to pass a decree himself in favour of the plaintiff, which his finding showed he intended to do; the case was remanded on special appeal by the High Court to the District Court, with an order that a decree should be passed; but the District Judge (who had meanwhile returned to his appointment) re-opened the whole case, and passed a decree, directly opposed to that of his predecessor, in which he confirmed the Munsif's decree. Held that the decree of the Judge should be reversed, and the suit again remanded, in order that he might pass a decree for the plaintiff, in accordance with the view of the case expressed by the Acting Judge, with which the High Court saw no ground upon the special appeal before it to interfere.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 60.

Where the defendants, under-writers of a policy of insurance on goods on board a vessel bound from Bombay to Calcutta, were Hindus, but no principle of Hindu law was applicable, the parties having selected the English language for the expression of their contract, held that the case was to be determined in accordance with the principles of English law. A valuation of salt based on the loss which the owner may possibly incur on account of the bonds in respect of the salt passed by him to the Government, though greatly in excess of the real value of the salt, is not such an over-valuation as amounts to proof of fraud. Where, in a valued policy of insurance, the goods insured were valued at an amount greatly in excess of their real value, which amount was intended to include the amount in which the insured was liable to Government on account of bonds executed by him in respect of the goods insured and after loss of the goods, Government elected not to enforce the bonds, held, that the under-writers were entitled to be subrogated in the amount of the bonds, and were liable to the insured only for the real value of the goods together with a fair profit. The Appellate Court will not remand a case for retrial on a point not raised in the Court below if the evidence already recorded is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court itself to decide that point. But where the appellants succeeded on a point taken by them for the first time in the Appellate Court, they were ordered to pay the respondent's costs of appeal.—12 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 23.

In a suit to recover damages for the non-acceptance of shares, where the vendor had contracted to execute proper transfers, and do all other things necessary on his part to transfer the shares, and to bear the expense of such transfer, held on the issue—whether the plaintiff was ready and willing to perform his part of the contract—that it was sufficient to show that he had in his possession at the time fixed for the performance of the contract on his part such certificates of the shares contracted to be sold as were required by the law, and that he tendered the same with a deed of transfer to the purchaser; and that it was not necessary for the vendor, before handing over the documents to the purchaser, to effect the transfer, but that it was the duty of the purchaser himself in such case, having accepted the shares, to have the transfer made into his name in the books of the Company. The finding of the Court below on the first issue being therefore reversed, the suit was remanded for trial of the issue whether the contract was a wagering one—the Judge having omitted to determine that, and the defendant not having given evidence upon it in consequence on the first issue being found for him on the evidence given by the plaintiff.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (O. C.) 79.

Where, in a suit to make absolute a conditional sale, and to obtain a share in a certain village mortgaged to plaintiffs (the usual year of grace having been given, and money been paid into Court in satisfaction considerably after the term allowed by law), there is no issue respecting the minority of some of the mortgagors, the case will not be sent back to the Appellate Court for inquiry whether certain of the mortgagors were minors, or whether the others mortgaged for such purposes as should bind the minors, notwithstanding one of the lower Courts has found the fact of the minority of one of the mortgagors.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 23.

Where no issues have been settled in a suit, the High Court will remand the case for re-trial.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 183.

Where the Appellate Court remanded a case to the lower Court, and, under the provisions of sec. 354 of Act VIII. of 1859, allowed the parties a week's time within which to file objections, held that the terms of the section were merely permissive, and that, though no objections had been taken within the time specified, there was nothing in the law to the effect that an objection taken after the time fixed shall not be listened to.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 72.

On appeal as to costs only, the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to return the case for trial on its merits.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 20.

M, a Hindu widow, executed a deed of usufructuary mortgage in J's favour, the property hypothecated being the separate property of her husband, in which she only had a life-interest. On the latter applying for mutation of names, B objected that he was in proprietary possession under a deed of gift executed by M, and the objection was allowed. In virtue of a clause in the deed of mortgage—that, in case any demand was made in respect of the property within the mortgage-term, the mortgagor was entitled to sue for the mortgage-money, notwithstanding the term had not expired—J sued to recover the money by the sale of the hypothecated property. B, in addition to an objection to the validity of the mortgage based on the deed of gift, pleaded that it was invalid under Hindu law, as against him, the next reversioner to the property, there being no legal necessity for the alienation. The lower Appellate Court held that the mortgage was valid as against the deed of gift, but invalid as against the next reversioner. Finding that B was not the next reversioner, it remanded the case to the Court of first instance, with instructions to make certain persons, who had applied to that Court to be made parties to the suit, on the ground that they were the nearest heirs to M's deceased husband, but whose application that Court had rejected, defendants in the suit, as also any other persons who might claim to be near heirs, and to determine as between them who was the next reversioner, and to further determine, whether such next reversioner had relinquished his rights in favour of B, and whether the validity of the mortgage could be questioned on the ground that M, having only a limited interest, had alienated for an indefinite period. It was held that the suit was improperly remanded, and the Court decree J's claim in respect of the property. Quære—Whether, with reference to the ruling of the lower Appellate Court that the mortgage was valid as against the deed of gift, there was any such danger or weakness in J's title as to entitle him to enforce the mortgage-debt before the expiry of the term.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 203.

When a case has been remanded under sec. 354, Act VIII of 1859, and a time fixed within which objections to the findings on remand are to be taken, the Appellate Court is not competent to alter such of the findings in respect of which no objection is preferred within the time fixed.—1 Agra H. C. R., 50. Nor will the parties be allowed to take objections filed after time.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 114.

Where there is no sufficient evidence before the Appellate Court for the disposal of an issue which is material to the determination of the suit, the proper course to be followed is to remand the case under sec. 354, and not under sec. 351.—3 Agra H. C. R., 146.

The fact that the decision of the Court of first instance was passed on a day when the Court was closed does not necessitate the lower Appellate Court remanding the case.—1 Hay's Rep., 197.

Where there is a defect in the allegations in a plaint, and the subject-matter of the absent allegation has not been tried in the Court below, the proper course is for the Judge to frame an issue, and refer it to the lower Court for trial under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 354.—Marshall's Rep., 198; 1 Hay's Rep., 467.

When important evidence has not been carefully examined by the Judge in the lower Court, the Appellate Court will, on special appeal, remand the suit under sec. 372 of Act VIII of 1859.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 35.

Where the Appellate Court remands a case for a specific inquiry, it will not receive any statement on the part of the Zillah Judge as to what he considers the merits of the whole case.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S. 51.

A lower Appellate Court, in remanding a case a second time, ought to state what the main requirements of the first order were, and how the lower Court's decision shows that they have not been carried out.—W. R., 1864, Mis., 39.

An Appellate Court is not competent to remand a case for re-trial after a local investigation.—W. R., 1864, 363.

The lower Court found the suit barred by limitation, but also heard and dismissed the suit on its merits. Held that, though in appeal limitation be held not to bar the suit, there should be no remand for re-trial on the merits.—1 W. R., 32.

An appellate Court cannot remand a case for trial with instructions to frame new issues. It may refer any issues for trial by the lower Court, whose finding and evidence are to be returned to the Appellate Court for a final decision.—1 W. R., 69.

An order of remand to a lower Appellate Court implies a reversal of the first judgment of that Court.—7 W. R., 326.

When a suit has been dismissed upon a preliminary point, and the decision on that point has been reversed by the Appellate Court, and the case goes down with a view to trial on its merits, evidence may properly be received even from defendants who had appeared, and a fortiori from a defendant who had not appeared.—8 W. R., 285.

When a fresh issues are fixed by the Appellate Court, and remanded to the lower Court to be tried, the parties are entitled to have a day fixed for the reception of any further evidence which they may wish to adduce thereon.—9 W. R., 294.

In a case remanded for a finding as to whether a confirmatory pottah had been really given or not, it was held that, as the order of remand did not restrict the Judge to the evidence on the record, he was at liberty to examine the witnesses who were in Court.—9 W. R., 392.

Where a case is remanded with a view to some special evidence being taken, the Court receiving the order of remand is not at liberty to allow the parties to produce other additional evidence.—10 W. R., 303.

Held on appeal under the Letters Patent that the lower Appellate Court was competent, under the terms of the order of remand, to inquire into the question of possession.—11 W. R., 77.

Where a Full Bench ruling is brought to the notice of a Judge retrying a case on remand, he is bound, whether the ruling has been published or not, either to ask the pleader to produce the decision relied on, or to take other means for satisfying himself as to the ruling of the High Court, so as to apply the correct law to the case.—11 W. R., 227.

The effect of an order of remand for a new trial is entirely to nullify the first decision, and to re-open the whole case.—12 W. R., 112.

A case should not be remanded when the Appellate Court is of opinion that the lower Court cannot properly come to a different decision upon the evidence than that to which it has already come.—14 W. R., 60.

Where a pre-emption suit was valued at Rs. 31, though the consideration was Rs. 2,000, the High Court, in special appeal, refused to remand the case to enable plaintiff to make up the deficient stamp-duty.—14 W. R., 195.

An order of remand by a Subordinate Judge is final so far as the purpose of the remand goes, and cannot be set aside by his successor.—14 W. R., 285.

Where an Appellate Court finds that there is no evidence upon the record to enable it to decide a question at issue between the parties and remands the case under sec. 354 of the Code for additional evidence, it ought to require such evidence with the finding of the first Court to be sent up to it for decision.—15 W. R., 346.

Where all the evidence has been taken and the case decided on a preliminary point, no remand should be made.—22 W. R., 224.

Where a case is remanded to a lower Appellate Court under sec. 354 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, the Judge may, under sec. 355, admit additional evidence, provided he records his reasons for doing so on the proceedings of the Court.—24 W. R., 20.

Where a case is sent back for trial on its merits, the order of remand shuts out objections regarding limitation or res judicata.—24 W. R., 333.

An act done by a party with the view of defeating a claim made against him does not estop him from disputing afterwards the validity of that act.—24 W. R., 392.

Where the lower Courts have come to no decision on a point raised, the plaintiff in special appeal has a right to a remand for the point to be tried, even though very trifling.—25 W. R., 140.

Where a Court of first instance decided a suit, not upon a preliminary point so as to exclude any evidence of facts, but upon the merits, and upon all the evidence tendered and issues framed,—held by the Full Bench that, with reference to secs. 562, and 564 of the Civil Procedure Code, the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to remand the case under the former section, and that both the remand order and all proceedings subsequent thereto were ultra vires and illegal. Held further that the legality of the remand order and the subsequent proceedings could under sec. 591 of the Code, be questioned in second appeal from the decree in the suit, though no appeal had been preferred against the order itself under sec. 588 (28).—I. L. R., 12 Al. 510.

In a suit for possession of property by right of inheritance, the Court framed six issues, four of which it tried and decided. With reference to its finding upon the principal of these issues, which related to the plaintiffs legitimacy, the Court dismissed the suit, observing that, in the view which it took of the case, the determination of the remaining issues was unnecessary. Some of the defendants had filed a statement of defence upon which no issues were framed, and no evidence taken, apparently in consequence of the attention of the Court being directed almost exclusively to the main issue as to the plaintiff's legitimacy. There was no formal order excluding evidence on any point. On appeal, the High Court reversed the first Court's finding on the issue with reference to which the suit had been dismissed below. Held by EDGE, C. J., and MAHMOOD, J. (STRAIGHT, J., dissenting), that sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code applied, not only to cases where the first Court had expressly excluded evidence, but also to cases where the parties were or might have been misled by the act of the Court as to the issues or the evidence necessary, and where, in consequence of the Court erroneously considering one issue only, the parties did not tender or bring forward their evidence; and that, as in the present case evidence had been excluded in this broad sense, sec. 562 (the operation of which in such cases should be rather expanded than limited) was applicable, and the case should be remanded for trial of the remaining issues. Held by STRAIGHT, J., contra, that, with reference to secs. 562, 563, and 564, the case could not be remanded under sec. 562, because it had not been disposed of upon a preliminary point, so as to exclude evidence of fact, and the Court should therefore proceed to dispose of it upon the evidence on the record, if any; and that an issue should be remitted to the lower Court under sec. 566.—10 Al. 289.

A plaintiff whose suit had been decreed in part appealed from so much of the first Court's decree as was adverse to him, and stamped his memorandum of appeal with a stamp which would have covered an appeal from the whole decree. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff not appealing under sec. 588 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court now dismissed the whole suit, and, on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court, held (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order of remand, though it had not been specifically appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires, so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree which was favourable to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction, in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant, to disturb that part of the decree; (iii) that the order of remand was not made valid by the subsequent appearance of the plaintiff before the first Court or by the appeal from the first Court's decree on the remand; and (iv) that the case was not covered by sec. 578 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J.—Sec. 544 had no application to the case, that section relating only to cases where one or more of the parties arrayed on the same side appealed against a decree passed on a ground common to all, and not to cases where either of two opposite parties appealed from a part of the decree upon a Court fee sufficient for an appeal from the whole. Maharajah Moheshur Sing v. Bengal Government (7 Moo. I. A. 283), Forbes v. Ameeroonissa Begum (10 Moo. I. A. 340), and Shah Mukhun Lall v. Baboo Sree Kishen Singh (12 Moo. I. A. 147), referred to.—11 Al. 35.

Sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code authorizes a remand only where the entire suit, and not merely a portion of it, has been disposed of by the Court below upon a preliminary point.—11 Al. 488.

Where a Court of first appeal remanded a case to the Court of first instance for the addition of all necessary parties, and at the same time decided an issue as to the merits, and it appeared that the Court of first instance had not disposed of the case "on a preliminary point, so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appeared to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties," held, first, that, on an appeal from the order of remand, the decision on the merits on which the order of remand was not based, was not before the High Court on appeal; and, further, that the order of remand was unsustainable under sections 562 and 564 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which are strictly binding on all Courts of first appeal. The proper course for the lower Appellate Court would have been to join the parties whom it found to be necessary, and then to raise the proper issues as between the plaintiff and those parties, and, if necessary, to refer the issues to the Court of first instance for trial under sec. 566.—10 Bom. 398.

The Court of first instance dismissed a suit as barred by limitation. In appeal, that decision was reversed, and the case was remanded under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Against the order of remand the defendant appealed to the High Court under clause 28 of section 588 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was contended by the plaintiff that the High Court had no power to decide the point of limitation, but could only consider whether the order of remand satisfied the requirements of sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench that in an appeal against such an order of remand the power of the High Court is not confined to the question whether that order satisfies the requirements of section 562; but may also determine the correctness of the lower appellate Court's decision on the preliminary point on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case.—14 Bom. 14.

A District Munsif, having taken all the evidence offered on the issues in a suit, disposed of the suit upon his finding on one of the issues without deciding the rest. On appeal the District Judge reversed the decree, and remanded the suit for the trial of the issues left untried. Held that, under sec. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order of remand was illegal.—9 Madr. 355

In a case where neither of the parties desired to have a local investigation, though suggested by the Court, the lower Court dealt with the case on the materials before it, and made a decree. On appeal the Appellate Court remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost, in the first instance, of the plaintiff. The lower Court thereupon made an order that the plaintiff should deposit the costs of the local investigation, and on default being made by the plaintiff, it dismissed the suit. The order of remand was found to be invalid as made without jurisdiction. Held that all proceedings taken by the Court of first instance, after the remand, and pending the hearing of the appeal against the remand order, were null and void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the case upon remand depended upon the validity of remand order. An appeal, therefore, lay from the order of remand, notwithstanding the Court of first instance had subsequently made what purported to be a final decree in the case.—12 Cal. 45.

Upon an appeal under cl. 28 of sec. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, against an order of remand under sec. 562, the High Court is not restricted to the consideration of the form of the order, but may examine it on its merits. Where an Appellate Court passed an order under sec. 562, remanding a case which had been disposed of in the Court of First Instance upon points, which were not preliminary points, but points directed to the merits of the case, the High Court on appeal set aside the remand order, directing the lower Appellate Court to hear the appeal according to law.—17 Cal. 168.

A Subordinate Judge decided a suit on the grounds (1) that it was res judicata, (2) that it was barred by limitation. On appeal, the Assistant Judge upheld the decree on the first-mentioned ground without deciding the point of limitation. On second appeal, the High Court reversed the Assistant Judge's decision holding that the suit was not res judicata, and remanded the case to be tried on the merits. On receipt of the order of the High Court, the Assistant Judge reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge without giving any decision on the point of limitation, and remanded the case to the Subordinate Judge to be tried on the merits. From this order the defendant appealed to the High Court. Held that the order of remand by the Assistant Judge was unauthorized under sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). When the High Court remanded the case to be tried on the merits, the whole case was left open to the Assistant Judge, and before he could reverse the Subordinate Judge's decree he was bound, under sec. 562 of the Code, to determine whether the decision of the Subordinate Judge on the question of limitation was right or not.—11 Bom. 663.

An Appellate Court has no power to remand a case except under the provisions of sec. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—3 Cal. 923.

The right of appeal given by secs. 588 and 589 of Act X of 1877 from an order of remand, as contemplated by sec. 562, is not taken away by sec. 586. Chaudhri Ranjit Singh v. Jafar Ali Khan (I. L. R., 3 Al. 18) followed.—7 Bom. 292.

An appeal from an order on appeal remanding a suit for re-trial is not to be confined to the question whether the remand has been made contrary to the provisions of sec. 562 of Act X. of 1877 or not, but the question whether the decision of the Appellate Court on the preliminary point is correct or not may also be raised and determined in such an appeal.—3 Al. 675.

On an appeal from an order under sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code remanding the case, the High Court cannot consider the facts on which the lower Appellate Court passed the order of remand. All that it can do under sec. 588, cl. 28, is to consider whether, on the findings of fact by the lower Appellate Court, that Court was right in remanding the case.—8 Cal. 674.

By the amendment of the plaint a suit for the restoration of a pond, which it was alleged the defendants were wrongfully filling up, to its original condition, was altered into one for the protection of the plaintiffs from any infringement of, or for a declaration of, their right to a share in the produce, and the use of the water, by way of easement. Held that the alteration in the plaint was a material one; and that an Appellate Court is not empowered by Act X of 1877 to order or allow a plaint to be amended, or to remand a case under sec. 562 of that Act for the purpose of such amendment.—2 Al. 669.

As the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) shortens the period of limitation in the case of promissory notes payable on demand, the period of limitation in respect of such notes executed prior to 1st October 1877 is governed by the provisions of sec. 2 of the Act. When a Court of the first instance, after taking evidence, dismisses a suit upon a preliminary objection without giving a decision upon the merits of the case, and the decree is reversed on appeal, the Court of appeal, if it considers the evidence on record sufficient, may decide the case, and is not bound to remand it for trial under sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code.—3 Madr. 96.

A Court of first instance dismissed a suit upon a preliminary point. On appeal by the plaintiff against the decree of such Court, the then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. B, reversed the decree upon such preliminary point and remanded the suit under sec. 562 of Act X of 1877 for the trial of a certain issue. The Court of first instance tried such issue and made a decree in accordance with its finding thereon. On appeal against the decree of the Court of first instance, the defendant again raised such preliminary point. The then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. K, dismissed the suit upon such preliminary point. Held that, as, although Mr. B had irregularly remanded the suit under sec. 562 of Act X of 1877, his decision disposed of such preliminary point, and only left open for trial the issue which he had directed to be tried, Mr. K was not competent to re-try and decide such preliminary point.—3 Al. 755.

Upon an appeal, under sec. 588, clause w, of the Civil Procedure Code, from an order of an Appellate Court under sec. 562, remanding a case which has been disposed of upon a preliminary point in the Court of first instance, the High Court may enter into the merits of the adjudication by the Court of first instance on the preliminary point, and may, if it finds the order of the lower Appellate Court defective, allow the party, who had the benefit of a decree in the first Court, to retain that benefit. The purchaser of the rights and interests of judgment-debtor who is a member of a joint family, at a sale in execution of a decree, does not acquire any title to the rights and interests of the other members of the family, unless it is clear that the judgment-debtor was sued in a representative capacity. Muddun Thakur v. Kantoo Lall (I. L. R., 2 Cal. 379), distinguished.—5 Cal. 144; 4 C. L. R. 465.

A Court in the exercise of Appellate Jurisdiction passed an order under sec. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, remanding a case of the Small Cause Court class as described in sec. 586. Held that, under the express words of the second portion of sec. 589 of the Code, an appeal does lie to the High Court from such an order.—10 Cal. 523.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 855, noted under sec. 57; 9 Al. 191, noted under sec. 25; 13 Al. 533, noted under sec. 203.

564. The Appellate Court shall not remand a case for a second decision, except as provided in Limit to remand. section 562.

Notes.

The judgment of a lower Appellate Court, after setting forth the claim, the defence, the nature of the decree of the first Court, and the effect of the pleas in appeal, concluded, with general observations, as follows :—
 “ The point to be determined on appeal is whether or not the decision is consistent with the merits of the case. This Court, having considered the evidence on the record and the judgment of the Munsif, which is explicit enough, concurs with the lower Court...The finding arrived at by the Munsif, that the plaintiff's claim is established, is correct and consistent with the evidence. The pleas urged in appeal are therefore undeserving of consideration.” Held that this was in law no judgment at all, inasmuch as it did not satisfy the requirements of sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the decree of the lower Appellate Court must therefore be set aside, and the record returned to that Court for a proper adjudication, in accordance with the provisions of that section. Mahadeo Prasad v. Sarju Prasad (I. L. R., 8 Al. 614) referred to. Observations by Mahmood, J., upon the distinction between the duties of the Courts of first appeal and those of the Courts of second appeal in connection with the provisions of secs. 574 and 578 of the Civil Procedure Code, and with the remand of cases for trial de novo. Ram Narain v. Bhawanidin (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 104) and Sheomber Singh v. Lallu Singh (Weekly notes, 1882, p. 158) referred to.—I. L. R., 9 Al. 26.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623 ; 9 Al. 191, noted under sec. 25 ; 12 Al. 510, noted under sec. 562.

565. When the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the Appellate Court "may,"* after re-settling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the case, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the Appellate Court proceeds.

When evidence on record sufficient, Appellate Court may determine case finally.

Notes.

Sec. 565 of Act X of 1877 does not enable an Appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been fixed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 239.

Held by the Full Bench that sec. 587 of the Civil Procedure Code does not make secs. 565 and 566 applicable to second appeals, so as to enable the High Court, in cases where the lower Appellate Court has omitted to frame or try any issue or to determine any essential question of fact, to itself determine the same upon the evidence on the record ; but the High Court in such cases must remit issues for trial to the lower Appellate Court. Balkishen v. Jasoda Kuar and Deekishen v. Bansi overruled on this point.—9 Al. 147.

Where a Court of first appeal omits to determine a material issue of fact, the High Court as a Court of second appeal is not competent, under sec. 565 of the Civil Procedure Code, to determine such issue itself, but should refer it for determination to the Court of first appeal.—5 Al. 14.

A District Court on appeal having reversed the decree of a District Munsif's Court and dismissed the suit upon a preliminary point of law, the High Court, on appeal from the District Court's decree, reversed it and directed the District Court to submit its finding to the High Court upon an issue of fact which had been framed and tried by the District Munsif, but had not been decided by the District Court. Upon the return of the finding upon this issue to the High Court, a memorandum of objections to the finding was presented under sec. 567 of the Code of Civil Procedure :—Held, that, as the words "as far as may be" in sec. 587 (by which the provisions of Chapter XLI are made applicable to appellate decrees) must be taken to mean "as far as is consistent with the principles on which appeals from appellate decrees are admitted and determined," no objections could be taken to the finding of the District Court under sec. 567 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—7 Madr, 52.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 26, noted under sec. 564 ; 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623.

* This word has been substituted for the word "shall" by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 51.

566. If the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, “and the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to determine such issues or question,”* the Appellate Court may frame issues for trial, and may refer the same for trial to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required ; and such Court shall proceed to try such issues, and shall return to the Appellate Court its finding thereon, together with the evidence.

Notes.

In a second appeal by the defendant in which the plaintiff filed objections to the decree under sec. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court, without giving judgment on the appeal, stated (giving reasons) the opinion that the appellant would be entitled to succeed, and at the same time remitted an issue under sec. 566 of the Code with reference to the plaintiff's objections. At that time the appeal was apparently not argued out, and the true meaning of the facts as found was obviously not present to the mind of the Court. Held that, upon the return of the findings on remand, the Court could not treat the appeal as already decided, and the objections the sole matter for consideration, but must consider both appeal and objections, and decide the whole case. Held, however, that where Judges have heard arguments on some of the issues, and have expressed their views thereon, and have remitted another issue or issues under sec. 566, they are not bound, on the return of findings, to hear the case de novo, but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings.—I. L. R., 10 Al. 162.

When a case is remanded under sec. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the lower Appellate Court for findings on certain issues, it is not competent to that Court to delegate the decision of those issues to a Court subordinate thereto.—14 Al. 23.

If, on second appeal, it is found that certain material facts, having an important bearing upon a question at issue in the suit, have been omitted to be considered by the lower Appellate Court, the High Court will interfere with the decision of the lower Appellate Court, even though it be on a question of fact.—11 Cal. 499.

In the Court of first instance the appellant, upon the title of a sister's son was one of the plaintiffs who obtained a decree for an inheritance, the suit having been heard at the same time with another, in which relations of the deceased owner, alleging themselves to be of the same gotra with him, also obtained a decree as his heirs. Evidence in the latter suit was received in that of the appellant by consent of parties, both suits having been brought against the same defendant, whose title, as widow of a son alleged to have been adopted by the last owner, was set up in both but was not proved. Appeals having been filed in both suits, in that brought by the sister's son a new issue was framed by the appellate Court, under sec. 566 Civil Procedure Code as to whether he was entitled as nearest of kin, or was excluded by the other claimants, whose suit was, at that time, compromised. Held, that, after what had taken place in regard to both suits the appellate Court could frame this issue, although it was new, and had not been raised by the defendant's written answer. With reference to the evidence in the one suit having been imported as a whole into the other at the first hearing; and the admission of evidence upon the trial of the new issue; it was held, that the parties intended that the evidence should be admitted and that no irregularity had taken place materially affecting the decree of the High Court, which dismissed the suit of the sister's son on return made under sec. 567.—14 Al. 366.

* See Act XII of 1891 (Repealing and Amending Act).

A Court of first instance to which issues have been remitted under sec. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code by the Appellate Court has only jurisdiction to try the issues remitted, and is functus officio in other respects, and cannot make a reference of the case to arbitration, which is only within the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court. Gossain Dowlut Geer v. Bissessur Geer, 22 W. R., 207, referred to. When a case has been referred to arbitration, the presence of all the arbitrators at all meetings, and, above all, at the last meeting when the final act of arbitration is done, is essential to the validity of the award. Where a case was referred by a Court to the arbitration of three persons, and the parties to the reference agreed to be bound as to the matters in dispute by the decision of a majority of the arbitrators, and one of the arbitrators subsequently refused to act, and withdrew from the arbitration, held that the Court could not pass a decree on the award of the remaining arbitrators, and could only, under sec. 510 of the Civil Procedure Code, appoint a new arbitrator or supersede the arbitration and proceed with the suit. Kazee Syud Nasir Ali v. Musammat Tinoo Dossia (6 W. R., 95) and Rohilkhand and Kumaun Bank v. Row (I. L. R., 6 Al. 468) referred to.—7 Al. 523.

Where a lower Appellate Court, instead of remanding a suit under sec. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code, erroneously remands it under sec. 562, and the party aggrieved by its order appeals to the High Court, under clause (28), sec. 588, the High Court cannot deal with the case as if it were a first appeal from a decree. All that the High Court can do is to rectify the procedure of the lower Appellate Court, and to direct that it decide the case itself on the merits. Badam v. Imrat (I. L. R., 3 Al. 675) distinguished. Ramnarain v. Bhawanidin (2 Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 104) and Sheomber Singh v. Lallu Singh (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 158) referred to.—7 Al. 136.

Assuming that an Appellate Court, in deciding a case in a manner inconsistent with, and opposed to, the finding returned to it by the Court of first instance under Act X of 1877, sec. 566, in the absence of objections, acted irregularly, its decree could not be reversed or the case remanded on account of such irregularity, such irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.—2 Al. 908.

Where an Appellate Court, under Act VIII of 1859, sec. 354, refers to a lower Court issues for trial, and fixes a time within which, after the return of the finding, either party to the appeal may file a memorandum of objections to the same, neither party is entitled, without the leave of the Court, to take any objection to the finding, orally or otherwise, after the expiry of the period so fixed, without his having filed such memorandum.—1 Al. 165.

In a suit for negligence, where it is possible that the Court may take one or more different views as to the proper measure of damages, tiff must come prepared with evidence as to the amount of damages according to whichever view the Court may adopt, and if the evidence produced is applicable to one view only, the Court cannot give the plaintiff a re-trial, and allow him to remodel his case with fresh evidence under sec. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section is intended to provide for cases where some point has come to light in the Appellate Court, which has not been raised, or of the importance of which has not occurred to the parties or to the Judge in the Court below.—5 Cal. 283 : 4 C. L. R., 473.

H sued B for arrears of rent, alleging that the annual rent payable by the latter was Rs. 212-1-0. The Court of first instance gave H a decree based on the finding that the annual rent payable by B was Rs. 94. H appealed, and the lower Appellate Court gave him a decree based on the finding that the annual rent payable by B was Rs. 128-12-0 B. appealed to the High Court from the lower Appellate Court's decree. H did not appeal from that decree, neither did he take any objections thereto under sec. 561 of Act X of 1877. STUART, C. J., and OLDFIELD, J., before whom such appeal came on for hearing, remanded the case to the lower Appellate Court for a fresh determination of the question as to the amount of the annual rent payable by B. The lower Appellate Court then found that the annual rent payable by B was Rs. 212-1-0. Held by STUART, C. J., (OLDFIELD, J., dissenting), that such second finding of the lower Appellate Court should be accepted, and the amount awarded by its decree be enlarged accordingly, notwithstanding H had not appealed from that decree, or preferred objections thereto.—3 Al. 643.

567. Such finding and evidence shall become part of the record in the suit ; and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the Appellate Court, present a memorandum of objections to the finding.

Finding and evidence to be put on record.
Objections to finding.

After the expiration of the period fixed for presenting such memorandum the Appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.

Determination of appeal.

Notes.

Where a first Appellate Court has remanded a case to the Court of first instance for the trial of issues, and where, on the return of the findings on these issues, no (objections have been preferred) under sec. 567 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Appellate Court, after the period fixed for presenting objections, may, at its discretion, receive or decline to receive any written objection, but is, in any case, bound to consider the findings of the lower Court on the merits, and is not precluded from hearing arguments for and against the findings at the hearing of the appeal. Abkari Begam v. Wilayat Ali (I. L. R., 2 Al. 908) followed. The imperative provisions of sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code apply alike to cases remanded by the first Appellate Court for the trial of issues and to those in which no such remand has taken place.—I. L. R., 6 Al. 383.

568. The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the Appellate Court. But if—

Production of additional evidence in Appellate Court.

(a) the Court against whose decree the appeal is made refuses to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or

(b) the Appellate Court requires any document to be produced for any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment; or for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court may allow such evidence to be produced, or document to be received, or witness to be examined.

Whenever additional evidence is admitted by an Appellate Court, the Court shall record on its proceedings the reason for such admission.

Notes.

The High Court decided a case, irrespective of certain documents brought forward by a party at the hearing of the appeal, and afterwards rejected an application for a review of that judgment. In an application to the Privy Council for special leave to bring in those documents, held that further evidence ought not to be admitted under sec. 355, Act VIII. of 1859; that there was great danger in the Court of ultimate appeal lightly introducing evidence which had not been under the consideration of the Courts below, and which the parties had had no means of testing.—3 B. L. R., (P. C.) 25.

It is irregular for an appellate Court to receive, without very substantial reason, evidence, however material and important, which was not produced in the lower Court. The High Court, however, declined to set aside a decision on the ground of such irregularity.—5 B. L. R., App. 54.

Where the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a judgment upon a regular appeal, it may require the Court against whose decree the appeal is made to take additional evidence, defining the points to which such evidence is to be confined, in order to enable the Appellate Court finally to determine the case. The grandson of a Hindu is bound to pay the debt of his grandfather, independent of assets, but without interest, according to the doctrine of the Maharashtra school. But see now the alteration made in the law by the Hindu Heir's Relief Act of 1866.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 64; 2nd Ed. 61.

In a suit brought against a Collector to compel him to refrain from preventing the plaintiff executing his decree against certain land—the only issue being, whether the land was the private property of the judgment-debtors, or Government service land—the plaintiff alleged that the land had been granted in free inam by a sanad which he petitioned the mamlatdar of the pargana to search for, and send to the Collector; and on a reference by the High Court, the District Judge found that “the Collector did destroy the document that purported to be a copy of a sanad such as the plaintiff petitioned the mamlatdar to search for.” Held that it was not competent for the defendant to say that the document was not such a one as could be legally admitted in evidence; and that the case came within the rule omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 116, at p. 123.

Where a Munsif, without framing issues, or examining the plaintiff, passed a decree in his favour upon an admission made by the defendant and upon inspection of a document that was upon the record of a former suit, but the Judge, on appeal, reversed the decree of the Munsif on account of the insufficiency of evidence, the document, in his opinion, not being admissible, it was held that the Judge ought not to have reversed the Munsif's decree without first exercising his power of taking fresh evidence under sec. 355 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 88.

Circumstances under which an Appellate Court will not allow additional evidence to be produced, at the hearing of an appeal, under sec. 568 of the Civil Procedure Code.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 765.

Where the lower Appellate Court allows additional evidence to be taken, though it is not satisfied that the evidence is necessary under clause (a) or clause (b) of sec. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the High Court will interfere, but where this does not appear to be the case, and there is simply an omission on the part of the Appellate Court to record its reasons for allowing additional evidence to be taken, the High Court will not interfere.—11 Cal. 139.

The provision in sec. 568 as to an appellate Court recording its reasons for admitting additional evidence is directory merely, and not imperative. Where the first Court of Appeal has admitted additional evidence, the hearing in the second Court of Appeal will not be treated as a first appeal, so as to allow the pleaders to go into the facts.—12 Cal. 37.

An appellant who had ample opportunity of giving evidence in the Court below, and elected not to do so, but to rest his case on the evidence as it stood, ought not be allowed at the stage of appeal to give evidence which he could have given below.—9 Al. 366.

See I. L. R., 18 Cal. 201, noted under sec. 141; 16 Bom. 676, noted under sec. 220.

569. Whenever additional evidence is allowed to be received, the Appellate Court may either take such evidence, or direct the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, or any other subordinate Court, to take such evidence, and to send it, when taken, to the Appellate Court.

570. In all cases where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the Appellate Court shall specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record on its proceedings the points so specified.

Of the Judgment in Appeal.

571. The Appellate Court, after hearing the parties or when and their pleaders, and referring to any part pronounced, of the proceedings, whether on appeal or in the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, to which reference may be considered necessary, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

572. The judgment shall be written in English ; provided that, if English is not the mother-tongue of the Judge, and he is not able to write an intelligible judgment in English, the judgment shall be written in his mother-tongue or in the language of the Court.

573. When the language in which the judgment is written is not the language of the Court, the judgment shall, if any party so require, be translated into such language, and the translation, after it has been ascertained to be correct, shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

574 The judgment of the Appellate Court shall state—

- (a) the points for determination ;
- (b) the decision thereupon ;
- (c) the reasons for the decision ; and,
- (d) when the decree appealed against is reversed or varied, the relief to which the appellant is entitled ;

and shall, at the time that it is pronounced, be signed and dated by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein.

Date and signature.

Notes.

An Appellate Court is not bound to discuss seriatim the arguments adduced by a lower Court in support of its judgment, but need only give its own reasons for its own judgment. In the present case, the Principal Sadr Amin confirmed the judgment of the first Court, and need not have given any special reason of his own at all.—Per LOCH and GLOVER, JJ., Special Appeal, No. 2966 of 1867.—1. B. L. R., S. N., 2.

An Appellate Court is bound to state its reasons for reversing the decision of a lower Court.—2 B. L. R., App. 20 ; 17 W. R., 358 ; 21 W. R., 284.

The reasons for their decisions must, in all cases, be recorded by the Judges of the High Courts in India. In a suit for maintenance, where the objection was taken on appeal to the Privy Council that no issues had been directed by the Courts below, held that an order of the High Court, referring the matter to the lower Court for enquiry “to ascertain the amount of maintenance which might appear to be justly and properly payable with reference to the means of the defendants and the other facts of the case, and to proceed to decision in the manner indicated in sec. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code,” was equivalent to a direction of issues, and rendered any further issues unnecessary.—2 B. L. R., (P. C.) 72 ; 11 W. R., (P. C.) 33 ; 12 Moore’s I. A., 495.

The Judge of the lower Appellate Court not having recorded his judgments as required by sec. 359 of Act VIII. of 1859, the case was sent back to the lower Court for the Judge to state the points for decision, and to give his decision upon those points consecutively.—7 B. L. R., App. 14 ; 13 W. R., 131.

It is the duty of Appellate Judges to act so far in conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as is sufficient to show that the Court has dealt with each ground of appeal, and more especially to record distinct findings on questions of fact.—4 M. H. C. R., App. 56.

Where the Civil Judge, confirming a decree of the District Munsif, stated by way of judgment that he was of opinion that the decision of the Munsif was fair and equitable, the High Court on special appeal sent back the case with directions to the Civil Judge to record a judgment in substantial conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure.—4 M. H. C. R., App. 56 note.

A Judge may, at the close of the hearing of a suit, state at once orally the judgment which he intends to record and deliver.—5 M. H. C. R., App. 8.

The Civil Judge, in confirming a decision of the District Munsif, did not state the reasons upon which his judgment was founded, and the High Court remitted the case in order that the Civil Judge might record a judgment in accordance with the Civil Procedure Code. The Civil Judge had been appointed to another district, and when the case went down, the new Judge had the case re-argued before him, and reversed the decision of the Munsif. The High Court, under the circumstances, held that effect should be given to the first judgment, notwithstanding the irregularity.—5 M. H. C. R., 174.

A suit, instituted in the Court of the Principal Sadr Amin, was transferred under sec. 6. Act VIII. of 1859, to the Court of the Munsif, who took further evidence, and decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant appealed to the District Court on the ground (amongst others) that part of the evidence had been taken by the Principal Sadr Amin and the District Judge reversed the Munsif's decree, not on this ground, but on the merits. The plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, objecting that the suit had been illegally decided by the Munsif upon evidence recorded by the Principal Sadr Amin; and that the onus of proving the bona fides of the transaction, which was the subject-matter of the suit, was thrown, by the District Judge, on the plaintiff, instead of on the defendant, who alleged the want of it. Held (1) that the Munsif's having used the evidence recorded by the Principal Sadr Amin was only an irregularity, which was waived by the plaintiff's not requiring the witnesses to be examined again, and proceeding with the suit, and producing other witnesses to be examined in support of his claim; and as this irregularity did not affect the merits of the case, the decree of the Munsif being in the plaintiff's favour, it was not a ground for reversing the decree on special appeal; (2) that the onus was not thrown by the Judge upon the plaintiff in its proper sense, and so as to be an error in law; as the Judge did not hold that the defendant was entitled to succeed without giving any evidence unless the plaintiff disproved the allegation of want of bona fides. The meaning of sec. 183, taken in connection with sec. 172, is that the judgment is to be given upon the examination of the witnesses by the Judge himself in the Court of first instance, and not upon a perusal of depositions, except those taken under sec. 173 and the subsequent sections, which are expressly allowed to be read in evidence at the hearing; and care should be taken, in the transfer of suits and in the disposal generally of the business of the lower Courts, to prevent the necessity of re-summoning witnesses.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 98.

Where the judgment of the lower Appellate Court dismissing an appeal was merely as follows: "The appeal is dismissed with Costs"—the High Court set aside the decree on the ground that the Court had not complied with the provisions of sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code.—11 C. L. R., 131.

A judge's decision not being in conformity with the provision of sec. 359, Act VIII. of 1859, was held to be illegal and defective.—1 Agra H. C. R., 73; 11 W. R., 558.

Where the Judge finally disposed of the case on the day fixed for the settlement of issues, without allowing the parties the opportunity to adduce evidence and fully ascertaining the facts, held that his judgment was illegal and defective.—2 Agra H. C. R., 30.

The intention of the Legislature as expressed in sec. 633 of the Civil Procedure Code was that the High Court might frame rules as to how its judgments should be given, whether orally or in writing, or according to any mode which might appear to it best in the interests of justice. The section does not merely give the High Court power to direct that judgments shall be recorded in a particular book, or with a particular seal. Rule 9 of the rules made under sec. 633 in March 1885 is therefore not ultra vires of the Court, and it modifies the provisions of sec. 576 in their application to judgment of the High Court. With reference to the terms of rule 9, it is not necessary, in a case where the High Court substantially adopts the whole judgments of the Court below, to go through the formality of re stating the points at issue, the decision upon each point, and the reasons for the decision. Per EDGE., C. J.—Apart from rule 9, it never was intended that sec. 574 of the Code should apply to cases where the High Court, having heard the judgment of the Court below and arguments thereon, comes to the conclusion that both the judgment and the reasons which it gives are completely satisfactory, and such as the High Court itself would have given. Assuming the provisions of sec. 574 to be applicable, a judgment of the High Court stating merely that the appeal must be dismissed with costs and the judgment of the first Court affirmed, and that it was unnecessary to say more than that the Court agreed with the Judge's reasons, is a substantial compliance with those provisions. The judgment of the High Court in a first appeal was as follows: "This appeal must, in my opinion, be dismissed with costs, and the judgment of the first Court affirmed; and I do not think it necessary to say more than that we agree with the Judges reasons." The appellant applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council on the ground that the requirements of sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code had not been complied with. Held by the Full Bench that the objection involved no substantial question of law, and that the application for leave to appeal must therefore be rejected.—I. L. R., 9Al. 93.

Where the lower Appellate Court omits to give reasons for its decision, the High Court will retain the case in second appeal, and either require the Judge to state his reasons, or, in the event of his absence, refer the questions to his successor for fresh trial.—10 Cal. 932.

The imperative provisions of sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code apply alike to cases remanded by the first appellate Court for the trial of issues, and to those in which no such remand has taken place.—6. Al. 383.

See I. L. R., 3 Madr. 1, noted under sec. 551; 9 Al. 26, noted under sec. 564; 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623.

575. When the appeal is heard by a Bench of two or more Judges, the appeal shall be decided in accordance with the opinion of such Judges or of the majority (if any) of such Judges.

Decision when appeal heard by two or more Judges.

If there be no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed against, such decree shall be affirmed :

Provided that, if the Bench hearing the appeal is composed of two Judges belonging to a Court consisting of more than two Judges, and the Judges composing the Bench differ in opinion on a point of law, the appeal may be referred to one or more of the other Judges of the same Court, and shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority (if any) of all the Judges who have heard the appeal, including those who first heard it.

When there is no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed against, such decree shall be affirmed.

The High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate references under this section.

Notes.

Sec. 23 of Act XXIII of 1861 referred only to the late Sadr Court, and although this Act formed part of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is clear that sec. 23 could not apply to Judges sitting in appeal from the original civil jurisdiction for this reason, that all the Judges of the Court so sitting in appeal are supposed in law to be equal, whereas sec. 23 of Act XXIII of 1861 only contemplated an appeal from a Court of inferior jurisdiction to the late Sadr Court, and had nothing at all to do with the Court of Appeal from the original civil jurisdiction as that Court is now constituted.—Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 139.

It was held under this section that, if the Judges differed in opinion on points of law, and did not state the points on which they differed, there was no determination of the case : so that, if the case were then referred to other Judges for final determination, they would have jurisdiction to go into the whole case.—6 W. R., 269.

Where a Bench of two Judges hearing an appeal and differing in opinion have delivered judgments on the appeal as judgments of the Court without any reservation, they are not competent to refer the appeal to other Judges of the Court under sec. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code.—I. L. R., 9 Al. 625.

The provisions of the Letters Patent of 1865, cl. 36, that when the Judges of a Division Bench are equally divided in opinion, the opinion of the Senior Judge shall prevail, has been superseded by Act X. of 1877, sec. 575 (which is extended to miscellaneous proceedings of the nature of of appeals by sec. 647 of that Act), so far as regards cases to which sec. 575 is applicable.—3 Bom. (F. B.) 204.

Sec. 575 of Act XIV of 1882 does not take away the right of appeal which is given by clause 15 of the Letters Patent. When the judgment of a lower Court has been confirmed under sec. 575 of the Code of Civil Procedure by reason of one of the Judges of the Appeal Court agreeing upon the facts which the Court below, an appeal will lie against such judgment, notwithstanding the terms of sec. 575. Appaji Bhivray v. Shiblal Khubchand, (I. L. R., 3 Bom. 204), approved —10 Cal. 814.

The only Bench which can legally deal with an appeal which has been referred under the provisions of sec. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code is one which includes the Judges who first heard the appeal, and whose difference in opinion on a point of law necessitated the reference. Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Tara Churn Koondo Chowdhry, 6 W. R., 269, Mahomed Akil v. Asad-un-nissa Bibi, (5 Wyman's Rep., 69) and Brand v. Hammersmith and City Railway Company (36 L. J., Q. B., 137), referred to. The word "judgment" as used in Rule II of the Rules made by the High Court, North-Western Provinces, to regulate references under sec. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code, must not be understood in its strict sense, but merely as an expression of opinion containing reasons for a contemplated or proposed judgment.—6 Al. 468.

See I. L. R., 14 Madr. 186, noted under sec. 539.

576. When the appeal is heard by more Judges than one, any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court shall state in writing the decision or order which he thinks should be passed on the appeal, and he may state his reasons for the same.

577. The judgment may be for confirming, varying, or reversing the decree against which the appeal is made, or, if the parties to the appeal agree as to the form which the decree in appeal shall take, or as to the order to be passed in appeal, the Appellate Court may pass a decree or order accordingly.

Notes.

An Appellate Court has no power to reverse the judgment of a Court of first instance merely on the ground that the document on which the suit was based did not bear a stamp at all.—5 B. L. R., App. 10.

Held in special appeal that the lower Appellate Court was right in setting aside the proceedings of the Munsif, on the ground that the property in suit was valued at an amount beyond his jurisdiction, but the plaintiff was entitled to have the plaint returned to him that he might present it with the proper additional stamp before the proper Court.—5 B. L. R., App. 15.

The prohibition contained in sec. 30 of Act IV of 1862, which regulates the Bank of Bengal, against making loans and advances on the security of land, is no prohibition against the bank taking land as security for a past loan and an existing debt. Where title-deeds of land had been deposited by a debtor with the Bank of Bengal, and a letter was given authorizing the bank to sell the land and apply the proceeds in liquidation of a debt then existing and due to the bank, it was held that a valid equitable mortgage was thereby created in favour of the bank as a security for the money due. The Court declined to entertain the question whether the document relied on was one requiring a stamp, as being a matter not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.—7 B. L. R., 653; 16 W. R., 203.

The decision of the Court of first instance as to the admissibility of a document, subject to the payment of stamp-duty, is final, and cannot be reviewed by the Appellate Court.—2 Madr. 321.

It is open to an Appellate Court to consider the question whether a document which the Court of first instance has declared to be liable to a stamp under Act X of 1862 is properly so liable.—3 M. H. C. R., 71.

Where the objection is taken for the first time in special appeal that a document which, according to Act X of 1862, ought to have been stamped, has been admitted by both the lower Courts unstamped, the High Court is bound to take notice of the objection (although not one of the grounds set forth in the petition of appeal), and to require payment of the stamp-duty and penalty, or to reject the document.—3 M. H. C. R., 297.

Sec. 32 of Act VIII of 1859 imposes upon the Court of first instance the duty of taking any legal objection apparent on the face of the plaint, and the fact that the portion of the claim is evidently barred by the law of limitation from which no ground of exemption is stated is an objection which ought to be noticed by the Court when receiving the plaint: or, if not taken notice of then, it may be at any subsequent stage of the suit. The Judge, in appeal, is bound to decree according to the law of limitation applicable to the case as stated by the plaintiff himself, although the objection may not be raised in the grounds of appeal, and his omitting to do so is an error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits, and a ground of special appeal.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 169; 2nd Ed. 162.

A Hindu, whose share in an ancestral estate had been alienated by a co-proprietor, instituted simultaneously three different actions against the co-proprietor and the persons to whom the alienations had respectively been made to recover several distinct parcels of lands which constituted his share. Held that, as the plaintiff had but one single cause of action against the co-proprietor, he ought to have brought but one suit against him, and either included all the alienees in this suit, or brought separate actions against the alienees for the several pieces of land in their possession, and caused the proceedings in these suits to be stayed till the suit against the co-proprietor was determined. The course of procedure last indicated is the more correct course. Held further that, as the separate suits against the co-proprietor were instituted simultaneously, the error in splitting up the claim against him did not affect the merits; and accordingly the decree was affirmed.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 30.

The misjoinder of plaintiffs, which does not produce error in the decision of the case on its merits, is not a ground for the reversal of a decree on special appeal. Semble—That such misjoinder is not a ground for the reversal of a decree in regular appeal. Where the widow of H, a Muhammadan, and his two daughters, brought a joint suit for their respective shares of the estate of H, which were awarded to them jointly, held that this was an error of procedure which did not affect the merits of the case. 6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 177.

A suit was brought against six defendants, the cause of action against five of them being unconnected with the cause of action against the sixth

The Assistant Judge, in whose Court the suit was brought, tried one of the causes of action over which he had jurisdiction, but refused to try the other over which he had no jurisdiction. In appeal, the District Judge refused to enter into the merits of either on the ground of the misjoinder of the causes of action. Held that the District Judge was bound to enter into the merits of the claim over which the Court of first instance had jurisdiction, it not being affected by the error in the misjoinder of the two claims.—7 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 19. See 23 W. R., 408.

The plaintiff, as purchaser at a Court's sale, sued in 1871 for possession of certain immoveable property, and tendered in evidence a sale-certificate, dated 20th September 1865. The first Court decided against the plaintiff on the ground, among others, that the certificate was not registered, though registration of it was compulsory. On the 9th February 1875, the plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court against that decree, and, on the 26th July 1875, applied to that Court for permission to give in evidence a new certificate of sale, issued on the 1st February 1875, regarding the same property as that to which the certificate of the 20th September 1865 related. Held by the High Court that, as the new certificate was issued after the first Court had made its decree, the High Court ought not to receive it or to suggest or facilitate any application to the lower Court for a review of its decree on documentary evidence, which had no existence when that Court made such decree. (Distinction pointed out between this case and Mohidin v. Mahadaji, S. A., 437 of 1872.) Quære.—Whether, under the circumstances of this case, the Subordinate Judge, who issued the new certificate of sale on the 1st February 1875, ought to have so issued it, in order that the plaintiff might register it, the plaintiff having already lost, by his own laches, the right to register the original certificate? Quære.—Whether the Court of first instance ought to have received the second certificate if it had been issued and tendered in evidence subsequently to the filing of the suit, but previously to the original hearing?—12 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 247.

Sec. 51 of Act XI of 1865, did not authorize the Local Government permanently and unconditionally invest the Judge of a Small Cause Court with the powers of a Principal Sadr Amin. The section only contemplated an occasional investment of the powers, and one contingent on the state of the business of the Court. Where the proceedings and the decree passed by a lower Court were without jurisdiction, held (SPANKIE, J., dissenting) that sec. 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply, as the judgment of the High Court could not be for reversing or modifying the decree of the lower Court, there being no decree to reverse or modify. Held, (per STUART, C. J.) that, under sec. 15 of 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104, the power of superintendence to be exercised by the High Court is not merely administrative or ministerial, but also judicial.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 55.

Where an application purporting to contain the terms of a compromise was presented to the High Court by one of the parties to an appeal before it, but on the so-called sulahnamah being sent down to the Lower Court for verification, it was found that the attendance of the parties for that purpose could not be procured,—held that the High Court was not justified in passing a decree under sec. 577 of the Code of Civil Procedure in accordance with the terms of the unverified sulahnamah.—14 Al. 350.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. (F. B.) 152, noted under sec. 540.

578. No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal, on account of any error, defect or irregularity, whether in the decision or in any order passed in the suit, or otherwise, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction.

Notes.

The refusal of a plaintiff-respondent to make good a deficiency in Court-fees in respect of his plaint when called upon to do so by the Appellate Court is not a ground upon which the Appellate Court should reverse the decree of the Court of first instance and dismiss the suit.—I. L. R., 2 Al. 889.

A suit was instituted and tried on the merits, in the Court of a Subordinate Judge without any objection being taken, either by the defendants or by the Court, that the plaint was insufficiently stamped. The defendants appealed on the merits, and the District Judge, being of opinion that the stamp on the plaint was inadequate, called upon the plaintiff to pay the additional fee which would have been payable had the objection been taken and the question rightly decided in the Court of first instance. Held, on second appeal, that the order of the Judge was properly made under sec. 12, cl. ii. of the Court Fees' Act, VII of 1870.—7 Cal. 348.

The plaintiffs in this suit, alleging that they were co-sharers of a certain village, that certain land situate in such village was the property of the co-sharers, and that such land had been improperly sold by the persons occupying it to one of the co-sharers, sued the vendors and the purchaser and the other co-sharers for possession of their share of such land and the setting aside of the sale so far as their share was concerned, and valued the suit according to their share. Held that the error in the frame and valuation of the suit, inasmuch as it did not affect the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was instituted or the merits of the case, was not, under sec. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code, a ground on which the Appellate Court should have reversed the decree of the Court of first instance. Unnodo Persad Roy v. Erskine (12 B. L. R., 370) distinguished.—4 Al. 289.

Suit by payee against drawer upon a hundi drawn in British India upon a person a Colombo. The hundi was not stamped when drawn. Objection taken to its admission in evidence by defendant was allowed by the Munsif, but plaintiff was permitted to sue for the amount due upon the original consideration. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no consideration was proved. Upon appeal the District Judge held that the hundi did not require a stamp as it was not intended to operate in British India, and admitted the hundi in evidence as a business letter admitting responsibility and found that there was consideration. Held upon second appeal that, the hundi having been admitted in evidence, though contrary to law, by the District Judge, no objection could be taken to the decree in second appeal upon that account.—5 Madr. 220.

In June 1875, L executed a bond in favour of S in which he mortgaged, amongst other property, a village called Chand Khera, as security for the payment of certain moneys. He subsequently sold such village to A, concealing the fact that it had been mortgaged to S. On this fact coming to the knowledge of A, he threatened L with a criminal prosecution, where upon L proposed to S, in writing, that the security of a share in a village called Kelsa, which he alleged was his property should be substituted for the security of Chand Khera. S accepted this proposed by a letter in which he referred to L's proposal in terms. It subsequently appeared that the share in Kelsa did not belong to L but to another person. S having sued upon his bond, claiming to enforce thereunder a lien upon Chand Kera, A set up as a defence to the suit that S had agreed to substitute Kelsa for Chand Khera in the bond, producing S's letter as evidence of the agreement. Held that such letter operated as a release and should therefore have been stamped and registered. Held also, that an objection may properly be taken in a Court of first appeal to an unstamped document, and such Court is bound to entertain the objection and may direct that the document be stamped and the penalty imposed. Held also, that L's fraud vitiated S's agreement to substitute the security of Kelsa for the security of Chand Khera in the bond, and S was entitled, notwithstanding A might have purchased the latter property in good faith, to the enforcement of the lien created thereon by the bond. Mark Ridded Currie v. S. V. Muttu Ramen Chetty (3 B. L. R., 126) discussed.—2 Al. 554.

The defendants in a suit on a bond admitted the execution of the bond, but denied that they had received, as the bond recited they had at the time of its execution, the consideration for it. The Court of first instance, instead of calling on the defendants to establish the fact that they had not received the consideration for the bond, as it ought to have done under the circumstances, irregularly allowed the plaintiff to produce witnesses to prove that the consideration for the bond had been paid at the time of its execution. The evidence of these witnesses proved that the consideration of the bond had not been paid at the time of execution, and that, if it had been paid at all, it had been paid at some subsequent time. The plaintiff did not give any further evidence to establish such payment, and the Court of first instance, without calling on the defendants to establish their defence, dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court held that the defendants should have been required to begin under the circumstances, and reserved the decree of the Court of first instance, and gave the plaintiff a decree. Held that, although the plaintiff ought not to have begun, yet as he had done so, and his witnesses had proved that the consideration for the bond had not been paid as admitted in the bond, a new case was opened up, in which the onus was shifted back to the plaintiff to establish that he had, not at the time alleged in the bond, but at some subsequent time, paid to the defendants the consideration for the bond. Also that it was doubtful, having regard to the provisions of sec. 578 of Act X. of 1877, whether it was competent for the lower Appellate Court to reverse the decision of the Court of first instance; but even if it were, the lower Appellate Court should not have ignored what had taken place, but should have dealt with the case in appeal in the shape it came before it.—3 Al. 824.

A Mahomedan residing at Zanzibar let a house situated there to the defendant, to be held by the latter as long as he pleased, under a lease in which he (the lessor) stipulated never to remove the lessee. The plaintiff, subsequently, with full knowledge of the lease, purchased the same house from the lessor, and as such purchaser sued to eject the defendant. The plaintiff tendered evidence to show that by the custom of Zanzibar the defendant's tenancy was determined upon the sale by the landlord. This evidence was refused. Held that the alleged custom, even if proved, was invalid. It was unreasonable, as enabling a man, after having granted a lease, to deprive the lessee of the entire benefit of his lease. The exclusion of evidence in the lower Court is not sufficient ground for reversing that Court's decree, unless the Appeal Court comes to the conclusion that the evidence, refused, if it had been received, ought to have varied the decision.—8 Bom. 408.

Of the Decree in Appeal.

579. The decree of the Appellate Court shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced.

Date and contents of decree.

The decree shall contain the number of the appeal, and the memorandum of appeal, including the names and description of the appellant and respondent, and shall, specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the appeal.

The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the appeal, and by what parties and in what proportions such costs and the costs in the suit are to be paid.

The decree shall be signed and dated by the Judge or Judges who passed it :

Provided that, where there are more Judges than one, if there be a difference of opinion among them, it shall not be necessary for any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court to sign the decree.

Judge dissenting from judgment need not sign decree.

Notes.

A respondent having died, a conditional order was, on the application of the appellant, made substituting the name of his alleged representative on the record. That order was cancelled upon the application of another person, who satisfied the Court that he and not the person whose name had been conditionally substituted was the real representative, and who asked to have his name put on the record. Held that the Court had no power to substitute the name of the second applicant upon the record, and no further application having been made by the appellant to complete the regard, the appeal was ordered to abate.—12 C. L. R., 45.

When an Appellate Court decrees an appeal and gives costs of its own Court, the costs of the first Court should be included in the decree.—16 W. R., 266.

An Appellate Court finally determining a suit is bound to decide by which of the parties before it the costs shall be borne; it is not at liberty to declare that the costs shall be borne by the unsuccessful party in a suit to be hereafter brought.—23 W. R., 89.

On second appeal the High Court awarded the plaintiff's claim with costs throughout; but the claim, as stated in the paper-book of appeal, differed from the claim as it had been stated in the plaint. Held that the award of the claim was to be understood as referring to the claim as stated in the plaint, and not as described in the paper book. Sections 579 and 587 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) do not require the claim to be stated in the decree, so as to make such statement a part of the decree itself.—I. L. R., 11 Bom. 177.

See I. L. R., 3 Madr. 1, noted under sec. 551 ; 11 Al. 267, noted under sec. 206.

Copies of judgment and decree to be furnished to parties.

580. Certified copies of the judgment and decree in appeal shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court and at their expense.

581. A copy of the judgment and of the decree, certified by the Appellate Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall be sent to the Court which passed the decree appealed against, and shall be filed with the original proceedings in the suit, and an entry of the judgment of the Appellate Court shall be made in the register of civil suits.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 10 Al. 389, noted under sec. 235.

582. The Appellate Court shall have, in appeals under this chapter, the same powers, and shall perform, as nearly as may be, the same duties, as are conferred and imposed by this Code on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted under Chapter V ; and in Chapter XXI, so far as may be, “the word ‘plaintiff’ shall be held to include a plaintiff-appellant or defendant appellant, the word ‘defendant’ a plaintiff-respondent or defendant-respondent, and the word ‘suit’ an appeal,”* in proceedings arising out of the death, marriage or insolvency of parties to an appeal.

The provisions hereinbefore contained, “including those of section 372A,”† shall apply to appeals under this chapter, so far as such provisions are applicable.

Notes.

An Appellate Court has no power, even by consent of parties, to refer a case to arbitration under the arbitration-sections of Act VIII. of 1859, which apply only to Courts of original jurisdiction ; nor is such power conferred on an Appellate Court by sec. 37, Act XXIII. of 1861.—12 B. L. R., 269.

Where the special appellant died after the High Court had referred for trial, to the Court below, an issue based upon objections taken by the respondent under sec. 348 of Act VIII of 1859, held that the appeal must abate, in accordance with sec. 102 of Act VIII. of 1859 and sec. 37 of Act XXIII. of 1861; and that the respondent cannot require that it should proceed, in order that he may have an opportunity of taking objections to the decree of the Court below. If the respondent desires to secure the right asking for a decision on his objections, he must file a separate appeal.—3 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 81.

* The words quoted have been substituted by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 58, for the words, “the words ‘plaintiff,’ ‘defendant,’ and ‘suit,’ shall be held to include an appellant, a respondent, and an appeal, respectively.”

† The words quoted have been inserted by the same Act and section.

Procedure analogous to that laid down in sec. 368 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X. of 1877) in respect of the death of a defendant must be applied in the case of the death of a respondent. Where, therefore, a respondent dies during the pendency of an appeal, it is for the appellant to take the initiative, and he is at liberty to select one or more persons to defend the appeal; and no person, other than the person so selected, has a right to force himself into the proceedings, and to claim to have his name entered as representative of the deceased respondent against the appellant's consent. Persons so introduced on the record may or may not be the real representatives of the deceased respondent; but the merits of their claim to be such, on the ground of any right or status, such as that of adoption, is immaterial to the determination of the appeal.—4 Bom. H. C. R., 654.

An error in the principle on which an account is taken is not the only ground on which a Court should inquire into the correctness of the report of a Commissioner appointed under sec. 181 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is competent to an Appellate Court, under the powers conferred by sec. 37 of Act XXIII. of 1861, to examine the accounts, even if no exception has been taken to them in the Court appointing the Commissioner. Madras rulings dissented from.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 149.

Where application was made for leave to withdraw a suit, with leave to bring a fresh one, it being contended that the fact of a notarial protest on inland bill's and of their being in the hands of the holder without signature, was proof of dishonour; and, further, that, defendant being a Hindu, there was no necessity for notice of dishonour, the Appellate Court, reversing the decision of the Court below, granted the application under the power given by sec. 37, Act XXIII. of 1861.—Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 99.

An Appellate Court has jurisdiction, under sec. 37, Act XXIII. of 1861, to separate misjoined suits, and to try them separately.—4 W. R., 109.

Under sec. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, a Court of appeal has the power, with the consent of the parties, of referring to arbitration matters in dispute in an appeal. Juggessur Dey v. Kritartho Moyee Dossee (12 B. L. R., 266) dissented from.—I. L. R., 3 Madr. 78.

Per MITTER, J. (GARTH, C. J., dubitante.)—Notwithstanding that sec. 582, Civil Procedure Code, does not expressly direct that the word "plaintiff" occurring in sec. 366 shall be held to include an "appellant," yet the power conferred by sec. 366 on the Court of original jurisdiction to award costs against the estate of a deceased plaintiff may, by analogy, be taken to be conferred on the Appellate Court. Lakshmibai v. Balkrishna (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 654) followed.—8 Cal. 440; 10 C. L. R., 437.

Under section 582 of the Civil Procedure Code an Appellate Court has power to refer a case before it to arbitration if the parties wish it to be referred. In the re petition of Sangaralingam Pillai, I. L. R., 3 Madr., 78, and Bhugwan Das Marwari v. Nund Lal Sein, I. L. R., 12 Calc., 173, followed.—18 Cal. 507.

“582A. If a memorandum of appeal or application for a review of judgment has been presented within the proper period of limitation, but is written upon paper insufficiently stamped and the insufficiency of the stamp was caused by a mistake on the part of the appellant or applicant as to the amount of the requisite stamp, the memorandum of appeal or application shall have the same effect and be as valid as if it had been properly stamped : Provided that such appeal or application shall be rejected unless the appellant or applicant supplies the requisite stamp within a reasonable time after the discovery of the mistake to be fixed by the Court.”*

583. When a party entitled to any benefit (by any of Execution of decree of restitution or otherwise) under a decree Appellate Court. passed in an appeal under this chapter desires to obtain execution of the same, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred ; and such Court shall proceed to execute the decree passed in appeal, according to the rules hereinbefore prescribed for the execution of decrees in suits.

Notes.

An application for execution of the decree of an Appellate Court should be made to the Court which passes the first decree in the suit, irrespective of any previous order referring the case for execution.—13 W. R., 27.

G obtained a decree against R for possession of a house, and in execution thereof obtained possession. On appeal, the decree was set aside by the High Court, whose decree did not direct that the appellant should be restored to possession and was silent as to mesne profits. Held that, with reference to sec. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code, R was entitled to recover possession of the property in execution of the High Court's decree, but that, with reference to the decision of the Full Bench of the Court in Ram Ghulam v. Dwarka Rai (I. L. R., 7 Al. 170), he could not, in execution of that decree, recover mesne-profits.—I. L. R., 7 Al. 197.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, a decree was passed for possession by redemption, on the plaintiff paying the sum of Rs. 43,625-7-0, the amount of the mortgage-debt. Prior to the institution of the suit, the defendant had taken proceedings in the Judge's Court to foreclose the mortgage, and the plaintiff paid the above-mentioned sum into that Court for the defendant, who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay Rs. 43,625-7-0 as the mortgage-debt, and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified, and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to Rs. 22,155. The plaintiff then took out execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest:—Held that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct restitution of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree, and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree and not by separate suit, being expressly provided for by sec. 583 :—Held also, that the decree-holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest. Roger v. The Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris (L. R., 3 P. C., 465) referred to. Ram Ghulam v. Dwarka Rai (I. L. R., 7 Al. 170) distinguished by MAHMOOD, J.—7 Al. 432.

A decree for pre-emption was passed conditionally upon payment by the decree-holder of Rs. 1,139, and in July 1880 the plaintiff paid this amount into Court, and it was drawn out by the defendant in Aug. 1881. Meanwhile, in July 1881, the High Court in second appeal raised the amount to be paid by the plaintiff to Rs. 2,400, but the plaintiff allowed the time limited for payment of the excess difference to elapse without paying it and the decree for pre-emption thereupon became dead. In May 1883, the plaintiff applied in the execution department for the refund of the deposit which had been drawn and retained by the defendant. This application was granted, and the defendant ordered to refund ; and this order was confirmed on appeal in January 1885, and by the High Court in second appeal in May 1885. Meanwhile the first Court had suspended execution of the order pending the result of the appeal, and in December 1884 removed the application temporarily from the “ pending ” list. In February 1885, the plaintiff applied for restitution of the amount deposited, asking for attachment and sale of property belonging to the defendant. This application was dismissed as barred by limitation. Held that this application was only a revival of the application of May 1883, which was within time. Held also that the plaintiff was, in the sense of sec. 583 “ a party entitled to a benefit by way of restitution under the decree ” of the High Court of July 1881 ; that it was necessary incident of that decree that he was entitled to restitution of the sum which he had paid as the sufficient price under the decree of the lower Appellate Court ; that he was competent under sec. 583 to remove the local Court to execute the appellate decree in this respect in his favour “ according to the rules prescribed for the execution of decree in suits ; ” that he did this in May 1883 by an application made according to law in the proper Court in the sense of art. 179 of the Limitation Act ; and that his present application to the same effect, being within three years from that application, was within time.—8 Al. 545.

CHAPTER XLII.

OF APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES.

584. Unless when otherwise provided by this Code or by any other law, from all decrees passed in appeal by any Court subordinate to a High Court, an appeal shall lie to the High Court on any of the following grounds (namely) :—

(a) the decision being contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law ;

(b) the decision having failed to determine some material issue of law or usage having the force of law ;

a substantial error or defect in the procedure as prescribed by this Code or any other law, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits.

An appeal may lie under this section from an appellate decree passed ex-parte.*

Notes.

Sec. 28 of Act XIX. of 1853 having been repealed by Act X. of 1861, a Judge has no jurisdiction under Act VIII. of 1859 to inflict a fine for the purpose of punishing a witness who absconds, or keeps out of the way, to avoid service of summons. By the words of sec. 365 of Act VIII of 1859, the Legislature must have intended to give the person aggrieved by any order of a Civil Court, imposing a fine on him as a punishment for keeping out of the way in order to avoid service of summons to attend as a witness, the right of appeal to the High Court, whether the order be strictly referable to sec. 160 of that Act or not.—1. B.L.R., (A. C.) 186 ; S. C. 10 W. R., 233.

In order to obtain relief under sec. 28 of Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must prove that the tenant holds under a grant made since 1st December 1790. By the word "decision" in sec. 372 of Act VIII of 1859 is meant the decree and judgment taken together, and not simply the decree unexplained by the judgment.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1.

A special appeal will lie from an order passed on appeal in relation to the execution of a decree.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol. App. 1 ; Marshall's Rep. 296 ; W. R., (F. B.) 83 ; 2 Hay's Rep. 293.

No special appeal will lie from the decision affirming or reversing an order under sec. 257; Act VIII of 1859, confirming a sale.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 917 ; 9 W. R., 218 ; 6 W. R., Mis., 119.

Where a decree is passed ex parte in an original suit, the defendant has no right to a special appeal, even though his appeal may have been entertained by the Civil Court.—1 M. H. C. R., 189.

A defendant complained under sec. 257 of the Civil Procedure Code of irregularity in conducting the sale of his lands taken in execution of a decree against him. The sale was confirmed by the Court of first instance, and the order was affirmed on appeal by the Civil Judge. Held that a special appeal to the High Court did not lie.—5 M. H. C. R., 213.

A special appeal lies to the High Court from an order passed under sec. 346 of the Civil Procedure Code, dismissing the appellant's regular appeal for non-appearance of the appellant in person or his pleader. Devappa Setti v. Ramanadha Bhatt (3 M. H. C. R., 109) commented on.—6 M. H. C. R., 1.

A special appeal lies from the decision of the Political Agent of the Southern Maratha Country passed in regular appeal.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 75.

The High Court has no power to entertain a special appeal from an order passed in regular appeal by a Judge setting aside a sale in execution, and reversing the order of a Munsif confirming such a sale.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 19.

* This clause has been added by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), sec. 54.

The circumstance that property was sold in execution of a decree below its proper value, and that few persons attended the sale, is not sufficient to vitiate the sale.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 19.

A suit had been dismissed by a lower Appellate Court on the ground that the Court of first instance had no jurisdiction to entertain such suit. An Act was subsequently passed declaring that all suits which had been similarly entertained without jurisdiction should be deemed to have been duly preferred. The plaintiff, after the passing of the Act, filed a special appeal, in which he urged that the decision of the Court of first instance was no longer illegal, and that the suits should be heard by the lower Appellate Court on its merits. Held (per TURNER, J.) that, as at the time the lower Appellate Court gave the decision from which the special appeal was presented the Act had not been passed, it must be held that its judgment was correct, and that a new law passed since the decision could not make that decision wrong, which was and still is, with reference to the law then in force, right, and that the appeal should be dismissed. Held (per SPANKLE, J.) that a special appeal would lie, the decision being contrary to a law in force at the time that the special appeal was instituted, which law, Court was bound to enforce.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 106.

A special appeal will lie from an order rejecting an application, under the provisions of sec. 347 of Act VIII of 1859, for the re-admission of an appeal dismissed for default of prosecution, if it appears that the Court below has not exercised the discretion which it possessed under the section. The lower Appellate Court, without enquiry, and without recording any reasons, summarily refused an application under sec. 347. The order of refusal was set aside in special appeal, and the application remanded for proper consideration and disposal.—6 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 222.

A special appeal will not lie against an order of the Judge refusing to admit a regular appeal presented after the expiration of the time provided for preferring appeals.—3 Agra H. C. R., 301.

A special appeal did not lie from an order of remand under sec. 354, Civil Procedure Code.—23 Agra H. C. R., 368 ; S. C. Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 161.

Under secs. 584 and 585 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, a second appeal is confined to matters of law, usage having the force of law, or substantial defect in procedure. On an appeal to the Judicial Commissioner from a decree given on first appeal by an Appellate Court, and maintaining a finding of fact by the Original Court, the only questions were—(1) whether secondary evidence had been properly admitted on a case that had arisen for its admission ; and (2) whether the evidence offered constituted secondary evidence of the matter in dispute, which was the making of a document. Held that (no special leave to appeal from the judgment of the Commissioner, the first Appellate Court, having been applied for) the facts were not open to decision on this appeal ; this Committee could only do what the Judicial Commissioner on second appeal, under the above sections, could have done ; and that, as the case stood, they were bound by the findings of fact of the first Appellate Court.—I. L. R., 16 Cal. 753.

An order dismissing an appeal as being presented out of time under sec. 4 of the Limitation Act, 1877, is a “decree passed in appeal” within the meaning of sec. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. A second appeal will therefore lie from such order.—12 Cal. 30.

The fact that the judgment of an Appellate Court is not drawn up in the manner prescribed by sec. 574 of the Code is no ground for a second appeal under sec. 584 unless it can be shown that the judgment has failed to determine any material issue of law.—13 Cal. 199.

It is a question of law for the Court to decide on second appeal whether there is evidence before the Court, on which a Court could properly arrive at any given conclusion of fact.—12 Cal. 22

When a question of costs is purely in the discretion of the lower Court no appeal will lie, but when a matter of principle is involved an appeal will lie. Where A was sued upon the allegation that he had instigated his co-defendant B to refuse to deliver up a document, for the recovery of which the suit was brought, and where no relief was prayed as against A, but the lower Courts awarded a decree in favour of the plaintiff directing A to pay half the costs of suits, held that the question was one of principle, and that a second appeal lay to the High Court against the decree directing A to pay such costs.—12 Cal. 179.

The Court of first instance dismissed the suit upon the ground that the right, which it was brought to establish, had been taken away by a compromise, entered into by a guardian on behalf of an infant party to former proceedings. This was reversed by the first Appellate Court, which decreed the claim, holding it unaffected by the compromise, on the ground that the latter was, in fact, contrary to the interests of the infant. The High Court, on a second appeal, set aside this finding there having been no proof that the compromise was to the infant's detriment, and affirmed the decree of the first Court. Held, that the High Court rightly reversed the decree of the first Appellate Court; the above finding, without any evidence to support it, being a substantial error in the proceedings, and good ground of second appeal within the meaning of sec. 584, sub-section (c), of the Civil Procedure Code.—17 Cal. 875.

Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C. J.,) dissenting that, under sec. 584 (c), of the Civil Procedure Code it is competent for the High Court to entertain pleas in second appeals which impeach the findings of fact recorded by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that such findings are conjectural, that they ignore the evidence, and that the Court has given no reasons for the conclusions at which it arrived. Where a lower Appellate Court has drawn strained or unreasonable conclusions from the evidence, or has discredited or disbelieved witnesses or documentary proof upon capricious or unsustainable grounds, or has stated no intelligible reasons for arriving at its findings of facts, the High Court may take notice of all such matters in second appeal. Futtehma Begum v. Mahomed Ausur (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 309). Assanullah v. Hafiz Mahomed Ali (I. L. R., 10 Cal. 193), and Lal Mahomed Behari v. Shoila Bewa (11 Cal. L. Rep., 104), referred to. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—The High Court is not at liberty in second appeal to look into the evidence in the cause for the purpose of ascertaining whether the lower Courts have found the facts correctly, inasmuch as no question of fact is included in the grounds of appeal allowed by sec. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, and it would seem that the intention of the Legislature was that in small causes the findings of the lower Courts on questions of fact should be absolutely final. By "specified law" in clause (a) of sec. 584 is meant the statute law, and by "usage having the force of law" the common or customary law of the country or community, and the clause is confined to cases in which the lower Appellate Courts have either misconstrued a statute or written document, or have come to a wrong conclusion as to what is the customary law of the country or community with reference to questions at issue between the parties. Clause (b) can only refer to mistakes in law, and does not extend the operation of clause (a). The term "procedure" in clause (c) means the practice followed by the Courts in the trial of cases, and cannot be construed as including the mental process by which a Court comes to a conclusion upon a question of fact. Per MAHMOOD J. That the Legislature, by framing sec. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code, intended to guard against such failure of justice as might arise from the defective or arbitrary exercise of the extensive powers possessed by the Court of first appeal in cases which, with reference to their nature, would be proper subjects of second appeal, and a judgment of a Court of first appeal which falls short of due compliance with the various clauses of sec. 574 is essentially defective, and may properly be made the subject of complaint in second appeal under sec. 584. Ramnarain v. Bhawanidin (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 104) and Sheoamber Singh v. Lallu Singh (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 158) referred to. The word "procedure" in clause (c) of sec. 584 must be understood in its most generic sense, including all the rules contained in the Civil Procedure Code or any other law regulating the investigation of cases by the Civil Courts. When the Court of first appeal, after having entered into the merits of the case, has considered the evidence, and adjudicated upon the merits in the manner required by sec. 574, the mere circumstance that the conclusions at which the Court has arrived are erroneous or opposed to the weight of evidence, will not justify interference in second appeal, even though such conclusions proceed upon an improper conception of the exact effect and hearing of the case upon the merits. On the other hand, when the Court of first appeal, while adjudicating with due compliance with the provisions of sec. 574, arrives at conclusions upon the merits ignoring any steps essential for justifying those conclusions, or where such conclusions are based upon evidence inadmissible by law, or proceed upon an erroneous view of the legal effect of any material part of the evidence, or are arrived at under a misconception either of the rules of evidence or of any other law, such conclusions, though they purport to be distinct findings of fact, would lay the judgment of the lower Appellate Court open to second appeal under cl. (c) of sec. 584, so long as the error was substantial enough to have possibly affected the justice of the case upon the merits.—7 Al. 649.

For the purposes of an appeal, whether from a decree in a regular suit or from an order passed in execution of such decree, the pecuniary test of jurisdiction is the valuation of the original suit in which the decree was passed, and not merely the actual amount affected by the order sought to be appealed. Therefore where execution was applied for in the Munsif's Court in respect of a sum of Rs. 422-14-0, the value of the matter in dispute in the original suit (which of was the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes) having been above Rs. 500, and the Munsif's order having been upheld in appeal by the District Judge, revision of both orders was applied for in the High Court. Held that no proceedings by way of revision could be taken, because a second appeal would lie from the order of the District Judge.—12 Al. 581.

On second appeal by a landlord against a decree of a District Judge, who stated in his Judgment that, "though the tenant admitted the execution of the Muchalka, it was not shown that the dispensed with the patta," no objection was taken in the memorandum of appeal that the Muchalka, which contained a statement that no patta was necessary, had been neglected or misconstrued. The High Court ordered that the Judge be asked to take the postscript into his consideration and submit a revised finding.—10 Madr. 363.

The limitation to the power of the Appellate Court in hearing a second appeal under secs. 585 and 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, must be attended to, and the appellant cannot be allowed to question the finding of the first Appellate Court on a question of fact.—17 Cal. 291.

In a suit for rent at the rate of Rs. 22-2 per annum the defence was that the yearly rent was not Rs. 22-2, but Rs. 18-10-6, and that the difference was made up of certain illegal cesses, such as sarak, neg, khuruch, which had been paid for a long time with the rent and without specification in the rent receipts. Both the lower Courts found that Rs. 18-10-6 was the defendant's asul jama. Held by the Full Bench upon a review of the history of abwabs:—That the amounts sued for under the head of sarak, neg, and khuruch were abwabs, and were therefore not recoverable, and that all additions to the actual rent under the denomination of abwabs, are illegal, and any agreement to pay them is void. Pudma Nund Singh v. Baij Nath Singh, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 828, dissented from. Per Fetheram, C. J.—The law, whether under the Regulations, of the Bengal Tenancy Act, or as laid down by the Privy Council in Tilukdhari Singh v. Chultan Mahton, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 131; L. R., 16 I. A., 152, is the same, namely, that no imposition under any name whatever shall be recovered from the tenant for or on account of the occupation or tenure of the land beyond the sum which had been fixed for rent, whether that sum has been paid by agreement or by judicial determination between the landlord and the tenant. Any contract, whether express or implied, to pay anything beyond that sum, under any name whatever, for or in respect of the occupation of the land cannot be enforced. The case of Pudma Nund Singh v. Baij Nath Singh (1) has been overruled by the Privy Council in Tilukdhari Singh v. Chultan Mahton (2) Per Ghose, J.—If in any given case the Court finds that any particular sum specified in the lease, or agreed to be paid, is a lawful consideration for the use and occupation of any land, that is to say if it is really part of the rent although not described as such, the court would be justified in holding that it is not an abwab and is recoverable by the landlord. Pudma Nund Singh v. Baij Nath Singh, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 828, explained.—17 Cal. 726.

Under the Code no second appeal will lie, except on the grounds specified in section 584. There is no jurisdiction to entertain a second appeal on the ground of an erroneous finding of fact, however gross or inexcusable the error may seem to be. Where there is no error or defect in the procedure, the finding of the first Appellate Court upon a question of fact is final, if that Court had before it evidence proper for its consideration in support of the finding. Anangamanjari Chowdhurani v. Tripura Sundari Chowdhurani L. R. 14 I. A., 101; I. L. R., 14 Cal. 740, and Pertab Chunder Ghose v. Mohendra Purkait, L. R. 16 I. A., 233; I. L. R., 17 Cal. 291, referred to and followed. Futtehma Begum v. Mohamed Ausur. I. L. R., 9 Cal. 309, and Nivath Singh v. Bhikki Singh, I. L. R., 7 Al. 649, overruled.—18 Cal. 23.

A defendant who obtains a judgment in his favour in the Court of first instance, and who, on appeal by the plaintiff, does not appear at the hearing of the appeal or present a petition for a re-hearing, may, under Act X of 1877, present a second appeal against the decree of the lower Appellate Court.—2 Madr. 75.

An order on appeal from a decree in an original suit of the nature cognizable in Mofussal Courts of Small Causes, under sec. 562 of Act X of 1877, remanding the suit for re-trial, is appealable, sec. 586 of Act X of 1877 notwithstanding, as that section applies to appeals from appellate decrees, and not to appeals from orders.—3 Al. 18.

Where the lower Appellate Court has clearly misapprehended what the evidence before it was, and has thus been led to discard or not give sufficient weight to important evidence, and to give weight to other evidence to which it is not entitled, and has thus been led, not into any mere incidental mistake, but totally to misconceive the case, the High Court will interfere in second appeal, though it is not the ordinary course of procedure for it to interfere in such cases with any findings of facts which have been arrived at by the lower Appellate Court. In a suit on a mortgage-bond the plaintiffs are entitled to recover the agreed rate of interest without any deduction.—9 Cal. 309.

No Court of second appeal can entertain an appeal upon any question as to the soundness of findings of fact by the Court of first appeal; and if there is evidence to be considered, the decision of that Court, however unsatisfactory it might be, if examined, must stand final. The plaintiff to make good his claim against the estate of his deceased debtor, relied upon a document purporting to have been signed by the latter's widow, since then also deceased. The Court of first appeal, however, found that there had been no actual execution of the instrument by the widow, and dismissed the suit. The burden of proving due execution by the widow, lay upon the plaintiff, who relied upon it as binding the estate which she represented [a matter commented on in Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur Singh]. After the decision of the second Court no further appeal on the question of fact was allowable. 19 Cal.—249.

A suit to redeem a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands was instituted in the Munsif's Court. After the suit had been admitted, and the parties called on to produce evidence, the Munsif ordered the plaint in the suit to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court, on the ground that the suit should have been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the value of the property in suit being beyond the jurisdiction of a Munsif. Held that, under Act VIII of 1859, the Munsif's order was appealable to the lower Appellate Court, and, under Act X of 1877, the lower Appellate Court's order to the High Court. Where the question in dispute in such a suit is not only whether the property has been redeemed out of the usufruct, but whether the property and the right to redeem belongs to the plaintiff, and the value of the property exceeds Rs. 1,000 such suit is not cognizable by a Munsif.—1 Al. 620.

The holder of a decree for money applied for the attachment, in the execution of decree, of certain moneys deposited in Court to the credit of the judgment-debtor. On the 4th June 1877, the Court of first instance refused the attachment on the ground that the decree directed the sale of certain immoveable property for its satisfaction, and awarded no other relief. The order of the Court of first instance was affirmed by the lower Appellate Court on the 4th August 1877. Act X of 1877, repealing Act VIII of 1859, and Act XXIII of 1861, came into force on 1st October 1877. On 13th November 1877, the decree-holder applied to the High Court for the admission of a second appeal from the order of the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that the decree had been misconstrued:—Held that an appeal under the repealed Act VIII of 1859 was admissible under Act I of 1868, sec. 6, and that the order of the lower Appellate Court was appealable under Act X of 1877, sec. 584. Thakur Prasad v. Ashan Ali, I. L. R., 1 Al. 668. See also Runjit Sing and others v. Meherban Koer, I. L. R., 3 Cal. 662. Murli Dhar v. Parsotam Dass and another, I. L. R., 2 Al. 91: Hurbuns Sahai and others v. Bhairo Pershad Singh and others, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 259. But see Uda Begam v. Imam-ud-din, I. L. R., 2 Al. 74.

See I. L. R., 6 Cal. 2063 Al. (F. B.) 152, noted undersec. 540; 9 Al. 26, noted under sec. 564; 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623.

Second appeal on no other grounds. 585. No second appeal shall lie except on the grounds mentioned in section 584.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 16 Cal. 753, 17 Cal. 291 & 19 Cal. 249, noted under sec. 584.

586. No second appeal shall lie in any suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes, when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed five hundred rupees.

Notes.

A suit was brought for recovery of Rs. 133-7-10 for mesne-profits from the defendant in respect of certain properties covered by a decree which was passed in favour of the plaintiff's ancestor for the period during which he was out of possession. In special appeal it was objected by the respondent that, under sec. 27, of Act XXIII. of 1861, a special appeal would not lie, because the damage or demand for which the suit was originally instituted did not exceed Rs. 500. Per Macpherson, J. (Bayley, J., concurring).—I think that the contention is sound, and that the suit is cognizable by a Small Cause Court: and therefore no special appeal will lie. The suit is for mesne-profits only; no question of title or right arising in it. That being so, it is a suit for damages within the meaning of sec. 6 of Act XI. of 1865, and is cognizable by a Small Causes Court. The appeal is dismissed with costs—2 B. L. R., S. N., 13; 10 W. R., 375.

The widow and heiress of a deceased person sued the defendants to recover personal property, valued at Rs. 200, said to have been taken by them from deceased in his lifetime. Held that a special appeal was barred by sec. 27 of Act XXIII. of 1861.—2 B. L. R., App. 13; 11 W. R., 93.

In a suit for recovery of a sum of money less than Rs. 500, as money paid in excess of rent due, held that the suit being cognizable by the Court of Small Causes under sec. 6, Act XI. of 1865, no special appeal lay to the High Court.—2 B. L. R., (A. C.) 172; S. C. 11 W. R., 30.

A suit to recover a share of malikana, which the defendant had realized from the Collector, is a suit for recovery of a sum of money which has been taken away by the defendants to the damage of the plaintiff, and is therefore cognizable by the Small Cause Court; and under sec. 26, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lies from a judgment passed in appeal in such a suit.—3 B. L. R., App. 96, S. C. 12 W. R., 29.

A sum of money was stolen from the Judge's Court of Tipperah while A was the nazir. A paid the amount to Government, and died, leaving B his heir. B sued Government for recovery of the amount paid by A, on the ground that, as there was no negligence of A, and as the amount was under the custody of the guards of Government at the time of the theft, A was not responsible for the loss thereof. Held the suit was cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and, therefore, under sec. 27, Act XXIII, of 1861, no special appeal lay to the High Court.—4 B. L. R., App. 46.

Suits for defamation of character where there has not been any actual pecuniary loss, are not, under cl. 3, sec. 6, Act XI of 1865, cognizable by the Small Cause Courts.—4 B. L. R., App. 59; 13 W. R., 118.

When the subject-matter of an award is as to its nature and value cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, no special appeal will lie to the High Court against the decree of an ordinary Civil Court in respect of such award.—4 B. L. R., App. 82; 13 W. R., 233.

In a suit cognizable by the Small Cause Court, and in which no special appeal lies to the High Court under sec. 13, Act XXIII. of 1861, the High Court exercised their extraordinary powers, and dismissed the suit.—5 B. L. R., App. 91.

In a suit for recovery a sum of money below Rs. 500, the parties entered into a compromise, whereby the defendant made over a certain piece of land in lieu of the money claimed, and a decree was passed accordingly. In execution of the decree, disputes arose between the parties. Upon special appeal by the judgment-debtor to the High Court, held that, under sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lay to the High Court.—6 B. L. R., App. 82; 15 W. R., 65.

No special appeal lies from a regular appeal from an order made in execution of a decree passed in a suit of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, though the suit was instituted before the passing of Act XLIII of 1860.—12 B. L. R., 261; 20 W. R., 421.

A suit brought to enforce a debt or demand not exceeding Rs. 500, which is secured upon, and must in law be primarily satisfied out of, immoveable property, is not a suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes under sec. 27 of Act XXIII. of 1861, so as to exclude a right to special appeal. This is so, though the plaint on the face of it seeks recovery in the alternative, either from the mortgagor personally, or from the mortgaged property.—2 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 1.

A Hindu widow, who had been supported by her father-in-law after his death, sued his eldest son for maintenance, and obtained a decree for Rs. 150, notwithstanding the defendant's objection that, being one of three brothers who inherited their father's estate, he was not solely liable for the maintenance claimed. Held that, as this was a Small Cause Court suit, an appeal did not lie. The maintenance of a widow is by Hindu law a charge upon the whole estate, and therefore upon every part thereof. The defendant might have the question raised by him decided by suing his brothers for contribution.—4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 73; 4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 75.

Where in a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, in order to determine the question at issue between the parties, it was necessary for the Court of Appeal in the first instance to determine a question of title to land (which had been raised by the Munsif), held that a special appeal lay to the High Court, though the Court below had omitted to determine such question of title.—5 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 57.

In suits for arrears of rent of land, when the claim is under Rs. 500, a special appeal lies to the High Court, such claims not being generally cognizable by Courts of Small Causes. For the purpose of recovering rent from a tenant, the mrugsal year ends on the 31st of July.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 12.

A suit for the recovery of mesne-profits (not amounting to Rs. 500) is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. A special appeal does not lie in such a suit.—8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 96.

The expression “or former year” in Reg. XVII. of 1827, sec. 31, cl. 3, does not mean the year immediately preceding the current year, but any previous year, and a suit for rent could have been brought before a revenue-officer when Act XI. of 1865 was passed, and not before the Small Cause Courts constituted by that Act. A special appeal lay in a suit of this nature. Payment of rent by the lessee to one of several joint lessors, and at his request, discharges the debt as to all; as also payment made at his request to one of several joint creditors. Where one of several joint creditors, who has no rights separate from those of the others, refuses to join in the suit as plaintiff, and there is no averment of collusion on his part with the defendant, he cannot rightly be joined as a defendant.—11 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 106.

A suit to recover certain cash, and the value of certain grain, which defendants had persuaded plaintiff to pay them, engaging that the lambardar would allow the same in his account (as part payment of rent), but which such lambardar refused to do, is practically a suit for damages, and the amount in question being cognizable by a Small Cause Court, no special appeal can be entertained.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 111.

A stone sugar-mill is moveable or personal, as contradistinguished from immoveable property.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 15.

Where the plaintiff claimed a sum of money under the name of a zemin-dari cess, but in point, of fact what was claimed was claimed on account of the use of land, held that such a suit being a suit of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, a special appeal would not lie.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 56.

A suit brought to recover the value of a tree destroyed by the defendants, and for the value of fish taken from the plaintiff's tank (the claim being under Rs. 500) is cognizable by a Small Cause Court.—5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 24.

G and R referred to arbitration disputes between them regarding the partition of their paternal estate. The concluding portion of the award ran as follows: “Both parties shall jointly satisfy the debts on the creditors demanding payment, which debts are joint, and have here under been declared payable by both parties. Should one party neglect to pay or show carelessness in the matter, and should the other be obliged to pay the whole amount of any such debts, the latter shall be competent to realize from the former the portion of the debt paid on his account, together with costs and interest, by the enforcement of this award, and shall also be entitled to recover the amount by suit in Court. Both parties shall act up to this award in its entirety. The sum of Rs. 338.0-9, which has been found due and payable by Gauri Sahai to Ram Sahai as per account showing the mutual dealings between the parties, shall be made good as follows, i. e., Gauri Sahai shall pay to Ram Sahai the whole amount of Rs. 338-0-9 by the middle of the month of Pous 1276 Fasli, either in a lump-sum or by instalments, and in case of non-payment within the said period he shall be charged with interest at the rate of one per cent. up to the day of payment." R sued to recover from G. the money found to be due and payable to him under the award. G admitted the claim, but desired to set-off half the amount of certain debts, which were payable under the award by the parties jointly, and which he alone had satisfied. The lower Appellate Court deducted from the claim items of the demand admitted by R, but refused to determine G's right to set off the items which R disputed, on the ground that they could be more conveniently enquired into in a separate suit. It was held that sec. 27 of Act XXIII. of 1861 was no bar to the hearing of a special appeal. It was also held (per Stuart, C. J., Spankie, J., dissenting) that G was entitled to demand a set-off, and that the lower Appellate Court should have enquired into the disputed items of the demand, and not have referred G to a separate suit in respect of those items.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 157.

Plaintiff, a talookdar, sued her late husband's agent for the delivery up of certain account papers and documents, for an account of his agency, and, in default of account, for Rs. 500 as damages. Held that the suit was of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and that consequently no special appeal would lie.—2 C. L. R., 17.

In applications for review of judgments of Courts of Small Causes constituted under Act XI of 1865, the procedure laid down in the rules contained in ch. 42 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) is to be strictly followed, without reference to the Procedure relating to new trials under sec. 21 of Act XI of 1865.—5 C. L. R., 559.

Held that the suit to recover Rs. 200 paid in respect of the purchase of land which was not completed was a suit of the description cognizable by the Small Cause Court, and a special appeal would not lie.—1 Agra H. C. R., 275.

Held that a suit for division of debts due to the deceased's estate (the sum being ascertained) was cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and no special appeal lay to the High Court.—2 Agra H. C. R., 234.

Where a suit was brought for the recovery of the value of the fruit of certain mango trees alleged to have been misappropriated by the defendants, held that, as the suit was of the nature of a suit cognizable by Courts of Small Causes, a special appeal would not lie.—3 Agra H. C. R., 290; S. C. Agra H. C. R., (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 153.

When the damages claimed in a suit exceeded Rs. 500, and the Court gave the plaintiff less than Rs. 500 damages, held that the right of appeal was not taken away by Act XXIII of 1851, sec. 27.—1 Ind. Jur., N. S. 356; 6 W. R., 152.

A suit for damages for an amount not exceeding rupees 500 is within the competency of a Small Cause Court to decide, notwithstanding that it involves an inquiry into a question of right. No special appeal lies in such a case.—W. R., 1864, 237; 8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 23.

In a suit by a lessee upon a contract for a refund of excess revenue remitted by Government, a special appeal is not admissible if the amount claimed be under Rs. 500.—W. R., 1864, 297.

No special appeal lies in a suit for damages for breach of a private arrangement by which the parties agree to control the terms of a decree, when the amount is within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court.—W. R., 1864, 346.

A suit for damages for detention of materials of a house involves no question of title. Such a suit is cognizable by a Small Cause Court, if under Rs. 500, and a special appeal was barred by sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861.—1 W. R., 35.

A suit lies in a Small Cause Court by a co-sharer to recover the price of a share of personal property alienated by another co-sharer.—2 W. R., 87.

No special appeal lay under sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, for damages for inadequate sale of a decree.—5 W. R., 215.

Under sec. 3, Act XLII of 1860, a suit for damages of any kind below Rs. 500 (e. g., a suit for damages for not cutting through a bund whereby plaintiff's crops were destroyed in consequence of accumulation of water) was cognizable by a Small Cause Court; and, consequently, under sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal lay in such a case.—6 W. R., 7.

A suit (valued at Rs. 500) for specific performance of a contract is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court, consequently no special appeal will lie in such a case.—6 W. R., 322.

A claim for money below Rs. 500 paid as revenue by one partner in an estate on account of another, in order to save the whole estate from sale, arise under an implied contract between them, and therefore is cognizable by a Small Cause Court. No special appeal lay in such a case under sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861.—6 W. R., 325.

Sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, which barred a special appeal in suits below Rs. 500, as being of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, did not apply to a case in which the lower Appellate Court had wrongly decided that the case was not cognizable by any Civil Court.—7 W. R., 41.

A special appeal was held not to lie in a case for damages for value of crops misappropriated under Rs. 500 cognizable by a Small Cause Court, notwithstanding that the case involved a question of title.—7 W. R., 73; 10 W. R., 272.

A suit to establish a surety's liability on account of arrears of rent due from a putnidar where the non-payment of the rent by the putnidar would have to be established is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court; and consequently a special appeal was not barred in such a case by sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1851.—8 W. R., 111.

Sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, barred a special appeal in execution proceedings arising out of decisions passed on regular appeal in suits of a nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes.—8 W. R., 112; 12 W. R., 86.

A case in which a zemindar sues a putnidar for dak expenses, according to his putni jumma, is of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and as such, by sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861, no special appeal will lie.—8 W. R., 517; 9 W. R., 518.

A suit by a co-sharer to recover from the defendant collections which are in his charge, and which he is under agreement to pay to the other co-sharers, is a suit for dues under a contract, and if less than Rs. 500 is cognizable by a Small Cause Court.—10 W. R., 79.

No special appeal lies in a suit for damages below Rs. 500, whether the damages are on account of moveable or immoveable property.—11 W. R., 369.

A suit for damages not exceeding Rs. 500 on account partly for injury to reputation and partly for loss in business and professional position, was held to come within the provisions of sec. 6, Act XI of 1865, and was not open to special appeal.—15 W. R., 179.

When a suit is of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, there is no right of special appeal although a question of title is incidentally raised; the finding of the Small Cause Court not being conclusive, and being only for the purpose of determining the suit brought in that Court.—18 W. R., 104.

In a suit to recover the balance, unaccounted for, of the plaintiff's money in the hands of the defendant, who had been employed as a law-agent on a salary to conduct and look after the plaintiff's law-suits, and to recover and disburse moneys connected with such suits, it was held that the case might be brought under the terms "claim for money due under a contract" in Act XI of 1865, sec. 6, and that, therefore, under Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 27, a special appeal would not lie.—20 W. R., 4.

A suit to recover possession of a share of a boat by establishment of the plaintiffs' right is a suit for personal property within the meaning of Act XI of 1865, sec. 6, and therefore no special appeal lies in such a case under Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 27.—2 W. R., 413.

Where, on an adjusted account between two parties, one claims from the other some money and some grain which are shown to be due to him, and asks in effect that they may be made over to him, the suit is not a suit for a declaratory decree, and a special appeal does not lie in such a suit to the High Court under sec. 27, Act XXIII of 1861.—25 W. R., 234.

No second appeal lies from an order passed in execution of a decree in suit of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court where the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 500.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 116.

In a suit upon a bond executed by a Hindu, the plaintiff made the debtor's sons defendants along with their father, and a decree was passed against the father and sons jointly for payment of the debt. Held by the Full Bench that the suit as against the sons was not a suit of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes within the meaning of sec. 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held further by the Divisional Bench that the decree against the sons was bad.—12 Madr. 139.

The plaintiff, in a suit for damages laid at Rs. 200, claimed Rs. 50 on account of medical expenses caused by an assault committed on him by the defendants, Rs. 50 as the costs of a criminal prosecution which he had brought against them, and Rs. 100 for injury to his reputation and feelings. Held that, inasmuch as part of the claim related to alleged actual pecuniary damage resulting from an alleged personal injury, the whole suit was, with reference to sec. 6, pro. 3, of the Mofussil Small Cause Courts Act (XI of 1865), of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and that, under sec. 586 of the Civil Procedure Code, no second appeal in such suit would lie. Gunga Narain Moytro v. Gudadhar Chowdhry (13 W. R., 434) referred to.—10 Al. 49.

For the purpose of determining whether a second appeal lies or is prohibited by sec. 586 of the Civil Procedure Code, what must be looked at is not the shape in which the case comes up to the High Court, but the shape in which the suit was originally instituted in the Court of first instance.—11 Al. 13.

A suit of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court does not cease to be so within the meaning of a Civil Procedure Code, sec. 586, because the Court in which it was instituted as a small cause suit returned the plaint to be filed on the regular side under Provincial Small Cause Courts

Act, sec. 23, on the ground that the suit involved questions of title.—15 Madr. 98.

A suit for money due on a contract within the meaning of Act VI of 1865, sec. 6, is none the less cognizable by a Small Cause Court, because it may be necessary to go into the accounts of both parties to see whether the amount claimed is really due or not—Dyebukee Nundun Sen and another v. Mudhoo Mutty Goopta and another, I. L. R., 1 Cal. 123 ; 24 W. R., 478. And therefore no second appeal lies in such a suit under Act X of 1877, sec. 586.—6 Cal. 284.

A suit by one decree-holder against another for the money received by the latter on a division between them of the proceeds of an execution-sale as his share of such proceeds under the order of the Court executing the decree is a suit of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes, and consequently, where the amount of such money does not exceed five hundred rupees, no second appeal lies in such suit.—3 Al. 59.

A suit by a landholder against a tenant for Rs. 130, being the value of a moiety of the produce of a grove of mangoe trees held by such tenant, such amount being claimed in virtue of an agreement recorded in the wajib-ul-arz, and not in virtue of any custom or right, is not cognizable in Revenue Court, but is cognizable in a Court of Small Causes, and consequently no second appeal in the suit will lie.—3 Al. 37.

The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant Rs. 71-3-3, alleging that the defendant had illegally levied the money on the plaintiff's land on account of enhanced summary settlement and local-fund cess. The defendant, being a minor, was represented by the Collector as his administrator. The Assistant Judge who tried the suit awarded the plaintiff's claim. The District Judge, in appeal, reduced the amount of the plaintiff's claim to Rs. 38-4-9, but upheld the decree of the first Court in other respects. The defendant thereupon filed a second appeal in the High Court. Held that, under the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sec. 586, no second appeal lay, as the suit was one cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Act X of 1876, sec. 15, remove suits to which the Collector is a party from the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court; but the nature of the suit remains unaltered.—7 Bom. 100.

A was the proprietor of nine-annas of a mauza, B and his family of one-anna, and C and others of the remaining six annas. B and his family having occupied and enjoyed, to the exclusion of their co-shareholders, fifty-four bighas of the mauza, failed to pay any rent in respect of such occupation. A instituted a suit against them (making C and the other holders of the six annas share defendants to the suit) to recover the sum of Rs. 412-8 as the sum justly due to him after making all proper deductions, including as well as the share of the rent of the forty-four bighas to which the six annas share-holders were entitled to retain as proprietors of a one-anna share. Held that the facts showed an implied contract on the part of B and his family to pay to their co-shareholders whatever, upon taking an account, should appear to be due to them; and that, inasmuch as the total amount sought to be recovered in the suit by A did not exceed 500 rupees, the suit was one which might have been brought in a Small Cause Court, and therefore the plaintiff had no right of second appeal to the High Court under sec. 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Cal. 284; 7 C. L. R., 94.

See I. L. R., 7 Bom. 292 & 10 Cal. 523, noted under sec. 562; 3 Al. 18 & 12 Al. 581, noted under sec. 584; 3 Madr. 192, noted under sec. 13; 13 Madr.

1, noted under sec. 253; 12 Al. 579, noted under sec. 223; 3 Al. 66, noted under sec. 70 of the Contract Act; 15 Madr. 298, noted under sched. II, cl. 31 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.

587. The provisions contained in Chapter XLI shall apply, as far as may be, to appeals under this chapter, and to the execution of decrees passed in such appeals.

Notes.

Where an issue has been directed, and the finding and evidence returned, a special appellant cannot take an objection going to the merits which otherwise would not properly be open upon special appeal. Sec. 25 of Act XXIII of 1861 gives no rights inconsistent with sec. 372 of Act VIII of 1859.—1 M. H. C. R., 250.

Sec. 374 leaves it in the discretion of the Court to admit any new ground of appeal arising out of the proceedings, though it may have been omitted in the petition of special appeal.—5 W. R., 147.

See I. L. R., 7 Madr. 52, noted under sec. 565; 10 Cal. 932, noted under sec. 574; 9 Al. 26, noted under sec. 564; 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623; 11 Bom. 177 noted under sec. 579; 10 Al. 223, noted under sec.

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF APPEALS FROM ORDERS.

588. An appeal shall lie from the following orders under this Code, and from no other such orders:—

Orders appealable.

- (1) orders under section 20, staying proceedings in a suit;
- (2) orders under section 32, striking out or adding the name of any person as plaintiff or defendant;
- (3) orders under section 36 or section 66, directing that a party shall appear in person;
- (4) orders under section 44, adding a cause of action;
- (5) orders under section 47, excluding a cause of action;
- (6) orders returning plaints for amendment or to be presented to the proper Court;
- (7) orders under section 111, setting-off, or refusing to set-off, one debt against another;
- (8) orders rejecting applications under section 103 (in cases open to appeal) for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit;
- (9) orders rejecting applications under section 108 “for”* an order to set aside a decree ex parte;

* In this clause, the word “for” has been substituted for the word “or” by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 55.

- (10) orders under sections 113, 120, and 177 ;
- (11) orders under section 116 or section 245, rejecting, or returning for amendment, written statements or applications for execution of decrees ;
- (12) orders under sections 143 and 145, directing anything to be impounded ;
- (13) orders under section 162, for the attachment and sale of moveable property ;
- (14) orders under section 168, for attachment of property, and orders under section 170, for the sale of attached property ;
- (15) orders under section 261, as to objections to draft-conveyances or draft-endorsements ;
- (16) orders under section 294, "and orders under"*section 312 or section 313, for confirming, or setting aside, or refusing to set aside, a sale of immoveable property ;
- (17) orders in insolvency-matters, under section 351, section 352, section 353, or section 357 ;
- (18) orders under section 366, paragraph two, section 367, or section 368 ;
- (19) orders rejecting applications under section 370 for dismissal of a suit ;
- (20) orders under section 371, refusing to set aside the abatement or dismissal of a suit ;
- (21) orders disallowing objections under section 372 ;
- (22) orders under section 454, section 455, or section 458, directing a next friend or guardian for the suit to pay costs ;
- (23) orders interpleade suits under section 473, clause (a), (b), or (d), section 475, or section 476 ;
- (24) orders under section 479, section 480, section 485, section 492, section 493, section 496, section 497, section 502, or section 503 ;
- (25) orders under section 514, superseding an arbitration ;
- (26) orders under section 518, modifying an award ;
- (27) orders of refusal under section 558 to re-admit, or under section 560 to re-hear, an appeal ;
- (28) orders under section 562, remanding a case ;
- (29) orders under any of the provisions of this Code, imposing fines, or for the arrest or imprisonment of any person, except when such imprisonment is in execution of a decree.

* In this clause, the words quoted have been substituted for the words, " the first paragraph of," by the same Act and section.

The orders passed in appeals under this section shall be final.

Notes.

An application under sec. 119, Act VIII of 1859, for the re-hearing of a case decreed ex-parte, was rejected. Under that law this order was appealable. No appeal was, however, filed until October 1st, 1877, on which date Act X. of 1877 came in force. Held that the appeal was inadmissible, there being no provision in Act X. of 1877 for such an appeal.—1 C. L. R., 402.

Where an application for probate has been granted, and an objection being made a subsequent order is passed directing that the case be re-opened, that probate be suspended for a time certain, and that the executor bring in his evidence to prove his right to obtain probate, held that no appeal lies from such an order. Act X. of 1865, sec. 263, and Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 363, discussed.—2 C. L. R., 589.

There is no appeal against an order made by the Civil Court, under sec. 38 of Beng. Act VIII. of 1869, directing the measurement of lands. Crowdy v. Goburdhun Roy (22 W. R., 491) followed. Goluck Kishore Acharjee v. Kesha Majhee (15 W. R., 23) and Manoo Dassee v. Ishan Chunder Banerjee (ib. 245) cited.—5 C. L. R., 484.

An order made by a Subordinate Judge, dismissing an application under sec. 503 for the appointment of a receiver in a suit pending before him, or declining to nominate a receiver, is an order under that section, and not under sec. 505, and is therefore appealable under sec. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, as amended by Act XII of 1879. A Subordinate Judge, if he has good grounds, may decline to appoint a receiver even after he has received the necessary authority from the District Judge under sec. 505 to do so.—6 C. L. R., 467.

An auction-purchaser of property sold in execution of decree is not "a party to the suit;" he is not therefore entitled to appeal from an order passed as to the execution of the decree.—1 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 5.

An appeal lay to the Judge, in cases of partition under Act XIX. of 1863, where the objection raised by the party opposing partition is severalty of holding by virtue of a former partition.—1 Agra H. C. R., Rev., 44.

The proceedings of a Settlement Officer under sec. 3, Act XIV of 1863, were not judgments or orders appealable to the Judge, or especially to the High Court under Act X. of 1859.—2 Agra H. C. R., 239.

There is no appeal open to a pauper when his application to sue as pauper is rejected for default. Where there has been no refusal under sec. 310, Act VIII. of 1859, the applicant may revive his application for leave to sue as a pauper.—3 Agra H. C. R., Mis., 1.

There is no appeal from an order setting aside an ex parte decree.—1 L. R., 16 Cal. 426.

Section 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court at Madras being controlled by sec. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code no appeal lies from the order of a single Judge of the High Court made under sec. 592 of the Code of Civil Procedure rejecting an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis.—9 Madr. 447.

A party aggrieved by an interlocutory order of remand may object to its validity in his appeal against the final decree, though he might have appealed against the order under sec. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and has not done so.—14 Bom. 232.

An appeal lies against an order rejecting a plaint on the ground of its being insufficiently stamped.—6 Cal. 249; 6 C. L. R., 567; 23 W. R., 269.

Sec. 588, Act X of 1877, restricting appeals against orders, does not apply to prevent an appeal to the High Court from the order of a Judge of that Court.—9 Cal. 482.

An order made by a lower Court, directing a suit to be re-admitted and registered on the file of the Court, is not appealable. Second appeals to the High Court must either come within chap. 42 or secs. 588 and 591 of Act X of 1877.—5 Cal. 711.

An order refusing to grant an application to be made an insolvent is appealable under cl. 17, sec. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Such an order must be considered to be one made under sec. 351. Juggutjeebun Goopto v. Harocoomar Pal (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 719) dissented from.—6 Cal. 168. Also I. L. R., 4 Cal. 888.

After a decree had been made ex parte, the defendant applied to have it set aside. The Subordinate Judge refused the application, but his order was reversed by the District Judge. Held that the order of the District Judge was final under sec. 588, and that no second appeal would lie; nor would the Court interfere under sec. 622 of the Code.—8 Cal. 832.

A decision of a Judge directing a penalty to be enforced under the Stamp Act, the case being afterwards proceeded with, is not appealable as a decree, as it cannot be said to be a decree affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. Nor can such a decision be said to be "an order as to a fine" within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, sec. 365 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, sec. 588, cl. 29), which is not intended to apply to penalties under the Stamp Act, but only to fines which may be levied under the Code itself.—5 Cal. 311.

On the 25th June 1879, a Subordinate Judge made an order setting aside the sale of immoveable property in the execution of a decree, from which an appeal was preferred, under Act X of 1877, to the District Court on the 25th July 1879, before Act XII of 1879 came into force. Held that, as the appeal would not have lain at all had Act XII of 1879 been in force on the date of its institution, sec. 102 of that Act did not apply; but, as the appeal lay to the District Court under the law in force on that date, it was competent to dispose of it under the provisions of sec. 7 of Act I of 1878.—2 Al. 785.

A suit to redeem a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands was instituted in the Munsif's Court. After the suit had been admitted, and the parties called on to produce evidence, the Munsif ordered the plaint in the suit to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court, on the ground that the suit should have been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the value of the property in suit being beyond the jurisdiction of a Munsif. Held that, under Act VIII of 1859, the Munsif's order was appealable to the lower Appellate Court, and, under Act X of 1877, the lower Appellate Court's order to the High Court.—1 Al. 620.

In proceedings in execution of the decree passed in a small cause suit by a District Munsif who had been invested with insolvency jurisdiction, the judgment-debtors filed a petition under section 344 of the Civil Procedure Code praying that they might be declared insolvents. Their petition was dismissed by the District Munsif:—Held, an appeal lay to the District Court against the order dismissing the petition.—15 Madr. 89.

What Courts to hear appeals.

589.* An appeal from any order specified in section 588, clauses (15), (16), and (17), shall lie to the High Court.

When an appeal from any other order is allowed by this chapter, it shall lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit in relation to which such order was made, or, when such order is passed a Court (not being a High Court) in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, then to the High Court :

Provided that an appeal from an order specified in section 588, clause (17), shall lie—

(a) to the District Court where the order was passed by a Court subordinate to that Court, and

(b) to the High Court in any other case.†

Note.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 18, noted under sec. 584 ; 10 Cal. 523, noted under sec. 562.

590. The procedure prescribed in Chapter XLI shall, so far as may be, apply to appeals from orders under this Code, or under any special or local law in which a different procedure is not provided.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 14 Bom. 232, noted under sec. 588.

591. Except as provided in this chapter, no appeal shall lie from any order passed by any Court in the exercise of its original or appellate jurisdiction ; but if any decree be appealed against, any error, defect or irregularity in any such order, affecting the decision of the case, may be set forth as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal.

No other appeal from orders ; but error therein may be set forth in memorandum of appeal against decree.

* See Repealing and Amending Act (XII of 1891).

† This proviso has been added by Act X of 1888.

Notes.

Pending an Appeal before the lower Appellate Court, the plaintiff-appellant died, and two persons separately applied to be substituted as the deceased's representative. The Court, applying secs. 367 and 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, decided in favour of one of the applicants and brought him upon the record. No appeal was made against this order by the unsuccessful applicant. The lower Appellate Court decided the appeal adversely to the successful applicant. Subsequently the unsuccessful applicant established by a separate suit that she was the deceased's legal representative, and that her opponent was not. She attempted to appeal to the High Court against the lower Appellate Court's decree dismissing the appeal. Held that the appellant, not having been a party to the decree below, and the order below having decided that she was not entitled to be a party to the proceedings of the lower Appellate Court, she was not entitled to maintain the appeal to the High Court, and sec. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code was not applicable to the case. Har Narain v. Kharag Singh distinguished. Where an order under the group of sections in the Civil Procedure Code relating to representative has been made excluding a person from the record, that person must seek his remedy by an appeal against the order, and is not entitled to appeal against the decree so long as the order stands. Error, defect or irregularity within the meaning of sec. 591 of the Code means error, defect or irregularity in procedure or in law, and not in matters of fact. In the present case there was no error, defect or irregularity within the meaning of the section, and even if there were, it did not affect the decision of the case in appeal below.—I. L. R., 12 Al. 200.

See I. L. R., 5 Cal. 311, noted under sec. 588; 7 Bom. 5, noted under sec. 136; 14 Al. 226, noted under sec. 206; 7 Cal. 148, noted under sec. 32; 12 Al. 510, noted under sec. 562.

CHAPTER XLIV. OF PAUPER APPEALS.

592. Any person entitled under this Code or any other law to prefer an appeal, who is unable to pay the fee required for the petition of appeal, may, on presenting an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject to the rules contained in Chapters XXVI, XLI, XLII and XLIII, in so far as those rules are applicable;

Provided that the Court shall reject the application, unless, upon a perusal thereof, and of the judgment and decree against which the appeal is made, it sees reason to think that the decree appealed against is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust.

Notes.

An appeal lies from a decision in a suit heard in forma pauperis. A separate formal application for enquiry into the pauperism of applicant need not precede an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 167; Ed. 1873, 246.

An application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, under sec. 592 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must be made by the party in person, subject to the exemption contained in sec. 404 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—In re Norisi—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 504.

No appeal lies under Act X of 1877 from an order made under that Act rejecting an application for permission to sue as a pauper.—1 Al. (F. B.) 745.

An application for permission to appeal as a pauper was presented, not by the applicant personally, but by his pleader, and was on that ground rejected. Held, on an application to the High Court for revision, that sec. 622 of Act X of 1877 did not apply to a proceeding of so purely an interlocutory a character as mentioned in sec. 592, and such application, therefore, could not be entertained.—4 Al. 91.

593. The inquiry into the pauperism of the applicant may be made either by the Appellate Court or by the Court against whose decision the appeal is made under the orders of the Appellate Court :
Inquiry into pauperism.

Provided that, if the applicant was allowed to sue or appeal as a pauper in the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, no further inquiry in respect of his pauperism shall be necessary, unless the Appellate Court sees special cause to direct such inquiry.
Proviso.

CHAPTER XLV.

OF APPEALS TO THE QUEEN IN COUNCIL.

594. In this chapter, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, the expression “decree” includes also judgment and order.
“Decree” defined.

595. Subject to such rules as may, from time to time, be made by Her Majesty in Council regarding appeals from the Courts of British India, and to the provisions hereinafter contained,
When appeals lie to Queen in Council.

an appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council—

(a) from any final decree passed on appeal by a High Court or any other Court of final appellate jurisdiction ;

(b) from any final decree, passed by a High Court in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction ; and

(c) from any decree, when the case, as hereinafter provided, is certified to be a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council.

Notes.

An order of the High Court directing execution to proceed is not a "final" decree, judgment, or order within the meaning of cl. a, sec. 595 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act X of 1877.—1 C. L. R., 354.

On the death of a party on the record of an appeal pending before Her Majesty in Council, proof must be given in the Court from which the appeal has been preferred, of the representative character of the person by or against whom revivor is sought. There ought to be some finding of the Court below, which, also, should give its own opinion as to who are the parties proper to be substituted upon the record. A certificate or statement on which their Lordships can act should be made by the Court below.—1. L. R., 16 Cal. 184.

Where a decree has been made directing accounts to be taken, but there is nothing so special in the case as to bring it under clause (c) of sec. 595 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), leave to appeal to the Privy Council will not be given.—14 Bom. 428.

Where a decree directing the taking of accounts which the defendant contends ought not to be taken at all, decides, in effect, that, if the result should be found to be against the defendant, he is liable to pay the amount, the decree is final within the meaning of sec. 595 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) for the purpose of appeal. On the ground that a decree for an account was not final within that section, the High Court refused, under sec. 601, to grant the defendant a certificate. On his application for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, not by way of an appeal from the local Court's refusal, but asking for the exercise of the prerogative right to admit an appeal: Held, that, as leave could be granted on any other ground, should any appear, besides the ground that the Court had refused the certificate without good cause, while leave could also be granted on the latter ground, if established, to make this application was, perhaps, more convenient than to appeal from the order of refusal. Held, also, that the real question in this suit having been the liability of the defendant to account to the plaintiff upon several claims, the decree had decided this against the defendant in such a way that, although the account had not been taken, the decrees was final within sec. 595.—15 Bom. 155.

Leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council granted in one of six suits directed to be heard together, although the amount involved in such suit was under the appealable value; there being an important question of law, which did not arise in the five other suits, the suit, however, involving other questions of law common to all the six suits; such suits having been, by agreement of counsel, heard upon the same evidence, and concluded by the same judgment; five of such suits being appealable as of right, and the aggregate amount in the six suits being considerably more than the appealable value.—11 Cal. 740.

The High Court has not any power, under X of 1877, or cl. 31 of the Letters Patent (which is repealed by Acts VI of 1874 and X of 1877), to grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council from an order of the Court remanding a suit for re-trial.—1 Al. 726.

An order passed on appeal by a High Court determining a question mentioned in sec. 244 of Act X of 1877 is a final "decree" within the meaning of sec. 595 of that Act. Held, therefore, where such an order involved a claim or question relating to property of the value of upwards of ten thousand rupees, and reversed the decisions of the lower Courts, that, notwithstanding the value of the subject-matter of the suit in which the decree was made in the Court of first instance was less than that amount, such order was appealable to Her Majesty in Council.—3 Al. 633.

A candidate at an examination for pleaderships, a mistake in the computation of his marks having been made, was erroneously declared qualified for admission as a vakil of the High Court by a Government Notification. The mistake having been discovered, such Notification was, so far as he was concerned, cancelled. He then petitioned the High Court in the matter, and was informed by it that his name must be excluded from such Notification, as he had not qualified by obtaining the requisite number of marks. The candidate having applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, held that Chapter 45 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, and the matter was not one in which the High Court was concerned to grant or refuse leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council.—9 Al. 163.

The District Judge of Ghazipur re-called to his own file the proceedings in the execution of a decree which were pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Shahabad, and disallowed an application for the execution of the decree which had been preferred to that Judge. The High Court, on appeal from the order of the District Judge, annulled his order as void for want of jurisdiction, and remitted the case in order that the application might be disposed of on its merits, directing that the record of the case should be returned to the Subordinate Judge of Shahabad. On an application for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court, held that such order was in the nature of an interlocutory order, and was not one from which the High Court could or ought to grant leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council.—2 Al. 65.

Certain persons interested in an award applied under sec. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to have it filed in Court. The Court made an order under sec. 526 “that the claim of the plaintiffs be decreed.” The defendants appealed to the High Court from this “decree.” The High Court held that the appeal would not lie; and suggested to the plaintiffs to apply to the lower Courts to give judgment according to the award, and a decree to follow it. Thereupon the plaintiffs made an application to the lower Court of the nature suggested, but styled it one for review of judgment. The lower Court granted the so-called review of judgment. The defendants appealed from the order of the lower Court, contending that the “review of judgment” had been improperly granted. On the 23rd June 1880, the High Court held that the order of the lower Court was not appealable, not being one passed on review of judgment, but on application to give judgment and decree in accordance with an award which had been filed in Court. The defendants applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court on the 23rd June 1880. Held that such order was not a “final decree” within the meaning of sec. 595 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore it was not appealable to Her Majesty in Council.—4 Al. 238.

Where the High Court reverses the decree of the Court below, and remands the case for re-trial on the merits, and for a new decree to be passed by the Court below, no appeal lies as a matter of right, under sec. 595 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to the Privy Council, albeit the value of the subject-matter admittedly exceed Rs. 10,000, as such a decree of the High Court is not a final, but an interlocutory, decree. In such a case a certifitate should first be obtained under clause (c) of the section that the case is a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council.—8 Bom. 548.

596. In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of section 595, .

Value of subject-matter.

the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance must be ten thousand rupees or upwards, and the amount or value of the matter in dispute on appeal to Her Majesty in Council must be the same sum or upwards ;

or the decree must involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to, or respecting, property of like amount or value ;

and, where the decree appealed from affirms the decision of the Court immediately below the Court passing such decree, the appeal must involve some substantial question of law.

Notes.

A and B purchased the same properties, deriving the title through different persons. The value of the properties with mesne-profits was over Rs. 10,000. B granted two patni-leases of the properties to different persons. A was, therefore, obliged to bring two suits for the recovery of the properties, and the value of the subject-matter in each suit was less than Rs. 10,000. Held that an appeal would lie to the Privy Council.—I. L. R., 8 Cal. 210.

Civil Courts Act (Madras) III of 1873 does not control the construction of Civil Procedure Code, sec. 596, and under that section the real market value of the matter in dispute is the test as to whether or not an appeal lies to the Privy Council.—15 Madr. 237.

Where the issues in a case involved questions both of law and fact, and the Subordinate Judge had decided against the plaintiff on two issues of fact, sufficient for the disposal of the case, without trying the other issues, the High Court found on those two issues substantially in favour of the plaintiff, but raised a further question of fact on the evidence, and decided that against him, coming finally to the same conclusion on the facts as the Subordinate Judge, though not agreeing with him on all his findings or in the reasons on which they were based. Held, on an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, that the High Court did not “affirm” the judgment of the lower Court within the meaning of sec. 596 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, even assuming the judgment of the lower Court was affirmed by the High Court, that there were substantial questions of law in the case which entitled the plaintiff to appeal, notwithstanding that such questions might be immaterial to the decision of the case.—16 Cal. 287.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 633, noted under sec. 244 ; 9 Al. 93, noted under sec. 574.

597. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 595,

Bar of certain appeals.

no appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council from the judgment of one Judge of a High Court established under the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, Chapter 104, of one Judge of a Division Court, or of two or more Judges of such High Court, or of a Division Court constituted by two or more Judges of such High Court, wherever such Judges are equally divided in opinion, and do not amount in number to a majority of the whole of the Judges of the High Court at the time being ;

and no appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council from any decree which, under section 586, is final.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 10 Cal. 814, noted under sec. 575.

598. Whoever desires to appeal under this chapter to Her Majesty in Council must apply by petition to the Court whose decree is complained of.

Application to Court whose decree complained of.

Notes.

A on the 8th September 1885 filed his petition of appeal to Her Majesty in Council against a decree obtained against him by B on the 19th May 1885. On the 11th September 1885 A's attorney received for approval from the Registrar the usual draft notice calling upon B to show cause why the case was not a fit and proper one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council ; this draft notice was never returned as approved or otherwise to the Registrar, and on further steps were taken to prosecute the appeal. On the 1st April 1886 B applied to have the appeal struck off for want of prosecution. Held that he was entitled to the order.—I. L. R., 12 Cal. 658.

See I. L. R., 15 Madr. 169, noted under sec. 12 of the Limitation Act.

599. Such application must ordinarily be made within six months from the date of such decree.

Time within which application must be made.

But if that period expires when the Court is closed, the application may be made on the day that the Court re-opens.

600. Every petition under section 598 must state the grounds of appeal, and pray for a certificate, either that, as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of section 596, or that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council.

Certificate as to value or fitness.

Upon receipt of such petition, the Court may direct notice to be served on the opposite party to show cause why the said certificate should not be granted.

Note.

The Court may enlarge the time for making the deposit required by Civil Procedure Code, sec. 602, for cogent reasons under the rule in Burjore and Bhawani Pershad v. Mussumat Bhagana (L. R., 11 I. A., 7 ; s. c. I. L. R., 10 Cal., 557), but those reasons must be such as would lead the Court to believe that the party was diligent in due time to be prepared to lodge the deposit within the limited period, and that he was prevented from doing so not owing to absence and the difficulty of getting funds, but owing to some circumstances accidental or otherwise over which he had no control or owing to mistake which the Court would consider not unreasonable or caused by negligence.—14 Madr. 391.

Effect of refusal of certificate.

601. If such certificate be refused, the petition shall be dismissed :

Provided that, if the decree complained of be a final decree passed by a Court other than a High Court, the order refusing the certificate shall be appealable, “ within thirty days from the date of the order,”* to the High Court, to which the former Court is subordinate.

NOTE —See I. L. R., 15 Bom. 155, noted under sec. 595.

602. If the certificate be granted, the applicant shall, within six months from the date of the decree complained of, or within six weeks from the grant of the certificate, whichever is the later date,

(a) give security for the costs of the respondent, and
(b) deposit the amount required to defray the expense of translating, transcribing, indexing, and transmitting to Her Majesty in Council a correct copy of the whole record of the suit, except

(1) formal documents directed to be excluded by any order of Her Majesty in Council in force for the time being ;

(2) papers which the parties agree to exclude ;

(3) accounts, or portions of accounts, which the officer empowered by the Court for that purpose considers unnecessary, and which the parties have not specifically asked to be included, and

(4) such other documents as the High Court may direct to be excluded ; and when the applicant prefers to print in India the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, he shall also, within the time mentioned in the first clause of this section, deposit the amount required to defray the expense of printing such copy.

Notes.

The time allowed by sec. 602 of the Civil Procedure Code for giving the security and making the deposit required by that section may be extended.—I. L. R., 6 Al. 250.

The words in sec. 602 of Act X of 1877, relating to the time within which security is to be given, are directory only ; and although they are not to be departed from without cogent reason, the Court from which the appeal is preferred has the right of extending the time. In this case, the satisfactory explanation having been given of delay in giving security until after the time limited by the above section had expired, held that the Court had rightly exercised direction in extending the time. In the matter of the Petition of Soorj mukhi Koer (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 2) approved. The paternal grandmother of a deceased village-shareholder, claiming to inherit in preference to his male collateral relations, the issue was fixed with the assent of the pleaders on both sides, whether the plaintiff, as a female, was excluded from inheriting by the custom of the family or tribe. Held that this was substantially a question of fact, and that on the evidence, which included the village wajib-ul-arz, the customary exclusion of females was not proved.—10 Cal. 557; L. R., 11 I. A., 7.

See I. L. R., 14 Madr. 391, noted under sec. 600.

603. When such security has been completed, and deposit made to the satisfaction of the Court, the Court may declare the appeal admitted, and give notice thereof to the respondent, and shall then

Admission of appeal and procedure thereon.

(c) transmit to Her Majesty in Council, under the seal of the Court, a correct copy of the said record, except as aforesaid, and

(d) give to either party one or more authenticated copies of any of the papers in the suit on his applying therefor, and paying the reasonable expenses incurred in preparing them.

604. At any time before the admission of the appeal, the Court may, upon cause shown, revoke the acceptance of any such security, and make further directions thereon.

Revocation of acceptance of security.

605. If at any time after the admission of the appeal, but before the transmission of the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, to Her Majesty in Council, such security appears inadequate, or further payment is required for the purpose of translating, transcribing, printing, indexing, or transmitting the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, the Court may order the appellant to furnish, within a time to be fixed by the Court, other and sufficient security, or to make, within like time, the required payment.

Effect of failure to comply with order.

606. If the appellant fail to comply with such order, the proceedings shall be stayed, and the appeal shall not proceed without an order in this behalf of Her Majesty in Council, and in the meantime execution of the decree appealed against shall not be stayed.

607. When the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, has been transmitted to Her Majesty in Council, the appellant may obtain a refund of the balance (if any) of the amount which he has deposited under section 602.

608. Notwithstanding the admission of any appeal under this chapter, the decree appealed against shall be unconditionally enforced, unless the Court admitting the appeal otherwise directs.

But the Court may, if it thinks fit, on any special cause shown by any party interested in the suit, or otherwise appearing to the Court,

(a) impound any moveable property in dispute or any part thereof, or

(b) allow the decree appealed against to be enforced, taking such security from the respondent as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of any order which Her Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

(c) stay the execution of the decree appealed against, taking such security from the appellant as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of the decree appealed against, or of any order which Her Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

(d) place any party seeking the assistance of the Court under such conditions, or give such other direction respecting the subject-matter of the appeal, as it thinks fit.

609. If, at any time during the pendency of the appeal, the security so furnished by either party appears inadequate, the Court may, on the application of the other party, require further security.

In default of such further security being furnished as required by the Court, if the original security was furnished by the appellant, the Court may, on the application of the respondent, issue execution of the decree appealed against as if the appellant had furnished no such security.

And, if the original security was furnished by the respondent, the Court shall, so far as may be practicable, stay all further execution of the decree, and restore the parties to the position in which they respectively were when the security which appears inadequate was furnished, or give such direction respecting the subject matter of the appeal as it thinks fit.

610. Whoever desires to enforce or to obtain execution of any order of Her Majesty in Council shall apply by petition, accompanied by a certified copy of the decree or order made in appeal and sought to be enforced or executed, to the Court from which the appeal to Her Majesty was preferred.

Such Court shall transmit the order of Her Majesty to the Court which made the first decree appealed from, or to such other Court as Her Majesty by her said order may direct, and shall (upon the application of either party) give such directions as may be required for the enforcement or execution of the same; and the Court to which the said order is so transmitted shall enforce or execute it accordingly, in the manner and according to the rules applicable to the execution of its original decrees.

In so far as the order awards costs to the respondent, it may be executed against a surety therefor, to the extent to which he has rendered himself liable in the same manner as it may be executed against the appellant. *

Provided that such notice in writing as the Court in each case thinks sufficient has been given to the surety :*

When any moneys expressed to be payable in British currency are payable in India under such order, the amount so payable shall be estimated according to the rate of exchange for the time being fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the adjustment of financial transactions between the imperial and the Indian Governments.

Notes.

A party to a suit in an Appellate Court, who had obtained leave to appeal from its decree to Her Majesty in Council, petitioned for the order of the latter staying execution of interlocutory orders made in execution of such decree, and directing payment by the petitioner to the opposite party of large sums without security taken for their repayment in the event of the decree being reversed. This accompanied a petition for special leave to appeal against those orders. The latter was granted, but it not being competent to the judicial Committee to make any order as to the stay of execution, an intimation was made by it to the Court below that it appeared to be the reasonable course that the opposite party should not, pending the appeal, be put into possession of the large sums in dispute. The intimation being made, the petitioner might apply to the Court below for the due security of all money paid into the treasury in obedience to the decree.

Sidhee Nazur Ali Khan v. Oojoodhyaram Khan, 10 Moore's I. A., 322, and Zerai tool Batool v. Hosseinee Begum, 10 Moore's I. A., 196, referred to.—I. L. R., 14 Cal. 290.

Before a decree-holder in the District Court can obtain execution of a decree which has been affirmed by the Privy Council, he must produce, on the application for execution, a certified copy of the order passed by Her Majesty in Council.—5 Cal. 329.

The provisions of Act X of 1877, sec. 610, are not to be construed as restricting the only admissible evidence of an order of Her Majesty in Council to a certified copy, on an application for execution made under that section. They must be read as directory, having the object that proper information regarding the order shall be supplied to the Courts in India. Where the original order (given, according to the practice in England, to the successful party, or to one of such parties) had not been filed in the High Court, so as to enable the proper officer to supply a certified copy, held that a copy, though not certified by him, might accompany a petition for execution under sec. 610.—9 Cal. 482.

A decree obtained on appeal of certain defendants in the High Court was appealed to the Privy Council by one only of the two plaintiffs to the suit, and the decision of the High Court was reversed; the plaintiff who had appealed assigned her share in the order of the Privy Council to one of the defendants, and delivered him the certified copy of the decree made in the Privy Council. The plaintiff who had not appealed to the Privy Council applied to the High Court for leave to transmit the order to the Court of first instance for execution of the share decreed to him, but, on account of the assignment above-mentioned, was unable to produce the certified copy of the decree of the Privy Council. The Judge presiding over the Privy Council Department in the High Court held that the production of a certified copy of the order of the Privy Council was excusable under the circumstances, but refused the application, on the ground that the decree of the Court of first instance, which was affirmed by the Privy Council, could only be executed as a whole, and not partly by one of the plaintiffs. Held on appeal per GARRH, C. J.—That the duties of a Judge in dealing with the meaning of decrees of the Privy Council are purely ministerial, and that any order made in such ministerial capacity could not be considered a judgment, and could not, therefore, be made the subject of an appeal to a Bench of the High Court under sec. 15 of the Charter. Per WHITE and MITTER, J. J.—An order of a Judge presiding over the Privy Council Department in the High Court, rejecting an application for execution, is a final order, and is a judgment within the meaning of sec. 15 of the Charter, and is therefore appealable.—6 Cal. 594.

See I. L. R., 2 Al. 604, noted under sec. 253; 15 Madr. 203, noted under sec. 211.

611. The orders made by the Court which enforces or executes the order of Her Majesty in Council, relating to such enforcement or execution, shall be appealable in the same manner and subject to the same rules as the orders of such Court relating to the enforcement or execution of its own decrees.

612. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act to regulate—Power to make rules.

- (a) the service of notices under section 600 ;
 - (b) the grant or refusal of certificates, under sections 601 and 602, by Courts of final appellate jurisdiction subordinate to the High Court ;
 - (c) the amount and nature of the security required under sections 602, 605, and 609 ;
 - (d) the testing of such security ;
 - (e) the estimate of the cost of transcribing the record ;
 - (f) the preparation, examination, and certifying of such transcript ;
 - (g) the revision and authentication of translations ;
 - (h) the preparation of indices to transcripts of records, and of lists of the papers not included therein ;
 - (i) the recovery of costs incurred in British India in connection with appeals to Her Majesty in Council ;
- and all other matters connected with the enforcement of this chapter.

All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law in the High Court and the Courts of final appellate jurisdiction subordinate thereto.

613. All rules heretofore made and published by any High Court relating to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, and in force immediately before the passing of this Act, shall, so far as they are consistent with this Act, be deemed to have been made and published hereunder.

614. In sections 595 and 612, the expression " High Court " shall be deemed to include also the Recorder of Rangoon, but not so as to empower him to make rules binding on Courts other than his own Court.

615. The rules and restrictions referred to in Bengal Regulation III of 1828, section IV, Clause fifth, shall be deemed to be the rules and restrictions applicable to appeals under this Code from the decisions of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

Saving of Her Majesty's pleasure.

616. Nothing herein contained shall be understood—

(a) to bar the full and unqualified exercise of Her Majesty's pleasure in receiving or rejecting appeals to Her Majesty in Council, or otherwise howsoever, or

(b) to interfere with any rules made by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and for the time being in force, for the presentation of appeals to Her Majesty in Council, or their conduct before the said Judicial Committee.

and of rules for conduct of business before Judicial Committee.

And nothing in this chapter applies to any matter of criminal or admiralty or vice-admiralty jurisdiction, or to appeals from orders and decrees of Prize Courts.

PART VII.

CHAPTER XLVI.

OF REFERENCE TO AND REVISION BY THE HIGH COURT.

617. If, before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is final, or if, in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law, or the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits, arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court.

Reference of question to High Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

It is only when a matter cannot come before the High Court as a Court of Appeal that a reference can be made under sec. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X. of 1877) — 7 C. L. R., 144.

Sec. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) does not authorize a reference, except on a point arising in a litigation between parties in a suit or appeal, or in a matter wherein the Court is called on to adjudicate, that is, to pronounce on the opposite pretensions of contending parties. A pleader was fined Rs. 25 by a Second-class Subordinate Judge for refusing to act on behalf of his client after receipt of retaining fee. On appeal, the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court under sec. 617 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882.) Held that the inquiry into the pleader's professional conduct was of a disciplinary, and not litigious character. The fact that an appeal lay from the Subordinate Judge to the District Judge did not make it litigious. In such an inquiry no reference could properly be made under sec. 617 of Act XIV. of 1882.—I. L. R., 12 Bom. 78.

The High Court has no power to review a judgment passed by it on a reference from a Subordinate Judge with Small Cause Court powers. Clause (c) of sec. 623 of Act XIV of 1882, allows of a review of judgment on a reference only from a Court of Small Causes. The judgment of the High Court in such a case is not a decree or order within the meaning of clause (b) of the section, but is simply a statement of the grounds, in conformity with which the lower Court is to dispose of the case, as provided by sec. 619.—10 Bom. 68.

A Munsif, being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to entertain a particular suit, made an order returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. An appeal was preferred under sec. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, to the District Judge, who, entertaining doubts upon the question of jurisdiction, referred the matter to the High Court, under sec. 617 :—Held that, inasmuch as the order of the Munsif was not a final decree in the suit, and any order of the Judge in appeal disposing of the plea of jurisdiction would not amount to a "final" decree within the meaning of sec. 617 the High Court had not jurisdiction to entertain the reference.—7 Al. 815.

Where A, under the terms of a will, although not expressly appointed an executor, was directed to receive and pay the testator's debts, and to get in and distribute his personal estate: Held that A must be taken to have been appointed under the will an executor by implication. In the goods of Baylis (L. R., 1 P. M. 21) followed. The order made by a District Judge on an application for probate, not being a final order, cannot be referred for the opinion of the High Court under sec. 617 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But the Court will, under certain circumstances, entertain such an application, as a Court of concurrent jurisdiction, under sec. 264 of the Indian Succession Act.—5 Cal. 756 ; 7 C. L. R., 228.

618. The Court may either stay the proceedings or proceed in the case notwithstanding such reference, and may pass a decree or order contingent upon the opinion of the High Court on the point referred but no execution shall be issued, property sold, or person imprisoned, in any case in which such reference is made until the receipt of a copy of the judgment of the High Court upon such reference.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

619. The High Court shall hear the parties to the case in which the reference is made, in person or by their respective pleaders, and shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made and such Court shall, on the receipt thereof, proceed to di pose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court.

Judgment of High Court to be transmitted, and case disposed of accordingly.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Costs of reference to High Court.

620. Costs (if any) consequent on a reference for the opinion of the High Court shall be costs in the case.

NOTE.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under sec. 620 of the Civil Procedure Code the costs of a reference to the High Court cannot be dealt with separately, but must be dealt with when awarding the costs of the suit. They are, however, in the discretion of the Court, and need not necessarily follow the event of the suit.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 507.

621. When a case is referred to the High Court under this chapter, the High Court may return the case for amendment, and may alter, cancel, or set aside any decree or order which the Court making the reference has passed in the case out of which the reference arose, and make such order as it thinks fit.

Power to alter, &c., decrees of Court making reference.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

622. The High Court may call for the record of any case in which no appeal lies to the High Court, if the Court by which the case was decided appears to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested, or to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction “illegally or” with material irregularity ; and may pass such order in the case as the High Court thinks fit.

Power to call for record of cases not appealable to High Court.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where an appeal preferred to the District Court against an order refusing an application for execution of a decree for costs was allowed, the High Court, on a second appeal being instituted, held that no appeal lay either to the District Court or to the High Court, but entertained the matter under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and upheld the order of the District Court.—6 C. L. R., 234.

It is only on the application of a party interested that the High Court can act as a Court of Revision under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Accordingly, where a Munsif, considering that the Subordinate Judge had acted without jurisdiction in setting aside, on appeal, certain orders made by him, brought the matter to the knowledge of the District Judge, who took the same view, and the latter referred the case to the High Court under that section, it was held that the Court had no power to interfere.—7 C. L. R., 191.

In a suit instituted upon a ten-rupee stamp for an account, the removal of the original trustee and the appointment of a new trustee, where the value of the trust-property was 5 lakhs of rupees, the Court below directed that the stamp should be calculated upon the value of the trust-property, and ordered that the deficiency should be made up within a particular time. Before the time expired, a rule was obtained from the High Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code to show cause why the order should not be set aside. Held that the rule must be discharged, inasmuch as if the suit had been dismissed on the expiration of the time limited, on the ground that the relief was not properly valued, there would have been an appeal.—12 C. L. R., 148.

A Court that has decided a suit over which it had jurisdiction cannot, only on the ground that it has arrived at a wrong decision, be said to have exercised its jurisdiction illegally, or with material irregularity, within the meaning of sec. 622 of Act X. of 1877, as amended by sec. 92 of Act XII of 1879.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6; L. R., 11 I. A., 237.

In 1862 a suit for mesne-profits was brought against certain persons as being the heirs of one Romanath Lahiry, deceased, among whom were his widow and two infant sons. During the pendency of this suit the two infant sons died; and the widow was made a defendant as representing the estate of her deceased sons. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1875; and on the plaintiffs applying for execution, the widow objected that 5-15th of the properties against which execution was sought was the property of her adopted son, whom she alleged to have adopted in 1874; the adopted son was not made a party to the suit; this objection was overruled, but the same objection was taken by the adopted son through his natural father as his guardian and next friend, and the Court released the 5-16th share from attachment, and allowed the objection. Against this order some of the plaintiffs appealed, but pending the appeal another of the plaintiffs applied to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the order set aside. The Court whilst refusing to interfere with the order, inasmuch as there appeared to be no material irregularity therein, pointed out to the lower Court that the decree of 1875 having been obtained on account of a debt of Romanath Lahiry's, and being against the widow as representing her husband's (Romanath's) estate, the estate would be answerable for the debt, whether the widow or the adopted son represented the estate, supposing the decree to have been properly obtained. The principle in Ishan Chunder Mitter v. Buksh Ali Soudagur (Marsh. 314) followed.—11 Cal. 45.

A merely erroneous construction of the provisions of an Act is not a ground for relief under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. M. J. instituted an interpleader-suit against two rival claimants, N and A, in respect of a sum of Rs. 20,000. R subsequently claimed a portion of the money, and applied to be made a party to the suit; but was opposed by M. J. and N. The Subordinate Judge refused the application on the ground that, though it was probably made under sec. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, R's right or claim not having been admitted by the plaintiff, nor asserted to his knowledge, she was not a necessary party under the special provisions of ch. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code, and referred her to a regular suit. Held that the order, though based upon an erroneous construction of the provisions of sec. 32 of the Code, did not come within the scope of sec. 622, inasmuch as it could not be said that the Subordinate Judge had failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law.—13 Cal. 90.

The words, "a material irregularity," sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, include an irregularity of procedure materially affecting the merits of the case. An application of a section of the Code to a case to which it does not apply is a material irregularity within the meaning of the section. Magni Ram v. Jiwa Lal (I. L. R., 7 Al. 336) observed on.—13 Cal. 225.

Sec. 622 of the Code is one of very limited operation; and where a lower Court has jurisdiction to decide a question of law or fact, the High Court has no power to interfere on revision with the decision on those questions. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) followed.—15 Cal. 446.

A decision by the judgment of a competent Court, whether right or wrong, which by law is final and without appeal, where the Court has not acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally, or with material irregularity, cannot be set aside under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.—16 Cal. 749.

Where a Court, professing to act under sec. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, set aside a sale in execution of a decree without proof of substantial injury having been suffered by the applicant, held that such order was passed without jurisdiction within the meaning of sec. 622 of the said Code.—9 Madr. 145.

A Small Cause Court, which had jurisdiction under Act XI. of 1865 to entertain suits for rent only where the claim was founded on contract, erroneously assumed that a sub-tenant, by entering on land with notice that his lessor was bound to pay rent to the landlord, became liable by an implied contract to pay rent to the landlord, and passed a decree against the sub-tenant for the rent in arrears. Held that, under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the High Court had power to set aside the decree. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Sing (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) discussed and explained.—11 Madr. 220.

In a suit to recover a debt incurred by the deceased father of a Hindu family, the District Judge gave a personal decree against the sons of the debtor, of whom two were minors. Held that, under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the decree against the minors should be reversed, but that the Court has no power to revise the decree against the other defendants.—11 Madr. 303.

A District Munsif having dismissed a suit, plaintiff appealed to the District Court, and, at the same time, applied to the Court to allow him to withdraw his suit with permission to bring a fresh suit on the same cause of action. The District Court granted the application without assigning any reasons for its order. Held, under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the District Court had acted with material irregularity.—11 Madr. 322.

The parties to a suit having referred the matters in dispute between them to arbitration, the arbitrators, without being specially authorized to decide the question of costs, included in the award a direction that the defendant should pay the costs of the plaintiff. On the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge under sec. 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882) ordered the award to be filed, holding that the arbitrators had, as such, an implied power to deal with the costs. The defendant applied to the High Court, under its extraordinary jurisdiction praying that the record of the case might be sent for, and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs, and that, on the defendant's objection, the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. Under the circumstances, the High Court, instead of setting aside the order to file the award directed the award to stand good, except so far as it awarded costs, and that the decree should be drawn in accordance with it, as it would be if it contained no direction as to costs. In any case where there is a disregard of the law amounting to an excess of jurisdiction, or a perversion of the purposes of the Legislature, the High Court will interfere under its extraordinary jurisdiction where no other remedy is available.—9 Bom. 82.

A wrong decision on a question of res-judicata is not a subject for the interference of the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882).—9 Bom. 432.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree in the Court of a Second-class Subordinate Judge for a sum less than Rs. 5,000, which, with accumulations of interest, subsequently exceeded Rs. 5,000. The plaintiffs applied in execution to recover the total amount. The application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction under sec. 24 of Act XIV. of 1869. On appeal, the District Judge made an order confirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal in the High Court. Held that no second appeal lay to the High Court from such an order; but, as the Subordinate Judge was wrong in refusing to exercise his jurisdiction, the High Court would give relief under the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred by sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882). The subject-matter of the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, and his jurisdiction continued, whatever might be the result of the suit, in all such matters in the suit as were within his cognizance, amongst which were matters in execution in the suit. The mere circumstance that the amount actually due by process of accumulation exceeded Rs. 5,000 could not oust him from the jurisdiction he hitherto had over the suit.—10 Bom. 200.

On the 29th November 1886, this suit was filed on Wapnd, dated the 29th November 1881, payable in two years. The Subordinate Judge dismissed it as time-barred, being of opinion that the cause of action had accrued on the 28th November 1883. Against this decision the plaintiff applied to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882). Held, reversing the decision of the Subordinate Judge, that the suit was not barred by time, the cause of action having accrued on the 29th November 1883, that is, the day of the month corresponding with the day on which the bond was dated. Held, further, that the decision of the Subordinate Judge being probably wrong and illegal, the High Court had jurisdiction to exercise its revisional powers under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882). Where a Court, with a full and correct apprehension of the questions which it is necessary for it to decide in any case, errs, in law or in fact, in its decision of any such questions with which it has jurisdiction to deal, its errors can only be corrected in due course of appeal; and where no appeal is permissible there is no remedy under sec. 622 of the Code, or under the provisions of sec. 15 of Stat. 24 & 26 Vic., c. 104, whatever remedy there may be, in the Bombay Presidency, under cl. 2 of sec. 5 of Reg. II. of 1827. But it is otherwise in any case where the Court, having a mistaken and wrong apprehension of the questions at issue, proceeds to determine an issue which does not really in the case, and bases its decision of the case on its determination of that issue. If it does so, it acts with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction.—12 Bom. 617.

The defendant contracted to sell to the plaintiffs a quantity of rape-seed, April—May delivery. On the 23rd of April the defendant endorsed over to the plaintiffs a delivery-order for the seed given him by Messrs. L. M. & Co., which plaintiffs presented to Messrs. L. M. & Co. on the 26th April, and on three or four subsequent occasions. Messrs. L. M. & Co. refused to deliver, on the ground that they had till the 31st May for delivery. On the 15th May, Messrs. L. M. & Co. failed, and then, but not before, plaintiffs informed the defendant that they had not had delivery from Messrs. L. M. & Co., and demanded it of him. The defendant failing to deliver, the plaintiff sued for damages as of the 31st May. The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court, on this statement of facts, and before evidence was gone into, ruled that the damages were assessable as of the 25th April, on which day it was admitted the market-rate was as high or higher than the contract rate. The plaintiffs on this ruling, without going into their case further, accepted judgment for nominal damages, and took out a rule for a new trial, on the ground that the Judge was in error in assigning the 25th April, and not the 31st May, as the date which ruled the question of damages. On the argument of the rule the Full Court decided against the plaintiffs, not on this point, which they did not decide one way or the other, but on another point altogether, viz, that plaintiffs ought to have given defendant notice of Messrs. L. M. & Co.'s refusal to give delivery on the 25th April, and, not having done so, could not call on the defendant to deliver. The plaintiffs now moved the High Court, under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882), to set aside the order of the Full Court of the Small Cause Court as one which at the stage of the proceedings that Court had no right to make. Held that, in making the order in question under the circumstances of the case, and the state of the record, the Full Court had acted with material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the case must be remanded to be dealt with according to law.—13 Bom. 642.

Where a Court has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit, the parties cannot by their mutual consent give it jurisdiction. A suit of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes alone was brought in the Court of a Joint Subordinate Judge. The defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the Court, but his objection was overruled. The suit was, however, dismissed on the merits. In appeal before the District Judge, the defendant did not renew the plea of want of jurisdiction. The District Judge reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and awarded the plaintiff's claim. The defendant thereupon applied to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882). Held that both the lower Courts had no jurisdiction to deal with the suit. The mere circumstance that the defendant did not raise the plea of want of jurisdiction in the Appellate Court did not clothe the Court with a jurisdiction not given to it by law.—13 Bom. 650.

In a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption in respect of a usufructuary mortgage of immoveable property, the plaintiffs alleged that the consideration-money was less than that stated in the mortgaged-deed. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree for possession of the property, on payment of an amount less than that mentioned in the deed, and this decree was affirmed on appeal. The mortgagees appealed to the High Court on the following grounds: "(1) Because it was for the respondents to prove that any portion of the consideration was not paid. (2) Because the lower Court has not considered the evidence of the appellants. (3) Because the finding of the lower Court is based on conjecture." Held, on the question whether such grounds, not being grounds on which a second appeal is allowed by ch. 42 of the Civil Procedure Code, the appeal should not proceed rather under ch. 46, sec. 622 of that Code that the appeal could not proceed under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code in consequence of the decision of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) (that only questions relating to the jurisdiction of the Court could be entertained under that section.—7 Al. 336.

Where property had been attached in execution of a decree, held that the date on which the property was attached, and not the date of the sale in execution, being the date of executing the first process for enforcing the decree, was the date from which limitation should be computed under art. 164, sch. 2 of Act XV. of 1877. Pachu v. Jaikishen (Weekly Notes, 1884, p. 322) referred to. A Court which admits an application to set aside a decree ex-parte after the true period of limitation has expired acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally and with material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and such action may therefore be made the subject of revision by the High Court under that section. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) and Magni Ram v. Jiwa Lal (I. L. R., 7 Al. 336) commented on by MAHMOOD, J. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The term "jurisdiction" as used by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) must be understood in its broad legal sense, signifying the power of administering justice according to the means which the law has provided, and subject to the limitations imposed by the law upon the judicial authority.—7 Al. 345.

A decree of the High Court, giving possession of certain shares in a Bank to the plaintiff R, was reversed on appeal by the Privy Council. The defendant then applied to the Court of first instance to order restitution of the shares, which had been realized by the plaintiff. Upon being ordered to produce the shares, R made an application to the Court, professedly under sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which he alleged that, pending the appeal to the Privy Council, he had transferred the shares to G, his counsel in the case, who had failed to restore them, and he prayed "that the said person might be brought upon the record, and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him." The Court passed an order upon this application, calling on G to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares, made over to him by R, and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares, and alleging that he was their purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G's name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held that the question being one between two judgment-debtors, inter se, and not between the parties arrayed against each other as decree-holders of the one part, and judgment debtors or their representatives of the other, the provisions of sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case; that G could not be regarded as "representative" of R, within the meaning of that section; that the application by R was meant to be and actually was one praying that, in respect of the scrip, restitution of which was being enforced against him, the person to whom some interest in it, more or less, had come pending the suit, might, in addition to himself, in so far as such interest had passed from him, be brought under the operation of the execution-proceeding; that this was an application under sec. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code; and the order passed on it, being appealable under sec. 588 (21), was not open to revision by the High Court under sec. 622.—7 Al. 681.

Under sec. 3 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858), the Civil Court has no power to refuse to admit a person who has obtained a certificate of administration under the Act to defend a suit on the minor's behalf as guardian of such minor. Where a Subordinate Judge had so acted, held that the High Court had no power to revise his order under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.—7 Al. 914.

A suit was instituted in the Court of a Munsif to recover from the defendants a sum of Rs. 49, being the amount due under a bond, and which the plaintiff alleged had been recovered on her account by one of the defendants from the obligor. The Munsif, being of opinion that the determination of the plaintiff's right to the bond involved the question of her heirship to the estate of a certain deceased person, and that consequently the case before him raised a question affecting the title to property exceeding Rs. 1,000 in value, held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and accordingly returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court under sec. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench that the Munsif had acted upon an erroneous view, as the only subject-matter of the suit was the Rs. 49; that he had consequently failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him, and the High Court was therefore competent to revise his order under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. The result of Amir Hassan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal 6) and Magni Ram v. Jiwa Lal (I. L. R., 7 Al. 336) is that the questions to which sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code applies are questions of jurisdiction only. The meaning of the decision of the Privy Council in the former case is that, if the Court has jurisdiction to hear and determine a suit, it has jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions which arise in it, either of fact or law, and that the High Court has no jurisdiction under sec. 622 to inquire into the correctness of its view of the law, or the soundness of its findings as to facts; but that, when no appeal is provided, its decision on questions of both kinds is final. Per STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ.—Cls. a and b of sec. 584, specifying the grounds on which a second appeal lies to the High Court, embody what sec. 622 refers to in the word "illegally;" that is to say, to cases where the Court below has, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, come to a decision which is contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law, or failed to determine some material issue of law or usage. Cl. c of sec. 584 indicates the meaning of the words "material irregularity in sec. 622, i. e., some material irregularity in procedure, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits." Moulvi Muhammad v. Syed Hussain (I. L. R., 3 Al. 203) referred to.—8 Al. 111.

In execution of a decree for partition of immoveable property passed in 1872, a dispute arose as to the execution in reference to a portion of the property, and in 1881 it was finally decided that the decree was defective in its description of the property, and therefore incapable of execution. In May 1885, on application by the decree-holder, the Court passed an order amending the decree, the amendment having reference to an arithmetical error. The judgment-debtor applied to the High Court for revision of this order, on the grounds that the amendment of the decree was barred by limitation, and that, the decree itself being barred by limitation and finally pronounced to be incapable of execution, the Court had acted beyond its jurisdiction in amending it. Held that the application for revision must be rejected. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the High Court had no power to entertain the application under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, with reference to the decision of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6) and of the Full Bench in Badami Kuar v. Dinu Rai (I. L. R., 8 Al. 111), and further that, upon the facts stated, the Court ought not to interfere. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the Court was not precluded from entertaining the application for revision under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R., 11 Cal. 6), Badami Kuar v. Dinu Rai (I. L. R., 8 Al. 111), Raghunath Das v. Raj Kumar (I. L. R., 7 Al. 276), Surta v. Ganga (I. L. R., 7 Al. 411), Magni Ram v. Jiwa Lal (I. L. R., 7 Al. 336), Har Prasad v. Jafar Ali (I. L. R., 7 Al. 345), referred to. Bhagwant Singh v. Jageshar Singh (Weekly Notes, 1886, p. 57) and Abu Said Khan v. Hamid-un-nissa (Weekly Notes, 1886, p. 39) dissented from. The meaning of the term “jurisdiction” used in sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code must not be confined to the territorial or pecuniary limits of the powers of a Court, or to the nature of the class to which the case belongs. It implies, in addition to questions of these kinds, the presence or absence of a positive authority or power conferred by the law upon tribunals in cases which satisfy the other conditions referred to. In framing the section, the Legislature gave to the High Court power to interfere with the action of subordinate tribunals in cases where there is no remedy, either by appeal or otherwise, and where those tribunals have either exceeded or wrongly declined to exercise the authority, the power, and the jurisdiction which the law confers upon them, or under the pretence of exercising such authority, power, and jurisdiction, have acted against a positive prohibition of the law. Combe v. Edwards (L. R., 3 P. D., 103) and Crepps v. Durden (1 Smith’s L. C., 8th Ed., 711,) referred to. Held also per MAHMOOD, J., that in the present case the Court below had jurisdiction to entertain the application under sec. 206 of the Code; that it did so entertain it; and that in making the amendment its action could not be regarded as beyond the limits of its legal power and authority, so as to render it open to the objection of the exercise of jurisdiction “illegally or with material irregularity,” within the meaning of sec. 622. Lucas v. Stephen (9 W. R., 301), Oomanund Roy v. Maharajah Suttish Chunder Roy (9 W. R., 471), Zuhoor Hossein v. Syedun (11 W. R., 142), and Goluck Chunder Mussant v. Ganga Narain Mussant (20 W. R., 111), referred to. Under a proper interpretation of the preamble and sec. 4 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the rule of limitation is confined to the litigants, and is inapplicable to acts which the Court may or has to perform suo motu. Sec. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code empowers a Court of its own motion to amend its decree, and the mere fact that one of the parties has made an application, asking the Court to exercise that power, will not render the action of the Court subject to the rule of limitation. Robarts v. Harrison (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 333), Vithal Janardan v. Rakmi (I. L. R., 6 Bom. 586), and Kylasa Goundan v. Ramasami Ayyar (I. L. R., 4 Madr. 172) referred to.—8 Al. 519.

The High Court has no power to revise, under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, an order passed by a Collector under sec. 183 of the N. W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) on appeal from an Assistant Collector of the second class. Hur Pershad v. Lalu distinguished.—12 Al. 198.

Held by EDGE, C.J., and OLDFIELD and BRODHURST, J.J., that under sec. 15 of 24 and 25 Vic., c. 104, it is competent to the High Court, in the exercise of its power of superintendence, to direct a Subordinate Court to do its duty or to abstain from taking action in matters of which it has no cognizance; but the High Court is not competent, in the exercise of this authority, to interfere with and set right the orders of a Subordinate Court on the ground that the order of the Subordinate Court has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact. The High Court's power to direct a Subordinate Judge to do his duty is not limited to cases in which such Judge declines to hear or determine a suit or application within his jurisdiction. Held by STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, J.J., that the word "superintendence" used in sec. 15 of the Charter Act contemplated and now includes powers of a judicial or quasi judicial character, apart from those conferred on the Court by sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that the last mentioned provision may properly be accepted as indicating the extent to which the Court should ordinarily interfere with the findings of such subordinate tribunals as are invested with exclusive jurisdiction to try and determine all questions of law and fact arising in suits within their exclusive cognizance, and in which their decisions are declared by law to be final. Tej Ram v. Harsukh, Girdhari Singh v. Hurdeo Narain Singh, and in the matter of the petition of Mathra Pershad, referred to. The judgment of PETHERAM, C.J., in Badami Kuar v. Dina Rai explained.—9 Al. 104.

A Judge has no jurisdiction to pass, in a contested suit, a decree adverse to the defendant where there is no evidence or admission before him to support the decree, and where the burden of proof is not or has not continued to be upon the defendant. If he passes such a decree, it is liable to be set aside in revision under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Maulvi Muhammad v. Syed Husain and Sarnam Tewari v. Sakina Bibi referred to. S hired a horse from W, and while it was in his custody it died from rupture of the diaphragm, which was proved to have been caused by over-exertion on a full stomach. In a suit, by W against S to recover the value of the horse, the defendant gave evidence to the effect that the horse became restive and plunged about, that he might then have touched it with his riding cane, that it shortly afterwards again became excited, bolted for two miles, and at last fell down and died. This evidence was not contradicted on any point, nor was any other evidence offered as to how the horse came to run away. There was evidence that the horse was a quiet one, that for some time previously it had done hardly any work, that it was fed immediately before it was let out for hire, and that rupture of the diaphragm was a likely result of the horse running away while its stomach was distended with food. The Court of first instance held that the defendant was bound to prove that he had taken such care of the horse as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances have taken of his own property, that he must have used his whip freely, or done something else which caused the horse to bolt, and that in so doing he had acted without reasonable care, and had thus caused the animal's death. The Court accordingly decreed the claim. Held by EDGE, C.J., that if the burden of proof was originally upon the defendant, it was shifted by the explanation which he gave, and which was neither contradicted nor prima facie improbable; and that the decree of the lower Court, being unsupported by any proof, and based on speculation and assumption, was one which that Court had no jurisdiction to pass, and should consequently be set aside in revision under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BRODHURST, J., that, as the decree was not only unsupported by proof, but opposed to the evidence on the record, the lower Court had "acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally," within the meaning of sec. 622. Collins v. Bennett, Byrne v. Boadle, Gee v. The Metropolitan Railway Company, Scott v. The London Dock Company, Nanzoni v. Douglas, Cotton v. Wood, Davey v. The London and South Western Railway Company, and Hammack v. White referred to —9 Al. 398.

The plaintiffs sued upon two bonds executed by the defendant in their father's favour—one for Rs. 200, and the other for Rs. 99-15 annas. The defendant in his written statement, as well as in his deposition, admitted execution of the bonds in question, but pleaded non-receipt of consideration. The Subordinate Judge held that the bond for Rs. 200 was not proved, but awarded the claim upon the other bond. On appeal, one of the issues raised by the Assistant Judge was—are the bonds in suit proved? He held that the plaintiffs had failed to prove execution of the bonds, and dismissed the claim in toto. On an application to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that, the defendant having admitted execution of the bonds in question, the Assistant Judge acted illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction in raising the question of the execution. The first rule of adjudication is that a Judge shall decide secundum allegata et probata. The only question that could be tried in the present case was non-receipt of consideration.—11 Bom. 435.

Sec. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827 empowers the District Court to make an order directing the administrators appointed under the Regulation to make over the property, when “it has been determined” between the rival claimants who is the heir of the deceased; but, to give full effect to the object of the Regulation, the word “determined” must be understood “finally determined.” Where the Judge considered that he was bound to make an order directing administrators appointed under Regulation VIII of 1827 to make over the property of the deceased to one of the rival claimants who was judicially declared to be the heir of the deceased. Held that so long as the party, against whom the decision in the matter of the rival claims was given, had a right of appeal, the order of the Judge was one which he could not make under the Regulation, and that in exercising his jurisdiction under the Regulation he had exercised it illegally, and that being so, the High Court had power, under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction.—16 Bom. 708.

The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover arrears of an annual allowance to which the plaintiff claimed to be entitled under a sanad, dated 1846. The defendant in his defence raised certain points, most of which he had raised in a previous suit brought against him by the plaintiff for the recovery of arrears of the same allowance, and which in that suit had been decided against him. The lower Court held that the decision of the former suit operated as res judicata and refused to allow the defendant to put forward any new matter which might and ought to have been urged as a defence in the former suit. A decree was made in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant applied to the High Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the decision, even though wrong, of a question of res judicata was not a failure, or a cause of failure, to exercise jurisdiction, and did not warrant the interference of the High Court under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—11 Bom. ---

There is nothing in sec. 622 of the Code which prevents the High Court from setting aside an interlocutory order if made without jurisdiction. The word “case” in that section is wide enough to include such an order, and the words “records of any case” include so much of the proceedings in any suit as relate to an interlocutory order. Omrao Mirza v.

The consideration of an objection under sec. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code, having first been entertained and adjourned by an Additional Subordinate Judge, subsequently came before the Subordinate Judge, who struck off the case for default. No order under sec. 25 transferring the case to the Subordinate Judge was on the record, nor was it otherwise shown how he obtained jurisdiction to deal with it. Held that the High Court, in the exercise of its revisional powers under sec. 622 of the Code, should not presume that the Subordinate Judge had taken up the case without jurisdiction ; that the proper remedy of the petitioner was an application under sec. 103, read with sec. 647, or a suit under sec. 283, and that the High Court should not interfere in revision.—10 Al. 119.

Where a District Court, purporting to act under sec. 4 of Act XIX of 1841 directed an inventory of the estate of a deceased person to be taken without conforming to the requirements of sec. 3 of that Act, the High Court set aside the order under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure as made without jurisdiction.—10 Madr. 68.

An order passed under sec. 18 of Act XX of 1863, refusing leave to sue, is not appealable, nor, if the Judge have exercised his discretion, liable to revision under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—10 Madr. 98.

In a suit in a Small Cause Court for rent due in respect of two pieces of land, the Court passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant preferred a petition to the High Court under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 622, which came on for hearing before one Judge. He held that the Small Cause Court had failed to give effect to a former decree between the parties in respect of one piece of land, and made an order reversing the decree as to that, and calling for a report of what was due on the other piece of land. The plaintiff preferred an appeal under Letters Patent, sec. 15 :—Held, (1) the above-mentioned order was subject to appeal as being a judgment ; (2) even if the Subordinate Judge had failed to give effect to the previous decree, the error was not such as to give the Court jurisdiction to revise his proceedings under Civil Procedure Code, sec. 622.—14 Madr. 406.

A sued four persons, against whom, together with A, a money decree had been passed in a previous suit, to recover a proportionate part of a sum paid by A, in discharge of the decree-debt. Two of the defendants pleaded that they had not appeared in the former suit, and have been unnecessarily brought into the record by A. Held that the Court had jurisdiction to inquire into the circumstances of the previous suit. Suput Singh v. Imrit Tewari, (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 720) followed.—10 Madr. 518.

The discretionary power of a Civil Court, before or against which an offence mentioned in sec. 468 of sec. 469 of Act X of 1872 is alleged to have been committed, to grant or withhold sanction to the prosecution for such offence, is not subject to revision by the High Court under sec. 622 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 508.

Sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act does not prohibit a rehearing under sec. 105 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A rehearing differs widely from a review. A High Court can interfere under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure without an application made to it by a party to a suit.—4 Madr. 217.

The rule of English practice which prevents a minor from instituting a suit in forma pauperis through his next friend, unless he gives proof n o only that he is himself pauper, but that the next friend is a pauper, and that he cannot get any substantial person to act as his next friend, is not to be found in, or deduced from, the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code.—3 Madr. 3.

Where an auction-purchaser applied to the High Court to set aside, in the exercise of its power under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, an order setting aside a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree, on the ground that such order was illegal, such application being made nearly seventeen months after the date of such order, the Court, having regard to the time that had elapsed before such application was made, refused to interfere.—4 Al. 154.

An application to sue as a pauper having been refused, on the ground that the suit was barred by limitation, the High Court, on revision, permitted the applicant to renew his application to the Court below. The Subordinate Judge verbally rejected this second application, stating that he would deliver a written judgment. Before the written judgment was delivered, the applicant offered to pay the usual court-fees (although not actually tendering them at the time), and asked that the petition might be taken as a plaint filed on the date of the first application. This offer was mentioned and refused in the written judgment. Held, on the case coming up to the High Court under Act X of 1877, sec. 622, that the circumstances of the case were not such as would justify the Court in interfering under that section.—5 Cal. 807; 6 C. L. R., 223.

No Court, other than a Court of Appeal or a High Court acting under sec. 622, can discharge an order of attachment issued by another Court. Where a claimant to property attached in execution of a decree intervenes, but fails to get the order of attachment set aside, and is compelled to bring a suit to establish his right, the discharge of the order of attachment cannot properly be asked for in such suit. The intervenor, having established his title by declaratory decree or otherwise, should then carry the decree to the Court by which the order of attachment was issued, and such Court is bound to recognize the adjudication, and govern itself accordingly. Narayanrav Damedar v. Balkrishna Mahadev Gadre (I. L. R., 4 Bom. 529) followed.—4 Madr. 131.

After a mortgage had been foreclosed under the provisions of Regulation XVII of 1806, the representative of the mortgagor deposited the mortgage-money in Court. The District Judge ordered that the money should be paid to the mortgagee, on the ground that the mortgagor had not been personally served with the notice required by sec. 8 of that Regulation, and that it did not appear that she had been aware of the foreclosure-proceedings. The District Judge subsequently ordered the mortgagee, who was in possession of the mortgaged property under the term of the mortgage, to surrender the property. The mortgagee applied to the High Court to revise these orders under sec. 622 of Act X of 1877. Held that the application was entertainable under the provisions of that section, and that the orders of the District Judge were made without jurisdiction, and should be set aside.—3 Al. 576.

S instituted a suit against T in the Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class, who dismissed the suit. On appeal by S the District Court gave her a decree. On second appeal by T the High Court held that, as the suit was one of the nature cognizable in a Court of Small Causes, a second appeal would not lie in the case, and dismissed it. T thereupon applied to the High Court to set aside, under the provisions of sec. 622 of Act X of 1877, the proceedings of both the lower Courts, on the ground that both those Courts had exercised a jurisdiction not vested in them by law. Held that the High Court was competent to entertain such application, and to quash the proceedings of both the lower Courts under the provisions of sec. 622 of Act X of 1877, and the proceedings of both those Courts should be quashed. Observations by STUART, C. J., on the powers of revision of the High Court under sec. 622 of Act X of 1877.—3 Al. 417.

Per PEARSON J., OLDFIELD J., and STRAIGHT, J.—When, under sec. 622 of Act X of 1876, the High Court has called for the record of a case in which no appeal lies to it, it may, under that section, pass any order in such case which it might pass if it dealt with the case as a second appeal under chap. 42 of that Act. Per STUART, C. J.—The High Court may, under that section, pass in such case any order, whether in regard to fact or law, as it thinks proper. Where, in a case of the execution of a decree in which no second appeal lay to the High Court, the Appellate Court held, on the construction of the decree, that it awarded interest on the principal amount of the decree, the High Court, under sec. 722 of Act X of 1877, holding that the Appellate Court has misconstrued the decree, and that the decree did not award such interest, modified the order of the Appellate Court accordingly.—3 Al. (F. B.) 203.

The purchaser at a sale by public auction did, by the exercise of fraud and collusion with the agent of the execution-creditor (though without the creditor's personal knowledge), succeed in becoming the purchaser at a depreciated value. There was no material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. Held that the Court which ordered the sale had jurisdiction to refuse to confirm the sale on the ground of the the fraud practised by the agent of the execution-creditor and the purchaser. Held also that the High Court had power under sec. 622 of Act X of 1877, to rescind the order made by the Court of first instance confirming the sale. Held by KERNAN, J.—That the party defrauded ought not to be referred to bring a regular suit. The question ought to be decided at once on motion in the original cause. Held by MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J., that fraud was a valid ground of relief on petition when it related to the mode in which the auction was held, and the purchaser was a party to it, but it was doubtful whether fraud was a ground of relief on petition when it was a remote cause of the sale.—2 Madr. 264.

A and B, both of whom set up a claim to certain land, brought separate rent-suits against the tenants. In none of these suits did the amount claimed exceed Rs. 100. Subsequently to the institution of the rent-suit, A sued B to establish his title to the land in dispute. The District Judge, before whom the rent-suits came on appeal, allowed them to stand over until the decision in the suit between A and B. That suit was decided in favour of B, and the Judge then decided the rent-suits instituted by B in his favour, and dismissed the suit instituted by A. Held that no second appeal would lie in the rent-suits, as no question of title between parties having conflicting claims was decided in them. Held also that there was no such irregularity on the part of the District Judge in the course which he pursued, of making his decision in the rent-suits depeped upon the decision in the suit to establish title, as would justify the Court in interfering under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.—7 Cal. 330.

A Division Bench (PINHEY and NANABHAI HARIDAS, JJ.) of the High Court referred the following question for the determination of the Full Bench: "Whether the High Court should exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction under sec. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure or otherwise, on behalf of persons who feel themselves aggrieved by orders passed by Courts below in cases in which it appears the law has specifically prescribed another remedy by suit or otherwise?" Held that the question did not admit of a precise categorical reply; that the High Court could not impose on itself limitations without regard to circumstances; but that the general principles governing the exercise, by the High Court, of its visitatorial or superintending powers to be deduced from a general survey of the authorities on the subject might be reduced to the form on the following seven propositions, the fifth of which would ordinarily govern in the class of cases alluded to in the question: (1) The visitatorial or superintending power of the High Court is so necessary, and almost indispensable, that it is not to be wholly excluded even by a clause in a Statute withdrawing cases under the Statute from its control. When such a Statute has been made a mere pretext, or has been wholly misapplied, the case will be treated as one not really arising under the Statute, but on an evasion or perversion of the Statute, and, as such, subject to the general control of the Court. (2) The Court, having called up the record or proceedings of a subordinate Court, will itself investigate the facts on which a jurisdiction has been assumed or declined; on which it depends whether the subordinate Court could or could not legally deal with the matter in question, either at all or on the principle to which it has referred the case; or according to which its mode of inquiry or of action may or may not have been in contradiction rather than obedience to the rules of procedure, or the principles implied in them, to such a material extent as to defeat the purpose of the law. (3) If the Court finds that the external conditions of jurisdiction, of investigation, and of command, have been satisfied by the inferior Court, it will not substitute its own appreciation of evidence, or its own judgment thereon, for the determination of the inferior Court in any matter committed by the Legislature to the discretion of such Court. (4.) Where an appeal is provided, the Court will not interfere by any peremptory order with the ordinary course of adjudication, save in cases wherein a defeat of the law and a grave wrong are manifest, and are irremediable by the regular procedure. (5) Where a decree or order of a Subordinate Court is declared by the law to be, for its own purposes, final or conclusive, though in its nature provisional, as subject to displacement by the decree in another more formal suit, the Court will have regard to the intention of the Legislature that promptness and certainty should, in such cases, be in some measure accepted instead of judicial perfection. It will rectify the proceedings of the inferior Court where the extrinsic conditions of its legal activity have plainly been infringed; but where the alleged or apparent error consists in a misappreciation of evidence, or misconstruction of the law, intrinsic to the inquiry and decision, it will respect the intended finality, and will intervene) peremptorily only when it is manifest that by the ordinary and prescribed method and adequate remedy, or the intended remedy cannot be had. (6) The Court will, in all cases, regard its exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction as discretionary, and subject to considerations of the importance of the particular case, or of the principle involved in it, of delay on the part of an applicant, and of his merits with respect to the case in which the interference of the Court is sought. Should other special causes appear for or against the Court's intervention, due weight is to be given to them, regard being always had to principles already enunciated. (7) The Court will "sedulously abstain" from making any order or refusing to make it on grounds the appreciation of which is exclusively assigned by law to some other authority, provided the legal competence be exercised in good faith on matters that may reasonably be understood as within its lawful range. —7 Bom. 341.

PART VIII.

CHAPTER XLVII.

OR REVIEW OF JUDGMENT.

Application for review of judgment.

623. Any person considering himself aggrieved—

(a) by a decree or order from which an appeal is hereby allowed, but from which no appeal has been preferred;

(b) by a decree or order from which no appeal is hereby allowed; or

(c) by a judgment on a reference from a Court of Small Causes, and who, from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge, or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or an account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order, or to the Court, (if any) to which the business of the former Court has been transferred.

A party who is not appealing from a decree may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party, except when the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant, or when, being a respondent, he can present to the Appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

This was an application for review of judgment of three out of five analogous cases decided by the High Court, the judgment in two of which had been reversed by the Privy Council. The application was made after a lapse of more than 90 days from the date of judgment. Held a lapse of 90 days, under the circumstances, would not be a bar to the granting of the review.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 287; S. C. 12 W. R., 154.

The omission of a Court to take into consideration a material issue is a sufficient ground to admit an application for review of judgment. When an application for review is admitted upon other grounds, fresh evidence not produced at the trial may be received, although on reason, as required by sec. 376, Act VIII. of 1859, has been assigned for the non-production at the trial.—3 B. L. R., (A. C.) 346.; 12 W. R., 223; 16 W. R., 134; 16 W. R., 150.

A Court of original jurisdiction has power to entertain an application to review an order refusing a petition for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Under sec. 15 of 24 and 25 Vic., c. 104, the High Court set aside an order of a Court of original jurisdiction, refusing to entertain such an application on the ground that the Court had not jurisdiction to entertain it.—5 B. L. R., App. 29. See 5 B. L. R., 318 note; 11 W. R., 22.

A daughter succeeded to a share of her father's estate, and transferred it in full property, by a formal instrument or ikrarnama dated March 1849, to her grand-daughter, expressly naming her, and treating her as her heiress: the transfer being in the nature of a release, reserving maintenance and other advantages to the donor. Upon the application of the grand-daughter before the Collector, for the mutation of names according to the terms of the ikrarnama, the reversioners (collateral heirs of the father) affected to contest the unauthorized nature of the alienation, but dropped their opposition. In 1857, the diaras, or alluvial lands attached to the estate, were perpetually settled with the grand-daughter. The alienor quarrelled with her grand-daughter, and in 1857 brought a suit against her to set aside the ikrarnama, upon the ground of the non-performance of a condition subsequent. The plaintiff succeeded in the first Court, but the judgment was reversed (October 1858) on appeal to the Zilla Judge. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died (February 1858), and the reversioners applied to be, and were, admitted as her heirs to conduct the appeal. The grand-daughter remained in possession from the date of transfer until 1866, when she died. In April 1867 the present suit was brought by the surviving reversioner, who claimed to be entitled to recover possession of the property by right of inheritance from the alienor's father. He was one of the reversioners who had been admitted to conduct the appeal in the former suit upon the death of the alienor. Held (on special appeal and review) there had been no adverse possession; the instrument enured as a transfer of the donor's lifeinterest only; judgment in the former suit brought to set it aside did not bind or affect the reversioners, who, in that suit, merely represented the interest of their predecessor, the life-tenant. In the first Court an issue was raised whether or no the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was that the Principal Sadr Amin ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge, or in the first Court. On application for review, it was urged that the Court ought to have listened to this ground, but the Court adhered to its former decision. Counsel should not be heard to re-argue a case on review upon the same points as were argued in special appeal.—5 B. L. R., 585 ; 13 W. R., 52.

It cannot be treated as a universal rule that on point can be raised on an application for a review which has been already discussed and decided on the original hearing of the appeal ; or that no new point, which has not been raised on the hearing of the appeal, can be argued on the application for a review. In each case the Court to which the application is made must consider and decide whether a review is necessary to correct any evident error or omission, or is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice.—6 B. L. R., 126 ; 15 W. R., (F. B.) 1.

BAYLEY, J.—We are of opinion that there is no ground for this review. We are asked to pass an order enabling the applicant to have the plaint back in order to file it in the proper Court. The case was discussed at great length when the special appeal was argued, but no such request was then made before us. It was held by us, on the plaintiff's own showing, that the Court in which the suit was brought was admittedly a Court which had no jurisdiction to try it. If a party brings a suit in a Court which, according to his own showing, has no jurisdiction to try the case, it does not lie in him, failing in that Court, to ask to have the plaint back in order to file it in the proper Court. However, as the matters stand in the case, this request, as an alternative plea, was never made, or otherwise raised before ; and I think that, to allow such a point to be raised at this stage, would be against the proper legal principle.—viz., that there must be some end to litigation.—6 B. L. R., App. 141.

Upon the dismissal of a special appeal by the High Court, the appellant in special appeal applied to the High Court for a review of judgment upon the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was rejected, on the ground that the Court could not take cognizance of the merits of a case in special appeal, and, therefore, could not admit a review upon fresh evidence. The special appellant then applied to the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment, on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was admitted, and a review of the judgment was allowed. On application to the High Court under sec. 15 of the Charter Act, held that the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to admit the application for review.—6 B. L. R., 333 ; S. C. 14 W. R., 438. See also 6 B. L. R., 334 note ; 7 W. R., 218.

Upon the appeal of one of the defendants to the Privy Council, the judgment of the High Court was reversed. Another defendant, whose defence was the same as that of the defendant who had appealed, applied to the High Court to review its judgment after a lapse of several years from the date of the judgment of the High Court, but within three months from the date on which he became aware of the decision of the Privy Council. The application was refused. (3 B. L. R., (A.C.) 287) doubted.—9 B. L. R., 187 ; 18 W. R., 317.

An order refusing to admit a special appeal is open to review, and the application for review may be made without notice to the other side.—10 B. L. R., 155 ; 18 W. R., 475.

An application was made to the High Court for the admission of a special appeal. The petition contained ten grounds of appeal, and, after hearing a pleader in support of the application, it was rejected by two Judges. The present application was for a review of the order passed rejecting the application to admit the special appeal. The High Court refused the application, as the petitioner had had three distinct hearings in three different Courts, and therefore his case was thoroughly investigated; moreover, it was not suggested that there was anything peculiar or exceptional in this case, or that there had been any new discovery since the case was last heard, or that there had been any miscarriage by the Court, or that the case put forward on the last occasion was not correctly understood and disposed of.—10 B. L. R., 156 note, where, however, under the circumstances, the Court refused the application.—S. C., 17 W. R., 484.

Where a Subordinate Judge, after deciding a regular appeal, granted an application for review of judgment on the ground that new evidence had been discovered, but without any enquiry or proof that such evidence was not within the knowledge of the applicant, or could not have been adduced by him at the time the decree was passed, held that this was an error or defect in the procedure or investigation of the case which affected the decision, and was a ground of appeal when the decision upon review was brought before the High Court on special appeal. The word “final” in sec. 378 of Act VIII. of 1859 means that the order rejecting the application or granting the review shall not by itself be open to appeal.—11 B. L. R., 423; 20 W. R., 84; 20 W. R., 426; 4 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 57.

Where a party applying for a review of judgment after the expiry of the period of ninety days allowed by sec. 377, Act VIII of 1859, had not, as required by that section, shown any just and reasonable cause for not preferring his application within the prescribed period, the order admitting the review was held to have been improperly granted, and was set aside with all subsequent proceedings thereon.—14 B. L. R., 373; S. C. L. R., 2 I A. 58; 10 W. R., 42; 24 W. R., 294; 8 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 234; 8 W. R., 184; 25 W. R., 343; 12 W. R., 94; 18 W. R., 286.

A Judge is bound to proceed with an application for a review of his judgment, even though a petition of appeal has been filed subsequently to the application for a review.—B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 362; 5 W. R., 59.

A Court has no power to reverse an order of a Co-ordinate Court which has determined the precise question after a suit has proceeded to its conclusion in pursuance of that order.—2 M. H. C. R., 349. But see 16 W. R., 78; 16 W. R., 85.

A Civil Court, in hearing an appeal from the decision of a Collector under Madr. Act VIII. of 1865, must be guided by the Civil Procedure Code, and the judgment of the Civil Court may be reviewed under sec. 376 of the Code. The order granting a review is final. Semble, the terms of sec. 57 of Act VIII. of 1865 are wide enough to justify a Collector in treating as ex parte a defendant not appearing on the day to which the hearing of the suit may have been adjourned under sec. 66 of the Act.—4 M. H. C. R., 251.

A Court has no jurisdiction to grant a second review of judgment on the application of the same party under the Code of Civil Procedure.—5 M. H. C. R., 323.

Applications for reviews should be drawn up in the same manner as applications for the admission of special appeals, and should set forth concisely the grounds of objection to the decision sought to be reviewed.—1 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 185.

A remand-order made on special appeal is (unless a review of it be obtained within the prescribed time) a conclusive determination of the points of law involved in it ; and the correctness of law laid down upon a remand cannot be questioned on a second special appeal ; nor is the fact of the Court's adopting a different view of the law after an order has been made in general a good ground for allowing a review of such order after the time for a review has elapsed.—6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 146.

As a general rule, the discovery of new evidence is not a ground for the admission of a review of a judgment passed in special appeal. Whether this is so when such new evidence might affect the jurisdiction of the Court which tried the case.—Quære.—When new evidence is discovered, the proper course for the appellant to adopt is to ask leave to withdraw his special appeal, and to apply to the lower Court for a review of its judgment.—9 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 89 ; 6 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 68.

When a review of a decision has been admitted, the whole case is thereby re-opened.—10 Bom. H. C. R., (A. C.) 360.

A Judge is not competent to hear a review in a case in which a special appeal has been admitted by the higher Court. When a tenant is sued for arrears of rent, even though he should deposit the rent in Court during the pendency of the suit, he is still liable to have the decree passed against him, as the arrear was admittedly due when the suit was brought. Interest to date of deposit in Court, and costs of suit being paid within 15 days, execution would be avoided.—1 N.-W. P. H. C. R., Pt. II 39 ; Ed. 1873, 97.

Sec. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 does not authorize the taking a case in progress of trial off the file of a Subordinate Judge in order that it may be completed by the Judge himself or some other Court. It is clear that such transfer must take place on the institution of the suit.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 230.

The Court which pronounces a judgment is the only Court that can review such judgment.—2 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 230.

The Lower Courts refused to give effect to an order of a former Munsif passed under the following circumstances, on the ground that it was passed without jurisdiction. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed "in default of prosecution," on the ground that he had failed to deposit talabana, although time had been allowed him for that purpose. He was represented by a pleader at the adjourned hearing. He subsequently applied for the re-admission of the suit on the ground that he had been prevented by illness from depositing the money. The defendants objected (1) that, if the application was one for a review of judgment, it was insufficiently stamped ; (2) that the suit was not decided under sec. 110 or sec. 119 of the Civil Pro. Code ; and (3) that the reason assigned by the plaintiff for his default, even if true, was an insufficient reason. The Munsif treated the application as one under sec. 119 of the Code, and directed the re-admission of the suit. It was held that the plaintiff's application might fairly be regarded as an application for a review of judgment under sec. 376 of the Code, and, in that view, that the misconstruction by the Munsif of the nature of the application was not a sufficient reason for depriving the plaintiff of the relief which he not inequitably obtained by the order passed upon it, and the Court of first instance was directed to call upon the plaintiff to pay the fee payable on his application for a review of judgment, and, in the event of his complying with the requisition, to give effect to the former Munsif's order.—7 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 126. See also 5 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 74.

The Munsif dismissed a suit. Afterwards he issued a rule calling upon the defendant to show cause why a review of judgment should not be granted. The defendant showed cause, but his objections were overruled; the review was granted, both plaintiff and defendant adduced new evidence, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed this decision on the ground relied upon by the defendant in showing cause in the lower Court, namely, that the defendant had not established that with due diligence he could not have brought forward in the original trial the evidence upon which his application for review was based. Held, on special appeal, that the fact of the defendant having adduced fresh evidence in the Court below did not debar him from objecting before the Subordinate Judge that the review was wrongly granted, because the order admitting it was final.—2 C. L. R., 257.

In a suit to recover possession of certain land, which, though described in the plaint as partly bastoo and partly agricultural land, was treated by both parties as agricultural only, it was found by the Court of first instance that the defendants had acquired a right of occupancy. The finding having been confirmed by the lower Appellate Court, an application was made for a review, and on review that Court reversed its former decree on the ground that no right of occupancy could be acquired. Held that on review the lower Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection that the land was not agricultural without remanding the case for the trial of a fresh issue on that point.—10 C. L. R., 106.

Sec. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to all cases, whether they are disposed of in the presence of the parties or ex parte in the absence of the defendants.—13 C. L. R., 254.

Held that, when an issue which decides the case on the merits has been found in favour of either party, a review of judgment will not be granted merely because there has been an erroneous decision on a point affecting an issue which, in consequence of the finding, has become immaterial.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 131.

A Judge cannot, by transferring a case to his own file, confer on himself the power to review an order of dismissal pronounced by a Principal Sadr Amin.—W. R., 1864, Mis., 29.

A Judge has power to grant a review after the lapse of the ninety days within which the application ought to be made.—W. R., (F. B.) 84.

When a case is admitted to review by the deciding Judge, and tried afterwards by another Judge, the new Judge ought to try only the point directed by the order of review.—W. R., 1864, 142.

An application for a review of judgment by the High Court on a reference from a Small Cause Court was not admissible under the Code of 1859.—3 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 8.

No review can be admitted of a judgment passed on a compromise.—5 W. R., 226.

A Court should give reasons on review of judgment, for coming to a different conclusion from that which it had previously formed.—6 W. R., 18.

An appeal to the Privy Council being once admitted, whether properly or erroneously, the High Court has no further jurisdiction to review its order, and declare the appeal rejected.—6 W. R., Mis., 97; 6 W. R., Mis., 120.

The preferring of an appeal against a decision by one defendant does not deprive another defendant of his right to apply for a review of the same decision with reference to sec. 376, Act VIII of 1859.—7 W. R., 166.

A proceeding admitting a review, without notice to the opposite party, as required by sec. 378 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, is wholly vitiated by such defect, and not binding on that party.—8 W. R., 304.

There seems to be no limit to the time after the expiration of ninety days at which the application for review may be filed, provided the applicant can satisfy the Court that there is just and reasonable ground for review.—8 W. R., 483.

An application for a review, on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, of a judgment of the late Sadr Court rejecting a special appeal, ought not to be made to the High Court, but to the Court of original jurisdiction.—8 W. R., 511.

That the lower Court should have improperly neglected to examine a witness is not a ground for a review of judgment, if the objection was not taken when the case was heard by the Court in regular appeal.—9 W. R., 129.

That one Division Bench of the High Court has decided a point at variance with the decision of another Division Bench is no reason for granting a review of judgment.—9 W. R., 158.

A party wishing to be heard in support of new grounds must apply for permission under sec. 374, Act VIII of 1859 : he cannot be permitted to raise them in an application for review.—9 W. R., 370.

The fact that the High Court ought to have remanded the case on the ground that the Judge had wrongly decided a point of law is no ground for review.—9 W. R., 589.

When once a Civil Court has passed a final decision between the parties it loses jurisdiction over the suit, except for the purposes of executing the decree ; and it cannot hold a new trial of the same unless, for some reason within the Procedure Act, the first trial appears to have been unfair between the two parties.—10 W. R., 42.

An error on a point of law is a ground for a review of judgment.—10 W. R., 143.

Section 376 of the Code of Civil Procedure authorized reviews of judgment in respect to decrees of Court, and also in respect to orders which not decrees.—10 W. R., 345.

An order rejecting a review is final.—11 W. R., 264 ; 11 W. R., 184.

A petition for the rectification of a decree is not different from an application for a review when the object of the rectification is to alter decision of the Court, and such a petition cannot be received after ninety days without just and reasonable cause for the delay being shown to the satisfaction of the Court.—13 W. R., 33.

Though a certain issue in a suit was decided against the plaintiff, the suit was decreed, and the defendants obtained a review on which that decree was set aside, and the plaintiff's suit declared barred by limitation. On this the plaintiff applied for a review of both judgments. Held that, though his application in relation to the former judgment was not in time, yet, as he had no occasion to ask for a review until the latter judgment was passed, the words of sec. 376, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, entitled him to ask the Court to re-consider both judgments.—13 W. R., 69.

Where a review has been admitted by the sole remaining Judge of the Bench which heard the case originally, it is not open to counsel, on the rehearing of the appeal, to question the propriety of the order for admission. If such order is wrong, the error cannot be corrected by the Bench appointed to hear the appeal after its restoration to its original number on the file.—13 W. R., 82.

Where a Subordinate Judge admitted a review on the representation of plaintiff that he (the Judge) had made a mistake as to the subject of a certain dagh in a Government halabadee chitta, the applicant filing with his petition for review another chitta and other evidence for the purpose of convincing the Court that it had made an error, held that an error of this kind was sufficient to found the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the review.—14 W. R., 236.

Where the decision of a lower Court follows a view of the law taken by the High Court, and that view is set aside by a ruling of Her Majesty in Council, the judgment-creditor has a right to have his case re-tried upon that ruling.—15 W. R., 143. *

An infant is as much bound by a judgment in his own action as if of full age, and, if an application for review is made on his behalf, it must be subject to the conditions of the 376th and 377th sections of the Code of Civil Procedure.—16 W. R., 231.

Where a Judge on appeal declined to admit additional evidence, on the ground that the application should have been made to the lower Court, held it was a ground for applying for a review of his order pointing out his mistake.—17 W. R., 47.

A Subordinate Judge has the power under the law to review the decision of his predecessor, although the power is one which should be exercised very sparingly.—18 W. R., 198.

The objection to the admission of a review of judgment on the strength of a new document was not allowed to prevail in a case where the so-called new document was not the sole reason for the admission of the review.—18 W. R., 316.

A review cannot be granted on the ground that, if the facts had been better or more fully placed before the Court, the judgment would have been different, or even on the ground of a subsequent decision of a question of law by the Privy Council in another suit where there has been no discovery of new evidence such as is contemplated in sec. 376 of Act VIII. of 1859.—19 W. R., 189.

The inferior Courts in the mofussil have no jurisdiction to review their own judgments, except under the circumstances and with the limitations set forth in the Code of Civil Procedure.—20 W. R., 180.

Where claims for rent were decreed by a Deputy Collector on the basis of a decree for a kabuliat, which latter decree was subsequently set aside, the proper remedy was an application to the Deputy Collector for a review of his decision.—22 W. R., 161.

The discovery of new evidence may make it proper to grant a review, but the circumstances must be very special—the more so when the application for review is made many years after the date of the decree, and the evidence discovered must be of a clear and conclusive character.—23 W. R., 323.

A review cannot be given merely for the purpose of allowing the par- ties to re-argue the case upon the evidence, upon the chance of eventually throwing doubt upon the decision already passed.—24 W. R., 186.

Whether certain documents which have already been admitted as evidence were so admissible or not, is not a point which can be urged in review.—24 W. R., 186.

Where a Judge, who had ordered a certificate of guardianship to be granted under Act XL. of 1858, granted a review of his order on one point, held that he had no power to re-open another question which he had already decided finally, and on which no application for review was made.—24 W. R., 427.

It is not a proper ground for granting a review of judgment that a Judge, by going through the evidence a second time, might arrive at a different conclusion.—25 W. R., 324.

In a suit between A and B, heard on the 29th January 1883, a certain conveyance was filed with the plaint, but up to the hearing this conveyance has been protected from discovery. B's counsel had, however, had a copy thereof delivered to him at the time B's written statement was being drawn, and a copy briefed to him at the hearing. At the hearing A's counsel stated that the effect of the conveyance was to vest the entirety of a certain property in A; this view was accepted by B's counsel, who did not read the conveyance. The only issue in the case was "who was in possession of the property," and the Court decided this issue on the 5th February in favour of the plaintiff. On the 26th February, B brought a suit against A to set aside this conveyance on the ground of fraud. And in certain proceedings in this case taken on the 31st March, B's counsel discovered, as he alleged for the first time, that under the conveyance a moiety of a seven-twenty-fourth share remained in B. On that day instructions were given to B's counsel to draw up a petition of review of the judgment of the 5th February. This petition, owing to the Easter Vacation, was not, and could not have been, presented till the 9th April. Held that the words "sufficient reason" in sec. 623 of the Code should receive a liberal construction, and should be construed so as to do substantial justice to the parties; that, as in this case it appeared to the Court that the construction placed upon the conveyance by B's counsel was the correct one, "sufficient reason" had been shown for making the application. In deciding whether B had shown "sufficient cause" within the meaning of sec. 5 of the Limitation Act for not making the application within the time allowed by law, the Court, following the principles laid down by BOWEN, L. J., in re Manchester Economic Building Society (L. R., 24 Ch. D. 488) in its discretion, held that "sufficient cause" had been shown by B.—Anderson v. Corporation of the Town of Calcutta (I. L. R., 10 Cal. 445) distinguished.—I. L. R., 11 Cal. 767.

Per GARTH, C. J.—Although it is difficult and perhaps undesirable to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words "any other sufficient reason" in sec. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, yet from the earlier part of the clause it is clear that a point which might have been, but which was not, discovered at the trial by the exercise of due diligence, was not intended by the section to afford any sufficient reason for review. Per WILSON, J.—Semble.—If at a trial all parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge, are under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document, or, even if the Judge alone is misled on such a point, and in consequence a wrong decree is made, the mistake ought to be corrected on review.—13 Cal. 62.

When an application for review is presented to the Judge who made the decree, and he thereupon issues notice to the other side, the application is "made" to him within the meaning of sec. 624 of the Civil Procedure Code, and may be heard and disposed of by his successor in office. Karoo Sing v. Deo Narain Singh (I. L.R., 10 Cal. 80) followed.—13 Cal. 231.

A second appeal was decided on the 1st June 1888 in favour of the respondent by Mr. JUSTICE WILSON and Mr. JUSTICE BEVERLEY. On the 24th July 1888, an application for review was filed with the registrar. Various reasons prevented the learned Judges abovenamed from sitting together until the month of March 1889. On the 6th March, the matter came up before their Lordships, when a rule was issued, calling upon the other side to show cause why a review of judgment should not be granted, being made returnable on the 28th March 1889. On the 28th March, Mr. JUSTICE WILSON had left India on furlough, and the rule was taken up, heard, and made absolute, by Mr. JUSTICE BEVERLEY, sitting alone. Held that Mr. JUSTICE BEVERLEY had jurisdiction to hear the rule.—16 Cal. 788.

R, as surety for her husband, joined with him in executing a bond for Rs. 90. In a suit brought upon the bond, a decree was passed against both. R was arrested in execution of the decree, and brought before the Court. She was then asked if she desired to apply to be declared an insolvent under the insolvency-sections of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), but not doing so she was committed to jail. Subsequently, however, she applied to be declared an insolvent, but her application was rejected. She then claimed to be released on the ground of her overture. The Judge rejected her application as being too late. On reference to the High Court, held that her application for release was virtually an application for review of the order for her imprisonment, on the ground that it was contrary to law; that her mere omission to take the objection at the time of her arrest could not be regarded as a waiver of her right of exemption from arrest; and, having regard to the nature of the right claimed, it was one which the Court could not properly decline to consider on review, however late the application might have been. Held, also, that, although the decree was absolute in its terms, and contained no express limitation of R's liability, nevertheless the law being clear that she could only be liable to the extent of her stridhan, it was to be assumed that the direction to pay, contained in the decree, had reference to that fund only.—12 Bom. 228.

By a deed of sale, dated 9th May 1858, certain lands belonging to a minor talukdar were sold by his mother and natural guardian to the plaintiffs, father. The lands were described as nakri (i.e., held free of assessment), and the sale-deed provided that, in case the vendee were at any future time compelled to pay assessment to Government in respect of the nakri lands, the vendor would recoup the vendee for any payment so made. In 1872 Government for the first time levied assessment on the nakri lands. In 1876 the plaintiff filed a suit against the talukdar to recover the amount of assessment paid by them in respect of the nakri lands for the years 1872-76. The High Court passed a decree in plaintiffs' favour in March 1883. Against this decree the talukdar appealed to the Privy Council. In April 1883, the plaintiffs filed a second suit on the same cause of action to recover from the talukdar the amount of assessment levied on the nakri lands for the years 1877-82. In this suit a decree was passed against the talukdar solely on the strength of the High Court's decree in the former suit. In execution of this decree the plaintiffs attached the talukdar's property. Thereupon the talukdar deposited in Court the amount due under the decree, and applied to the Court for removal of the attachment, and for stay of further proceedings in execution pending the disposal of his appeal to the Privy Council in the former suit. This application was granted.

In March 1887, the Privy Council decided the appeal in favour of talukdar, and reversed the High Court's decree. Thereupon the talukdar applied for a refund of the money he had deposited in Court. The Court suggested that his proper remedy was by an application for review of the decree in the second suit. The talukdar accordingly presented a petition of review. This petition was rejected by the District Judge, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to grant a review of his predecessor's decision, except on the grounds set forth in sec. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the District Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the application for review. The decision of the Privy Council, reversing the decree of the High Court in the first suit, having been passed subsequently to the decree in the second suit, which depended on the reversed decree of the High Court, was "new and important matter" within the meaning of secs. 623 and 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—13 Bom. 330.

A review of judgment may be granted (if it is necessary for the ends of justice that the judgment should be reviewed) where there is an error of law on the face of the judgment, or where the decision of the Court has proceeded upon a mistaken view of the law. Rewa Mahton v. Ram Kishen Singh, (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 18; L. R., 13 I. A., 106, referred to. In this case, without deciding whether there was or not any error in law, the application for review of judgment was refused on the ground that it did not appear there was any danger of its causing a miscarriage of justice.—14 Cal. 627.

Sec. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code provides for the procedure to be followed in miscellaneous matters other than suits and appeals, and its provisions, read with secs. 545 and 546 give no power to the Court or a Judge, after the passing of a final unappealable decree, and before the granting of an application for review of judgment, to order stay of execution of the decree. No such power exists under the Code. Sec. 623 gives a more extensive right of review than existed in England, where a review could only be obtained by showing that there was apparent on the record error in law, or that new and relevant matter had been discovered after the judgment which could not possibly have been used when the judgment was given, or that judgment was obtained by fraud. The words "or for any other sufficient reason" mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court or Judge to whom the application for review is made, and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record. Whether or not there is in such cases "any other sufficient reason" may depend on a question of law or a question of fact, or a mixed question of law and fact. Reasat Hosein v. Hadjee Abdoollah, referred to. In cases where a stay of execution or an injunction is granted on an ex parte application, liberty to apply to the Judge to vary or set aside his order must be implied, if not expressed. Fritz v. Hobson referred to. On the 29th July 1886, an application was made by a party against whom the High Court, on second appeal, had passed a decree, dated the 18th March 1886, for review of judgment. On the 28th Aug., the applicant made a further application that execution of the decree might be stayed pending the determination of the application for review, and an order was passed ex parte granting this application. Subsequently the opposite party applied under sec. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code for a review of the ex parte order on the grounds (i) that the Court had no jurisdiction to make it, and (ii) that the application of the 29th July was beyond time, and therefore there could be no review of judgment, and no order for stay of execution pending such review. Held that the Court had power, under sec. 623 of the Code, to review the ex parte order of the 28th August, and that such order had been made without jurisdiction, and ought to be reviewed. Held that the decree of the 18th March being final and unappealable, and no application for review of judgment having been granted within the meaning of sec. 630 of the Code, the application for stay of execution did not fall within sec. 545 or sec. 546, nor did sec. 647 apply to it, nor any other provision of the Code. Held that, having regard to the circumstances that the order of the 28th August was made without jurisdiction, and upon an ex-parte application, of which the opposite party had no notice, and interfered perhaps indefinitely with his right to obtain the money in Court under the final and unappealable decree in his favour, as to which no application for review had been granted, and that the application for review of judgment was made after the statutory period of ninety days had expired, and contained no explanation of the delay, sufficient reason for reviewing the order of the 28th August had been shown.—9 Al. 36.

An appeal which was referred to the Full Bench for disposal was heard and determined by the Full Bench, and judgment given in favour of the appellant in the absence of the respondent. Subsequently the respondent applied for a review of judgment, and proved that his absence at the hearing before the Full Bench was due to a mistake which had been made in not serving him with notice of the reference. Held by the Full Bench that, under the circumstances, the applicant's absence at the hearing came within the words "any other sufficient reason" in sec. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the review should be granted, and the appeal re-heard. Upon the hearing of an application for review of Judgment, upon which an order has been passed, directing the opposite party to show cause why the application should not be granted, counsel for the opposite party should begin.—9 Al. 61.

An order passed under sec. 63 of Act II of 1874 can be reviewed under Act X of 1877, sec. 623.—3 Cal. 340.

The absence of a formal finding on an issue tried and decided by a High Court of first instance is not an error calling for review of judgment in the High Court. A party who not only had an opportunity of raising a question, but who did raise it in appeal, and on argument abandoned it, cannot, under ordinary circumstances, be allowed to agitate the question on review.—2 Madr. 58.

Applications for the extension of the period for the submission of an award, and orders thereon, should be made in writing and recorded. When a party has been prejudiced by having the time allowed for taking objections to an award curtailed by the Court, no appeal lies, but a review should be granted by the Court of first instance.—3 Madr. 59.

The notice-clause in sec. 21, Act XI of 1865, is applicable only to those cases where a new trial cannot be applied for within seven days after the judgment, in consequence of there being no sitting of the Court. Where the application is made within seven days, the notice is unnecessary. If the grounds upon which the new trial is moved are proper grounds for granting a review, the applicant is entitled to proceed under sec. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure without resorting to Act XI of 1865.—8 Cal. 287 ; 10 C. L. R., 275 ; 5 Cal. 699 ; 5 C. L. R., 539.

Having regard to the decisions in Nanabhai v. Nathabhai (9 Bom. H. C. R., 89) and Narayan v. Davudhbhai (9 Bom. H. C. R., 238), and the uniform practice in accordance with them which had since obtained, and the practical similarity on this point of Act X of 1877, sec. 623, and Act VIII of 1859, sec. 376 (on which the cases above-mentioned were decided), the High Court allowed the appellant to withdraw his second appeal, after it had been argued, though not decided, in order that he might apply to the lower Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of the discovery of new evidence. The appellant to pay the respondent's costs of appeal.—7 Bom. 287.

The term "made" in sec. 624 of the Civil Procedure Code does not mean "presented," but means and includes the hearing and determination of the application for review of judgment. Held therefore, where an application for a review of judgment on the ground, not of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence as mentioned in sec. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, or of a clerical error apparent on the face of the decree, but on other grounds, was presented to the District Judge who delivered the judgment, and such Judge was transferred before he could entertain such application, that his successor was not competent to entertain it.—4 Al. 278.

Where a Judge allowed a review of his predecessor's judgment on the sole ground that it appeared to him that the judgment of his predecessor had done injustice, held by the High Court (MORGAN, C. J., and INNES, J.) that, though the generality of the terms used in the sections of the Procedure Code, Act VIII of 1859, relating to review of judgment, viz., "other good and sufficient reason" (see 376), and "otherwise requisite for the ends of justice" (see 378), confers a wide jurisdiction, this jurisdiction could not be held to authorize a Judge to revise and reverse his predecessor's decree on the ground above-mentioned. If the review is asked for in reference to the conclusions of fact drawn from the evidence, it should not be granted simply upon the same evidence. Reasut Hossein v. Hadjee Abdoolah (I. L. R., 2 Cal. 131, P.C.) discussed.—2 Madr. 10.

A Divisional Bench of the High Court sitting as a Court of second appeal, being of opinion that the Court of first appeal had omitted to determine a certain issue of fact, determined such issue itself, and decided the appeal in accordance with its determination of such issue. An application for review of judgment was made on two grounds, viz., (i) that the Bench was wrong in thinking that such issue had not been determined by the Court of first appeal and (ii) that the Bench sitting as a Court of second appeal was not empowered to determine an issue of fact which the Court of first appeal had omitted to determine, but should have referred such issue to that Court for determination under sec. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, looking to the provisions of that Code relating to review of judgment, such application ought not to be allowed on the grounds mentioned, which virtually disclosed reasons for appeal from the judgment.—5 Al. 14.

Although the discovery of a new ruling may not entitle a party to a review of judgment, yet when a Court is satisfied that this judgment has proceeded upon an erroneous view of the law, the provisions of sec. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure allow a review of judgment. Where a decree-holder applied to the Court to transmit the decree to another Court for execution, and on a subsequent date paid into Court postage-stamps for the transmission of the records, held that, if when the postage-stamps were paid into Court an application was made to take some steps in aid of execution, such application would be sufficient to give a new period of limitation.—7 Madr. 307.

It is competent to a party against whom an ex-parte decree has made to apply for review of judgment.—6 Al. 65.

A lower Court admitted a review of judgment on the ground that the decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court, which it had followed in that judgment, had subsequently been overruled by the Full Bench. Held that the lower Court was not authorized to admit a review of judgment on such ground.—6 Al. 292.

See I. L. R., 11 Al. 267, noted under sec. 206 ; 14 Madr. 252, noted under sec. 231 ; 15 Bom. 594, noted under sec. 11.

624. Except upon the ground of the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as To whom applications for review may be made. aforesaid, or of some clerical error apparent on the face of the decree, no application for a review of judgment, other than that of a High Court, shall be made to any Judge other than the Judge who delivered it.

Notes.

An application for review of judgment was presented on other grounds than those specified in sec. 624 to a District Munsif who had delivered the judgment, and he thereupon ordered the decree to be produced. The District Munsif having resigned, his successor heard and determined the application. Held, it was not competent to the District Munsif who had not delivered the original judgment to entertain the application for review.—I. L. R., 12 Madr. 509.

In the absence of the decree-holder and without giving him notice of the day fixed for the hearing of the darkhast, the Subordinate Judge struck off an execution proceeding. Held, that under section 624 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) an application to review the order could not be heard by the successor of the Judge who made it.—14 Bom. 101.

An application for review of judgment upon grounds other than those mentioned in sec. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure (as amended by Act VII of 1888), if presented to the Judge who delivered it, and who has thereupon directed notice to be given to the opposite party, may be heard and disposed of by his successor.—16 Bom. 603.

A Judge of a Mufassal Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to direct a new trial of a case tried by his predecessor, sec. 21 of Act XI of 1865, not having been repealed by the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Per GARTH., C.J.—The Judge, however, in dealing with applications for new trial under sec. 21, should have regard to the rule laid down in sec. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—6 Cal. 236.

An application for review of judgment, upon a ground other than those mentioned in sec. 624 of the Civil Procedure Code, if presented to the Judge who delivered it, and who thereupon directs notice to be given to the opposite party, may be heard and disposed of by his successor. Pancham v. Jhinguri, I. L. R., 4 Al. 278, dissented from.—10 Cal. 80.

Sec. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be read as a proviso to sec. 633. Held, therefore, that, when a Court had been abolished and its business transferred presided over by another Judge, such Judge should not entertain an application for review of judgment except in the case provided for by sec. 624.—8 Madr. 567.

See I. L. R., 4 Al. 278 and 13 Bom. 330, noted under sec. 623 ; 11 267, noted under sec. 206.

625. The rules hereinbefore contained as to the form of making appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to applications for review.

Form of applications for review.

Note.

An order made under Act X of 1877, sec. 409, refusing leave to sue as a pauper, is subject to review under sec. 623. The provisions of sec. 413 do not affect the right of a person against whom such order has been made to obtain a review. A petitioner applying for such review must file a copy of the order of which he seeks a review, together with a memorandum of objections (secs. 541 and 625).—I. L. R., 4 Bom. 414.

626. If it appears to the Court that there is not sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application.

Application when rejected.

If the Court be of opinion that the application for the review should be granted, it shall grant the same, and the Judge shall record with his own hand his reasons for such opinion :

Application when granted.

Proviso.

Provided that—

(a) no such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party to enable him to appear and be heard in support of the decree a review of which is applied for ; and

(b) no such application shall be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge, or could not be adduced by him, when the decree or order was passed, without strict proof of such allegation ; and

(c) an application made under section 624 to the Judge who delivered the judgment may, if that Judge has ordered notice to issue under proviso (a) to this section, be disposed of by his successor.*

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The Judge of a Mufassal Small Cause Court may grant an application for a review of judgment under Act X of 1877.—I. L. R., 5 Cal. 699.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 316, noted under sec. 311 ; 16 Bom. 603, noted under sec. 624.

627. If the Judge or Judges, or any one of the Judges, who passed the decree or order, a review of which is applied for, continues or continue attached to the Court at the time when the application for a review is presented, and is not or are not precluded by absence or other cause, for a period of six months next after the application, from considering the decree or order to which the application refers, such Judge or Judges, or any of them, shall hear the application, and no other Judge or Judges of the Court shall hear the same.

Application for review in Court consisting of two or more Judges.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 16 Cal. 788, noted under 623.

628. If the application for a review be heard by more than one Judge, and the Court be equally divided, the application shall be rejected.

when reject-

If there be a majority, the decision shall be according to the opinion of the majority.

629. An order of the Court for rejecting the application shall be final ; but whenever such application is admitted, the admission may be objected to on the ground that it was—

Order of rejection final.
Objections to admission.

(a) in contravention of the provisions of section 624,
(b) in contravention of the provisions of section 626, or
(c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause.

Such objection may be made at once by an appeal against the order granting the application, or may be taken in any appeal against the final decree or order made in the suit.

Where the application has been rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear, he may apply for an order to have the rejected application restored to the file, and, if it be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when such application was called on for hearing, the Court may order it to be restored to the file upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for hearing the same.

No order shall be made under this section unless the applicant has served the opposite party with notice in writing of the latter application.

No application to review an order passed on review or on an application for a review shall be entertained.

Notes.

No second appeal lies against an order passed under sec. 629 of the Civil Procedure Code. An application was made by a plaintiff for review of a judgment dismissing his suit as against all the defendants, which application was granted. Against that order the defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court confirmed the lower Court's order granting the review as against one of the defendants, but set it aside as against the other defendants. Held that no second appeal lay against such order.—11 Cal. 296.

Sec. 15 of the Letters Patent for the High Court of Judicature at Madras, which allows an appeal to the High Court from the judgment of one Judge of that Court, is controlled by sec. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that an order of a Civil Court rejecting an application for review of judgment shall be final.—9 Madr. 253.

No appeal lies from an order granting a review of judgment, except in the cases set forth in sec. 629 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882).—12 Bom. 171.

See I. L. R., 3 Al. 316, noted under sec. 311; 12 Madr. 125, noted under sec. 244.

630. When an application for a review is granted, a note thereof shall be made in the register, and the Court may at once re-hear the case, or make such order in regard to the re-hearing as it thinks fit.

Registry of application granted, and order for re-hearing.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a review of judgment is granted on a particular ground, the Court is not bound to re-hear the whole case under sec. 630 of the Civil Procedure Code; it is in the discretion of the Court to re-hear the whole case, or only the particular point on which the review has been granted.—I. L. R., 9 Cal. 209.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO THE CHARTERED HIGH COURTS.

631. This chapter applies only to High Courts which are or may hereafter be established under the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, chapter 104 (An Act for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India.)

Chapter to apply only to certain High Courts.

632. Except as provided in this chapter, the provisions of this Code apply to such High Courts.

Application of code to High Courts.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 9 Al. 93, noted under sec. 574.

High Court to record judgments according to its own rules.

633. The High Court shall take evidence, and record judgments and orders, in such manner as it by rule from time to time directs.

NOTE.—See I. L. R., 9 Al. 93, noted under sec. 574.

634. Whenever a High Court considers it necessary that a decree made in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction should be enforced before the amount of the costs incurred in the suit can be ascertained by taxation, the Court may order that the decree shall be executed forthwith, except as to so much thereof as relates to the costs ;

Power to order execution of decree before ascertainment of costs, and and, as to so much thereof as relates to the costs, that the decree may be executed as soon as the amount of the costs shall be ascertained by taxation.

Execution for costs subsequently.

635. Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to authorize any person on behalf of another to address the Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, or to examine witnesses, except when the Court shall have, in the exercise of the power conferred by its charter, authorized him so to do, or to interfere with the power of the High Court to make rules concerning advocates, vakils, and attorneys.

Unauthorized persons not to address Court.

Notes.

Reading together secs. 7 and 8 of the Letters Patent for the High Court, and secs. 2, 36, 39, and 635 of the Civil Procedure Code, an advocate on the roll of the Court can, for the purpose of the Code, perform on behalf of a suitor all the duties that may be performed by a pleader, subject to his exemption in the matter of a vakalatnama and to any rules which the High Court may make regarding him. No such rule having been made to the contrary, such an advocate may take instructions directly from a suitor, and may "act" for the purposes of the Code on behalf of his clients.—I. L. R., 9 Al. 617.

See I. L. R., 9 Al. 613, noted under sec. 36.

636. Notices to produce documents, summonses to witnesses, and every other judicial process, issued in the exercise of the ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court, and of its matrimonial, testamentary, and intestate jurisdictions, except summonses to defendants issued under section 64, writs of execution, and notices under section 553, may be served by the attorneys in the suit, or by persons employed by them, or by such other persons as the High Court by any rule or order from time to time directs.

Who may serve process of High Court.

637. Any non-judicial or quasi-judicial act which this Code requires to be done by a Judge, and any act which may be done by a Commissioner appointed to examine and adjust accounts under section 394, may be done by the Registrar of the Court, or by such other officer of the Court as the Court may direct to do such act.

Non-judicial acts may be done by Registrar.

The High Court may, from time to time, by rule declare what shall be deemed to be non-judicial and quasi-judicial acts within the meaning of this section.

638. The following portions of this Code shall not apply to the High Court in the exercise of its ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, namely, sections 16, 17, and 19, sections 54, clauses (a) and (b), 57, 119, 160, 182 to 185 (both inclusive), 187, 189, 190, 191, 192 (so far as relates to the manner of taking evidence), 198 to 206 (both inclusive), and so much of section 409 as relates to the making of a memorandum ; and section 579 shall not apply to the High Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Code not to affect High Court in exercise of insolvent jurisdiction.

Nothing in this Code shall extend or apply to any Judge of a High Court in the exercise of jurisdiction as an insolvent Court.

639. The High Court may, from time to time, frame forms for any proceeding in such Court, and may make rules as to the books, entries, and accounts to be kept by its officers.

Power to frame forms.

PART X.

CHAPTER XLIX.

MISCELLANEOUS.

640. Women, who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public, shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court.

Exemption of certain from personal ap-

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to exempt such women from arrest in execution of civil process, "in any case in which the arrest of women is not prohibited by this Code."*

* The words quoted have been added. by the Debtors Act (VI. of 1888), sec. 6.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Exemption from arrest on process of execution under sec. 21, Act VIII of 1859, does not extend to all women of rank, but is limited to the women therein described—women, that is, “who, according to the custom and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public.”—8 W. R., 282.

In the case of an unmarried girl of some 12 years of age, without any distinguished rank or station, but belonging to that class of Hindu society, the female members of which never go out in public, it was held that she was entitled to the privilege of Act VIII. of 1859, sec. 21, even though it was essential to have her testimony in a case recorded by the Judge himself, and that her testimony should be taken out of Court under suitable precautions.—24 W. R., 375.

A plaintiff applied, under sec. 640 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), for a commission to issue for the examination of three female witnesses (Perozbai, Bachoobai and Awabai) at the residence of one of them (Perozbai). The grounds upon which he based his application were the following :—(1) that Perozbai had lost her husband ten months previously and was in mourning; that, according to Parsi usage, a widow observed mourning for two or three years, and during that time did not leave her house; (2) that Bachoobai was fifty-eight years of age and sickly and physically unable to attend the Court; (3) that Awabai was about to go up-country, and could not stay in Bombay until hearing. Held, the circumstances alleged were not such as to justify the issue of a commission.—14 Bom. 584.

See I. L. R., 7 Cal. 19, noted under sec. 271.

641. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, exempt from personal appearance in Court any person whose rank, in the opinion of such Government, entitles him to the privilege of exemption, and may, by like notification, withdraw such privilege.

The names and residences of the persons so exempted shall, from time to time, be forwarded to the High Court by the Local Government, and a list of such persons shall be kept in such Court, and a list of such persons as reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of each Court subordinate to the High Court shall be kept in such subordinate Court.

When any person so exempted claims the privilege of such exemption, and it is consequently necessary to examine him by commission, he shall pay the costs of that commission, unless the party requiring his evidence pays such costs.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

642. No Judge, Magistrate, or other judicial officer, shall be liable to arrest under civil process while going to, presiding in, or returning from his Court.

Persons exempt from arrest under civil process.

And, "except as provided in section 337A, sub-section (5), and sections 256 and 643,"* where any matter is pending before a tribunal having jurisdiction therein, or believing in good faith that it has such jurisdiction, the parties thereto, their pleaders, mukhtars, revenue agents, and recognized agents, and their witnesses acting in obedience to a summons, shall be exempt from arrest under civil process while going to or attending such tribunal for the purpose of such matter, and while returning from such tribunal.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where a native of Patna came from Calcutta to Madras on 24th October on account of a suit pending, in which he was plaintiff, and, the case having been adjourned on 27th October for seven weeks, remained in Madras on account of the suit, and was arrested on 10th November, held that he was privileged under sec. 642 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 4 Madr. 317.

The general rule that a party to a suit is protected from arrest upon any civil process, while going to the place of trial, while attending there for the purpose of the cause, and while returning home, applies to a defendant to a suit under the summary-procedure sections of Act X of 1877 who has not obtained leave to appear and defend, and who therefore, cannot be heard at the trial. Questions as to the privilege of exemption from arrest, in the case of persons arrested under writs issued from the Small Cause Court in Calcutta, must be governed by the English law, and not by sec. 642 of the above Act. It is not a deviation sufficient to forfeit the privilege if the shortest road home is deviated from, and a less crowded and more convenient road adopted.—5 Cal. 106.

A Revenue Court is a "Court of Civil Judicature" within the meaning of sec. 651 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A person, therefore, who escapes from custody under the process of a Revenue Court, is punishable under that section. Sec. 642 of the Civil Procedure Code only protects an accused person while he is attending a Criminal Court from arrest "under that Code." Held, therefore, where a person, who had been convicted by a Magistrate, and had been fined, was arrested in execution of the process of a Revenue Court while waiting in Court until the money to pay such fine was brought, that such person was not protected from such arrest by the provisions of that section, and that, having escaped from custody under such arrest, such person had properly been convicted under sec. 651 for escaping from "lawful custody."—4 Al. 27.

643. When, in a case pending before any Court, there appears to the Court sufficient ground for sending for investigation to the Procedure in case of certain offences.

* The words quoted have been substituted by the Debtors' Act (VI. of 1888), sec. 7, for the words "except as provided in secs. 256 and 643," as originally enacted.

Magistrate a charge of any such offence as is described in section 193, section 196, section 199, section 200, section 205, section 206, section 207, section 208, section 209, section 210, section 463, section 471, section 474, section 475, section 476, or section 477 of the Indian Penal Code, which may be made in the course of any other suit or proceeding, or with respect to any document offered in evidence in the case, the Court may cause the person accused to be detained till the rising of the Court, and may then send him in custody to the Magistrate, or take sufficient bail for his appearance before the Magistrate.

The Court shall send to the Magistrate the evidence and documents relevant to the charge, and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence before such Magistrate.

The Magistrate shall receive such charge, and proceed with it according to law.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where the provisions of sec. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure have not been complied with, a Civil Court is not debarred from admitting evidence that the decree has been satisfied out of Court, for the purpose of an investigation with a view to sending the judgment-creditor to a Magistrate under sec. 643 of the Code of Civil Procedure.— I. L. R., 4 Madr. 325.

644. Subject to the power conferred in the High Court by section 639 and by the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, Chapter 104, section 15, the forms set forth in the fourth schedule hereto annexed, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, shall be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned.

Use of forms in fourth schedule.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

645. The language which, when this Code comes into force, is the language of any Court subordinate to a High Court, shall continue to be the language of such subordinate Court until the Local Government otherwise orders;

but it shall be lawful for the Local Government, from time to time, to declare what language shall be the language of every such Court.

Language of subordinate Courts.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Assessors in causes of salvage, &c.

645A. In any Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty cause of salvage, towage, or collision, the Court, whether it be exercising its original or its appellate jurisdiction, may if it thinks fit, and upon request of either party to such cause shall, summon to its assistance, in such manner as the Court may, by rule, from time to time, direct, two competent assessors; and such assessors shall attend and assist accordingly.

Every such assessor shall receive such fees for his attendance as the Court by rule prescribes. Such fees shall be paid by such of the parties as the Court in each case may direct.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

646. Whenever the Registrar of a Court of Small Causes has any doubt upon any question of law or usage having the force of law, or as to the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits of the decision, he may state a case for the opinion of the Judge; and all the provisions herein contained relative to the stating of a case by the Judge shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to the stating of a case by the Registrar.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

646A* (1) If at any time before judgment a Court in which a suit has been instituted doubts whether the suit is cognizable, by a Court of Small Causes or is not so cognizable, it may submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for the doubt as to the nature of the suit.

(2) On receiving the record and statement the High Court may order the Court either to proceed with the suit or to return the plaint for presentation in such other Court as it may in its order declare to be competent to take cognizance of the suit.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

646B.* (1) If it appears to a District Court that a Court subordinate thereto has, by reason of erroneously holding a suit to be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not to be so cognizable, failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, or exercised a jurisdiction not so vested, the District Court may, and, if required by a party, shall, submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous.

(2) On receiving the record and statement, the High Court may pass such order in the case as it thinks fit.

(3) With respect to any proceeding subsequent to decree in any case submitted to the High Court under this section, the High Court may make such order as in the circumstances appears to it to be just and proper.

(4) A Court subordinate to a District Court shall comply with any requisition which the District Court may make for any record or information for the purposes of this section.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Before a District Court can make a reference under sec. 646B of the Civil Procedure Code, it must be of opinion that the subordinate Court has erroneously held upon the point of jurisdiction in regard to the particular suit before it, and that therefore the matter is one in which the interference of the High Court should be sought. The word "shall" in sec. 646B, cl. I, is not mandatory, but directory.—I. L. R., 11 Al. 304.

647. The procedure herein prescribed shall be followed, as far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction other than suits and appeals.

Miscellaneous proceedings.

The High Court may, from time to time, make rules to provide for the admission, in such proceedings, of affidavits as evidence of the matters to which such affidavits respectively relate ; and such rules, on being published in the local official Gazette, shall have the force of law.

Admission of affidavits as evidence.

*“ Explanation.—This section does not apply to applications for the execution of decrees, which are proceedings in suits.”

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

The provisions of sec. 110 of Act VIII. of 1859 are properly applicable, under sec. 33 of Act XXIII. of 1861, to proceedings in execution of decree.—4 N.-W. P. H. C. R., 10.

The plaintiff brought his suit in a Munsiff's Court to recover a sum of money. The District Judge transferred the suit to a Sub Court and the latter Court passed a decree. The decree-holder applied to the Subordinate Judge's Court for execution of his decree. By an order of the District Court the execution proceedings were transferred to the Munsiff's file. The judgment-debtor objected to the jurisdiction of the Munsiff on the ground that the District had no power to transfer execution proceedings from one Court to another.

Held, that the District Court has no power to transfer execution proceedings from one Court to another and that the power is limited only to transfer suits.—I. L. R., 15 Cal. 177.

Section 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not operate to extend the rule laid down in respect of a suit in section 373 to an application for execution.—78 Cal. 635.

Sec. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be applied to the assignment, creation, or devolution of an interest subsequent to the decree in a suit. The section has no application to proceedings in execution of decree; and a Court has no jurisdiction, reading sec. 372 with sec. 647, to bring in a party after decree and make him a judgment-debtor for the purposes of execution. Where a Court had so acted, by an order which might have been, but was not, made the subject of appeal, under sec. 588 of the Court,—held, that as there was no jurisdiction to make such an order, the party aggrieved was competent to object thereto on appeal from a subsequent order enforcing execution against him as a judgment debtor.—10 Al. 97.

An appeal lies under sec. 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure against an order of a District Court under sec. 5, Act XX of 1863.—4 Madr. 295.

See I.L.R., 7 Cal. 163, noted under s. 311; 3 Bom. (F.B.) 204, noted under sec. 575; 6 Cal. 762, noted under sec. 182; 5 Bom. 680, noted under sec. 25; 10 Cal. 416, noted under sec. 108; 10 Cal. 538, noted under sec. 244; 9 Al. 36, noted under sec. 623; 10 Al. 71, noted under Art. 179 Sch. II of Act XV of 1877 (Limitation Act); 12 Al. 179 12 Al. 392, 15 Madr. 240, noted under sec. 373; 11 Al. 228, noted under sec. 257A; 13 Al. 533, noted under sec. 203.

648. Where any Court desires that any person shall be arrested, or that any property shall be attached under any provision of this Code not relating to the execution of decrees, and such person resides or property is situate outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant of arrest or make an order of attachment, and send to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or property resides or is situate a copy of the warrant or order, together with the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment.

Procedure when person to be arrested or property to be attached is outside district.

The District Court shall, on receipt of such copy and amount, cause the arrest or attachment to be made by its own officers, or by a Court subordinate to itself, and shall inform the Court which issued or made such warrant or order of the arrest or attachment:

and the Court making an arrest under this section shall send the person arrested to the Court by which the warrant of arrest was issued, unless he shows cause to the satisfaction of the former Court why he should not be sent to the latter Court, or unless he furnishes sufficient security for his appearance before the latter Court or (where the case is one under Chapter XXXIV) for satisfying any decree that may be passed against him by that Court, in either of which cases the Court making the arrest shall release him.*

Where a person to be arrested or moveable property to be attached under this section is within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal or at Madras or Bombay, or of the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, the copy of the warrant of arrest or of the order of attachment, and the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment, shall be sent to the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Rangoon, as the case may be, and that Court, on receipt of the copy and amount, shall proceed as if it were the District Court.†

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Where an officer proceeding from Burmah to England on leave resided a few days in Madras on the way, held, that such residence was sufficient, for the purpose of sec. 648 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to render him liable to arrest before judgment.—I. L. R., 8 Madr. 205.

A decree of a Small Cause Court can be executed by it at any place within the local limits of the District Court to which it is subordinate, as defined by Act X of 1877, sec. 2, without having recourse to the procedure under sec. 648, which applies only to cases in which a decree passed in one district has to be executed in another district.—4 Cal. 823.

Act X of 1877, sec. 223, does not apply to a Small Cause Court, and sec. 648 does not apply to a case in which the defendant resides within the same district in which the Court issuing a warrant is situate. Consequently, a Small Cause Court may issue a warrant for the arrest of a person residing in another district, but not if he resides within the same district in which the Court is situate, but outside its local jurisdiction.—2 Bom. 560.

649. The rules contained in Chapter XIX shall apply to the execution of any judicial process for the arrest of a person or the sale of property or payment of money, which may be desired or ordered by a Civil Court in any civil proceeding.

In the same chapter, the expression “Court which passed a decree,” or words to that effect, shall, unless there is something repugnant in the context be deemed to include,

* This paragraph has been substituted for the original by the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII. of 1888), sec. 61.

† This paragraph has been added by the same Act and section.

where the decree to be executed is passed in appeal, the Court which passed decree against which the appeal was preferred, and, where the Court which passed the decree to be executed has ceased to exist or to have jurisdiction to execute it, the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of making application for execution of the decree, would have jurisdiction to try such suit.

Notes.

This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

Under secs. 210 and 296 of Act VIII of 1859, the representative of a deceased plaintiff in an abated suit is liable for costs of interlocutory orders in the suit.—Bourke's Rep., (O. C.) 154.

Although the High Court, in its appellate side, does not, as a general rule, execute its own decrees or orders, yet this circumstance in no way affects the vitality of its jurisdiction in this respect, and it cannot therefore be included among Courts which have ceased to have jurisdiction to execute decrees as specified under sec. 649 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—I. L. R., 6 Cal. 201.

Per GARTH, C. J.—Sec. 649 of the Civil Procedure Code, as amended by Act XII of 1879, which explains the meaning of the expression, the "Court which passed the decree," does not exclude the Court which originally passed the decree as being a Court in which an application for execution should be made, but merely includes another Court. When, therefore, a Court which has passed a decree has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute it, the application for execution may be made either to that Court, although it has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute the decree, or to the Court which (if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of making application to execute it) would have jurisdiction to try the suit. Per FIELD J.—A Court does not cease to be "the Court which passed the decree" merely by reason that the headquarters of such Court are removed to another place, or merely because the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court are altered. An application for the transfer of a decree under the provisions of sec. 223 and the following section of Act X of 1887 is a step in aid of the execution of the decree within the meaning of cl. 4, art. 179, sch. ii. of Act XV of 1877.—6 Cal. 513.

A in 1839 obtained a decree against B, a sardar in the Court of the Agent for Sardars. The decree was executed in the Agent's Court until B's death in 1868. B's status as a sardar under exclusive jurisdiction of the Agent did not descend to his sons, and the decree was transferred to the Court of the First-class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar for execution. Various objections were taken to the execution of the decree by that Court, but none on the ground that the Agent's decree could not be executed by a mere transfer to an ordinary Civil Court. The case went up twice to the High Court, under whose orders the execution was for several years continued in favour of A's representatives against the estate of B's sons. In 1885, one of A's representatives assigned his interest under the decree to C & D. Thereupon the transferees C & D applied to the First-class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar to have their names substituted in the place of the transferor in the execution proceedings. The Subordinate Judge rejected this application, on the ground that he could not recognise the transfer of the decree either under sec. 372 or sec. 232 of the Civil Procedure

Code (Act XIV of 1882). He also found that execution had been going on for several years contrary to the ruling in Khusaldas v. Sakharam Ramachandra (12 Bom. H. C. R., 212), which laid down that the Agent's decree could not be executed by a mere transfer to an ordinary Court—the remedy in such cases being by a suit on the decree. On this ground, also, he refused to recognize the transfer of the decree. Held, reversing the order of the lower Court, that the assignment of the decree-holder's rights to execution in this case was one approved by the law as contained in sec. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The transferee of a decree gains by the transfer the rights of the transferor. Held also that, though the execution-proceedings in this case had been for many years irregularly conducted by a mere transfer of the Agent's decree to an ordinary Civil Court, still, as the Court which carried on the execution had jurisdiction to grant the same relief if a suit had been brought upon the decree, the irregularity, having been acquiesced in, did not vitiate the former proceedings in execution. Where jurisdiction over the subject-matter exists, requiring only to be invoked in the right way, the party who has invited or allowed the Court to exercise it in a wrong way cannot afterwards challenge the legality of the proceedings due to his own invitation or negligence. But if there is no jurisdiction over the subject-matter, the acquiescence of the parties concerned cannot create it. Where a decree is one of continuous operation, taking effect as each year furnishes proceeds for its satisfaction, it must be executed each year according to the law of procedure then in force.—11 Bom. 153.

See I. L. R., 17 Cal. 699, noted under sec. 16.

650. The provisions of Chapter XIV & XV, relating to witnesses, shall apply to all persons required to give evidence or to produce documents in any proceeding under this Code.

NOTE.—This section applies to Provincial Small Cause Courts.

650A. Summons issued by any Civil or Revenue Court situate beyond the limits of British India may be sent to the Courts in British India, and served as if they had been issued by such Courts: Provided that the Courts issuing such summonses have been established “or continued”* by the authority of the Governor-General in Council or that the Governor-General in Council has, by notification in the Gazette of India, declared the provisions of this section to apply to such Courts.

The Governor-General in Council may, by like notification, cancel any notification made under this section, but not so as to invalidate the service of any summons served previous to such cancellation.

652. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate any matter connected with its own procedure or the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature subject to its superintendence. All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

A High Court not established under the Statute 24 & 25 Victoria, chapter 104 (An Act for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India), may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, make, with respect to any matter other than procedure, any rule which any High Court so established might under section 15 of that Statute make with respect to any such matter for any part of the territories under its jurisdiction which is not included within the limits of a presidency-town. Rules so made shall be published in the same manner, and shall thereupon have the same force, as rules made and published under this section for the regulation of matters connected with procedure.*

653.† (1) At any time after a warrant of arrest has been issued under this Code, the Court may cancel it on the ground of the serious illness of the person against whom the warrant was issued.

(2) When a judgment-debtor has been arrested under this Code, the Court may release him if in its opinion he is not in a fit state of health to undergo imprisonment.

(3) When a judgment-debtor has been committed to jail, he may be released therefrom—

(a) by the Local Government, on the ground of his suffering from any infections or contagious disease, or

(b) by the committing Court, or any Court to which that Court is subordinate, on the ground of his suffering from any serious illness.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this section may be re-arrested, but the period of his imprisonment shall not, in the aggregate, exceed that prescribed in section 342 or section 481, as the case may be.

Between E. F. Plaintiff.

G. H. ...Defendant.

E. F., the above-named plaintiff, states as follows.—

A. B., of K., in the _____, duly made his last will, dated the [first day of March 1873], whereby he appointed the defendant and M. N. [who died in the testator's life-time] executors thereof, and bequeathed his property, whether moveable or immoveable, to his executors in trust, to pay the rents and income thereof to the plaintiff for his life; and after his decease, and in default of his having a son who should attain twenty-one, or a daughter who should attain that age or marry, upon trust as to his immoveable property for the person who would be the testator's heir-at law, and as to his moveable property for the persons who would be the testator's next-of-kin if he had died intestate at the time of the death of the plaintiff, and such failure of his issue as aforesaid.

2. The testator died on the [first day of July, 1878], and his will was proved by the defendant on the [fourth day of October, 1878]. The plaintiff has not been married.

3. The testator was at his death entitled to moveable and immoveable property; the defendant entered into the receipt of the rents of the immoveable property, and got in the moveable property; he has sold some part of the immoveable property.

The plaintiff claims—

- Between E. F. Plaintiff. and
G. H. Defendant.

1. A. B.'s will contained a charge of debts ; he died insolvent ; he was entitled at his death to some immoveable property which the defendant sold, and which produced the nett sum of rupees _____, and the testator had some moveable property which the defendant got in, and which produced the nett sum of _____ rupees.

3. The defendant made up his accounts, and sent a copy thereof to the plaintiff on the [tenth day of January 1880], and offered the plaintiff free access to the vouchers to verify such accounts, but he declined to avail himself of the defendant's offer.
